Treat Every Child's Cold Externally Rub on "Nerviline"—A Safe Cure

A Miracle of Healing Power in Every Bottle.
Little children can't be expected to romp, day in and day out, without sometime coming to grief. Some of their games are rough and tumble, cause undue fatigue, and not infrequently the kiddies are bruised, have strains, swellings and aches just like their elders.
When children come in tired and sore see they are well rubbed with Nerviline. It does wonders in breaking up a cold,—has an amazing effect on any sort of muscular pain.
The wise mother always keeps trusty old Nerviline on hand. It has a wonderful list of uses, and a bottle handy on the bedroom shelf often saves calling in the doctor.

Young and old alike can safely use Nerviline—there's no harm in it—just a heap of curative power when you rub it on.
When ever there is a pain or sickness, Nerviline should be close by. It is a true specific for rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica or neuralgia.
As for earache, toothache, sore back, sprains or strains, nothing else will cure so fast as good old Nerviline. In use about fifty years—sold by dealers everywhere. The large 50c. family size bottle is the most economical; trial size 25c.

THE HEIR OF Lancewood

CHAPTER XXV.

"It is not often," he said, "that a mother is so completely blind to her child's interests; it must be that Lady Neslie keeps him ignorant on purpose that she may have the more influence over him. A good tutor would in some degree remedy the evil, if one could be found who would take a true interest in the child's welfare."
Vivien's noble face brightened as she looked at him.

"You have anticipated what I came to say," she said, with a gracious smile. "I dare not engage a tutor for the boy; if I did, Lady Neslie would discharge him at once on her return. But, if you, Mr. Dorman, would take him a few hours every day, we might do something with him."

"You can ask me nothing, Miss Neslie, that I would not do for you," returned the secretary; "if you think I could do the boy any good, I will devote myself to him."

"But your own work, Mr. Dorman—how will you manage that?"

"I will do it at night," he replied. "Do not refuse me, Miss Neslie. I speak truly when I say that I would lay down my life to serve you. Permit me then to offer you a few hours of my time each day."

"I should be more pleased than I can say if you would devote those hours to little Oswald. You, as well as myself, have the true interests of Lancewood at heart. We can do nothing with Lady Neslie; but we might, between us, do much for the boy—we could take him out of the hands of servants. You might have him so many hours each day, and so could I—and then surely we might do him some good."

His face glowed with rapture too great for words; that she should associate him with herself—that she should appeal to him—rely upon him—filled his heart with passionate, rapturous delight.

To please her he would have devoted every waking moment of his life to the boy. He began his task at once. He bought the prettiest and most amusing books he could select, to make learning to read pleasant to him. He worked with zeal and will and fervor, content, if, during the course of the lessons, Vivien came in and rewarded him with a smile.

One morning, when she stood before them with her sweet, grave, luminous smile on her face, the boy cried out suddenly—

"I say, Vivien, you do not look wicked, you know."
"Who says I am wicked, Oswald?" she asked.

"Mamma told me so. She said you hated me because I had taken Lancewood from you. To hate is wicked—so if you hate me you must be wicked."

"I do not hate you," she replied, gently. "I pray to Heaven to make you a good man."

CHAPTER XXVI.

The month of Valerie's absence was the most peaceful Vivien had known since her father's marriage. It seemed to her that all her old friends took the opportunity of calling at Lancewood—people who had not kept up any great intimacy since the marriage—people who, understanding the difficulties of Miss Neslie's position, admired the brave, patient, resigned spirit in which she met them.

To Gerald Dorman it was a golden interval. Every hour and day was marked in golden letters on the tablets of his memory. The plan which she herself had arranged for keeping the child almost continually with them, brought them into hourly contact. Mr. Dorman had his own rooms in the western wing of the Abbey, but to give Oswald his lessons he used the library. When Vivien knew the child was busy with his lessons, she would go to see what progress he had made. Then when he was sent to his nurses, she would consult anxiously with Gerald as to whether he thought there was any improvement. Gerald was not over sanguine.

"It would be a work of years to effect any real good. I have studied the child well—he might by stern discipline develop into a good man, but he never will be one without it."
How Gerald Dorman valued these hours only he himself knew. He saw more of Miss Neslie now than he ever had seen before. Her wonderful beauty, her proud grace, her striking talent, the womanly tenderness that seemed to struggle with her innate pride, all enchanted him.

"I do not think I could love her more," he would say to himself at times, yet each day his love increased.

The hours he passed in her presence were to him hours of bliss. To his intense and passionate delight he found that she was learning to rely upon him, that she turned to him in her difficulties, that she sought his advice and followed it.

This state of things was so delightful to him that he was careful not to disturb it. He guarded his every look, word, action. Of his devotion to her and her interests he spoke most fully—of his passionate love, never. With one word of that he knew that their pleasant friendly intercourse would end at once. Vivien received his devotion with calm, serene grace. It seemed right and natural to her that the man whom her father had liked and trusted should be devoted to her. Had she dreamed that he loved her, she would have equal anger and surprise.

The happy interval was drawing to a close at last. At the end of February Valerie and her maid were to return. It was well for Miladi that she did not hear the comments of the servants; they all wished she would remain where she was. During her absence there were peace, content, order, method, kind, firm rule and regularity—all things that Miladi herself disliked. Her return was looked forward to with dread—by the nurses especially. There was a marked improvement in the boy; but, as they said, it would all disappear when her ladyship returned.

On the day she expected her Vivien walked slowly up and down the broad path in the garden. Purple and golden crocuses were springing, snow drops raised their meek heads, violets perfumed the cold clear air, there was a faint thrill of new life in the tall trees.

"My beautiful home," said the girl, with proud, passionate love—"Heaven grant that no evil may befall it, no wrong-doing dishonor these ancient walls!"

Her heart grew warm within her as she looked round; it was something to be the upholder of the honor of her race; all her hopes, her prayers, her aspirations were fixed on the boy who was to inherit the Abbey. Some good had been done by patience and forbearance; more might yet be done. She saw Gerald Dorman crossing the lawn, and she went to him.

"Will you walk a few steps with me?" she said. "I want to talk to you."

Under the clear, cold, blue sky they walked together where crocuses grew and Vivien, turning to him, held out her hand.

"I wish to thank you," she said, "for all that you have done for me; you have been patient and hopeful; in my father's name and my own, I thank you."

It was almost the first time that her beautiful white hand had touched his; the noble face had a clear light in it, the dark eyes looked with grateful earnestness into his.

"If we can persevere," she said, "and try to train the boy well, he may make a good master for Lancewood; we can render no greater service to the Neslies than that."

"I know it," acknowledged Gerald. "The task has been easy, so far," she said; "but when Lady Neslie returns, it will be more difficult. I meant to ask you if you will be patient and persevere in spite of all difficulties, in spite even of rudeness and insult—will you persevere, for my sake, for my father's sake, for the honor of the Neslies?"

"I promise," replied Gerald. "Thank you," she said simply; "you are a faithful friend." And those few words more than repaid him for all that he had done.

It was in the gray light of a February afternoon that Valerie returned. She looked worn and slightly haggard, as though she had known but little rest either by night or by day. When she entered the house she seemed to bring confusion and disorder with her.

"Well, Vivien," was her greeting to Miss Neslie, "have you enjoyed your month's rule? You are hardly pleased to see me, I suppose? You are looking very well. I am dreadfully tired; there is no time for rest in the whirl of Paris."

