Sweet Eva!

CHAPTER XX.

Philip himself drove Calligan to the station. He grumbled and growled the whole of the way down. He knew that something he had said was driving his friend from the Highway House.

"There's no earthly reason why you need go back to town," he said for the fiftieth time, as they neared the station.

"If you only knew how glad we are—all of us—to have you."

"It's very decent of you, old chap. I'll come again."

"Stay now—we can just get back in time for dinner."

For a moment Calligan was sorely tempted. He thought of the dining-room at the Highway House, with its long table and oak-paneled walls, and he thought of Eva sitting there in the shaded light in her black frock, and of his own vacant chair . . . but he shook his head vigorously.

"I can't. Thanks, all the same."

They were at the station now. Philip left the car, and the two men walked together on to the platform.

"And if you could get a few days' holiday," Calligan said diffidently as the train steamed in.

Philip laughed.

"Is it for my sake you're urging this—or Eva's?" he said.

Calligan's honest eyes met his squarely.

"Perhaps—for both," he said.

He got into the carriage and slammed the door. He let the window down with a run and looked out.

Now it had come to the point he hated going. He hated the memory of the sadness in Eva's eyes as she had said good-bye to him. He ventured a last admonishment as he gripped Philip's hand.

"Good-bye, old son, and—I say, buck up, you know. There's lots to live for yet."

Philip scowled. He had got into a habit of scowling lately.

"I know you think I'm a sweep," he began.

The train was moving swiftly now, a moment, and Calligan was carried beyond reach.

Philip drove home moodily; he was angry because his friend had gone, and angry because he knew that he had driven him away.

He dreaded the thought of the house without him, and now if his mother went away also, as she had talked of doing, it would mean that he and Eva were left entirely alone.

With each passing day life seemed more crudely impossible; with almost every hour young Winterdick realized more acutely that he could not continue to live as he had done during the past fortnight.

He drove home the longest way; he felt sorely tempted to stay out altogether; what was there to go home for? The old house was no longer what it had been; he missed his father bitterly; perhaps nobody had ever guessed what old Winterdick's death had meant to his son.

He came home through the village; as he passed the Arlingtons' house he made a family supply of cough remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known ready-made cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex, pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

saw Kitty standing there at the gate with Peter Dennison.

He glanced at them, raised his hat unsmilingly and passed.

The incident irritated him and set him brooding.

Did Kitty mean to marry that boy? It was not that Philip cared in the least whom she married, but he was still conscious of a sort of resentment in his heart against her.

If she had played the game and been what he thought her to be he would never have landed in this mess. As it was, he was miserable, the sunshine of life seemed to have been wiped clean out of the horizon on his wedding morning; he had lost interest in everything; even his beloved tennis had gone to the wall; only that morning he had looked at his racket and wondered why on earth he had ever been so keen on the rotten game; there was only one thing in all the world that mattered, and it was beyond his reach.

He left the car in the drive at the Highway House and went in.

A maid informed him that dinner had been ready some time, and that Mrs. Winterdick had not waited.

Philip was amazed; he looked at his watch and found it was past eight! Until then he had had no idea how the time had flown.

He went straight to the dining-room; his mother was there alone.

Philip stopped in the doorway; he had begun to apologise, but broke off.

"Where's Eva?" he asked, abruptly.

"She had a headache; she asked me to excuse her. I have sent something to her room."

Philip scowled.

"She was all right when Calligan left," he said, here was a rough, unformed suspicion in his mind; he moved towards the table. "You don't mind if I sit down as I am?"

"My dear, of course not."

Philip moved his place round so that he sat beside his mother. A servant brought soup, but she refused it.

"I don't want anything . . . Oh, very well"—as his mother protested.

"Give me a cut from the joint . . ."

The maid withdrew. Philip leaned back in his chair with a sigh; he looked round the silent room, and his eyes came back to his mother's face with a sort of pathetic tenderness.

"Different from what it used to be, eh?" he said, with an effort.

"Yes . . ." Mrs. Winterdick's face quivered; she raised her eyes for a moment to her husband's empty chair.

There was a little silence; then she said:

"Philip, do you remember the night you told me that you were going to be married?"

"Yes."

"Do you remember that I wanted you to break off your engagement? That I begged you—"

Philip interrupted:

"Mother—please stop. What's the use of going back to all that? I don't want to hear anything about it. I—"

he broke off as the servant re-entered. He only made a pretence of eating the dinner served to him; as soon as he could he rose to leave the room. Mrs. Winterdick followed him.

"Philip, I want to speak to you."

He hesitated; he knew so well what was coming, but he shrugged his shoulders and followed his mother to the drawing-room.

"Well—fire away," he said laconically.

He stood with his back to the empty fireplace, staring up at the ceiling.

Mrs. Winterdick crossed over to him and linked her arm in his.

"Once upon a time you used to tell me all your troubles, Phil," she said sadly.

He bit a lip; the arm beneath hers suddenly stiffened; then he bent and kissed her lightly.

keep up the wretched farce of pretence any longer; he broke out passionately:

"I thought you didn't know—I hoped you didn't . . . I've made a mess of everything . . . It's all I can expect, I suppose . . . She—Eva—she doesn't care a hang about me . . . that's the truth!"

"Not care! Phil!"

He laughed wretchedly.

"I suppose you think it's impossible for anyone not to care for me," he said bitterly. "They're not all like you, mother. She told me—on our wedding day as we drove away from the house that she didn't care—that she never had, that . . . oh, what's the use of going into it all? I deserve it—"

"But she looked so happy—every one remarked how happy she looked—oh, there must be some mistake! . . . Besides—why did she marry you if she didn't care?"

"Because I'm a Winterdick—for what it's worth."

"But . . . but . . . oh, I don't understand . . ."

Philip strode the length of the room and came back.

"Look here," he said suddenly. "We thought we were jolly clever, didn't we? We thought—you and I and the gunner—that we'd fixed things up so that nobody except ourselves and old Dennison would ever know about the . . . the bargain . . . Well—"

He passed a hand over his eyes. "She knows—too," he said.

"Eva! There was a tone of sharp distress in Mrs. Winterdick's voice.

"Oh, no, Phil! Oh, I hope not."

"Well, she does—she knew all along, and was just playing up to us . . . It's just been a case of 'When Greek meets Greek' . . ."

He drew a long breath. "So you see, the laugh went all on our side after all."

There was a long silence; Philip walked away to the window and stood staring out into the gathering darkness.

"Well," he said then, "haven't you anything to say? What are you thinking?"

"I'm thinking," Mrs. Winterdick said slowly, "how terrible it must all be—for her!"

He wheeled round.

"For—her?" Somehow it had never struck him in this light before; his thoughts and pity had hitherto been chiefly for himself.

"Why for her?" he asked again harshly. "She's all right—she knew what she was doing . . . after all—"

He laughed mirthlessly.

"Why is it any worse for her than it is for—me?"

"She's younger than you, Phil; she's little more than a child, and an unsophisticated child at that. Until they came to Apsley she'd never been about or seen anything of the world. If it's true that she married you, knowing what you say she did, I can only pity her; I can't blame her. Poor child! she didn't know who she was throwing away—she didn't realize that some day she might meet a man whom she would care for . . ."

Her voice quivered and she stopped a moment, only to go on brokenly: "Oh, Phil, I always thought that she did love you! I haven't seen you together a great deal, but I watched her, and I was sure she cared—so sure! It made me happier to think that she did. I tried to think that in time you would get to love her too, and then . . ."

Philip laughed dryly.

Critical Condition of His Holiness The Pope.

Last Words to His Cardinals-- New Political Organization in Britain--Military Evacuation of Ireland Begun.

MIGHT LIVE THROUGH NIGHT. LONDON, Jan. 20. Pope Benedict could hardly be expected to weather the crisis of his illness though he might live through the night. Dr. Bignami stated to-night, according to an Exchange Telegraph report from Rome.

