BABY'S OWN TABLETS USED FROM BIRTH

Mrs. H. V. Ossinger, Tiverton, N.S., says: "We have used Baby's Own Tablets since our little boy was three months old and know of nothing to equal them. He is now twelve months old and has always enjoyed perfect health. Baby takes the Tablets easily and we always keep them in the house." Mrs. Ossinger's experience is that of thousands of other mothers. An occasional dose of the Tablets will keep the well child in excellent health, or if the baby is ill with any of the many ailments that afflict little ones, they will speedily restore him to health again and make him thrive and grow fat, rosy and strong. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25¢ a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MUNICIPAL TAXATION

An Address Delivered at the Sixth Convention of the Union of N. B. Municipalities, on Oct. 12th, 1911, by Alderman Henry Harvey Stuart, of Newcastle.

Few thoughtful men will contend that the prevailing system of municipal taxation in this country, is fair or reasonable, either in theory or practice. And many who have enquired into it, denounce it as decidedly wrong in principle and vicious in its practical application.

Our municipal taxes are derived from the levy of a certain percentage on the assessed value of land, buildings and other improvements, personal property and income, and from a poll tax.

The rate of taxation on each of these items is the same, and, with one or two exceptions, each county, city and town has to raise one-sixth of its revenue by means of a poll tax.

Allowing for the exemption in most New Brunswick municipalities of the first $20 of income, land, improvements, personal property and income are supposed to be assessed at the full value of each.

Now suppose, for the sake of argument, that the assessors are both honest and capable—that they value correctly and assess properly, without fear or favor—the selling price of land being so much less than that of the improvements thereon, every temptation is offered and facility afforded for speculators to hold land idle, in hope of a rise in price, whereby they can reap a golden harvest from the extra value created for their holdings by the industry of the rest of the community.

The land speculator is no good in any place. His policy is to acquire and hold land in what he considers a growing district and keep it idle until prices go up. Year by year, people settle near it, clear the ground, open streets, erect buildings and bring trade to its neighborhood. Schools, churches, theatres, railway stations are built near it, and soon his unimproved property becomes most desirable for residences or business purposes, and he is offered for his claim many times more than what he paid for it. Then he sells and pockets the extra value, wholly created by the labor of others—THE UNEARNED INCREMENT, WHICH SHOULD ALL GO TO THOSE WHO CREATED IT, THAT IS, TO THE COMMUNITY.

Not only does the speculator pervert his service to the public, but in many instances he positively hinders its progress. His block of land in the middle of a town, held at exorbitant price, compels others to go far out of their way to build in the suburbs, thus necessitating extra streets, extra sewers, miles of extra water mains, electric light and telephone posts and wires, and decreasing the efficiency of police and fire protection.

If the vacant block be held in the country districts, it often lies between two small settlements, forcing them to maintain two small, inefficient schools where, if that block were settled, one good graded school would be possible, and forcing the young men who wish to take up land to leave the vicinity or open up new farms in the backwoods, where miles of new road have to be made by labor which could be better employed, and removing them to an unnecessary distance from markets. In many places to day, farmers are cultivating poor stretches of land and making a bare living, while right alongside of them are tracts of fertile soil held wild and taxed at a merely nominal rate.

The granting of vast areas to those who were neither willing nor able to improve them was the curse of the early days of all the provinces of Canada, and in Quebec and Prince Edward Island special legislation had to be enacted to partially and temporarily remedy the evil. But although the feudal seigniors of Quebec and the absentee proprietors of the island province were compelled by law to sell their holdings to the actual tenants, no steps were taken in either province to prevent the recurrence of the same evil in a slightly different form, and, while there may be little of the old-fashioned feudalism or landlordism in the country districts of either province, there, as here, the speculator holds land vacant expecting a future profit from the labor of others.

If the assessors had the leisure and the will to faithfully watch each idle piece of land, and, as soon as it was sold at a high price, increase the seller's personal property assessment by that amount, the relief would be but partial, for the great proportion of taxes levied on improvements would keep down the rate on personal property far too low to effectually cope with the speculator.

If our system of taxation is bad in theory it is much worse in practice.

