MUNICIPAL SANITORIA AND INSPECTORS

Bills Introduced in Provincial Parliament to Provide for Sanitoria and Inspection to Aid in Combatting Tuberculosis in the Various Municipalities.

Legislation to combat tuberculosis in this Province, as foreshadowed in the Speech from the Throne, was introduced in the House of Assembly last week by the Commissioner of Public Works and Mines, Hon. E. H. Armstrong. This legislation was embodied in two Bills. One was an amendment to the Public Health Act which will give greater powers to the Provincial Health Officer, and the other is to create Municipal Sanitoria.

The former Bill provides that the Public Health Officer shall perform duties heretofore performed by the Inspector of Humane and Penal Institutions. To have general supervision and control of all sanitoria within the Province and of the proper organization and direction of the efforts made to more effectively prevent tuberculosis.

INSPECTOR OF HEALTH.
Section five of the Public Health Act is amended to the effect that the Governor-in-Council shall approve of a duly qualified medical practitioner to be Provincial Inspector of Health. The Inspector of Health may exercise anywhere in the Province, any of the powers conferred by this Act upon Health Officers and Sanitary Inspectors and shall be expected to visit at least once each month all County Tuberculosis Clinics for the purpose of examination and diagnosis of cases of Tuberculosis, and shall, under the direction of the Provincial Health Officer, perform such other duties as may be assigned him by the Department of Public Health.

MUNICIPAL SANITORIA.
The Bill for the creation of Municipal Sanitoria is most advanced and comprehensive in its scope. It first provides that the Province shall be divided into no less than five sections. Each Sanitorium when established under this Act is to be put under charge at the recommendation of the Public Health Officer, of a registered medical practitioner, who has had at least six months of training in a sanitorium and hospital work. No person shall be received into any of the said sanitoria as a patient for care and treatment until he shall have been examined by the medical superintendent in charge of such sanitorium and certified to be a sufferer from tuberculosis.

NURSES FOR THE SICK.
The Governor-in-Council is authorized upon recommendation of the Public Health Officer to appoint competent nurses in each County in the Province as may be necessary. These nurses shall have their headquarters at the several County clinics, and their duties shall be to visit all parts of the County to which they are appointed for the purpose of ascertaining and reporting cases of tuberculosis, to co-operate with the local physicians as to the best means of dealing with such cases; to visit homes afflicted with tuberculosis; to assist in nursing needy cases, to give instructions; to keep records and perform such other duties as may be assigned to them by the Department of Public Health for the Province.

TUBERCULOSIS CLINICS.
The Bill also provides for the establishment of tuberculosis clinics to be under the care of the local Boards of Health of the County in which they are held. The said clinic is to be the headquarters of the County nurses and of the Inspector of Health, whose special duty it will be to examine and diagnose cases of tuberculosis when visiting the County for the examination of tuberculosis cases, and where, when patients apply, they may be drafted to the proper places for treatment.

These clinics will generally serve as a bureau of information and for the distribution of literature connected with tuberculosis. The establishment and maintenance of such clinics will be one of the authorized purposes for which a City, Municipality or incorporated town may vote, rate or assess. The charges for the support and treatment of patients in a sanitorium shall be paid for by the patients if able to do so, and treatment of paupers shall be paid for by such city, town or poor district in which they have settlement. The rate of such charges shall be fixed by the trustees of the sanitorium.

Statue to J. W. Johnstone

Provincial Government to Erect Same in Province Building Square.

In the House of Assembly last week, Premier Murray announced that the Government intended asking the Legislature to make an appropriation toward the erection of a suitable monument in memory of the Hon. J. W. Johnstone.

Mr. J. W. Margeson, of Lunenburg, referred to the resolution recently passed by the Annapolis Municipal Council, strongly favoring the erection of a statue to the great Nova Scotian. Mr. Margeson was of the opinion that the desire to have the memory of Mr. Johnstone fittingly perpetuated was unanimous throughout the Province. In erecting the statue of Joseph Howe on one side of the Provincial Building the Government had done a very proper thing. The erection of a like monument to Johnstone had too long been neglected by the country and it would be a most fitting thing to have his statue in the other square of the Provincial grounds. Mr. Margeson also hopes to see the day when Sir Charles Tupper will be likewise honored by his fellow-countrymen.

Premier Murray said that the Government had been waited upon by an influential delegation about a year ago, and the Government had then practically committed themselves to erect a memorial to Johnstone. The Premier considered it a proper thing for the country to have the memory of the great statesman perpetuated in Nova Scotia. He wished to see a monument to Johnstone on the other side of the Provincial Square, and it was the intention of the Government to ask for the legislation for funds for this purpose, perhaps not the amount to cover the entire expense at once, but enough to make preliminary arrangements for the carrying out of the whole plan.

The disposal of the South African war monument that now stands on the site appropriate for the proposed Johnstone statue will be a matter for consideration later.—Acadian Recorder.

Populations of Halifax & St. John

A correspondent asks the Halifax Recorder concerning the relative populations of Halifax and St. John since Confederation. There are no means of knowing the exact population of either in 1867, but the regular decennial censuses which have followed since then give us the required information. In 1871 the population of Halifax was found to be 29,582, that of St. John 41,325. In 1881 the former had 36,100, the latter 41,353, practically no gain at all. The year 1891 found Halifax with 38,437 and St. John with 39,179, a distinct loss. In 1901 they had respectively 40,832 and 40,711. The census of 1911 gave Halifax 46,619 and her sister city 42,511. It will thus be seen that Halifax gained 17,037 in population from 1871 to 1911, while St. John made only a net gain of 1,186. The trade of St. John, however, has grown faster than that of our own city.

Conviction of Graves

Brothers Quashed

Mr. W. E. Roscoe, K.C., received a telegram from his agent at Ottawa, stating that the appeal he made to the Supreme Court of Canada on behalf of the three Graves brothers, now confined here in jail under sentence of death, had been allowed and the conviction quashed.

Mr. Roscoe argues this case before the Supreme Court and has been most energetic in prosecuting the case on behalf of the condemned men. The prisoners have been under specially good conduct ever since their confinement and have always been hopeful of the result. There is no doubt that the result of this appeal will meet with favor, for the opinion has been expressed by many that the sentence of death was too heavy a sentence for the most unfortunate acts of the condemned men.—Kentville Advertiser.

Topic Social for Cemetery Fund

The topic social in Warrens Hall on Tuesday evening, 25th ult., was fairly well attended, considering outside attractions, and was much enjoyed.

Capt. Salter, President of the Riverside Cemetery Company, as director of ceremonies, carried out the very interesting programme, consisting of music by the orchestra, instrumental duets (organ and violin) by Miss Britain and Master R. Brittain; Vocal Duets: Misses Hilda and Muriel Troop; Misses Jennie Vroom and Hilda Troop; Solos by Mrs. O. Ruffee and Mr. W. A. Warren; quartette: Rev. B. J. Porter, Mrs. Porter, Mrs. B. Chute, Mr. W. A. Warren; quartette: Mrs. O. Ruffee, Miss Gladys Reed, Mr. F. Young, Mr. R. W. W. Furdy; reading, Mrs. W. A. Warren.

Between these selections the discussion of topics kept people moving about and added sociality.

The financial statement by the Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. H. Ruggles, was concise, clear and most satisfactory, showing the total amount raised is in the vicinity of $3,000. All claims for land, labor and supplies paid, and a small balance to the credit of the Company.

Revs. J. F. Duffan and B. J. Porter, who from the first have shown a deep interest in this movement, gave short, appreciative addresses. Mr. A. D. Brown also spoke approvingly of the work and his pleasure in being present and in hearing the letters, some of them from his old pupils, who he was glad to know manifested such an interest in the improvement of their native town.

The speakers emphasized the truths contained in some of the letters, and wished these sentiments could be instilled into the minds of every citizen—old and young. Notably these: "The Cemetery, it seems to me, is an index of the character of a city, town or hamlet. A decent, well-kept cemetery tells more of the true life of a community than any other thing. Nothing speaks so loudly of barbarism and irreligion as a neglected 'God's Acre.' Again, 'We set a bad example to our young people by such neglect. It encourages thoughtlessness and irreverence. If we believe in immortality, as we profess to do, surely the resting place of the dead should be sacred to us. A beautiful waiting place that testifies to our remembrance and our love.' Dainty refreshments were served and a very bright, social evening ended by singing the National Anthem.

Fire at Torbrook

A fire occurred Wednesday morning at No. 2 shaft of the Canada Iron corporation's mines at Torbrook, N. S.

At two o'clock in the morning the foreman, John Hopkins, coming up from the shaft found everything all right at the pit mouth. But at about six o'clock the operator of the underground pump, coming to the surface, found the buildings at the mouth of the shaft on fire.

The fire call was given and the company's brigade responded, and worked for two hours. No. 2 deck-house rock breaker and five hundred ton ore pocket, together with the picking belt machinery were burned.

Some of the lower machinery of the rockbreaker was all that could be saved. The hoisting equipment was equal to the best in the province. It was erected about three years ago at a cost of $40,000 to $50,000 and was covered by insurance.

The fire comes at a very bad time when the shaft had just been pumped out and mining resumed. Work was started yesterday clearing the debris for rebuilding. With slight improvements the plant will be rebuilt as before but it will take nearly three months to complete it. Hoisting will not, therefore, be started till early in May. It is understood the insurance was mainly in New York offices.

Hotel Improvements for Halifax

Now Stated That One of the Mollis Street Hostleries Will be Rebuilt and Extended to Waterfront.

