"They will never change me," said Patty, who had broken down altogether, and was making no secret of her tears. In fact, they were past making a secret of. She had determined to have no tender sentiment when she sought this interview, but she found herself powerless to resist the pathos of the situation. To be parting from Paul Brion—and it seemed as if it were really going to be a parting—was too heart breaking to bear as she would have liked to hear with the seemed as if it were really going to be a parting—was too heart breaking to bear as she would have liked to hear with the seemed as if it were really going to be a parting—was too heart breaking to bear as she would have liked to hear with the seemed as if it were really going to be a parting—was too heart breaking to bear as she would have liked to hear with the seemed as if it were really going to be a parting—was too heart breaking to bear as she would have liked to hear with the seemed as if it were really going to be a parting—we were both and kinds, "when you lived here on the unit of the pathos of the situation. He stood at the table fluttering his papers with a hand as unsteady as that of a drunkard, and glaring at her, not straight into her eyes—which, indeed, were cast abjectly on the floor—but all over her pretty, folloring ure, shrinking and cowering before him.

"Is he?"
"I had a pleasant talk. I am very glad I went. He is coming to dine here to night."
"Is he?"
"I do so like really interesting an intellectual young men, who don't give them selves any airs about it," she said to nobody in particular, when she strolled back to the drawing-room with her three girls; "and one does so very seldom meet with them?" She threw herself into a low chair, snatched up a fan, and began to fan herself vigorously. The discovery that a press writer of Paul Brion's standing meant acultured man of the world impressed her strongly; she thought of him as a new son for herself, clever, enterprising, active minded as she was—a man to be governed, perhaps, in a motherly way, and to be a proud of whether he let himself be governed or not—danced tantalizingly through her brain. She felt it necessary to put a very strong cheek upon herself to keep her from being foolish.

She escaped that danger, however. A high sense of duty to Patty held her back from foolishness. Still she could not help being kind to the young couple while she and the opportunity: turning her head when they strolled into the conservatory after the men came in from the dining-room, and otherwise shutting her eyes to their joint proceedings. And they had a peace in land and and happy time, by her gracious favor, for two days and a half—until the mail ship carried one of them to England, and left the other behind.

Patty went "home," and stayed there for two years : but, it was never home to the country house with all possible haste.

"I was afraid she would get talking and exerting herself too much if she had you all about her," he replied, with his imperturable same.

I gave way about the wedding, but here I must draw the line. She is in her own house, and I shall go to her at once. Tell your maid to pack up, dears—we will start to-morrow."

But they did not. They stayed in London, with what patience they could, subsisting on daily letters and telegrams, until the season there was over, and the baby at Yelverton was three weeks old. Then, though no explanations were made, they became aware that they would be no longer considered de trop by the baby's father, and rushed from the town to the country house with all possible haste.

"You are a tyrant," said Mrs. Duff. socott, when the master came forth to meet her. "I always said so, and now I know it." I was afraid she would get talking and

"O yes, I know"—laughing and brushing past him—"all you think of is to get your own way. Well, let us see the poor dear girl now we are here. I know how she must have been pining to show her baby to her sisters all this while, when you wouldn't let her. (To be continued.)

Robert Geo. Watts, M. A., M. D., M. R. C. S., of Albion House, Quadrant Road, Canonbury, N., London, Eng., writes: "I cannot refrain from testifying to the efficacy of St. Jacobs Oil in cases of chronic rheumatism, sciatica and neuralgia."

Must Get Out and Hustle.

All this rot about Grover Cleveland's baby is a parody on American institutions. The birth of a prince in England or a more despotic country might be the signal for salvos of artillery, military display and general rejoicing, all of which is spurred on more or less by fear. But in America, thank God, we have no princes or princesses. No matter how high born, or who the parents are, the child must get out into the world and hustle to achieve greatness. Grover Cleveland's baby may be bright and pretty and all that, but she is no better than thousands of babies throughout this broad land, and Baby McKee will not be one whit more successful in life from having one whit more successful in life from having been nurtured in the White House than he would had he been born and bred in an Indiana back township or on an Illinois prairie, as was Abraham Lincoln. It is time for this disgusting display of toadyisms to cease.—Toledo Blade.