LIBERAL CONFERENCE. LONDON, Jan. 20. The annual Liberal Conference, attended by 7,700 delegates, to-day adopted a resolution that the National Liberal Council be formed. Premier Lloyd George was elected President, and Winston Spencer Churchill Vice-President.

WILL FIGHT REBELLIOUS UNIONISTS. LONDON, Jan. 20. Indications from to-day's Coalition Liberal Conference were that Lloyd George has decided to fight the rebellious Unionist wing of the coalition which has been trying to force him to restore the veto power of the House of Lords. His policy, however, will not be known until he addresses the Conference to-morrow.

EVACUATING IRELAND. DUBLIN, Jan. 20. Auxiliary police except two battalions have now left Ireland. Those who will leave to-morrow. To-day the evacuation of Ireland began in earnest. Ships are waiting at Dublin to convey troops which were scheduled to arrive by embarkation during the course of the day by seven special trains. Eight military airplanes with wireless operators left for England this morning.

READY TO THE TROOPS. DUBLIN, Jan. 20. A special order of the day issued by Sir Nevill McReady, military commander, to departing troops, says the Government wishes to express its appreciation of the services rendered while they formed part of the command and adds, "while I feel there is no desire on the part of the army to take up past animosities bitterness you have been called to perform duties in many respects repugnant to our traditions and devoid of all glamour, though in many ways a great strain and great individual danger. I honestly believe that other troops in the world could be carried through the work in which you have been engaged without loss of morals or prestige. You merge with your discipline unshakable, your conduct in the eyes of all the world, blameless. When history is written you will find that you have contributed no inconsiderable share towards what we hope may eventually prove settled peace and prosperity for Ireland."

WANT GOVERNMENT TO FIX PRICES. REGINA, Jan. 20. Declaring his firm belief in the principle of a national system for the marketing of the wheat crop of Canada and maintaining that in the re-establishment of the wheat board lies the only real solution for the problem which will confront the country in 1922, Hon. C. W. Hamilton, Saskatchewan, Minister of Agriculture, moved a resolution in the Legislature to-day urging the Dominion Government to take action which will prevent the slaughtering of prices of the products of the land.

IN ABYSSINIA. LONDON, Jan. 20. Discussing the allegations of two correspondents of the Westminster Gazette that slavery still existed in Abyssinia, Robert Skinner, United States Consul General, at London, who negotiated America's only treaty with Abyssinia through King Menelik, in 1903, told the Associated Press to-day that he did not take the correspondents' scandal seriously. Slavery there was an old institution which ran through out the social scale and in the last analysis all the people were own-

"HIS WILL BE DONE." ROME, Jan. 20. "It pleases the Lord that I shall go again for His Church I am glad. If He says it is enough, let His will be done." These were the words of Pope Benedict when the Cardinals withdrew from his chamber to-night.

MORE TROUBLE IN STORE. SHAMOKIN, Jan. 20. The local committee of the anti-miners' convention ask for a 10 per cent increase of wages which mining he suspended on each day if an agreement has not been reached.

THE STEFFANSSON CONTROVERSY. SEATTLE, Jan. 20. The controversy between Vilhjalmur Stefansson and members of his Canadian Arctic expedition was due to a clash between practical explorers and glass trained men, Harold Noise, member of the expedition said to-day, according to Noise the trouble began at the outset when the scientific members protested that the Karluk's water were not large enough, though Stefansson told them there were masses of fresh water to be found on the Arctic coast. Stefansson, having lost the support of the Arctic Ocean, in 1913, took to Anderson's ship Alaska at the starting point to obtain supplies and assistance for making a sled trip to the Beaufort Sea, the party there was not in his right mind on such a trip at that time of the year and held a conference to determine whether they should depose and detain him. Noise said, "Steffansson, however, brought pressure to bear and he finally obtained supplies. Steffansson left with one sled and two men, Ole Anderson and Storker Storkerson, and was gone eighteen months during which time he lived off the country."

FARMERS WANT PROVINCIAL BANK. CALGARY, Jan. 20. A resolution requesting the establishment under the auspices of the Alberta Government of a banking institution with a federal charter was debated by the United Farmers of Alberta, in convention to-day.

RUSSIAN OBJECTS. MOSCOW, Jan. 20. The Soviet Foreign Office has protested against the League of Nations' decision to investigate the Russo-Finnish-Karelian dispute, claiming it is an internal Russian affair.

MARRIED BUT NOT MARRIED. QUEBEC, Jan. 20. Because a law passed in the year 1829 providing that only clergymen who are British subjects may perform marriage ceremonies in the Province of Quebec was never amended, thousands of people in this Province who were married in good faith before clergymen are not legally wedded. Remedial legislation, it is understood will be put through the Legislature this season.

COMMERCE DIVIDEND. TORONTO, Jan. 20. The Canadian Bank of Commerce has declared a quarterly dividend of three per cent.

KING'S OPPONENT WITHDRAWS. OTTAWA, Jan. 20. Premier King to-day received word that his opponent in the North York bye-election, J. Armstrong, had withdrawn and that the Returning Officer had declared the Premier elected by acclamation. All members of the Cabinet have been returned by acclamation except Hon. Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, who has been unable to find a seat in his own province, Alberta, and is now on his way to Ottawa.

WANT GOVERNMENT TO FIX PRICES. REGINA, Jan. 20. Declaring his firm belief in the principle of a national system for the marketing of the wheat crop of Canada and maintaining that in the re-establishment of the wheat board lies the only real solution for the problem which will confront the country in 1922, Hon. STOLEN FRUITS.

"The stolen fruits are sweetest," remarked some ancient jay, and handed out the neatest of falsehoods. I should say. A cheap excuse he furnished for weak, dishonest men, whose morals are not burnished until they shine again. I sometimes swiped a melon when I was young and frail, and then felt like a felon who ought to be in jail. For days and days thereafter my heart was full of dread, stilling was my childish laughter, and trembling was my tread; I thought the cops were sprinting with zeal, upon my trail; each passing hour was hinting of fetters, law and jail. Old fashioned, stern endeavor of goods things in the chief, and stolen fruits forever bring sorrow to the thief. That saying utter both is, in which good faith is spurned; far better have two square meals that you have fairly earned, than wagon-loads of peaches like those of yonder cheat, who cheats and over-reaches, and earns his neighbors' hate.

Indigestion, Gas, or Bad Stomach Take "Diapepsin"

"Pape's Diapepsin" has proven itself the surest relief for Indigestion, Gases, Flatulence, Heartburn, Sourness, Fermentation or Stomach Distress caused by acidity. A few tablets give almost immediate stomach relief and shortly the stomach is corrected so as you can eat favorite foods without fear. Large case costs only few cents at drug store. The most attractive and appropriate styles I saw at the Rink last night were the WHITE WOOL SWEATERS worn by the LADIES as they glided so gracefully over the ice, making not only good effect under the electric light, but displayed good taste on the part of those who wore them for comfort and appearance. Digby Arrives. Sachem in Port.

HAD STORMY PASSAGE. The Purge Line S.S. Digby, F. W. M. D.S.O., Commander, with 40 passengers and freight, arrived morning after a wintry passage. The Liverpool on the night of the 19th had fine weather down to the 20th, but on the second day out entered heavy head seas and strong W. and N. gales, at some perching hurricane force, accompanied with snow, hail and sleet. Wednesday last was a particularly bad day. Tremendous seas boarded the ship and she had to heave to, and the crew made 87 miles for the day. The management of the Digby was left through without sustaining damage, but all were glad when she was reached. The following passengers landed at this port:—Mr. F. S. Stannard, Mr. C. W. Bergman, Mr. D. A. S. Law, Miss M. C. E. Law, C. Macpherson, Mr. J. Rutgeister, J. Schusterman, Mr. T. Smith, Mr. Stannard.

