NEWS ABOUT HOME.

"A chief's among ye, takin' notes, An' he'll be'll print it."

TOWN TOPICS.

The Town Council meets to-night. Mr. and Mrs. McFaul have returned to their home in Kingston.

FEATHERS—A few pounds of clean, live goose feathers are wanted. Apply at this office.

Mr. Parkes, of Toronto, did the short-hand reporting for the Court of Chancery held in town last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Winter, well known to many of our readers, left recently for Bradford, Penn., their present home.

The High School students will to-night discuss the question "Was the execution of Mary, Queen of Scots justifiable?"

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Sam Dettlor, Excise officer, is getting over a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism.

Miss Mary Dancy, daughter of Capt. Dancy, is spending a most enjoyable time with friends in the pretty town of Ingersoll.

Miss Sarah Dickson, who has been spending a few weeks with relations in Exeter, returned home on Thursday of last week.

Mr. W. D. Shannon, liquor dealer, has removed to more commodious premises in the Albion Block, on the South street corner.

Saturday last was St. George's Day. Mr. R. S. Williams, of the Bank of Commerce, sported a budding rose in honor of the day; otherwise the occasion was unobscured.

Mr. John Dixon, accompanied by his mother, left yesterday for Denver, Col. Mrs. Dixon intends to remain in the West for a year.

The demand for this week's SIGNAL is very heavy before we go to press, in anticipation of our report of the St. George's Church opening.

ANGELING—Anglers should bear in mind that it is illegal to catch maskinonge, pickerel or bass from the 15th of April to the 15th of May.

Miss Kate Watson, assistant teacher in St. David's Ward school, recently received her 2nd Class certificate, something which, in these days of rigid examinations, is generally well appreciated by the recipient.

BUSINESS CHANGE—Mr. H. Cooke announces this week that he is about to retire from the grocery business, and will clear off his stock of crockery at exceedingly low prices. Mr. Cooke, we understand, means just what he says.

PROTECTED—Mr. D. B. Hodge, corner of Gibbon and Regan streets, has just had a complete set of copper lightning conductor placed upon his residence by Mr. Wm. Kitt, Clinton, agent for the Ontario Copper Lightning Rod Company.

CLEAN UP YOUR YARDS—We understand that the attention of the Street Inspector has been called to the filthy condition of some back yards, and he will shortly make a descent upon those who fail to clear up their premises and abate the nuisance of filthy yards.

Knox church Sunday School gave $10 to Dr. McKay, the missionary. The total amount collected during the services last Sunday was about $125. Some benevolent person anonymously supplemented this by the large sum of $100 in bank notes, merely by signing himself "A member of Dr. Ure's Church."

PROF. SALTER, teacher of vocal music, is forming his classes in Goderich in connection with Knox church and the North street Methodist church. The art of singing is one that all should be acquainted with in some degree, and it is to be hoped that Prof. Salter's classes will be well patronized. The classes meet on Monday and Tuesday evening.

ON THE WEDDING TRIP—The Toronto Orange News has the following item of interest to our readers: "We had the pleasure of a call from our old friend, Mr. Joseph Wright, the genial host of the 'Point Farm' Hotel, Goderich, accompanied by the charming feminine addition which he has lately made to the attractions of that hostelry. Mr. and Mrs. Wright were on their bridal tour en route to Boston, New York, etc., etc. They bore no traces of the innumerable missiles which we read in our Goderich exchanges were hurled at them, and, it is needless to say, looked as happy and blooming as the occasion justified. We join their many friends in wishing them happiness and prosperity."

PLANTS AND FLOWERS—Everybody likes flowers. Tastes may differ, and some may prefer shade to color, but all like flowers. A splendid collection of flowering plants, foliage plants and flowering bulbs can be seen at Mr. Alex. Watson's greenhouse on South St. Mr. Watson delights in showing visitors through his three compartments; and the visitor is sure to be delighted, too. Hardly plants in exquisite profusion; bedding plants which even now can hardly restrain their gorgeous bloom; pretty foliage plants, and red-leafed, bulbous rooted plants all await inspection. Mr. Watson has already met with a large demand for his flowers—during the past week he has made a large shipment of plants to Clinton and Seaford, and the local demand is also good. We would advise those who wish to get some of Mr. Watson's stock to call early and get the choicest.

GOING TO THE STATES.

Mr. Chas. P. Dodd, the well known brewer, of Nile P. O., leaves to-day for Canandaigua, N. Y., where he will enter upon the charge of a large apary of 116 hives. Mr. Dodd is pretty thoroughly posted on bees, and will probably give some of his Canandaigua experiences to our readers in the form of a letter in THE SIGNAL.

GODERICH HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The Directors of the Goderich Horticultural Society met in the Secretary's office on Tuesday evening. No business of importance was transacted, except the passing of a resolution in the effect that the prize list be revised previous to the amalgamation of the Horticultural Society with the West Huron Agricultural Society.

IN TOWN—The colored man, Charles Melton, who was reported to have died in Detroit recently, was in town during the week, his presence giving the lie to the rumors which were rife a few weeks ago, and which appeared in print in our usually well informed contemporary, the Clinton New Era. On Wednesday morning the negro insulted a respected gentleman in town, and got knocked down two or three times for his temerity. He left Goderich by the next train.

DEATH OF MRS. McLEAN—On Wednesday, Mrs. McLean, mother of Dr. McLean and Mrs. M. C. Cameron, died at the residence of her son-in-law, M. C. Cameron, M. P., at the ripe age of 81 years. The deceased was relict of the late Dr. John McLean, R. N., who accompanied Bayfield's surveying party as surgeon when Lakes Huron and Superior were surveyed from 1824 to 1829.

At that time Indians camped where Goderich now stands. Mrs. McLean was a very active and vigorous until her late illness, which was in the form of a severe cold. The funeral will take place from Mr. Cameron's residence at three o'clock this afternoon.

A GOOD JOB—No better evidence of the good reputation in which Goderich carriage builders are held is needed than the fact that Mr. C. Kenney, of the Queen's Hotel, Kincardine, recently selected for the reading room and library, the establishment of Messrs. Morton & Cressman. The vehicle upon its arrival here was a perfect wreck, but the skilled workman in the employ of our local carriage makers have wrought a wonderful change. The 'bus is now in a better condition than it ever was. It is thoroughly repaired, handsomely furnished, and beautifully painted. On each side is a magnificent landscape, and upon the top of the door is a pretty portrait of a young girl with long, wavy hair. The job reflects great credit on the establishment of Morton & Cressman.

The Denver, Col., Tribune of a recent date says: "The wife of Alderman W. W. McLeellan died yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock after a short illness. The deceased lady was esteemed by a wide acquaintance as the possessor of rare virtues of heart and mind, and in the loss which the family has sustained a warm sympathy will be extended at every hand. Mrs. McLeellan was 49 years of age, and leaves with the bereaved husband two sons grown to man's estate and a daughter 9 years old. The funeral will take place from the residence, No. 961 Lawrence street, at a time to be announced in to-morrow's issue." Aid. McLeellan was at one time a resident of Goderich, and the deceased was a sister of Messrs. James, Joseph and William Towsley, of Colborne Township, and was the last of five sisters. It is about ten years since Mr. and Mrs. McLeellan left their western home.

