DISTRICT AND GENERAL

A piece of gum with teeth marks in it left on the counter of a store at Washington, Pa., led to the discovery of the boy who robbed the place. Ex-Mayor Dr. F. J. Bateman, of Strathroy, took nux vomica on Friday evening in mistake for a tonic. He is recovering after being in a critical condition for some time.

Farmers in the vicinity of London complain that while they are paid from 90 cents to $1.25 a hundred pounds by the dealers for their milk the latter sell it at 10 cents a quart or $4 a hundred pounds. On account of this wide spread it is proposed to establish a community dairy.

If you have not viewed the wonders of Niagara Falls it might be well to visit the great cataract before it disappears. A Toronto professor states that it is receding at the rate of four and a half feet per year and in the course of a few centuries may be reduced to a shallow rapids.

Officials of the Federal income tax office at London report that the returns received from the district up until the closing period numbered about five thousand less than one year ago. It is claimed that this indicates that there are a large number of delinquents, but it is probably they state that most of the 5,000 have no taxable income.

The death occurred in Victoria Hospital, London, April 29th, of Belle Webber, wife of George Martin. Deceased had been in poor health for some time and passed away after undergoing a surgical operation. ANOTHER PIONEER PASSES

The death of James Patterson, one of the oldest and most highly-respected pioneers of Mosca township, occurred at his residence, 14 Newbury on Tuesday, April 29th, at his 97th year.

Mr. Patterson was born in Argyleshire, Scotland, on August 20, 1827, and came to this country with his parents when twelve years of age. When a young man he taught school for three years. Later he was engaged in business in Newbury, then followed farming, retiring from active life sixteen years ago. Mr. Patterson could relate many stirring incidents in his career under the conditions that existed in the pioneer days.

Besides his widow, formerly Miss Agnes Simpson, daughter of the late Wm. Simpson, of Mosca, he is survived by four sons and two daughters. John Patterson, of Metcalfe, Wm. Patterson, of Phoenix, Arizona, Duncan, of Vancouver; Mrs. L. L. McTaggart, of Ekfrid, and Mrs. Frank Foster, of Detroit.

Funeral services were held at Knox Presbyterian church, Newbury, on Sunday afternoon, May 4th, conducted by Rev. H. Bellamy, and interment was made at Cameron cemetery. Six grandsons acted as pallbearers—Dan Patterson, Duncan Patterson, James Patterson, Philip Patterson, Wm. Foster and Milton Fletcher.

He also leaves three brothers and two sisters.

The funeral from the old home on Monday was largely attended. Service was held in Burns' church, Mosca, and interment was made in Kilmartin cemetery.

The funeral was held on Monday at 2 o'clock to Oakland cemetery, conducted by Rev. Mr. Wainshall, pastor of the Glencoe Methodist church, of which she was a member. The pallbearers were W. BURNS' CHURCH CELEBRATES

Newly Decorated Kilmartin Church Reopened on 80th Anniversary

Kilmartin, May 7.—The eightieth anniversary services were held in Burns' church, Mosca, last Sunday. Large congregations greeted Rev. A. L. Carr, of West Lorne, preacher for the day, who conducted the services both morning and evening in a very acceptable manner. The choir rendered special music. Robert Morrison, of Alvinston, sang a solo, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," in the morning, and Miss Wilhelmina Munroe sang "Lead, Kindly Light" in the evening.

Supper on Monday evening was equally successful, although the rain spoiled the attendance somewhat. About four hundred people partook of a bountiful supper provided by the ladies of the congregation, and did ample justice. After supper a sacred concert was held in the church, when one of the finest entertainments ever given in this part of the country was enjoyed. Rev. D. Robertson occupied the chair. The speakers were Dr. Macdonald, of Kintore; Dr. Smith, of Blenheim; Rev. W. Leitch, of Kintyre, and Rev. D. G. Paton, of Glencoe. The musical part was entirely in the hands of the choir of the First Presbyterian church, London, under the leadership of George Lethbridge. The music was of the highest order, and was fully appreciated by the large gathering. Resolutions of appreciation were passed to the speakers and singers and those taking part in the Sabbath services; to the Ladies' Aid and the ladies of the congregation; to the visitors for their presence and help, and to the old members who were among the pioneers of the congregation and through old age were unable to be with us.

The church building has just been decorated by the Stoneman-Crawford Company, of Toronto, and has been done in a very tasteful manner. The color scheme conforms to the lines of the building, to retain the loftiness peculiar to church architecture. The colors are restful, particularly the warm grey on the walls. The plain ceiling with the absence of any border, except some gold trimming around the ventilators, and the ceiling, came into contact with many people and had a large circle of friends. Three times in less than three years has death visited the home—first, the mother, on July 19, 1921; the grandmother, May 22, 1922; and lastly his father, Mr. McKellar, who left a family of five sons and three daughters—Donald, at the old home; Dougald and Alex., of Prince Rupert, B.C.; Archie, of Jenner, Alberta; Ernest, of Harrow, Essex county; Mrs. John Calderwood, of Glencoe; Mrs. Archie McNeil, of Regina, and Mrs. Russell Roemelo, of North Ekfrid. He also leaves three brothers and two sisters.

The funeral from the old home on Monday was largely attended. Service was held in Burns' church, Mosca, and interment was made in Kilmartin cemetery.

ONTARIO MUSICAL FESTIVAL

Donald Wright, of Strathroy, won second prize in the violinello number at the Ontario Musical Festival in Toronto. Donald, who is but 15 years of age, had to compete against men and his showing is thus all the more creditable. Last year he won first prize, but his competition was not as keen. Donald is a pupil of Howard Gordon.

In the high school orchestra competition, first place was won by the Central Collegiate orchestra, London, with Douglas Fetherston as conductor. The orchestra led by Howard Gordon, and which is composed of pupils from Strathroy, Aylmer and Glencoe, was allowed to compete only after strong representations were made, owing to its being drawn from several towns. The dispute apparently had the effect of antagonizing the judges, who henceforward lost no opportunity to for honest criticism but for a shallow order of sarcasm at its expense. Its performance nevertheless brought a spontaneous outburst of applause from the audience, showing that this orchestra was decidedly their favorites and would have easily retained under competent judges its first place standing won last year.

Glencoe public school orchestra was awarded third in its class, but, judging from the applause, in the estimation of the audience, composed for the most part of real musical critics, was worthy of the highest award.

Miss Gladys Richards, of Strathroy, who is the possessor of a beautiful contralto voice, won highest honors in her class, and Miss Irene Reith, soprano, of Glencoe, was awarded third place in a group of twenty-three competitors.

NICE SURPLUS ON HYDRO

Glencoe hydro-electric commission have been notified by the Ontario commission that Glencoe's share of surplus on operations during the year 1923 amounts to $1,028.

DEATH FROM LOCKJAW

The death occurred at his home in Appin on Monday, May 5, of Thomas Howe, a well-known retired farmer of the township of Ekfrid, aged 87 years. The death of Mr. Howe was the result of having the pain of his hand pierced by a small stick or thorn on the 16th of April. Lockjaw developed, to which he succumbed.

The late Mr. Howe was born in Canada township. Prior to moving to Appin three years ago he lived in Ekfrid township for thirteen years. He leaves, besides his widow, formerly Miss Teresa Pettit, five daughters and three sons—Mrs. George Chisholm, Mrs. Fred Perry, Mrs. Alvin Perry, Appin; Mrs. James Campbell, Komoka; Mrs. Calvert Reyecraft, Newbury; Levi Howe, Windsor, and Al and George Howe, Appin; also three sisters—Mrs. Clements Fisher, Strathroy; Mrs. Sarah Green, Caradoc; and Mrs. Mary Ann Connors, of the West.

Funeral services were held in the Presbyterian church at Appin on Wednesday afternoon, conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. J. Stevenson. Interment was made in the Appin cemetery.

APPROVES ALDRED ROAD PLAN

The Essex Free Press, commenting on Mr. Aldred's letter re the proposed Blue Water Highway, which it publishes in its last issue, says: "The above letter is correct and to the point in every detail. The Free Press is also familiar with the lay of the land covering the above 'lay-out' as the promoters of the Blue Water Route would have it. Common sense would say that for the present Sarnia could have the old Military Egrement Road, London to Sarnia. This is the main road through Lambton county and there are no cross roads running north and south, which are now advocated and most desirable. Build the paved road, Sarnia to London, 55 miles, then have cross roads from Lake Huron to Lake Erie, north and south. If the Blue Water way is built, as suggested along the south shores of Lake Huron and the sand hills of Port Frank, which is almost inconceivable, such would be used only by a few tourists in the summer. And again, there are miles of farms only on one side of the road, the lake being on the other side. It would be a shame and a disgrace to harness the cost of building such a road on the province for the benefit of a few tourists. We would advise to build a few cross roads, north and south, and let the Blue Water route, Sarnia up the lake, rest for the present. One could take the paved Egrement Road through Warwick township, then the paved roads, if built, north and south, into Grand Bend on Lake Huron or to Lake Erie on the south."

A sentence inadvertently omitted by Mr. Aldred in the draft of his letter we think should be emphasized. It reads:

The mileage between Windsor and Grand Bend would be approximately nineteen miles less by the proposed Central Highway and present improved Longwoods Provincial Highway than by the proposed Blue Water Highway.

DIES SUDDENLY IN HIS CHAIR

The death of one of Aldborough's earliest settlers occurred at the family residence, concession 2, on May 1st, when John G. Stalker, aged 83 years and 11 months, passed away. Deceased had been in his usual health, and died suddenly while sitting in his chair.

Mr. Stalker was a native of Scotland, coming to this country in 1853 and settling on the farm where death took place. He was well known and very highly thought of.

Besides his widow he leaves two daughters, Effie and Bessie, and one son, Donald. The funeral took place on Saturday, service being at the residence and interment in the Simpson cemetery.

DEATH OF MRS. CONGDON

An old and highly esteemed resident of Ekfrid township died on May 1st at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry McEellan, in the person of Catherine Congdon, wife of the late John Congdon, at the age of 83 years.

Mrs. Congdon enjoyed the best of health, in spite of her advanced age, up to the time of her illness several months ago. Her husband predeceased her by five years. Mrs. Congdon was a member of the Anglican Church, and the funeral service on Saturday afternoon was conducted by Rev. Wm. Willans, rector of Glencoe, assisted by Rev. M. C. Parr, Methodist minister, of Appin. The pallbearers were Edward Andrews, John McKellar, John Tuffin, Duncan Campbell, John Huston and Archie Patterson. Interment was made at the Eddie cemetery. The late Mrs. Congdon leaves five daughters and one son.

"When Hearts Command"

By ELIZABETH YORK MILLER

"When hearts command,
From midst the sagest counselings depart."

