CHAPTER XV.
HAPPY HOLIDAYS.

"Haven't I?" assents Olive naively, unconscious of any significance in the comment. "They have rowed the distance so often, that I have got quite to know how long they will be before they return."

"So often, yes," says Katrine; "there are very few days but Lord Heatherdene does not call."

"He seems very interested in the theater," says Olive, still looking up the stream. "Weren't you very much surprised that he should buy it of Lord Hamilton when his father died?"

"Not very," replies Katrine laconically. "I don't see why Lord Hamilton should not have kept it."

"I suppose an earl has quite enough to do with his estates, and has no time to look after so troublesome a property as a theater," says Olive.

"Lord Heatherdene is only the son of an earl, but he has several estates; yet he finds time," says Katrine who seems determined to pick some fault in Lord Heatherdene's coat.

Olive smiles.

"Yes, it must consume a great deal of his time; at least you will admit that he does take a great interest in it, even a greater than did Lord Hamilton."

"Oh, he is interested enough," says Katrine. "He attends most of the rehearsals, doesn't he? He is generally lounging about when I am there, and I suppose he is when I am not."

"Yes, he is there very often; but I don't think he lounges, Katy."

"No, I forgot. An angel—and he is noble, of course—floats about, and soars. Yes, he is very fond of the theater—very," she adds significantly. "Did he happen to mention the reason which would compel him to give up the happiness of his company today?"

"He is coming to see you about the new comedy," says Olive.

"To see me; ah!" says Katrine, with a long breath, and a smile—"to see me and talk to somebody else."

"He must talk to some one," laughs Olive, "and if you, whom he wants to talk to, will not talk, he must needs talk to me, poor fellow!"

"Poor fellow!" echoes Katrine, then she puts her arm round Olive's neck and pinches the cheek farthest from her.

"Smooth glides the stream, but the rapids are not so far as one may think. Beware!"

Olive turns her face—red and pale again.

"There are no rapids for me, Katy, fear," she says softly. "Do not be afraid; or, if there be, I alone shall be wrecked by them."

"Do not be too sure of that!" says Katrine. "There—don't look like that, child!" she adds, with a tender, self-reproachful laugh. "Be happy while you may; I am a miserable moralist, only fit for checking butchers' bills, and I'll return to my proper avocation," and, with a parting pinch, she goes in again.

Olive stands looking at the stream, with eyes that have grown sad and wistful.

"Is there any truth in what she says?" she murmurs. "Am I drifting—drifting? No! Do I not know how impossible that I should dream of any such danger as she predicts. Is it wrong and harmful to be happy, to be glad when a friend so true and noble is near one? Why should I shun him and refuse his friendship? To do so would be to admit that I could be so lost to shame as to harbor something of the thoughts which Katy deems me capable of. Yet—she pauses and sighs—"perhaps she is right—I am too happy. I may forget that there is only one life for me—only one thing for me to live for—saving my dear Kitty—my art. Thank God, I have that! I have that!" she repeats.

So she stands looking at the stream and sauntering to and fro, and so bright is the morning, so joyous that trill of the lark, that the spirit will admit of no cloud. In a few minutes she has forgotten forebodings and forewarnings, and once more the song comes rippling from her lips.

Suddenly she stops; on her listening ear there comes the splash of oars; she springs to her feet and looks up the stream. Just turning the bend is a light boat pulled by a strong pair of arms, evidently, for it skims over the water like a swan, the sculls throwing out a silver stream of spray as the oarsman skillfully "feathers" them.

"How well he rows!" murmurs Olive. "He does everything well—and yet Katrine laughed when I said that he was clever. How happy John look in the stern. He never seems so happy as when he is with Lord Heatherdene."

"As if in corroboration of her thought, John's childlike laugh rang out, and he had evidently told Lord Charles that Olive was on the lawn, for the oarsman rested on his stroke, and turned to wave his hand. Olive waved hers in return, and the boat seemed to redouble its speed and skim like a swallow on the stream. Presently it came alongside the steps, and Olive sat still for a moment, taking in, with admiring sense, the beautiful picture presented in the graceful figure of the beautiful girl standing on the steps above him—standing, with her fresh young face, so full of thought and soul, tinged with a blush of welcome that made her eyes look brighter than they ever were; with her graceful, supple figure upright as a dart, in its close-fitting, yet easy, serviceable morning dress of warm, soft gray. She looked like an embodied poem of youth, and loveliness, and quick, sensitive intelligence. Was it any wonder that Lord Heatherdene's eyes—being the eyes of a man quick to appreciate and sympathize with the beautiful—should light up with pleasure and satisfaction at the welcome such a picture made for him.

"You are rather late this morning," says Olive.

