THE unfortunate consumer seems to be up against it. During the depth of the winter the cost of butter is high because the article is scarce. At this season of the year the article is most plentiful, but the price is high because the cold storage companies are planting it away to market it during the period of scarcity.

THERE is small choice in the marriage market, nowadays; a young man is a Jottery, a widower a hand-me-down, and an old bachelor a damaged remnant. But with a little taking in, or letting out, polishing up, or trimming down, almost any of them can be made over into a fairly acceptable husband after all.

The strawberry festival and entertainment given by the ladies of the Bethel Methodist church was one of the most Methodist church was one of the most successful held in many years. The weather was ideal and the attendance overflowing. A large staff of servers were kept busy for three hours feeding the multitude, and additional supplies had to be sent for before all were served. The entertainment opened about 9 o'clock with Rev. H. I. Fair the postor, in the with Rev. H. J. Fair, the pastor, in the chair. The whole program was practi-cally given by the Forest Male Choir. This splendid musical organization was there 25 strong under the very able leadership of R. McFarlane, and gave choruses, quartettes, trios, duetts, solos and instrumental selections in a style that kept the crowded audience in a continual hilarity. Short addresses were given by Rev. H. E. Currie, Watford; Rev. W. Cannon and H. J. Pettypiece, of Forest.

The proceeds were $82. Ideal weather and a large crowd greet-Ideal weather and a large crowd greeted the workers of Zion E. T. at their strawberry festival on Thursday evening, June 27th. Never were the young people better prepared to entertain all pleasure seekers, and never were guests more royally entertained. The specially prepared leap year dinner and our old friend, the strawberry, added greatly to the pleasure of the evening. The Colonel and ex-Chief did their best, but still there was an abundance left. After dinner the chairman, Rev. H. E. Currie, introduced one of the most amusing programs ever one of the most amusing programs ever presented in this district. The Forest Male Quartette were in excellent form and called forth continued applause and called forth continued applause. The Arkona orchestra was equally as good. Miss Fleck, of Sarnia, reader, is a favorite here. Her simplicity of manner and excellent rendering of her selections give her an attractiveness that is greatly admired. Short addresses were given by Rev. Fair and R. J. McCormick, M.P.P. Mr. McCormick's address was non-political though it lingered slightly on the temperance question. CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age. How It May Be Passed in Safety.

So. Wellington, B.C. - "For a year during the Change of Life I was all run down. I was really too weak to walk and was very despondent and thought I was going to die, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier my health and strength returned. I am very thankful to you and praise your medicine.

I have advised several women who suffered as I did to try your remedies. You may publish this if you wish."—Mrs. DAVID R. MORRIS, South Wellington, Vancouver Island, B. C.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unquali-fied endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills such as inflammation, ulcera tion, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and we believe it is unequalled for women during the period of change of life.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Detective W. Burns, by means of a faked board sidewalk enterprise to cost $1,000,000, and by use of the dictagraph succeded in proving several members of the City Council of Atlantic City, N.J., to be purchasable. A number of them were promised $5,000 each for their votes in favor of the ordinance in Council, and each got $500 cash on account. Then they were told how they were entrapped, and all confessed and gave back the bribe except one councillor, who has been arrested.

TA request has come from the Massachusetts Historical Society to the Canadian Minister of Milita for the return of the gun captured by the British at Bunker Hill, in 1776, in which is now stored at Quebec. The return of the cannon would, it is said, be a fitting testimony of good will to make the hundred years of peace celebration. If the peace centenary is to be marked by a return of trophies held by both nations, this Bunker Hill gun would, as a matter of course, go with the rest, but we do not see any sign of a disposition manifested by our neighbors to return anything captured from the British during the war of the revolution.

For the first time in many years, Forest did not this year send a company to the annual military camp with the 27th Regt., under canvas at Goderich.

If you trade in Watford you go home satisfied.

LIFE IN DENMARK

A Country Where Almost Everybody

Is Poor, But Happy.

In Denmark everybody is poor.

There are no coal or mineral deposits in the country; consequently there can be no manufactures, and a nation of farmers, even of Danish farmers, is never rich according to the standards of commercial countries.

comes. But the Danes know how to live within their incomes and to do it comfortably. Denmark is as obviously happy as she is poor.

Tht Danes are wise enough not to demand perfection. If it comes they can take instant pleasure therein. When it does not come they still are placid. Conformity to rule, even though it be in so small a matter as fixed mealtimes, does entail some coercion upon the natural man. So punctuality is not a Danish virtue. punctuality is not a Danish virtue. In few Danish households are there fixed and unalterable hours for meals. Pay a call when you will and the custom of the country will uphold you, but it will not insure you against finding your friends at table. The hotels follow the very reverse of the American method, and while you can get spacks all the time you want get snacks all the time you cannot be certain that at any time you will find a dinner ready cooked and wait-Even the national food lends itself admirably both to simplicity and to unpunctuality. Its staple is bread and butter—in well to do houses immense thicknesses of excellent butter and fairly thin slices of several varieties of bread. The staple food of the working classes is also bread and butter, but their butter is bad and scraped, and their bread is uniformly

Smorrebrod (literally butter bread or smeared bread) is the one food that is to be had at all hours and in all places in hotels and restaurants by day or night, on steamers, in the famous Tivoli gardens. It consists of a thinnish slice of buttered bread, white, gray or black, on which is white, gray or black, on which is placed a palaag or overlay.