Hugo smiled unconcernedly and shrugged his shoulders. "That was all gone into when they tried me for shooting him. We needn't rake it up now."

"Certainly not, Hugo," Jean agreed hastily. "Only—whatever money Mrs. Egan has, you can make no claim on it. You're about the last person in the world who could do so."

Hugo's smile broadened a little. He looked almost enigmatic.

"She'll pay," he said, with a satisfied nod.

Gaunt and Jean exchanged glances and Gaunt tapped his forehead significantly.

"You frightened the poor lady," he said with brutal directness. "No doubt she thought you still safe at Broadmoor, and to be suddenly confronted by the man who shot down her husband—well, she'd likely promise anything."

But Hugo was unaffected by this bold reference to his crime. He continued to smile—it had become a smirk now—sought in his waistcoat pocket for a tattered packet of cigarettes, lit one, puffed at it in such a way that furious sparks flew out, and swung one knee over the other, thus displaying his utter and perfect confidence in himself and what he had asserted.

Gaunt went back to the original argument with Jean, and he made use of what he did not believe in—Hugo's fortune that was to come from Mrs. Egan.

"Well, you can pay me back when you've more money," he said, and swept all the bills and memoranda into his pocket.

Jean's eyes filled with reproachful tears and Gaunt leaned across the table and took her hand, patting it gently.

"Won't you let me do anything for you and Alice?" he asked. "Could you be cruel enough not to give me just that one little morsel of pleasure?"

Hugo looked at him sidewise—a fluttering, admiring gaze—and blew out a perfect shower of sparks.

"You needn't be cruel, Jean," he prompted her. "Old Hector means well, and of course we can pay him back when Mrs. Egan settles her debt to me."

Mrs. Carnay gave in, but principally because she was dreadfully short of money. They would have to pay for their rooms at the hotel in lieu of proper notice, and taking this little villa was not nearly so cheap as it had looked to be at four o'clock that morning. She'd considered that Gaunt had been grossly extravagant in his ordering. Yet the thing had been done quickly, as she had hoped it might be, and she realized now that by herself she could never have managed it in so short a time. Such a relief that Hugo need not make any further appearance at the hotel.

But he left behind him Carrie Egan and the trail of unkind gossip which only a word or two from her might start. There was also Philip Ardeyne to be considered.

Jean had watched Dr. Ardeyne closely—oh, so closely. Could one say there was the slightest change in his manner towards Alice? Jean had not detected any. "Uncle John" seemed to have been accepted by him without question.

Her mind reviewed unceasingly all that had taken place during the past five hours. Hadn't she herself made a few blunders? Her brows drew together in the weary effort to recall:

her lips puckered dismally. How many times had she said "Hugo" instead of "John"? Perhaps it was only her imagination.

"I must see about things," she said vaguely. "You'll stay to supper, Hector?"

"I'll stay, but there's nothing for you to see about. Go in and lie down for awhile."

"Yes, you must take care of yourself," piped Hugo. "Hector and I have a lot to talk about. Men's talk. We haven't seen each other for so long, you know."

Jean hesitated for a brief moment, but she realized that Gaunt really wanted her to go, so she went, wondering what they would talk about when they were alone together.

CHAPTER XVII.

Dr. Ardeyne finished first with his share of the packing. Hugo's slender belongings all went into the two handbags and it did not take long to dispose of them.

The doctor was just about as unhappy as a man in love can be when things are not going altogether well. To begin with, there was the unalterable fact that he cared more for Alice than he had ever believed it would be possible for a man to care for any woman, and he was old enough to know his mind in that respect. Quite apart from any feeling of chivalry, there was his love for her. Yet what sort of a marriage could their be? How could he explain to her that she must never have any children? It was an explanation which would involve a great deal of suffering and humiliation for her.

On the surface, Hugo Smarke was no more than eccentric, and no more eccentric than thousands of other people. But this history of the Smarke family was a terrible one; and "Uncle John," the apparently harmless eccentric, had spent fifteen years of his life in captivity, a criminal lunatic. Yet not—Philip Ardeyne's opinion—a dyed-in-the-wool homicidal maniac. Smarke's asylum record had been carefully kept, of course, and never once did it occur to those fifteen years was there one mark against him for violence or even for bad temper. He had been at times sulky, depressed, peevish, irritable, mischievous—but those adjectives apply to sane people as well as to lunatics. Confined in such a place as Broadmoor, with but the faintest hope of ultimate release, it would be strange indeed if a man did not occasionally lose patience and self-control. On the whole, Hugo Smarke's asylum record had been excellent. But one thing was overlooked—the fact that he had killed a man, although they had set him free as sane, he was by no means normal, and there was no way of being sure that, given certain circumstances, the old mania would not assert itself. Ardeyne wished there was an extra room at the Villa Charmil, so that he might propose himself as a guest.

He felt that he ought to have a clear understanding with that preposterous Mrs. Carnay, but it would be difficult to broach the subject to her.

As he waited on the verandah of the hotel for Alice and the chambermaid to finish with the trunks, he debated the matter.

His conscience and his reason were all against this marriage. A different sort of man might have complained bitterly, if only to himself, that he had been trapped into the engagement. For that was what it was. Yet sometimes he felt a little sorry for Mrs. Carnay. She lived with such passionate unselfishness for her daughter, was so determined that Alice should be happy, that Ardeyne—now sharing those sentiments—could not altogether dislike her.

At this hour of the day the hotel verandah was always more or less deserted, and the doctor had it quite to himself. He ordered a cup of coffee and smoked a cigarette while he waited in the pleasant shadow cast by the big awnings. It was a very hot spring day, and already the various birds of passage were beginning to wing their way north, or to think about it. There would be no more new arrivals. Ardeyne's own holiday was drawing to its close.

As he sat on the balustrade, swinging one foot and thinking his gloomy, tangled thoughts, Mrs. Egan's car rounded the steep driveway and came to a stop before the hotel entrance. Her chauffeur, now restored to health and her service, jumped out and immediately got into conference with the assistant concierge. There was a ringing of bells and some shouting from the concierge to the lift-boy and from the lift-boy down a speaking tube to the porters' office. Then the chauffeur came back, walked around the silver car punching the tires in turn with his fist, opened the bonnet and looked into the engine, then lit a cigarette and began to undo straps on the luggage carrier. The lift-boy and assistant concierge came out to watch him, and presently the head waiter was seen hovering about inside hospitably ready to speed the parting guest. It gradually dawned upon Philip Ardeyne that Mrs. Egan might be going away.

This suspicion was confirmed presently by the appearance of her maid and luggage. The chauffeur and one of the porters began to strap on a couple of motor trunks to the maid, dressed for travelling, put small bags, rolls of rugs, umbrellas, parasols, golf-sticks and tennis racquets into the tonneau, reserving enough space in a corner of the seat to tuck herself away.

Last of all came Mrs. Egan, hatless as usual, but encased in a big white coat and loose driving gloves. The chauffeur disposed of his cigarette and touched his cap. Everything was ready. The young manager stood near at hand to wish her good-bye and many happy returns; the head concierge, with his upturned moustache and ready smirk, had taken command of the door of the car.

"Going away?" Ardeyne asked, a little superfluously.

Mrs. Egan looked sidewise at him. There was a question in that glance, but he did not know what it was.

"Yes," she said, "I'm tired of this place. I'm going home."

"To England?" asked Ardeyne.

"No—no." She laughed a little nervously. "England isn't my home, really. I'm going to Kingston—Jamaica. I've just been looking up the boats, and I can catch one at Marseilles on Wednesday."

Ardeyne regarded her attentively. She certainly had the furtive manner of one who is running away. But from what? Surely not from Hugo Smarke. I've just been looking up the boats, and I can catch one at Marseilles on Wednesday."

Ardeyne regarded her attentively. She certainly had the furtive manner of one who is running away. But from what? Surely not from Hugo Smarke. I've just been looking up the boats, and I can catch one at Marseilles on Wednesday."

"Isn't this rather sudden?" he asked.

Carrie Egan nodded and displayed her fine teeth in a smile, the quality of which was a little uncertain. She was a mysterious creature, hinting, always at subtleties which the ordinary mind is not quick enough to grasp. Here, as one might say, at a moment's notice she was flinging off to a distant portion of the world as unconcernedly—or less so—that Mrs. Carnay had taken the Villa Charmil.

"To tell you the truth, that awful little man, Smarke, gives me the shudders," she said. "Phil, you are a demon. You never let on that he was a relation of your precious Carnays and that you'd have him in tow. I suppose he's your patient."

DON'T FORGET THE GIFT GARDEN.

It may seem a little like "rushing the season" to be thinking of Christmas gifts and giving now, but next winter this fore-thought will be appreciated. And, too, there are other special reasons and dates when gifts and remembrances seem to be in order, birthdays and "showers" when the busy housewife may be sorely puzzled for something appropriate and suitable to give. It is not the gift that shows the greatest outlay of money that is appreciated the most, but those that show the careful thought and care of a loving friend.

The gift I appreciated more than any other last Christmas was a delightful bouquet of "overlasting" flowers. They were arranged with ornamental grasses, and were an exceptionally welcome bit of color in our living-room. This little box of brightness was sent half-way across the continent.

Geranium and coleus seeds planted late this spring, and well cared for, will make charming potted plants for this winter. One summer on the old homestead Mother bought a package of coleus seeds, and that Christmas she had thirty-three potted plants—all different—to distribute among her neighbors as Christmas remembrances.

Coleus seeds are very fine, so Mother mixed them with dry earth, and sifted them out of a salt shaker, so that they might be evenly distributed. They were planted indoors, in shallow pans. Until the little seedling peeped through they were watered by spreading a flannel cloth over the soil and sprinkling the water on this, so that the tiny seeds would not be washed out.

Most flower lovers will appreciate a little collection of flower seed that have been grown in the flower garden of a friend. These may be from favorite, quick-growing annuals, and may be put in tiny envelopes, with the names of the flowers, as well as directions for growing—if they are needed—on the outside.

Most bulbs multiply very rapidly, and a small box of these products will always make very acceptable gifts. Dahlias and cannas tubers are also desirable. Gladioli, monbretias and jonquils are suitable, as well as many other bulbs.

But while flowers, seeds and bulbs are all unexcelled, they are only a small part of the garden products that may be utilized for gift purposes. A collection of common garden herbs.

Such a collection may consist of sage, sweet marjoram, summer savory, anise, and thyme. Two sage plants in our garden have for years provided two families with all the sage they can use, as well as several of the neighbors, and many little gift packages have been made up from the surplus.

The Daily Newspaper Habit.