Detective John T. Norris is in the city, and as usual, has a new firearm to display. Detective Norris has a hobby of collecting odd weapons of various kinds, but his latest acquisition is probably the most formidable of his whole collection. It is a cane of about three feet two inches long and seemingly harmless. It has a rather long steel-pointed ferrule, which, when the cane is used in walking, keeps its owner from slipping, but when he is cornered by a crowd it can be turned to use as a bayonet. The cane, with this exception, shows no signs of being the dangerous weapon it is. By a simple device the long steel ferrule can be loosened in a second and in its place appears the barrel of a 32-calibre gun. Another second suffices to pull back the handle of the cane and the weapon is cocked and loaded. The detective can kill a sparrow off the top of the tallest telegraph pole of hit his man a square away with this little Winchester. If the first loss doesn't bring him there are five more cartridges in the handle which can be fired with lightning-like rapidity. The hammer and trigger are just at the beginning of the curve in the handle of the cane. The whole barrel of the gun and the curved handle as well are covered with thousands of feet of plaited fish lines, the work of Evan Jones, a watchman of the snag-boat C. S. Musbands Priviteges.

A New York Magiskate, in lately disminishing a suit for divorce brought by a wife who complained that her husband had called her out of her name, took occasion to remark, in explanation of his action, that "good husbands even sometimes swear at their wives." The judicial announcement that a husband may demean himself in his parts of speech like a Jack the Ripper without detriment to his standing as a good husband before the law opens up some rather delicate legal and moral questions. If a good husband may do this "sometimes," the interesting question arises: How many times? At what precise number of expletives does the excess of virtue become a vice and an offence in law.

In less progressive days than these a somewhat different standard of good husbandry prevailed. It was even held in primitive times that the good husband was he who felt it to be especially his duty, when things went wrong about the house of with his meals, to moderate the tones of his varies in integer the word of sight while the World's Fair is in progressi te would be an acxpert on must onto the Chicago Times by General Fitz. Social drinkin, wich is growing more and more customary mr ligeate cities, she traced to the society of to-day when men are enticed by women to become slaves of the wine cup. The responsibility which every woman must recognize was pictured in burning words. While the necessity of franchise is apparent, in order to do effective temperance work, the speaker urged that women may show their colors by refusing to entertain in their social circles the seller of liquor or he who persistently upholds the liquor traffic. "Women are culpable for allowing social drink to reach its popularity." said Mrs. Nichols. "By so doing they are giving tone to public sentiment, and helping to excite desires in a man's breast where they never before existed. Let women beware in using such means to lure" men to destruction. The tiny link, forged by a woman's hand, may be a link in a chain which will bind a man soul and body to the destroyer."

Watermelons in London.

Boston Sunday Herald: Londoners have been revelling in watermelons, a large consignment of that precious fruit having been received from Cincinnati. It was a bright idea sending over the watermelons, for Cincinnati's wide-awake venture caused almost a revolution among the British gardeners. As far as can be learned, the noble Briton has taken kindly to the American fruit, and solemnly asks if it will be possible to cultivate it in that foggy and groggy little island. We don't believe it can be done. The watermelon is a mixture of hot sünshine and sugar and water, and that could never be got together in English soil. Several of the London dailies have given long and imposing editorials on the subject, but the true results of the exportation may be heard from in the Lancet. Street-Corner Statuary.

THE SNELL MURDER.

who is supposed to have murdered Mr. Snell. From her and her aged mothers, Mrs. Mary Ann Watts, the following narrative was obtained:

Mrs. Ordway had been living in Chicago since 1870, having gone there from Baltimore as the bride of Major Beachman, a wealthy merchant. The great fire thereone year later completely destroyed her husband's business place and handsome residence, leaving the couple almost penniless. Her husband was taken ill a few years later and died from the effect of a wound in his shoulder, received in the late war at Cedar Mountain. She remained in Chicago and accepted a position in a store, earning her self a fair living. Everything seemed bright for her, and she continued in a happy state until she married. Albert K. Ordway, as year previously. Her husband was in business with his father, Ira K. Ordway, as a clothing cutter, with an establishment on West Madison street, and made money.

Young Ordway took to drink soon after his marriage and began to associate with disreputable people. Things gradually grew worse and no money was coming into the household, when one night Albert stood before the mirror with a mask on his face and firmly declared that he was going to have some money from old man Snell, a rich man, that very night or kill him. She pleaded with him to renounce his wicked intentions. He, however, was resolved to act, and left the house in a hurry.

That night she says he did not return, but the next morning he returned to the house without any shoes and with a bloody hand kepting shot, and was lying in the rear of a s-loon on West Madison street. Thas out at that time rented and occupied a rom on the corner of Elizabeth and Madison street, and Mrs. Ordway and her husband hived on Morgan street, between Monroe and Adiams.

One of the most important statements in the woman's story is that she declared that Tascott is dead. She says she knows he was trangled to death and his body made away with by his pals. In that connection she frequently mentioned the names of several men.

rrequently mentioned the names of several men.