Vivien was struck by an indefinable something about her, she could hardly tell what. Lady Neslie seemed to have deteriorated—she had the air and manner of one who has been in common society, and a tinge of vulgarity particularly noticeable when she was off her guard.

"And how is the boy?" she asked quickly—"my little Sir Oswald?"

"I have brought him all kinds of presents," said Lady Neslie, "but I have not brought anything for you, Vivien; I did not know what to buy—you have everything."

"Yes," she replied, cheerfully, "I have everything that I want." She felt pleased that Valerie had thought of her.

She was present when Valerie and her son met. Miladi's quick eyes seemed to read him.

"He looks well," she said. "Have you missed me much, Oswald?"

"Yes," he answered. "But, mamma," he continued, pointing to Vivien, "she is not wicked—she does not want Lancewood; she says she hopes

I shall have it if I am a good man."
"You are a good boy," said Valerie. The child shook his head.

"No, I am not. I know the difference now between good and bad. She is good"—he nodded at Vivien—"and so is Mr. Dorman; but I am not, and, mamma," he added, fearlessly, "I do not think you are."

Lady Neslie was not angry; she merely laughed.

"Why am I not good?" she asked. "You never say your prayers, and you laugh at things."

"My dear child, to complete all, you should have your hair cut close, and a broad-brimmed hat; you are quite a Puritan."

"I say prayers," he continued, with an air of patronage; "and I do not tell lies—Mr. Dorman says they are cowardly."

"You do not seem inclined to hide your light under a bushel," said Miladi, with another laugh. "You have been learning at a fine rate."

Vivien almost trembled for the result, but Lady Neslie seemed more amused than anything else.

She had been at home two or three days before she found out about the lessons, and during that time they noticed a great difference in her. She was restless, uneasy, having always an air of subdued excitement. She held long conferences with her maid; she fell into long, deep reveries. She had a fashion of walking from one room to another, of taking up books and putting them down, of going to the piano and leaving it, of sitting with knitted brows, as though trying to solve a problem. Evidently there was some new interest excited within her. Vivien wondered much what it was.

On the fourth day after her return, one of her restless fits led her to the library, and there she found the boy with a flushed face bending over a book. Mr. Dorman was seated at the table with him, and Vivien, evidently greatly interested, was watching them.

"Try again," Mr. Dorman was saying, as Miladi entered—"try again. You will learn it perfectly next time."

Lady Valerie entered quietly. "What a domestic scene!" she said. "Pray, Mr. Dorman, what are you doing with Sir Oswald?"

"I am trying to teach him to read and to spell, Lady Neslie," he replied. "You are making him very ill," she said. "See how flushed his face is! He will have brain disease—brain fever. Put that book down, Oswald!"

Gerald remembered his promise about patience, perseverance and endurance. He looked at Vivien's noble beautiful face before he replied, and the sight of it seemed to encourage him.

"I assure you, Lady Neslie," he said, "that I am very careful of him. He has no headache; his face is only flushed with his eagerness to master his lesson."

But Lady Neslie did not look well pleased.

"I do not see why the boy need be troubled with so much learning," she said. "He will be master of Lancewood; he need not study like one who has to work for a living."

"The fact that he will hold so high a position," observed Mr. Dorman, "explains of itself the need for high education."

"And pray," inquired Lady Neslie, recovering her good humor, "who made you my son's tutor, Mr. Dorman?"

Vivien had purposely refrained from speaking, knowing that if she did the matter would probably assume an unpleasant aspect.

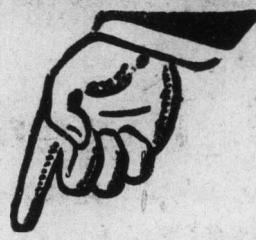

"Who made you my son's tutor?" Lady Neslie repeated. He answered: "I found that I had some little time—spare time—on my hands, Lady Neslie. I thought—pray pardon me if I am wrong—I could not better serve your interest than by devoting them to the child."

"Perhaps not," said Miladi, carelessly. "Do you think it would be advisable for the boy to have a tutor?"

Lessen Your Living Expenses!

"Be economical," is the cry in England, and this slogan has the same significance in Canada. We all must economize. There is more actual waste in our dress expenses than any other item. A saving of at least 35 per cent. in the expense of dressing is possible by using the processes of Dry Cleaning and Dyeing.

THE HOL

All the V

Germany's S

Measured by every possible standard, viewed in the light of all information from all sides, the second German offensive represents, second, conceivably the final, the Kaiser's hosts for a decisive favorable decision in the war, certainly not since that time, six months ago, when the great drive the Marne began, has there been such momentous crisis as is now hand.

By this time the world is well familiar with the German strategy August, 1914. France was to be moved from the Allied battle line one swift terrible, final blow would destroy the military power the Third Republic and leave many free to deal with Russia.

Now, over weeks and months, the German effort to save Austria, pushed with varying success. On whole, until May 1, with small success, in field, and shining success back of the line, in the reorganization and re-offering of the Hapsburg armies. Until Austrian armies were organized new German forces put in the field, the campaign, after one desperate effort culminating at Lodz, to the level of local operations.

But we know now that behind the local operations there was the idea of ending a war on both fronts by the complete destruction of the foe on one front. France, German high command conceded, could not be disposed of—there was left Russia. Russia could be disposed of the way time was in the war.

Little by little then German plans were made. Russia continued to advance, but Russian ammunition grew less and less. The ice blockade of the German blockade interrupted the inflow of supplies. At the last moment, before the spring came at Archangel and Vladivostok were ordered, Germany planned to strike.

Her blow was tremendous, instantly successful, continued from May to the end of June, and culminated in the swift reconquest of Galicia, the repulse of Russia to her own territory, the capture of hundreds of the sands of prisoners, the most brilliant success of the war.

But there was one limitation to the success. Russian military power was shaken, as was the French in August but it was not broken. Defeated, the Russian army escaped envelopment along the San and the Dnieper, and to this extent the great campaign failed. The failure was complete in this sense. For armies, not positions must be the objective, their destruction, the test of success in the present war.

German high command had, however, envisaged this failure. It had hoped to envelop the Russian army in Galicia between the army of Mackensen coming east from Cracow and the Austrian troops coming north over the Carpathians and west from Bukovina. Now it fell back upon a far more grandiose scheme, involving an enormous extent of territory requiring troops in numbers unknown in other wars.

Look at the map of Russia-Poland and it will be seen that it is pushed into Austro-German territory like a fist driven against a pillow. To us another figure, it is like a nut held within a cracker, one jaw of which is East Prussia, the other Galicia. And in the military sense Hindenburg is the upper, Mackensen the lower jaw.

All the World Over Germany's Supreme Effort.

(The 'Tribune,' New York.)

Measured by every possible standard, viewed in the light of all the information from all sides, the present German offensive represents the second, conceivably the final, bid of the Kaiser's hosts for a decision, a favorable decision in the war. Certainly not since that time, eleven months ago, when the great drive to the Marne began, has there been any such momentous crisis as is now at hand.

By this time the world is wholly familiar with the German strategy of August, 1914. France was to be removed from the Allied battle line by one swift terrible, final blow which would destroy the military power of the Third Republic and leave Germany free to deal with Russia.