The local hotel situation seems to have taken on a new phase, but it is impossible to get at facts in Halifax, as the negotiations are reported to be in process in Montreal or Toronto. The report now is that the extra hotel accommodation is likely to be made through extension of one of the larger hostleries at present in operation and the extension will be of considerable dimensions. The proposal is that the building shall extend from Hollis to Water Streets, with an entrance from the latter, and that when the extension is completed, the main building shall be reconstructed so as to conform in style of architecture with the new addition.

It is further rumored that as a result of the extension or coincident with it, will be the acquisition of waterfront property opposite the new entrance, and the building of a steamship pier for the accommodation of a new steamship service said to be capable of developing an immense passenger traffic, and which will have close connection with the Plant Line to Boston, and with the Red Cross Line steamers to New York. In the event of the acquisition of the waterfront property, it is understood that it would be boulevarded opposite the new entrance to the hotel.

An effort to get at positive facts today was not satisfactory. At the Board of Trade offices nothing was known of the matter, and a search for a couple of well-known citizens, who would be expected to know something, brought out the fact that they were at Montreal and Ottawa.

So far as can be learned the hotel will retain its identity. A recent announcement by a C. P. R. official that that corporation would build no commercial hotel in Halifax now, would therefore, seem justified if the plan outlined is carried into effect. For some time negotiations have been carried on looking to the acquisition of the block bounded by Hollis, Sackville and Water Streets, and there were good reasons for supposing the C. P. R. were at the bottom of these but there were one or two properties that were not available for purchase, so apparently that deal is off and the extension idea is on.

Death of Archdeacon Kaulbach

The news of the very sudden death of the Rev. I. A. Kaulbach, of Truro, Archdeacon of Nova Scotia, on Tuesday, the 25th ult., has been received by a very wide circle of friends and acquaintances with great regret. He went into the engine house in the early evening by a side entrance which was not lighted, fell through a trap door upon the cement floor beneath, and was found dead a short time afterwards. His wife died in May last. He leaves a son, a major in the Warwickshire Regiment now serving in India.

Archdeacon Armitage says of him in the Halifax Herald, "There was no clergyman of the Church of England held in higher esteem by his brethren of the clergy, and no one more respected by the laity of the diocese. He truly bore through his honored career the white flower of a blameless life."

The interment was made on Saturday afternoon, the 1st inst. in St. John's Cemetery.

Seriously Injured

Rev. J. E. Warner, rector of St. George's church, Parraboro, was seriously injured in the face and head on Feb. 23rd by falling on the steps of the church at Black Rock, where he had gone to hold service. He was brought home and placed under surgical care and will probably be confined to bed for a week or more, as some of the bones of his face are broken.—Truro News.

CANADA'S DESTINY.

M. Bertilland Forecasts Strange Division of Dominion.

Henri Bertilland, the great French controversialist, has just evolved a striking future for Canada. For a month this resident of Old France studied conditions in Canada, and has come to the conclusion that the French and English will never assimilate, and that the logical outcome will be the establishment of a French republic in Quebec and the assimilation of the west of Canada by the United States.

M. Bertilland believes the French Canada is to become ultimately an independent French republic. "The statesman who wrought the fabric of your Dominion," said the "Sidney Brookes of France" "are worthy of high praise for their constructive policy, but their handiwork was doomed to destruction by warring forces far more potent than could be endured by the artificial bulwarks of Government. I have gone into the matter thoroughly. I have conversed with representatives of every class in all this, the only opinion I can offer candidly is that your dreams of a united Dominion, let alone a united Empire, are merely folly. That has the habit of the St. Lawrence valley in common with the fishermen and farmers of the west. In fact it would be difficult to imagine two types more essentially different in creed, race and point of view.

"Furthermore, there can be no reconciling the conflicting interests of this great country. Your western farmers clamor for reciprocal trade with the United States, and he will not sacrifice permanently his material prosperity on account of a policy of selfish protection fostered by Canadian vested interests. British Columbia's Imperialism is the bugbear of Nationalistic Quebec. What in the one case means self-preservation, in the other signifies taxation without representation.

"This viewpoint is novel, I admit," continued M. Bertilland, "but I look merely at facts, tendencies and analogies. This great country will work out its destiny through a process of economic and political evolution. Many years may elapse before your political rhapsodies are disillusioned, but the hour of destiny is certain. French Canada will be a great republic, including not only the two and a half millions of its people, and also the two millions of co-religionists and co-linguists in the United States. The middle western provinces will become States of the American Union, and British Columbia will evolve from a stage of dependency upon British naval protection to be either an Asiatic colony or a petty independent kingdom.

Mr. Bertilland will write a series of articles for Parisian papers on his so-called findings of conditions in Canada.

Rode on Duke's Train.

One of the characteristics of the Duke of Connaught, whether at home in Ottawa or on the road, is to take a walk before breakfast, no matter what the weather may be. In this connection H.R.H. himself tells the story of an incident at Port Arthur in the early stages of his transcontinental tour. To appreciate it one would have to hear the duke himself state his experience, but it is good enough to repeat second-hand. The vice-regal car had been sidetracked for the night, away down in the railway yards, and when the duke arose in the early morning he was the first of the party to be up. Starting off by himself he half a mile or so and noticed a big building in the distance. Not knowing what it was he made up his mind to ask the first man he met. He had minutes before a man came along, walking to the west and the following conversation ensued: The duke: "Good morning, sir, will you be good enough to tell me what building that is in the distance?"

The other man: "How the hell should I know. I'm a stranger here myself. I was thrown off the train last night."

Then there ensued a conversation as the result of which the man who was thrown off the train was taken to Winnipeg in the royal car and there joined the harvesters' party, with which he had left Nova Scotia.—Star Weekly.

Money in the Bank.

A glance at the September bank report shows that Canada has money in the bank. The fever of real estate, which seems to have seized the whole country, landed men laying out new suburbs, the eager public falling for their offers cold storage and all; the very heavy year on the exchange because of the remarkable appreciation of many domestic issues—these operations require money. Watchful publicists have sounded warnings admonishing Canadians not to be carried away by the speculation in land and stocks; have urged upon the country to keep its bank balance on the right side. Have they been heeded? Figures don't tell the whole story, but they must go for something. In May, for the first time in our history, Canadian bank deposits reached the thousand million mark. An evidence of the thrift of the Canadian people is the fact that the September bank report indicates that demand and saving deposits were $123,000,000 ahead of September, 1911.—Canadian Courier.

Tribute to Dr. Vogt.

When the Mendelssohn Choir of Toronto was in Boston last season Canadians heard many stories of the royal reception the singers were given. There is a neat little compliment, however, to Dr. Vogt, which has been overlooked. It was on the home trip in the dining-car. The members of the choir were hungry, and rushed into the diner at the first call. Some one approached a table, presided over by a particularly imposing negro. He bowed politely and shook his fuzzy head. "You all can't sit down beah. This beah table is reserved for Doctah Mendelssohn."

The Maid of The Mist

By Miss Clara A. Black, North Dakota

A Yankton, South Dakota, paper says— The Phreno-Cosmain, college paper at Mitchell, offered prizes for best stories. The first prize was won by a Freshman, the second was won by a Freshman, the second was won by Miss Cara A. Black, also a Freshman, daughter of Rev. W. A. Black, the third was won by a senior. We publish Miss Black's story below.

Little cakes of ice, catching the sunlight, glittered and sparkled in the swift flowing stream; the river rippled and swished and glided it slipped over the brink of the precipice, fell silently the three hundred fifty feet, and boomed and roared on the rocks below. The spray rose in clouds and settled on the rustic bridge where we stood, instantly making deeper the thick coat of white with which it was already covered.

It settled too on the ice encased trees, some of the branches grained and creaked under their burden of beauty; others, finding the burden too heavy, cracked sharply and came crashing down, making the /silent woods echo and re-echo with the sound. But always the river slipped and glided, falling, falling, and booming on the rocks below.

A cloud of spray rose and hovered a moment above the falls, and there suddenly, half veiled by the mists, floated a maiden. Her eyes were blue, blue like a bit of sky seen through the mists, her brow and arms and floating garments—white, like the spray around her, and the faint flush on her cheeks was like the early sunbeams touching the mists. She turned toward us and smiled, then a cloud of spray rose, and, folding itself like a blanket around her, sank with her again to the river.

"Oh, what is it?" we cried, turning eagerly to our guide. "It is the Maid of the Mists," he answered.

"Why, what? Won't you tell us about her?" we begged. "It happened long ago," he began, "when an Indian tribe lived here on the banks of the Niagara. The white men came and settled on the other side of the river. The Indians waited till their homes were built, and their early crops almost-ready to harvest, then one night they crossed the river, burned the village, massacred many of the settlers, and carried the rest back to their encampment for slower torture.

Among the captives was the governor's daughter, Virginia, whose people had all perished in the massacre. One night when Virginia lay sleepless on her bed of skins a voice close beside her said, "Little white squaw is thirsty. Here is water." Virginia turned and looked into the stolid face of a young Indian woman. Mechanically she took the birch bark cup held out to her and placed it to her parched lips. After one sip of the cool refreshing water she drank greedily. When she handed the cup back almost empty, she smiled as she said, "I thank you, friend." The young Indian woman grunted and withdrew. Virginia sank back on her couch and soon she was sleeping, though now and then she started suddenly, and threw her hands over her eyes, or moaned softly as she slept. In the morning her face seemed paler than before, but the dullness from the agony that she had seen and suffered had gone from her eyes. That sleep, the first she had since the massacre, had given her a little fresh strength.

