A SHARP ADVANCE IN PRICE OF FLOUR

Thirty to Forty Cents Higher in Last Few Days

WHAT CAUSED IT

Manitoba Brands Up Forty Cents and Ontario Flour Thirty Cents -- Other Staple Articles Are Also Climbing

The recent advances in the price of flour is a matter of great interest to all householders in this vicinity.

As there are some people who are under the impression that local jobbers are responsible for the higher prices, it might be well to sum up the events leading up to the present rates.

The two leading millers whose flour is most in demand here are the Ogilvie Milling Company for Manitobas and the Goldie Milling Co. for Ontario.

The Ogilvie Co. made advances of the same amount with a slight variation of dates.

The Goldie Milling Co. made their first advance in Ontario 10 cents on September 3, and followed it two days later with another 10 cents, while on Saturday last the third 10 cents was put on, making the total 30 cents a barrel.

The jobbers of the city have no control over the price the millers charge, but it is their practice, invariably, to follow the mill quotations, whether they advance or decline, so that no blame should be attached to them for the present prices.

One of the merchants seen this morning referred to a letter signed "Consumer" in last evening's Times, in which the merchants were blamed for the increased prices.

He added that the present advance was fully warranted by the returns coming in from the harvest fields across the border and in our own northwest.

It will not be welcome news to householders either to learn that cornmeal and oatmeal are much higher.

"AS A MAN SOWS."

BY HELEN WALLACE Author of "THE GREATEST OF THESE," "THEIR HEARTS' DESIRE," ETC.

"I think you will agree with me that I have done so well as I have finished," said Ashe, and then in very succinct fashion he stated again all that he had learned...

ure which comes with a final and tremendous decision, "but as I should not like her to be caused needless distress, I am quite willing to give a fair and reasonable sum for your silence. I won't put a fancy price on it—what your society editor would give you for your scandal, shall we say? But as he would not pay you a second time, neither shall I. I do not choose to be indefinitely blackmailed. I must have a written acknowledgement that you have received the money—we can settle the amount by and by, and the reason for which you took it. That at least will be some slight protection. I do not know the exact value of your word at present, but should you break it to me—well, I will make that document just as public as you make my affairs. That, I think, would somewhat redress the balance as to general respect. I shall write you a check just now if you like, as I don't think there is anything further to be said, or if you prefer to think over it till tomorrow, you can let me know your price then," Sir David was no longer inclined to choose his words. "Till tomorrow then—very well," and he sat down to his letters, turning his back upon Ashe.

(Continued) "It is still at Stormont; I am not likely to part with it; but now I have as you asked me, listened to what you have to say, and I can only make the same answer, that I have other views for my daughter. If I were a younger man I might have resorted to your alternative," said Sir David, leaning back in his chair, and gazing steadily at Ashe.

"As a very creditable piece of bluff," was Ashe's inward comment. Then, aloud—"I have never doubted, nor do I think anyone would doubt, that the young lady is your daughter, or that she is a Stormont by blood; the likeness is too remarkable. The point is, however—Is she your heiress—is she a Stormont by name as well as by descent? That is a point which might greatly interest Captain Stormont Drummond, who, failing your lawful issue, I understand, your next heir."

"Failing my lawful issue he would be; but that contingency has, thank God, not yet occurred. If Robert Drummond or any accredited agent of his wishes to make inquiries, I shall give them all the information I am in no way bound to give it to you. All that concerns you is that Miss Stormont is my only daughter, and therefore, naturally and legally my heiress, and as her father I decline any further discussion involving her name. You have my answer, and my opinion of the value of the 'knowledge' you have chosen to pick up. Perhaps you will leave me now," rising as he spoke, and standing at his full height; the habitual stoop had disappeared.

Ashe's pale, handsome face had paled a little further at that word "legally." "This is all very well, Sir David," he said, "but this Miss Stormont, with a slight dubious shrug, "is not the young lady who disappeared so strangely last August—that you do not see and can not deny; and if I make this 'business' in high life public and why should I not—and the Thistlethwaites add what they have to sell—they have some very curious things indeed, to tell, and the word of such solid, stolid respectabilities can't be lightly set aside, well—there will be a very pretty scandal."

"Where is the younger Miss Stormont's a good many people would say." "That question, too, I am quite prepared to answer to any one who has a right to ask it. I in no way recognize yours," replied Sir David, with the same unexpected and baffling composure, before which, as before the chill light of common day, Ashe's scolding dream-palace, which had seemed so solid, so well founded, was slowly but surely crumbling away, and no desperate effort of his could stay the ruin.