But France was not destroyed. The blow was passed, and in the meantime Russian hosts poured into Austria, and the disaster that seemed to threaten France in August in no small degree overtook Austria in September. The grand scheme of German high command was thus thwarted. There was left the necessity to turn east with the western work unfinished and rescue Austria.

Now, over weeks and months the German effort to save Austria is pushed with varying success. On the whole, until May 1, with small success, in field, and shining success back of the line, in the reorganizing and re-officering of the Hapsburg forces. Until Austrian armies were reorganized, new German forces put in the field, the campaign after one desperate effort culminating at Lodz, fell to the level of local operations.

But we know now that behind these local operations there was the old idea of ending a war on both fronts by the complete destruction of the foe on one front. France, German high command conceded, could not be disposed of—there was left Russia. If Russia could be disposed of there was time to win the war.

Little by little German plans were made. Russia continued to advance, but Russian ammunition grew less and less. The ice blockade and the German blockade interrupted the inflow of supplies. At the last moment, before the spring came and Archangel and Vladivostok were opened, Germany planned to strike.

Her blow was tremendous, instantly successful, continued from May 1 to the end of June, and culminated in the swift reconquest of Galicia, the repulse of Russia to her own territory, the capture of hundreds of thousands of prisoners, the most brilliant success of the war.

But there was one limitation to the success. Russian military power was shaken, as was the French in August, but it was not broken. Defeated, the Russian army escaped envelopment along the San and the Dniester, and to this extent the great campaign failed. The failure was complete in this sense. For armies, not position, must be the objective, their destruction, the test of success in the present war.

German high command had, however, envisaged this failure. It had hoped to envelop the Russian armies in Galicia between the army of MacKenzen coming east from Cracow and the Austrian troops coming north over the Carpathians and west from Bukovina. Now it fell back upon a far more grandiose scheme, involving an enormous extent of territory and requiring troops in numbers unknown in other wars.

Look at the map of Russia-Poland and it will be seen that it is pushed into Austro-German territory like a fist driven against a pillow. To use another figure, it is like a nut held within a cracker, one jaw of which is East Prussia, the other Galicia. And in the military sense Hindenburg is the upper, MacKenzen the lower jaw.

To-day the whole of the gigantic

German conception is comprehended in an effort to bring these jaws together, crushing all of Russia's military forces. Successful, the plan will practically destroy Russian military power. All the Russian troops west of the Bug defending Warsaw, holding the railways to Moscow, Petrograd and Kiev will be pounded to nothing, or captured. A Tannenberg ten and twenty fold increased will be the result.

For the Russians the problem is simple. They must defend, hold on to Warsaw to the last possible moment. Its loss will be a great and permanent injury, but it is even more essential that they should bring their armies out alive. Think always of these two jaws of the nut-cracker closing on Russian military forces in the eastern field and the main circumstance of the new operation is simplified.

If Germany can envelop the Russians, if she can crush their main armies and send their fragments behind the Bug, she will then be free to send most of the victorious army to the west against France and England, to the south against Italy, or she can detach an expedition to "hack its way" through Serbia and open a road to the Danubies. The fate of Constantinople will be settled along the Vistula.

And if Germany can do this, what hope will remain to France or England of ultimate victory, since now with all the German masses in the front of them they cannot move, or at most can only move by inches and feel? When Hindenburg and MacKenzen come west, what chance will be left to free Belgium, to liberate Northern France? Bear in mind this is the German view, this is what the German expects. This is why Germany is more confident than ever since the Marne.

On the other hand, if the Grand Duke is able to escape the jaws of the cracker, if his army eludes the destruction as Joffre's did last August, if he gets his main force safely behind the Bug, then the Germans will have won a considerable advantage, but the hope of a real decision will have been shattered.

Once behind the Bug the Russians will be beyond the peril of envelopment. The very vastness of Russian territory will preclude successful German operations.

There remains the possibility that the Russians will succeed in holding Warsaw. No one should minimize the value of this fortress with the command it possesses of the Vistula bridges. Russian retreat and a successful defence of Constantinople may add a year to the length of the war. But it is only a complete Russian disaster that can satisfy German necessities.

To the whole world audience it must be plain that a supreme crisis in a world war passing all the bounds of recorded history in its magnitude is now at hand. The Slav and the Teuton are at grips in a conflict which may shape all human history hereafter. And it is well to remember the Germans expect to win, and on this prospective victory are building their hopes of early peace and peace based on complete success.

Salvation Army's Jubilee.

About the World-Wide Organization which Celebrates its Jubilee this Month.

Fifty years ago there was no Salvation Army. General Booth had not been heard of by the world at large. To-day in fifteen hundred cities, towns and villages throughout the United Kingdom, a couple of million people listen to the "Gospel according to headquarters" being sung and preached by something over a hundred thousand Salvation Army workers.

The late General Booth founded the Salvation Army fifty years ago this month. Its birthplace was an old tent in Whitechapel. On the Sunday morning the tent was blown down. There was no money to buy another one, and meetings were held in turn in such places as an old dancing room, a rag store, a tumble-down hall, a covered alley attached to a drinking saloon, a few discarded chapels, and in penny theatres.

At last a drinking den called the "Eastern Star" was burnt out. The Salvation Army re-built and fitted it and established a centre. It was succeeded by the Army headquarters in Whitechapel road, which cost £2,500, and established the General's footing in the world. Now the headquarters are in Queen Victoria Street and behind one of a small town inhabited by people who never cease work.

In the early days practically everybody opposed the Salvation Army. Hooligans subjected its members to extreme violence. In one year 669 of the Army's officers and soldiers, 251 of them women and twenty-three of them children under fifteen, were brutally assaulted while marching through the streets singing.

For leading meetings, which was an offence against the law as it then stood, eighty-six members, of whom fifteen were women, went to prison. On one occasion 30,000 people gathered at a railway station to welcome an officer on his release.

A rough estimate places the total membership of the Army at 250,000. Its operations extend all over the world. When its International Congress was held in London only one, thirty-four tongues were spoken. The Japanese representatives had a journey of forty days to get here, and the seventy Australians a still longer one.

The 2,100 delegates included an ex-devil dancer and an ex-prostitute, and no better evidence of the cosmopolitan character of the Salvation Army than these facts could be needed.

THE CORRECTIVE BORE

"Pardon me if I correct you," says the cultured critic-gink, "but I often-times detect you putting grammar on the blink. I'd by Murray's rules shushing, is, m-thinks, of crimes the worst, for our language grows confusing when presented hind end first." Often when I tell a story which I think should make a hit, some pale purist, grim and hoary, comes along and throws a fit. "You should certainly be swatted," says he, and his voice is chill, "for in manner most besotted, you're confusing 'shall' and 'will'." Then the yarn that I was telling seems no longer good to me, and I sneak off to my dwelling, there to hide my misery. There are bores who're always seeking for a chance to set you right, and they but in when you're speaking with a criminal delight, and they do a lot of yelling when you write, with patient toil, showing that your style of spelling doesn't follow rules of Hoyle. And these bores are always hated with a hatred deep and wide, and the people are elated when the news comes that they've died.

MILNARD'S LINIMENT CURES DISTEMPER.

Sea Impotence Spells Disaster.

No military triumphs that the Teutonic Allies have gained in one year of war can compensate them for the loss of the command of the sea. These triumphs have been many, for they were prepared for the conflict, while the other Powers were not. If peace were signed to-morrow, leaving everything in statu quo, the territorial gains of Germany, at least, would be as the Public Ledger has already pointed out, very great indeed. But against this fact must be set a consideration of untold consequence.