"Yes—confounded train," says Lord Charles, stepping out of the boat, with his jacket over his arm. "The up safely, Jack; we shall want her this afternoon, I expect."

"What a lovely morning!" says Olive, as he comes up the steps with the light spring of youth and strength his arms bare to the elbows, and already tinged by the sun; his handsome face alight with careless happiness.

"Beautiful, isn't it?" he responds. "Never was so delighted to get out of town. I quite envy you your breakfast down here—"

"There is still luncheon," says Olive, with a laugh.

"I'm awfully glad of it!" he declares. "It seems to me that the mere sitting in a boat makes a man hungry. I haven't pulled a couple of miles, and yet I could eat a medium-sized bull. What have you got there—flowers?"

"Hyacinths, crocuses, and early jewels of the spring," says Olive. "Smell!" and she raises them slightly.

He bends down and sniffs at them as men do sniff—hard enough to blow them away.

"Ah! beautiful hyacinths. Can you spare one?"

"You shall have them all," says Olive; "there are plenty more of them."

"One will do," he says.

She takes one from the bunch and gives it to him quite naturally.

He fumbles at his buttonhole for some minutes, then asks her to fix it.

Olive hesitates a moment—scarcely so long—then, without a blush, and as naturally and composedly as if it were John's face, looking down at her—because it would be looking up—instead of the handsome face of Lord Charles Heatherdene, she fixes the flower in its place.

"Thanks," he says, with a long breath, as if he had been exercising some restraint for the last minute or two. "Thanks. And how is Miss Haldine this morning?"

"Quite well," says Olive. "She was here a few minutes ago; she is making up the bills."

Lord Heatherdene laughs.

"Lady Macbeth checking the grocer's book. How does your sister like the quiet life?"

"Sometimes I think that she likes it, and sometimes that she misses the theater."

"She has been accustomed to it for a longer time than you," he says, as if there were some pleasure to him in the thought.

"Yes," says Olive quietly.

Does he notice the sharp reserve that overhangs both of them; the heavy silence that tells their past?

They enter the drawing-room side by side, and Katrine looks up from her book with a grave smile.

"Hard at the accounts, Miss Haldine," laughs Lord Charles. "No use my offering to help you; never added a column of figures up correctly in my life—"

"How do you strike the theater accounts?" says Katrine quietly.

"Oh, they are all right," he says, with a little embarrassment.

"So you hope, and so do I," says Katrine. "Confess that you know no more about them than I do—no more!—not half so much."

"I know, thanks to you two, that the theater pays me the most enormous interest," says he. "I feel quite guilty when they tell me the amount of the takings."

"Hem! and much relieved of the feeling of guilt when they tell you—if they do—how much the expenses and outgoings are."

He laughs.

"I believe you are not perfectly happy outside of it," he says; "but don't let it worry you now. This is a holiday, you know."

"How are the new scenes getting on?"

"Oh, admirably. I should think they could be finished in a month—"

"A month!" exclaimed both the others in a breath. "Why, they were to have been a fortnight longer only."

"Yes, I know; but there is a great deal to do," he says, with a shadow of embarrassment, "and I thought we had better be on the safe side, and say a month."

"The season is just commencing; we ought to be in full swing now," says Katrine; then she looked at him, with a curious and rather troubled smile, and sat down at her desk again.

You Can't Find Any Dandruff, and Hair Stops Coming Out.

Save your hair! Make it thick, wavy, glossy, and beautiful at once.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy a first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment. A small trial bottle will double the beauty of your hair.

"Lord Heatherdene is very hungry, Katy," says Olive demurely.

"Give Lord Heatherdene some bread and cheese," retorts Katrine. "In the country one does as the country folk do."

"I could eat the fender—firebricks included," says Charlie, dropping down on a bench under the veranda just outside the door. "There's nothing like a pull at the sculls for an appetite. Hello! Jack, is that for me?" he exclaims, as John turns the corner with a huge tankard of bright October.

"Yes," says Jack; "and Addy has told them to bring in the luncheon; there's that raised pie you liked so much when you were here last. Addy made it—ah! ah!" and he chuckled.

"You should have seen her with Mary's apron on, and the flour on her nose."

"I should like to have done so, very much," murmured Lord Charles. John squats down on a mat at his feet.

"I can make pie crust—can you?"

"No, I can only eat it, Jack," says Lord Charles, putting his strong hand on the queer little figure, with a pitying tenderness. "I hope you didn't have a finger in this foreshadowed pie."

"No," says Jack, gravely; "she wouldn't let any one touch it. 'I'll make it myself, every bit of it,' she says, and she did; she burned her finger at the oven door, too. Did you ever burn your fingers?"