The well-cut lips were rather white, they were drawn somewhat tightly from the line of even teeth, which, with the hollow gleam in the eyes, suggested the snarl of a vicious dog which would bite if it dared. As he said, with a very fair imitation of his usual ease of manner, "I can only congratulate you on being so well prepared for a number of very awkward questions. Still if I see pretty much with me whether they need be asked or not, and whether Sir David Stormont will continue to enjoy general respect, or Lady Stormont that pretty little delusion which it would surely be a pity to disturb. My knowledge is not so valueless after all; it would at least make most welcome copy for a society paper."

"Lady Stormont will soon know all the facts," said Sir David, with that composure.

HE EXPLAINED. The humble-minded and mild-mannered man had asked the aggressive man who had been abusing the federal authorities to explain why the persecution of trusts was going to work injury to the country at large, and the latter said: "Why, sir, any fool can see that. It's plain as the nose on your face. If you cannot see it you are no financier. We are cutting each others' throats."

The humble minded man asked the aggressive man to explain. "It is, sir." "We get together and have a talk and agree to pool our interests. We combine our four factories. We raise the price of the product twenty-five per cent. and stick to the price. We take in others. Those that won't come in we drive out of business. Anything plainer than that?" "No, sir."

"Along comes the government and says we are skinning the people and must stop it. Our trust is knocked in the head." "Well," queried the mild-mannered man, "I wanted a steam yacht. Jones wanted a motor house. Brown wanted to wear the biggest diamond in the world, and Smith wanted to buy the state of Rhode Island and turn it into a deer park. We are knocked out. We can't buy what we wanted. Our families suffer. We are discouraged, down-hearted and all broken up, and we sell out, put the money into goats and leave the country to go to wreck and ruin. Is that plain?" "Perfectly," replied the mild-mannered man, "and if you will excuse me for meddling with your business I will send the government a postal card and ask it not to do so." JOE KERR.

AN ELABORATE AFTERNOON COSTUME IN MAUVE CLOTH. The Eton coat is by no means banished from Fashion's favor. It will be seen all winter at various dressy functions, and in the severest weather its wearers will implore a heavy outer coat or cape over the small Eton for carriage wear. This costume is of fine broadcloth, the skirt laid in box pleats, which are braided half three depth with a heavy silk cord. The little coat is on square lines, and is composed of cloth and flannel, and heavy with braided pattern of fine silk cord which appears on the skirt. The sleeves are of the cloth, and also braided. There is a touch of brilliant embroidery on satin outlining the waist and forming the inner belt and sleeve bands. The hat is a mushroom shape, pointed sharply in front, covered with mauve velvet and wreathed with purple panopie.

HUGH ALLAN COMING He Will be Here to Discuss Matter of Berths for the Allan Liners. No settlement as to the allotment of the west side berths for the winter season has yet been arrived at, and indications are not wanting that some little difficulty will be experienced by the board of works in satisfying all interests. Hugh Allan, managing director of the Allan Line in Montreal, is coming to St. John in the interests of his company to attend a meeting of the board on Sept. 24, and Dr. McNeil, first vice-president of the C. P. R., is expected to arrive at any time to discuss the question of rates for warehouse accommodation and other matters.

As an alternative to allowing a particular berth to any one line of steamers, the suggestion has been made that No. 2 berth should be reserved for the mail boats and that the remaining berths, No. 1, No. 3, No. 4 and the Clark wharf, No. 5, should be left open to be used as the traffic requires, at the discretion of the harbor master. Another proposal that the boats in the Liverpool service of the C. P. R. and Allan lines should discharge at No. 5 and load at No. 2 is also being put forward.

Carrying out the arrangement made with the Dominion government last year, the Allan and the C. P. R. lines will divide the mail service. The Empress of Ireland will be the first mail steamer to leave and will be followed by the Virginian. The Empress of Britain, the Victorian and Cornica are the other steamers in this service.

The mails will be taken on board at Halifax, as was done last year, the only difference in the service being that the Allan line will bring all their big steamers to this port instead of making Halifax the terminus. This change will give the Allan sailings from St. John that last season.

Far nothing has been done towards extending the grain conveyor to No. 5 berth. Neither the city nor the C. P. R. has shown any inclination to bear the expense, and the chances are that no conveyor will be built. It is pointed out that should No. 5 be used only for inward cargo no facilities for the shipment of grain would be necessary, and the difficulty may be overcome by adopting this course.