HIS FUTURE WIFE'S PICTURE—A good story is on the rounds, about a certain High School student, from the townships, who, having read an advertisement that upon receipt of a certain small sum of money the advertiser would send any male applicant a description of his future wife, forwarded the money and received a description, with all the feminine charms. The writer added that of the young man would send an additional sum, he would get an actual picture of his intended. The callow youth did so, and in return received a photograph of a fat variety actress, in tight, and the poor fellow actually felt flattered at the thought of having so voluptuous a creature for his future wife. The sharks and swindlers who live upon the foolishness of our youth, have we are pleased to think, but few victims amongst our High School boys.

WARDEN'S COMMITTEE MEETING—At a meeting of the Warden's Committee on Friday last, the Commissioners were instructed to thoroughly examine the Maitland bridge, in all its parts, and if it be found it cannot be repaired so as to be safe for public travel, that they be authorized to advertise for tenders for both an iron and wooden bridge, and if necessary procure plans and specifications for a new wooden superstructure, and report to the Council at the June meeting. It was also moved that the Commissioner be authorized to examine the iron bridges erected in the neighboring County, if they deem it advisable to enable them to report at the June meeting, upon the relative merits of an iron bridge compared with a wooden structure. In reference to the boundary bridge between Stephen and McGillivray, it was resolved that the County Clerk of Middlesex be requested to instruct Mr. Brace to at once sign the bonds for the fulfilment of contract for building said bridge, or otherwise return the plans and specifications to him, and that Mr. Campbell's tender be accepted.

CHANCERY SITTINGS.

The Result in the Suits Before Chancellor Sprague.

The following is the record of the results in the causes tried before the Honorable Chancellor Sprague:

Milligan v. Rutledge—Decree for plaintiff as prayed. He to pay guardian costs. No order otherwise as to costs. Widow not entitled to dower. Vested lands in plaintiff for estate of late Christopher Rutledge. Plaintiff to indemnify defendant against the mortgage to the Huron & Erie Society. Garrow for plaintiff Seager for defendant.

Gleeson v. Barr—Decree for plaintiff with costs, save to be taken. Reference to Master at London. Costs of injunction motion to plaintiff. Boyd, Q. C., for plaintiff; Purdon for defendant.

Kemp v. Tamblin—Decree that upon payment to the executors of $126 and their costs of this suit, including their proper costs of opposing the plaintiff's application for injunction, the chattels seized by the executors be delivered up to the plaintiff, if in the possession of plaintiff he retain the possession thereof. The money in Court, the produce of the sale of the wheat, will of course be taken into account. McLennan, Q. C., and M. G. Cameron for plaintiff; Moss and Smith for defendant.

Brussels v. Ronald—The Chancellor finds that there is $30,000 of plant and property as required by the mortgage condition. That the debt has not been carried on the manufacture provided by the agreement between the parties. That his not having done so is not the result of unavoidable accident, but of his own default. Judgment as to relief to be granted reserved. Boyd, Q. C., and Wade for plaintiff; Moss for defendant.

Cameron v. the Standard—Leave was granted to plaintiff to amend costs in cause to debt, if he succeeds. McLennan, Q. C., and M. G. Cameron for plaintiff; Boyd, Q. C., for defendant.

Pemberton v. Tamblin—Bill dismissed with leave to apply within a month to re-instate. McLennan, Q. C., and M. G. Cameron for plaintiff; Moss for defendant.

Gibson v. Gibson—Minute of decree as prepared read to and approved by His Lordship, and forwarded by Mr. Garrow for plaintiff; Doyle for defendant.

Bailey v. Messer—Decree for plaintiff with costs. Plaintiff to pay guardian costs and add them to his own. The administrator to pay off and discharge the incumbrance to Scott out of the estate of John Messer. Administrator to pay plaintiff's and guardian's costs out of funds of estate in hand. If there be any deficiency, then costs to be paid out of any monies standing in Court in re Messer. Clark v. Messer.

The following causes were adjourned to the next sitting of the Court in Goderich:

Hawkins v. Mahaffy.
Young v. Alexander.
Sinclair v. Taylor.
Dominion Savings and Investment Society v. Stinson.

The Late Hilary Horton.

It is our sad duty to record the death of Mr. Hilary Horton, of Colborne, who died at his home, after two days' illness, aged 59 years. The deceased was a native of the county of Kent, England, and was one of the early settlers in Huron. He came to Goderich in the year 1833, and took up land on the lake shore, and in 1845 removed to his late residence in the township of Colborne. His house was always noted for its hospitality, for Mr. Horton had a large heart, and was one of the kindest and most genial of men. The tired traveller was sure to find a welcome there, and a substantial one, too; and when the Bible Christians and Presbyterians first began preaching at Leeburn, his doors were thrown open so that in his house the Truth could be preached to all. His kindness to sick neighbors will long be remembered; his cheery voice and kindly face being mediums in themselves for the invalid; and in the social circle his genial presence will be missed. He opened a blacksmith shop, the first in the neighborhood, and worked at the business for some time. It was he who in 1840 brought all the way from Galt the first stoves for the County Gaol, a tedious journey in those days of poor roads. He was not a strong politician, and meddled but little in municipal or parliamentary affairs. He leaves a family of eight sons and one daughter; and his brothers reside in this town, Mayor Horton, and Mr. Henry Horton. He was a good father, a faithful friend, and a kind neighbor, and the respect in which his memory was held was shown in the long cortege which followed his remains to the tomb, over 75 teams being in the procession. His funeral sermon was preached on Sunday, April 16th, by Rev. Dr. Ure, at Leeburn Presbyterian Church. Many relatives and friends of the deceased were present.

Marine News.

Capt. Parsons will this season command the Isaac May, of the Beaver Line. The Bar Point lightship will be taken out and stationed at that reef about the 1st of May.

The Detroit Free Press says that salaries wages in that port have been fixed at $2.00 a day.

Captain A. E. McGregor left for Saragat on Wednesday to tread the deck of the Sovereign en route to the Arctic.

The graving dock to be erected at Halifax is to cost one million dollars, and will be built of granite and the best materials. The mouth of the harbor is still blocked with ice, which although rotting fast, covers the face of the lake as far as the eye can reach.

The shipyard of the Shickelina Bros., St. Catharines, presents a busy appearance. The ribs of the new steam tug are being built. A number of persons about 130 men are employed altogether.

The steam barge R. J. Hackett, Capt. Allen, called Saturday afternoon on her way from Cleveland to Detroit. On Monday she was taken on the Detroit Dry Dock, her spars were taken out and she returned to Spingwells where she will be made into double-deck.

Capt. Henry Jenking's ship-yard, at Walkerville, which has been idle for six years, again busy with preparations for ship building. It is intended at no distant date to build a dry-dock there. The Canadian Government at present imposes a duty of thirty per cent. on all repairs on Canadian vessels done in the United States.

On April 22nd, 1880, the schooner M. C. Uppar was lying at the west side of Kingsville pier and the steamer Erie Belle at the other. On leaving the dock the schooner struck the steamer, and beyond the pier to enable the schooner to be worked out clear of the pier when ready to sail. The Erie Belle ran for five miles and sank in ninety feet of water. It cost $4,000 to put her in repair again, for which her owners sued the owner of the Uppar. The case was tried last February, but the judgment was reversed by the Court. It was then decided that each craft should pay half its own expenses.