"Yes," responds Charlie, grimly adding, sotto voce: "It is not improbable that I'm burning them now, Jack!"

"Luncheon is on the table," says Olive, coming to the window.

"Come on Jack," says Charlie, "and let us take it off."

"I say," whispers Jack, with a slight frown, "don't say I told you about the pie, Lord Charles."

Charlie laughed, and they went in.

CHAPTER XVI.
THE UNKNOWN BARRIER.

OLIVE, with a pretty little blush, was doing the honors of the table, Katrine declaring that a biscuit and a glass of sherry was too poor an excuse for sitting on a hard chair at a hard table.

"I'll have it here, John, with my accounts."

"Will you have some pie, Lord Heatherdene?" asked Olive.

"Em, yes," says Charlie, eying it rather doubtfully. "Is—is it done?"

Olive is indignant for a moment, then cold, chilly doubt assails her. She examines it keenly.

"Yes," she says; "of course it is done."

But there is not much confidence in her tone.

"Well, I'll try a piece," says Lord Charles, with a sigh of resignation. "You said you liked 'raised pie,' said Olive, with angelic reproach.

"So I do, sometimes," he admits, a twinkle in his eye invisible to her. "This is not a bad pie—"

"Oh, don't you think so?" says Olive, flushing, with bright smiles chasing each other across her face. "Are you quite sure you like it?"

"It's the best pie I ever tasted—I'll have a piece more directly. 'Pon my word, you have a treasure of a cook."

Then Olive burst out triumphantly.

Terra Nova's Pride.

HER HARDY SEALER.
They sing of seamen's bravery in the days of ancient Greece
When Jason, in the Argo, sailed to seek the Golden Fleece;
And when the Scandinavians had sailed edgily o'er their fjords
With a hand upon a rudder and the other on their sword;
But we have humble fishermen who sail the frozen foe
As brave as ever Jason sailed the Argo long ago.

Undaunted by the dangers where the icebergs do abound,
Where the blinding blizzards rage and where they toll from dawn till twilight
In the cold and in the wet—
And in every hour of ancient Greece
The heroes of old Rome
I they reared no men more brave, I know,
Than those who we have at home.

May heaven watch you kindly and with luck your pathway weave,
With seek no empty titles nor no braid to bind your slender;
But no truer hearts are beating, nor no truer hearts are shown
In the breast of human nature than the hearts you claim your own;
With a cheery smile and handshakes to the ice you sally forth
To seek the precious whitecoats in the cold and stormy north.

The sweat of honest toilers now lies heavy on your brow;
A Winsor, Keen, or Barbour steers the sailing ship's stout prow,
And no terrors of the ocean can your valiant hearts subdue.
Oh, how would Terra Nova keep her head up without you?
For the strong and sturdy sealers is her stoutest prop, we know,
Men who tread the frozen ocean mid the blinding sleet and snow.

Oh! God bless them when they're ready for to cross the briny main,
And when they leave may heaven send them safely home again,
To their wives who truly love them and their little children dear;
They're the truest type of heroes and of men unknown to fear;
What would we do without them, men who brave and fearless stand
On the treacherous frozen ocean seeking treasures for our land.
JAMES MURPHY.
March 4th, 1918.

The Late Captain Scott.

Captain David A. Scott, of Halifax, who commanded the ill-fated steamer Acadia, which is now known to have foundered at sea, with all on board, was well known to Newfoundlanders. For many years he was captain of the s.s. Hildray, on the Halifax, Cape Breton and West Coast service. For several springs Captain Scott, in the Harlaw, made sealing voyages in the Gulf, sailing from Channel, with fair success. His many friends will regret his untimely end.

Personal.

Major R. H. James of the 7th Battalion Canadian Railway Troops, B.E.F., is now enjoying leave of absence somewhere in the South of France and writes his friends that he is feeling quite well and fit.

Mr. A. Moore, of the Telegram, received the pleasing intelligence on Saturday last that his mother, who had undergone a very serious operation in a private hospital at Hartford, Conn., U.S.A., was on the high road to recovery, having left the hospital. Her many friends will no doubt be pleased to hear this pleasing news.

More Care Needed.

Dear Sir,—I have noticed for some time past a lot of people writing and speaking about the cause of so much fish turning red—or to be more correct, turning pink—during the past season, and I have not seen any that my opinion have given the correct answer. I think the reason that the fish turned pink is that the fish is not dried. In my experience of Labrador cured fish (and that is forty years or more) if the fish is washed clean when split, and salted with from 16 to 18 lbs. of salt for each 100 quintals, and after laying in salt water for 3 to 4 weeks is then washed out and dried with at least three days, so that the moisture is dried out of the fish, you would have no pink fish. But salt of itself will not keep fish in warm weather, especially if the weather is damp and humid. A large quantity of the Labrador cured fish shipped last year, both from Labrador and Newfoundland, especially St. John's, was never dried at all, but simply taken from the waterhorse and shipped, and the best of it is not dried more than one day.