S.S. Sachem, Captain Hayes, 2 1/2 days from Halifax, arrived in port last night after a very stormy trip, head winds and heavy seas being encountered all through the passage. Owing to a strong gale last night, berthing the ship was made difficult. It was, however, accomplished without accident, an hour and a half after port was entered. The Sachem has a large cargo, nearly all of which is consigned to England. The following passengers arrived by the ship:—From Boston, Mass.—Miss Bertha Sandow, Mr. W. H. Parsons, Mr. L. A. Shannon. From Halifax, N.S.—Mr. A. R. Butler, Mrs. C. W. Bates, Master D. Bates, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Cliff, Miss D. E. Dunne, Mr. J. C. Demers, Mr. J. M. Forbes, Mr. H. Gregory, Mr. H. J. Marshall, Mr. J. T. A Community in Mourning.

TUESDAY'S TRAGEDY SHOCKED ALL CLASSES.
Special Evening Telegram.
BT JACQUEE, To-day.
St. Jacques is in deep mourning as a result of the drowning of Richard and Adela Burke, near the Island of St. Jacques, on Tuesday Jan. 17th, while on their way to visit their brother Adrian, the keeper of the light. No one knows how the sad accident occurred, but it is conjectured that they kept too near the shoal running off from the island, on which a heavy sea was running at the time, and which caused the dory to capsize. The news of the drowning of the two young people was a shock to the community, coming so soon after the festive season, and being as they were the life of the children's amusements, their countenances so expressive of innocence and happiness will be missed by young and old. The sympathetic ministrations of relatives and friends helped very much to alleviate the agony of the mother and family, besides the consolations of religion rendered by Very Rev. Dean Hawkins and Fr. Nolan, who also offered up the sacrifice of the Mass for their beloved ones. May they rest in peace. No search has yet been made for the bodies, owing to the stormy weather prevailing.—SYMPATHIZER.

Five games were played yesterday and all were won by the Masonic Club. In the afternoon W. Campbell (Masonic) defeated J. S. Currie (Masonic). The scores were: Currie 250, Campbell 182. The evening games saw some brilliant play. In the first game between E. Fox (Masonic) and F. Bradshaw (City), the former made 100 in 20 minutes. The game was the fastest yet played, lasting only 83 minutes, and ended with Fox 250, Bradshaw 148. The breaks were:—Bradshaw—12, 11, 11, 12, 10, 11. Fox—24, 17, 20, 15, 20, 12, 12, 20, 20.
In the next game, which was a very fast one, W. Pearce (Masonic) defeated G. Knowling (City) by 250 to 131. The breaks were:—Knowling—24, 11, 10, 10, 10, 10. Pearce—16, 14, 16, 12, 11, 10, 14, 10, 20, 23, 12, 13.
S. Thompson (Masonic) defeated H. Dickenson (City) in the third game. The scores were Thompson 250, Dickenson 186. The breaks were:—Dickenson—13, 29, 10, 16, 14. Thompson—20, 16, 10, 26, 13, 12.
The last game was between J. A. W. McNelly (City) and W. Rodger (Masonic), the latter winning by 250 to 213. The breaks were:—McNelly—10, 12, 13, 11, 13. Rodger—12, 12, 10, 20, 13.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

POPE BENEDICT RAPIDLY FAILING.
Oxygen Being Administered.

ROME, Jan. 21.
At eight fifteen o'clock this morning, Pope Benedict was still alive but rapidly failing. Cardinal Giorgi, Grand Penitentiary, and other Prelates entered the sick chamber at six o'clock. Cardinal Giorgi chanted prayers for the dying Pope, who was sinking rapidly at that hour. Since early this morning a crowd had been gathered before St. Peter's. According to the newspaper Messagero, the Pope was fully lucid at 2.30 o'clock this morning, when he said affectionately to Dr. Battistini, who was attending him, "What are you doing here at this hour? You are old, go and sleep." The newspaper Tempo says that the last clear words of the Pontiff were in the form of a request for a drink of water, of which he took but a few swallows. After 3.20 o'clock he began to mutter unintelligibly, and two more bottles of oxygen were taken to the sick chamber. Professor Cherubini found that pneumonia had attacked the left lung, leaving little hope for life.

LIKELY TO CAUSE TROUBLE.

DUBLIN, Jan. 20.
De Valera, at the coming meeting of the High Council of Sinn Fein, will move, it was learned to-day, that until international recognition of Ireland as an Independent Republic has been secured, the aim of that organization shall be the same as before, namely to secure that recognition. He will urge that Sinn Fein labor uphold the established Republic, of which Dail Eireann is the Govt. to maintain the unity and independence of Ireland, to preserve the individual character of Irish citizenship, and prevent its being merged in a common citizenship with the British people, as subjects of the British Crown, and to oppose the will of the British Parliament, or any other foreign parliament or authority, to legislate for Ireland, or hold sway in Ireland, by refusing allegiance to the British Crown.

DIE HARD TORIES.

LONDON, Jan. 20.
Indications from to-day's Coalition Liberal conference were that Lloyd George has decided to fight the rebellious Unionist wing of the Coalition, which has been trying to force him to restore the veto power of the House of Lords. His policy, however, will not be known until he addresses the conference to-morrow.

Our Local Pepys.

HIS DIARY.
January 20th.—I out to pay some debts which I did only by the greatest care with my accounts, and will have to forego my daily coils to make up for what I did pay. To the Railway Office, and there, meeting Mr. Pittman, we to talk of many things. So to the Board of Trade and to have discourse with Mr. Bowring of the Journal of my cousin Samuel Pepys, that did write about the Great Warr. In the afternoon, I to the Masonic Club, there to see the members play at billiards with the City Club, and the Masons win every game, almost. Sitting by Dr. Robinson, we to talk of billiards and how it is a most excellent game, but difficult to play well. By the public despatches I see how the Pope is very ill of a cold, and is like to die. Sir R. Squires arrived home from Halifax, and great happenings. I think, may follow his return. Hon. W. Warren tells me how if the Parliament meets to vote on the Itinerary project, it needs must close again being that no other business is ready. At night, to walk with my wife, and a bitter, cold, frosty night, and a strong wind. But Lord, how the woman does talk, and her discourse of naught but complaints of how well others are dressed, and what few clothes she has. At which, it came to my mind to remark how it does appear from what the women wear at dances in these days, but few clothes are needed. She greatly angered at this, and I near driven mad by her tongue, and promise her a new gown, nor would she else make her hold her peace.

The Pope Dead

LONDON, To-Day.
A Berlin dispatch to Reuter's Agency says word has been received there that Pope Benedict is dead.

The Four Power Treaty.

Senator Lodge it was who introduced the new four power treaty, concluded between United States, Great Britain, France and Japan at the fourth plenary session of the Arms Conference at Washington on December 10th of last year. The agreement pledged the four powers contracting, to respect each others insular possessions, to accept mediation in the event of disputes arising over these possessions, and to take concerted action if their rights in these island areas were threatened by any outside power. This compact on its ratification did away with the Anglo-Japanese Treaty, which automatically terminated. The present treaty however was subject to the signing of a separate agreement between United States and Japan concerning the Pacific mandate islands, especially that of Yap over which such a furor was raised by Japan. After Senator Lodge had made his speech of presentation, each of the heads of the respective delegations rose in turn and formally gave their approval. The Chinese delegate voiced his hope that a final nine power compact, including his country, would crown the work of the Conference. This nine power agreement has since materialised. Three days later the four power treaty was signed and its text made public officially.

The agreement reads as follows:

The United States of America, the British Empire, France and Japan, with a view to the preservation of the general peace and the maintenance of their rights in relation to their insular possessions and insular dominions in the region of the Pacific Ocean, have determined to conclude a treaty to this effect and have appointed as their plenipotentiaries (here follows list of delegates), who, having communicated their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed as follows:

Article 1.—The high contracting parties agree as between themselves to respect their rights in relation to their insular possessions and insular dominions in the region of the Pacific Ocean.

If there should develop between any of the high contracting parties a controversy arising out of any Pacific question and involving their said rights which is not satisfactorily settled by diplomacy and is likely to affect the harmonious accord now happily subsisting between them, they shall invite the other high contracting parties to a joint conference to which the whole subject will be referred for consideration and adjustment.