This overlay may be cold — ham, veal, sausages, hard boiled eggs, fish (fresh or salted), salad and cheese. They are not large, and most persons eat several and like a variety. There are not many fashionable occupations. People live as they list and are in no terror of their neighbors.—London Queen.

Hill Climbing Steamboats.

Hill Climbing Steamboats.

Even a steamboat can climb a hill by going up one step at a time. This remarkable performance can be witnessed several times daily during the season of navigation beside the Vrang waterfall in the Bandak Nordsje canal, Norway. At this point falls in the river prevent the passage of boats up or down and a canal has been built round the rapids and falls. The ascent is made through a series of locks which accommodate one boat at a time, and in passing from the lower to the upper lock the boat is lifted about ninety feet.

Near Side and Off Side. When horses were first hitched to vehicles the driver never thought of riding himself, but walked by the side of the road as he held the lines. So as to have his right hand always ready, he walked on the left side, and conse-quently the horse on the left side came to be known as the "near" horse and the one on the right side was called the "off" horse. In that manner the terms "near horse" and "off horse" became general and still pertain to horses hitched as a team.

PILLOWS AND SLUMBER.

Hints That May Help In Wooing

Sound and Refreshing Sleep.

No other single element in the equipment for sleeping has quite so much effect upon slumber as the piliow, and probably no other element is quite so sadly neglected. Imperiect sleepers regulate their diet and their exercise-so as to coax slumber. Some even go so far as to have the bed stretched north and south so that the body in repose shall lie along the track of beneficent electric currents seeking the north pole. Others insulate their beds against any possible loss of electricity by tucking each bedpost into a thick glass insulator such as we see on telegraph poles.

sulator such as we see on telegraph poles.

But how many pay any attention to the size and substance of the pillows? Very few, if any. Insomniacs owe a debt of gratitude to osteopathy, for it is from a prominent doctor of osteopathy that the following pillow lore has been acquired:

The inside of the pillow should be of medium texture, for too hard or too soft a substance will cause enough discomfort to make sleep impossible. The thickness of the pillow is of the utmost importance. It should be exactly the same as the distance between the side of the head and a straight line drawn upward from the outside of the shoulder. The narrowshouldered person should have a shallow pillow, the broad shouldered a thick one.

The ideal pillow is one that maintains the upper links of the backbone on a true horizontal line. There must be no sagging down or jamming upward of the head, for a bending of the neck either down or up means that the links of the backbone, which are connected with each other like a are connected with each other like a string of spools, are huddled too close on one side and stretched too far apart on the opposite side. When the spine is thus jammed the nerves that control the circulation of blood in the brain become congested and in the brain become congested, and the result is an interference with the circulation that causes pain or irritation and makes sleep impossible.

Keep the spine straight by having a pillow that keeps the neck straight and your sleep will be sound and re-

Some Great Singers.

Some of the world's greatest singers have been discovered accidentally. Once upon a time Wachtel, the greatest tenor of his day in Germany, was cracking his whip and hailing fares in a musical rondo. Mme. Scalchi, the greatest of contractos, is said to have called her wares in the street before she was found for the opera ge. Campanini, the king of tenors a blacksmith, but was heard sing ing like an angel and was enabled to desert the forge for the footlights.

Watford, June 14th, 1912.

Mr. Thomas Dodds desires to notify his customers and the public generally that he has taken his son Claremon Dodds into partnership with him in the Hardware, Furnace and Tinsmith business, and that the business in future will be conducted under the name of T. Dodds & Son.

Mr. Claremon Dodds is a thoroughly practical man. understanding every branch of the business, and has made a special study of the Furnace and Tinsmithing branch, so that customers will have the advantage of expert knowledge when an order is placed with this firm.

The new firm takes this opportunity of soliciting a continuance of the liberal patronage extended to the old firm. All orders entrusted to them will receive the most careful and prompt attention.

All accounts owing the old firm of T. Dodds must be paid without further notice so that the books may be closed as soon as possible.

THE YOUNGEST QUEEN

EUROPE IS POSSESSED OF A NEW FEMALE RULER.

Princess Marie Grand Duchess of Luxembourg Is Only Seventeen Years of Age, and Is Self-Willed and Does Exactly as She Wishes About Everything-Her Fortune Is

On February 25 Queen Wilhelmina On February 25 Queen Wilhelmina of Holland was robbed of the distinction of being the only female monarch in Europe. The Grand Duke William of Luxembourg has passed away, and his proud office devolves upon his young daughter, Princess Marie.

In the meantime her mother is acting as regent, which is merely a continuation of office, for during the last four years the late grand duke was incapacitated by mental and physical paralysis; the burden of state affairs thus falling entirely upon the shoulders of his consort.

That a young pretty high-spirited

That a young, pretty, high-spirited girl should become ruler over a community numbering some quarter of a million persons is in itself unusual enough to evoke more than ordinary interest. But there is more in it even than this. The ruler of Luxembourg is possessed of virtually, autocratic sovereignty, for the small legislative body is only in session for four months of the year, and has hardly any powers of restraint upon the monarch.