What Canada's forests mean to the United States was very clearly shown by Mr. R. S. Kellogg, Secretary of the News Print Service Bureau, in a recent address. As the United States takes 87 per cent. of the Canadian newsprint production, his address is of particular interest to this country, apart from the fact that paper consumption in both countries is of like proportions. Mr. Kellogg said:

"We are passing into a paper age. If you have any doubt of that think what would happen if some great catastrophe should wipe out all the paper there is in the world. Civilization would be in utter chaos.

"We absolutely depend upon paper for every kind of purpose, particularly for business purposes, since probably 95 per cent. of our business is done through the medium of paper.

"It is only within the last 50 years that the world has begun to have enough paper. There never was enough until processes were developed for making paper out of wood instead of rags.

"To show that we are now in a paper age, such figures as we can obtain from official sources indicate that on the 1920 basis the per capita consumption of paper in Russia was six pounds. At the same date in Japan it was 12 pounds; in Germany, 45 pounds; Scandinavia, 33 pounds; Great Britain 74 pounds; and in the United States, 150 pounds.

"More specifically, in addition to being a paper age, we can say, I think, that we are in a newspaper age. In 1880 the per capita consumption of newsprint in the United States was three pounds. In 1893 it was nine pounds. By 1919 it had grown to 35 pounds, and in the year 1923 it was 50 pounds. In the 43 years from 1880 to 1923 it has grown from 3 to 50 pounds.

"There have been two great things that have led to this—making paper from wood and the development of the rotary printing press.

"We have to-day paper machines that are turning out paper at the rate of over 1,000 feet a minute in a steady stream. We have newsprint processes eating it up even faster.

"Certain interesting developments have been responsible for this absolutely unprecedented use of newsprint. Advertising has been one of the big ones. Tremendous circulations have had a great deal to do with it. We have to-day papers that in 20 years have grown from 100,000 to 700,000 or 800,000 circulation. We have printed at this time a copy of a daily newspaper every day for every family in the United States and Canada. There is a daily newspaper habit."

Bitter Words.

Cynicism to-day is more likely to be found among the young people than amid the old. It is frequently the pose of those who, with life before them, find that all is vanity and nothing is worth while. Therefore they abhor and defy convention, are ready to join any group that promises inflammation and revolt and, shouting the battle-cry of freedom, make all that looks like conservatism the target of their acute and poison-tipped barbs of their caustic irony.

The cynicism of the young is added to the expressed disillusionment of those who have lived long and seen much and are sorrowful. For youth is supposed to be the other name of all that is hopeful and joyous.

But, fortunately, the cynicism of youth seldom is more than skin deep and it usually does not live long. Of all the hardships and cares laid upon the world, of all the liabilities society must carry, the chronic grouches of those whom life has embittered are among the most onerous.

There is so much work to do that none has time to spare for the atrabilious comment of the news-talkers, upon those who are steadfast in a task. A thoughtful, critical attention that in candor points out a fault, desiring to assist the performer, is a different matter from sheer abuse or ridicule of one who has started something.

Many useful things have been ridiculed, and thus, how many well-meaning persons who could have done a thing worth while have been swerved from the idea, because of a withering blast of sarcasm that came as they struggled to begin! A Keats writing poetry, a Langley devising an airplane, a Palissy in quest of a potter's secret, must expect ridicule that may mean heartbreak for the sensitive.

A sarcastic tongue may raise a laugh at the expense of the victim, but it is likely to make the speaker feared and hated.

One definition of a gentleman is that he is a person who never gives pain. If we add to it the affirmation that he seeks to give pleasure, the definition is fairly complete. Nobody ever made himself popular in society or beloved in a home by the use of harsh speech.

Only Halfway Cousins.

There is a good story about Sir Nicholas Bacon, the father of Lord Bacon, the philosopher. Nicholas was a judge in the time of Elizabeth. Once a criminal impudently him to spare his life on account of kinship.

"How are we related?" demanded the judge.

"Because my name is Hogg and yours is Bacon; and hog and bacon are so near alike that they cannot be separated."

"Aye," responded the judge dryly, "but you and I cannot yet be kindred, for the hog is not bacon until it be well barded."

CREDITORS IN BRITAIN OFFER TERMS TO SOVIET GOVERNMENT

Accept Compensation in the Shape of Concessions—Companies Putting in Working Capital Must Have Control of Operation.

A despatch from London says:—British creditors of Russia now have put forward a counter-proposition in reply to the proposal of the Soviet Government for a settlement of their claims. This alternative scheme abandons their demand for the return of confiscated and ruined property, but they are willing to accept compensation in the shape of concessions, and offer to form a number of companies, one representing each of the industries, to work these concessions. They agree to supply the working capital needed and to allow a certain amount of control by the Soviets, and participation in the profits, under the following conditions:

1. No mixed companies—by which is meant that the Soviet Government shall not be a shareholder, either directly or through nominees.
2. No interference by the Soviet Government in the internal affairs of the companies or control of their work.
3. No interference by the Executive Red Trade Union in Moscow in contracts with workers. The companies agree to collective bargaining through the local trade union and to pay the existing rates of wages.
4. Full freedom of the companies to buy raw material in Russia and abroad and sell the manufactured products in Russia and abroad.
5. All orders for material to be placed with mines, factories, etc., without Government interference.
6. After deducting a percentage for interest on the new capital, the companies will pay a certain percentage of the net profits to a fund for compensation to claimants, but the money from each company is to be used only to compensate individuals in that industry.

This scheme is now under consideration by the Soviet delegates, but is said to have little chance of acceptance unless materially altered. The Soviet attitude, not disclosed until now, is that the Russian Government is willing to pay individuals who have suffered losses as a direct result of the revolution. For instance, it will pay for property requisitioned, nationalized, etc., but not for property destroyed in the revolution or abandoned by persons who left Russia because of the revolution.

It also refuses to recognize claims for compensation for loss of employment or illness due to the rigors of the revolution. Such exceptions, if recognized, would reduce the claims about 50 per cent.

The British, on their side, are concentrating rather on the political than the economic side of the conference. They are demanding that Russia cease its diplomatic representation in Afghanistan, which they feel is directed solely against India; disband the school of Oriental propaganda in Turkestan, and cease propaganda in Persia. The British are also said to be trying to buy the East China Railway from the Russians. There is a complication about this, as, while the railway is Russian property, it is heavily mortgaged to French bondholders, and an effort by Russia to sell the East China Railway recently failed on this account.

U.S. TORNADO'S DEATH LIST TOTALS 113

Seven Southern States Affected Are Recovering Slowly.

A despatch from Atlanta, Ga., says:—Towns and rural communities, stricken by an epidemic of tornadoes that dipped ruthlessly through seven southern states, on Wednesday were recovering slowly. Relief workers, from organized services and volunteers, had their tasks well under way in the scores of villages leveled. Reports gathered placed the total death list at 113. There still was no definite estimate of the persons injured, but belief persisted that the number would reach 500. Property damage will be much greater than at first anticipated on Thursday. The only estimate attempted—that of $10,000,000, probably will be scrapped. South Carolina was worst stricken of the seven states visited by the tornadoes. Red Cross workers and others were at Anderson and at Horrel Hill settlement state troops were on guard. Property damage at Anderson alone was $750,000.

Deaf to Hear at British Exhibit by Aid of Science

Special arrangements are being made to enable deaf persons to take part in the various conferences which will be held at the British Empire Exhibition, says a London despatch. The four conference halls are being fitted with highly sensitive microphones. Some two hundred seats will have ear pieces attached to them to enable their occupants to pick up the voices of the speakers. Attached to each ear piece is a regulator.

Sixty-ton Salvage Tug Crosses Atlantic Ocean

A despatch from Montreal says:—Buffeted by the Atlantic and at times almost swamped, a tiny steel vessel, the Salvage Prince, 60 tons, no bigger than a harbor tug, is in port here, after a twenty-days' crossing from Hull, England. She is bound for Kingston, Ont., where she will enter salvage service on the Great Lakes.

ORGANIZED WORK FOR BLIND PEOPLE

In this article, which concludes the present series, we simply wish to point out for special attention the main features of work for the blind in Canada and the campaign that is being waged to prevent blindness. The Canadian National Institute for the Blind stands ready to investigate each case of blindness reported and if treatment cannot restore vision, to render the following services:

1. To provide teaching in the home.
2. To provide books and magazines printed in embossed type.
3. To sell raw materials required for home industries at cost.
4. To purchase for cash those home products that cannot be sold locally.
5. To secure and pass on at wholesale cost, Braille writing appliances, typewriters specially adapted, Braille watches, games of various kinds, paper for use with typewriter or Braille writing machines, tools, etc.
6. To give vocational advice, etc. to individuals desiring such and to secure other professional advice or opinions as desired.
7. To employ in industrial departments for men and women those individuals who appear desirous and capable of taking advantage of such supervised factory work.
8. To interest sighted business men and other people in efforts and products of blind individuals in your community and to render every other assistance that may be helpful.

How far has the Institute progressed in carrying out the above program? In six years it has registered a total number of 5,000 individuals across Canada, of whom 4,800 are at the moment eligible for Institute service from the blind standpoint. It has investigated hundreds of other cases but has not registered where the vision of the individual was sufficient to permit continuing at ordinary occupation. In such cases, however, prevention of blindness treatment or information as to care of remaining vision was provided. It has employed in broom shops at the present time, ninety blind men and in the whitewash shop for women, twenty-three girls and women, with approximately twenty-two men employed in basketry shops. This brings the total of men and women actually employed in factories to 135. Besides this, over six hundred women workers, are connected with various salesroom departments as home workers. Over eight hundred blind people in Canada are registered with our Library and Publishing Department as readers of our literature. Over forty are resident in homes or residential centers operated or maintained by the Institute.

What has the Institute done in its campaign against needless loss of vision?

1. It has through lantern slide lectures, newspaper publicity and the circulation of pamphlet literature, endeavored to educate and arouse the public and authorities concerned to the great menace of carelessness and neglect.
2. It is at the present time endeavoring to secure the treatment of all infants' eyes at birth.
3. It is educating mothers to the need of attention to eye trouble in young children.
4. It assisted in carrying out initial surveys in schools leading to the establishment of conservation of vision classes for all children with less than one-third normal vision in the better eye and is pushing this campaign throughout the whole country with a view to having the children with defective sight in all schools, whether urban or rural, properly taken care of.
5. It is endeavoring to educate men and women in industry to the need for care and use of all safety appliances provided.
6. It is endeavoring to suppress the tendency of adults to wear cheap or improperly fitted glasses which may cause further strain, or complete loss of remaining vision.
7. When cases are found where the individual cannot afford to secure treatment or purchase the necessary proper glasses, this Institute stands ready to assist.

CONTROL AND FINANCE. The Institute operates under Federal charter and is controlled by a Council composed of thirty-three prominent individuals representing all parts of Canada. Of this number, eleven are either blinded soldiers or blind civilians, and the remainder sighted business men and interested women, devoting a great deal of time and attention to this work. Besides this Council, we have local boards of directors for the Maritime Division, Central Western Division, and the British Columbia Branch.