Vacant land, whether in town or country, is generally assessed at a figure considerably below the selling price asked by the owner, thus putting on speculation a premium rather than imposing any restriction. Personal property which consists of stock in trade is often merely guessed at, it being generally noticed that the bigger the business and more influential the owner the less proportion its assessed value bears to its real worth. Where the personal property consists of jewels, plate, automobiles, cash in the bank or invested, it often escapes the assessors' notice altogether or is assessed at a ridiculously low figure. Only a very small percentage of personal property pays any tax at all. Many an assessor, too, while he estimates pretty correctly the annual receipts of the unskilled laborer, the artisan and the salaried man, makes a poor guess at the incomes of those higher up. It is extremely amusing to all except those unfortunate who by their poll and improvement taxes have to make up the loss, to read the modest figures often assessed for income tax on those who are known to spend more in a month than the average worker receives in a year. Again, one man's house, one man's mill, is assessed at full value, while that of another is assessed at one-half, one-third or one-fourth of its value, the rest of the taxpayers having to make up between them for the exemption enjoyed by the favored few.

Among the reasons for the glaring inequalities so often found in assessments are the following:

1. The extremely small remuneration given assessors, which does not offer any adequate reward for capable men to give their services to the municipality, the inevitable consequence being that the assessors give, as a rule, very little time and energy to the work set before them. They prefer, instead of making a thoroughly new and accurate valuation and apportionment, to follow in the footsteps of their predecessors, taking off a little here and adding a little there, but in no material way changing the antiquated result.

2. That in all or most municipalities—all in this province—there is a provision rendering a man ineligible for the position of Mayor or Alderman, Warden or Councillor, unless he is assessed on so much real or personal property—in some towns a man can not even vote unless he holds property. THUS, TAXATION WITHOUT REPRESENTATION, against which England rose in revolt in 1642 and the United States in 1775, IS STILL, IN THE TWENTIETH CENTURY, THE COMMON THING IN OUR MUNICIPAL SYSTEM. Now the Councils, composed almost entirely of the propertied class,—which class has always been the most tenaciously old-fashioned and conservative, opposed to economic and political progress—appoint the assessors.

Naturally the assessors are men after the image of those who appoint them, and, whether consciously or unconsciously no difference as to the result, too often look with closed eyes upon the rights and listen with closed ears to the appeals of the unrepresented part of the population.

HOW TO IMPROVE THE SYSTEM

The foregoing are some of the defects of the prevailing system of taxation. How can that system be improved?

At least two of the defects of the system can be done away with by taking off—suddenly or as gradually as the people will—the taxes on improvements, personal property and income, and abolishing or reducing the poll tax as may seem good, and raising the revenue thus lost, by an increased tax on land values.

Why should the land alone be taxed, and not improvements, personal property and income? A man's income, if rightfully obtained, is the sum of his earnings, and THE WORKER HAS THE RIGHT TO THE UNMOLESTED POSSESSION AND ENJOYMENT OF HIS FULL PRODUCT OF HIS TOIL. A man's personal property and improvements represent his savings and, granted that he earned the money in the first place, he alone is entitled to its possession and enjoyment. (If wealth is obtained by fraud and oppression, as doubtless much of it is, this is another question for the body politic to consider. Its solution is simple, but lies outside the purview of the present consideration). The land, on the other hand, being necessary to the support of all and not being produced by the labor of any, is rightfully the joint property of all and should therefore be made to pay the taxes of all. For the individual user—not ownership—of land the individual should pay the community whatever the community judges to be right. And everyone will admit that the more land one occupies the more taxes he should pay and the less he occupies the less he should pay.

Again, as already stated, it is a fair proposition that EVERYTHING A MAN CREATES BY HIS OWN LABOR IS RIGHTFULLY HIS AND THE LAW SHOULD SECURE IT TO HIM. If a man settles in the wilderness and transforms twenty five or fifty acres of comparatively unproductive soil into gardens, orchards and fields of grain, who but him self has any right to the increased value of that land created by the working of his own hand and brain? If a neighbor, with equal opportunity, creates only half as much value, why should the former be taxed more than the latter, their holdings and opportunities having been equal? Why should the personal property bought and improvements made by the first man with the gains of his labor be taxed a greater sum than the less valuable property accumulated by the second? Why should the first man's income be taxed more than the second man's? Better tax the land values only, and let the values created by the tenants go free.

It would be manifestly unfair to tax all land at the same rate. The relative fertility, accessibility and desirability of the land must be taken into account. Land within a mile of a railway station is, other things being equal, much more valuable than that ten miles away. Meadow land is worth more than stony hillside; mining land than woodland, and so forth.

So also, in a town or city, certain blocks are by virtue of their situation much more valuable than others and should be taxed at a higher rate. Not only are some blocks more valuable than others, but corner lots are generally more valuable than any other in the same block, and the deeper a lot of a certain frontage the more valuable.