The German fleet is as if it did not exist. Its submarines have sunk merchant ships and murdered non-combatants; but the military effect of their successes is nil. Its battleships remain in port. The few that were footloose have been captured or sunk. The German flag has been driven from the ocean. A rich commerce has been destroyed. Moreover, German methods of warfare have aroused bitter indignation and resentment all over the world. If every German merchantman were now released, it would take years to regain what has been lost.

It is quite likely that Germany has now reached the full extent of her achievements on land, that hereafter she will wage a losing fight. But however this may be, her impotence at sea spells disaster. In her boundless scorn, her overweening ambition, she has thrown a pearl away richer than all her trifle.

THOUGHT HE WAS AFTER A JOB.

Sir Thomas Lipton, whose good work for stricken Serbia is still bringing him unstinted praise from all quarters, is, in spite of his great wealth, a man of very simple tastes. Especially simple is he in the matter of dress, a fact which was once responsible for a very amusing incident.

Some years ago he advertised for a number of new assistants for his business, and he decided to interview them all himself. On a certain morning, therefore, he arrived early at his office to find a long queue of applicants waiting outside.

"Ha, ha!" chuckled, says Sir Thomas when he tells the story, "as I pushed my way to the door, I found strong men all of them! Just the fellows for—"

"Blast!" I was hurled across the pavement hit a lamp-post, and found myself in the gutter, and then a deep voice said:

"What's your little game, eh? You just line up behind and take your turn with the rest of us!"

SENIOR FERRERO ESTIMATES THE KAISER IN HISTORY.

Historian Predicts Execration Through Centuries of William II, and His Chiefs. Milan, Aug. 6.—Guglielmo Ferrero, the Italian historian, examining in the Secolo the first year of the war, says that it is "the greatest tragedy ever experienced by one generation." He attributes it to insensate pride helped by the weakness of governments; by the powerlessness of parties; by the lightness of public opinion and by the fatuity of the intellectual classes.

"Of the council of Generals, which presided over by Emperor William, decreed at Potsdam a universal war for the avenging of July 29," he says, "will rest implacable execration throughout the centuries and condemnation in history." Those who within an hour took the most important decision recorded in history were able to do so because "the mind of the public" the sense of proportion had been extinguished.

Sig. Ferrero thinks that after the catastrophe it will be impossible to reconstruct new order unless "our generation adopts virtues so far neglected: namely, those of humility, firmness, simplicity and a reasonable judgment of life and things."

GAS LIGHTING is best for the eyes and the pocket.

THE PERFECTION GAS IRON is a recent addition to labour, time, and money saving appliances. This Nickel-plated Gas Iron may be had complete with stand and a length of metallic tubing for the small sum of $3.00, and should be in every household.

With the "PERFECTION GAS IRON" a whole day's ironing may be done at a cost of five cents, give better results, and do more work in half the usual time. It is always hot and ready, clean and smooth. Cannibal Fish.

The cannibal fish, or man-eating fish, is on the rampage again in South America and has just bitten off a finger from the right hand of Dr. Emilio Sneathie, the woman director of zoology of the Goeldi Museum, Para. Members of Col. Roosevelt's South American expedition passed through Para. While there they visited the Goeldi Museum and saw a collection of Amazonian fauna formed by Dr. Sneathie. Soon after the departure of Col. Roosevelt and his party Dr. Sneathie started out on an expedition to the unexplored country of the upper Xingu. She was absent about seven months. Within a month after leaving Para, she says, she was attacked by a piranha, a small man-eating fish of South America, which took off at one bite the middle finger of her right hand. Col. Roosevelt described this fish in a lecture before the members of the American Museum of Natural History last December. He told of a boy who went in swimming and was attacked in mid-stream. Before relief could be sent to him the boy was not only killed, but half eaten.—New York "Sun."

Escape Through a Cloud

"We were chasing him, two of us," said a French flying officer the other day, describing a Taube hunt. "It promised to be a fine run. Clear sky except for one great white cumulus cloud. Up and was on him we came. The gunner in the leading aeroplane of our two was just getting ready to open fire, when—bang into the cloud went the German. Disappeared utterly. Swallowed up like a pill.

"All right, we thought. 'He's got to come out some time.' So we began making great circles round the cloud. We went on waiting. I had begun to wonder: if the aeroplane hadn't been dissolved inside when suddenly my gunner by my side simply screamed with rage. Out of the cloud, below us, falling head downwards, shot the German plane for a thousand feet, and then, righting itself, went off at 100 miles an hour for the German lines. He had us fairly."

WEDNESDAY, Aug 11th, 1915.

Outlook Improving.

The outlook is decidedly more cheering. It is now apparent that the main objective of the Teutonic drive in the East has not been reached, German strategy has failed as it failed twelve months ago in France. The strategy of twelve months ago was to destroy the French Army. That failed. The strategy of the movement of the past month was to destroy the Russian armies. Germany now admits that this objective has not been attained and that the taking of Warsaw and the Polish salient is an indecisive event. The position therefore to-day is that the Teutons after their immense sacrifice of men have not accomplished either of the two tasks which they declared it was essential should both be accomplished before last Christmas, and all the time Britain is building up an immense army and manufacturing immense numbers of guns and enormous quantities of ammunition. The news too from the Dardanelles is encouraging. Fresh gains have been made and new landings effected. The most important of the new movements so far as has been disclosed is the great work being done in the mountainous region of Sari Bahr. This region is about 200 square miles in extent. The sea coast near it includes Beach Z and Brighton with Anzac Cove between. Two miles to the south is Gask Zeppe, where the Australians and New Zealanders made their famous landing, and where the neighbouring heights were consolidated strong positions. The present movement to the north of Sari Bahr is however of much greater importance, the highest crest raises it over 971 feet above the sea level and is double the height of all the hills intervening between it and the Narrows, which lie some five miles to the south east. The objective of this movement is to capture the Sari Bahr region and command the north part of Narrows and its forts from the north west, just as the objective about Kruthia is to capture Aché. Baba mountains with its peak of 700 feet which commands the south part of the Narrows to the north east. If it is true that the Turkish supply of munitions is falling and that Italy can spare an army to co-operate against Turkey, it will be a great incentive to the Balkan Powers to come in and give a speedy despatch to Turkey. But whether this comes about or not it is gratifying to learn of the improvement in the situation in the Peninsula.

To-day's Baseball.

The baseball match scheduled for to-day between the Shamrocks and Wanderers will be one of the most important games of the year, inasmuch as the team that loses will be out of the running for the pennant. The Wanderers have been strengthened since their last appearance and the Shamrocks will be reinforced by the addition of four or five Bell Island players. Game will start promptly at 3.30 and Messrs. Chesman and Montgomery will umpire. The umpiring, whilst Messrs. Outerbridge and Hiltz will supervise the scoring. The probable line-up is as follows:
Wanderers: King, Brown, pitchers; Ford, catcher; Hartnett, 1st base; Hoeken, 2nd base; Britt, 3rd base; McLeod, short stop; McCane, right field; McCrindle, centre field; Trannell, left field.

Stars Defeat Saints.