Our funds are derived from two main sources. First, Government grants, and second, public contributions, bequests and Institute membership fees. Approximately fifty per cent. of our support comes from the Federal and various Provincial Governments interested, while the remainder is subscribed by interested members of the general public.

Now you can assist. 1. Buy products made by the hands of a blind Canadian. 2. If a campaign for funds in aid of our work is held in your district, subscribe. 3. Apply for membership. 4. Remember the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in your will. 5. Assist blind people in your own district if opportunity occurs. In giving this assistance, please remember that blind people are often sensitive and even prefer to go without needed help rather than be the subjects of excess sympathetic attention. In short, we are prepared to do everything humanly possible to eradicate needless blindness.

In closing, may I request a favorite of the information conveyed, you would like to take more interest in your blind fellow citizens, would you kindly write to E. A. Baker, General Secretary, Canadian National Institute for the Blind, Pearson Hall, Toronto. I would very much appreciate your comments and will be very glad to do everything possible for cases that you may report.

WHEAT EXPORTS TO U.S. NOT FALLING OFF

United States Tariff of 42 Cents Per Bushel Not a Restraining Factor.

Ottawa, May 4.—Reports from Washington to the effect that the high tariff of 42 cents a bushel on wheat, has effectively stopped imports from Canada are only a partial statement of the situation. It may be true that the ordinary import figures from Canada were but a mere trickle during April, but they do not include imports for milling in bond for export.

United States figures show that from July 1st to April 26th there had been imported from Canada 24,308,900 bushels of wheat, of which 13,353,195 were for consumption and 10,955,705 bushels were imported into bonded mills grinding for export. The important fact is that the latter's importations are growing all the time, and that new mills to take care of this class of business are being added. Approximately 11,000,000 bushels may not seem to be a very large quantity of wheat, but it was 1,300,000 bushels more than went out to the United States for consumption there during the seven months ending March.

That there is quite a lot of wheat booked for export to the United States is evident from the fact that the reports from Fort William say that the bookings for American mills total 14,000,000 bushels. So if Canadian wheat is not going across the line through one means it is going through another.

There is nothing so true that the dumps of error have not warped it. Void of purity in morals, faith is but a hypocrite of words.

DR. BANTING, DISCOVERER OF INSULIN, AWARDED MEDAL BY AMERICAN SOCIETY

A despatch from Philadelphia says:—Prof. Frederick G. Banting, of Toronto, discoverer of insulin, a substance which saves the lives of sufferers from diabetes, was one of the recipients of a John Scott gold medal. The medals were awarded at a meeting Friday night of the American Philosophical Society in its richly traditional hall on Fifth Street. "Canada can teach the rest of the world how to appreciate and reward the scientific men's free gifts to mankind," said Frederick Hudd, Canadian Trade Commissioner, who received the medal and $1,000 cheque for Dr. Banting. In the latter's absence, Mr. Hudd said, Canada has conferred upon Dr. Banting for his discovery of how to arrest diabetes, a life annuity of $7,500 and created for him a research professorship at the University of Toronto. Medals were also awarded to Dr. Elmer Verner McCollum, of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md., eminent biochemist and discoverer of the first vitamin ever recognized; William W. Coblentz, of Washington, D.C., physicist of the United States Bureau of Standards, who has devised ways to measure diameters of stars by measuring their radiations of heat, and Ralph Modjeski, engineer. Prof. William B. Scott, of Princeton University, presided. Dr. H. A. Hare announced the achievements of the scientists honored. Chairman M. P. Quinn, of sub-committee of the City of Philadelphia's union of city trusts, represented the board of directors.

UNITED STATES' NEW RULE ON AUTO TRAFFIC

Canadian Motorists Crossing Border Must Obtain Permit Card.

A despatch from Niagara Falls, Ont., says:—Unless the customs division of the Federal Government takes some action in regard to the local situation, Canadian motorists entering the United States will experience considerable delay, when the new ruling on traffic going into the United States from Canada goes into effect. Representative Clarence MacGregor of Buffalo has promised the Niagara Falls, N.Y., Chamber of Commerce that he will work for a special ruling on the situation here.

Under the new regulation every motorist entering the United States at the local port will be compelled to secure a permit card, issued by the American Customs. Residents of nearby points will be able to secure special one-year permits.

The United States Customs officials say that much congestion of traffic will result from the new ruling. Instead of being able to handle 300 to 400 cars an hour on Sundays and holidays, the customs men say they will be able to handle only about 30 cars an hour. It is not unusual for 10,000 automobiles to cross the bridges here on a Sunday or holiday during the summer season. The United States Customs officials want the Government to make a special ruling allowing Canadian motorists to leave their automobile registration cards at the bridge offices as American motorists do on entering Canada.

Mother of Four Has Received the King's Bounty

A despatch from St. John, N.B., says:—The mother of the Mahany quadruplets, born on Christmas Day, 1923, has received the King's bounty. It amounts to three pounds sterling, the same as is provided for triplets in England. The four children are all well.

An Ontario farmer is shown gathering his spring harvest from the sugar bush. Reports say that this season has brought one of the biggest sap runs on record.

GERMAN ELECTIONS FAVOR ALLIED PLAN

Returns from Polls Show That Dawes Scheme for Restoration of Country Appeals to People.

Berlin, May 4.—First returns from to-day's elections indicate that, though, as expected, the German Nationalist party, standing at the extreme right, registered substantial gains, the old coalition from which the present Government was formed—the German People's party, the Centrum, and the Democratic party—will form the next Government, probably in conjunction with the Socialists.

This is the group pledged to carrying out the Dawes plan. It was supposed that the German Nationalist party would lose heavily to the "Volkische bloc," the party formed from its ranks, and the most violently reactionary of all the German parties, but, judging from the early returns, this has not been the case. The Centrum party, to which Chancellor Marx belongs, seems to have held its own, judging from returns from Berlin and other big centres.

Natural Resources Bulletin.

The Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa says:

The forested areas of Canada stand second only to agricultural lands among the basic natural resources of this country, and industries using forest products have been surpassed by agriculture alone in mothing commercial growth. Their importance as a factor in the rise of Canadian commerce is evidenced by the increase of the Dominion's exports of wood, wood products and paper from $42,000,000 in 1908 to nearly $268,000,000 in 1922.

The work of ascertaining the actual extent of Canada's commercial forests is a large and exceedingly difficult undertaking. While progress has been made, the inventory is still far from complete. It is estimated, however, that approximately 600,000,000 acres of the total land area in the Dominion is covered by forest growth. Of this 150,000,000 acres may be considered as bearing saw timber of merchantable size, amounting to approximately 550,000,000 M board feet. The remainder of the area carries young stands, or timber suitable for pulpwood, fuel, etc. The total pulpwood resources are estimated to be about 1,800,000,000 cords of which 500,000,000 cords is of saw timber size and is included in the estimate of saw timber. The total stand of timber of all kinds, reduced to board measure, is about 1,000,000,000 M. feet. Of this, over 80 per cent is coniferous.

Early Demand for Seats at National Exhibition

A despatch from Toronto says:—A record for early sales of Exhibition grand stand seats was established on Thursday when the representative of an east end Masonic lodge applied to Treasurer F. F. Bretnell for 300 tickets for the night of Tuesday, September 4. On that occasion the lodge is putting on a ceremonial and as part of the entertainment the visitors from outside the city will be given a trip to the Exhibition and an evening on the grand stand.

Managing Director John G. Kent has also received the first entry for the 1924 Exhibition. It came from Mrs. A. Edwards, 224 McRoberts Ave., and was for the women's section.

Japan to Float in U.S. $150,000,000 Loan

A despatch from Washington says:—Official advices received on Thursday indicate that the Japanese Government probably will seek to float another large loan in this country early next year. It is expected this loan will be for $150,000,000, as was the external loan floated in the United States early this year.

There has been much criticism in Japan and the Orient generally of the terms of the $150,000,000 loan floated in this country. A loan for approximately $100,000,000 floated in Great Britain under precisely the same conditions, for some reason, has not been criticized to anything like the same extent.

Round-World Flight Continued Despite Loss of Leader

A despatch from Washington says:—Search for the lost commander of the round-the-world airplane flight will be continued in Alaskan waters, but the expedition with which the War Department is intent upon making history will continue.

The attitude at the White House and War Dept. on Friday was that the bold undertaking should not be discontinued because its leader is missing, much as it will be regretted, if the intrepid aviator is not found. Gen. Patrick, chief of the Air Service, communicated by telegraph with Lieut. Lowell H. Smith at Dutch Harbor, directing him to move forward with the plane, as soon as the weather permitted.

The death rate in Sweden is 16.49 per thousand.

King Tut's Telephone

QUITE naturally, effective work by the Howard Carter party at the tomb of King Tutankhamen in the valley of the Kings, was out of the question without the aid of the telephone. The problem of an operator was solved by arranging for the services of the turbaned gentleman shown on the left. The contrast between him and the alert, intelligent young lady of the type we know as well, is striking, but it is averred that, under the conditions imposed by the excavators, the Egyptian filled the bill very well.

The Transcript

Published every Thursday morning from The Transcript Building, Main Street, Glencoe, Ontario. Subscription—in Canada, $2.00 per year; in the United States and other foreign countries, $2.50 per year.

Advertising—The Transcript covers a wide section of territory in Western Ontario, and its readers are the leading farmers and townpeople. It is a first-class advertising medium. Rates on application.

Job Printing—The Jobbing Department has superior equipment for turning out promptly books, pamphlets, circulars, posters, blank forms, programs, card tables, office and wedding stationery, etc. A. E. Sutherland, Publisher.

In the case of the Home Bank it looks as if they were loath to kill the goose that laid the golden egg.

Parents of Ontario will undoubtedly be enthralled when Hon. G. H. Ferguson, premier, announces details of his proposed revision of the school curriculum. It is already indicated that many of the fads and frills are to go, to make room for the return of the much more important three "R's."

It now seems unlikely that the much-discussed gasoline tax will go into effect until 1925. At that time it is said all automobile drivers, including private owners and members of their families who desire to drive, will be examined as to proficiency, and licensed. The number of autos is increasing so rapidly that some such action appears necessary for the protection of the public.

Just as soon as rural highways are in summer condition a small army of purveyors of securities will begin to move up and down the sideroads and concession lines looking for purchasers of their wares. Some of the bonds or stocks offered will be good; some will be of questionable value; some will be wholly worthless. It is high time to stop this particular leek at all events. Widows with small capital, and farmers with limited surpluses, would be well advised to consult reliable sources of information before subscribing to any "get-rich-quick" schemes.

