BRIOT, HERBERT, Capt. Towne, arrived this morning from Barbados.

JACK FROST has put his veto on fall ploughing—for the present at least.

MORE COAL.—A new seam of coal has been discovered at Spring Hill about three quarters of a mile north of the east slope. The seam is five feet wide and the coal is as good as any hitherto discovered.

SUPPER.—The ladies in connection with the Mount Allison Tuesday intentions had a supper in Lingley Hall, in aid of the restoration fund, on or about the 22nd inst.

CORRECTION.—In the letter from the North-West publication this week we somewhat erroneously stated that the word "tunnel" is used in mistake for "torrent."

Oysters and other refreshments will be served later during the evening and the entertainment will be interspersed with music. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Admission 15 cts. Proceeds for reading room.

FIRE AT SHELBURNE.—A fire broke out in Fiddle Point's restaurant Tuesday night, and before it could be checked, destroyed property valued at $55,000. Among those burned out were Fiddle Point, A. S. Melanson was damaged.

PERSONAL.—Mr. A. T. PARRON, the genial and popular accountant of the New York Free Press Quarrying Co., left last Friday for his home in New York. Mr. PARRON during his stay here has made a host of friends who will be glad to welcome him back next spring. Mrs. John Parry and Miss Parry started for California Monday night. Their many friends hope their experience of "the glorious climate" will not lead them to prolong their stay. Mr. William Harnett and family, of Boston, left for Boston on Monday.

Rockland Station.

—Coroner Bissett, and William Yeats on a dead heat to see who can raise the largest pork. The Coroner is supposed to raise the largest, but Mr. Yeats the fastest, as he performs good clover pasture to pasturing on the public road. The clover pasture will produce the best butter, yet not fatten hogs better.

—Charles Scud, has all his farm work for this season done and everything housed, and has been turning over the soil for the coming spring. Mr. Scud is a very energetic young farmer and has everything neat and snug around him. His horses and cattle all show that they are well cared for. Isaac Hicks, and John B. Tingley, are both very enterprising farmers, and are striving to see who can take the most of their farms; they raise fine crops. Mr. Tingley is noted for the fine beef cattle he raises. Mr. Hicks also raises good beef cattle. Both raise a large quantity of hay, and besides feeding a large stock, sell hay to the surrounding neighbors, and also to shippers.

Taylor Village.

—Mr. Samuel Taylor, merchant, has his new store completed and has moved in. Five minutes later one day it would have been consumed to ashes. The fire was observed just in time to save the whole structure from annihilation.

—Walter Bishop, who went to Salisbury to serve his apprenticeship as a blacksmith, with Alfred Luster, was taken with the typhoid fever, and returned home, but is now convalescing.

Moncton.

—Building and general repairing is unusually brisk. Every man who can drive a nail or lay a brick finds employment.

—"The red shirt" men are firing complimentary notices at each other through the columns of the daily press at ten cents a line.

—"The quantity of freight being handled by the railway here is largely in excess of last year, and still the average railway man claims to be overworked and underpaid."

—"The W. C. T. U. have purchased a lot on Main St. and are erecting a building suited to their requirement. These worthy women deserve and receive encouragement, but they usually fail to reach those whom it is intended to benefit."

—"The street letter boxes are a great convenience. Post Office Inspector King expressed surprise that the people did not know without the long railway man claims to be overworked and underpaid."

and bringing back her gaze from the vague stretch of ocean, let it fall on her companion. Startled at the something she saw rising in his eyes, she suddenly realized with a sense of dismay that she had drifted out from the safe footing of abstract ideas, and that the undertow was fast carrying her far beyond her depth into a sea which she dreaded for herself, and had still

But it was too late. Before she could open her lips he had plunged in: "May I tell you what his answer would be? He would tell her that life was a question not of browsing, but of ploughing, and that, in spite of the fretting of the yoke, the oxen could better work together than alone; that he would be accommodating enough to browse in her corner of the meadow in off hours; that she was his ideal if he was not hers, and that perhaps

(pardon the average man's vanity)—perhaps her ideals were drawn from poetry, fiction, and transcendental philosophy rather than from real life, and that he might do as well as she another for a lay figure to be dressed up into a hero by her imagination; that though he had hitherto wasted his valuable talents by keeping them hidden in a napkin—"

Interruption: "That is a waste, when a doily would cover them."

"I scorn to notice the impertinence. As I was saying, he would plead that though he had idled away his opportunities, he was not yet like Portia, so old but he might learn if he had some motive for ambition to lay upon clear and practical, not vague and illusory. In short, suppose that I, the average man, should ask you, the ideal woman, to marry me, what would you say?"

The amused twinkle this time lay in the girl's eyes, though she kept them demurely lowered as she answered, "I never reply to hypothetical offers."

"Well, then, for Heaven's sake, answer a direct one. You have virtually refused me a dozen times in the last fortnight by choking me off when you saw that I wanted to speak. You have taken pains to mention as your ideals the men you thought most unlike me. You have dosed me with Concord and bullied me with Boston. Now to crown all, you try to persuade me that it is dishonorable in me to try to make you care for me. Yet I hear me, you shall. I love you, and I ask you now, once for all, will you marry me?"

An Englishman's Energy.

How an Immigrant Secured a Comfortable Home for Himself and Family.

An incident which goes to prove what energy and perseverance will do, was related to a Herald reporter yesterday. The facts of the case are: An Englishman named Hull and his two sons arrived at Halifax from the old country in April, 1886. The two young men went to Onslow where they got employment on a farm at $70 each for six months. The father went to Truro and put in the summer doing odd jobs. On October the 11th, the three, father and two sons, jointly bought 160 acres of woodland three miles from Polly Bog, in Colechester county. The price paid was one hundred dollars. They went into the woods and took possession of their purchase. A log cabin was erected and made as comfortable as possible for the winter. In this they took up the winter. In this they took up their abode and at once set to work clearing the land. Game was plenty and near at hand; the Stewiacke river furnished fish whenever they felt like indulging in that delicacy. During the winter they worked on day after day, and when, under the spring suns, the trees began to bud again, six acres of land had been cleared.

cleared. One of the boys then went to work with a farmer in the county, while the other remained at home with his father. They continued their work during the summer and as a result of their labor, they can now show twelve acres of cleared land, on which is built a frame house 30 feet long, 15 feet wide and 18 feet post. The two men built the foundation themselves, carrying the stone for the purpose off the land. A mason was engaged to build the chimnies, and a carpenter spent two days framing; all the other work was performed by the man and his son. Off the cleared land they took this season three immense cart loads of oats, eight barrels of buckwheat, and sixty bushe's potatoes. Mr. Hull is continuing his good work and expects in time to have a valuable farm and a comfortable home for his family. His wife and younger children came out in the steamship Nova Scotian a fortnight ago. The family are now re-united, living happily and contented, looking forward with hope to the future. This is an ex-