The Stars defeated the Saints in last evening's football game by a score of 4 goals to 2. Play was not very exciting in the first half but in the second round a good exhibition was given by both teams. Shortly after the game opened Munn, of the Saints, landed No. 1 goal for his team and a little later the Saints found the net a second time, through a penalty kick which was nicely placed by Foster. Following this the Stars put on a spurt and Kavanagh scored No. 1 goal for his team. Just before half time, the teams crossing the line with the score 2 to 1 in favor of the Saints. In the second half the Stars became more aggressive and shortly after the round opened, Hart, from a well placed corner kick sent in the equalizer. The game then became intense and both teams worked well. Kavanagh, of the Stars, played a particularly good game, and with one of the best shots seen for the season scored No. 3 goal for his team amid deafening applause. He also landed No. 4 goal for his team. The game was playing out of its usual position. When the final whistle sounded the score stood 4 to 2 in favor of the Stars, the Saints failing to find the net in the second half. Mr. W. Duggan acted as referee and the players were: Stars—Goal, Ewing; backs, Johnstone, Barnes, Foster, Munn, Crawford; forwards, Bastow, Alder, Eton, Ewing, Auchinleck. Saints—Goal, Phelan; backs, Walsh, Thompson; halves, Vinnicombe, Hart, Duggan; forwards, Morgan, Caul, Brien, Kavanagh, Bell.

Household Notes.

Salt in whitewash makes it stick. Dried rose leaves make a delightful pillow.

Always salt meat after cooking, not before. Flat irons should be kept in a dry place when not in use.

To remove stains from the hands, nothing is better than lemon juice. Do not buy bony or fat meat because it is cheaper. This is not economy.

Use a funnel in filling a hotwater bottle if you would save the rubber. Skin or leather gloves should always be mended with cotton thread as silk.

The best way to mend linen is to stretch it smoothly over an embroidery frame. A joint carves more economically if the bone is removed and a stuffing is substituted.

Two or three slices of lemon in a cup of hot tea is said to be a cure for sick headache.

Wrap cheese in a cloth moistened with vinegar if you would keep it moist and free from mold. Use milk instead of water for making pie crust which is to be served cold. It will keep crisp longer.

Lunch sets of large and small dolls are one of the best ways out of the tyranny of the tablecloth.

When iodine is spilled on sheets or clothing, simply soak the article twenty-four hours in cold water.

When washing real lace, let the final rinsing be in skim milk, if you would give it a soft, creamy tone.

When a ribbon is wrinkled dampen the wrinkled spot and wrap around a clean, lighted electric bulb.

Iron garments which have buttons by laying them face down on a thickly folded sheet or Turkish towel.

Meat hashes may be eked out if garnished freely with toast-sippets, boiled macaroni, rice or butter beans.

Do not use the best cuts of meat for stews and hashes. Shin of beef and neck of mutton are the best for these.

It helps greatly on ironing day to have two or three sizes of irons, including a tiny one to get into the gathers.

Total Casualties in War up to May 31st, 14,398,000.

NEW YORK, August 5.—A Paris cable to the Tribune this morning says:

The losses of Europe in the war up to May 31st, as compiled by the French Ministry of War, are as follows:—

Table with columns: Nations, Killed, Wounded, Prisoners, Total. Lists figures for France, England, Belgium, Russia, Germany, Austria, Turkey, and Totals.

This table was prepared for publication early in June, but was withheld because the French authorities feared the enormity of the figures might have a bad moral effect on the people.

372nd Day of the War

LONDON, Aug. 10.

The Governor, Newfoundland: Hostile airships visited the East Coast last night, causing some fires. The damage was immaterial, but one man, eight women and four children were killed and twelve persons injured. One Zeppelin, damaged by gunfire, was attacked by an aircraft while being towed to Ostend. It is now reported completely destroyed by explosion.

General Hamilton reports fighting at various parts of the Gallipoli Peninsula and substantial progress. East of the Krithia road two hundred yards were gained on a front of three hundred yards. Repeated counter attacks were repulsed with heavy loss. The whole-hearted co-operation of the French corps has proved the greatest assistance. In the Anzac zone a crest was occupied after fierce fighting. Elsewhere fresh landings have been successfully effected and considerable progress made. Over six hundred prisoners and ten machine guns have been captured.

Further progress has been made extending on a front of captured trenches to twelve hundred yards. About 125 prisoners and two machine guns were captured.

The French Government reports German attacks in Argonne and Vos-ges repulsed, also an air raid upon Saarbrücken.

The Russian Government reports violent enemy attacks on Kovno fortifications. On the Western front of Kovno the enemy was repulsed with enormous losses.

The German fleet with nine battleships and twelve cruisers attempted to break the mine barrier in the Gulf of Riga, but failed to force a passage and lost a cruiser, and two destroyers, damaged by mines.

BONAN LAW. AUSTRIANS LEAVE TWO THOUSAND DEAD. GENEVA, Aug. 11.

The appearance of the Italian front of Austrian troops released from the Russian campaign is announced by the Tribune in a despatch from Lathach, Austria. These number 20,000 which are equipped with artillery sufficient for two army corps.

They attacked the Italians yesterday outside of Gorizia. The Italians brought up additional artillery and after battle of fifteen hours, the despatch says, forced the Austrians to retreat into Gorizia, leaving 2,000 dead on the battlefield.

ALL ATTACKS REPULSED. PARIS, Aug. 10.

An official report of the Daily News says the tone of comment by Berlin newspapers on the fall of Warsaw has completely changed since the announcement of the German victory. The public are now reminded that the taking of the Polish capital is no decisive military event.

The Yossische Zeitung says the great stride nearer peace which still lies far distant is the capitulation of Warsaw, but no fortress has been captured.

Paris can be looked upon as the final object of the military operations. A new reign of peace can only flourish upon the ruin of the enemy's army in the field. The conquered Vistula line became the springboard for the attainment of this object. The moral effect upon the troops of these latest victories will help the advance upon the enemy, whose defeat is bloody battle alone will enable us to pluck the final fruits of victory. Just as the fall of Liege and Antwerp justified no one in thinking that the war against France had been won, we must not now deceive ourselves into thinking that the taking of Warsaw and even Izangrod is anything but the clearing away of the last of the chief obstacles, with which Russian army has surrounded itself.

M. P. WOUNDED. LONDON, Aug. 10.

Capt. Percy Clive, M. P., Herfortshire, Ross Division, is seriously wounded in Flanders by the explosion of German mines.

PURSUING TURKS. PETROGRAD, Aug. 10.

A communication concerning the Caucasus was made public by the War Office last night. It says in the Caucasus in the direction of the Dzhaphates our cavalry charged the Turks and sabred many of them and captured 8 officers and 200 men and a convoy of camels, a herd of cattle, a telegraphic station and munitions, arms and provisions. Our forces are pursuing the Turks without cessation.

GERMANS LOST SIXTY-FIVE THOUSAND MEN. GENEVA, Aug. 10.

A despatch to the Tribune from Innsbruck, Austria, says: In the recent fight along the section of the Eastern front running from Ties, River to Ostrov, N. E. of Warsaw, the Germans lost sixty-five thousand men in killed or wounded, but succeeded in capturing the principal fortified positions of the Russians in engagements in the vicinity of Novo Georgievsk. The despatch says, have been continuous for five days and the Germans have occupied the Northern portion of the defenses of the surrounded fortress.

North of the Lublin and Chelm railroads the battle continues to the advantage of the Austrians and Germans. In the region of Nova Alencaria on the Vistula, South of Izangrod, the Russians are offering a fierce resistance and inflicting heavy losses on their opponents.

