has been made to the senate about witnesses who failed to attend, but as all the parties say they do not desire to prolong the enquiry, no recommendations as to a compulsory process are made.

The counsel addressed the committee this morning. Mr. Langelier on behalf of the Quebec government, declined to make any observations concerning the make any observations concerning the charges made and proved against his chents and their manager, Mr. Pacaud, observing that these matters might be investigated elsewhere. He made a feeble and pitiful attempt to justify his charge of embezzlement and misappromistic of funds made against. charge of embezzlement and misappropriation of funds made against Senator Robitaille, Riopel and others of the old company. It will be remembered that his original charge was that Mr. Robitaille, et al, had received $370,000 for the first twenty miles of the road, paying $252,000 to Taylor's company of subcontractors and pocketing the balance. As it was proved by his own witness that every dollar of the $118,000 was expended on the work Mr. Langelier had to abandon the field. He took another line, stating that on the estimate of J. J. to abandon the field. He took another line, static g that on the estimate of J. J. Macdonald, who passed over the road en fifty miles were completed, would cost about 14,000 per mile. or $380,000. But Mr. Armstrong, who had the whole work on contract, claimed that $290,000 was yet due him. Mr. McFarlane, who had a sub-contract under Mr Armstrong, said that he had not received within $200,000 of the amount due him. Adding these amounts together it appeared ing these amounts together it appeared that $490,000 of the cost of the road was unpaid, so that the company could only have spent on this road $290,000, which half a million less than the company received from the two governments.

There were several weak points in this

First—Mr. Armstrong had sworn that the road cost $18,000 per mile. Secondly, the company does not admit a debt to Mr. Armstrong anything like as large as the latter claims. Third, Mr. Armstrong says that Mr. McFarlane has received all the amounts due him and presents a statement to that effect. Fourth, that even if the amounts due Messrs. Armstrong and McFarlane had been as stated, it is counting double to add them together, as they represented the same thing.