Article 2.—If the said rights are threatened by the aggressive action of any other power, the high contracting parties shall communicate with one another fully and frankly in order to arrive at an understanding as to the most efficient measures to be taken, jointly or separately, to meet the exigencies of the particular situation.

Article 3.—This treaty shall remain in force for ten years from the time it shall take effect, and after the expiration of said period it shall continue to be in force, subject to the rights of any of the high contracting parties to terminate it upon twelve months' notice.

Article 4.—This treaty shall be ratified as soon as possible in accordance with the constitutional methods of the high contracting parties, and shall take effect on the deposit of ratifications, which shall take place at Washington, and thereupon the agreement between Great Britain and Japan which was concluded at London on July 13, 1911, shall terminate.

The Government of the United States will transmit to all the signatory powers a certified copy of the process-verbal of the deposit of ratifications.

The present treaty, in French and in English, shall be deposited in the archives of the Government of the United States, and duly certified copies thereof will be transmitted by that Government to each of the signatory powers.

In faith whereof the above named plenipotentiaries have signed the present treaty.

Was He a Scotchman?

"A Scotchman" writes us asking if we had any knowledge of the nationality of the parents of Judge Forbes, the talented composer of "The Banks of Newfoundland." He also states that he knew a couple of old military families of that name residing in Leith, near Edinburgh. Probably the Judge's father was a Scotchman—as the name indicates—who had been in the service of the Crown at Bermuda, when the Judge was born.

Breaking Our Fish Markets.

COAKER AGENT UNDERSELLING COMPETITORS.

The Telegram was told to-day, on good authority that Mr. Murell, the agent of the Union Trading Company at Alicante, was offering coak fish shipped by his company, and due to arrive shortly, at 55c. to 55c. The market price at fish of the same quality is 65c. It was also reported to us that the firm of Lazo have offered 5000 casks of fish, shipped by the Karma, at 52c, although the market price is 65c. In both these cases there is a possibility of the condition of the fish not being so good as to command the full price. This is the only excuse that can possibly be advanced to explain what appears to be an attempt to break our shore fish markets in Spain. With the Lenten season approaching, the demand for shore fish should increase, and naturally the prices should also show an upward trend. Those shippers who have fish on hand, will now hold back their cargoes until conditions improve.

BISHOP'S Great Clearance Sale of Men's Overcoats, Suits, Wool Underwear, Caps, Raglans, Wool Gloves, Boots and Pyjamas starts now. With cold and stormy days now upon us these sweeping reductions are sure to be appreciated by every man in St. John's.

The Unemployment Situation.

INTERVIEWS LORD LEE. Sir Richard visited Washington, and meeting Lord Lee of Fareham, First Lord of the Admiralty, and a member of the British delegation to the Disarmament Conference, he availed of the opportunity of making him acquainted with the facts concerning the Briton. He discussed with Lord Lee, the question of the maintenance of the training station. Sir Richard also interviewed Senator McCumber who had been just appointed Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee in succession to Senator Boyes Penrose, who died recently. Sir Richard said that summer weather conditions prevailed in Washington, but that winter had Montreal in its grip. He could say nothing definite with respect to the opening of the Legislature.

Woman Heavily Fined.

A young woman was charged with obtaining money under false pretences. The Department of Justice consented to summary trial. The accused had only escaped trial in the Supreme Court through the leniency of the Crown, which had taken into consideration the circumstances surrounding the case. The accused had just been married to a returned and wounded soldier, and the offence had been committed on the day of her wedding. As it was a first offence, His Honour treated the case as leniently as possible and imposed a fine of $100 or three months imprisonment.

A Sensation on Water St.

This morning a sensation was caused on Water Street when a prominent society man was seen to slip and fall. He was conveyed to a drug store where he was restored to consciousness. A friend who accompanied him thought the slippery ice was the cause of his fall, but it was learned later that he had been eating very little the past few days as he wished to thoroughly enjoy the supper which he understood is to last for three hours at Burns' Night Celebration at the C. C. C. Hall on Wednesday next.

The Forgiving Husband.

DOMESTIC QUARREL AIRED IN COURT.

Husband and wife figured in a most amusing assault case heard before Judge Morris to-day. Both are well-known in Police Court circles, as their domestic quarrels have frequently been aired before an interested and amused audience. Plaintiff, the wife, said her husband followed her into a friend's house and when she went into a bedroom, "he walked the floor like a roaring lion." Defendant, according to witness, said that he would beat her up in a place where she could not get assistance, and then he would go to jail for the rest of his days. He later wrote her a letter asking her to come back and he would forgive all. She replied in the negative, saying that she would beat the world around before she went back with him. Accused denied the assault, and as there was no evidence to bear out the charge, the case was dismissed. His Honour advising the two principals to separate and keep away from one another in future.

Prince's Rink open to-day and Monday, afternoon and evening. Great sheet of ice and Bennett's Band in attendance, playing latest music, including selections from the "Quaker Girl."

Premier Returns.

CANNOT DISCUSS HUMBER PROJECT—NEGOTIATIONS WITH STEEL COMPANY—INTERVIEWED LORD LEE AND SENATOR McCUMBER.

"Shortly before I left town, a sub-committee of Council was appointed to consider my proposition, which might be submitted in connection with the development of the Humber area and to report later. I have not yet seen a copy of their report and consequently am not in a position to discuss the matter." Sir Richard Squires made the above statement to the Telegram to-day. In reply to a question concerning the Humber Project, which is the burning question of the day, Sir Richard returned by the "Sachem" last night from an extended visit to Canada and the United States.

MAY CLOSE DOWN MINES.

During the course of his absence Sir Richard visited Montreal and took up the matter of employment on Bell Island with the heads of the British Empire Steel Corporation. Sir Richard found that the Company had decided to close down absolutely, and the officials stated that they have over one million tons of ore mined which they can neither use nor sell. It was impossible to make satisfactory sales in the foreign markets. Negotiations are still pending. On his way home, Sir Richard again visited Montreal in connection with this matter and had a further conference with the British Empire Steel Company's representatives. He hopes that some arrangement may be possible.

Here and There.

There are four Ladies' Genuine Leather Coats at BISHOP'S selling at half price.

HEARING POSTPONED.—The hearing of the Road de Luxe case, which was to be continued before Judge Morris yesterday evening was postponed until Tuesday at 3.30 p.m.

KEENLY FELT.—Last night's frost was felt in many a home. Be prepared for to-night. Get a Foot Warmer at STEELE'S Crocker.

NINE BELOW.—Owing to very high wind the weather last night was uncomfortably cold. The thermometer registered 9 above zero of a degree more than the coldest night in December.

Clearing the Track.

After the storm of the past two days the street car service is again being put in working order. Only the north side track along Water Street is open for traffic so far. The belt line is not yet clear, but it is expected that it will be in running order to-morrow. The Reid Co. have a number of horses employed removing the snow from the south side of Water Street. The north side is not yet being cleared except where the Council's horses and men are removing the snow from the cross streets. The work of clearing up is progressing very slowly and teams have much difficulty in hauling loads. This is particularly noticeable in the East End near the Custom House. Here horses are using the sidewalk.

Coastal Boats.

GOVERNMENT.

HEROES OF THE SEA.—Miss Morris, Librarian at the House of Assembly, is reading a paper on "Heroes of the Sea" at to-day's meeting of the Current Events Club. The paper promises to be most interesting and a large attendance is expected.

How It Works Out.

COMMITTEE MAKES RECOMMENDATIONS TO GOVERNMENT.

It is not quite accurate that the Citizens' Unemployed Committee offered to take charge of the work in connection with the extension of the Southside Road. The Citizens' Committee has, however, made certain recommendations to the Government. The first of all, they suggest the appointment of a superintendent for relief work, a position which is now occupied by Mr. J. Davey. Under him there should be four competent men. These would be the East and West End Road Inspectors and two Municipal Inspectors. The men to be employed should be engaged through the Employment Bureau, and the superintendents in charge should be given absolute control in all cases.