Moreover, there is a great fortune to be included, worth some $50,000,000, which is hers by every right, and makes her quite independent of the civil list of $40,000 odd. This fortune was amassed for the most part by the Dukes of Nassau, previous to 1866, when they were driven into Austrian exile, through the prosperity of Monaco's forerunner, Wiesbaden, once the gambler's paradise, and other places of a similar neutro.

gambler's paradise, and other places of a similar nature.

Besides this, the rulers of Nassau, through the extinction of several branches of their family, became heirs to various considerable sums from time to time. This fortune of the House of Nassau, is invested well, for House of Nassau is invested well, for the most part in large estates in Aus-tria, Hungary, Germany, and Luxem-bourg, including mines, distilleries, and many industries of all kinds.

The outlook is very interesting, says a writer, for it is difficult to conceive a more romantic figure than a beautiful girl of barely eighteen, possessed of virtually autocratic sovereignty, the mistress of millions of dollars, and who, in spite of all the efforts of her mother and grandmother, has been so spoiled by her other relatives and by her entourage that she is bent on having her own way in everything; impatient of advice, impulsive, quick-tempered, and so unmindful of the obligations of her position that at several public ceremonies at which she represented her father she positively refused to kiss the young girls deputed by the local authorities to present her with bouquets on the plea that they
—that is, the young girls, not the flowers—were too ugly, and, moreover offended her olfactory nerves.

Perhaps, under the circumstances, it just as well that the standing army of Luxembourg does not exceed 150 men and officers all told, supplemented in the case of emergency by a gen-darmerie or constabulary force of as many more, otherwise there is no knowing what might happen if she fell out with the rulers of some of the neighboring states.

It is needless to state that all sorts of rumors have been current as to her prospective husband. The most popular is that he is to be found amongst the younger sons of the Emperor of Germany. To those who really know, however, it would seem most probable that the young princess be-ing somewhat wilful, and having no one powerful enough to check any such wilfulness, will choose just exactly whom she likes.

True, the family statutes of the House of Nassau, we are told, restrict the matrimonial alliances of its members to royal personages, and to those whose patents of Counts and Countesses of the Holy Roman Empire date from the seventeenth century. But as the principal stipulatury. But as the principal stipulation is that the marriage, in order to be valid, should have the consent of the head of the house, who is now the young Grand Duchess Marie, the statutes are open to construction that she herself, as such, could marry whomsoever she pleased. This is, in so far as the possession This is, in so far as the possession of the Nassau fortune is concerned. With regard to the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, all that is required for the marriage of a member of the reigning house is that the alliance should receive the sanction of the head of the house, namely, of the Grand Duchess, and of the Legislature, which has always shown itself to be extremely subservient.

Only about two years ago there closed one of the most sensational lawsuits in Europe of modern times, in which the young princess was the de-fendant. It will be remembered that Count George Merenberg laid claim to the throne of Euxembourg in the event of the decease of the then Grand Duke.

Count Merenberg's claims were in the first place presented to the Legis-lature of Luxembourg with the object of his being recognized as next heir Marie.

This fortunate young lady is as yet too young to take up the reins of office, being enly seventeen years of age, though it requires but three months before she reaches her eightenth birthday and her majority.

In the meantime her mother is actually a constitute of the crown of Luxembourg on the plea that he was the son of Prince Nicholas, the only brother of Grand Duke Adolf of Luxembourg, and that, according to the family statutes of the reigning House of Nassau, recognized by the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg. the rights of women of the dynasty did not become active until there were no males left.

He withdrew his claims for a consideration of $10,000 a year and the payment of his enormous legal ex-

A Prized Drawing.

On the facade of the Palazzo Vecchio at Florence, to the right of the central entrance, the profile of a man's head is traced on the marble man's head is traced on the marble the authorship of which is ascribed to Michelangelo. The story runs that he and a friend made a bet as to which of them would draw a head best with their backs to the wall, a bet easily won by Michelangelo, for he traced a perfect profile, whereas the other produced only a wavering, imperfect outline. The story further relates that the tool used was a nail. Both drawings are carefully preserved.

Manners In 1628.

In a manual of good manners published in Paris in 1628 the reader is warned, "In yawning in public do not groan." A familiar admonition is, "When listening to some one speaking do not wiggle about, but keep thyself in thy skin the while." It must have in the while." It must have been hard to obey this latter injunction, judging from what is said a little further along, "Kill not fleas or the like in the presence of others, but excuse thyself and remove whatever torments thee."

Choosing a Wife.

The plainest features become handsome unawares when associated only with kind feelings and the loveliest face disagreeable when linked with ill humor or caprice. People should remember this when they are selecting a face which they are to see every morning across the breakfast table for the remainder of their lives.

Less Than Cost.

"But," protested the broker who had advertised for a confidential clerk, "you want too much salary." I've had a great deal of experien in the brokerage business," urged the applicant.

But you ask too much for it." "My dear sir, I assure you I'm offering it to you for much less than it cost me."