MOUNTED POLICE PATROL STREETS

They Are Guarding the Asiatics in Vancouver.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 10.—A case containing thirty rifles and 5,000 rounds of ammunition was seized here this morning. It had been shipped from New Westminster to prominent Chinese merchants. Twelve orientals, mostly Chinese, were arrested at midnight for carrying loaded revolvers. The discovery of oil soaked waste in a corner of the Japanese mission school house brought out the first brigade and thousands of curious people, with Counsel Morikawa demanding more protection.

With every oriental quarter guarded by mounted police and 100 special constables in plain clothes scattered throughout the city, quiet reigns in Vancouver tonight. The promised parade of the Japanese was abandoned when Consul Morikawa, at a mass meeting of his countrymen this afternoon, discouraged the proposed parade. Seattle, Wash., Sept. 10.—A special to the Post Intelligencer from Vancouver says: A combined Chinese and Japanese organization of Vancouver yesterday afternoon made overtures to the Hindus to join them in an industrial strike all along the British Columbia coast. The Hindus refused.

Late last night the police made a seizure of fifty Winchester rifles, together with thousands of rounds of ammunition, which had been purloined in New Westminster by Chinese. The shipment was consigned to Sam Kee, a wealthy Chinese merchant of Vancouver and a large property owner, whose buildings were damaged by Saturday night's mob.

The property required is owned by P. Hennessy and the Falconer estate. The executive of the board looked very favorably on the proposal.

A TRANSFORMATION

Mr. R. G. MacPherson, M. P., evidently learned something in his interview with Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He rushed to Ottawa breathing secession thunder, and crying aloud against the evils threatening British Columbia. The Pacific province was on the verge of rebellion, and the situation was critical in the extreme. But after meeting Sir Wilfrid the truculent western Liberal has changed his mind. There is now no danger. "The solution of the question is at hand," he says. He finds that Sir Wilfrid has been giving the matter his closest attention. Lawlessness is now deprecated by the man who talked about another "Boston tea party." He would not for the world disturb the good feeling that exists between Canada and Japan, and he is sure that Japan shares this lofty sentiment. The case "has had its serious aspects," but that was before Mr. MacPherson met Sir Wilfrid. So fine a tribute has not been paid to the premier's sunny ways for a long time. But it may be hoped that Mr. MacPherson will not linger on his homeward journey. His supporters in Vancouver still appear to be ignorant of the fact that the danger is past. They are of the same mind as when he hurried off to Ottawa. They are so demonstrative that mounted police are necessary. A soothing word from Mr. MacPherson is much needed.

HONEST ELECTIONS

The remarks of Mr. R. L. Borden at Chatham, Ont., on the subject of purity in elections struck a high note and will appeal with great force to members of all parties. We quote from the Toronto Globe's report: "The first duty of the Conservative party, he urged, was to run its elections according to the law, as it was today or might be in the future; to have no campaign fund the use of which could not be disclosed. It was the duty of the party not merely to cry out against the corruption of its opponents, but to see to it that its own hands were clean. If the higher reasons had been advanced against their using a campaign fund illegitimately did not appeal to all who heard him, then he would point out that it would be the greatest folly from every possible standpoint to attempt to pit any fund they could raise against the enormous campaign fund at the disposal of their opponents. They must have a campaign fund for legitimate purposes, the preparation of literature and its distribution, the expenses of meetings, and so on. But of the fund they should always reserve something to fight in the courts to the last limit of the law the men, if there should be such, who stole from them any election by ballot-theft, or bribery, or any other wrong-doing. He favored still further changes in the acts relative to elections, adopting portions of the law as it is in Britain, in New York, and other States of the United States, with a view to meeting the situation."

THANKSGIVING DAY

An Ottawa despatch states that it is not likely that the government will change Thanksgiving Day from Thursday until Monday. Last week's Shareholder contains an article protesting against a change. Business men, it says, do not want a triple holiday in the busiest season. "The closing of navigation of the St. Lawrence river makes it essential that all the work possible to accomplish before navigation closes be done, and, at the same time, makes it desirable that any holiday should be subsequent, not immediately precedent to that event. Again, it may be argued, that a large business is done at our Canadian stock exchanges in American securities, and that all those interested in those securities cannot observe as a holiday a day on which American exchanges are in operation. So far as these securities and Canadian operators in them, and their name is legion, are concerned, it would be well if the same day were observed in the two countries. If Thanksgiving Day is to be retained among the national holidays of the dominion, the day selected for its observance should be one that will offer the least possible inconvenience to the commercial community, and in the observance of which they could all participate." There is force in the argument that if