The Indian girl, Nianca, visited her often in the days that followed, and a warm friendship sprang up and ripened between the two young women. Nianca taught Virginia the language of her people, and told her many of the customs and traditions. She told her how, every year, on the evening of the first new moon, after the harvest of corn, her people cast a lot among the young women of the tribe, and the one who was chosen, must give herself as a sacrifice to the Great Spirit so that he would feel kindly toward them and would care for them through the winter. The girl who was chosen, must when the first sunbeam was seen the next morning, step into a canoe and be swept over the falls.

She told her also, about her warrior, a young brave of a neighboring tribe, who was coming for her in the fall, to take her home to be his squaw and live in his wigwam. Nianca's black eyes sparkled as she talked about her warrior. But suddenly the sparkle vanished and in place was a light of sympathy—she had noticed that the white girl's face was very sorrowful. "Why is the little white sister sad?" she asked. "It was only thinking," Virginia replied, with a poor little attempt at a smile.

Nianca was silent, and after a while Virginia said wistfully, "It is only that your happiness makes me think of what I might have had." "Is little white sister's warrior dead?" asked Nianca. "Yes. He saved my life by giving his. If only I had died then too."

It was only a few days afterwards that a warrior came to Virginia's wigwam and bade her follow him. She knew what that meant for her—torture and death. She had been longing for death to come, but now that it was so near, she felt that life was very sweet. She shrank from the thought of that awful death, and as she entered the circle of warriors she looked appealing around at the cruel faces; certainly there was no hope there. But when her life was about to be taken, Nianca suddenly stepped into the circle and begged her father, the chief, to spare the white girl's life. The chief at first stubbornly refused, but finally gave Nianca permission to take the white girl away. As a symbol of her gratitude, Virginia gave Nianca her own little oval locket, which the Indian girl had greatly admired.

The last of September came and went, and the month of October hastened to a close, bringing nearer the night when the lot was to be cast among the maidens of the tribe. Finally the day came; night fell, and found the warriors seated around the fire and behind them in silent groups, were the men. In perfect silence the lot was cast, in a tomb-like quiet the result was read; The lot had fallen on Nianca.

The Indian girl and Virginia returned silently to the wigwam, and Nianca set about making preparations for her death. Virginia's face was white, and she crouched on a mat on the ground with hands clasped close together; but Nianca's face was stolid, and even her unusually expressive eyes betrayed no feeling.

After everything was ready she went over and sat down beside Virginia. She so far broke her characteristic reserve as to take the white girl's hand in hers and held it closely.

"Little white sister must not grieve," she said gently, "I have arranged things for you and you will be taken care of. No harm will come to you after I have gone." Virginia seemed not to notice that Nianca had spoken, but the Indian girl went on, "I have sent a message to my warrior, he will come when he receives it, I shall have left a message for him in the locket. He will take care of you."

Virginia had listened wide-eyed, to the last of what Nianca said, and now she snatched her hand away and sprang up.

"It isn't that, Nianca," she cried. "It's you and your warrior. It's you giving up your beautiful young life, and your warrior, will he not suffer? Tell them your life is too precious for such a sacrifice." "You do not say well, little sister," rebuked Nianca gravely, "No one's life is too good or too beautiful to be given as a sacrifice for her people." Virginia was silent, though the sound of her tense breathing could be heard distinctly in the quiet place.

Suddenly some one from outside called Nianca's name. She rose quickly and left the wigwam. Virginia could not help hearing the low voiced conversation that went on outside. Nianca's father had come to bid his daughter good-bye. The parting was reserved and dignified; no slight shading or trembling of the voices betrayed the smallest part of the grief that was gnawing the heart of the stern warrior, or the anguish that was wringing the soul of the heroic Nianca.

In a few minutes the Indian girl re-entered the wigwam. "Nianca, you shall not die," cried Virginia passionately, "it isn't fair. Listen to me, Nianca, I will go in your place, give me your clothes and blanket, and then go away somewhere and when your warrior comes

I will tell him where you have gone and he will find you."

Nianca's head went up proudly as she answered, "Little white sister must think very poorly of Nianca to suggest that; I have been chosen, and I must go. Do not try to make it otherwise."

"But I will try to make it otherwise," cried Virginia. "Listen, you have said no harm will come to me after you have gone and I believe you, but I will be a captive, and my only friend will be gone. I would die a hundred deaths than to live a life like that. It would be dreadful. You can see that. You want to die, and leave me to the mercy of your people or the people of your warrior, and you know how they will hate me. You have love and happiness to live for; if I live it will be only to suffer. You have everything to live for, I have nothing. Your warrior will come to you tonight; let me go to mine tomorrow. It is the quickest, the easiest way, Nianca. My warrior is waiting in the other country and I want him so. Let me go to him, Nianca, let me go."

For answer Nianca drew out the locket, and after writing a few characters on a little piece of birch bark which she enclosed in the locket, she handed it to Virginia.

"It is hard to tell who is right, little sister," she said, "it may be I will be sorry I have done this, but now it seems best. When the morning comes wrap yourself in my blanket and wear my leggings and moccasins, if my warrior does not come before you go, leave the locket lying on the bank of the river, it will tell him where to find me."

"You are going to your warrior then, and will let me go to mine," cried Virginia. Nianca nodded as she began to lay out the blanket and the other things which Virginia should wear. Virginia dropped in to a heap on the ground and sobbed hysterically. "Does not the little white sister wish to die?" asked Nianca peremptorily. "O, yes, yes, I am so glad. Just a few hours and I will see my warrior again."

Virginia was dressed and closely wrapped in the blanket, when a young brave came the next morning, to let her know it was almost time for the sacrifice. The white girl found the Indians assembled on the bank of the river, and they parted slightly to let her pass.

The light was growing in the east, and Virginia watched anxiously for an Indian warrior who should come from the south. Suddenly the first sunbeam began to play over the tops of the trees, and the chief gave the signal for the girl to step into the canoe. The signal was silently withdrawn, however, and all eyes were turned toward the south, toward a young Indian who, with long easy strides, was running toward them. He passed the Indians without a word and stopped beside Virginia.

"Have you any message for me?" he asked in the Indian tongue. Virginia trembled violently. If she spoke they would recognize her voice; if she held out the locket, they would see that her hand was white. From under the blanket she dropped the locket, and pushed it toward him with the top of her moccasins. Then she turned quickly and stepped into the canoe, two Indian braves sent the light boat skimming out over the water. The current of the river caught it, the canoe shuddered, then righted itself and, with its occupant stiff standing upright, shot gracefully over the falls, and was lost in a cloud of silver spray.

The sound of the guide's voice ceased, and still the swishing and roaring of the mighty cataract was in our ears, and the clouds of spray rose and fell. We found ourselves watching involuntarily for another glimpse of Virginia.

"Will we ever see her again?" someone asked. "It is not likely," the guide replied gravely. "Few people have seen her at all, and I have known fewer who have seen her twice. Yet every morning just at sunrise, she comes back in the mists to tell us her sacrifice has been accepted."

Cherished by the presence of God, I will do at each moment, without anxiety, according to the strength which he shall give me, the work that his Providence assigns me. I will leave the rest without concern; it is not my affair. I ought to consider the duty to which I am called each day, as the work that God has given me to do, and to apply myself to it in a manner worthy of his glory, that is to say, with exactness and in peace. I must neglect nothing; I must be silent about nothing.—Francois de la Motte Fenelon.

Death in Drinking Cups of Common Schools

The fire horror pales into insignificance compared with the terrors of the common school drinking cup, as portrayed in "Good Housekeeping." It seems truly to be a veritable poison cup, and it is not pleasant to read about it. The human mouth, with its warmth and moisture, is a favorite lurking place for bacteria and it appears to be impossible for human lips to touch anything without contaminating it.

Dr. Alvin Davison, of Lafayette College, requested ten boys, says the article in "Good Housekeeping" to apply the upper lips to flat, clean glass in the same way as they would touch a cup in drinking. Under the microscope these lips showed an average of about one hundred human cells or minute bits of skin and 75,000 bacteria to each lip—this from one application to the lip.

Prof. Davison also examined a drinking glass, which for nine days had been in common use in a school. By counting the cells present on fifty different areas on the glass he estimated that the cup contained over 20,000 cells or bits of dead skin. Few of these showed less than ten germs clinging to them, and many as high as one hundred and fifty, while between the cells were thousands of germs left by the smears of saliva deposited by the drinkers.

A cup which had been used in a high school for several months without being washed, was lined inside with a thin, brownish deposit. Under the microscope this proved to be composed of particles of mud, thousands of bits of dead skin and millions of bacteria, among which were "seeds of germs corresponding in all details to those of tuberculosis. Some of this sediment was injected under the skin of a healthy guinea pig and in forty hours the animal died. A post-mortem examination revealed that death was due to the presence of a sufficient number of pneumonic germs to cause blood poisoning.

A second guinea pig inoculated with the cup sediment, developed tuberculosis. And these are only a few of the dangers to which the state exposes children in its efforts to give them that education which Harold Gorst considers such a curse. There are dirty towels as well as dirty drinking cups. One school was found where seventy-five children used only a single towel daily. There is the common cake of soap also. There are dirty books and germ-laden desks kept ever in motion by the restless shuffling of little feet. How much of the illness of childhood may be traced to these sources?

GOVERNMENT GIVES $200.