Dragging the Anchor. "I see Newlywed at the club quite often since his baby came. I thought he was firmly anchored to a home

"He was, but at the first squall he began to drag his anchor."

HOW TO ECONOMIZE.

Household Expenditures That May Be Cut Out.

Woman's life is made up of little things, and this is especially true as regards the management and spending of small sums of money. The pennies slip away unnoticed until they are added up at the week's or month's end, to show an alarming and astonishing total ishing total.

The only way to remedy this is to plan out a thorough system of household expenditure and adhere to it in spite of all temptation to "launch out" in one direction or another or indulge in pet little unnecessary extravagances.

It depends on the manner of living whether you should buy in large or small quantities, also upon the size of the family and capacity for storage. It therefore need not be a matter for regret if you find it difficult to manage purchasing in quantities, for the se cond method may suit your case best.

Work out some system between the "hand to mouth" style of living and the purchase of large amounts. Buy your groceries, for instance, with the intention of making them last for a intention of making them last for a whole week, and see that they do so.

Marketing is an art and deserves thorough study. Watch prices and buy what is cheap and in season. When a certain fish or fruit is being sold in quantities for low prices make the most of the opportunity, even if it means rearranging all your plans. it means rearranging all your plans for the week's meals. Above all, pay

If you must buy very little buy only

If you must buy very little buy only the best and use every scrap of it. You will find it comes cheaper than using goods of an apparently lower price, where half cannot be eaten.

Remember that hardly anything need be thrown away. It is the little wastes that lead to trouble. It is often astonishing to find that poor people think nothing of throwing away good pieces of food that a good housekeeper, even one with plenty of money, would be furious to find wasted in her own household.

The smallest scraps of meat, vegetables, fish, bread, all serve for soup, puddings, etc., and even the bones should be boiled down for stock until all the goodness is extracted.

It is best to divide your housekeeping money to cover the necessary expenditures and then live strictly within it. This can be done no matter how little money you have once the proper standard of living is discovered, as clever managers among the very poorest of women have proved again and again.

A man said recently that if his business were run as carelessly as his home he would be bankrupt to-morrow, and he said this jestingly, not in complaint. Housekeeping, properly understood, is just as important and just as interesting as managing any business.

The Sight of a Mouse.

How much does a mouse see? To ook at a mouse one would think that sight counted for a great deal in its life, but experiments go to show that this is only true within certain limits. Mice are good at distinguishing different degrees of illumination and different ent colors, preferring red and yellow to blue and green, and they are quick to detect movements, but they have little sense of form and little binocular vision. Microscopic study shows that the retina has no "rods" and no "fovea.

A Plant That Grows In Snow.

The "snow flower," so named be-cause it blooms only in the depth of icy winters, is to be found growing on Siberian soil. When it opens it is star shaped, with petals of the same length as the leaves and half an inch in width. A Russian nobleman took a number of the seeds to St. Petersburg. They were placed in a pot of snow and frezen earth. On the coldest day of the following January the flower burst through its icy covering and displayed its beauties to the wondering spectators.

Violet Land Crabs.

Crabs have sources of knowledge which, to human view, seem very mysterious, if not inscrutable. The violet land crabs of Jamaica live in colonies often two or three miles from the sea, to which they make a journey once a year, in spawning time. Then they march straight for their destination and act quite as if they had the ocean already in sight.

His Anxious Query.

To those who are employed and busy time flies with great rapidity. Life is tedious only to the idle. Nothing is more monotonous than the ticking of a clock to him who has nothing to do but listen to it.—Anon.

BASEBALL.

Alvinston vs. Watford.

Watford and Alvinston played an exciting game at the Park on Wednesday evening. The game was to have been played in the afternoon but Alvinston failed to get here; a large crowd turned out in the evening. Alvinston took the lead in the first innings but the home boys soon overcame them and had the game nicely put away on ice, when Rogers, who was pitching a good game got hurt sliding at the plate but then went in and pitched but weakened, and Alvinston then took the lead, but in the darkness Watford tied the score. The 'Seay in Ontario' campaign of the Lundor Advertiser is doing good work in bringing before the public the advantages of the province. Last Saturday the paper took up Arkona and its fruit belt, and below we copy a few extracts from the page write-up:—

"Arkona, June 28.—A tour of the fruit farms if the vicinity of Arkona shows the industry at its best. Clean orchards, moder amatchinery, fine homes; constant replantage, and an aggressive spirit of business make the closely settled district seem more like an industrial section than a farming, community.

Arkona and Its Fruit Belt.

You eathor find a man in the Arkona You weather find a man in the Arkona district who will not tell you that a radial line would double and triple the present output of fruit in that district. There is room for thousands of families on the most precious land in the country—land that is being made to give a fraction of what if might yield in apples, plums, peaches strawberries, and all other kinds of small-fruits.

peaches, strawberries, and all other kinds of small fruits.

Lying few, miles away from the lake, this section is claimed to have a higher altitude than any other district between Huron and Erie—800 feet above sea level.

About five miles wide, it stretches for ten miles, comprising at least 38,400 acres. Not more than 5 per cent of the land is under cultivation for fruit, and five acres, to repeat, are enough to give a man a return of, $1,200—and he can do his own work and not concern himself with the labor problem.