Ordway was acquainted with Millionaire Snell, as he made a great many clothes for him and had borrowed money from him at times. One day Albert introduced her to Mr. Snell while walking along one of the streets in Chicago. Subsequent to the murder of Millionaire Snell, she says, he husband was continually nervous, and murder of Millionaire Snell, she says, her husband was continually nervous, and always seemed anxious to leave the city. After a good deal of persuasion she agreed to accompany him to Baltimore. Mrs. Mary Ann Watts sent money to her daughter for the trip. After they arrived in Baltimore she told him she intended to expose his crime. This made him grow despondent, and he took to drink. He always had money, but did not work. She sometimes spoke to her mother about his connection with the crime, but was always silenced by Albert reminding her that she had frequently declared that she would die for him. This usually had the desired effect.

MURDER IN DENVER.

A Man Bound, Gagged and Hurled from a Window.

A Denver despatch says: Whiskey and je dusy were the causes of a tragedy yesterd y morning which cost one life and will probably land two men in the penitentiary for a long term. The notorious Jim Connors and Mike Byan were drinking in a saloot after midnight, and Connors being goadel and teased by his friends over the fact that his mistress, a Mrs. Dalcoff, had deserted him for C. J. Fennicum, became so enraged that he took Ryan and, going to Mrs. Dalcoffs rooms, broke open the door and found her in bed with Fennicum, to whom she was engaged to be married. Fennicum was ordered to dress, after which he was knocked down, tied hand and foot, a gag placed over his mouth, and then carried to the window and thrown into the alley. On the way to the ground three stories below his head struck a projecting stone, leaving a portion of the skull. When picked up it was found thay the jaw was broken, both his eyes out and the skull torn open until the brains were exposed. He was taken te the hospital, where he died this afternoon. He leaves a wife and two children in Centre Oak, Pa.

The body of the murdered girl was discovered last night under the stable floor, and to-day Kohls confessed he killed the girl by hitting her on the head with a hammer. Kohls had been intimate with the girl, and she was soon to become a mother, and he killed her, he says, for this reason. On the day of the murder Kohls also tried to poison the Kodatz family by putting paris green in some soup.

A Type-Setting Machine Test.

A Chicago despatch says: The private test of type-setting machines, held here under the auspices of a committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, closed last evening. The test has been very satisfactory in many respects, and the report of the committee will give newspaper publishers a definite idea as to the work which can be done by the various machines. For three heurs during the forenoon the machines were worked by members of the Typographical Union who had never before seen them, to show the capacity of beginners who are practical printers, and for three hours in the afternoon they were worked also by girls familiar with the Remincton typewriter keyboard, to ascertain what could be done on the machines by those who are suddenly called upon to operate them. All next week the machines will be on archibition to newspaper publishers and the public.

TO PROSECUTE HOEY.

The Adams Express Company After the Dismissed President.

A Trenton, N. J., despatch says: A-bill was filed in the United States Circuit C urt by Henry Sanford, President of the Adams Express Company, against John Hoey, of Long Branch. It demands an accounting by Hoey for 8750,000 taken by him which belongs to the Adams Express Company. It is set forth that nearly sil or part of this amount was spent to furnish, build and equip the property known as Hollywood. The property is in the name of Mrs. Hoey, but the company claims it was built with its money, and it had a right to follow it. There is a mortgage of $100,000, which was executed by Josephine Hoey to the Guarantee Trust Company of Philadelphia. It was paid off by a cheque of the Adams Express Company. This is alleged to be a breach of trust on the part of Hoey, while president of the company. The petition asks the court to establish by decree how far the Adams Express Company is entitled to follow the money taken by Hoey and put into Hollwood, and asks for a lien on the property.

As one young girl said lately: "It is all over between Jacques and me; we have said good-by. I can never marry a jealous man—never!"

And the same silly quarrel often separates a young man and his sweetheart. Both are too proud to give in, and though they love each other desperately, they will, for want of one little word, separate for life. Many a man in this case has reached his grave unmarried and unloved, being at the same time almost too worldly to admit it. Thus, whenever you see a gay, handsome same time almost too worldly to admit it.

He Was No Smoker.

Although in later life Napoleon was a votary of the snuff box, he was never known to attempt smoking but once. The Persian Ambassador having presented him with a magnificent oriental pipe, he wished to give it a trial. After being instructed how to proceed, he desired his attendant, Constant, to light it. It was accordingly properly charged and lighted. We will let Constant tell the rest of the tale. "I obeyed, and returned it to him. But scarcely had he drawn a mouthful, when the smoke, which he did not know how to expel from his mouth, turned back by his palate, penetrated into his throst, and came out by his nose, nearly blinding him. As soon as he recovered breath he exclaimed, 'Take that away—what an abomination! The brutes! My stomach is quite upset? In fact, he was so annoyed for more than an hour that he renounced forever all desire to try the experiment again." "National Review.