Last week Mrs. Bennett Eisenhour, of Seaside, Lunenburg Co., gave birth to three girls and two boys. Dr. Donovan, the physician in attendance and J. W. Margeson, M. P. P., informed the Provincial Government of the fact, and in consequence the Local Government ordered that $200 be expended by Dr. Donovan to engage a nurse, etc., for the children. The five children have all since died.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

owe their singular effectiveness in curing Rheumatism, Lumbago and Sciatica to their power of stimulating and strengthening the kidneys. They enable these organs to thoroughly filter from the blood the uric acid (the product of waste matter) which gets into the joints and muscles and causes these painful diseases. Over half a century of constant use has proved conclusively that Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills strengthen weak kidneys and Cure Rheumatism.

STRONGLY ADVISES "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Because They Cured Him, And They Will Cure You

MR. ALEX. MCCARTER

WALKERTON ONT., May 9th, 1911.
"I have been in Walkerton in business for a good many years and many of my townsmen know that my health, for long periods was precarious. My trouble was extreme Nervousness, brought on by indigestion and Dyspepsia, from which I suffered in the most severe form. It was so bad that I could not sleep before about four in the morning. I noticed one of your published testimonials of how someone had used "Fruit-a-tives" for similar trouble and asked Mr. Hunter, my druggist, his opinion on the matter and he advised their use. I immediately procured several boxes and I am pleased to say that I now enjoy splendid health and could not possibly feel better. I can eat with every degree of satisfaction and sleep without an effort. I strongly advise anyone suffering from like complaints, to commence using "Fruit-a-tives". ALEX. MCCARTER. BIG LIQUOR HAUL AT CAMPBELLTON.

Seizure at I. C. R. Freight Shed in Campbellton.

Campbellton, N. B., Feb. 22.—Following the recent order received from the I. C. R. officials that the Liquor License Inspectors of prohibition or local option towns had the right to search suspicious packages carried over the International, Chief Hughes made a call at the freight sheds on Saturday and was rewarded with the largest haul of liquor ever made in Campbellton.

In all some twenty-six barrels and numerous cases were seized and removed to the police station, none of the packages bearing any name, having only some private marks.

On Tuesday a second call was made at the freight sheds and this time the haul was four barrels.

The new regulation which permits officers of the law to enter any premises on the I. C. R. where freight is kept and inspect, search and seize liquor improperly shipped is certainly stringent enough and will do much to do away with this traffic on the intercolonial which heretofore could not be touched.

ALBERTA MAN HAD DUG UP A TREASURE.

Bones Found of His Farm Those of Old Timer Thirty Feet Long and Fifteen High.

New York, Feb. 27.—Fossil bones which J. L. Wagner, a farmer in the Canadian northwest, discovered in the Red River Canyon near Calgary, four years ago, and which he casually reported on a later visit to the American Museum of Natural History here, are now on exhibition for the first time at the museum, as an almost complete skeleton of a crested dynastoea, a reptile thirty feet long and fifteen feet high. It is picarated as probably 3,000,000 years old and existed when the Canadian north-west had a sub-tropical climate. This particular species of the reptile has hitherto been unknown, and it has been scientifically named the sauroclophus osborbi.

A WORD FROM DR. GARNET MORSE

Dr. Garnet Morse, formerly of Lawrencetown, writing from Hammond, B. C., says: "The shooting is remarkably good in this district. The Government imported pheasants and other birds some years ago. These have multiplied at a great rate. The cock pheasant is among the most beautiful of birds, and far more toothsome than chicken or partridge. The open season (for cocks only) is in September and November, and then the County is full of hunters. In winter they die in large numbers but the government sends grain to be strewn along the roads. I run across a dozen, or two each time I am out driving. Six to twelve have lived about the house here all winter, nearly as tame as chickens or turkeys. We throw grain out to them."

MADERO AND SUAREZ SHOT.

Ex-President Madero and ex-Vice-President Suarez of the Mexican Republic, were shot and killed on Sunday in the streets of Mexico City. The official explanation given by Huerta, the new President, is that the two men were being removed to another prison for safety, when the Madero party among the crowd became so threatening that the prisoners were killed to prevent a rescue. A curious feature is that not one of the suspected rescuers was killed or even fined at, and so far there is no word even of any of them being arrested. The successful revolutionists cabled ex-President Diaz shortly after Madero surrendered, saying that Diaz was now partly avenged. Madero was the President who succeeded Diaz. The present successful revolt had as one of its most energetic leaders General Felix Diaz, a nephew of the ex-President, and these facts make it easy to understand why Madero and Suarez were killed in cold blood.

NOTED HEBERT MARRIAGE CASE FOR LAST COURT.

Montreal, Feb. 26.—That the Hebert and Tremblay wedding cases involving the alleged rights of the Quebec courts to give civil effects to decisions of the Roman Catholic Church dissolving marriages which had not been performed in accordance with the laws, will come up before the privy council in the near future, was the announcement made last night by George V. Cousins, one of the lawyers who acted for the defendants in opposing annulments in these two suits, in the course of an address on the status of married women, delivered in Emmanuel church, under the auspices of the Woman's Council of Montreal.

The principal points to be considered in the Hebert case was whether the courts could uphold the ecclesiastical annulment of the marriage before a Protestant minister of two Catholics. Judge Laurendeau holding that the wedding could be voided and Judge Charbonneau deciding the other way. An appeal against the latter judge's right to hear the case is pending. In the Tremblay issue two people were married and afterwards found that they were fourth cousins, the church authorities annulling the marriage on the application of the husband, who could have made the contract regular by the payment of a $5 fee. The court of review is expected to deliver its decision on the application made to take this case straight to the privy council in a few days.

HIS OPINION OF POLITICS.

A politician who is a great walker was out enjoying his favorite recreation. After going a few miles he sat down to rest. "Want a lift, mister?" asked a good-natured farmer, driving that way. "Thank you," responded the politician, "I will avail myself of your kind offer." The two rode on in silence for a while. Presently the farmer asked: "Professional man?" "Yes," answered the politician, who was thinking of a Bill he had pending before the House. After another long pause the farmer observed: "You ain't a lawyer, or you'd be talkin'; you ain't a doctor, 'cause you ain't got a bag; and you ain't a preacher from the looks of you. What is your profession?" "I am a politician," was the reply. The farmer gave a snort of disgust. "Politics ain't no profession; politics is a disease," said he.

THE TROUBLE REMEDIED.

The Rev. S. Parkes Cadman tells of a minister he knew some years ago, who happened to mention in the course of a sermon that he regretted to say that the commentators did not agree with him. The next morning one of his former parishioners drove up to the parsonage and deposited a full barrel of fine "murfies" at the kitchen door. "Parson," he drawled, "I heard you say yesterday in church that the common yaters didn't set very well on yer stomach, so I've brought some of my choicest Early Rose. You'll find 'em mighty uncommon, an' there ain't a speck of dyspepsy in a wagon load of 'em."

NEVER HEARS ANY SECRETS.

Supreme Court Justice Martin J. Keogh has a fine family of children. One of the little Keogh girls, who is just taking her first steps in learning, came home recently sad of face. "What can be the matter?" asked an elder member of the family. "Oh," said the little one, "teacher asked me something and I couldn't tell her. She asked me what four and six make." "And didn't you know that?" queried the wiser older one in surprise. "No, I didn't know. How could I know? Nobody never tells me any yourself!"

EXPLAINING THE GLOOM.

At a wedding the best man noticed that one of the guests, a gloomy looking young man, did not seem to be enjoying himself. He was wandering about as though he had lost his best friend. The best man took it upon himself to cheer him up. "Er—have you kissed the bride?" he asked by way of introduction. "Not lately," replied the gloomy one, with a faraway expression.

NOT IMPOSSIBLE.

The Duke de Roquelaure was told that two ladies of the court had a quarrel and had cast all kinds of invectives at each other. "Did they call each other homely?" asked the Duke. "No, my lord!" "All right; then I will see that they become reconciled."

A MATTER OF RELATIONSHIP.

Two chance acquaintances from Ireland were talking together. "An' so yer name is Riley?" said one. "Are ye any relation to Tim Riley?" "Very distantly," said the other. "O! was me mother's first child, an' Tim was the twelfth."

"He says his poor children need another mother." "Then why doesn't he take one home?" "Seems the children pay the rent, and they are very hard to convince."

CITY CIRCULATION AGENT

Of Leading Montreal Daily Endorses GIN PILLS

I have long years of suffering from Kidney Trouble—two boxes of GIN PILLS—and it's all gone. That has been the experience of Mr. Eugene Quessel, Chief City Circulation Agent of La Patrie, of Montreal. He describes it feelingly: "May 3rd, 1912. "I have been suffering from Kidney trouble for over five long years. I had also Rheumatism in all my bones and muscles, could not sleep nights and on some occasions could hardly walk. I had been treated by some of our best Physicians but without relief and I lost over fifteen pounds. One day I met one of our leading hotelkeepers, who had been cured by your famous GIN PILLS, and he advised me to try them. So I bought two boxes at my druggist's and before I had used one box I felt a big change. Before I finished the second one I was completely cured. I can assure you I can hardly believe it if I had only known what I know now I would not have spent over one hundred dollars for nothing when two boxes of GIN PILLS cured me."

GIN PILLS are gaining a world-wide reputation, by the way they conquer the most obstinate cases of Rheumatism and all kinds of Kidney Trouble. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. Sample free if you write National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 149

DUTY.

This truth comes to us more and more the longer we live that on what field or in what uniform or with what aims, we do our duty matters very little or even what our duty is, great or small, splendid or obscure. Only to find our duty certainly and somewhere, or somehow, to do it faithfully, makes us good, strong, happy and useful men, and tunes our lives into some feeble echo of the life of God.—Phillips Brooks.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5, 1913.