The Advertiser representative spent a day in this locality recently. He was taken into dozens of places by an energetic committee of the board of trade, composed of Messrs. J. F. Dickerson, Joseph Wilcox Brown and W. Fuller. Arkona has only about 600 people, but it is a clean, live community that has an air of prosperity. It does not give the impression of extreme age, secured from many places of its size, which means that there is nothing "ramshackle" about it.

many places of its size, which means that there is nothing "ramshackle" about it. It has grown and thrived despite its handicap. If you were in the confidence of the two bank managers you would find that it had upwards of $100,000 on deposit, and that it wasn't much of a place to get mortgages or notes. Most every place in the vicinity is clear, and if there is a small "plaster," it is rare, and probably because the money is being used for development.

One man told the Advertiser that his place of 175 acres, which had cost him in the neighborhood of $17,000, several years ago, had been entirely paid for out of strawberries. And few of the residents of the Arkona district are reductant about of strawberries. And few of the residents of the Arkona district are reluctant about telling of their prosperity. There is a pull-together spirit, and the businessmen are lined up with the frnit-growers. The garden party held on Dr. Sawer's fine lawn on Friday night was a record breaker as regards size and entertainment provided from six until nine o'clock. Carriages and autos continued to arrive in an almost constant stream, and Napier, for the time being, was transformed from a quiet country village to a busy little town. The grounds were beautifully decorated, lanterns being in great profusion, and from a distance the effect was grand. The ladies of Napier excelled themselves in the quality and quantity of the luncheon provided, and it was thoroughly enjoyed, and appreciated by all. One of the chief attractions of the evening was the Highland Pipers as they poured forth the rich and melodious strains of "Bonnie Dundee" and "A Hundred Pipers and A'" etc., and many Scottish (and other hearts as well) were cheered by the sounds, Rev. The Bernard Sisters

A Mystery That Hung About Them Was Finally Solved ___

By JEAN WINTER

I lived with my mother and sister in an apartment building and there became acquainted with the Bernard sisters, who occupied a small suit at the other end of the floor on which we were located. They lived very simply and without a maid. Their names were Margaret and Grace, Margaret being the older. Their names expressed their general makeup, Margaret being strong both physically and mentally: Grace gentle and pliable. I supposed at first that they had a small income on which they lived. At any rate, they did not go out regularly each day, as women do who work for their living. But my sister, who was at home all day, said they went out irregularly, usually remaining away from their rooms from two to three hours at a time. She believed they went to keep some business en gagement, but they never mentioned where they had been.

Soon after we met them in the apartment house my sister, thinking that they must be lonely sitting by themselves, asked them to come into our They did so, and we were delighted with them. Both seemed endowed with the same gift, but in different ways. Possessing a keen knowledge of human nature, they could be very entertaining in portraying it in stories taken from their own observations of everyday life. When Margaret told of some woman of high degree. some tragic episode, some thrilling adventure, she threw herself into her part as if she were a professional actress. Grace was equally apt in narrating events concerning girls of her own kind. Margaret was a Portia, Grace a Juliet. My favorite of the two sisters was

Grace. Margaret was of a pattern to be admired. Grace was lovable. It occurred to me that Margaret was not only a woman of strength, but of violent emotions. I was not surprised one day to hear a storm going on in the sisters' rooms. The doors were all shut, and a window of theirs which faced one of ours was hung with a rugit seemed to me to prevent sound from being heard. Nevertheless I could hear Margaret Bernard hurling vituperations upon her sister that made my blood curdle. I was tempted to go in and protect the poor girl from her unnatural sister's wrath. I restrained myself, and after the sounds ceased I rejoiced at my forbearance, for when in my sound senses I would never think of interfering in family the younger girl drew me closer to her. I did not see her till the next day, when I met her in the hall connecting our and their apartments. It's seemed to me that her face should wear a sad expression, but she showed no trace of the "roasting" she had endured. Indeed, she greeted me with a smile, and her smiles were beginning to go straight to my heart. I could not refrain from referring to her sister and was conscious of a frown passing over my face at the mere mention of her, but Grace appeared to be unconscious of any wrong done her by Margaret and spoke of her as usual. This I attributed to her forgiving na-

But I was soon after destined to receive a shock. One evening when I came in from business my sister came into my room, closed the door behind her and looked at me in a way that told me she had some bad news for

"I have noticed your growing attachment for Grace Bernard." said, "and, considering the mystery that hangs over these girls, I have been very much worried. Some time rating Grace for something, and I took a violent dislike to her for doing so." "I overheard that, too," I put in.

"Today I overheard another trouble between the two. I could only catch snatches of what was being said, but it was enough to convince me that, after all, Margaret was right. This morning I overheard Grace making the most appalling confession to her sister. Grace seemed so crushed by what she had done, so penitent, so filled with despair, that I found my-self weeping for her. And you should have heard how nobly Margaret talk-ed to her. She was motherly as well as sisterly and was as encouraging as could be expected to one who had sunk so deep in shame."

"For heaven's sake!" I exclaimed, horror stricken. "Did you learn the nature of the crime?"