There will be 245 members of the House of Commons after the next general election. A distribution bill to be brought down this session by the government will give Western Canada 12 more members and reduce Nova Scotia's total membership by 2, under the terms of the British North America Act, which fixes Canada's parliamentary representation on the basis of one-sixty-fifth of Quebec's population. British Columbia is increased from 13 to 14 members; Manitoba from 15 to 17; Alberta from 12 to 16; Saskatchewan from 16 to 21. The number of members of parliament will be increased if the bill goes through from 235 to 245.

The Honorable the Minister of Highways has the courage of his convictions, that in townships statute labor should be abolished and road superintendents appointed, and that in counties the provisions of The Highways Improvement Act should be administered without regard to township boundaries or assessment. Townships and counties have been notified to fall in line. Now every thoughtful man knows that because they have always done it this way is "prima facie" evidence that there must be some better way. Think it over and make answer to yourself—honestly and fearlessly—if you are satisfied with the present—well and good—if not, co-operate actively, frankly and sincerely with your associates in the council to bring about a better and more business-like administration of highway expenditures by adopting the suggestions of the Minister.—Municipal World.

BOOTLEG LIQUOR

In his recent book, "Prohibition Inside Out," Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes presents a long array of dramatic facts connected with the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. Not least of these in interest are the discoveries made by prohibition agents as to the quality of the liquors which illegal drinkers put into their systems. Out of 60,000 samples of bootlegged whiskeys analyzed in the government laboratories, less than one per cent. was found to be pure, and many of them contained poison. This is confirmed by other analyses in state laboratories and elsewhere. In Ohio it has been shown that one man in three hundred of the bootleggers' customers gets real whisky. In Chicago, within a period of six months one hundred deaths were caused by drinking poisonous compounds, and figures from Philadelphia were far in excess of that. Over and above the cases reported as the immediate result of such drinking are a much larger number from diseases that are traceable to bad liquor as the cause. Even this is but part of the story, for ailments induced by the poisons in victims who continue to live are inferred with tolerable certainty though they escape statistics.

The explanation given for this quality of liquor is that under the present surreptitious and irresponsible methods of manufacture and by reason of the rapid demand of those who want it, every unscrupulous rascal is induced to interfere with anything that will sell through the bootleggers. In some cases the crude methods of making fail to eliminate from the brew poisonous elements that by a more scientific process would be driven off. In others there is the deliberate introduction of poisons for the sake of adding the desired "kick" or rotten fruits and vegetables are used. Under the necessity for secrecy, liquor is distilled in all sorts of hidden places where sanitation would be impossible at best, and the filth that often goes with it would be the most potent argument against its use if the intended consumer could witness it. Barrels, boilers, coils and other equipment become foul by repeated use without cleansing. There is no protection against swarming flies and other insects, and even snakes, mice, rats and cats have been found in the vats. Stills have been found under hogan floors where refuse from the pens fell in the mash, and they have been found in stables, concealed under manure piles. A Texas moonshiner was found operating in the yard of a fertilizer factory, where he made his mashes out of the vegetable portions of garbage brought in by the wagon. Details of this kind are too sickening to repeat, and the smell of the place was more than some of the officers who came for the still could stand.

MOSA COUNCIL

A meeting of Mosa council was held at Newbury on April 19th, with members all present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Moved by James Gilbert, seconded by A. McCready, that Wm. C. King be paid $98 for sheep killed and worried by dogs; Chas. Clements, $10, for sheep worried by dogs; P. E. Lumley, $15.90, for formaldehyde used in fumigating; Municipal World, $4.50, for township supplies; Joseph Babcock, $6, for valuing sheep killed by dogs; Albert Holman, $6.50, for groceries furnished to Mrs. Frank

FEEL BETTER IN FEW HOURS OR NO COST!

This is the time of year when your liver becomes sluggish and your intestines become clogged with poisonous waste. Your liver does not properly purify blood that flows to your skin. The result is sallow complexion, dark circles and pimples. As these poisons continue to flood your system, your resistance is lowered, you feel dull and tired and sick. Make this test! Cleanse and tone your liver with Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup. Contains pure ingredients prescribed by physicians. Helps nature strengthen your stomach, soothe tired and over-taxed nerves, brace up system and purify your blood. Notice quick difference in way you look, eat, sleep and feel. You, too, will be satisfied, as others have, or no cost.

Dr. Thacher's is sold and recommended by P. E. Lumley in Glencoe and by leading druggists in every city and town.

Smith; H. Gould, $16, for refund of statute labor. Carried.

Moved by J. A. Leitch, seconded by I. Westborough, that by-law No. 127, to provide for the Mosa township assessments in the Glencoe outlet drain, be provisionally adopted, and that the date for holding a court of revision be set for the 26th of May, at the town hall, Glencoe, at 2.30 in the afternoon. Carried.

By-law No. 726, to commute statute labor in the township of Mosa, was finally passed as read a third time.

The council adjourned to meet at Glencoe on Monday, May 26th, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, as a court of revision on the assessment roll for 1924.

THIS MAN'S LAND

To the Editor of The Transcript: In last week's issue of The Transcript I noticed an article entitled "A No Man's Land." In this a statement was made which is not correct, for in that article it is stated that eight acres of land were never assessed either for township or village purposes. In examining the records, the highest number of acres unassessed at any time was two and one-quarter acres. Last year twelve acres were assessed in Ekfrid and sixteen acres in Glencoe. This year twenty-four acres are assessed in Glencoe and six and one-quarter acres in Ekfrid.

GUARDING AGAINST SWINDLERS

(American Magazine) "If everyone would use a little common sense," says Chief Simmons, "the swindlers would soon be out of business. The post office department does all it can to punish those who use the mails to fleece you but the best weapon against crooks of all kinds is common sense on the part of the public.

"First of all, beware of the man who offers to give you something for nothing, who has 'inside information' and promises to let you in 'on the ground floor.' And then remember that plums will never drop into your lap. Millions of dollars are lost every year by people who fall for the 'get-rich-quick' schemes. You can't beat a swindler at his game.

"This would be a sad world if we had to be suspicious of all strangers; but in dealing with people about whom you know little or nothing, you had better become suspicious at the very moment that they offer to let you in on a good thing. If it were such a good thing they wouldn't let you in on it. Keep that fact in mind, and it will save you some money."

THE RADIO FAN'S PROBLEM

The radio fan thinks he paid quite a fair sum for the equipment he has in the corner of his living-room. But, he argues, there are no records to buy for the machine, and all that is necessary is to tune in to the desired length and pick up the program that appeals to him. The world is his and the entertainment thereof.

But hold. Some of the largest broadcasters are in the business because they make receiving sets. They figure that the sale of these sets provides sufficient revenue to warrant in their expenditure the daily program.

That is all right as long as the sale of new equipment keeps up, but it is coming nearer to the point of saturation, and there is practically no replacement; the radio does not wear out. Once the free program fails to keep on stimulating the purchase of new receiving sets, that work will become plain expense and no corresponding revenue. Then it will cease.

The radio fan bought his equipment thinking that he was through with costs. He did not figure that it was like going into matrimony or the automobile market, where the cost of upkeep must have a place on the family ledger.

Some of the great stations are now using their outfit for commercial purposes or propaganda, but there are limits to this business. This service is paid for by those providing the material, but the fans don't want it; they crave entertainment.

They want concerts, singers and musicians and good speakers. But who is going to provide these items? The broadcasting problem may not be here, but it is on the way. The fans may not know it, but the broadcasting stations do. There is a limit to turning a knob and picking a high class number out of the air. Will the radio fans be called upon some day to help finance their own entertainment?

Under these conditions one of the best remedies that can be got is Miller's Worm Powders. They will attack the worms as soon as administered and they pass away in the evacuations. CHAIN PRAYERS CONDEMNED Preaching in St. Joseph's church (Chatham, Sunday morning, the Rev. Father Gnan scored the practice of sending chain prayers. He stated that several of his congregation had been recipients of chain prayers, which he contended were blasphemous in that they contained a threat that evil would befall the person who broke the chain by failing to send copies to friends. He advised recipients to destroy the prayers.

ATTRACTIVE FARM HOMES

The interest of the farmer today is being directed almost entirely towards means of herd improvement, crop rotation, seed selection, and other very necessary and important phases of agricultural activity. Our agricultural magazines and papers are filled with information along such lines, yet it seems that we have overlooked and often forgotten the chief attraction offered by living in the country. Farm life can hardly be expected to appeal to a young man or woman of ambition and culture, if the home surroundings are devoid of the beauty and pride that practically every country home (however humble) can so cheaply and easily provide. How many of us who live in the country realize that we possess what nine out of every ten people in the city strive to obtain. A man owning a house built on a town or city lot of one-tenth of an acre will diligently strive to develop a garden and improve the attractive appearance of his property. The city man does this actuated by three chief motives—his pride in his home, the greatly increased enjoyment in living in such surroundings, and the added value and saleability of a property improved in this manner. The farm home is not limited to a few square feet as is the city home. The farm home can be surrounded by beautiful trees and shrubbery that the average city home is denied. It is readily understood that the amount of time that can be spared on a farm to attend to the home surroundings is strictly limited, but the style of planning would not imitate that of a home built on a few square feet, and when one considers the very material increase in value, to say nothing of the enjoyment and pleasure to be derived from living in a home surrounded by trees and shrubs, it is a matter that should receive far more earnest attention than has been the case in too many instances.

THE DESERTED VILLAGE

The economic disturbances of the past few years have shown how unwise it is to allow all our industries to become centralized in the larger centres and for farmers to place themselves unreservedly in the hands of the big combinations. The village blacksmith, carriage builder and miller have gone, while the village or crossroads merchant is struggling against the handicap of small patronage on the one hand, and the pressure of big business on the other.

Farmers can well afford to patronize their local industries, for without the village and crossroads community the farm home is still further removed from those social and economic advantages that should form a part of rural life. The village or small town is an asset to the farm, and every rural family should remain loyal to local institutions. The village is a rallying point for the youth of the community, and unless the village stores and shops are patronized by farmers in the community it will become deserted and a blot on the landscape, rather than a thriving community centre.

From the economic point of view farmers have lost considerably through the closing down of the village shops and small industries. The village blacksmith is now almost a thing of the past. The smiths who are left are to be found in the towns and cities, and the farmers there are obliged to pay city prices for the service they purchase. Wheelwrights and carriage makers have gone out of business and are selling their labor to the manufacturer at so much per day. Competition is eliminated between the village product and the output of the big manufacturing plants, with the result already too well known. The closing down of the small mills places the farmer at the mercy of the big millers, regardless of the fact that he has wheat and grain of his own from which flour might be made and wheat by-products secured.