The Report handed to the MONITOR of last week respecting the meeting of the ratepayers called to consider the question of borrowing funds to continue the improvement of the streets, stated that out of 245 men and women entitled to vote only 42 were present.

This small attendance may have been due in part to the fact that on the evening chosen for the discussion, all the churches of the town were holding their usual week night services; and it would be well, in calling any similar town meeting, to remember that Wednesday evening is preempted by the churches in the manner stated, because a good number of our citizens properly regard themselves as pledged to sustain these week-evening services as necessary to the highest interests of the town.

But this was not the only reason for the small attendance at the meeting of the ratepayers. The same condition has existed on other occasions. As to a meeting convened a year or more ago to take up the question of adding a Manual training department to our School, the vote by a small majority was adverse.
Some of our most influential citizens afterwards expressed regret that they were not present to give their vote in favor of the proposition. Had they been present, and they acknowledged there was no necessary impediment,— we would have had for our boys, some of whom much need the training, an equipment such as the neighboring towns of Annapolis and Middleton have to their great advantage.

But, the fact we desire to emphasize is that at the meeting of the 19th ult., not one fifth of the ratepayers were present to express their opinions upon a matter involving the addition of several thousands of dollars to the present liabilities of the town.

We are not now arguing in favor of the advisability or inadvisability of such increased expenditure. Neither are we in the least intimating what Samuel Johnson said plainly more than a century ago, that the penalty men pay for inattention to public duties is that they are ruled by rogues; for the persons present were a good average of our citizens. But, it is very important that every citizen should assume his own share of responsibility, by taking a personal and active interest in all civic affairs, and sustain the Mayor and Council in their endeavors to do what is best and most needed to be done.

—Yesterday, March 4th, Woodrow Wilson entered upon the responsible and onerous duties of President of the United States. Large crowds of people assembled in Washington to witness, as far as they could, the imposing ceremonies of the inaugural. A committee of 490 leading citizens, under whose direction 1600 special policemen were employed, arranged the various details.
President Taft and Mr. Wilson rode together from the White House to the Capitol where the oath of office was administered to the latter. At the request of Mr. Wilson, the customary inaugural ball was omitted from the program.

In one of his addresses, shortly after his election, President Woodrow Wilson is reported to have said, "The Presidency is not a rose-water affair. This is an office in which a man must put on the war paint."
He was, of course, using a familiar figure of speech. There are continually arising in the Councils of the Nations and the Provinces and in the smaller Councils of the towns, important questions upon which it is to be expected great differences of opinion will arise.

These questions must be turned over and over and looked upon from every point of view before their true character and bearing can be accurately discovered. The important thing, therefore, for a man who is called upon to decide upon such questions, is to endeavor to divest himself of all partiality and all personal predilections, and all effort to gain a victory for victory's sake. He must give those who differ from him the benefit of believing that they are as willing to see things, as they really are, as he himself is. Hard words are not arguments. Angry denunciation is not reasoning. He who would govern others must first learn to govern himself.

Our neighbors of the United States are so related to us in many ways that what affects them for good or evil affects us for good or evil. We have the same national origin. We have to a large extent the same great problems to solve. The best men and women among them are actuated by the same high ideals as the best men and women among ourselves. They possess a great country in which the oppressed and impoverished of many lands have found freedom and prosperity, and though we as a Dominion have come later upon the scene what we have said of their Country can as truly be said of ours. The only rivalry between us ought to be the rivalry of making our people the best and most contented and most neighborly people in the world.

Every well-wisher of our humanity will hope that President Wilson will not be obliged to put on the war paint too frequently, and that the battle of words may eventuate in the triumph of truth and righteousness.

—Annapolis has recently had a Merchants' Day. A special train brought large numbers of people from the villages and towns along the Annapolis Basin, and many others came from other directions. And all, both visitors and townspeople, appeared to be quite satisfied with the experiences and results of the day. It is reported that Messrs.
A. M. King and Son paid the railway fares of all who purchased at their store ten dollars worth or more. It is believed that the merchants who did the largest advertising reaped the largest results.

Might not our Bridgetown people take a leaf out of this book, and learn from Annapolis, Middleton and other towns near and far. We certainly can claim to have one of the most pleasantly situated towns in this far-famed Valley.
And our manufactories and well-filled stores are worthy of a visit and of success. This matter has on several previous occasions been advocated by the MONITOR and will be referred to again.

In the meantime let our merchants and manufacturers confer with each other on the subject and we assure them the MONITOR will contribute all possible assistance.

—Another instance of the thoughtful-ness of King George. He has conferred on the widow of the late Robert Falcon Scott, the Antarctic Explorer, all the honors which would have come to her from the Knighthood of her husband, if he had survived.

—The management of The Monitor Publishing Company have pleasure in announcing that they have secured Mr.
Fred V. Young as superintendent of the mechanical department of the MONITOR.
Mr. Young, who held a responsible position with the MONITOR for a long period of years has, during the last six years, been associated with some of the important job-printing establishments in and near Boston. It will be gratifying news to many of the MONITOR's readers that he has returned to his old charge, and an assurance that the high standard of
of the MONITOR's job-printing department will be maintained.

declared a recess.

During the recess the tables were produced, the linen cloths spread and on the tables were placed the most palatable and dainty dishes. When all was ready the ladies came in and all gathered around the table. The repass finished, a vote of thanks from the Lodge was presented to "The part in making the session a sucfitting response. After this the Lodge resumed business, exalting three of the brothers to the Royal

FIGHT SMUGGLERS.

Philadelphia, Mar. 3.—The Police have discovered a regular smugglers' fo'castle on board the Allan line steamer Mongolian, which was the scene of a sharp exchange of pistol shots yesterday, in which one man was killed. Three sailors were discovered by Customs men trying to carry a cask of whiskey through the inspection line drawn around the vessel. The men were stopped and a fusillade of bullets followed. The police say that the bunk of the entire crew were filled with rare old lace and things upon which considerable duty is levied.

LOCAL AND SPECIAL.

The fine residence of C. H. Borden, of Wolfville, was partially destroyed by fire on Wednesday last.

A very serious accident occurred recently to Mrs. Adoniram Rumsey of Clarence. Suffering from an attack of rheumatism in her shoulder, she was applying a patent liniment, a sample bottle of which had been left at her door. The application was made while sitting before an open fire and the fumes of the liniment coming in contact with the blaze of the fire caused an explosion. Mrs. Rumsey was severely burned about her shoulder, back and side. With great presence of mind the flames were extinguished with a rug from the floor, otherwise the consequences would have been extremely disastrous. As it is, Mrs. Rumsey is suffering severely from the effects of the burns.

W. S. Saunders, organizer for the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance, delivered an address in the Baptist church last Sunday evening at the close of the regular preaching service, which was attended by the congregations and all the pastors of the various churches in town. The speaker in beginning his address said the temperance work was no child's play, as some believed, and he felt a great responsibility in advocating the cause of temperance. Mr. Saunders was of the opinion that the world at large did not fully realize the magnitude of the evils of temperance, and he advocated agitation, education and oratorical education work. The meeting was held under the auspices of Olive Branch Division of the Sons of Temperance, and was presided over by Mr. R. W. Purdy.

The preliminary examination of Leonard Durling, accused of harboring and concealing an escaped prisoner, was held before Stipendiary Magistrate Elias Messenger on Thursday last. The evidence resulted in sending him up for trial, allowing him bail to the amount of $400 for his appearance in June. The young man whose escape he tried to aid, was convicted of stealing a pair of shoes by Justice Legge at Middleton, and was sent to the County Jail in Annapolis Royal in custody of the Constable Foster of Port George. The constable dropped the offender into the shop and his man took the opportunity to escape. On the suspicion that he had gone to the home of his relative at Centrelea the house was searched by Foster and Police-man Gill and the escaped prisoner was found hiding in a loft. He was finally lodged in the County Jail.

REMEMBERED BY THE BRIDE.

They were Misses Charlotte Bowley, Helen Pearson, Marion Kempton, Muriel Elliott, Vera Eleanor and Evelyn Langley. Marion Bishop and Hazel Gillie. Their singing reflected much credit on their musical instructor, Miss Minnie Longley, who is an aunt of the bride. (Outlook please copy.)

Methodist Church Notes

The girls of the Alcorn Mission Circle were very successful in their social and tea on Thursday evening of last week. The coffers of the Circle were so generously replenished that the amount of money annually raised will be considerably increased. Thanks are hereby extended to all who assisted in the above named special effort.

On Friday evening of this week there will be no Epworth League meeting. All the young people of the church will repair to the Baptist church, there to join the young people of the other churches in a service to be addressed by Miss Hall, travelling secretary of young people's work.

The Epworth League will hold their Monthly Consecration service in connection with the mid-week service of the church this (Wednesday) evening. A reception service will be held when a number of young people will be admitted as members of the League. Special efforts are being put forth to make the exercises on the evening of St. Patrick's day of unusual interest. A good time is promised the public on that occasion.

The orchestra of the church with the choir have been invited to assist in a concert in the Methodist church at Lawrence town, Monday evening of next week.

Illustrated Lecture

There was a measure of disappointment in store for those who assembled in St. James' schoolroom last Wednesday evening to hear the third of the series of illustrated lectures, from the fact that illustrating lantern slides had not arrived. The lecture was to have been on "Mission Work among the Eskimo," but as a substitute, the Rector gave a talk on "The Columbia Coast Mission." This is among the very interesting of modern missions and illustrates how truly wonderful are the ways of God in raising up special men for special work. The fourth of the illustrated lectures (for which the slides are on hand) will be given this evening, commencing at 7.30, the subject being "With Dr. Crawford in Africa." These slides will depict native life and the conditions under which the Doctor and his colleagues are working.