The writer was at a fishing station last summer, and the owner one morning filled his flakes with water-horses, picked it up and shipped it about noon, then filled his flakes again with another lot and shipped that the same evening. And many others never spread their fish at all but ship it direct from the water-horse. Yet knowing this, our Board of Trade is talking of importing an expert to tell them the cause of so much bad fish.

I do not blame the fishermen for shipping their fish without being dried, but I do blame the merchant for buying it, and that is where the whole trouble lies. So, gentlemen, see that you have your fish dried as your dealers dried it 30 years ago, and you will have no pink fish.

Yours truly,
S. BRADBURY.

Lemons Beautify! Make Quarter Pint of Lotion, Cheap

Here is told how to prepare an inexpensive lemon lotion which can be used to bring back to any skin the sweet freshness, softness, whiteness and beauty.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three whole quart pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold cream. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months.

Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan, and is the ideal skin softener, smoother and beautifier.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands, and see for yourself.

Captain and Ten Men

LOST ON S.S. ACADIEN ON NEW-FOUNDLAND COAST.

Halifax, Feb. 23.—A telegram from Burin, Newfoundland, yesterday afternoon to Capt. James A. Farquhar, read as follows: "Chief engineer, second mate, one sailor, one fireman of steamer Acadien, saved. Ten men, including Capt. D. A. Scott, lost."

The Herald yesterday announced the loss of this steamer, but it was hoped the captain and crew might all have been saved. The news that Capt. Scott and ten men have been lost will come as a hard blow to the friends of the crew.

Capt. Scott was born near Windsor. He first sailed as chief, officer with Capt. Farquhar on the steamer Harlaw, and on Capt. Farquhar's retirement he took command of the ship. Later he started in business in Halifax, which he conducted on Hollis Street, north of Duke. He was keenly interested in the "Masters' and Blazes' Society. Some two years ago, Capt. Scott gave an interesting address before the Rotary Club, describing his experiences on the Harlaw. He married a Boston lady, who died a few years ago. There are no children. The news was published some days since, that a brother of his, commanding a steamer, had died in a Brazilian port. A sister and a brother, the latter a dentist, reside in Windsor.

Sydney, Feb. 22.—That Capt. Campbell of Halifax, refused to retain command of the steamer Acadien, claiming she had insufficient power to force her way through the icefields of Louisburg was the statement made to the Canadian Press to-day by Z. W. Townsend, of the Dominion Coal Co.'s shipping office, Louisburg. As a result of this refusal, Capt. Campbell was relieved of his command and, Capt. Scott sent from Halifax to take charge of the Acadien, on what proved to be her last trip, the latest report received at Louisburg being to the effect that the captain and ten members of the crew have been lost.

Two Louisburg men were members of the ship's crew, Second Engineer Fred Levatte, nephew of Hon. H. C. Levatte, of the Legislative Council of Nova Scotia and Steward Harris, both of whom are reported safe.

The Acadien left Louisburg on Feb. 14th for St. Pierre, with a general cargo. She is reported to have broken down off the Nfld. coast, and was later taken in tow by another ship, but had to be abandoned. Those who left in the first boat set down from the steamer are reported safe, but the others are no doubt lost. It is understood that the Acadien was to have taken a cargo of fish overseas from St. Pierre.

The Acadien was owned by a French company, who were reported to have paid $150,000 for the vessel, which they purchased from Charles Briester and Son, Halifax, some time ago. She was formerly the Senlac and was burned in Sydney Harbor about a year ago and later taken to Halifax and rebuilt.

The Acadien was built at St. John in 1914, and was 1,011 gross and 615 net tons; she was 132 feet long, 33 feet in breadth and 16.1 feet in depth, being a wooden ship.

It was later reported to-night that a Chilean, who signed on with the steamer at Louisburg, has been picked up near Placentia Bay.—Hx. Herald.

In Loving Memory

OF PATRICK LYNCH WHO WAS LOST ON THE S.S. "FLORIZEL"

He is gone but not forgotten. In my mind he'll always be. Tho' I'll see his face no longer: Now he's sleeping in the sea.

Far beyond this world of changes, Far beyond this world of care; I shall find my missing loved one, In my heart for ever dear.

Tho' cast down we're not forsaken, Tho' afflicted, not alone; Thou didst give and Thou hast taken, Blessed Lord, Thy will be done.

'Tis mine to miss thee all my years, And tender memories of thee keep; Thine in the Lord to rest for aye, "His breath His beloved sleep." March 5, 1918. R. V.