There is always a difference in standards between farm and industrial life. When the grower must sell his product according to one standard and purchase on the basis of a higher standard of prices the practice becomes irksome and, in the end, unprofitable. The village shop and local mill, in the past, provided a partial escape from the strangling influences of big business, and where there are any of these still left they should be patronized and encouraged.—Farmers' Advocate

TOWN AND VICINITY

A good play coming to the opera house Friday evening.

The population of Danwich township decreased 108 last year.

Too many young people imagine they are live wires because they are shocking.

Perhaps Sir Thomas White will explain the difference between cashing a cheque and depositing it to his credit.

Complaint is made that dogs are digging up bulbs and destroying plants. If you want flowers, plant the dog.

The Gordon Mission Band will hold their regular monthly meeting on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. D. R. Hegerty.

The Fletcher Manufacturing Company are again running their plant full time, but have laid off a number of their men temporarily.

The proposal to celebrate Victoria Day on Monday, May 26, rather than on Saturday, May 24, is being considered in several towns and villages.

Archie and Hector McCallum have disposed of their fifty-acre farm, south half of the west half of lot 15, concession 5, Ekfrid, to Neil Caruthers.

Next Wednesday afternoon will be observed as the first weekly half-holiday of the season by Glencoe business men who have signed the agreement.

It is said that a local lady who was shopping in a London store became real peeved when the bow-legged floorwalker said to her: "Walk this way, please, madam."

Seeding is a little late, but a few years ago no seeding was attempted until about the 18th of May, and yet the crop that year was one of the finest in the history of the province.

It is said that soft water can be produced by running well water through a cream separator. The soft water will come out of the cream spout and the hard or heavier water will flow out of the milk spout. Do you believe it?

Operating statement of the Hydro-electric Power Commission for Ontario for the 12 months ending 31st December, 1923, shows the cost of power purchased by Glencoe to be $4,596.29; total revenue $10,860.11, and net surplus $1,856.99.

The chap whose speciality a few years ago was getting out in the middle of the road, taking off his hat and flagging a runaway horse, now climbs up a telegraph pole when he sees a woman driving down the street, just learning to handle a car.

The C.N.R. will deliver a trainload of cinders for putting on No. 8 side road, Mosa, on both sides of the track, where this road was graded last year. This will complete a section of road that will make practically an improved gravelled highway all the way between Glencoe and Shields. It is up to the county now to reduce the grades and gravel the hills leading up to Gray's bridge.

This highway has not only scenic beauty but is one that is much travelled in fine weather, only owing to the treacherous nature of the hills.

The first W.O.S.S.A. baseball game of the season for this district was played on the G.H.S. grounds Friday afternoon between Wardsville and Glencoe. The score was 20 to 6 in favor of the locals. Both teams showed lack of practice. Further games are expected.

R. A. Finn and J. A. Andrews, of the Middlesex branch of the Department of Agriculture, have finished distributing garden seeds to the 94 rural schools of the county. Some 5,000 packages of seeds will be in the ground this week, and the vegetables and flowers will be on display at the school fairs in the fall.

The annual W.O.S.S.A. track meet for London District will be held at Queen's Park, London, on Saturday, May 17th. Championships will be granted, and it is hoped that the G. H. S. will be honored. The following pupils of Glencoe will participate: Wm. Trostain, senior dash; John Allan, intermediate half mile; Kenneth Webster, intermediate 100-yard dash; relay team—John Allan, Kenneth Webster, Graham McDonald and Hugh McKellar.

At a sitting of the Division Court on Tuesday afternoon before Judge Judd, the case of Donald McIntyre vs. Metcalfe township was dismissed. McIntyre, who lives on the townline in the township of Brooke, had entered action against the township of Metcalfe for $50 damages alleged to have been occasioned by Messrs. Gardiner and McNaughton, commissioners of Metcalfe township, opening up a culvert and ditch, by reason of which a quantity of sand was washed onto the land of McIntyre.

—Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Wortman and children, of London, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. R. M. MacPherson.

—Miss Florence Hurley is home from London for a few days, having had an operation for the removal of her tonsils last week.

NEW BOOKS AT THE LIBRARY

An interesting shipment of books was received this week by the public library. Especially noteworthy are several books by Canadian authors: "Ballads and Lyrics," by Bliss Carman; "Stephen Leacock," by Peter McArthur; "The Child's House," by Marjorie McMurphy; "Life of George W. Ross," by Margaret Ross. Of interest also is the "Life of Christ" by Giovanni Papini. High school students will find "Physics of the Household," by Lynde, a very fine book of science. The other books, fiction and juvenile, are all particularly readable. Library patrons will be pleased by these books and also by those of a much larger shipment which will be on the shelves shortly.

THE POTATO CROP.

Much can be done before potatoes are planted to ensure a good crop. It is a mistake to cut the sets several days before they are needed, but if this is done they should be sprinkled with slaked lime. At the Rosthern Experimental Station in Saskatchewan, the crop from sets cut two weeks before planting gave a yield of 209 bushels to the acre, which was 170 bushels to the acre less than those planted on the day cut.

Even though seed may be sound and appear perfect in every way, there is no assurance that it will produce a good crop. The source of the seed has great influence on the yield. The Maritime Provinces and New Ontario both appear to have favorable climatic conditions for producing vigorous seed.

It has been proved again and again by the Experimental Farms that immature seeds is better than that which is thoroughly ripened. Seed grown under conditions that are favorable for keeping the tops green well into the autumn appears to give best results. The value of immaturity in the seed is further proved by experiments in the use of seed from crops planted on different dates. May planting gave poor planting stock for the next year, compared with that put in toward the end of June.

Potato yields may also be increased by using sprouted seed, a practice sometimes followed by market gardeners. It does not do to depend on the long white sprouts that potatoes produce in the cellar. The sprouting should be done in the light so that the sprouts will be green, stocky, and not easily rubbed off. The cold frame is sometimes used for this purpose, but sprouting may be done in the attic of a dwelling house or in a well lighted room where frost can be kept out. The potatoes should be spread in a thin layer or placed in shallow boxes or trays with the seed end up. The boxes are then put in a bright airy place, where the temperature is too cool for the sprouting to begin. After a few days the potatoes will turn green and the skin become tough.

How I Wash Comforts, Quilts, and Blankets

BY NELL B. NICHOLS.

Laundering the blankets and quilts, put rows of running stitches with a coarse basting thread across it, just to hold the batting in place. I find it takes little time to pull these stitches out afterward. This precaution assures evenness.

Many of the newer comforts contain cotton and wool pads which are quilted by machine. With these the uneven surface caused by massed batting is not found after the laundering process.

There is likely to be a variety of materials in coverings on comforts and quilt blocks. Naturally, the better qualities are not so likely to fade in washing as the poorer ones are. I find the use of tepid wash and rinses with water and a mild soap or soap flakes and working as fast as I can help to keep the dyes from running.

When a machine is not available for this laundering work, it is more difficult to keep the batting in comforts and in some quilts, smooth. It is better to avoid rubbing. It has a tendency to loosen the cotton and wool filling and to stretch the wool in blankets. I souse the covers up and down in a tub partly filled with soapy water, using a plunger or my hands, and if there is no wringer, the surplus water is squeezed out gently. Twisting or wringing by hand loosens the batting, and if a wool blanket is being washed it stretches the fibres, weakening them.

Contrary to popular opinion, down quilts may be washed with ease. I make a rich suds, immerse the quilt in this soapy water, and squeeze and knead it several minutes. If it is badly soiled, I put it through two soapy waters. Then I rinse it in two tepid clear waters. Occasionally I use a soft bristled brush to remove obstinate patches of soil. Down quilts are never put through a wringer; instead, the water is squeezed out.

Drying the washed bedding is of great importance. I like to hang quilts and comforts between two lines if possible, and to spread wool blankets over a clean sheet on the grass. If there is danger of the chickens tracking on the clean blankets, they may be dried on curtain stretchers. As a rule, it is more convenient to hang them on the line. In doing this, I take care to put one half over the line so that the edges will be straight. When blankets are hung singly, the weight in the longer portion may be heavy enough to make the corners sag. I turn the blanket around when it is partly dry, in this way giving all parts an equal chance for drying.

When wool blankets are dry, I brush them gently or rub them with a soft flannel cloth to raise the nap, and I always shake a down quilt while it is drying, so that the feathers will be lively. Wool-filled comforts and blankets are hung in the shade, where the warm breezes will reach them, but where the direct rays of the sun do not penetrate. Too much heat burns the wool, and freezing shrinks it. After a down quilt is dry, I press it between the starchings with a warm, not hot, iron, and occasionally I give thin quilts a quick press.

Pillows need to be laundered every now and then. Although the feathers are washed without being removed from the ticking, I get better results by emptying them. To do this I make a small hole in one corner of the pillow and sew this to a similar opening in a muslin bag, such as a clean flour sack, which is closed at the top with the exception of the little hole sewed to the ticking. I shake the feathers into the muslin bag, which is tied tightly so no feathers will escape before it is separated from the ticking.

The muslin bag of feathers is washed in warm soapsuds, rinsed thoroughly in two tepid rinses, and hung outdoors in a breezy but shady place to dry. I discovered by experience that it is best never to wash feathers unless it is a good drying day, because if they are left wet any length of time they sour.

I put the ticking in soapy water without shaking it, to keep the down from scattering. A stiff-bristled brush, dipped in soapsuds helps wonderfully in removing the soil. By hanging the ticking evenly on the line, it seldom requires pressing.

Proud as one is of the results achieved on comfort, quilt, and blanket washing day, the work is just difficult enough, or perhaps I should say the housemaker is weary enough, when the day is over, to wonder if there is any way of avoiding this task. I have tried to answer this question for myself, and have come to the conclusion that fewer washings are required only when care is used in protecting the bedding from soil.

I now place plain muslin bags over all my pillows. These covers not only protect the ticking and feathers, but they also add charm to the pillow case by providing the right background.

Another example of how I protect bedding is the use I make of protectors on the tops of quilts and comforts. These are pretty and dainty as well as serviceable and easily laundered. I make them from a thin, white fabric, such as India linen, cheesecloth, dotted swiss, or any soft muslin, or from white linen. Material which is one yard in width is used, and the length is one inch longer than the width of the quilt. This material is folded lengthwise and the ends are stitched together in a tiny French seam. Then a two-inch hem is basted along the selvage edges and narrow lace edging, hemstitching, an embroidered design, or any initial may be used for decoration.

I work five buttons, one in the centre and two on either side, in both hems. Then I slip this protector over the end of the comfort and mark the position of the buttonholes. The buttons are sewed on the quilt, with care that the thread is not pulled tight enough to draw the buttons into the comfort. These protectors may be unbuttoned and washed every week or so, and they are easier to handle than a large bedcover.

Folding the sheet down over the blanket also serves as a protection. A few slightly soiled places on bedding may be removed with a dry cleaner, and of course it is essential that the covers, when not in use, be kept in a clean place, away from dust. I use large muslin bags and wrappings of paper about the blankets, quilts, and comforts when they are not in service.