"Only this: I heard Grace say, moaning all the while: 'On my life, when I went to live with Harry I did not know that he was married. I believed myself to be his lawful wife. When he turned me off I was so sunken that all sense of shame had gone out of me, and when Maynard took me up' "-

I heard no more, for, burying my face in the pillows on my bed, I put my hands to my ears to shut out the rest of the horrid revelation. Betty quietly withdrew and left me to recover from the shock alone, knowing from experience that this was the best way to comfort me. And this was the finale of that blessed contentment which for weeks had been stealing over me, realizing as I did that I loved and was loved; this the girl to whom my affections had gone out! How could she have been able to hear those first tender words I had spoken to her knowing what she was? Had she possessed a spark of real purity she would have winced at being ad-dressed as I addressed her, she knowing the while what she was. Bet had said that she was penitent. Had she grieved for her fall it would have been impossible for her to accept what I had said to her with that modest look on her face. Her self control had been marvelous. But I have always heard that those deepest dyed in iniquity maintain consummate assurance.

What should I do? Not for the world would I meet again the girl who had deceived me. I arose from the bed and began throwing some clothes in a suit case. Bet heard me and returned. She asked me where I was going, and I told her anywhere that would prevent my meeting that shameless girl again. Bet tried to quiet me, but it was no use. was frantic. Fortunately I couldn't go away that night, for I had not decided where to go. Bet made me promise that I would not go in the morning without seeing her and left me to myself. She brought up my dinner to me, and I managed to swallow a few mouthfuls. After dinner I went out and walked the streets till late, then went in and to bed.

l awoke shortly before daylight with a realization of some frightful trouble hanging over me, but it was not till I had rubbed my eyes that I remembered what it was. Then the whole thing rushed upon me. I went down to breakfast and drank a cup of coffee. I knew that it wouldn't do for me to appear at the office in my present condition of mind, so I telephoned that I was indisposed and would not go down before afternoon. Then I sat down in the library and took up the morning paper. Bet came in and, standing behind me, soothingly put her arms on my shoulders. Then she called my attention to the fact that I was holding the paper upside down. I smiled a sickly smile and reversed it.

About 11 o'clock Bet came to me again with a scared look on her face and said:

"Oh, Henry, there's some awful trouble between those girls. I can hear them plainly in my room. Margaret has been treating Grace so badly that the worm has turned. She's desperate. Margaret is goading her, and she will either go mad or kill her sister or both. I do think you ought to go in there and stop it."

Springing up. I followed Bet to her room, and, putting my ear close up against the wall where she indicated, I listened. Grace was speaking, but could only distinguish what she said when she spoke in her highest pitch. Her apparently subdued nature seemed to have been fired by taunting to despair. I listened till I heard Margaret say calmly, "Put down the weapon;" then I bolted for the hall and in another moment was rapping at the Bernard sister's door. Bet followed me, and when the door opened she and I stood on one side of the threshold, while the sisters stood on the other side. "What's the matter?" asked both girls in a breath. "Matter! What's the matter here?"

"Nothing." "Nothing! Are confessed crimes, tauntings, threats at murder" I paused. A change was coming over the faces of the two girls. They looked at each other, then burst out laugh-

lug. "Did you hear?"

"Of course we heard!"
"We thought we had the sound dead-Come in and we will explain." And they did explain. They sat as models for artists who portray the passions. Just previous to a sitting for any especial part they were accustomed to work themselves up to feel and consequently to look it. They committed to memory scenes in plays and rehearsed them to each other, then went at once to the sitting with the impres sion fresh. It was these rehearsals we had overheard. There was nothing to be ashamed of in their work, but it was unusual, and persons who knew of it asked so many questions that the sisters became tired of answering them. I married Miss Grace Bernard and stopped the rehearsals. Her sister soon after married, and numerous artists were disappointed at losing valuable

London Diamond Syndicate. The members of the syndicate have offices in the dilapidated unpretentious houses which line the shabby foreign-looking Hatton Garden, "the diamond street," hidden away between the unsavory Leather Lane of ancient renown, and the Italian quarter of Saffron Hill.

The syndicate has a yearly contract with the owners of the South African mines, and each firm receives in weekly consignments the output of one or more of the great diamond mines. As soon as each shipment arrives the stones are sorted into grades.

Sales are held weekly, the diamond brokers, representing American and other trade interests, being notified beforehand as to the number and character of the stones for disposal. Prices are quoted at the same time, and never are haggled over, the lots being bought in as they stand by the representatives of the polishers of New York, Amsterdam, Antwerp and other cities. It is an unwritten law in the trade that the buyer of one quality has no chance of examining the purchase of another, thus avoiding anything like a public auction. The actual value of the diamonds disposed of by the syndicate last year was $33.700,000.

A Lost Ring

It Made Trouble Between Two Lovers

By F. A. MITCHEL

Mary, Farmer Ashurst's daughter. was putting her room to rights of a bright morning in the springtime. The windows were up, and the warm sunshine was pouring into the room. She swept, dusted, made her bed and when all was finished untied the strings of her apron, took off the covering she had used to keep the dust out of her chestnut hair, and it rippled in the sunlight. Then, pouring water into a bowl on the washstand and removing a ring from her finger, she laid the latter carefully on the window sill and proceeded to wash her hands. "Mary!" called her mother from be-

"Go out to the spring house and get me some milk." Hanging the towel on the banister,

Mary went downstairs and did her er-Meanwhile a jackdaw sailed from a cote raised on a huge post in the yard and lit on the roof of the porch just outside Mary's window. He strutted about, pecking here and there, examining minutely breaks between the shingles as if looking for something, and not finding anything to interest hopped up on to the window sill.