Nfld. Scotch Cured Herring.

Newfoundland Scotch cured herring of the fall catch continues to sell in a firm market in New York, with most stocks received thus far during the season already sold out of first hands and prices holding at the original opening market. Sales since the arrival of the last cargo on the steamer Florizel have been largely in small lots, although some importers disposed of their entire holdings in advance of the arrival of the steamer or immediately after. The ruling price for good quality Scotch cured herring from this source is $28, while in some quarters there is a tendency to advance this price. From the other aspect, it is reported that sales have been made as low as $25 and $26, but there is no mention of the quality of the fish sold at these figures. The probability that future shipments will be smaller is growing, as severe winter weather and ice, grip Newfoundland. But most of the stocks of fall herring have been sold, and, of course, all that can be shipped to this market will come. But there is a quantity of herring still on the West Coast, which, it is understood, cannot be moved until well along in the coming spring, when the ice shall have disappeared. Some of the unerring factors in the herring trade in New York are selling futures still, and it is reported that new stocks to come on the next steamer have been sold to arrive at $29 and $30 per barrel.—N. Y. Fishing Gazette, Feb. 23.

DODD'S "KIDNEY PILLS CURED MRS. MERCREDI.

She Had Been Ill Two Years and Could Find No Cure. That's Why Her Husband Is Enthusiastic Over Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Fort Smith, Alberta, Mar. 4th.—(Special).—Among all the thousands of Canadians who praise Dodd's Kidney Pills for the good they have done, there is no more fervent admirer of the great kidney remedy than Isidore Mercredi, of this place.

"Yes, it always gives me pleasure to say a good word for Dodd's Kidney Pills," Mr. Mercredi says. "My wife was sick for two years. We could not find anything to restore her to health. Then we found a pamphlet telling of several persons who had been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"My wife used just two boxes of them and she is perfectly well, to the great surprise of all our neighbours. They can tell you the same thing. I cannot recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills enough."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the greatest of all remedies for weak, suffering women. They cure the kidneys. The kidneys are the root of nine-tenths of women's ills. Moreover, cured kidneys mean pure clear blood all over the body. That means good health everywhere.

Concrete Boats Built and Floated Bottom Up

Vessels of reinforced concrete are frequently constructed and launched upside down, says the March Popular Mechanics Magazine in an illustrated article. Such a system is employed commonly at Porsgrund, Norway, where many of the craft have been produced of late. By casting a boat in such a position the matter of controlling the density of the lower part of the hull is simplified. In subsequent launching the ship, advantage is taken of the compartments of the internal mold, which is left in place during the procedure. As the air escapes, the water rises through the central space and floods the upper side compartments, forming a column that in cross section is T-shaped. Since the lower side compartments remain dry, the ship gradually reaches a state of unstable equilibrium, for its center of gravity is higher than its center of buoyancy. Such a status prevails, ever so slight a list to one side or the other will cause the craft to turn on its longitudinal axis and right itself.

Two Things for Hoover.

By RUTH CAMERON.

"More things are wrought by prayer Than this world dreams of."

RUTH CAMERON

There is one man in this country whom from the bottom of my heart I pity. He is not a man who has lost his work by the war, nor has he suffered any terrible physical injury. Nor, so far as I know, has he had to give anyone he loves beat to be added to the cruel sacrifice of youth.

No, his name is Herbert Hoover and I pity him for having on his shoulders a task gigantic enough to bow Atlas to the ground.

I cannot tell you how often, when I have been talking with business men, I have heard it said, "Oh this man or that has gone on to Washington to see Hoover." Some regulation has been passed which has affected his business, and straightway off he rushes to put in a plea for his special case.

Listening Through Other Men's Ears. And Hoover must listen—or, even more difficult, listen through his deputies—and decide.

If the issues were blacks and whites it wouldn't be the easiest position in the world. But, oh, how far they are from being black and white! He makes a move to accomplish some good end and straightway a commission of business men appear at Washington and tell him how many hundreds of thousands of people that will bring misery to I Doubt if Solomon would like it.

Surely one day of this man's life might appall a Daniel come to Judgment, might make Solomon long for simple problems like that of the disputed baby.

This is what I have been thinking about Hoover's position for some months. And just yesterday I had my sense of difficulties confirmed. I met a woman who had been present at a dinner at which he spoke and had sat close to him.

The Chubby Faced Pictures. She told me that the pictures we see every day where, the chubby faced, placid looking being, are not the pictures of the present Hoover. "It is simply pitiful to see the way he has changed," she said. "His face is thin and haggard and two or three times the tears rose to his eyes. You see he has been there and he knows how fearful the need is, and he knows the inside of the situation in this country and it is terrible to him that he can't make people take things more seriously."