Wilkinson was shot in the abdomen and knee. Wilkinson will recover, it is thought. Both were brakesmen on the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad and had been summoned by the officials. News of the shooting spread rapidly, and in a short time fifty men were scouring the mountains, where the negroes too frefuge, hunting them down. They were all captured after several hours' search, and a battle took place in the mountains between the policemen and the negroes. One of the negroes is supposed to be dead from his wounds. The other four are in jail here, three of them having been shot before they were captured. A mob of 300 men took three of the negroes from jail last night and hanged and then shot them full of bullets.

A Feminine Weakness.

Fully half the virtues for which their owners are praised are of spontaneous growth, and really reflect little credit upon those who practice them.

Let us take a case in point—that of a woman who has a pet extravagance. It is teacups. She loves pretty clothes, but she can gaze at the latest fabrics in the windows of dry goods shops without being tempted to purchase, and can even survey unshaken, invoices of Parisian millinery, gowns and gloves. She has a sweet tooth, but when occasion requires she can steer a steady course between Purssell's and Arnand's, or Huyler's and Deage's, without swerving to the right or to the left. But when she nears a china shop, her steps falter.

Strange to say, the very high priced shops do not most beguile her. Her attraction is towards those fascinating little establishments that display cards bearing the legends, Special Sale! Great Reduction!! Marked Down!!! Like a moth to a candle, is she drawn towards that place of temptation. All china is dear to her heart, but she can resist plates, teapots, and even cream-jurs, of which every housekeeper known one can never have too many. But when she beholds a cup and saucer ticketed Only 24 cents, she is suure to succumb. She can hold out a striff longer if she reads 39 cents, and twice she has been known to walk on, with an air of dignity, as far as the corner, before she could make up her mind to go in and buy the cup and saucer billed, For today only, 50 cents. Don't think she is reckless in her selection. She always prefers pretty china, and generally shows excellent taste, but she will buy a plain cup sooner than refuse a bargain.

Now this woman is known as a good wife and mother. She is praised for her housekeeping, which she likes, for her devotion to her husband and children, whom she soores a veritable moral victory by crossing the street to keep away from a china shop, or recites poetry to herself to aid her in forgetting an advertisement of a Closing-out Sale, Cups and Saucers of fine Doulton, Copeland away from home, and utterly neglected his wife.

Getting into Parliament for county Clare, through the influence of the Catholic bishops, he foisted himself on Parnell through his wife's entreaties and proceeded to earn a good Government berth by making himself useful. The Emperor William is doing his best to discourage drunkenness in Germany. In spite of all that has been said about the use of malt liquors as preventing that of distilled liquors, the use of the more fiery beverages has increased alarmingly in Germany, and drunkenness is growing so prevalent as to have awakened the anxieties of German statesmen. A proposed new law for the restriction of the sale of spiritous liquors has just been made public in Berlin. The principal features of it are these:

Five minutes later he left and hurried down the road to his home, while the young lady entered the cottage singing a smatch from a favorite ballad.

Nellie Pearsley was the belle of Wellesley and a reputed heiress. It was whispered that her uncle, Captain Pearson, had a snug sum in store for his pretty little niece. Her hand was sought by many of the young men of the village, but she only kept them in suspense, keeping each wondering if he were the favored one.

The next evening about 8 o'clock the door bell rang and another one of her many admirers was ushered in. This one was also a soldier and of the same regiment as Captain Warden. After a half an hour or so he managed to muster up courage enough to selves what the proud Miss Pearson would do now.

A few days after the funeral Nellie was standing in front of her cottage. All at once she heard some one approaching, and looking up saw Captain Warden coming towards her.

"I hope, Miss Pearson," he said, coldly, "that you will think lightly of the proposal I made you a week ago. I have been thinking the matter over and have decided not to marry just yet."

"I am perfectly satisfied with thearrangement, and you may consider yourself free," said Nellie, independently.

The following day she received a letter from Arkwright. It ran thus:

And, by the way, the women are well equipped for the fight and are achieving some brave successes. Slowly but surely they are encroaching on the various employments heretofore monopolized by men, and it wouldn't be surprising if by and bye men should be forced to organize for self-protection. Women's rights are pretty fully established and the grave question of the future will be. How many or how few are to be the rights which women will allow men to enjoy?