The moment he caught sight of Mary's ring its sparkle was reflected in his eyes. He turned it over with his claw, pecked at it with his beak, then threw his head back and laughed. Of all the odds and ends, bits of tin, broken crockery, spools, hairpins and such other articles he had purloined this was his richest find. He danced about it for awhile, evidently wondering how it was made and why it was so beautiful and how it came to be right there for him on the window sill. Then, hearing Mary coming up the stairs, he took it up in his beak and, spreading his wings, flew with it to the cote on the top of the high post. A moment later Mary came back into her room and discovered that it was not where she had left it.

Her engagement ring, given her but a few days before by Joel Armstrong, had disappeared.

There came in at the window a distant sound of a man's voice urging on his horses while plowing. It was Joel's. Molly ran downstairs and across the fields toward her lover. Joel saw her coming and at the turn pulled in

"For heaven's sake, Molly, what's

"Of losing it?"

"I mean it'll bring bad luck." "Oh, no. it won't. That's idle superstition. Tell me, did anything occur while you were gone to the spring house to knock the ring off the window

"Not a thing, so far as I know, and mother, who was in the house all the time, says she heard nothing."

"Anybody in the house but your "Sure no tramp came by or a tin peddler or anybody like that?" "Not a soul." "Funny, isn't it?"

There are many ways of saying these last few words. Molly thought she detected a tinge of incredulity in the way Joel spoke then. She drew away and looked lugubriously on the ground. "Well, don't think any more about t," he said. "I'm going to town on it," he said. Saturday, and if the ring doesn't turn up by that time I'll bring back another-a prettier one."

Molly said nothing by way of reply, but turned to go back to the house, while her lover started up his team. That evening Joel Armstrong went to the store to buy some rope. There he met John Mudge. Mudge and Armstrong were friends, and Armstrong told Mudge of his engagement, mentioning the mysterious loss of the betrothal ring. Mudge looked thought-

"There's semep'n wrong about the Ashurst farm," he said. "There's been a number of things lost there, and the queer thing about it is that they have all disappeared when there wasn't any-hody about but the family."

"Oh, I don't accuse anybody, but it cality the bigger the mystery. A sus picion that Molly had been deprived of the ring in some other way that she did not wish him to know crept in and took possession of him. He did not try to see Molly till the next evening; ther he went to her house, and the moment he entered she knew that he had changed toward her. He sat down beside her and began to question her as a lawyer would cross examine a wit-

"Tell me every person who was, in the house during the day you lost the "No one except father and mother

"Never mind that: tell me."

Molly began to draw back within herself. There was something in both the question and Joel's manner in askit, seeming to indicate that she was herself involved in this investiga-

"You'll have to tell me; might as well out with it first as last."

"Sam Turner."

The expression that passed over Joel's face was not a pleasant one. Sam Turner had been his rival, a rival he feared, for Turner was very much respected and had been the choice of Molly's parents for their daughter. It occurred to Joel that this visit of Turner's had something to do with the mystery of the ring. Perhaps he had taken it away with him and Molly had invented the story of its disappearance till she could get it back. Perhaps-there were a number of other perhapes equally farfetched-but to one bitten by the serpent of jealousy very palpa

ble. Joel's manner became quite "What does all this mean?" asked Molly. "Didn't I tell you when I made my choice between you and Sam that it was irrevocable-at least if you're not going to cause me to think I've made a mistake. He came to wish me happiness in my engagement, and, though it was evident he suffered, he said not one word in complaint at my having declined him for you."

Joel rose. He said nothing till he reached the door, then told Molly that would think the matter over and let her know. What he was to think over he did not explain. Molly kept her eyes fixed on him till he had with drawn, but spoke not a word. She had looked upon Joel Armstrong as one with too noble a nature thus to accuse her within a few weeks of their engagement. This was a surprise and a shock to her.

The next morning Joel received a note from Molly breaking their engagement. The shock was now with him, though he was no better satisfied that there was not something underhanded which he could not understand. He made no reply to the note. He did what a man usually does in such cases-he sulked. The next thing he heard was that Molly had gone away on a visit. He was beginning to find by this time that be had overrated his ability to get on without her, even though she might have deceived him. His farm duties were light, for the planting was finished, and there was little to do but wait for the first reaping. So he sat in the barn when idle and thought about Molly. Sometimes it would suddenly come over him that all this trouble as to the loss of the ring was non sense; that it had been really lost and there had been nothing to cover up. But this view of the case would not last long. Besides, if Molly had really loved him she would have shown more distress at his suspicion of her. It did not occur to him that the more sensitive she was to her honor the more indignant she would be at being falsely accused. One day while he was in the store he heard two men talking. "That was quaar up to Ashurst's yistedy, wa'n't it?" said one. "What was it?"