It seems to me that Hoover is doing what he can for the people of this country, and I think there are two things the people of this country ought to do for Hoover. One is to make every effort for conservation. The other is to add to whatever prayers they already make, a petition that God will give him superhuman wisdom. Never did man need it more.

Lost Her Deck Load.

The old sealing steamer Kite, which has often been a visitor to the Halifax waterfront, and purchased some time ago by the Gorton-Pew people, of Gloucester, after being re-topped, a new boiler and engine installed, at a cost of $30,000, is having troubles of her own since leaving the Ancient Colony. She is now at Shelburne, where repairs will likely be made before she can proceed on her way to Gloucester. She left St. John's on the 9th of the present month with a full cargo of fish for the big Gloucester firm, and on her deck she carried 150 barrels of herring worth at least $25 a barrel. When the Kite reached Shelburne she was leaking sixteen inches to the hour, and in the heavy gales that she encountered lost the entire deckload. Evening Mail, Halifax, Feb. 23, 1918.

LUELLA'S LIMIT.

On Thursday of the first week Luella Spooing went to the seventh semi-occasional ball of the Talcum Powder Miners' Association. The great ballroom, festooned with rock candy and tulle, was a blaze of red, yellow, blue, green, violet, pink and orange electric lights.

All the way home during the dollar and forty cent taxi ride, Luella was as gay as any lark and gayer than a good many, and five hours later she awoke and arose, perfectly refreshed, well and strong.

Thursday of the second week was the housemaid's monthly day off, and the sitting room needed dusting.

"Luella," said her mother—who usually called her by her first name when they were alone—"Luella, if you don't dust that sitting room I shall positively get your father to disinherit you!"

Luella piously laid down her violet covered copy of "Heart's Asunder, or All's Fair in Love but War," and dusted the sitting room. It took her twenty minutes at the rate of twelve motions a minute, during which she covered a distance of forty-nine feet, and at the end she collapsed, completely exhausted, and had hysterics on the piano stool, and her parents were obliged to send her to the mountains to recuperate.

Everyday Etiquette.

When at a dinner where finger bowls are used, how should I use them?" inquired George.

"Simply dip the tips of your fingers into the bowl and wipe them on your napkin. If necessary you may touch your lips also with a moistened finger and wipe them on your napkin," replied his sister.

A London Butcher Kills 100 Horses

A DAY FOR HUMAN FOOD.

The head of a London firm of butchers says that there were no hopes whatever of a better supply of meat. "The farmers have practically sold out" he said, "and the butchers, instead of obtaining 50 per cent. of the meat they had in October, are not likely to get 10 per cent. The shortage has become so serious that the authorities have asked me to start killing horses, and I am beginning this week with a hundred. Horse meat will, perhaps, not be very palatable to some of us, but it has to come."

THE DRAGGING WAR.

The war drags on, and Peace's no sign of break-down has shown; the world's war worn, the nations mourn, and countless hearts are aching. Death mows his swath in futile wrath, and never quits his labors; still roar the guns of blood drunk Huns still flash their swords and sabers. It rests with us to end the fuss; we are the ones appointed to furl the flags and queer the brags of Beelzebub's anti-ointed. Our boys will scrap until the map with Tawton fur is spotted; they soon will show the krant fed foe just how he should be swatted. And we old lads must raise the scads to help them in the tussle; our boys must fight for honor bright, and stay-at-home must hustle. We should be quick and proud to stick by every regulation, that is decreed, in time of need, to aid our battling nation. By shunning meat we help to beat the Prussian, they inform us; so let us shake the toothsome steak; a pound of mush will warm us. By saving coal we'll jar the soul of every Hun and Vandal; if we need heat let's warm our feet before a tallow candle. And he who sings while doing things to beat that butcher royal, who makes no ar at any chore, is doubly true and loyal. Some growl and grunt at every stunt, and balk at every duty; they would not sweat a hair, you bet, to whip the foeman Teuty.

Diabolical Ingenuity of the Huns.

Sir Arthur Yapp told a London audience an interesting story of misplaced German ingenuity:—"When our troops entered Peronne," he said, "a west country detachment was told off to a certain house for quarters. In one of the rooms was a German piano, the sight of which greatly elated a young scoldier, who approached it with the intention of playing it. He

ATTIRE FOR THE BUSINESS GIRL.

The business girl, while not in a position to affect the elaborate dress of her home hours, certainly may be fully as attractive in a different way if she is neat and chic in her costuming. There are two accessories the business girl should be very particular about, shoes and neckwear. If these items are right, a frock that is not exactly new and modish in line, will pass muster.