AIR RAID ON EAST COAST. LONDON, Aug. 10.

A squadron of hostile airships visited the East Coast last night and this morning, between the hours of 8 a.m. and 12.30 a.m. Some fires were caused by the dropping of incendiary bombs, but these were quickly extinguished, and only immaterial damage was done. The night was extremely dark, and was obscured by thick fog which rendered night-flying by aeroplanes difficult. It is regretted that Flight Sub-Lieutenant L. Lord, who was one of the pilots sent up to engage the enemy, was killed when landing in the dark. The revised list of casualties resulting from this raid, as given out by the Official Press Bureau this evening, is killed one man, nine women, and four children; wounded, five men, seven women and two children.

SIR JOHN FRENCH'S REPORT. LONDON, Aug. 10.

Sir John French reports as follows: Northwest of Hooge, in the ruins of the village itself we have consolidated the ground gained yesterday, compelling one weak infantry attack during the night. Yesterday afternoon there was no infantry fighting. For some time the enemy made a series of violent artillery duels, as a result of which all the trenches in the open ground south of Hooge became untenable by our side. We have now slightly withdrawn the position of our line which lay south of the village. This makes no material difference to our position. The total number of prisoners captured by us yesterday was 150.

SIR IAN HAMILTON'S REPORT. LONDON, Aug. 10.

Sir Ian Hamilton reports that fighting at several points in the Gallipoli Peninsula has taken place during the last few days and substantial progress has been made. In the southern zone 200 yards on a front of 200 yards have been gained. The east Krithia road has been held in spite of determined counter attacks which have been repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy. Repeated attacks by Turks elsewhere in the peninsula have been repulsed. Several attacks by the French corps have been made. Their whole-hearted co-operation proved of the greatest assistance. In the Anzac zone a footing on the Chanak Bahr portion of Sari Bahr has been gained and the crest occupied after fierce fighting and successful storming of strongly held positions. Here, too, the enemy's losses have been considerable. The advance commenced at night under the cover of a searchlight from a destroyer. Fresh landings have been successfully effected and considerable progress made. Six hundred axes, two machine guns have been taken together with one Nordenflet, two bomb mortars, nine machine guns, a large number of bombs scattered about, with quantities of the enemy's rifles, ammunition and equipment.

BULGARIA STILL BARGAINING. PARIS, Aug. 10.

The correspondent at Saloniki of the Havas Agency telegraphed that the diplomatic representatives of France, Russia, Britain and Italy have delivered a joint communication to the Bulgarians, in which they view to the collaboration of that nation with the Allies as part of a common understanding with the Balkan States. This action is regarded as a junction with the presentation of a similar communication to Greece and Serbia, recently in progress. It is in response to Bulgaria's request of June 14th for information from the Quinque grande nations, the offering the advantages she might expect in exchange for active co-operation with them.

THE LONDON BULLET.

LONDON, To-day. The commencement of seven and greater efforts to force the Dardanelles and thus bring succor to the Russians who are still being hard pressed by Austro-Germans in Eastern Poland and Baltic province and at the same time influence the Balkan States, together with the Zepelin raid on the East coast of England, in which 14 persons were killed and 14 wounded were the features of the day's news. For some time the news from Dardanelles from the British standpoint has been more cheerful than that from the other side. Says German Agents Seek to Awe Banks

Providence Journal Reports an Effort to Stop Participation in Loans to the Allies.

Providence, R.I., July 30.—The Providence Journal says: "A movement to force American financial interests to stop all participation in war loans to the Allies is in process of organization among a group of German agents in New York. The Journal has secured the facts of this movement from one who has worked among the German agents since the inception of the scheme. The headquarters for the movement is on the thirteenth floor of the building at 15 Nassau Street, New York."

To-Day's Messages.

10.50 A.M. DESTROYED ZEPPELIN.

PARIS, To-day. A despatch of the Havas Agency from London, says a Zeppelin destroyed yesterday morning. The Zeppelin was first attacked by a British aviator, who according to information received here succeeded in seriously damaging the dirigible. Its destruction was effected by French aviators from Dunkirk.

THE LONDON BULLET.

LONDON, To-day. The commencement of seven and greater efforts to force the Dardanelles and thus bring succor to the Russians who are still being hard pressed by Austro-Germans in Eastern Poland and Baltic province and at the same time influence the Balkan States, together with the Zepelin raid on the East coast of England, in which 14 persons were killed and 14 wounded were the features of the day's news. For some time the news from Dardanelles from the British standpoint has been more cheerful than that from the other side. There have given out, the public has been allowed to learn that hope for the capture of Gallipoli has been revived. The Turkish Peninsula was brighter. The renewed attempt against Turkish positions which apparently is in full progress seems to have concentrated the attacks all being made at the tip of the Peninsula along Krithia Road where a gain of 200 yards has been made, and the attacks on Sari Bahr where an important crest has been occupied, according to General Sir Ian Hamilton.

Elsewhere, General Hamilton's report continues, that a fresh landing has been successfully effected and considerable progress made. Six hundred axes, two machine guns have been taken together with one Nordenflet, two bomb mortars, nine machine guns, a large number of bombs scattered about, with quantities of the enemy's rifles, ammunition and equipment.

The troops landed north of Aviburnu making a slight advance under the protection of the Anglo-French fleet, the statement adds.

A BERLIN STORY.

BERLIN, Aug. 10. The following news item was given out for publication to-day by the Overseas News Agency: After the army of Prince Louis was seriously occupied Warsaw, a proclamation was issued announcing that the Germans would preserve order and public peace, and would conduct war only against hostile armies not against peaceful citizens. The Prince, as a matter of precaution, was compelled to take as hostages, the heads of the civil administration, and some other prominent citizens. The inhabitants of the city may protect their lives by these hostages by informing the German military authorities of all hostile plans which might endanger the troops. These precautionary measures are taken to prevent the repetition of the unpleasant experiences in Louvain and Brussels.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

One of my friends who has three children and does a great deal of her own work in addition to caring for them, has just gone away for a vacation of two weeks. She has left the children at home with her husband and gone off by herself.

Now the husband in question is not hen-pecked—far from it. The suggestion for the vacation (which is his as well as hers) came from him.

She Dreaded Getting Ready

She has been very tired lately. When the first warm days came she almost broke down. Even the approach of the annual summer holiday which she has in the last few years spent with her husband and children at some hotel failed to rally her. She dreaded the task of getting everything ready. It all seemed quite insupportable in her tired, discouraged condition.

It was then that her husband interposed.

"You're going away and have a vacation all by yourself without a care in the world," he said. "I'm going to stay at home and get acquainted with my children. That will be a change for me and them. You can take the extra money and buy yourself some new clothes and go anywhere you choose."

Of course she offered many objections. He vetoed them all.

He Insisted She Go Alone

"You're going down-hill steadily," he said. "You've got to keep your strength. If we go with you, you'll spend a great deal of time keeping the children clean and tidy, especially if we go to some hotel. And then they'll be making demands on your vitality every minute of the day, just as children always do. No sir-ee, you're going alone, and that's all there is to it."

Somehow this plan appeals to me. Anyhow I'm going to watch its outcome with a great deal of interest. Perhaps I'll tell you more about it, later.

Only a Change in the Scene of Her Labors

What to many mothers is simply a change in the scene of their activities is too often looked upon as a vacation. Here's an instance where a mother is going to get what is actually a vacation.