After the valuation of each district is ascertained, then the holders of equal areas in the same districts should pay equal taxes. The man who holds his land vacant should pay the same taxes as he who cultivates with buildings or crops.

THE BENEFITS OF THE SYSTEM

the system of taxing land values only?

At least two.

1.—The taxation of land values only would tend to do away with speculation in land, for few or none (were the taxes high enough) could then afford to hold land idle. The taxes would be so heavy that the owner would be compelled to immediately put his land to use or sell it to someone who would improve it. Vacant land being thus forced upon the market, men desirous of obtaining land on which to build warehouses or homes could purchase it much more cheaply than at present, and thus more easily shake off THE INCUBUS OF LANDLORDISM, WHICH IS FAST REDUCING THE PEOPLE OF THIS COUNTRY TO THE STATUS OF THE PEASANT AND LABORER OF EUROPE AND ASIA.

2.—The tax on land values only would simplify the task of collecting taxes. No one could then escape his taxes. He could not hide nor misrepresent his land. The assessor would have no choice in the matter. The holder of so many square feet, or so many acres would have to pay so much, and all the world would know as well as himself just what he should pay. If he failed to pay, his land would be there as ample security. But under our antiquated and worn-out system, much of the taxes levied is never collected. Many make false entries regarding their income or personal property, and the value of improvements is fixed according to the judgment of assessors upon whom, as we have seen, a multitude of influences can be brought to bear. Also, because of OUR INIQUITOUS ECONOMIC SYSTEM THAT COMPELS MEN TO LEAVE THEIR FAMILIES AND WANDER HITHER AND THITHER FOR WORK, which they sometimes find and often don't, much of our poll tax is evaded and lost.

So when the collection of a land tax is so simple and easy, why bother with those forms of taxation that are so uncertain, so difficult to fix, and so hard to enforce?

I do not claim—for it is not—that the system of taxation here advocated is a panacea for the financial ills of the country; but two things are certain, viz., that the raising of taxes from land values only will tend to rapidly eliminate the speculator in land values and will make the collection of taxes a much more simple and satisfactory operation than it is at present or ever has been in this country. FOR THESE TWO REASONS IT IS WORTHY OF A TRIAL.

In adopting the method of raising taxes from land values only, CARE SHOULD BE TAKEN TO SECURE TO EVERY CITIZEN EQUAL POLITICAL RIGHTS. Every naturalized resident of a municipality should be a voter therein, and also eligible for election as Alderman, Mayor or County Councillor, regardless of what property of any kind he holds or does not hold. If he pays no taxes directly the landlord and others will see to it that he pays enough indirectly. Therefore, as every British citizen residing in New Brunswick has a vote at Provincial and Dominion elections, and is also eligible as a candidate for the House of Assembly and House of Commons, without being subjected to any property qualification, so should every British citizen residing in a municipality be entitled to all the rights and privileges of the most favored.

As these ideas are new to many people and as undue haste is always to be deprecated, this Union should not ask the Legislature to at once compel all municipalities to restrict taxation to land and abolish all property qualification for voting and holding office, but should merely demand from it the right for all municipalities to regulate, for the present at least, such matters for themselves. Such permission being obtained, each municipality could fight the question out for itself, and advance as rapidly or as slowly as the majority of its people should decide. IN ALL CASES LET THE PEOPLE RULE.

Nearly Complete Returns of the Census of 1911 Shows Estimate of 8,000,000 Was Too Big

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—Hon. Martin Burrell tonight gave out to the press the first official statement of the result of the census taking. The figures show a population of 7,081,856 for Canada, as compared with 5,371,319 in 1901, an increase of 1,710,554. It was estimated that the population of Canada would be about eight millions.

HALIFAX SCHOOL

Mr. Fearon, Principal of the School for the Deaf at Halifax, would be grateful to any persons who would let him know the names and addresses of the parents of any deaf children who may reside in their neighbourhood. There are throughout the Maritime Provinces many children, not totally deaf, but yet so hard of hearing that they cannot take due advantage of the instruction offered in the ordinary hearing school. Such children should be sent to the school in Halifax where their speech, as well as their hearing would receive the most careful attention and be improved.

This school offers free board and education to all deaf children in the Maritime Provinces, the parents being only called upon to provide clothing and pay the travelling expenses.

NEW CHURCH DEDICATED OCT. 22ND

Interesting Services at Methodist Church on Sunday—All are Invited.