A Walnut Tree Pest.

The walnut tree is liable to severe injury by the walnut caterpillar, an insect that was more or less prevalent throughout Southern Ontario last summer. In some localities the trees were badly stripped of leaves the latter part of the season. Partial defoliation at any time interferes with the normal functioning of the tree, and complete stripping after a year will finally result in the death of the tree. Other trees subject to attack are the willow, beech, honey locust, thorn, oak, and apple.

Circular No. 21 of the Dept. of Agriculture at Ottawa gives a picture of the moth, the parent of the caterpillar. The wings have an expanse of about two inches, are buff colored, much darker in the centre and are crossed with dark brown and whitish lines. The under or back wings are pale buff. The larva when first hatched is about one-fifth of an inch long. The body is of brick-red color. When full grown the caterpillar is blackish without markings other than an indistinct white lateral line and a conspicuous white central line along the under portion of the body. It is covered with fine greyish-white hairs and measures from 1 1/2 to 2 inches in length.

Spraying the trees as early as caterpillars are observed is recommended. A good poison mixture consists of three pounds of lead arsenate in fifty gallons of water. Another system of control consists of destroying the masses of caterpillars during the moulting period when they are resting quietly on a trunk or branch. A stiff brush may be used to bring them down at this time.

Make a dress form for daughter before she goes away to school. Keep it at home, and she can have the homemaker make her frocks while she is miles away.

POULTRY.

Where chicks are being reared with hens and have access to tender grass or other green feed, a very good feed is raw or cooked Johnny cake made with an egg in it, so says Prof. W. R. Graham, O.A.C. Give milk to drink and have a quart or so of gravel near the coop to supply grit. Move the coop every few days. When the chicks are a few weeks old gradually change to ordinary feeds.

Raise the chicks on new ground. Keep off the old ground that has had chicks running upon it year after year. Keep the hen free of lice. Dust with sodium fluoride or use a small amount of blue ointment. A piece one-half the size of a kernel of corn, placed on the skin below the vent, will usually kill many of the lice.

The mash used at the Poultry Dept., O.A.C., in the hoppers, or feed mounds, where the chicks are ranging consists of:

150 pounds of corn meal
100 pounds of crushed oats
100 pounds of shorts
100 pounds of bran
20 pounds of meat scrap
20 pounds of bone meal
The whole grain hopper feed usually consists of fifty per cent. each of wheat and cracked corn. If milk is given to drink, one-half, if not more, of the meat scraps may be taken from the mash.

The pullets stay on range until ready to lay, which period is when they are about six months of age. If they prefer roosting in trees to the house we allow them to do so; in fact, we rather prefer that they would roost in trees.

Shade, tender green feed, plenty of clean drink, and enough to eat, are essential.

Hog Grading Results.

Returns for the first three months of 1924, compared with the first quarter of last year, from the stockyards and packing plants, particularly of Alberta and Ontario, indicate the progress that is being made under the hog grading policy, and the campaign in favor of the bacon type carried on by Dominion and Provincial Departments of Agriculture. In the first named province, the returns show 4,516 selects compared with 2,840 and 166,341 thick smooths compared with 111,474. A noticeable feature of the Alberta returns is a decrease of shop hogs from 26,410 in 1923 to 338 this year. For Ontario the figures are 92,534 selects this year compared with 47,449 last year, an increase of no fewer than 45,085, and of thick smooths, 128,796 this year compared with 74,095, an increase of 54,701.

For Manitoba the returns show 6,531 selects compared with 8,082, and 96,842 thick smooths compared with 99,876. Quebec shows a decrease in selects of 3,797 and an increase of thick smooths of 9,728. In shop hogs Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec each show an increase. But selects get the premium, and they show a total increase in the four provinces combined of 42,013.

THE CHILDREN'S HOUR

BENNY SEES A BIRD FIGHT.

BY LEBERNE BALLANTYNE.

High in the air rose a great bird, and darting at it, picking and worrying it, was a smaller bird. "Oh see!" exclaimed Benny. "What is the little bird doing that for?" Grandad Fairway looked up to where the larger bird was trying his best to first mount, and then dive away from his torment. "Go to it, little fellow," he said with a laugh. "Give him a good drubbing." "Why?" asked Benny.

"The big fellow is a hawk, and has no doubt been trying to steal his little ones." "Will he kill the hawk?" Benny questioned eagerly, as the birds flew further and further away, the little one still attacking his enemy viciously without any sign of letting up.

"Bless you no. He can't hurt him very much; only makes him uncomfortable, and drives him away, warning every other living thing in the district with his outcries, so that Mr. Hawk will have to search elsewhere for food."

"Where is his nest?" was Benny's next question, for Grandad Fairway had a beautiful big home called "The Elms," and in the orchard and grove near-by were to be found nearly every type of bird. They all seemed to know they were safe on Grandad's farm, and came year after year to "The Elms." Grandad had all sorts of books telling about nature and birds and bees, and each year when Benny came up to spend his holidays he learned about these things, and hunting them to watch their peculiar habits—made the time pass so quickly that Benny just dreaded school time coming when he must go back to the school of books, for he preferred learning from the school of nature, especially when Grandad was the teacher.

"Where is his nest?" repeated Grandad. "Let me see. I think we shall find it on one of the outer branches of the wild plum tree growing at the far corner of the orchard."

That afternoon was warm and drowsy, and having nothing else to do, Benny insisted on going at once to find the nest.

Grandad was right. In a forked branch of the old plum tree, carefully concealed, was the king-bird's nest. Mrs. King-bird was sitting on it watching eagerly for her mate to return from his encounter with the hawk.

Soon he came hurrying back, and lighting on a branch near her, told her all about it, scolding the old hawk roundly. With a soft little "K-y-rie" note she answered him, agreeing no doubt with everything he said.

Standing near the fence several rods away, Benny and Grandad could easily see him as he darted about. His vest was a soft creamy grey with a coat of darker grey, and his dark tail was tipped with a pretty edging of white across the end of it. His real mark of beauty is the little crest of crimson on the top of his head. Benny noticed it and pointed it out to Grandad.

"Yes," said he, "there is a story about that. You see, the King-bird belongs to the family of fly-catchers because it eats many kinds of flies and insects, and it also catches an odd bee when it fancies one. Usually it takes the drones, but sometimes it takes an odd honey-bee when it fancies one. So the story was once told that when it wished to get a bee it simply sat motionless on a branch of a tree and opened its beautiful crest, which resembles a flower so much that the bee would fly toward it."

"And does it really do that?" Benny asked. "No, I do not think so," Grandad said. "I fancy it is agile enough to get a bee on the wing when it wants one, since it can dart around the hawk and other birds larger than itself so cleverly. However, the story of the bee has done it a lot of harm, giving it a bad reputation when it is really a very useful bird, as are all fly-catchers. However, his name signifies his real character—Kingliness, for surely a king should be very courageous, as were the really great kings of history, and no bird is so brave in attacking birds far greater in size than himself than our little friend there, and therefore he is well named."

Burning Brush.

Many of us have difficulty in burning brush, as it may be too green or too wet at the time we want to burn it. When draining the old oil from the automobile crank case save this and use it to pour over the brush. In this way brush that is almost green may be very easily destroyed. If very much oil is needed the local garage man will likely be glad to save his old oil for us if he is furnished with a can to put it in.

Old sour cream often shows a higher percentage of butter-fat, not because the amount of butter-fat has increased, but for the reason that some of the water has evaporated.

Clean utensils and plenty of fresh water will be found in every recipe for growing healthy calves.

STORIES OF WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE

Lord Darling's Poems.

As well as being a great judge, Lord Darling (better known as Mr. Justice Darling) is also a poet. A small book of verses by him—"The Oxford Court and Other Poems"—first published in 1909, has just reappeared with a number of new poems added.

One of the verses, "November, 1923," deals with his emotions when he retired from the English Bench. The poem begins: "Long worn, now cast aside, red robe, lie there"—and the second verse runs:

Not, with resounding trumpets, may I come
To sit in judgment on the regal Bench;
Dividing false from true, the Oxford Court
With sword and even scale,
Mantle and stole laid by, and cap of doom;
Bereft, alone, I wear no ermine more;
Nor judge—yet one Assize
I, fearful, must attend.

The Visitor's Mistake.

A recent visitor to Mr. Thomas Edison's laboratory thought to win some slight favor by making friends with his dog.

On approaching the front porch he caught sight of a great shaggy mass under a tree beside the house, so he thrust out his hand to pat the animal. The next instant he was running up the stairs. He burst into the laboratory hatless and panting, for the animal under the tree was a brown bear!

Mr. Edison laughed heartily when he looked apprehensively behind him for the bear which he felt must be at his heels, and it was not till later that he found that the bear was chained.

Not the King of Marksmen.

Besides being an ardent sportsman King George V. is a remarkable marksman. His father, Edward VII., may have enjoyed field sports, but he was as poor a shot as anyone with his opportunities for practice could well be. In his Diary of a Journalist Sir Henry W. Lucy has this entry on the contrast between the two:

August 12, 1911.
To-morrow the King goes off to Studeley Royal for grouse shooting. One of the things in which His Majesty excels is the skill of his lamented father is shooting. In the judgment of experts he ranks as one of the six best guns in the country. One of the others is his best of the coming week-end, the Marquis of Ripon, who earned his reputation whilst still Earl of Grey.

Birrell (former Chief Secretary for Ireland) has a charming story illustrative of the reputation for shooting of the late King Edward. During a visit to Balmoral Queen Alexandra found the Chief Secretary one morning in the library when the host and other guests had gone off shooting. On being asked why he should remain indoors on such a day Birrell explained that he did not shoot and added: "I hate to see anything killed."

"Ah," said the Queen with her sweetest smile, "then you should stand behind His Majesty when he is shooting at the butts. Your feelings would not be hurt by anything you saw."

The Periods of a Man's Life.

The twenties are the molding years of the life, when the young man forms those habits that shall direct his career. Then he finishes his school work, stands before the altar, establishes a home and looks the world in the eye.

The thirties are years of discouragement. It is a hard and trying time for all. It is a time of battle without the poetry and dream of youth.

The forties are the years of vision, when a man finds himself, finishes his castles in the air and knows the value of his dreams.

Life comes to its ripening in the fifties. These should be the years of jubilee and he should do his best work then.

At sixty, a man has completed enough mistakes to make him wise far above his juniors. He should live better and do better work than in any decade of his life. No man has a right to retire in the sixties; the world has need of his wisdom.

Some of the best work in the world is done in the seventies. No man has a right to retire at any age unless he wishes to die. A word of congratulation to those who have reached seventy and beyond: You have almost finished your course; we trust that you have fought a good fight and that there is laid up for you a crown of righteousness.