Thanksgiving Day is to be retained as a public holiday the same date should be observed each year. If the same date observed in the United States were selected the nature of the day would no doubt relieve us from any criticism on the score that we were attempting to imitate our neighbors. As a matter of fact, the holiday originated in the United States. There can be no doubt about the improved condition of the money market in the United States. The issue of forty millions of New York city bonds, four and a half per cent., was subscribed five times over. Two previous efforts to dispose of them had failed to produce satisfactory results, owing to the stringency of the money market, and yesterday's result was looked forward to with no little anxiety. The result is reassuring to the financial world, and indicates that precautions taken to check undue speculation, while they caused an enormous shrinkage in values, at least saved the monetary situation.

Newfoundland is again in a ferment. Its premier, Sir Robert Bond, declares that the renewal of the modus vivendi is a disgrace to British diplomacy and a shameful sacrifice of the interests of the people of the colony. He adds that the colony will resist the policy of the imperial government by every constitutional means. The universal hope that this vexed question would be finally settled by recent negotiations has not been realized. The first British war balloon has proved a success on its trial trip. It was Tennyson who "Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rained a ghastly dew 'From the nations' airy navies 'Grappling in the central blue.'"

If a farmer at Sussex can make money selling milk at four cents per quart, the farmer near St. John who has his own delivery route, for his own teams, must be gathering shekels at a rate to stir the envy of the proprietor of a nickel piece show. In advocating compulsory school attendance, uniformity of textbooks and better payment of teachers, the Trades and Labor Congress places itself on the side of progress and advocates that which is for the best interests of the Canada of the future.

Baptists and Anglicans decline at present to unite with Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists. Nevertheless the discussion is evidence of a broader and more generous spirit, which will bear fruit in later years. The official news that conditions under which employes in some Ontario canneries live are filthy in the extreme, is accompanied by the announcement of a coming advance in prices of canned goods. All of which is comforting to the consumer. With regard to the west side dredging, the public will doubt very much, in view of the past reports of civic officials, if there is any thirty thousand dollars worth of work to be done in cleaning up Bertha 1 to 4 inclusive.

More boys are under arrest on a charge of burglary. The crimes were committed in Milford, and an ex-offensive subject seems to have been the leader. The boy problem will not down. Another attempt is being made to enforce the Scott Act in Carleton county, and has resulted among other things in a charge of perjury against the informant. This is a bad beginning. World-wide interest is felt in the triumphant progress of the Lusitania across the Atlantic. It seems almost certain she will make a new ocean record.

In connection with the by-election, it is stated that Mayor Sears may decide not to court a defeat at present, but wait for a nomination at the general elections. Police Called to Carleton Street Synagogue Yesterday to Quell a Disturbance. The police were called for a disturbance in the Carleton Street Jewish synagogue yesterday afternoon. The trouble, which was between a man and woman, is said to have been commenced in the building and continued in the street. The origin of the affair is said by members of the congregation to have been the arrest of Morris Shafir by J. Mayer, for debt, the man being taken into custody by Constable Gibbons during the morning. Shafir's wife is said to have been angered at this and went in search of Mayer, whom she found in the synagogue. A tussle occurred, it is also said, resulting in Mayer's face being scratched and bruised. When Patrolman Belyea arrived from the Mill street beat all had quieted down. Miss Mary McCarron, who has been in Toronto and New York, returned to the city yesterday and is visiting her mother, St. John.

Thanksgiving Day is to be retained as a public holiday the same date should be observed each year. If the same date observed in the United States were selected the nature of the day would no doubt relieve us from any criticism on the score that we were attempting to imitate our neighbors. As a matter of fact, the holiday originated in the United States. There can be no doubt about the improved condition of the money market in the United States. The issue of forty millions of New York city bonds, four and a half per cent., was subscribed five times over. Two previous efforts to dispose of them had failed to produce satisfactory results, owing to the stringency of the money market, and yesterday's result was looked forward to with no little anxiety. The result is reassuring to the financial world, and indicates that precautions taken to check undue speculation, while they caused an enormous shrinkage in values, at least saved the monetary situation.