Nothing expresses hard luck, economy, failure, like a pair of run over, worn out shoes and success, prosperity and general well being are expressed by well kept footwear of good quality. It is well to have two or three pairs of shoes of the same sort, although it would be better to have one pair of a stouter character for stormy weather. For the clear weather boots there is no objection to patent leather, and this leather is more easily kept in condition than the dull calf which must be polished every day.

When boots are cleaned and polished and the doing of three pairs at once will save much valuable time, all loose buttons should be fastened, and new laces put in at the least sign of wear, for there is nothing more trying than a snapped boot lace when one is dressing in a hurry.

Fresh neckwear is best provided in sufficient quantity to last out the week so that the laundering may be attended to, all at one time. Use fresh neckwear for every day at the office, for even if the neckwear looks passable when one dresses in the morning, its freshness will not be likely to endure much beyond noon. There is a safe and sure rule about collars which men usually follow religiously and that is, if there is the slightest doubt as to whether or not a collar is soiled enough, discard it instantly.

Your Boys and Girls.

Amusement, like everything else in the world, has two sides. It can work for good or it can work for evil. It can lift up or it can hold back. True amusement is any innocent pleasure which employs, in a healthy way, the imagination, the heart or the brain and the affections of a child, so that something flows out of him in thought and action.

A thousand expensive toys will not give a child one tenth of the joy that will be his, if he is able to create in his brain and then make with his hands, some faulty little object, which will be to him, because of the gift of self, dearer almost than his life.

Inertia, once overcome by love, begins to throw out little feelers of growth and almost immediately the selfish child, before whom everything must be exploited, becomes a child of independent growth, willing and ready to give of himself that the world may be, through his sweetness and efforts, a better, happier place.

FERDINAND REFUSES PEACE OFFER.

LONDON, March 4. A Copenhagen despatch, under date of Sunday, says: Peace negotiations at Bucharest failed, King Ferdinand having refused the conditions laid down by the Central Powers. An Amsterdam despatch announces that Field Marshal Von Mackensen will deliver a rapid offensive against the remainder of unconquered Roumania if negotiations fail.

The following official statement was issued this afternoon: The artillery fighting was violent at times on the right bank of the Meuse and in the Woivre, in the regions of Demerve and Badenville. WAR EXHIBIT OPENED.

LONDON, Mar. 4. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—Sir John Cowans, Quartermaster General, opened the British Official War Photographs Exhibition in the Grafton Galleries to-day. There was a very large attendance. Lord Beaverbrook presided. Sir John Cowans in the course of his address remarked that no photographic exhibition was ever attempted on such a scale before. The impression of that amazing collection, he said, would be ineffaceable. Lord Beaverbrook said that the Canadians and Australians had already had their exhibitions and so successful was the Canadian exhibition in America that the British department of information was actually compelled to undertake a country propaganda, as the American people were beginning to believe that the whole war must be held by Canadians. This rally was greeted by great laughter and applause. Sir Geo. Perley, High Commissioner for Canada, welcomed the exhibition. It was high time, he declared, that a permanent record should be made of the war efforts of Great Britain.

HONORING THE LATE GEN. MAUDE

LONDON, March 4. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency)—In moving a grant of £25,000 sterling to lady Maude in the House of Commons to-day, Premier Lloyd-George said, the services the late General Maude had rendered the Empire in Mesopotamia were distinguished and far-reaching and paramount. In effect he had found British prestige at a very low ebb in the quarter of the globe where prestige counted very much. The Premier recalled the occupation of Gallipoli, the surrender at Kut, and the defence of the Suez Canal against an inferior Turkish army and said all this humiliation spread through every bazaar in the east, but fortunately before it ripened into irreparable mischief for the Empire, the genius of General Maude had changed and restored the situation.

SAYS SERBIA AND MONTENEGRO NEXT.

Leipzig, Mar. 4. The Neulate Niechrichten's Berlin correspondent says, negotiations with Serbia and Montenegro are a matter of a few weeks. Like Roumania they are out of the war and must sign peace.

THE ONLY WAY.

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 4. We will not be strictly a free people until 10,000 German propagandists in this state have been hanged to telegraph poles and shot full of holes. The statement was made to-day by Howard Heins, Federal Food Administrator for Pennsylvania, at a luncheon of food officials. Heins has just returned from a state speaking tour. He reports that activities of German agents in spreading stories that the Allies are eating all white bread, and that there is a surplus of wheat in Argentina.

Nerves of the Stomach

Were Weak and Inactive as Result of Nervous Prostration—Lost Twenty Pounds—Had to Take Sleeping Powders to Get Any Rest.