A Worthy Action.

The action of Messrs. Ayre & Sons in finding employment for a number of men could be well emulated by other Water Street business firms. Messrs. Ayre & Sons, knowing of the acuteness of the labor situation, sent to the Employment Bureau yesterday morning and engaged some 10 men to shovel snow in front of their premises. The men worked all yesterday and were kept on the job to-day. As a result many families will get a much needed meal, and Messrs. Ayre & Sons' premises, both on the sidewalk and on the main street, are cleared better of snow than any other on Water Street.

Parade Rink open Monday afternoon and night. Empire Band in attendance.

The sale of Georgette and Crepe-de-Chene Blouses now on at BISHOP'S is the centre of attraction to-day. The prices are three dollars and twenty-five cents, three dollars and sixty, four dollars and forty-five, seven dollars, and the remainder of the more expensive ones are going quickly at half price.

FINED AND LECTURED.—A young man was charged before Judge Morris to-day with driving a horse from Water Street up Adelaide Street while passengers were transferring from the street cars. He was fined $5 and the Judge gave him a severe lecture.

Mail Delivery Delayed.
COMMERCIAL MEN COMPLAIN.
The business community is loud in complaint of the delay in the handling of the foreign mail, which came by the Digby. Although the ship arrived in port between 8 and 9 o'clock and was berthed at Harvey's wharf a short while after, the mail was not at the Post Office up to noon hour. Business men who are leaving by the Sachem anxious to have their mail answered are put to considerable inconvenience by the unnecessary delay. Complaints of delay in the delivery of mail coming by the Home boats have been frequent, and it is time that somebody got a hustle on.

Harbor Grace Notes.

Mr. Thos. Thistle paid a short visit to the city last week and returned to town again on Thursday.

Miss Elsie Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Murphy, went out Tuesday morning's train of last week to spend the winter in the city.

S.S. Nothelmaund, Capt. K. Johansen, which arrived from Treon, Scotland, on the 11th inst with coal cargo for Mr. G. E. Stevenson and to load for Messrs. Mann & Co., sailed last night for Carbonear to finish load-

The funeral of the late Miss Lillian Harris, whose death occurred at the home of her grand-parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Pike, Bear's Cove, on Saturday last, took place yesterday (Monday), interment being made in Methodist Cemetery, Rev. W. H. Rowling performing the last rites. Deceased is a daughter of the late Edward Davis, and had been ill for some months past, being another to die a prey to that dread disease, Consumption, at the early age of 16 years. The sorrowing relatives and friends extend our sympathy in their loss.

Mr. F. Simmons, District Deputy, I.O.O.F., left town this morning to attend Lodge Empire installation of officers for the coming year, at St. John's. Owing to the death of his father, Mrs. Levi Simmons, on Tuesday last, he was prevented from continuing installation at Lodge Dudley that night, and Senior D.D., G. B. Wright took his place.

Miss Jessie Thistle, having spent a few weeks here on a holiday, returned to St. John's again last week, after most enjoyable stay in town. Miss Thistle has been on the staff of Nurses St. Anthony Hospital for some time, and is now engaged at private nursing in the city.

While the steamer "Nothelmaund" of coal was being discharged, the men employed to store same, and extra work given thereby, helped make things look little brighter and town during the last few days, and to show a little stir. There is a steady good supply of coal here at the present time, and with other cargoes which are expected here shortly, no doubt there will be no shortage this winter or early spring.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cole of St. John's, came over to the funeral of Mrs. Pike's mother, the late Mrs. Levi Simmons, returned to the city again by Saturday morning's train.

The rink has been opened for the few nights and the ice has been very good condition. Jack Frost being very fairly with us this time, but perhaps a little more with small amount of snow would help those who at this time visit the rink for fuel. On the other hand, we would indeed be grateful for no snow storms this far.

He had heretofore been boasting of the fine weather we have experienced thus far, but just at the present moment there is every indication of a snow storm coming our way.

Miss Minnie Sheppard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Sheppard, who had been at the General Hospital, St. John's, to undergo an operation, arrived again by this afternoon's train, and all will be pleased to hear the operation has been successful.

The Stork arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Penney to-day, Wednesday, leaving twin girls.

Mr. Leo Tapp paid a short visit to the city last week to receive some medical treatment, and his main object was to hear that his visit had been most beneficial to him. His mother, Miss Ethel Tapp, accompanied him there.

Mr. A. B. Lehr, of St. John's, has been in town for the last few days, as a guest at Cochrane House. Dr. is not enjoying the best of health at present and has come here for rest and change, hoping that it would better his condition. He possibly remains with us for a night. His many friends are glad to hear him again and trust that his here will have the desired effect.

Mr. Gordon E. Moulton put in at St. John's this morning from Sydney, via St. John's, and is expected shortly with a coal cargo to Mr. Simmons.

Miss Maise Pike, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pike of Bell Island, has been in town of late spending a time with her.

Mr. (Capt) Nicholas Fitzgerald has been very ill lately, but we hope that she will soon be quite well.

Mr. M. M. Young of Spaniard's Bay in town during the week—COR. Grace, Jan. 18, 1922.

Finish up the holiday by taking the Irish Dance in the Rooms on Monday night, 23rd. Tickets 50c. Refreshments for sale—Jan 20, 21.

Wireless as a Hobby.

(By F. L. Southgate, Manager British Radio Institute.)

Since December 12th, 1901, when Signor Marconi raised an aerial by means of kites from Signal Hill, and received transatlantic messages from the high powered station at Poldhu, Cornwall to the present time, Wireless has exercised an ever-increasing fascination for young men. In the United States alone there are nearly 750,000 amateurs, who have constructed wireless sets, some of which have a range of over a thousand miles, and by means of which they are able to relay messages from the Atlantic to the Pacific. In the pioneer days, if an amateur was able to receive messages from a station fifty miles away, he considered he had a very efficient set; but in these days the amateur is not satisfied unless he can copy messages from the high powered stations at Nann, Germany, from the Eiffel Tower, Paris, and until he can hear Wireless telephonic conversations, and the musical concerts that are sent out by the larger Canadian and American cities. In the city of Pittsburgh alone, where the Westinghouse Electrical Co. have a Wireless Telegraphy Station, there are over sixty thousand amateurs. One of the greatest Electrical Experts in Newfoundland told the writer that whilst visiting a friend in Pittsburgh a few months ago, he mentioned to his host that he would have liked to hear an opera, which was being played at one of the theatres. The host, who happened to be a Wireless Amateur, simply walked to the door of the room, opened a portable receiving cabinet, switched on his valves, tuned in on a 325 meter wave, and the opera was heard with perfect modulation, by everyone present. The same concerts can be heard by any amateurs within a range of 500 miles, and on clear nights can be picked up over 1000 miles away. They are heard by all the up-to-date amateurs in Nova Scotia, and anybody with a good receiving set should be able to pick them up on clear nights in Newfoundland.

Melba's Wireless Concert.

The Daily Mail conducted a very interesting wireless experiment a short while ago. They obtained the use of the Wireless Telegraphy station at Chelmsford, near London, and arranged for Madame Melba, the world famous soprano, to give a wireless concert. Halls were engaged in all the principal cities in France and Germany, a small aerial erected over each, and by means of valves, the feeble electrical oscillations induced in those aerials from the transmitting station, were so amplified that they were perfectly audible throughout the hall. Even in Berlin, where one of the principal theatres had been engaged for the experiment, every note and tremor of that finitimitable voice were heard as

THE ROUTE-MAKER.
The route-maker sat in his office warm, with a lecturer's dates before him. And he heaved a sigh as he started in to work out a schedule for him: "Now what will I do with this chap," said he, "who preaches of doctrines sunny. To be sure he'll know, when his day is done he has honestly earned his money!"

He thumbed his tables and railroad guides and he cunningly planned and planned: "Now here's a train he can take," said he, "a local to Lecture Land. It will leave Last Night about one-fifteen and get into Fine and Dirty By way of the village of Sleepyville and connect with the seven-thirty."

