La bibliothèque des Archives
publiques du Canada

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contrat de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, selon le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole  $\rightarrow$  signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole  $\nabla$  signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seul cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angle supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

PREFACE.

It is not easy to over estimate the value of Mechanics' Institutes. For upwards of half a century they have been in operation in the mother country, and attended with the most gratifying results. Many instances could be cited of their having been the means of developing and nurturing the latent energies of men, whose names are now "familiar as household words" in the annals of science, and who, but for such fosterage, might have lived and died without having made any contribution to the world's stock of knowledge.

In our comparatively new land, the benefits of associations like those referred to, must be plain to the most superficial thinker.

The means of acquiring knowledge are but sparsely scattered over the Province. Few can avail themselves of the advantages which our Universities supply. Information on all matters not embraced in the limited curriculum of a common school education, must be brought home to the doors of the people at large, if there is to be any increase looked for in their intellectual stature.

Thus to popularize knowledge is the special mission of the Mechanics' Institute, and that work it is well fitted to carry out. By securing the establishment of judiciously selected libraries—by procuring the services of distinguished lecturers on literature, science and art—and by encouraging the interchange of ideas amongst parties desirous of improving their mental faculties, such associations have a necessary tendency to elevate the moral condition of society.

Well deserving of thoughtful digestion are some remarks made by the celebrated Dr. George Birkbeck, at the laying the foundation stone of the London Mechanics' Institute.

“Whilst I remind you,” said the Doctor, “that the illustrious Bacon, long ago, maintained that ‘knowledge is power,’ I may apprise you that it has, since his time, been established, that knowledge is wealth—is comfort—is security—is enjoyment—is happiness. It has been found so completely to mingle with human affairs, that it renders social life more endearing; has given to morality more sprightliness; and politically has produced more consistent obedience. It takes from adversity some of its bitterness and enlarges the sphere, as well as augments the sweetness of every laudable gratification; and it becomes at once an avenue and a guide to that ‘temple which is not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.’”

Mere supererogation would it be, to add another word in commendation of the Institute—the “Constitution and General Laws” of which are now given to the public. Every reflective man, every genuine patriot must feel called upon to advance the interests of an association claiming to ameliorate at once the moral and physical condition of the community amongst which it is established.