Many people never realize that the movement and action of every organ of the human body is dependent on the energy supplied by the nervous system. When the nervous system gets run down there is weakness throughout the entire body. You feel tired and languid and your stomach and other digestive organs are similarly affected. Appetite fails, digestion is poor, you do not get the good of what you eat and gradually grow weaker and weaker.

This process can only be stopped by such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which goes directly to create new nerve force and thereby to invigorate the whole human body. Mrs. Geo. S. Ellis, 46 Davidson street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "My husband had an attack of nervous prostration, and, although he doctored for some time and tried different other medicines, he could not get relief. He had to resort to sleeping powders given him by the doctor to make him sleep. The greater part of the trouble seemed to be with the nerves of his stomach. He began to lose weight, and kept on going down until he had lost twenty pounds. We had read advertisements in the newspapers for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and noticed that it seemed to be doing a lot of good for people troubled with nervousness, so my husband decided to try it. He found benefit almost from the start, and continued this treatment until he had taken about twelve or thirteen boxes. The results were most satisfactory. He is now enjoying good health, sleeps well, and has gained back nearly all the weight he had lost. He also uses Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally, and thinks them an excellent remedy. I have also used this latter medicine for dizzy spells and liver trouble, and was completely cured of these complaints. We think a great deal of Dr. Chase's medicines, and cannot speak too highly of them."

WOMAN SPY BILL PASSES.

WASHINGTON, March 4. The Woman Spy Bill, giving the President power to deal with unnaturalized women of hostile countries as it does with men, was passed to-day by the House. It would affect all women of 14 years or more, and now goes to the Senate.

GERMAN COMMENT ON BALFOUR'S SPEECH.

AMSTERDAM, March 4. The Frankfurter Zeitung, commenting on the recent speech of Mr. Balfour, the British Foreign Secretary, says the suspicion as to whether war shall continue or a preliminary discussion regarding the possibility of peace begin, depends to-day more on President Wilson than on the governments of the European Entente. The paper finds some parts of Balfour's speech deserving of consideration and regards its moderate tone as a welcome sign. It contends that the demand for evacuation of Belgium and separation in the case of that country should be accorded to if the Entente is able to force Germany out of Belgium. Balfour should know, it adds, that maximum concessions on both sides can only be reached by negotiations.

KEPT FULLY INFORMED.

LONDON, March 4. Replying to a question in the Commons to-day as to whether copies of all treaties, secret or public, and all other memoranda of other agreements to which Britain had become a party since August 4, 1914, had been communicated to President Wilson, Foreign Secretary Balfour said President Wilson is kept fully informed by the Allies.

BRITISH STEAMER TORPEDOED.

BOSTON, March 4. The British steamer Arrino, long in the Boston and St. Nazaire service, has been sunk by a German sub. while on a voyage without cargo to an American port, according to reports current in shipping circles to-day. The crew was saved. The Arrino was built at Glasgow in 1914 and registered 4,484 tons gross.

PASSENGER TRAIN FIRED ON.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Mar. 4. An attack by revolutionaries on a passenger train in which four persons were killed and 12 injured, one an American, an incident of the anti-Government outbreak in Costa Rica last month, was related by passengers arriving here to-day aboard a steamer from South American ports. They were among those aboard the raided train. The American was shot in the eye during the attack and is now in hospital at Port Limon. The passengers said everyone crouched beneath the seats of the coaches when the first shot was fired and this prevented a greater loss of life from the 500 or 600 bullets discharged into the train.

NOW A CRIME.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 4. A bill making it a crime to wilfully make or convey false reports of statements to obstruct the Government's sale of bonds or securities or loans to the United States, was passed to-day by the House. It waits action by the Senate.

REVOLUTIONISTS ARRESTED.

ZAM-BUK IS NATURE'S REMEDY

The healthiest men and women in the world are found in the uncivilized races, knowing nothing of medical science. Why? Because these people are content with nature's own "healers." They use roots and herbs, solely, for their skin diseases and injuries.

Recognizing this truth, the proprietors of Zam-Buk compounded their great balm on nature's lines. Zam-Buk contains only healing herbal essences, but instead of using them in crude form, in Zam-Buk these essences are purified and concentrated.

Take Mother Nature's finest healing extracts. Add all this modern science can do in the way of concentrating, purifying and making antiseptic these essences, and the result is Zam-Buk.

Don't you believe that roots and herbs are the leaders intended for man? If you do, you get them in Zam-Buk.

Don't you believe that antiseptic treatment of a wound or sore is necessary? Zam-Buk is essential.

Don't you desire to stop the pain of a wound, cut or skin disease? Zam-Buk will do this as nothing else can.

Finally, don't you believe that personal experience is worth more than hearsay? If so, cut out this article. Write across it name of this paper and mail it to Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, with 1c. stamp and we will send you a FREE TRIAL BOX.