COUNTY GLEANINGS.

The Seaford Sun has changed its form.

Sir Richard Cartwright has been elected to membership in the Seaford Cricket Club. He can hit hard when he tries.

THE FAITHFUL LOVER—The London Advertiser says: This thrilling tale of the Scottish Covenanters was last week given in all its thrilling details in the Lecture Room of St. Stephen's Church. Rev. Mr. Moffat, of Bayfield, appeared to have studied the piece thoroughly, and he rendered it in fine style. A repetition would no doubt be greeted by a large audience.

At 4 o'clock on Saturday morning, Mr. Alex. Carson's saw and shingle mill, Gorrie, was discovered to be in flames, and in less than an hour was burned to the ground. The loss is estimated at $4,000, on which there is no insurance whatever. It was only by hard work on the part of the citizens that an immense quantity of lumber, all of this season's work, was saved. Long lines of men were formed from an adjoining creek, and water passed in buckets. About a dozen hands are thrown out of employment by the catastrophe. The origin of the fire is unknown.

DAROTA—Word has been received that one of William Grievie's sons, who left Hullett for Dakota's last spring, was caught in one of those blizzards that people talk so much about, and lost his way just half a mile from home. He unhitched his horses and let them go, took the sleigh back and turned it upside down and got under it and waited till morning, when he got out and made his way to the first house. His ears were badly frozen. On reaching home he found that the horses had not arrived and did not until that night about 12 o'clock. It was a miracle that he was not frozen to death.

LICENSES GRANTED—The following list of tavern and shop licenses for South Huron for 1881 granted by the commissioners was kindly handed us by Inspector Ballantyne: Township of Stephen—Wm. J. Moffat, Thos. Hodgins, Wm. Baker, Ben. Spax, W. Holt, W. Cunningham, P. Hall, B. Howard, E. C. Bliss, H. Beekender, Thos. Stacy, Township of Hay—W. R. Hodgins, R. Reynolds, S. Fairburn, N. Deichert, S. Walper, H. Orth, W. Cecker. Township of Stanley—H. Shaffer, B. J. Turner, J. Joslin, R. Renner. Township of Uxbridge—J. Davis, E. Tomes, J. Croker. Township of Tuckersmith—Mrs. Knox, John Daley, W. Kyle, W. Cook. Shop—G. & E. Jackson. Township of St. George's—John Morgan, W. H. McLean, W. Bowey, C. Stalker. Shop—T. J. Marks. Village of Exeter—Taverns—J. Oke, W. Hawshaw, N. White, A. Walser, D. Taylor. Shops—C. Carlington, G. A. Mace, J. Farmer. Town of Seaford—Alex. Davidson, J. W. Carroll, R. L. Sharp, D. Ritchie, T. Foster, R. Carmichael, Christina Stephens. Shops—T. D. Ryan, Thomas Kidd.

Business Items.

A TERRIBLE MISTAKE—Vernor the good weather prophet omits to tell the public that at R. B. Smith's, they can get goods for all kinds of weather. Prints and dress goods, vests &c. for spring weather, muslins, lawns and lace bunnings for summer weather, sun shades and parasols for hot day weather, waterproof circulars and umbrellas for wet weather, and all at such low prices that the poor as well as the rich can be supplied.

Here is a dodge. Most people are complaining of hard times, and as a natural result we see a good many long faces. Now, we would rather gaze upon an iceberg than a person with a long, sad face. We believe the latter has the most chilling effect. Do you want to look happy? If so, go to Sallows, and have your photo taken while wearing your best expression. The shadow is secured, and you have something to look at that will cheer you in moments of despondency. Try it. A careful inspection of our work is solicited. R. SALLONS, photo, Goderich.

LIGHTNING RODS—It is well always to get the best. The Ontario Copper Lightning Rod Co., make the best, and give a ten years policy to its patrons. Be wise and be safe. Wm. Kitt, Clinton, agent.

SEEDS! SEEDS!—If you want field or garden seeds of the best varieties, or the newest varieties of potatoes—the Beauty of Hebron—or ground oats, cake, millet and Hungarian grasses, also Conquest's, extra early or superior corn, best variety in use, McNair has them.

A LIFE FOR A LIFE.

BY MISS MULLOCK.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

HER STORY. You will understand all I mean by "our own." I am often very sad for you, Max; but never afraid of you, never...

To return. Penelope and I were both merry as we started by the very earliest train in the soft May morning, we had so much business to get through. You can't understand, of course, so I omit it, only confiding to you our last crowning achievement—the dress. It is white moire antique. Dr. Urquhart has not the slightest idea what that is, but no matter; and it has lace flourishes half a yard deep, and it is altogether a most splendid affair. But the governor's lady—I beg my own garden—the governor's wife must be magnificent, you know.

It was the mantua-maker, a great West-end personage, employed by the grand-family to whom, by Francis's advice, Lydia Cartwright was sent some years ago (by-the-by, I met Mrs. Cartwright to-day, who asked after you, and sent her duty, and wished you would know that she had heard from Lydia)—this mantua-maker it was who recommended the lady's maid, Sarah Enfield, who had once been a workwoman of her own. We saw the person, who seemed a young woman, but delicate-looking, said her health was injured with the long hours of millinery-work, and that she should have died, she thought, if a friend of hers, a kind young woman, had not taken her in and helped her. She was lodging with this friend now.

On the whole, Sarah Enfield sufficiently pleased us to make my sister decide on engaging her, if only Francis could see her first. We sent a message to his lodgings, and were considerably surprised to have the answer that he was not at home, and had not been for three weeks; indeed, he hardly ever was at home. After some annoyance, Penelope resolved to make her decision without him.

Hardly ever at home! What a lively life Francis must lead! I wonder he does not grow weary of it. Once he half owned he was, but added, "that he must float with the stream—it was too late now—he could not stop himself." Penelope will, though.

As we drove through the Park to the address Sarah Enfield had given us—somewhere about Kensington—Penelope wishing to see the girl once again and engage her—my sister observed, in answer to my remark, that Francis must have many invitations.

"Of course he has. It shows how much he is liked and respected. It will be the same abroad. We shall gather round us the very best society in the island. Still he will find it a great change from London."

I wonder it she at all afraid of it, or suspects that he once was what she shrank from being thrown altogether upon his wife's society, like the Frenchman who declined marrying a lady he had long visited because "where should he spend his evenings?" Oh, me! what a heart-breaking thing to feel that one's husband needed somewhere to spend his evenings.

We drove past Holland Park: what a bonnie place it is (as you would say): how full the trees were of green leaves and birds. I don't know where we went next—I hardly know anything of London, thank goodness!—but it was a pretty, quiet neighborhood, where we had the greatest difficulty in finding the house we wanted, and, at last, had recourse to the Post-office.

The post-mistress—who was rather grim—"knew the place, that is, the name of the party as lived there, which was all she cared to know. She called herself Mrs. Chaytor, or Chaster, or something like it," which we decided must be Sarah Enfield's charitable friend and accordingly drove thither.

It was a small house, a mere cottage, set in a pleasant little garden, through the pannels of which I saw walking about a young woman with a child in her arms. She had on a straw hat with a deep lace fall that hid her face, but her figure was very graceful, and she was exquisitely well dressed. Nevertheless, she looked not exactly "the lady." Also, hearing the gate bell, she called out, "Arriet, in no lady's voice."