A Strict Rule.
The Lodger—"I just lost my job, Mrs. Lankeep. Can you lend me a couple of bucks till I get another?"
His landlady—"Sorry, Mr. Everbroke, but it's against my principles to give currency to an idle roomer."

Ogden's CUT PLUG TOBACCO

A Drama of The Woods

By Gretchen Gibson

"Cigarette!" "Thanks!" The elder man selects a cigarette and lights it. "Great place this!" he remarks, "country's getting pretty well dried up, though." His companion nods lazily.

Both men lie on their backs, gazing contentedly at the slightly swaying branches of the pine forest about them. "Well, we'd better be getting along," finally says the elder, flinging his cigarette butt into the nearby brush. "Must be some three miles to the car. And they gather up their fishing rods and are gone.

Over the spot they have left, peacefully, beautifully, evening falls. Feathered bushbodies of the woods and other little gababouts of the day chirrup and drone their more or less melodious vespers as they settle into their respective hiding-places for the brief summer night. Nocturnal creatures awake, eager to partake of the share of the joy and plunder of existence—and one and all of these creatures—creatures of feather and creature of fur, creatures of marvellous skin and flimsy, gauzy loveliness—one and all of these creatures, sleeping and waking are possessed of a common powerful impulse—to survive—survive—survive. It extends even to the plant life of the forest, this impulse to achieve complete fulfillment of such life as is their birthright.

It may be that in the tiny spark still glowing in the butt of a cigarette which lies among the dry midsummer underbrush, this same impulse exists. But surely the chances are more than ten to one against the spark's survival. However, the evening breeze grows stronger and a dried leaf falls here and there; in fact, one leaf falls directly over the spark.

Plumcot, orange, violet, reddish, yellow, graceful as a Spanish dancer, curving, sweeping, darting, crackling, roaring, licking.

Smoke-blinded, frantic creatures, creatures of feather, creatures of fur, creatures of marvellous skin and flimsy gauzy loveliness, all madly impelled by their great common impulse to survive—survive—survive.

They Come Back Singing.

They come back singing, and we know them all.
The bluebird and the robin and the wren;
Up from the marsh the reedling flutes a call;
We hear the hermit thrushes in the glen;
The goldfinch has not donned his summer dress,
And yet we tell him as he lolls along
Each note attuned to spring and joyousness;
They come back singing, and we know their song.

THE DELICATE GIRL

What Mothers Should Do as Their Daughters Approach Womanhood.

If growing girls are to become well-developed, healthy women, their health must be carefully guarded. Mothers should not ignore their unsettled moods or the various troubles that tell of approaching womanhood. It is an important time of life. Where pallor, headache, backache or other signs of anaemia are evident you must provide the sufferer with the surest means of making new blood.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS

ALWAYS KEPT ON HAND

Mrs. David Gagne, St. Godfrey, Que., writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my three little ones and have found them such an excellent medicine that I always keep them on hand and would strongly advise all other mothers to do the same thing." The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which quickly relieve constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and promote that healthful refreshing sleep which makes the baby thrive. They are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

School Days in Japan.

Our children should not grow about what they must do in school. Consider the Japanese student who must learn forty-seven letters in the Japanese alphabet. He also takes off his shoes before entering the school-house and when the teacher comes in must bow his head nearly to the ground and draw in his breath. He sits on the floor and uses his knees as a writing-desk. His lead-pencil or pen is a brush and he makes his letters and figures with this, writing from the top to the bottom of the page instead of across the paper as we do. In India many of the children have a twelve-hour school-day.

Gave Wife as Royal Token.

In the early days of Virginia the head of all the allied tribes of Indians was Powhatan, father of Pocahontas. In Powhatan was centred all governmental powers. He had a royal retinue as bodyguard, composed of 60 or 70 of the most stalwart and fearless Indian warriors. His subjects planted all his corn and gathered it for him when it was ripe. He had a large treasure house of many valuable possessions. He was said to have had 20 sons and 12 daughters. When for any reason he became tired of a wife he gave her away to some of his friends as a token of his royal favor.

An Unknown Ivory Mine.

Why are ivory billiard balls so expensive? The answer is that the supply of ivory, a natural growth depending mainly upon the tusks of elephants, is exceedingly limited. Nevertheless, it some wanderer through the illimitable forests of Central Africa, probably in the vicinity of that inland sea of fresh water called Lake Victoria Nyanza, could stumble upon a certain "pit" and communicate his discovery to the world, the value of this commodity would drop to the merest fraction of its present worth.

Seeing that in Africa there are tens of thousands of wild elephants, one would imagine that travellers like Stanley and Cameron would have recorded coming upon the carcass of a dead beast. Yet they never did, nor has any other African explorer come upon an elephant which has died in its tracks from natural causes.

What becomes of all the elephants that die? It is said that somewhere in the million square miles that constitute the African continent is a mighty pit, with precipitous sides, which contains the bones, and therefore the tusks, of countless thousands of elephants.

How did they come there? It is said, further, that wherever an African elephant may be, when it feels the approach of death it leaves the herd and "treks" unerringly for the death-pit. It may travel for days and even weeks, and when it arrives at the edge of the pit it leaps to its death. How much ivory lies there? Who will discover it?

MRS. CRANKER GIVES TANLAC FULL CREDIT

"As a Stomach Medicine and Tonic—Tanlac is Certainly Wonderful," Says Brockville Lady.

Adding her voice to the thousands who are praising Tanlac for the recovery of their health and strength, Mrs. Margaret Cranker, 84 Louis St., Brockville, Ont., says:

"Tanlac is such a grand, good medicine and has done so much for me that I will praise it. Following a spell of typhoid fever, two years ago, I was just a shadow of myself and remained so weak I couldn't walk across the floor. Stomach pains and backache

Wharf.

Long and lank and lean and gray
Winds the river on its way
Lean and long and lank and brown
All along it lies the town.
All along it lie the houses,
Shantyboats where faint carouses
Echo up the cinder banks
Where the dead walk, rank on ranks.
Where the fattest living tread
More desolate than all the dead.
Their hands are warm, their cheeks are red,
Their breasts are gaunt beneath their blouses.
This is what the living say,
Perched on wharf piles day by day,
"Neither live nor dead are we,
There are not two states, but three;
Living, dead, and neither way."
I sometimes think the Jordan rolls,
Not in Palestine, but here,
And all the damned and wistful souls
Sit along the First Street pier.

A Woman's Postscript.

Do all wives open their husband's letters? Was Harry's mother only taking precautions that any woman should take, or was her daughter-in-law a special offender and as such especially sensitive on the subject? We leave that to our readers to settle. This is the story as the Argonaut reports it:

"Harry, dear!" exclaimed little Mrs. Simpson to her husband. "I have been dreadfully insulted!"
"Insulted! By whom?"
"By your mother," answered the young wife, bursting into tears.
"My mother, Flora? Nonsense! She's miles away!"
Flora dried her tears. "I'll tell you all about it," she said. "A letter came for you this morning addressed in your mother's writing, so I—I opened it."

Correct.

"When is longhand quicker than shorthand?"
"When it is on a clock."

Face Broke Out in Pimples. Were Disfiguring. Extremely Sore.

"My face broke out in a mass of pimples that were very annoying as well as disfiguring. The pimples were small, hard, red lumps at first, but increased in size and came to a head. The pimples were extremely sore and tender, and I was very much discouraged."
"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. I purchased more, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap, together with the Cuticura Ointment, I was healed."

MRS. DAVIS NERVOUS WRECK

Tells Women How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"I cannot speak too highly of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was a nervous wreck and I just had to force myself to do my work. Even the sound of my own children playing made me feel as if I must scream if they did not get away from me. I could not even speak right to my husband. The doctor said he could do nothing for me. My husband's mother advised me to take the Vegetable Compound and I started it at once. I was able to do my work once more and it was a pleasure, not a burden. Now I have a fine bouncing baby, and am able to nurse her and enjoy doing my work. I cannot help recommending such a medicine, and any one seeing me before I took it, and seeing me now, can see what it does for me. I am only too pleased for you to see my testimonial.—Mrs. EMILY DAVIS, 721 McGee Street, Winnipeg, Man.

Although the nights have been frosty and the winds cold, we are quite convinced of the fact that spring has come. The robins sing their morning and evening song and during the day are busily engaged in building their nests.

Groups of boys and girls may be seen after school playing ball on the streets. Even the adults have caught the spring fever and have organized a baseball team for the coming season and have entered the West Middlesex league.

They have also arranged for the Gildon players of Empress Avenue church, London, to come here on the 12th and give a play in the town hall.

Our citizens are much interested in the new ball team and are looking forward to some good games during the summer.

Ready-made Medicine.—You need no physician for ordinary ills when you have at hand a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. For coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchial troubles, it is invaluable; for scalds, burns, bruises, sprains it is unsurpassed; while for cuts, sores and the like it is an unquestionable healer. It needs no testimonial other than the use, and that will satisfy anyone as to its effectiveness.

BY HECK, I'M READY FOR A FULL DAY'S WORK

Down on the farm 'bout half past 5 I slip on my pants and sneak out the door.

Out to the yard I run like the dickens To milk ten cows and feed the chickens.

Clean out the barn, curry Nance and pigs.

Separate the cream and strop all the pigs.

Work two hours and then eat like a Turk.

And by heck, I'm ready for a full day's work.

Then grease the wagon and put on the rack.

Throw a jug of water in an old grain sack.

Hit up with the horses, hustle down the lane;

Must get in the hay for it looks like rain.

But look over yonder, sure as I am born,

Cattle on the rampage, cows are in the corn;

Start across the medder, run a mile or two,

Heavin' I'm through and get wet clean through;

With my joints all a-squeakin' and muscles in a jerk,

I'm fit as a fiddle for a full day's work.

Soon get to pitchin' the hay on the rack.

Lightning gets to flashing, thunder gives a crack.

Clouds roll up, black across the dell,

Starts in raining and it rains like hell,

I don't care, don't even frown,

Rest fixing the fence while the rain comes down;

Just get to resting, then for recom-pense

Natches got straddle the barbed wire fence;

Clothes all wet, so slip off my shirt,

And by heck, I'm ready for a full day's work.

Work all summer till winter is nigh,

Then I figure up the books and heave a sigh;

Work all year, didn't make a thing,

And I've less money now than I had last spring.

Now, some people say that there ain't no hell,

But they never farmed, so they can't tell.

When spring rolls 'round I'll take another chance,

While the fringe grows longer on my pants,

Give my 'spenders a hitch, belt another jerk,

And by heck, I'm ready for a full day's work.

The chief drawback to gentle spring on the part of the married man is that his wife seizes the first real warm, sunshiny day to start her spring housecleaning.