The Methodist church at Campbellton is now completed and was dedicated on Sunday, Oct. 22nd. There were four services during the day. The morning service will begin at 11 o'clock, when the president of the N. E. and P. E. I. Conference, the Rev. Matthew R. Knight, B. A., will preach the dedication sermon. After the sermon, the pastor of the church, the Rev. Geo. Morris, B. A., will conduct the ritual service, when the church will be formally presented by the Trustees and dedicated for the worship of God.

The Sunday school will be held at 2:30 in the basement, where a commodious and well-lighted room has been prepared for that purpose. This service will be conducted by the Superintendents, Messrs. Walter Appleton and Robt. Keith.

Immediately after the Sunday School, there will be a good Fellowship Service in the auditorium when all the protestant pastors of the town will take part.

The evening service will begin at 7 o'clock. The Rev. W. G. Watson, B. A., B. D., Professor at Mount Allison University, will be the preacher of the evening.

The choir under the efficient leadership of Miss Mowat will furnish special music at the different services. Full programmes will be given out morning, afternoon and evening.

The new house of Worship, which is the first in the town to be completed, is designed in the modern style of architecture with the low square tower, and gothic windows of pale cream cathedral glass. The building is churchly in appearance and graceful in its proportions, and the pews will seat about three hundred and fifty. The auditorium is finished in a fine grade of cypress with parallel work around the choir and gallery rails and sheathing up to the windows on the side and end walls. The pews are of ash. The large windows in the centre are set in ground arches. Behind the pulpit is a recess for the choir and organ, arched to correspond with the main ceiling, which is of a neat pattern in steel and painted a delicate cream. The decorations apart from the ceiling, are in lawns and browns, and will be set off to still better advantage when the new pipe organ is installed.

The basement is spacious, high and excellently lighted. It is neatly sheathed throughout, and is painted cream color. The kitchen is large and will be provided with all the modern conveniences, besides the pastor's room and choir room, there are toilet rooms and a place for coal.

On Monday evening a social for the members and congregation will be held in the church.

IT WILL COST THE MAN OVER ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS

For Violation of the Canada Temperance Act in the City of Montreal.

A case of Scott Act violation occupied the attention of Police Court yesterday afternoon and this morning. Charles Upton who moved to this city from Campbellton, some eight or ten days ago, in company with a lady named Mrs. Mary King, had rented a vacant house at the corner of High and Main streets, and had put up notices to the effect that a lodging and boarding house would be carried on at that place. It seems that two or three days after his arrival at that place, men were wont to walk in and get a drink, to such an extent that it had been brought to the notice of Chief of Police, who yesterday issued a warrant for Upton's arrest. He was brought down to the court, and in the afternoon witnesses were examined, who testified that they had procured liquor at his house. In this case Upton was fined $50 and costs amounting to $3.50 and costs.

Upton was also summoned, and he was brought to court and two witnesses were examined. The other said he had nothing to say and in this case Upton was found guilty and fined $50 and costs. The lady, Mrs. King, was also summoned, but did not put in an appearance.

BUYS DALHOUSIE TIMBER LIMITS

Montgomery Tract and Onit Purchased by Concern for $250,000

Dalhousie, N. B. Oct. 17.—Beainger & Chapin, of Toronto, who purchased the Montgomery lumber limits a few years ago, have sold the same to the Dominion Iron & Steel Company, of Sydney, for $250,000.

Besides eighty square miles of timber limits there is one mile located in Dalhousie, tug boats, booms, logs and the whole outfit. The new owners contemplate extensive improvements, Charles O'Doyle, of Truro, (N. S.), who has been manager here for the Toronto firm will continue with the new company. The deal was closed today.

A sad accident occurred at Dalhousie last Tuesday evening about eight o'clock, in which Johan L. Sorenson, second mate of the Italian bark Fiery Cross, lost his life. It appears he had been working on the main yard of the vessel, bending on a sale, when he missed his footing and fell overboard. The body has not yet been recovered.

Clayton, of Dayton, Ohio, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Remedy for his boy who had a cold and before the bottle was all used the boy's cold was all gone. Is there a better than to pay a five dollar doctor's bill? For sale by all dealers.

GARRETTONIAN LOSSES IN FIRE AT ST. JOHN

It was discovered in the top story of the building at 14 Pond street, St. John at about half past eight o'clock last Monday evening. An alarm was turned in and the firemen had some difficulty getting at the fire and had to break all the windows of the top story in the front of the building before they could effect an entrance. The fire was managed, however, to extinguish the blaze with the chemical engine before it had gained much headway.