Penelope glanced at her and then sharply at me. "I wonder"—she began, but stopped—told me to remain in the carriage while she went in, and she would fetch me if she wanted me.

But she did not. Indeed, she hardly staid two minutes. I saw the young woman run hastily in doors, leaving her child—such a pretty boy! screaming after his "mammy"—and Penelope came back, her face the color of scarlet. "What? Is it a mistake?" I asked. "No—yes," and she gave the order to drive on.

Again I inquired if anything were the matter, and was answered, "Nothing—nothing that I could understand." After which she sat with her veil down, cogitating, till all of a sudden she sprang up as if some one had given her a stab at her heart. I was quite terrified, but she again told me it was nothing, and bade me "let her alone;" which as you know is the only thing one can do with my sister Penelope.

But at the railway station we met some people we knew, and she was forced to talk; so that by the time we reached Rockmount she seemed to have got over her annoyance, whatever it was concerning Sarah Enfield, and was herself again. That is, herself in one of those moods when, whether her ailment be mental or physical, the sole chance of its passing away is, as one says, "to leave her alone."

I do not say this is trying—doubly so new, when, just as she was leaving, I seem to understand my sister better and and love her more than ever I did in my life. But I have learned at last not to break my heart over the peculiarities of those I care for, but to try to bear with them as they must with mine, of which I have no lack, goodness knows!

I saw a letter to Francis in the post-bag this morning, so I hope she has relieved her mind by giving him the explanation which she refused to me. It must have been some deception practised on her by this Sarah Enfield, and Penelope never forgives the smallest deceit.

She was either too much tired or too much annoyed to appear again yesterday so papa and I spent the afternoon and evening alone. But she went to church with us as usual to-day, looking pale and tired, the ill mood—the little black dog on her shoulder, "as we used to call it—not having quite vanished.

Also, I noticed an absent expression in her eyes, and her voice in the responses was less regular than usual. Perhaps she was thinking this would almost be her last Sunday of sitting in the old pew and looking up to papa's white hair, and her heart being fuller, her lips were more silent than usual.

You will not mind my writing so much about my sister Penelope? You like me to talk to you of what is about me and uppermost in my thoughts, which is herself at present. She has been very good to me, and Max loves every one whom I love, and every one who loves me.

I shall have your letter to-morrow morning. Good-night!

THEODORA.

CHAPTER XXIX.

HIS STORY.

My Dear Theodora—This is a line extra, written on receipt of yours, which was most welcome. I feared something had gone wrong with my little methodical girl.

Do not keep strictly to your Domical letter just now; write any day that you can. Tell me everything that is happening to you—you must, and ought. Nothing must occur to you or yours that I do not know. You are mine.

Your last letter I do not answer in detail till the next shall come; not exactly from press of business—I would make time if I had it not—but from various other reasons, which you shall have by-and-by.

Give me, if you remember it, the address of the person with whom Sarah Enfield is lodging. I suspect she is a woman of whom, by the desire of her nearest relative, I have been in search for some time. But, should you have forgotten, do not trouble your sister about this. I will find all I wish to learn some other way. Never apologize or hesitate at writing to me about your family—all that is yours is mine. Keep your heart up about your sister Penelope; she is a good woman, and all that befalls her will be for her good. Love her, and be patient with her continually. All your love for her and the rest takes nothing from what is mine, but adds thereto.

Let me hear soon what is passing at Rockmount. I cannot come to you and help you—would I could! My love! my love!

MAX URQUHART.

CHAPTER XXX.

HER STORY.

My Dear Max—I write this in the middle of the night; there has been no chance for me during the day, nor, indeed, at all—until now. To-night, for the first time, Penelope has fallen asleep. I have taken the opportunity of stealing into the next room, to comfort—and you.

My dear Max! Oh, if you knew! if I could but come to you for one minute, rest, one minute's rest, one minute's love! There I will not cry any more. It is much to be able to write to you, and blessed, infinitely blessed to know you are—what you are.

Max, I have been weak, wicked of late; afraid of absence, which tries me so, because I am not strong, and cannot stand up by myself as I used to do; afraid of death, which might tear you from me, or me from you, leaving the other to go mourning upon earth forever. Now I feel that absence is nothing, death itself nothing, compared to one loss—that which has befallen my sister Penelope.

You may have heard of it, even in these few days—ill news spreads fast. Tell me what you hear; for we wish to leave my sister as much as we can. To our friends generally, I have merely written that, "from unforeseen differences," the marriage is broken off. Mr. Charteris may give what reasons he likes at Treherne Court. We will not try to injure him with his uncle.

I have just crept in to look at Penelope; she is asleep still, and has never stirred. She looks so old—like a woman of fifty almost. No wonder. Think—ten years—all her youth to be crushed out at once. I wonder, will it kill her? It would me.

I wanted to ask you—do you think, medically, there is any present danger in her state? She lies quiet enough; taking little notice of me or anybody—wishes her eyes shut during the daytime, and open, wide staring, all night long. What ought I to do with her? There is only me, you know. If you fear anything, send me a telegram at once. Do not wait to write.

But, that you may the better judge her state, I ought just to give you full particulars, beginning where my last letter ended.

That "little black dog on her shoulder," which I spoke of so lightly! God forgive me! also for leaving her the whole of that Sunday afternoon with her door locked, and the room as still as death; yet never once knocking to ask, "Penelope, how are you?"

On Sunday night, the curate came to supper, and papa sent me to summon her; she came down stairs, took her place at the table, and conversed, I did not notice her much, except that she moved about in a stupid stunned-like fashion, which caused papa to remark more than once, "Penelope, I think you are half asleep." She never answered.

Another night, and the half of another day, she must have spent in the same manner. And I let her do it without inquiry. Shall I ever forgive myself!

In the afternoon of Monday, I was sitting at work, busy finishing her embroidered marriage handkerchief, alone in the sunshiny parlor, thinking of my letter, which you would have received at last; also thinking it was rather wicked of my happy sister to stink for two whole days, because of a small disappointment about a servant—if such it were. I had almost determined to shake her out of her ridiculous reserve by asking boldly what was the matter, and giving her a thorough scolding if I dared; when the door opened, and in walked Francis Charteris.

Heartily glad to see him, in the hope his coming might set Penelope right again, I jumped up and shook hands, cordially. Not till afterward did I remember how much this seemed to surprise and relieve him.

"Oh, then, all is right!" said he. "I feared, from Penelope's letter, that she was a little annoyed with me. Nothing new that you know?"

"Something did annoy her I suspect," and I was about to blurt out as much as I knew or guessed of the foolish mystery about Sarah Enfield, but some instinct stopped me. "You and Penelope had better settle your own affairs," said I laughing. "I'll go and fetch her."

"Thank you." He threw himself down on the velvet arm-chair—his favorite lounge in our house for the last ten years. His handsome profile turned up against the light, his fingers lazily tapping the arm of the chair, a trick he had from his boyhood—this is my last impression of Francis—as our Francis Charteris.

I had to call outside Penelope's door three times, "Francis is here." "Francis is waiting." "Francis wants to speak to you," before she answered or appeared; and then, without taking the slightest notice of me, she walked slowly down stairs, holding by the wall as she went.