Of course the fatal flaw in many instances would be the man's attitude toward it. Still, even in the husband's case, I don't believe that virtue will be its sole reward.

A rested, reinvigorated wife and mother returning from a real vacation that has accomplished all that a vacation should ought to help make a healthier, happier home atmosphere. And I think that will be the husband's reward.

A Flyless Town in California.

Now that we are more or less awake to the fact that the fly is a deadly insect and devising means of destroying it, municipalities may be interested to learn of the simple way in which Redlands, California, became, as it claims to be, "the only flyless town in the United States." The American journal "Every Week" states that the authorities in Redlands created the post of fly-catcher in 1912 and appointed A. E. Chapman to fill it.

"The office requires no assistants. Mr. Chapman attends personally to the Redlands flies. Nor does it require more scientific knowledge than a fly-catcher than is possessed by any housekeeper—viz., that flies instinctively fly upwards and toward the light. On this basis the fly-catcher constructed a large trap, a screened frame twelve inches square and over two feet high. This he raised two inches from the ground, inserting in the bottom a cone-shaped screen large end downwards. Under this cone he placed a banana skin. The whole contraption he nailed to a post on a street corner. The flies did the rest. In the first month, from one hundred traps scattered through the business section of Redlands, he had emptied and burned fifty gallons of flies—3,750,000 of them. There are now 500 of these fly-traps in Redlands, and, according to the natives, all the flies are in them." Mr. Chapman, it appears, estimates that there are 75,000 flies in a gallon.

Packers Charged With Fraud

By Sir F. E. Smith.
London, August 3.—Sir Samuel Evans, President of the British Prize Court, reserved judgment in the meat cargo cases when the hearing closed to-day with the conclusion of the summing up of the case for the Crown by Sir Frederick C. Smith, the Solicitor-General.

The case affects the disposal of the cargoes of the Norwegian steamships Alfred Nobel, Kim and Bjornstjerne Bjornsen and the Swedish steamer Fridland, consisting of farm produce, meat from the great American packing houses and lard, which have been detained by the British Government.

Sir Frederick claimed that the entire cargoes should be condemned on the ground that they had been intended for Germany; that the claimants had failed to prove their innocent intentions, and he alleged fraud on the part of packers.

The Solicitor-General pointed out that it was only by accident that the Crown was enabled to obtain a gleam of light through the interception of telegrams which had found their way into the hands of the British censors because the messages were obliged to traverse through this country.

There had been a vast system of communication, he said, which had not come within the reach of the censors, and he asserted that the claimants had persistently refused to produce any documents.

Americans As Fish Eaters.

Department of Commerce reports show that the annual consumption of fish per capita in the United States is about 20 pounds. This, says the Marine Journal, with our large inland territory, of course, means that a considerable proportion of our population eats more than that amount.

But we are not large fish eaters as such when it is known that this consumption is not quite half that of the inhabitants of Great Britain per capita, but it is much larger than that of most countries. Our total exports of all kinds of fish under normal conditions average about $11,900,000 a year, and the popularity of our salmon is evidenced by the fact that of this total canned salmon is valued at $7,000,000, fresh salmon at something over $1,500,000, dried, smoked, cured and pickled fish at $1,000,000 and shellfish at very nearly $1,000,000. The war has, of course, made some difference in the exports.

Special Power Fishing Boats.

The Japanese, who have practically monopolized the local fishing industry, and who supply the Vancouver market with fresh codfish, are accumulating a large fleet of gasoline power boats on the coast, many of which are equipped with expensive motors. These gasoline launches, which play an important part in getting the fish fresh to market, are largely built by Japanese boat builders at Steveston, B. C. These boats, ranging between 27 and 40 feet in length, are generally arranged with a small pilot house and cabin forward, in which the engine is installed. In the larger ones there is also a small cabin in the stern, with additional living quarters for the crew. A large part of the boat amidships is given up to fish wells, which are separated from the cabin and engine room by water-tight bulk-heads. The fish wells are in most cases kept flooded, the sea-water having a free circulation through openings in the hull of the boat below water line. The cod as soon as caught are placed in the water in these wells to be kept alive, while in separate compartments supplies of small perch are also kept alive to be used as bait for the cod.—Consul General R. E. Mansfield, Vancouver, B. C., Canada.

Deep Wells.

The deepest well in the world, says the United States Commerce Reports, is in upper Silesia, in the German empire. It is a diamond drill hole in a coal field and is 2,350 feet deep. A well in the United States which may go deeper, according to the United States Geological Survey, is four miles northwest of McDonald, Penn., and about fifteen miles west of Pittsburgh.

This well, which is being sunk to the Medina sandstone—a bed that elsewhere contains oil and gas—is now 7,174 feet deep. Some gas and oil were struck in the upper part of the well. Between the depths of 6,830 and 7,100 feet rocks bearing rock salt and salt water were encountered. These are regarded as of Salina age, the same as those carrying rock salt in western New York. The temperature in this well at the depth of 6,775 feet, as recently determined with great accuracy, is 145.8 degrees Fahrenheit.

At Derrick City, McKean County, Pennsylvania, near Bradford, there is a well 5,280 feet deep, which is probably the second deepest well in the United States. Another deep well is on Slaughter Creek, Kanawha County, West Virginia. It is 5,959 feet deep. It penetrates a sandstone at 5,030 feet, and from this depth to the bottom, a distance of 545 feet, the well is in limestone. Near West Elizabeth, Penn., there is another well, 5,575 feet beneath the surface, penetrating into a black shale. Another deep well is being drilled at Gaines, Penn. This has already reached a depth of 5,500 feet. Deep well drillers in this country, of course, employ the most improved and effective rigs, but one of the most remarkable wells, reaching a depth of 3,600 feet, was drilled for petroleum in western China by means of such crude appliances as a cable made of twisted strands of rattan.

What Warsaw Means.

Had Germany succeeded in disposing of France as she hoped in the first six weeks of the war, it is clear that the concentration of her masses in the east would have compelled the abandonment of Warsaw and the Polish salient very soon after. But she failed. On the other hand, had the French and English been able to hold German masses in the west, to neapace German possession of Belgium and Northern France so gravely as to make it impossible for Germany to divert her attention to the east, Warsaw would have been held, the Russians might have penetrated the Hungarian Plain; they certainly would not have lost Galicia. Not Russian failure, but the failure of the British to get their million on the field of Flanders, and the coincident failure to force the Dardanelles and thus open the way to munition Russia's masses last spring—these explain the fall of Warsaw and the success of German strategy.

But the extent of this success is wholly contingent on the degree to which Russian military power is permanently crippled. Losing Galicia was a severe blow to Austria, but was not fatal, and Galicia was presently won back. If Russian armies now escape there will simply be a change of advantage; the Teutonic allies will hold Poland, instead of Russia's holding Galicia. But both Russia and Austria realized at the outset of the war that these frontier provinces were pawns that might be lost, and made their plans with a full realization of their possibility.

What is essential to recall is that Germany has only now succeeded in doing what she hoped to do ten months ago, and that she has not disposed of her enemies in the west, which, as German high command saw it, was the first essential step, if there was to be a victory in the whole war. AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES — LELAND STANFORD, JR.