The origin of the fire is unknown, but it is supposed that one of the lodgers who occupied the top floor dropped a lighted cigarette or cigar butt on a bed and left his room without noticing what he had done.

The house was owned by M. Colwell and occupied by T. H. Lockhart, who runs the Depot restaurant on the ground floor and keeps billiard tables on the two upper floors. The damage to house and furniture which was not extensive, is covered by insurance. Mr. Lockhart was doing business in Campbellton at the time of the fire, no insurance on either building or furniture.

THE CAMPBELLTON FIRE

Most readers would probably notice, that the Provincial Auditor General, Mr. W. A. Loudoun, has made what is probably a final audit of the financial affairs at Campbellton in connection with the late fire. The total relief sent into the hands of the Public Committee amounted to $193,440.62. Of this amount the grant of $70,000 made by the Dominion government in aid of the burned town was wisely applied to the purpose of protecting the bonds and preserving the public credit, a stroke of good management, and after itemized expenditures on building account, grants in cash, and in various other ways, the sum of $9,243.85 was transferred to the town special poor fund. Campbellton came out of the great disaster in much better form than at one time appeared possible. Its losses, as estimated by the insurance companies, was $2,500,000. It received $1,400,000 insurance, the $193,000 above stated, and some smaller grants which were not included in the general statement. The loss was relatively heavy, but the conditions enabled the work of construction to go on speedily; and to this the late government contributed through its railroad and other departments so that the work of restoration went on effectively, and all who wanted work got it promptly. The citizens, too, showed nerve and energy. Fires are not to be approved, but the new Campbellton is better than the old one, comfortable as the old one was. A good deal is due to the good management of the local committee and authority—St. John Globe.

MONTREAL

THE STANDING ALISH OF H. STANLEIGH STORME

(By Wm. Harrison Osborne.)

He listened for a moment, but no sound came from without. The door worked better.

Noislessly he drew back the bolts and unlocked the lock. He opened the door, but cautiously, he looked back one of the ponderous sheets of curtains and stepped out upon the balcony of the outside steps.

And then—he stood stockstill and held his breath. For he saw that which gave him a pause.

"The devil!" he muttered under his breath.

For there, below upon the pavement, motionless as marble, but silent and alert, stood two policemen looking at him as he stepped out into view.

Each of them had a cocked revolver in his hand.

The Gouverneur was a fashionable bachelor apartment house at the end of town—is yet, for the moment, of that.

At half-past 3 that morning a young man, with a long black coat and an opera hat upon his head, stepped across its threshold and noiselessly ascended to his rooms, a study on the second floor.

His light was burning just as he had left it. Outside it was raining still. He was wet.

He removed his hat and hung it and his coat upon a chair to dry and dry. He took off his dress coat. Then he lit a cigar and sat down on an easy chair—or rather threw himself upon it.

"Jove, but I'm tired!" he exclaimed wearily.

There was a slight noise, and he started and peered into another room. Somewhere in the dark a door opened, and a maid's voice spoke.

"It's you, is it?" said the voice.

"Oh," replied the man in the easy chair, "I didn't know you would be here."

He sank back with an air of relief. "I thought it best," returned the voice, "at least to-night. It was so wet. You have been at the club?"

"At the club," assented the man in the easy chair, "all night, and half the morning."

The man in the dark laughed in an odd sort of way.

"Good!" he responded. "Who was there?"

The man in the light half groaned, half sighed, with weariness. He was tired.

"I'll tell you—tomorrow morning—all about it," he replied. "I'm too tired now."

He rose and turned the stem of the incandescent lamp. Then he, too, became a man in the dark.

And the voices were stilled. And the day began to break.

CHAPTER III.

Six Hours Before.

The bank was robbed at 2 a. m. Six hours before that, at a few minutes after 8 in the evening of the previous day, a tall young man in a long coat, and wearing an opera hat, strode through the rain and mist, and ran lightly up the steps of a gray stone dwelling in the West end of town.

He pressed the bottom and the door opened. He entered with the air of a man who was expected and who felt somewhat at home. He dropped a card in the salver. The maid ascended with it to the floor above.

On the floor above a girl sat reading—a girl who was good to look at; a tall slender girl, with square eyebrows and frank womanly eyes, with an abundance of brown hair arranged in just the most effective manner in the world.

The maid entered. The girl read on.

He smiled indulgently.

"I know," he returned, "but there is a reason in my suggestion. Does it signify, after all?"

She made a slight grimace. "No—Henry, it does not," she said with a laugh.

He bowed gravely.