So, I thought, it is Francis who has vexed her after all, and determined to leave them to fight it out and make it up again—this, which would be the last of their many lovers' quarrels. Ah! it was.

Half an hour afterward, papa sent for me to the study, and there I saw Francis Charteris standing, exactly where you once stood—you see, I am not afraid of remembering it myself, or of reminding you. No, my Max! Our griefs are nothing, nothing!

Penelope was also present, standing by my father, who said, looking round at us with a troubled, bewildered air:

"Dora, what is all this? Your sister comes here and tells me she will not marry Francis. Francis rushes in after her, and says, I hardly can make out what. Children, why do you vex me so? Why cannot you leave an old man in peace?"

Penelope answered, "Father, you shall be left in peace, if you will only confirm what I have said to that gentleman, and send him out of my sight."

Francis laughed—"To be called back again presently. You know you will do it, as soon as you have come to your right senses, Penelope. You will never disgrace us in the eyes of the world—set everybody gossiping about our affairs, for such a trifle."

My sister made him no answer. There was less even of anger than contempt—utter, measureless contempt—in the way she just lifted up her eyes and looked at him—looked him over from head to heel, and turned again to her father.

"Papa, make him understand—I cannot—that I wish all this ended; I wish never to see his face again."

"Why!" said papa, in great perplexity.

"He knows why." Papa and I both turned to Francis, whose careless manner changed a little; he grew red and uncomfortable. "She may tell it she chooses; I lay no embargo of silence upon her. I have made all the explanations possible, and if she will not receive them, I cannot help it. The thing is done, and cannot be undone. I have begged her pardon—and made all sorts of promises for the future—no man can do more."

He said this sullenly, and yet as if he wished to make friends with her, but Penelope seemed scarcely to hear.

"Papa," she repeated, still in the same stony voice, "I wish you would end this scene; it is killing me. Tell him, will you, that I have burned all his letters, every one. Insist on his returning mine. His presents are all tied up in a parcel in my room, except this; will you give it back to him?"

She took off her ring, a small common turquoise which Francis had given her when he was young and poor, and laid it on the table. Francis snatched it up, handled it a minute, and then threw it violently into the fire.

"Bear witness, Mr. Johnston, and you too, Dora, that it is Penelope, not I, who breaks our engagement. I would have fulfilled it honorably—I would have married her."

"Would you?" cried Penelope, with flashing eyes, "no—not that last degradation—no!" "I would have married her," Francis continued, "and made her a good husband, too. Her reason for refusing me is puerile—perfectly puerile. No woman of sense, who knows anything of the world, would urge it for a moment. No man either, unless he was your favorite—who I believe is at the bottom of this, who, for all you know, may be doing exactly as I have done—Dr. Urquhart."

Papa staid and said hastily, "Confine yourself to the subject on hand, Francis. Of what is this that my daughter accuses you? Tell me, and let me judge."

Francis hesitated, and then said, "Send away these girls, and you shall hear."

Suddenly it flashed upon me what it was. How the intuition came, how little things, before unnoticed, seemed to rise and put themselves together, including Saturday's story—and the shudder that ran through Penelope from head to foot, when on Sunday morning old Mrs. Cartwright courted to her at the church-door—all this I cannot account for, but seemed to know as well as if I had been told everything. I need not explain for evidently you know it also, and it is so dreadful, so unspcakably dreadful.

Oh, Max, for the first minute or so, I felt as if the whole world were crumbling from under my feet—as I could trust nobody—believe in nobody—until I remembered you. My dear Max, my own dear Max! Ah! wretched Penelope.

I took her hand as she stood, but she twisted it out of mine again. I listened mechanically to Francis, as he again began rapidly and eagerly to expulate himself to my father.

"She may tell you all, if she likes. I have done no worse than hundreds do in my position, and under my unfortunate circumstances, and the world forgives them, and women too. How could I help it? I was too poor to marry. And before I married I meant to do every one justice—I meant—"

Penelope covered her ears. Her face was so ghastly that papa himself said, "I think, Francis, explanations are idle. You had better defer them and go."

"I will take you at your word," he replied haughtily. "If you or she think better of it, or of me, I shall be at any time ready to fill my engagement—honorably, as a gentleman should. Good-by; will you shake hands with me, Penelope?"

He walked up to her, trying apparently to carry things off with a high air, but he was not strong enough, or hardened enough. At sight of my sister sitting there, for she had sunk down at last, with a face like a corpse, only it had not the peace of the dead, Francis trembled.

"Forgive me if I have done you any harm. It was all the result of circumstances. Perhaps, if you had been a little less rigid—had scolded me less and studied me more—But you could not help your nature, nor I mine. Good-by, Penelope."

She sat, impassive; even when, with a sort of involuntary tenderness, he seized and kissed her hand; but the instant he was gone—fairly gone—with the door shut upon him, and his horse clattering down the road—I heard it plainly—Penelope started up with a cry of "Francis—Francis!" Oh the anguish of it! I can hear it now.

But it was not this Francis she called for—I was sure of that—I saw it in her eyes. It was the Francis of ten years ago—the Francis she had loved—now as utterly dead and buried as if she had seen the stone laid over him, and his body left to sleep in the grave.

Dead and buried—dead and buried. Do you know, I sometimes wish it were so; that she had been left, peacefully widowed—knowing his soul was safe with God. I thought, when papa and I—papa, who that night kissed me, for the first time since one night you know—sat by Penelope's bed, watching her—"If Francis had only died!"

After she was quiet, and I had persuaded papa to go to rest, he sent for me and desired me to read a psalm, as I used to do when he was ill—you remember? When it was ended, he asked me, had I any idea what Francis had done that Penelope could not pardon?

I told him, difficult as it was to do it, all I suspected—indeed, felt sure of. For was it not the truth? the only answer I could give. For the same reason I write of these things to you without any false delicacy—they are the truth, and they must be told.

Papa lay for some time, thinking deeply. At last he said:

"My dear, you are no longer a child, and I may speak to you plainly. I am an old man, and your mother is dead. I wish she were with us now—she might help us; for she was a good woman, Dora. Do you think—take time to consider the question—that your sister is acting right?"

"I said, 'Quite right.'"

"Yes, I thought you held the doctrine, 'the greater the sinner the greater the saint; and believed every crime a man can commit may be repented, atoned, pardoned.'"

"Yes, father; but Francis has never either repented or atoned." "No; and therefore I feel certain my sister is right. Ay, even putting aside the other fact, that the discovery of his long years of deception must have so withered up his love—and scorched it at the root, as with a stroke of lightning—that even if she pitied him, she must also despise. Fancy despising one's husband."

Besides, she is not the only one wronged. Sometimes, even sitting by my sister's bedside, I see the vision of that pretty young creature—she was so pretty and innocent when she first came to live at Rockmount—with her boy in her arms; and my heart feels like to burst with indignation and shame, and a kind of shuddering horror at the wickedness of the world—yet with a strange feeling of unutterable pity lying at the depth of all.

Max, tell me what you think—you who are so much the wiser of us two; but I think that, even if she wished it still, my sister ought not to marry Francis Charteris.