"In two hours more I can dump him off at the village of Stand and Wait. Where till 4 p. m. he can watch the boys in the railroad yard shunt freight. Then he can climb on the old fourteen," and he grinned in his glee.

"And get there in time for his lecture date, but he'll lecture without his dinner." Now I hold no grudge against any one. I have followed the route man's chart. And though I have raged at the trips he planned, no malice is in my heart; I have suffered and hungered and cursed him, but a glad farewell I say him. Though he's doomed to the sulphurous realms below, I'll pray to the Lord to save him.

A "Convention" Parliament.

After the flight of James II. to France, which practically ended his reign, William, Prince of Orange, nephew and son-in-law of James, called an assembly on January 22, 1689, known as the "Convention." It differed from a Parliament in nothing but the single fact that the writs by which the members were summoned were issued by one who was not yet king. The throne was at that time declared vacant, and great debates ensued on the settlement of affairs. Some proposed a regency; others that Mary, the wife of William and daughter of James, should be queen, while William held the title of "king" for her lifetime only. Both plans were pointedly rejected by William, however, who declared that he would go back to Holland rather than accept a position inferior to that of his wife. A document called the "Declaration of Right" was then drawn up and passed, which determined in favour of the Parliament all the points in dispute with the Stewards kings. William and Mary assented to it, and were declared jointly king and queen of England, the chief administration resting with him. The crown was settled first, on the children of Mary; then on those of her sister Anne; and these falling, on the children of William by any other wife. The son of James II. and his posterity were thus shut out entirely from the succession. The Earl of Halifax took the lead in offering the crown, which William, promising to observe all the laws of the land, accepted for his wife and himself. This terminated the long struggle between Sovereign and Parliament.

Hurry mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful day may prevent a sick child to-morrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good clearing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Worthy the Occasion.

LEEDS WEDDING PRESENT.

The city of Leeds is giving Princess Mary a wedding present worthy of the occasion, says a message from the Lord Mayor to her Royal Highness. He adds that the infant urgently needs an infants' ward. If you will graciously approve, I will open on Monday morning, a Princess Mary Infants' Ward Fund. The ward will always bear the name of your Royal Highness and I hope later to have the honor of asking you to open it. Princess Mary replied at once that she had received the telegram with much gratification. Needless to say, her Royal Highness will gladly be associated with any work of charity which the city of Leeds is generously undertaking to assist in commemoration of her marriage.

Famous Prima Donna's Life Story.

TETRAZZINI'S AMUSING RECOLLECTIONS.
Mme. Tetrazzini, in "My Life of Song" (Gossett), gives an amusing account of an amusing life. The most interesting portion of the book is that in which the diva writes of the start of her wonderful career. Mme. Tetrazzini says that she was born for a musical life.

My father had just been informed of my arrival when he heard the measured tramp of marching feet coming from the street below. He ran to the open window, and saw an Italian military band in gay uniform passing the house. The band had just finished playing a popular march. My father recognized in the commanding officer one of his many military friends, and excitedly shouted down the news that a little girl had just been born to the family of Tetrazzini. The officer waved his baton in congratulation. Then he halted his men, formed them in a circle below our dwelling, and ordered them to play an appropriate little tune.

Fads and Fashions.

Narrow bands of fur edge the collars and pockets of broadcloth suits. Softly brocaded materials are much seen for evening or late afternoon. Silk duvetya vests embroidered in color are worn with plain-tailored suits. A dress of black Canton crepe has deep bands of brick-red Egyptian embroidery. Dresses of handkerchief linen have scalloped skirts and shawl-like scalloped collars. There is one definite requirement in millinery and dress trimmings—they must be fat.

When the diva was in South America, she had to sing one night in a theatre which had a leaky roof over the stage. It was raining, and in consequence the stage was inches deep in water. Tetrazzini held her skirt to prevent spilling it, to the annoyance of an old lady in a stage box. She frowned, and then ostentatiously turned herself away from me and faced the audience, saying, in effect, "Just fancy! A prima donna attempting to emulate a high-kicking ballet-girl!"

Madame walked across the stage and got as near the lady's box as she could. Then she put her own words into the libretto of "Lucia" (which was the opera she was singing), and sang:—

"Madam, you are shocked, very shocked; I know it, yes I do. But, do you know, the stage is soaking wet, and our dresses all are spilling? Yet to please you I am ready, perfectly ready, to let my dress drag through the wet and be completely ruined if you, dear madam, will promise to buy me a lovely new one."

Assassination

OF THE SCOTTISH REGENT MURRAY.

Circumstances required the presence of the Regent Murray in Edinburgh, so he left Stirling on the afternoon of January 22, 1570, and slept that night at Linlithgow, which at that time consisted of one long narrow street. Three doors beyond the Regent's lodgings was the house of the Archbishop of St. Andrew's, which was occupied by one of his dependents. A wooden balcony ran along outside the house, railed in front, and when clothes were hung on the balcony, they formed a screen behind which a man might conceal himself. Here, on the morning of the 23rd, crouched Hamilton of Bothwellhaugh, armed with the Abbot of Arbroath's carbine, while the best horse in Hamilton's stable was at the garden in the lane at the back, and a second was waiting a mile distant. Murray was told where Bothwellhaugh was lying in wait, and he proposed to leave the town by the opposite gate. But when he came out and mounted his horse, he found his guard drawn up and not easily passable in that direction and the thought too little of the matter to distrust them. The inhabitants were all out to look at him, and so, at a foot's pace he passed in front of Bothwellhaugh. A shot was fired to miss him was impossible—and he put his hand to his side and said he was wounded, but he was able to dismount, and leaning on Lord Sempall to return to his lodging. He had been hit in the chest, the ball passing through him and killing a horse on the other side. It was seen that he had only a few hours to live so he made his few arrangements with modest speed, commended the king to Sempall and Mar, and died a little before midnight "without speaking a reproachful word of any man." The murderer escaped in the confusion, and in a few hours brought the news of his success to Hamilton Castle, where he was received with an ecstasy of exultation. A few days afterwards he was on his way to France.

Royal Traveller in India.

was known at the outset, and admitted now, that the visit of the Prince of Wales to India was beset by many difficulties and dangers. Almost two months passed since the Prince landed in Bombay, and in spite of the efforts of the Government, the visit has been a painful one. The position of the Prince as heir to the Imperial throne and his charming personality, broken down the efforts of the Government to prevent the people of India from honoring their future Emperor. At a mass meeting the Prince turned to the people and welcomed them. But these were the exceptions. The rule has been thronged and great gatherings at the official functions. For instance, at Bombay the Prince was met through a great Moghul archway at a large arena wherein 70,000 people were seated. Upon entering the palace the various rajahs, the native princes, after which he sat on the dais and the reception took place. Government House, Bombay, native princelings, all between fifteen years of age, visited the Prince to pay homage as the ruler of the Indian native states. The costumes of these little princes were of the utmost splendor—glittering turbans and embroidered gowns. They made a very pleasing sight as they marched up in a wide avenue to the Government House. It was estimated that the people assembled at Bombay to welcome the Prince numbered a quarter of a million.

and six of these dangerous beasts were bagged. The Empire's special Ambassador, as the Prince has been called, is winning his way in India, as he did in Canada and Australasia, although conditions are so different and so much more difficult.

Poetic Indian Names.

The Sioux Indians gave Marshal Foch a puff at the pipe of peace, which insures the future amity of France and the Sioux nation, and then named him "Charging Thunder," a happy cognomen for the French warrior, writes a U. S. correspondent.

What prettier names have come down to us through the ages than Hiawatha, Minnehaha, Oklahoma, Sitka, Alaska, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tallapoosa, Ontario, Ottawa, and a thousand and one other names of states, provinces, cities, countries and streams?

Minister Kills a Lamb in Church.