"Thanks," he replied, "some time I will explain."

"Dear me," she exclaimed, "these robberies—they still go on. I read all this stuff through this morning. But isn't it awful? And they say that there is a lot that never got into the papers at all—the police are afraid of popular opinion and are trying to suppress the news."

The man looked at her. He seemed either deaf to her remarks or bored by them.

He had unconsciously returned to the line of thought that she had interrupted. She glanced at his face and started.

"What—what's the matter?" she inquired, gently laying her hand upon his arm.

He started in his turn.

"Helen," he replied, looking her full in the face, "there—there is something that I've got to tell you. I—I must tell you."

She looked up into his eyes. What she read there to her was well worth reading.

"You—you love me!" she murmured, lowering her glance.

He stretched forth his arms and then withdrew them. "Yes," he replied in a tense, strained voice, "I love you. You knew it, then?"

She nodded, still with downcast eyes. "I have known it all along," she said, "and I—"

"Helen!" exclaimed the man, in a voice full of agonized entreaty, "wait until you have heard—the rest."

She glanced at him in a startled sort of way. "The—the rest?" she inquired. "Can there—can there be more to say?"

"Everything!" he responded, in a low voice.

She searched his face again.

"What else can signify?" she asked.

"Now that—"

Again he stretched forth his arms—and again withdrew them. "To me," he replied, "nothing, unless—it can to you."

She shook her head and laughed gaily.

"It cannot to me—of that I am sure."

She seated herself. He took a chair at her side.

"What is this—something that you have to tell me, then?" she asked.

"Is there—another girl? Somebody else, perhaps?"

Even as she said it she smiled again.

"No," returned he, nothing of the kind.

She picked up the paper, "You—you haven't been doing wrong, have you?" she asked again. Robbed jewelry stores or anything of that kind?"

She waved the sheet carelessly before him. He took it, rose to his feet and, without a word of explanation, dropped it gently in the fire.

It blazed up and made the room suddenly light. He watched the flame turn up and die away, and then he turned to her.

AN AMBIGUOUS EXPLANATION.

"Little girl," the caller resumed, and his face grew pale, "did you ever think—can you realize—just what it means to starve and freeze, to wander about the streets of a great city with no place to lay your head? To go without food for days, to shiver with the cold for weeks together? To seek for honest work day after day, without cleanliness and conscience, a tramp and a vagabond upon the face of the earth? Do you know what that means?"

She shook her head.

"Why do you ask?" she demanded.

"Because," he replied, with a ring of bitterness in his voice, "I know; I have realized it. I—I have been through it. It's a part, a gruesome part of my life's history."

She started up and looked at him in doubt.

"You!" she exclaimed. "You—H. Stanleigh Storme?"

He nodded.

"Yes—I," he replied, "of whom, when people see me on the street they say: 'There goes Storme—the man without a care, who only lives for life and pleasure. I have starved and frozen—well-nigh to death.'"

She gave a wild, inarticulate cry and hurried to his side. He noted her expression and was glad.

But he held out his hand.

"Not yet—not yet," he exclaimed.

"I have but begun—wait until I finish."

"I know," he went on, "that all this does not signify. I know that if to-day, instead of being in luxury as I almost do, I were in rags, that it would not affect, by one jot or tittle, your feelings towards me, knowing me as you do."

She sank back into her chair with a sigh of relief. She knew now that she was understood.

He went on.

"What does the town know of H. Stanleigh Storme? It thinks it knows much—it knows practically nothing. Ask anybody."

"He will tell you that Storme is one of the best known men in the town—perhaps that he has been here for years. He forgets that the town never knew H. Stanleigh Storme three years ago. He forgets that the town does not know where H. Stanleigh Storme came from—how he came to town knows is but little. Not as much, perhaps, as that which you know."

"That is enough," returned the girl, confidently.

"Some day," he went on hurriedly, as though he dared not stop, "some day—but not now—I shall tell you of my birth and antecedents. They are both good."

"If it be any satisfaction to you to know it, I may tell you that I am your equal—or was in birth, rank, and position and the other things that seem to count so much. But I do not point there. There are other things I can tell you about—some of which I must not. I cannot tell you any."

"I have done a foolish thing—a foolish thing—a most peculiar thing. Sometimes I have thought of it and stood aghast. Sometimes, especially at first, I laughed at it, and approved of it. At others I have denounced myself for it."

"What it is you may know some day. There is but one thing that offends me to the situation. I did not take the step, I would never have met you. Had I never met you—still, that only complicates what was already too complicated."