Ah! papa said truly I was no longer a child. I feel hardly even a girl, but quite an old woman—familiar with all sorts of sad and wicked things, as if the freshness and innocence had gone out of life, and were nowhere to be found. Except when I turn to you, and lean my poor sick heart against you, as I do now. Max comfort me!

You will, I know, write immediately you receive this. If you could have come—but that is impossible.

Augustus will probably see, if you have not done so already—for he already looks upon you as the friend of the family, though in no other light as yet; which is best. Papa wrote to Sir William, I believe; he said he considered some explanation a duty, on his daughter's account; further than this, he wishes the matter kept quiet. Not to disgrace Francis, I thought; but papa told me one-half the world would hardly consider it any disgrace at all. Can this be so? Is it indeed such a wicked, wicked world?

—Here my letter was stopped by hearing a sort of cry in Penelope's room. I ran in, and found her sitting up in her bed, her eyes staring, and every limb convulsed. Seeing me, she cried out:

"Bring a light; I was dreaming. But it's not true. Where is Francis?"

I made no reply, and she slowly sank down in her bed again. Recollection had come.

"I should not have gone asleep. Why did you let me? Or why cannot you put me to sleep forever, and ever, and ever, and ever? repeating the word many times. "Dora," and my sister fixed her pitous eyes on my face. "I should be so glad to die. Why won't you kill me?"

I burst into tears.

Max, you will understand the total helplessness one feels in the presence of an irremediable grief like this; how consolation seems cruel, and reasoning vain. "Miserable comforters are ye all," said Job to his three friends; and a miserable comforter I felt to this my sister, whom it had pleased the Almighty to smite so sore, until I remembered that He who smites can heal.

I lay down outside the bed, and my arm round her, and remained thus for a long time, not saying a single word—that is not with my lips. And since our weakness is our best strength, and when we wholly relinquish a thing, it is given back to us many a time in double measure, so, possibly, those helpless tears of mine did Penelope more good than the wisest of words.

She lay watching me—saying more than once:

"I did not know you cared so much for me, Dora."

It then came into my mind; that as wrecked people cling to the smallest spar, if, instead of her conviction that in losing Francis she had lost her all, I could by any means make Penelope feel that there were others to cling to, others who loved her dearly, and whom she ought to try and live for still—it might save her. So, acting on the impulse, I told my sister how good I thought her, and how wicked I myself had been for not long since discovering her goodness. How, when at last I learned to appreciate her, and to understand what a sorely-trying life hers had been, there came not only respect, but love. Thoroughly sisterly love, even as people do not necessarily feel even for their own flesh and blood, but never, I doubt, except to them. (Save that, in some inexplicable way, fondly reflected, I have something of the same sort of love for your brother Dallas.)

Afterward, she lying still and listening, I tried to make my sister understand what I had myself felt when she came to my bedside and comforted me that morning, months ago, when I was wretched; how no wretchedness of loss can be altogether unendurable, so long as it does not strike at the household peace, but leaves the sufferer a love to rest upon at home.

And at length I persuaded her to promise that, since it made both papa and me so very miserable to see her thus—and papa was an old man, too; we might not have him with us many years—she would, for our sakes, try to rouse herself, and see if life were not tolerable for a little longer.

"Yes," she answered, closing her heavy eyes, and folded her hands in a pitiful kind of patience, very strange in our quick, irritable Penelope. "Yes—just a little longer. Still, I think I shall soon die. I believe it will kill me."

I did not contradict her, but I called to mind your words, that Penelope being a good woman, all would happen to her for good. Also, it is usually not the good people who are killed by grief; while others take it as God's vengeance, or as the work of blind chance, they receive it humbly as God's chastisement, live on, and endure. I do not think my sister will die—whatever she may think or desire just now. Besides, we have only to deal with the present, for how can we look forward a single day? How little we expected all this only a week ago!

It seems strange that Francis could have deceived us for so long; years, it must have been; but we have lived so retired, and were such a simple family for many things. How far Penelope thinks we know—papa and I—I cannot guess; she is totally silent on the subject of Francis. Except in that one outcry, when she was still only half awake, she has never mentioned his name.

There was one thing more I wanted to tell you, Max; you know I tell you everything.

Just as I was leaving my sister, she noticing that I was not undressed, asked me if I had been sitting up all night, and reproached me for doing so.

I said "I was not weary—that I had been quietly occupying myself in the next room."

"Reading?"

"No."

"What were you doing?" with sharp suspicion.

I answered, without disguise:

"I was writing to Max."

"Max who? Oh, I had forgotten his name."

She turned from me, and lay with her face to the wall—then said:

"Do you believe in him?"

"Yes, I do."

"You had better not. You will live to repent it. Child, mark my words. There may be good women—one or two, perhaps—but there is not a single good man in the whole world."

My heart rose to my lips, but deeds speak louder than words. I did not attempt to defend you. Besides, no wonder she should think thus.

Again she said "Dora, tell Dr. Urquhart he was innocent comparatively, and that I say so. He only killed Harry's body, but those who deceive us are the death of one's soul. Nay," and by her expression I felt sure it was not herself and her own wrongs my sister was thinking of—"there are those who destroy both body and soul."

A resident of Toronto has been having a glove fight with a New Yorker for some hazy sort of glory designated "the feather weight championship." These glove fights are not what on the surface they appear to be. Everyone knows a boxing glove when he sees it and no one who has ever engaged in boxing will admit that as an exercise it is excellent. But the gloves with which pugilists fight are not stuffed; they are nothing more or less than kid gloves, such as are worn on the streets. They thus observe the letter but not the spirit of law.

A frightful accident occurred April 22nd, at Hull, by which two lives have been lost and a third endangered. A man named Leduc and his wife, residing on Wright street, put their three children to bed, and, leaving the door, left for an auction sale. They had not been absent more than one hour when a lamp in a room on the lower flat exploded, and in a few minutes the whole interior was enveloped in flames. The brigade arrived promptly, and after a desperate struggle one of the firemen made his way into the room where the children slept and passed their bodies through the upstairs window. Two of them were lifeless, the flesh of one being torn off in some places; the third cannot survive.

A new horse disease has broken out in Chicago and vicinity. It is disease of the fetlock, and poisons the blood. When the disease spreads to the body of the animal there is danger of a fatal result. Puncheon laboriously thought out and committed to memory every passage of his sermons. Dr. Puncheon, though a semi-poetic orator, was a man of great practical sagacity and successful in business affairs.

Western women do not appear to value the privilege of voting very highly. At the recent election for school officers in Omaha only three women went to the polls. If this is any indication of the interest the fair sex take in the ballot, once the right to mark and cast it is given them, it is not worth while making any fuss over the question of female suffrage.

Duluth, the great city of the future, which furnished Proctor Knott with a text upon which to exhibit his humor, has concluded to go out of the city business altogether. She does this because even her magnificent prospects will not pay her debts. She saw how Memphis, Tenn., escaped responsibility, and concluded to do likewise. So the "Zenith City" is no more, and a lot of gorged and bloated aristocrats, who took her bonds, are looking for their pay. The law seems to be this: A city may surrender its charter and go out of business, but all its personal property is liable for its debts. Here is just where Duluth holds its sides, so to speak, and laughs "fit to kill" at the ludicrous despair of the blasted Englishmen who hold its bonds. It hasn't got any personal property. It spent what money it borrowed trying to keep its head above water, and now the treasury is empty and the city is gone. The "town lots" are still there, but they would be dear at $10 an acre for agricultural purposes, and there is no other use they could be put to.