By GEORGE FITCH, Leland Stanford, Jr., University at Palo Alto, California, is the greatest memorial ever erected to a boy. When Leland Stanford, Jr., died, his heart-broken parents decided to make his memory permanent. To do so they founded Leland Stanford, Jr., University. By means of this great school the Stanfords who only had about $50,000,000 will be remembered long after the rest of the western millionaires have faded into shirt-sleeve descendants.

Leland Stanford, Jr., University started its career with more money than any other school in the world. It cost the Stanford family about $30,000,000 to build it and get it into commission. Its endowment is now $24,000,000. Only Harvard has more money and only Harvard, Yale and Chicago have had more advertising. This University is also unique, because of its buildings. They are mostly of old Spanish mission architecture arranged in courts and quadrangles and surrounded with semi-tropical plants. The University itself is as much a sight for the tourist as if it were located in Spain and is several hundred times as interesting to look at as Heidelberg, Edinburgh or many other famous seats of learning and tombs of architecture.

The most famous building on the Stanford campus is the memorial chapel with its vast mosaic and thrilling exhibit of the last breakfast. This building was badly, but not quite sufficiently, damaged in the great earthquake—Stanford being the only American University to have entertained a seismic disturbance produced by nature instead of by the students. Stanford University was founded in Important Change in Business.

In all lines of business, methods are changing, and modern efficiency is showing better ways of marketing goods. Most everybody is familiar with the famous Nyal's Family Remedies and Toilet Requisites; and has been accustomed to seeing them in every drug store you go into. Almost every home has its little assortment of Nyal's in the cupboard. The Company has made a far-reaching change in their plan of doing business, and in future the goods will be marketed only through selected drug store agents who are also shareholders in the Company.

This is in accord with the best business thought of the day—that with selected agents more intimately associated with the manufacturing company, better business practice will result and business be conducted more economically by eliminating as far as possible the expensive friction of ordinary business methods.

The Nyal Agency Drug Stores in St. John's, Nfld, hereafter will be as follows. No Drug Stores other than Nyal Agents will be allowed to handle Nyal goods. M. Connors, 360 Water Street. Dr. F. Stafford, Theatre Hill. McMurdo & Co., Military Rd. Stafford's Pharmacy, Duckworth Street. Peter O'Mara, 48 Water Street.

not the Confederate capital, was Grant's objective. Warsaw has no such importance as Richmond had, but otherwise the conditions, so far as Russia alone is concerned, are fairly analogous. The annihilation of the larger part of the Grand Duke's army may not mean Russian submission, but it means a long, long delay before the Russian offensive can begin again. —New York Tribune.

A New Use For Dogfish.

Dogfish are so numerous in Freeport, L. I., waters that they are cluttering up the fishermen's lines, according to the New York Herald. No use had been found for them until recently, when Roger Carman cut the two little horns off one of the fish and used them for needles on his phonograph. Mr. Carman says these dogfish horns reproduce the records perfectly, without any grating noise, and that there does not seem to be any wear out to them. Contrary to expectations there was no barking sound, no more than there would be a meowing if catfish horns were used. All the fishermen hereabouts are now saving the two little horns on each dogfish, with the expectation that there will be a big demand for them by phonograph users.

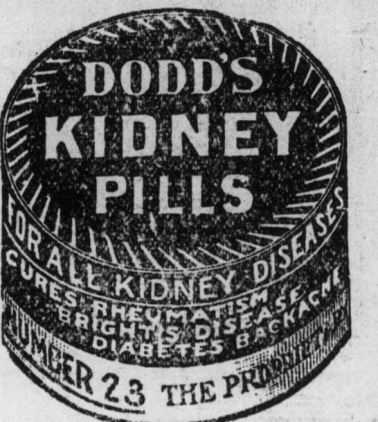

Prisoner in Germany.

In a recent Canadian exchange we notice the name of Richard Moulton, Epworth, when Roger Carman cut the horns off one of the fish and used them for needles on his phonograph. Mr. Carman says these dogfish horns reproduce the records perfectly, without any grating noise, and that there does not seem to be any wear out to them. Contrary to expectations there was no barking sound, no more than there would be a meowing if catfish horns were used. This great feature is produced by the Essanay Company. "Swedish," the Crescent comedy favourite appears in "She Landed a Big One." The Vitagraph Company presents "Sisters," a strong drama with Margaret Gibson and Myrtle Gonzales and there are two other fine comedies, making a big holiday picture programme. Mr. H. Collins, the Irish Tenor, who is drawing capacity houses at the Crescent every evening, sings to-day "Dear Isle of Dreams," a charming Alcott Irish ballad; don't miss hearing Mr. Collins sing this beautiful song to-day.

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY. An elaborate programme has been arranged for the Nickel Theatre to-day, and being a holiday everyone will want to go. The pictures are: "The Million Dollar Mystery," News Pictorial, showing views from the Russian Front; "A Flyer in Spring Water" and "The Noise of Bombs." Forbes Law Duguid will sing "For All Eternity." The evening performance will start at 7 o'clock sharp so that "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be shown three times. The whole programme is a good one and everyone should make an effort to see it.

BRITISH THEATRE. The standard of high class entertainment which is the well known policy of the "British" will continue to be worthily upheld by the splendid programme which will be given, commencing this afternoon and concluding to-morrow night. The super-plus-plays of remarkable interest have been selected including a two reel Kaleid masterpiece entitled: "The Fatal Portent." The great and deservedly popular mezzo-soprano, Madame Olive Timmons, will continue to please her many admirers with her sufficient voice. Her selections will be: "Less Than the Dust" and "Comin' Thro' the Rye." Needless to say these beautiful songs will be both faultlessly and artistically rendered. She appears at 3.30, 8.30 and 10 o'clock.

Fishery Report.

The following reports from the fishery are now posted at the Board of Trade rooms:— Aug. 7th. From J. F. Williams, (Bay Bulls to Long Point)—The total catch is 11740 qtls. with 1150 for last week. Twelve motor boats, 24 traps and 38 dories and skiffs are fishing. Prospects are good and there is enough caplin for bait. Owing to stormy weather practically nothing was done last week and several traps have been taken in. Aug. 7th. From W. Cunningham, (Cape John to Indian Burying Place)—Prospects are poor though there is plenty of caplin bait. Little or no fishing was done last week owing to stormy weather. The catch to date is 550 and for last week, 100. Aug. 7th. From I. Parsons, Bay Roberts to Juggler's Cove.—Ten traps are fishing and prospects are fairly good for them. Dogfish is scarce and last week nothing could be done by traps or hook and line on account of heavy wind and sea. The total catch is 602 qtls. with 15 for last week. Aug. 7th. From J. Gosse, (Spaniard's Bay to Upper Island Cove).—Some squid is obtainable for bait but prospects are looking bad. The catch to date is 75 qtls. and for last week 15. Very little was done with traps this week and nothing with hook and line. Some of the traps have been taken up for the season as the fishermen think they can do better with trawls. Aug. 7th. From T. McCarthy (Reynolds to Seal Cove)—The catch is 3550 qtls. and for last week 100. Eleven traps, 24 dories and 7 boats are fishing. Prospects are poor and there is no bait. The trap voyage is over and nearly all the traps were damaged by the heavy breeze of Tuesday and Wednesday. Prospects are poor for hook and line men.

Commissioner Richards will give a very interesting Lecture on "South Africa" in the S. A. Citadel, New Gower Street, on Wednesday, August 11th, at 8 p.m. Silver collection taken at the door.—aug10,21