While the burglary was being executed, an armed railway detective stood on guard in another part of the building. The Gambling Craze

(Published by request of a subscriber)

It is coming to be recognized that one of the greatest evils—if not the greatest evil—that threatens our moral life today is the gambling mania. This evil assumes a great variety of forms, ranging from the church lottery and the parlor games of cards for stakes or prizes, to the professional gamblers' table. It affects thousands in every grade of society, and in its more extensive forms involves tremendous interests.
The gambling spirit is one of the most seductive of vices. The evil lies in the desire to get something for nothing; and the hope of winning in a game of chance becomes a lure which grows upon those who yield to it.

It is not very easy to ascertain the full extent of the gambling evil, but enough is known to awaken very deep concern in the minds of leading moral reformers, both in Britain and America. In England, prominent men, both in church and state, have uttered serious warnings concerning the alarming spread of this evil, by which thousands of young men make shipwrecks of their lives. In Canada the gambling craze seems to be greatly on the increase, especially in our cities. The race track, where gambling is legalized by our government, is only one form of the evil—and not even the most respectable.
Betting, in all its forms, playing games of chance for stakes or prizes, speculating in stock margins, are all essentially gambling.

We have been reading a good deal of late about the efforts to suppress gambling in Montreal. Recently the spread of the evil in Toronto has called forth a warning note from the daily as well as the religious press.
We do not know that Toronto is any worse in this respect, than other cities in our Dominion, but when a great journal like the "Toronto Globe" feels compelled to call public attention to what it regards as a moral and national peril, there must be some ground for alarm. In a recent issue, the "Globe" deals editorially with a letter from a correspondent on a certain phase of the gambling spirit. "In a letter discussing the spread of the gambling craze in Toronto," says our contemporary,
"a correspondent includes a few sentences so illuminating that their publication becomes a matter of duty.
After telling of encountering groups of boys playing poker in Reservoir Park, and so engrossed in the game as to be careless whether they were observed or not, our correspondent continues—

"Are the ladies of Toronto, the mothers and sisters of these boys, responsible in any way for this? Of recent years the number of invitations received by ladies to functions where cards are not played is almost a negligible quantity. You hear of them playing in the afternoon with blinds down and electric lights blazing, and you hear of them, and can verify the truth of it from actual personal knowledge, playing bridge-for prizes, which is only another form of gambling—on a bright, sunshiny August afternoon on a back verandah and giving glowing reports afterwards of how beautiful the flowers were and what a wonderful garden it was, etc., etc. How edifying to the children of those ladies!
What wonder, that the seed that has been sown in this way for the last ten years—for previous to that the fashion had not gained much hold in this city—is bearing fruit, and that boys are growing up with the gambling instinct and the love of success in games of pure chance planted in their bosoms by the last ones of all who should be guilty of such an act—their mothers and sisters. Can it be supposed for one moment that when youngsters see their mothers leaving right after lunch to attend an afternoon bridge they are going to grow up with any but friendly feelings towards a pack of cards?"

Commenting on this letter, the "Globe" continues, "Much unpalatable truth is contained in our cor-respondent's statements. The bridge prize won on the verandah and car-

GARLIC FOR TUBERCULOSIS.
Dr. Minchin of Dublin Declares It is a Specific.

Ireland, which has the honor of originating the outdoor cure for consumption and all tubercular affections, now comes forward with a direct specific for the disease, a thing which physicians have despaired of finding.

Dr. Minchin of Dublin has discovered that garlic is of great value in treating the dreaded white plague.

He declares that garlic is not only of value after other treatments have failed, but that it is highly efficacious in all cases where the feet, hands and joints have been affected and that amputation has in a number of such cases been avoided by the simple use of garlic. It is also recommended that the patient eat garlic raw at least once a day.

As is perhaps natural, the medical profession has questioned Dr. Min-chin's discovery, but further investigations seem to fully confirm his findings.

The scientific name for the active principle of garlic is allyl sulphide, which is a powerful germicide. For this reason people who are in the custom of eating garlic are far less subject to any form of tuberculosis than those who refrain from the odorous vegetable.

The "garlic treatment" is not designed to supplant the outdoor treatment, for the two complement each other.
Garlic is a specific for the disease and living out of doors is the treatment.—New York American.

HEINE NOT YET FORGIVEN.

The poet's statue at Halle hidden in a restaurant garden.

Herrich Heine has been dead for nearly sixty years, and at last some admirers of his brilliant genius have obtained from the Prussian government permission to set up a statue to his memory.

The work has been duly carried out, but visitors to the town of Halle on the Saale, not far from Leipzig, will look in vain for the poet's monument in the public streets.

Even now Heine is remembered by official Prussia as the troublesome Radical, whose gift of satire made his presence on German soil highly undesirable, rather than as the Jewish poet whose lyrics rank next to those of Goethe himself for sheer artistic beauty.

Accordingly, authorization for the erection of the statue was granted only on condition that it should not be given undue publicity, and it has been set up and inaugurated with solemn enthusiasm in a restaurant garden.

The author of the "Letters on the Aristocracy Addressed to Count M. von Moltke" has not been forgiven even yet, in spite of the fact that his political writings have long since been eclipsed by the splendor of his poetry.

Shaky Cathedrals.

Winchester cathedral is not the only structure of its kind to have become endangered in the course of centuries.
Italian experts have recently declared that the cathedrals of Como and Milan are in danger of collapse, and that immediate restoration works are necessary if they are to be saved. The main structure of the Milan cathedral dates back to the sixteenth century, but the facade was added by Napoleon, and the hurried manner in which he had the work accomplished has caused it to be unsafe today, many of the marbles being soft and badly set. The upper part is now to be demolished in consequence. It is also the facade of the Como cathedral which is in danger.
This has been bulging outward for nearly a century, and a large portion is now out of the perpendicular.—London Chronicle.

Air Pressure.

There has been installed in the Champs de Mars in Paris an aerodynamic laboratory for the making of experiments relating to the laws of atmospheric resistance. In the course of his studies one eminent engineer verified a curious statement communicated some time ago to the Academy of Sciences—namely, that the pressure upon a square surface inclined 37 degrees to the wind is one and a half times stronger than that exerted on the same surface exposed at 90 degrees.—Harpers.

Motor Slaughter.

Roughly speaking, motor vehicles are killing in the streets of London today about twice as many persons as were killed by the horse vehicles. That is a hard fact which is not to be disposed of by the motorist's claim that he has far more control over his carriage than a horse driver ever had. He has more control, we believe, but that only makes it plain that the control is not exercised.—Westminster Gazette.

The Czar's Chef.

The czar's chief cook has a salary of $18,000 a year, for which his responsibilities are not restricted to the table of the imperial family only, for it is his duty to provide for the 300 inmates of the palace as well. The food has to be scrupulously prepared, and many of the kitchen hands are members of the secret police.

The Last of the Kaisers.

"All the world will be republican within fifty years. Germany will be the last of the empires. It is inevitable." These words are attributed to Emperor William of Germany in a recent conversation with Karl von Kroon, the historian. The emperor predicts that his son will be the last of the German emperors.

A Nova Scotian's Impressions of the South.

(Written for the Monitor-Sentinel).

To a Northerner, the journey down from Washington to Florida is one of great interest, the scenery being so widely different from our own.

The forest growth in places seems very scanty, particularly that of the lowering Southern Pine, but the Live Oak and gloomy Cypress, draped to the limb with the long-hanging grey moss, with the thick tangled shrubbery, gives to the forest a very dishevelled look. This combination is rather agreeable to the eye.

I miss our hills—without them, even this half-tropical scenery does not quite satisfy.

The natural soil of the ploughed fields does not indicate the fertility of our soil, and by contrast, we are ahead. This comparison holds good if we extend it to the human type, as characteristic differences may be observed in both colors. I shall specialize in this on some traits of the black man, as he at present interests me in a greater degree. Their dark color does not depress our spirits as sombre colors so often do, the reverse of this often follows.
Their rollicking speech, accompanied with the invariable broad grin, and irresponsible laughter, rather brightens one at least so much as to cause us to forget almost their misfortune of color and condition. Originality of thought is very manifest in their expression, and their sentences are dislocated to the point of the ludicrous. As an instance, I enquired of one, rapidly opening oysters as to the quantity in bulk required to make one gallon ready to serve, "I dunno, Boss, the mathematics of that question. I will ask the head boss." I thanked him and passed on, established.

These black men are as plentiful as flies about all the hotels, as drivers waiting for fare. You will see them sitting for hours in their comfortable carriages with a tranquillity almost colossal. By chance I heard this question asked by one driver of another, "Anything doing, Georgia, in way of business today in any kind of shape?" In a sympathetic tone came the answer: "No, 't ha ent made a wheel rider."

One word more and I am done with the black man. As you all know after the Civil War they became a national problem that imperatively called on the nation for solution, now as better health conditions prevail along with civilizing forces of practical education and their association to a greater extent with the white classes makes the question of their content and social betterment a less serious one daily. They have many vices of their own to which they add all the vices of the whites, and this blend results in commission of crime, small comparatively when we consider all the circumstances adverse to them.

As a race, they are gregarious and friendly, and as agricultural laborers, they are a valuable asset to the South, the white man is not a success as a field hand anywhere in warm countries.