Death of Disraeli.

LONDON, April 19.—Beaconsfield's renewed debility began on Sunday night, when the east wind commenced to blow. He continued to lose ground throughout Monday, the unfavorable wind continuing and constantly increasing in keenness. He died at half-past four this a. m., calmly as if he were asleep. Intelligence of his death was immediately despatched to the Queen, Prince of Wales, other members of the Royal Family and Gladstone, who is now at Hawarden. The news became generally known throughout the city towards nine o'clock, when special editions of the morning papers were issued. Though not unexpected, in view of his physician's statement last night that his symptoms gave ground for more grave anxiety that at any period during his illness, his death creates a deep sensation. It was observed at 3:15 a. m. that Beaconsfield's end was near. His physicians think that only his strength of will enabled him to struggle as long as he did. His courage never failed him to the last. Accounts gathered from physicians show that he retained his cheerfulness. He several times during his illness stated his belief that he would die. One doctor said the drowsiness apparent earlier in the night deepened towards midnight into stupor, from which he was with difficulty roused. He then took nourishment up to half-past one. About 2 a. m. he became comatose, breathing with much difficulty. Drs. Kidd and Bruce at once applied the usual restoratives, but for the first time since his illness they failed to produce the effect, and it became evident that death was imminent.

Lord Barrington, Dr. Quain, and Sir Philip Rose were hastily summoned. Rose and Quain only arrived a few minutes before the end. Five minutes before he expired his breathing became slow and gentle, the face placid. The heart's action and pulse continued for a few minutes after breathing ceased to be apparent. His friends and nurses continued round the bed, a few minutes after the pulse ceased, as the end was so quiet that it was difficult to realize that he was dead. All were deeply affected.

When Lord Beaconsfield regained consciousness he called Rowton to his side, feebly grasped his hand, attempted to smile, and the next moment peacefully breathed his last. Rowton broke down with utter grief, and his sobs mingled with those of the old valet, filled the chamber of death, and gave the knowledge of what had occurred to other members of the household. No clergyman was with the Earl at the time of his death, nor has one visited him during his illness. The omission is much commented on in certain quarters. Speculation is already rife on the immediate political consequences which will follow the Earl's death. In Liberal circles the opinion is expressed that the event will be a disastrous blow to the Conservatives. The latter do not admit as much, but it is plain to be seen that they recognize that they have lost the strongest, wisest and most potential leader.

Newspaper Laws.

We call the special attention of postmasters and subscribers to the following synopsis of the newspaper laws:

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning a paper does not answer the law) when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office, and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publishers for payment.

2. If any person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it be taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.

3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post-office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncollected for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

SHORTEST NOTICE.

J. G. BALL.

THE BLAKE BANQUET.

Magnificent Ovation to the Leader of the Opposition.

At the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, Thursday evening, was the occasion of a magnificent ovation to the Hon. Edward Blake, by his admiring followers. The assembly was made up principally of Senators, M. P.'s, and leading men in the Liberal ranks, about 450 in all. The hall was decorated with the usual mottoes and a number of cartoons from the pencil of J. W. Bengough. The following Hon. gentlemen:—H. Mercier, Jno. J. McLaren, President of Young Men's Reform Club, Montreal; H. Snelgrove, Pres. Young Men's Lib. Club, Cobourg; H. G. Juy, J. K. Thibadeau, A. Smith, A. G. Jones, T. W. Anglin, Chas. Clarke, L. S. Huntington, David Mills, R. W. Scott and Isaac Burpee, sent their congratulations and regretted their inability to attend. The usual toasts "The Queen," "Governor General," "Lieut. General," and "Army, Navy and Canadian Militia." The chairman, Sir Wm. Howland, proposed the toast "The Guest of the Evening," introducing it by eulogistic reference to their leader. He acknowledged that the country was enjoying a certain amount of prosperity, but thought they should exercise great prudence in seeing that the country did not go too far, in involving itself in debt. "The money," he said "derived from the creation of that debt was in fact, one of the causes for expansion of the business and the apparent prosperity existing at present."

Mr. Blake on rising to respond, referred to their kindness in getting up this expression of confidence. He said 14 years ago on an occasion of this kind, that—the only sound and enduring satisfaction one could hope for in that or any other walk of life, was to be found in honest attempt to discharge to the utmost of his abilities the duty of the hour, and he still continued in that belief. He referred to the blow which the Reformers had received in 1878—a disaster, he said, which the country would have cause to rue for many years—and which had left the party very much disorganized. Death had also taken off some of their able men—Hon. George Brown, Messrs. Holton, Oliver and Tremblay. These, he said, were circumstances adverse to fortune. In this connection a tribute was paid to Hon. Alex. McKenzie, who he was glad to see in progressing health and wished him a pleasant trip to Europe, hoping and praying for his complete recovery. From the month of December to the month of March they had fought a hard battle and had succeeded in some measure in mitigating the great calamity to the country, but most of the deformities remained in their original state. However, from various parts of the country were coming signs of a revival for the Liberal Party. Organization was going on and young men were enthusiastic. There were also some practical realizations of this in the voice of the ballot-box, from Northumberland and Carleton. If the Liberals performed their duty they would win in 1883. He then briefly considered the Pacific Railway question the arguments concerning which, our readers are partly familiar with, and in this connection dealt a blow at what he called the subservient of the Conservative party, in overriding the new syndicate proposal. The financial condition of the country was very serious, our expenditure in 1879 was double that of 1871, exclusive of the Pacific Railway bargain. It is impossible to overestimate the significance of that fact. After briefly reviewing the tariff, imports, exports and various other matters in connection with the financial condition of the country, he closed by an eloquent appeal to the party in the direction of organization, enforcing again general line of warfare, in the coming struggle for power.

The "Senate and Commons" was responded to by Hon. Wm. McMaster and by Hon. Alex. McKenzie, who was received with loud cheers. He gave it to them in his usual sledgehammer style, and was followed by Sir Richard Cartwright. The following toasts: "Ontario Legislature" and "Commercial, Manufacturing and Agricultural interests of Canada," were responded to by Mr. Mowat, for the Legislature, and by Mr. H. Darling, Mr. Paterson, M. P., and Mr. Laflamme, M. P. Mr. Rogers proposed "The Press," which was replied to by Mr. Cameron, of the London Advertiser.

The proceedings closed with cheers for the Queen, Mr. Blake and the chairman.

An Independent Opinion.

To-day the cost of living in Canada is higher than it has ever been before, and the rate of wages is lower.—(Toronto Telegram.)

A cow belonging to John James, of the 1st concession of Lavant, gave birth to a calf which has the head, ears, tail and body of a dog, legs about six inches long. The "calf" lived only a short time after birth.

At a Convention of the Reformers of North Ontario, Mr. Bigelow, of Port Perry, was chosen as the Reform candidate in the coming contest for the Local Legislature in that constituency.