(From "Our Dumb Animals.") The Springfield, Massachusetts, papers publish the story of the most incredible affair of which we have ever heard as taking place in a Christian church. They report that on the evening of December first, in the Mount Calvary Baptist Church, the offering up of Isaac was portrayed by the minister. Assisted by two other clergymen, he killed a young ram on an altar, to represent the killing of the ram as given in the Old Testament story of Abraham and Isaac. The papers continue, saying, "the following evening the lamb was barbecued and eaten and special services were held."

We have no reason to call in question the newspaper accounts of this more than shocking offense to the better thought and feeling of the present day. The whole thing seems so inconceivable that we refused to believe it till we saw it reported in two different papers. What must have been the influence of this deed of unnecessary bloodshed upon the children and youth present? What their conception of a God gratified with such an exhibition? Even the prophet Micah was thousands of years ahead of these Springfield ministers. In his far-off day he wrote, "Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? . . . What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" If a church must resort to the sort of thing reported as having occurred in this Springfield church to get an audience, what shall we think of the words of Him who said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me?"

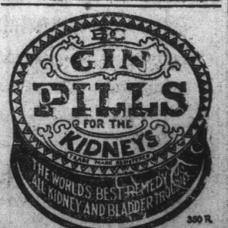

Flying in Fogs.

If the difficulties of flying in a fog could be obviated, air travel could at once become more reliable than any other method of travel, writes Major W. T. Blackie in a London paper. Aircraft can and do fly almost all weathers and on several occasions when the cross-Channel steamers have remained in harbor owing to a gale aircraft have carried mails, passengers, and goods backwards and forwards. When a thick fog covers the land, however, pilots must of necessity rely on the ground or risk the chance of losing themselves and possibly crashing on landing. Instruments could be devised this fog difficulty would be overcome. Airmen need an instrument which will show them their actual height above ground all the time they are flying, an instrument which will enable the machine to be kept on an even keel when the pilot cannot see the horizon. All three of these instruments are within the reach of possibility, and it is expected that they will be produced shortly.

In the first case a machine to show the pilot his exact height above ground (not only the height above sea level but above the starting point, which is shown on the present type of height indicator) has been invented by Professor Pezzer, who has combined his invention with a device which by means of a spot of light which moves about the map automatically shows the pilot his exact position whatever the weather conditions, and his exact height above the ground over which he flies.

As regards flying level in fog, the Avaline Stabiliser appears to be coming into its own. This is a device which enables the machine to be left to itself, when it will fly an even keel and automatically correct any errors due to weather disturbance. It has been used on several occasions between London and Paris and Paris and Amsterdam with the greatest success. There are several other opportunities for the air inventor in the way of brakes, new wings, better engines, etc., but the three things chiefly needed for the rapid development of flying are those outlined above.

Vollies with batik colorings will be much in demand this Spring. The one-piece draped gown of chiffon velvet is very smart with its unobtrusive effect at the hip.

An effective costume of black velvet has facings of broadcloth.

Fads and Fashions.

Narrow ruffles have appeared as trimming in the world of lingerie. A gown of silver-gray crepe de chine is beaded in hydrangea blue.

Shades of copper, brown and lilac are used for afternoon hats. A new trimming note is smocking of the corsage just below the yoke. Plain chiffon is once more appearing over a foulard foundation. Paisley silk is used in those smart little coatee dresses of cloth. Gowns are dat at front and back with wing-like draperies at the sides. Bright Paisley messaline makes a charming contrast with black crepe. Self-covered buttons are effective as trimming on the simple frocks. Steel nailhead buttons march down the front of a gay duster vest. Flat wing effects and small hat flowers are used on street and dress hats. Spotted linen is used for a frock with a straight plain blouse and a full skirt.

MR. GANDHI PRESIDES.

BOMBAY, Jan. 20. At a meeting yesterday of the working committee of the All India Congress, Mr. Gandhi, leader of Non-Cooperationists, presiding a resolution was adopted postponing civil disobedience until Jan. 31, or pending results of negotiations at the Round Table Congress, now in progress between leaders of all parties in India. It has been agreed also that if the Government is willing to release political prisoners, and withdraw prohibitions against volunteer corps and public meetings, all "hate" and similar Anti-Government activities shall cease.

Three Years in the Public Service—The Evening Telegram

TRINITY.

(The story of the Berlin Coal Fields is continued and concluded)

The next morning William and the Constable got in the old leaky dory and went up Fresh Water Pond. After landing at the head of the pond, they tramped all day, and boiled the kettle three times. At last they came to a hill, up which William led the Constable in a mysterious sort of a way, as though the point he wished to reach was very important. At last William said "Ah yes! I see it now," and he beckoned the Constable to follow him to a peak in the distance. From the top of this peak William put on a deeply concerned and puzzled look, as he scanned the country. Then he said "Well, well! it is too bad. I have forgotten to bring my compass. I could find that coal in a few minutes now, if I had my compass, as it bears S.W. from this point." The Constable asked him how he knew that, and he said, "Oh, I had my compass when I found that coal." The Constable "took the sun" and after he made a few mental calculations, he said to William, "now you follow me and we will go pretty near S.W." So, off they went, but still no sign of coal. William scratched his head and stamped his foot, and said "I can't understand how we have missed the coal, for it is right on the surface, plain to be seen, and when I was rhinding here last summer I boiled my kettle with it twice."

There was nothing left for them to do, but to return home. It was dark when they reached the dory, and the Constable was glad that the long tramp was over. As they rowed down the pond William appeared to be very much disappointed, and he said "this is too bad, Constable. I must take one more day through that country by myself. I shall not forget my compass, and when we come here again, I will show you something that will make you forget the hard tramp." The Constable got back to Burin at midnight. The next morning as the Magistrate sat in his office, anxious to get the Constable's report of the day before, Jim C. came in for his old mother's poor-note. Seizing the opportunity, the Magistrate in a non-committal way, asked Jim if he had ever heard of coal in the country. Jim assured him that he had, and that he did not think it was very hard to locate. This was very encouraging to the Magistrate, and made him more anxious for the Constable to turn up and report. Though both the Magistrate and the Constable thought it very strange that William had failed to find the coal, yet because of Jim C.'s assurance of its existence coupled with their hopes of final success, they still felt quite sure that the coal was there all right.

As the Constable was leaving for home that night, William said "you need not come with me when I go again; but as sure as you are born Sir, I will bring you a sample of that coal within a week." On the strength of all this the Magistrate sent William an order for a barrel of flour, and the Constable kept him well supplied with tobacco and grub. When William came out for the barrel of flour, he called on the Magistrate, and asked him: "What will be my position, your worship, when them coal mines will be opened? I got no larmin, but I could do something, I could act as watchman or tally-man, or if that would not suit, you might arrange, Sir, to get a pension for me. Be gob, sir it is high time—coal or no coal—that I should get a pension. I am now seventy three years old, and thirty of them years Sir, I fished on the Grand Banks—and all the time Sir, as everybody in Burin knows, I have been an honest, sober, and straightforward man."

William went home with his barrel of flour, and a pair of the Constable's good trousers. The Constable remarked that probably the trousers will be a little on the side of large for him, but William said, "never mind that, Sir, that won't be noticed when they gets covered with coal dust." William was sure to be back within a fortnight.

Stafford's COD LIVER OIL Compound

TONIC and TISSUE BUILDER

This combination possesses the curative properties of cod liver oil without any of the latter's disagreeable features, as well as the medicinal virtues of the other standard remedies that enter into its composition. It is palatable, effective, and does not even in the most delicate, produce stomach disturbances and other bad after-effects that are such a drawback to the best action of cod liver oil in its crude state and many other disagreeable medicines.

with a good report and a sample of the coal. About ten days later—which were days full of hopes and fears to the shareholders, as the Constable looked out of the Court House window he saw a dory coming around the point. There was no mistaking that old red dory, or the man who was in it—'twas William, for sure. The Constable, almost beside himself with excitement, called to the Magistrate—"here comes skipper Bill at last." Together they watched him land at the wharf and take out an old bread bag half full of something heavy. William threw the load on his back, and came towards the Court House.