Gainsville, our present location, has many attractions. Its streets are very broad and mostly well paved.
Lines of fine trees are seen on most of the streets generally adorned with the riotous growing grey moss. This hanging parasite is very virile and tenacious, and is not detached from any case of its support falling even on a telegraph wire will grow, and when given a chance it will be a voracious feeder as so many of the beautiful trees, now dead, show evidence of the rapacity of this vegetable vampire. It gives, as well, to the many avenues of trees a ghastly weird look when miles of such draped trees are seen in the best residential sections.

The soil in the vicinity of the city is very good and will grow or, as they say here, make three or four crops per year of all such products as we grow at home and many more with fruits galore, all of fine flavour.
Oranges were brought to our door of delicious taste, and sold at one cent each.

Gainsville has an admirable school system. The buildings are extensive and of modern construction and equipment. Also the Stable University is established here in a superb situation and the same can be said of the magnitude and architecture of their buildings. The Chataqua Association annually meets in the city.
These facts will carry their own reference in regard to the wealth and the educational spirit of its leading citizens.

Gainsville is famous for its wholesome air and the best drinking water in the State. After a residence of five weeks we can endorse both facts.

We could have lingered on longer with pleasure and profit at Gains-

FORESTRY PROGRESS

Ottawa.—At the fourteenth annual meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association, held here on Wednesday, reports of a vigorous year's work were presented. The expenditures as a result of this were the largest in the history of the Association, but the membership was larger than ever before and the income was proportionately large. A very active year's work was mapped out by the Directors. The Association will press for improved methods and for the establishment of a Laboratory for the testing of the different varieties of woods in Canada for structural, pulp and other purposes; also for the study of wood preservation.
It was emphasized that the Association does not want to lock up our forests, but to use them to the best advantage for the present and for the future.

Winnipeg was selected as the place for the next Convention, and the date was fixed for the latter part of July.

The officers elected were—

ANOTHER RAILWAY FOR CALE-DONIA AND NORTHERN QUEENS.

Our readers are doubtless aware that a charter some few years ago was granted by our Local House for the construction of a railway from Bear River to Caledonia. It is true that no company came forward at that time to build the road, but with indomitable courage and energy Messrs. Christie Bros. we understand, have had the act extended, in hope that when the boom which is now due in Nova Scotia comes, some capitalists may become interested and begin active construction on this much needed railway.—The Cold Hunter.

THE UNTHINKING MATCH

A match doesn't think with its head. When you use it, your head has to do all the thinking. Don't trust the match to fall where it cannot start a fire and thus make you responsible. The progeny of matches—cigarette or cigar stubs and camp fires—have no heads at all. Do not trust them, either. Do the thinking. Put them out.

"This piece of lace on my dress is over fifty years old."
"It's beautiful. Did you make it yourself?"

WHAT IS THE MYSTERY OF SCOTT'S FATE?

Most unfortunate were the words in which Lieut. Evans, second in command of the Scott expedition, refused information concerning its fate when questioned at Christchurch, New Zealand. The shortage of fuel on Scott's route seemed to Evans "hardly sufficient importance to deal with in a communication to a newspaper." The details of the death scenes he considered it "highly undesirable" to enter into lest they "hurt people's feelings" and "pander to morbid tastes."

These expressions could not have been better chosen if they had been intended to cause uneasy suspicions.
The facts must come out, even if they wait to be elicited by an Admiralty inquiry.

"The shortage of fuel in our depots for which I cannot account," were Scott's dying words. Someone can account for it if there was a shortage; every man of the party is alive to testify except the five who went to the Pole. The depots were made under Scott's supervision as he passed south. Neither roving men nor animals raided them in that frozen waste.

Another point for inquiry is the failure of relief to reach Scott. At Beardmore Glacier on the return his party delayed to make a collection of fossil-bearing stone and coal deposits. They even dragged thirty-five pounds of specimens to the camp of doom. They would hardly have paused if they had anticipated running short of supplies. Scott's last message was written on March 25th.
At the end of February two men from the base camp went up to the depot near which Scott died, but started back on March 10th. On March 17th Dr. Atkinson and one companion went up, eighty miles and returned. If the first party had been made stronger and had pressed forward a comparatively short distance further, it might have saved three of the five imperilled men. But the party at the base had been divided and most of it was at Cape Evans, unable to come up.

A strict inquiry will presumably develop the reasons why this magnificently equipped expedition should have met with such a disaster.—New York Herald.

STOOPED SHOULDERS SHOULD BE BLACKLISTED.

There is one beauty ill that I know is really unnecessary, as any girl endowed with an average amount of intelligence can certainly keep her shoulders from stooping. This habit is purely a result of physical and mental laziness.

Why not brace up, Miss Round Shoulders, and for the next few months keep a vigilant eye on yourself? It will be well worth your while as straight shoulders are a boon not to be despised by the lover of beauty.

When instituting this warfare against shoulders that refuse to carry themselves correctly, bear always in mind that the chest must be thrown up and out. When the chest is properly held, the shoulders will have to straighten, whether they will or not.

Do not make the common mistake of holding the shoulders in such an upright position that you look as if you were preparing to tumble over backwards. This position is most ungraceful and causes the back of your gown to wrinkle in a way that would give you the horrors could you but see it.

An exercise which is said to straighten bent shoulders, and which, therefore, you should make a friend of, is given below.

Place a wand across your back, letting it run through the bent elbows. The arms must be bent in such a way that the palms of the hands can rest easily on the bosom.

Holding the arms and shoulders pressed back, walk slowly around the room for ten or fifteen minutes, taking long breaths.

Do as I suggest, Miss ill of the drooping shoulders, and you will attain to a graceful carriage. And this is not all that this extremely simple exercise will do for you, as it has a pleasant way of strengthening the ankles and back.

Let me say here and now that you are making a great mistake if you sleep with your head on a fat pillow, as pillows are responsible for more stooped shoulders than I like to think of. You will find that the girl who cherishes an aversion to pillows, and sleeps flat on her mattress, is a stranger to shoulders that sag.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Borax in the first place is one of the most powerful antiseptics known. When used to wash the head—as much as one can hold in the hollow of the hand to about a quart of water—it destroys dandruff.

The handiest way for the busy seamstress to keep her spools of cotton tidy is to get a wire and thread the spools on it. The ends may be tied together with a piece of ribbon and hung on a nail.

Most culinary failures come from the habit of guessing. Weigh everything that is to be weighed and measure carefully all the other ingredients. Do this even if you have made the article repeatedly.

The poisonous articles to keep mice away are dangerous if there are children. Mice do not like the smell of peppermint, and a little oil of peppermint spread around their hiding places will keep them away.

Good furniture polish—Drain off your left-over coffee, and when you have a quart mix with a teaspoonful of sweet oil. Wipe the furniture with this and polish with a dry cloth. If the coffee is strong it will cover all scratches.

If buttonholes have to be made on a material that frays badly, proceed as follows: Mark the position of buttonhole with a thread, then run a line of machine stitching around the thread. Then cut a hole, and buttonhole it in the usual manner.

Before using a new lamp chimney, wrap it in cloth and place in a kettle of cold water. Bring it to a boil and boil for fifteen minutes. Let the water cool before removing chimney. No ordinary heat will break a chimney treated in this way.

A white felt hat which is required to do duty for a second season, may be easily cleaned with powdered magnesia. Make a paste of it with cold water and lay over the soiled parts. When quite dry brush it off with a clean brush.

Always scald china milk pitchers and add soda to the water to make them perfectly sweet smelling.

TRAINING THE CHILD.

"He is causing his father a lot of trouble," said some men in speaking of a friend's son. "He has reached that age when he thinks he knows it all."

Every boy sooner or later reaches that age. But the boy whose father and mother are the best friends he has, and who are the ones to whom he has always gone with every interest, will not cause much trouble.

It takes far more than mere mother love to bring up children. It takes training, study, knowledge. It takes self-control in the parents themselves. The mother who spoils the child through weak indulgence does not truly love her child. She loves her own pleasure in going along the line of least resistance.

Many a child's future would be far happier if it were brought up by trained men and women who have made a study of child culture rather than by overindulgent parents. The very mention of such a thing raises a protest, yet the ruining of many a child's moral fiber in the family is of the well-to-do by lack of self-control in the parents needs the interference of society quite as much as does physical abuse.

Motherhood and fatherhood should not only be placed on a sentimental pedestal, but equal recognition should be given to the necessity of an adequate training for the responsibilities assumed.

Children can, like Topsy, "just grow," but it goes without saying they develop into happier and more useful men and women if they are properly trained.

HOMEY WOMEN.

Plain women exist, and form a definite factor in our social economy. Not all of us are blessed with good features, soft eyes, a fine figure, and a clear complexion. Some of us are born with dull skins, wide mouths and snub noses, and not all the arts of dress and toilet can make us pretty or even presentable. But all the same, plain women live and thrive, and now and then make brilliant marriages. In fact, one has only to use one's eyes to see that some ugly women have for men quite a weird power of attraction. History teaches us this; for we are told, in several instances, of uncoveted women who have ruled the destinies of men and nations. Catherine of Russia and Mme de Maintenon had no looks; and Mary Queen of Scots, who has gone down to fame as a beauty, appears in her pictures as thin, small-eyed and hard-featured. Indeed, only one picture is said to exist in which she is shown as fair-haired and lovely, and this hangs in the Duke of Buccleuch—Mrs. Fitzroy Stewart.