"Why, they got a pet daw up there. They've been missin' things for a long while and didn't know where they went to. Mrs. Ashurst saw the daw fly into a winder, light on a bureau, pick up a tortoise shell comb and fly away with it to the cote. Ashurst he climbed the post on which the cote sets and pulled out a hull lot o' things. Among others was a ring that disappeared some time ago."

Joel waited to hear no more. He staggered out of the store and walked as fast as his legs would carry him to the Asburst farm. Mrs. Asburst saw him coming and inferred his errand She met him in the doorway.

"Where's Mary?" he asked. "Away. She hasn't come home yet." "When will she come?"

"Don't know." "Will you give me her address?" She wrote it on a bit of paper and aanded it to him. As he took it Mrs. Ashurst noticed his hand trembled.

Joel wrote a penitent letter. Inclined to extremes, he had as little hope of forgiveness as he had had doubt that there was something underhanded go-ing on. He calculated exactly by what mail he would receive a reply and was at the postoffice with a wildly beating. heart to receive it. He was doomed to disappointment. No reply came.

It was now reaping time, and he went to work cutting the wheat. Suddenly he saw Molly coming from the house and making straight toward him. just as she had done the day she lost her ring. He-got down from his seat and hastened through the grain to meet her. She suffered him to take her in his arms. The episode was over.

There is scarcely a section in Ontario that does not claim at least one of the dead, injured or property losers as a former resident. Here in Watford, Fred Hindson, son of our former townspeople, Mr. and Mrs. James Hindson, is among the dead, and his father badly injured. Fred Hindson was born in Watford, and is a grandson of Mrs. Hastings', Front findson, and three others were taken from their home on Lorne street. Harvey Gardner, one of the first to attempt the rescue work there, said: "The houses collapsed along the street. I knew some were in Hindson's. I ran over to assist, but it was slow work alone. I could hear the groans of those under the wreckage. Every move we made caused a shout or a groan, and it was with sinking hearts we kept on. At last Fred was taken out dead, evidently hit by something. His chum, Bob Edgar, was a few feet from Fred, upstairs, but he wiggled out unhurt. The father, James Hindson, was taken out badly hurt, his collar bone being broken, and two others slightly. Next door we took out four more or less injured."

Rev. E. B. Horne's Call to

From the Renfrew Mercury of last week we glean that the congregational meeting of the members of St. Andrew's church to consider the giving of a call to a minister, as a successor to the Rev. John Hay, was held in the church on Friday evening. The proceedings were under the direction of Rev. W. J. Knox, of Pembroke, interim moderator of session. Six clergymen who had preached before the congregation were halloted ed before the congregation were balloted for. On the first ballot all of the six who have preached received some votes, but Rev. E. B. Horne, M. A., had double the vote of the next highest. The two lowest were dropped and another ballot taken. And again Rev. Mr. Horne had double the next highest. The last ballot was between these two and for the third time Mr. Horne led by double. Later, two of those who had voted for the other favorite moved and seconded that the call to Rev. Mr. Horne be made that the call to Rev. Mr. Horne be made unanimous; and this at once carried. Rev. Mr. Knox said that he heartily congratulated the congregation on the choice they had made. As moderator he had kept himself absolutely impartial, but now he felt free to say that he had known Mr. Horne for some years. Mr. Horne would do the congregation credit wherever he was; in the pulpit of the church, in the meetings of the presbytery or on the floor of the John Smith, Forest, met with an un-fortunate accident at the Basket Factory, Friday morning. While employed around the veneer machine, his overalls became caught in some of the gears. In making an attempt to free himself he placed his-left hand on the machine in such a manner that the knives took off the little finger, and a portion of the next two-fingers.

the pulpit of the church, in the meetings of the presbytery or on the floor of the General Assembly. The call, as provided by a vote which had been taken previously, promises a stipend of $1,800 a year, free manse and a month's holiday. It will be forwarded in due course to the presbytery of Lanark and Renfrew and also to that in which Watford is situated. If Mr. Horne accepts the call it will be a matter of nearly two months before all the proceedings will have been completed to permit of his induction to the ministry here.

Rev. Mr. Horne is a native of western Ontario and is a man in the early forties. He was educated in Galt Collegiate Institute and Toronto Univerput up in packages of 100 sheets for 25 cents.

ern Ontario and is a man in the early forties. He was educated in Galt Collegiate Institute and Toronto University; and in theology in Knox College. In Toronto University he took an exceptionally strong course in political economy and bore an active part in university student life. About a year after graduation he was dean of Knox College for a year or two. He then received a call to the Presbyterian church at Watford, where he has been for eleven or twelve years and where he has built up a good congregation. He made a strong impression on the congregation here as a good preacher, and we learn is possessed of strong debating power. On the floor of the church courts he holds his position strongly, yet is exceedingly tolerant. He seems in all respects well worthy to minister to a congregation which in the past has been looked upon as one of the best in the Presbytery of Lanark and Renfrew, which in turn is looked upon as one of the best working Presbyteries in the Church. No congregation, no matter how good the supply may be, but suffers somewhat from having no settled minister in charge; and a great opportunity for service now opens before Rev. Mr. Horne if he accepts the call of St. Andrew's.