THE HERALD OF AUTUMN

Behold! the herald of the autumn comes. A flaming torch of yellow in his hand. Lighting the dim ways of the forest. And spilling golden patches on the land. Beside the sluggish brook he stands and waits. The time for stars above his head to bloom: Then as the whispering breezes gently wake, He swings his burning censor in the gloom. And now near to the highway you may see This graceful oval bowing in the breeze, scattering its wealth of pollen. Crocus-like Or yielding his sweet soul to bandit bees. So, through the mist-buff days of summer's close, Transforming into beauty clay and clod, His footsteps marked with spots of yellow gold. Goes autumn's princely herald—Goldenrod! —Edwin Currie Lacey.

IN LIGHTER VEIN ACCORDING TO RULES.

Sentry—You can't leave. Soldier—But I have the captain's oral permission. Sentry (importantly)—Let's see it!

A GUESS.

"Pa," said Willie, thoughtfully, "I think I know now what the minister meant when he said 'it is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

"Yes," replied his pa, "well, what did he mean?"

"Custard oil."

UNDISPUTED.

First Lawyer—"You are a shyster!" His Opponent—"And you are a black-guiser!"

The Court—"Now, gentlemen, let us take up the disputed points in the case."

FOR THE DOCTORS.

Friend—"You've never been called in consultation, have you?"

Young Doctor—"No, but I'd like to be. It's nice to charge ten times as much as the other doctor for saying that you don't know any more about the case than he does."

A POLITE MAN.

Lady (in railroad train on windy day)—Dear me! I can't get this window up. Gentleman (behind)—I would assist you, madam, but I presume the railroad company has placed the window down to prevent the loss of patrons by pneumonia.

A CLERGYMAN'S FALL.

In a small church in one of the mining towns of Pennsylvania, says the Philadelphia Ledger, was a pulpit both antique and unique. It was about the size and shape of a flour barrel, was elevated from the floor about four feet and was fastened to the wall. The ascent was by narrow winding steps.

A minister from a neighboring town, a man of great vigor and vehemence, preached there one Sunday. While preaching he bent forward and shouted out with great force the words of his text— "The righteous shall stand, but the wicked shall fall."

Just as these words escaped from his lips the pulpit broke from its fastenings, and he fell out and rolled over on the floor before his congregation. In an instant he was on his feet again and said: "Brethren, I am not hurt, and I don't mind the fall much, but I do hate the connection."

GOVERNMENT RESPONSIBILITY (Montreal Star).

One is inclined to rub one's eyes and look again at an astonishing utterance of Hon. George F. Graham, the new minister of railways, dealing with the Quebec bridge disaster. He excuses the lack of government inspection of this work on the ground that it would carry with it government responsibility. We have before pointed out that, although the Ottawa authorities had guaranteed the extent of this great undertaking to the extent of more than five millions of dollars, they had not an engineering representative on the work to safeguard the country's interest by inspection or otherwise. Mr. Graham now gives the reason: the absence of an inspector relieved the government of responsibility. It is true many lives have been lost, but, according to Mr. Graham's theory, that is no affair of the Ottawa engineers. The Phoenix Bridge Company's engineer failed to detect weaknesses in the structure, and so, too, says Mr. Graham, the government engineers might have failed to do so. According to the minister of railways, a government engineer is no better than any other engineer. Perhaps not. But there is a vast difference between the functions of an engineer employed by a construction company and those of another employed to check the progress of the work. It has been shown that there was laxity of inspection, due to the illness of one of the bridge company's engineers employed for that purpose. Here, then, was an occasion when a government with a five-million dollar interest should have safeguarded the situation and should have assumed the responsibility for so doing.

A PREACHER ON POLITICS

The Calvin correspondent in yesterday's Banner Commercial says: "A very interesting sermon was preached at the Methodist church in Milltown, N. B., on Sunday evening, Sept. 8, by Rev. E. S. Crisp, pastor of the church, who spoke on the labor question. During his remarks the reverend gentleman stated that Great Britain was more democratic than either the United States or Canada because the laboring men in parliament were represented by men from their own ranks, which was not true on this side of the water. He declared also that in his opinion there are more politics in the square inch in Canada than there is in common sense to the square mile. His address was very interesting throughout and was enjoyed by a large congregation."

SHEFFIELD

SHEFFIELD, Sept. 10.—Messrs. John J. Bodkin, J. M. Weldon and J. A. Winslow have returned to their homes in Fredon, from a week's shooting trip to the Grand Lake Meadows. They had a very enjoyable outing and capital sport, bagging a large number of ducks, plovers, snipe and sandpipers.

Thomas P. Kent, who has been boring a well for Emery Briggs, at Lakeville Corner, has succeeded in getting water, and is now engaged in boring a well for John Young of Little River.