An order has been passed in the Council regulating the rates on canals as follows: 1. All west-bound freights shall pay the rates existing on the St. Lawrence Canals only, and shall be free of the Welland Canal. 2. Upon eastern-bound freight, that is to say, freight from Lake Erie and points westward thereof to Montreal, shall be exacted only existing Welland Canal rates, and it shall be free of St. Lawrence Canals. It is also provided that: 3. Freight which has paid St. Lawrence tolls, which has been consigned to any intermediate Canadian port and reshipped from said port, shall pass through the Welland Canal free of charge. Articles in transit and coming under Class 4, shall pay 20 cents per ton, either to the St. Lawrence or to the Welland Canal, as the case may be. Goods not otherwise provided for under Classes 3 and 5, exceptional, shall, if using the Welland Canal only in transit westward, pay 15 cents per ton, but coal will be required to pay, as at present, 20 cents per ton either way.

The Poet's Corner.

The Old Man in the Stylish Church. Well, wife, I've been to church to-day—been to the stylish one—

I had on these coarse clothes of mine—not much the worse for wear

But then they knew I wasn't one they call a millionair;

So they led the old man to a seat away back by the door,

They led him to a cushioned seat far in advance of mine

I thought that 'twasn't exactly right to seat him up so near,

When he was young, and I was old, and very hard to hear.

But then there's no accountin' for what some people do;

The finest clothing now-a days oft gets the finest pew.

But when we reach the blessed home all un-defiled by sin,

We'll see wealth legering at the gate while poverty goes in.

Lines Into Spring.

The guileless spring, gentle Annie is just over the back yard fence. It floppeth up and down at the instigation of weather Vennor, now blowing like a ward politician, next smiling as the festive clerk in the dry goods store; but old Sol will churlishly catch her by the arm, just above her vaccination, and yank her on this side of the enclosure, there to remain until she smiles on the dandelions and the old lady with the poke bonnet gathering the same for greens, the lambskins sporting on the hills and flip flopping their ungainly tails for joy and milk, and the small boy gathering up old junk in the bottom of the canal, waiting his feet to his knees and giving the aforesaid youngster an awful opportunity to put his angel plumage on.

Hail spring! Hail to the robins and blue-birds thou bringest to warble to us at 4:30 a.m., when we are awakened by the neighbor's boy stealing our horseradish roots.

Now prance forth Aunt Melissa after dock roots for the purifying of the grease and flap-jack saturated family; the young man also goes out in pursuit of a tailor with a non-committal memory; the gay girl serambuleth for openings, and the bill collector walketh out armed and equipped with legal power as the law directs, and endeavoreth to find the debtor who is never in.

About Love.

Mr. Factandancy has noticed— That the boy who is most afraid of the girls is the first to be corralled into matrimony.

That the little boys prefer boys to girls. That they soon change, never to go back to their early love. That the little girls love the girls best. That, they don't get over their preference as soon as the boys do—some of them never.

That woman love the man because they love everything they have to take care of. That men love women because they can't help it. That the wife loves her husband as well that she has no thoughts for other men.

Rules for Home Education.

- 1. From your children's early infancy inculcate the necessity in instant obedience. 2. Unite firmness with gentleness. Let your children always understand that you mean exactly what you say. 3. Never promise them anything unless you are sure that you can give them what you promise. 4. If you tell a child to do anything, show him how to do it, and see that it is done. 5. Always punish your children for willfully disobeying you, but never punish when you are angry. 6. Never let them perceive that they can vex you or make you lose your self-command. 7. Never smile at any of their actions of which you do not approve, even though they are somewhat amusing. 8. If they give way to petulance and temper, wait till they are calm, and then gently reason with them on the impropriety of their conduct. 9. Remember that a little present punishment, when the occasion arises, is much more effectual than the threatening of a greater punishment should the fault be renewed.

- 10. Never give your children anything merely because they cry for it. 11. On no account allow them to do at one time what you have forbidden, under the same circumstances at another. 12. Teach them that the only sure and easy way to appear good, is to be good. 13. Accustom them to make their little recitals the perfect truth. 14. Never allow of talebearing. 15. Teach them that self-denial, not self-indulgence, is the appointed and sure method of obtaining happiness.

Fun and Fancy.

HE WASN'T THERE.—When General Sherman was at Auburn, N. Y., last week, "an old veteran" stepped up to him with a great deal of ostentation, and, grasping his hand cordially, exclaimed, in a tone loud enough to be heard a block away: "God bless you, General! God bless you!" I fought with you in the Shenandoah Valley.

PAY UP.

BEING now out of business on account of the fire, it is necessary that all debts owed to me should be settled early. I take this opportunity of insisting all concerned to pay up at once. 1778-2m GEORGE CATTLE.

TO THE PUBLIC.—

Having disposed of my Photo Business in Goderich, I would take this opportunity to return thanks for the many favors received since commencing business here seven years ago. For my successor, Mr. Sallows, I bespeak a continuance of the patronage so kindly tendered me, and knowing him to possess superior ability, predict for him a successful business career. Respectfully, R. R. THOMPSON, Photo.

With reference to the above, I would inform all interested that my aim will be to produce work at the Lowest Prices consistent with Good Quality, and shall spare no pains to give satisfaction. A fine assortment of Albums, Frames, &c., to hand in a few days. A call solicited. R. SALLOW, Photo, Blake's Block, Goderich. (Successor to R. R. Thompson.)

SEE WHAT PHYSICIANS

And People in Canada say about Scott's Emulsion Of Pure Cod Liver Oil WITH Hypophosphites of Lime & Soda AS A REMEDY FOR CONSUMPTION AND WASTING DISEASES

Belleville, N. B., Nov. 5, 1880. Messrs. SCOTT & BOWNE.—I have used and prescribed for some time "Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil," and find it an excellent preparation, agreeing well with the stomach, easily taken, and its continued use adding greatly to the strength and comfort of the patient.

A. H. PECK, M. D., Penn. Med. College, Amherst, Nova Scotia, Nov. 8, 1880. Messrs. SCOTT & BOWNE.—Gentlemen: For nearly two years I have been acquainted with Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites, and consider it the finest preparation now before the public. Its permanency as an Emulsion with the pleasant flavor, makes it the great favorite for children, and I do highly recommend it for all wasting diseases of the system.

Yours, very truly, C. A. BLACK, M. D.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 18, 1880. Messrs. SCOTT & BOWNE.—Gentlemen: I have prescribed your Emulsion for the past two years, and found it more agreeable to the stomach, and have better results from its use from any other preparation of the kind I have tried.

H. M. CAMERON, M. D., Belleville, Ont.

"Dear Sirs: I feel it a duty I owe not only to you but to the community, to make the following statement: About three years ago my oldest daughter was taken with a severe cold which settled on her lungs, and notwithstanding all that her medical attendant could do, she got worse and worse, and appeared to be in the last and hopeless stage of consumption. The doctor said he could do no more, but recommended your Emulsion, and the effect of it was in the opinion of every one who knew her, simply marvellous. Before she had used the first bottle, she felt much better, and to the surprise of us all, she continued to mend so rapidly that in three months she was able to go about as usual, and has continued in such excellent health that she got married 18 months ago, and has now as fine and healthy a son as you can find in the country."

WILLIAM BLAND, Elora, Ont., July, 1880.

This is to certify that my daughter has had Lung disease for some time, and very much reduced in flesh, and had not strength enough to walk across the street. She was advised by a lady friend to try Scott's Emulsion, and to our great surprise before she had used three bottles her health was completely recovered. I recommend it to every one troubled with the same disease.