SCOLDING

Scolding is egotistical. When the Sunday School teacher scolds, maybe he is thinking of himself, of his offended dignity, of his wounded self-love, of his wasted time and pains, of his unappreciated talents, rather than of the harm the children are doing themselves, their spoiled characters and the peril of their futures.

Scoldings grow on one. In this it is like all other bad habits. It becomes easier to scold and harder to praise. It becomes easier to frown and harder to smile. It becomes easier to hold aloof from the pupils and harder to get close to them. If you want these things to happen to you, scold and keep scolding.

Scolding is to be avoided because it does no good. Where the matter of what is said is right but the manner wrong, it is always the manner that makes the impression rather than the matter. This is because the matter comes from the head and the manner from the heart, and everybody instinctively realizes that the heart is a truer witness than the head.

SHE MADE HOME HAPPY.

She never went to cooking school. Yet somehow minus book or rule, she dainty, wholesome bread could make, and most delicious tempting cake.

A trained nurse she was not indeed, yet one and all the folks agreed, she white-haired doctor said so, too, she knew exactly what to do.

To quickly lull the ache or pain, relieve the smarting bruise or sprain; To drive dizziness and needless gloom, To once from out the darkened room.

Her singing master ne'er said she a wondrous lyric star would be, yet, on her tender loving breast, She nightly sang we ones to rest.

She was no great philosopher, yet men and women turned to her for sympathy and earnest cheer, when dawning skies seemed dark and drear.

She never claimed to be devout, just unobtrusively about, she gently moved a-doing good, whenever and how the best she could.

She had no wealth of higher knowledge, led not a single class in college, without a mission, aim or call—she made home happy, that was all.

TO USE UP WHITES OF EGGS.

Make snowballs of it. These look so attractive that they induce children to eat rice, which is excellent food for them, but of which they are apt to grow tired owing to faulty cooking. For rice snowballs, take one half pound of the best rice, put it into a saucepan with a quart of new milk, simmer it slowly so that it may not burn. When it has absorbed all the milk let it cool, then mix in the whites of two eggs. Pare and core some middling sized apples, put a little sugar into each, then envelop them in rice. Tie them in cloths and boil them for twenty minutes, or half an hour, according to the quality of the apples used. Turn them into a dish and dust them thickly over with the loaf sugar.

Our Provincial Hospitals.

The reports of the various Humane Institutions of the Province were laid before the House of Assembly last week.

The Victoria General Hospital is this most important one; at this 1,896 patients were treated during the past year. The deaths during the year were 125 or 6.59 per cent. The gross total expenditure was $89,137.12, the average cost of each bed per day being $1.60.

The report of the Nova Scotia Hospital for the insane is also of interest. During the past year, 639 cases of mental disease were treated: 309 females, 330 males, 67 were discharged as recovered, 21 as improved, while 4 died. 111 new cases were admitted during the year, and 457 cases remain at the close of the year.

During the previous year the admissions were 155, which indicates mental disease are on the increase. The gross total cost of maintaining the Hospital for the insane for the past year was $101,790.88. Of this amount $73,128.25 was paid by private patients and the various Municipalities.

In the annual report of Dr. Hältie, the Superintendent, is an excellent paper on the "Problems of Insanity" as they appear today, that we believe would be of interest to our readers, and we will, therefore, insert it in our next issue.

You judge a man not by what he promises to do, but by what he has done. That is the only true test. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy judged by this standard has no superior. People everywhere speak of it in the highest terms of praise. For sale by all dealers.

TOO MANY PURPOSELESS LIVES.

It is astonishing how many people there are who have no definite aim nor ambition, but just exist from one day to another with no well-defined life plan. All about us on the ocean of life we see young men and women aimlessly drifting without rudder or port, throwing away time, without serious purpose or method in anything they do. They simply drift with the tide. If you ask one of them what he is going to do, what his ambition is, he will tell you he does not exactly know yet what he will do. He is simply waiting for a chance to take up something.

How can a man who lives without a programme expect to arrive anywhere but in chaos, confusion? A clear-cut purpose has a powerful influence upon the life. It unifies our efforts and gives direction to our work, so that every blow counts.

I have never known anyone who followed an indolent inclination ever to amount to much. It is the man who struggles against the things that are fighting with his ambition who gets to the front.

No one ever amounts to much who does not take himself in hand and force himself to do the thing that is best for him in the end, not the pleasantest or the easiest.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has won its great reputation and extensive sale by its remarkable cures of coughs, colds and croup. It can be depended upon. Try it. Sold by all dealers.

LORD NELSON'S HINT.

The Scotchman's conviction that Scotland is the heaven and the rest of the universe the lump, comes out amusingly in this story:

At the battle of Trafalgar, two Scots, messmates and cronies from the same village, happened to be stationed near each other when the celebrated signal was displayed from the admiral's ship.

"Look up and read, Joe," said one to the other. "England expects every man to do his duty—not a word for your old Scotland!"

Joe cocked his eye at the flag and turned to his crony. "Man, George, is that 'a' your sense?" he asked.

"Scotland kens well enough that her bairns will do their duty—that's just a hint to the Englishmen."

CLERIC'S LONG TRIP.

Bishop Latulippe Traveled Over 600 Miles In Canoe.

A trip along the Albany river, which was until lately the northern boundary of Ontario, and beyond which lies a wilderness of rocks and trees untrod by white men, the undisturbed haunt of the fur-hunting Indians, is an undertaking that would appeal only to the hardiest of the hardy race of prospectors and traders that made the far north their home. The venerable head of the diocese of Temiskaming, however, Monseigneur Latulippe, a man over sixty years of age, has recently returned to Haileybury after a three months' trip of which the expedition along the Albany formed only a small part, and that the least arduous.

Bishop Latulippe has ecclesiastical jurisdiction over a diocese the northern limit of which is the North Pole, and the eastern and western boundaries, seven hundred miles apart. His diocese stretches as far south as Temagami, and while it includes fruitful stretches of fertile farming land, it contains for the most part an untrodden wilderness of forest, lake, and stream. The churches over which he rules range from the stately new cathedral at Haileybury and the large edifice at Cobalt, to the small mission church at Fort Albany, on the shores of James Bay.

To visit the Indian posts in his scattered territory was the object of his trip, and its success may be gauged from the fact that he confirmed three hundred Cree and Ojibway Indians during his journey and called at each of the small scattered points where mission churches have been established and where missionary priests make occasional calls to minister to the spiritual needs of their flock.

The trip included an arduous journey of six hundred miles in a canoe. This canoe was obtained on Lake Kenogami and three Indian guides were hired for the journey. The bishop and his traveling companion, Father Brasseur, traveled by canoe from the head of Lake Kenogami to Fort Hope, a distance of 230 miles, which proved the hardest part of the journey, the hardest on foot through virgin forest. From Fort Hope, which is on Lake Eabamnet, the most northerly lake surveyed in Ontario, a return was made to the Albany, and the eastward journey along that stream commenced.

They journeyed for three hundred miles along the Albany, reaching James Bay at Fort Albany, where there is a mission church with two resident priests, and a convent of five Grey Nuns, who have an industrial school where they teach the Indian children useful arts and give them the rudiments of an education. These pioneers of civilization and Christianity dwell in a solitude peopled only by the redskins, with a very occasional visit from a trading ship that calls to take the furs of the Indians.

From Fort Albany the party went north by schooner to Attawapiska, a distance of one hundred miles northward along the coast. Here the bishop undertakes to establish another mission, and as soon as he can obtain priests to undertake the duty, a trading steamer was boarded and the bishop and his company crossed the southern end of James Bay, calling at Stratton Island on the way. At Rupert House on the southwest of James Bay the bishop was the first priest to call since Father Albanelle, a Jesuit missionary, reached there from the inland in 1872. Father Albanelle was the first white man to reach James Bay from the interior, although some of the earlier voyagers had touched the bay coming from the sea by way of the Hudson Straits.

Upon his return Bishop Latulippe left the steamer at St. John's, Nfld., and hastened to return to Haileybury, where several reports had been spread that the bishop had met with an untimely end, owing to his prolonged absence from home. The hale and hearty appearance of Mgr. Latulippe and Father Brasseur was the best refutation of these reports, which the intrepid courage of the bishop in undertaking this trip may be judged from his determination to repeat it in five years time or in less if he finds it necessary to the welfare of the Indians committed to his charge.—F. G. Phillips in Toronto Star Weekly.

is Absent-Minded.

The Evening Blast, a paper published once a year at "Varsity" for the annual Mock Parliament, does not beat about the bush when "taking off" any of the professors. One year it was very keen in poking fun at Prof. Mavor as an art critic, and for his absent-mindedness. This is what it said as regards the latter:

"The absent-mindedness of Prof. Mavor must always serve as a source of humor. Not long ago in a heavy rain storm Prof. Mavor stood outside on the steps of the University building, waiting for a College or Carlton car to come along.

"On another occasion he was in a classroom at one o'clock and gave notice on the door which read 'Mavor will not be back until one o'clock.' At half-past two Prof. Mavor came back, read the notice, and then sat down patiently outside the door to wait his own return."

Sir John Was Busy.

Sir John A. Macdonald was a retiring young man during his first term in Parliament. He did not speak often—"scarcely five speeches a session"—is his own account of himself. A writer, who knew the embryo statesman, has left an account of him as he appeared in the House of Assembly of United Canada. This contemporary of Macdonald describes him as "looking half careless and half contemptuous. Sometimes in the thick of the motion he was busy in and out of the library. I scarcely ever remember him saying a word about the House that he was not searching up some case, either then impending or to come up at a later date. He was for a great part of his time, too, buried in a study of constitutional history."