"I'm afraid," said the girl, with a mischievous smile, "that I do not understand. Except," she added, gravely, "that to you it seems most serious."

Try this Thirsty Flour

A very thirsty flour. Absorbs a lot of water. Because it contains so much gluten. Manitoba wheat is wonderfully rich in sturdy gluten.

And, think of it, FIVE ROSES is milled exclusively from the very cream of the Manitoba wheat berries.

So FIVE ROSES must be awfully thirsty, don't you see.

In your mixing bowl it greedily absorbs more water.

So you get more loaves than usual without using more flour. You use less.

Your flour lasts longer, doesn't it?

Less trips to your dealer.

That's how FIVE ROSES saves money.

Actually saves YOU money.

Use this economical flour.

Storme came from—how he came to town knows is but little. Not as much, perhaps, as that which you know."

"That is enough," returned the girl, confidently.

"Some day," he went on hurriedly, as though he dared not stop, "some day—but not now—I shall tell you of my birth and antecedents. They are both good."

"If it be any satisfaction to you to know it, I may tell you that I am your equal—or was in birth, rank, and position and the other things that seem to count so much. But I do not point there. There are other things I can tell you about—some of which I must not. I cannot tell you any."

"I'm afraid," said the girl, with a mischievous smile, "that I do not understand. Except," she added, gravely, "that to you it seems most serious."

"Helen," he exclaimed, "can you conceive that a man—a good man, if—such a man were placed in a peculiar position where he was literally forced to do something utterly ridiculous and absurd, perhaps indiscreet, but not wrong or vicious—a thing that might some day make him the butt and jest of the people whom he knows, nay, that might condemn him over in their eyes when they—found him out; can you conceive that such a man might, under the stress of circumstances, do all this and yet retain his character, his principle, his manliness? No matter whether you understand. Can you answer that?"

The girl thought for a moment.

"If he were not wrong or vicious," she replied, "yes, I can. Many men are laughed at for mistakes, for errors, for imprudence, who have done no wrong if I only knew—"

He stopped her.

"Don't ask me that," he protested. "The details I cannot tell you."

He laughed in an annoyed, hampered sort of way.

"I am prevented from telling even you. It is a question in a very great degree of honor. I—I wish I could say just what I mean, but I must leave it as it is. Helen, listen closely to what I have to say. Before you knew me you had heard others speak of me. What did you hear?"

"Nothing," replied the girl, "except that Mr. Stanleigh H. Storme was a gentleman in every sense of the word."

She said it proudly and yet gently, too.

"And believe that still, I know. I think I may tell you that your belief is justified. I want to ask you something else."

"What would you do were I stripped of every worldly thing that I possess—if to-morrow I walked the streets a starved and humbled man, noted, perhaps, and jeered at by my own class; and all for no wrong of my own? What would you do?"

"If that were to happen—" returned the girl.

"It may happen," interposed the man.

"Then," replied the girl, "I would come to you I would go with you."

He shook his head.

"It is the way of the world," he mused.

"Henry," she said, softly, "it is my way. It is our way."

He turned and kissed her—for the first time.

"I—I must say more," he added, after a moment. "I, too, have a duty."

"Miss Dumont," said the maid.

The girl looked up. The maid handed her the card. She took it and read it with a little dry of delight.

Then she looked at her watch.

"Dear me," she exclaimed, "I have been dreaming here for an hour."

Then, as any other woman would have done, she rose and surveyed herself in the glass.

And I look like a perfect fright."

She continued, albeit with a considerable perversion of the truth.

She turned to the maid.

"Dear me," she exclaimed, "run downstairs and tell Mr. Storme to remove his coat."

The maid smiled.

"He did so," she replied.

"Well, then tell him to walk into the library," went on the girl.

The maid smiled again.

"He is already there," she returned, "and standing by the fire."

The maid spoke truth. The man, without hesitation and yet with a measure of embarrassment, had, upon his entrance, removed his coat and hung it up.

Then he sauntered slowly into the little room just off the hall. Late in the spring though it was, there was a fire burning, and it felt good to him after all the damp and cold outside.

"Jove, what a night!" he said to himself as he shivered and held his hands towards the fire, which blazed up at this juncture, as though in an effort to meet him half way. "A bad night to be outdoors—a good night to be in."

He glanced carelessly about him.

On a table was an evening newspaper. It had not been read apparently. It lay unfolded, face uppermost, its black headlines blinking at him in the uncertain light. And this was what he read—what he could not help reading:

RICHARDS & RIPLE ROBBED.