The Constable was at the door to receive him and the bag. One glance at its contents was enough, there it was all right—coal and good coal at that! The Constable put the bag and its contents in one of the spare cells, whilst William wiped the perspiration from his face. "Come in now, skipper Bill!" said the Constable, "I am sure you need a cup of tea." "Be gob! I do sir, and more than one, Sir," said William. The Magistrate was down the stairs in a hurry, and seconded the Constable's hearty welcome. "Are your feet wet, William?" he asked. "Be gob, yes Sir said William." Then, said the Magistrate, "that won't do for an old gentleman like you to have wet feet. Are those the boots I gave you a few weeks ago?" "Be gob, Sir, 'tis the same boots." "Why?" said the Magistrate. "I paid six dollars for them, William." "Well then, Sir," said William you paid too much for them; those marchants in Burin got no chance to go to heaven Sir, for they be extortioners, Sir, that's what they be, and a poor man like me, who tries hard to live an upright and a down straight life, finds it hard to do it, Sir, with their awful charges for things." To make assurance doubly sure, the Magistrate looked into the bag, and smiled his satisfaction. "Black Diamonds!" he said "and good ones at that."

Nothing was too hot or too cold for skipper Bill. He took his time at the table and filled himself to his utmost capacity, at the constable's expense. The Constable's wife, too, was delighted as she saw a fortune for all concerned, in the return for all concerned, and William, with a smile on his face (like the cat had after eating the canary) said to her "them was five good cups of tea ma'am, and the sweet cake was most beautiful ma'am." The Magistrate and the Constable wrote at once to St. John's, and offered a third of the coal mine to a relative who was then a leading lawyer in town; so that they might have the benefit of his legal knowledge in carrying on the work.

About two weeks after William had landed his coal, and taken a return cargo of tea, buns and sweet cake to his home, the Constable had occasion to go to Epworth, settlement about two miles away. There he met a Mr. G. who was doing business there, and he said, "Mr. W. I am coming over to Burin one of these days to get a summons against old Bill W. I gave him a barrel of flour last winter in advance payment for some fake boughs that he was to bring me, and I have not see him or the boughs since. True, I saw him from the office window one day about a fortnight ago, on the wharf, but he did not come near me. I asked the storekeeper who that was in the red dory, and he said, oh, that was old Bill W. 'What did he want?' I asked, and the storekeeper said, 'he asked me if he could take a knob or two of coal from the big pile on the wharf that was landed from North Sydney last week, and I said, yes, so he put them in a bag and left for home.' I don't know what he wanted the coal for, so I think I shall summons him for the value of the barrel of flour." You can guess the rest of it and you can understand why the Magistrate and the Constable are still out of pocket old Bill—is thirty six dollars better off, because of the coal deposit at Burin, and his method of working it.

When old Bill's wife was very ill about two years later, Mrs. W. and another lady took her some nourishment; and she told Mrs. W. that her husband did not treat Mr. W. as well as he should have done, and that she was very sorry Mrs. W. I asked her not to refer to it again; and the old woman said:—"William told me that if I ever told anybody about it, he would shoot me."

N.B.—The outline facts of this story were given to me by Sergeant White of Catalina. He is the Constable referred to in the story. Viewing the whole proceedings to-day, from a distance of twenty five years, the tragedy of that time has now changed to comedy; and the Sergeant hopes that the readers of the story will enjoy it as thoroughly as he and the Magistrate do to-day.

The Stereophon show of pictures, at the entertainment given by the Sunday School Teachers of the Church of England, to the children of their classes, was so interesting to the children; and so many other children would like to see it,—that the showman gave a free invitation to every child in Trinity, to see the same pictures in the Parish Hall, on Wednesday evening, 18th. A goodly number of children responded to the invitation, and, together with parents and friends, filled the Hall to its capacity. It is surprising how much a child will remember of serious subjects when they are presented through the eye, and it is equally surprising how much of the child there is in the oldest of us, when the funny pictures are thrown on the screen. At such entertainments the older we are the more fully the words of Mrs. Hemans express our wishes—"Backward! Turn backward oh times in thy flight! Make me a child again, just for to-night."

Miss Ash returned from St. John's by the Prospero last week.

Capt. George Barbour and Mr. E. J. Ryan were passengers from St. John's by Prospero on 18th inst.

Answers to Correspondents:—"L. I. G." Treasurer.—Thank you doctor for kind Christmas wishes, as conveyed by Christmas Card. I appreciate your kind interest in my story re Flint Island. No doubt it awakened some pleasant memories. Poor Bill Hyland! I often wondered what made him so reticent. Evidently, he never got over the shock. Good luck.

George C. St. John's.—Thank you for your kind letter. I am glad, but not surprised to hear of your interest in Saturday's Telegram. Vallis' Will was, in my boyhood days and youth, the public wall on the left hand side of the road leading down to the Ferry Wharf, and opposite the cooper shop of Mr. Joseph Morris. When Mrs. Jenkins leased the property that included the well, it was filled in, as it was too far away for Hotel use, and another was sunk for that purpose. I gave an outline history last year of the business done by Vallis on the premises now owned by Mr. Joseph Morris. Yes, Mr. Pittman, in addition to his cooperage business, did a limited supplying business in the S.W. Arm, and owned a schooner for trading and collecting. It was only one of the many smaller business premises that at one time operated all along the waterfront inside of Trinity Harbor. I will write to you re other things mentioned in your interesting letter.

"E.P." St. John's.—Your letter of inquiry re your grandfather's property in Trinity, is to hand. I am looking it up, and will let you know what I find.

Old John Murphy, the friend of my boyhood days—never missed an opportunity to tell my father about the many good things of old Ireland. One day my father mention the subject of pork; and John said:—"Ah Gargel! you should see the pork we raised in Ireland: it was a strake o'lean, and a lean o'strake, and you could ate it out of your hand Gargel." We always knew what the dear old man meant, and in this case we knew that it was a streak of lean, and a streak of fat; and that being able to "ate it out of your hand," indicated its firmness. R.I.P.

Mr. Russel, representing the F.P.U., registered at Garland Hotel last week on his way to and from the pulpwood, Cutters Camp at Pope's Harbor Pond. We were glad to have him with us, but sorry that his story was so short. Come again, Sir, and give us an opportunity to show you how good we can be, and would wish to be to you.

On Sunday last God called to rest Mary Ann Fowlow, of Trinity East, aged 81 years. Mary Ann Fowlow was the second child of Thomas and Ann Jenkins of Trinity. In 1860 she married Richard Fowlow of Trinity East, who died some years ago. She was the mother of twelve children, nine of whom are living. Mr. William Jenkins and Mrs. Emma White—brother and sister survive her. Her body was laid to rest by loving hands, on Wednesday last, beside the bodies of her husband and two children, in the Churchyard at Trinity East. May she rest in peace. N.B.—The witnesses at her marriage were: John Cross, Sarah Jenkins, William Jenkins, Elizabeth Cross, Mary Dampier, William Fowlow, Clara Grant, William Cook, Susannah Jones.

At the annual business meeting of the men of St. Paul's Congregation Mr. Fred Morris and Mr. William White, were elected Church Wardens.

Will You Cripple Your Ford

OR RENEW ITS LEASE OF LIFE!
When the Ford Car leaves the plant at Ford, Canada, it represents standardized production reduced to a science. There is no lost motion anywhere, in its construction, and each part is of the material and temper best calculated to fulfill the function it has to perform. The result is not only a car at a phenomenally low price, but a car so sound in all its component parts that it will serve you satisfactorily for many years. Parts here and there will require to be replaced in time, and it rests with you at this stage whether you cripple your Ford or renew its lease of life.
The use of spurious parts will accomplish the former. Genuine Ford Parts will assure the latter.
Spurious parts allow a greater profit to the seller and will be palmed off on you whenever opportunity offers. Take no chances. Demand Genuine Ford Parts and extend the life and usefulness of your car.