Their Jewelry Store Cleaned Out. Fourth Burglary of the Series. The Gang Still Unapprehended.

And as he read he smiled. "Those fellows seem to keep it up," he said to himself.

He took a step towards the paper and stretched forth his hand. And then he shook his head.

"I had better not, after all," he mused. "I shall stick to the enforced rule. And yet," he continued, "why not? Why not? That's the strangest part of all. Why not?"

He had touched the paper, but he withdrew it and turned his back to it.

Hard to Say Which is the Real Throno.
The King may be said to have a suite of thrones—or shall we say a set of "occasional thrones"—on each of which he probably sits at least once. Certainly he only sits on a single occasion upon one of them—that is the Coronation Chair in Westminster Abbey—the worm-eaten, battered, non-footed oak settee which contains the Stone of Destiny, and upon which all the King's predecessors since Edward II. have been crowned. That chair might, perhaps, claim to be the throne of the Empire, as it is infinitely the most select, and inasmuch as the King must sit upon it to be crowned.

Probably the throne most familiar to the public is the great creation which stands upon a dais in the House of Lords. It is often mentioned in the newspapers quite apart from the opening of Parliament—the only occasion upon which it is actually used as a seat. Often a phrase like this occurs: "Mr. John Burns, who is greatly interested in this bill, listened to the debate from the steps of the throne." A beautiful rail separates this "Royal seat of Kings" from the faithful peers.

BRITISH STANDARD BEARER.
Lieutenant Harrison, the tallest officer in the British Army, will carry the standard of the Royal Horse Guards Blue in the Coronation procession. The standard was presented to the Blues by King William on August 13th, 1831, Queen Adelaide's birthday. The last time it was carried was the first Jubilee of Queen Victoria, when the Queen went from Slough to Windsor.

AFRICANS LIKE UNIFORMS.
Much money is made out of cast-off police uniforms. Quantities are bought by African traders and exported to various parts of the "Dark Continent," where they are exchanged for palm-oil, ivory, skins, and other merchandise. It is by no means an uncommon sight to see a swarthy savage dressed in the uniform of a policeman, and wearing the regulation helmet of the force.

Ben's Logic.
"Ben," said his friend, waking up from a reverie in which he had been gazing abstractedly at the shiny expanse of Ben's skating-pink-for-ules, "is there nothing you could do 'or your baldness?"
Ben, by the way, is only forty.

"No, lad!" he replied, with decision. "Fifteen years ago I was courtin' strong, and I tried lots o' things. But about that time t' Prince of Wales—Edward, you know—came to open t' new hospital, and I said to myself as soon as ever I saw him liftin' his hat to t' crowd, 'Ben, my lad, tha can give it up as a bad job, and save thy brass. If ther was owt 'at 'ud cure a bald head they'd 'a cured his.'"

John Jacob Astor was fined 40 shillings in London for auto speeding. He is an American citizen now.

FOUR GRAND PRIX FOR G.T.R.

In connection with the Grand Trunk Exhibit at the Festival of Empire Crystal Palace, London, England, further advices dated September 12th. have been received from London regarding the awards that were given to the Grand Trunk, and the Grand Trunk Pacific, and it is gratifying to know that these Companies have received four 'Grand Prix' for their splendid display instead of the two that were announced in the cable received on September 1st.

NORTHUMBELAND COUNTY COURT

The Northumberland County court was to have resumed on Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock but the fog in the river made an early trip of the boat to Newcastle an impossibility and many of those interested could not arrive on time consequently. His Honor Judge McLatchey, adjourned the setting until 2 p. m.

At Thursday's morning session His Honor pronounced sentence on Andrew Murdoch. The prisoner asked leniency on the ground that his health was greatly impaired. He was sentenced to three years in Dorchester penitentiary. Murdoch was represented by R. A. Muaray, K. C.

John Handley and John O'Kane who pleaded guilty to breaking into W. F. Cassidy's establishment at Chatham, were next brought into court. His Honor, after acquainting the prisoners of the seriousness of the offence, informed them that he was going to give them an opportunity to do better. He allowed both defendants out on suspended sentence on condition of their good behaviour for one year. He required both men to give security of $1000 each, $500 on their own behalf and two sureties each of $250.

The jury brought in a verdict of theft of a basket of grapes against John Cripps. Mr. A. A. Davidson prosecuted and Mr. R. A. Lawlor defended. The accused was allowed out on suspended sentence. Sureties of $1000 were given.

Here is a woman who speaks from personal knowledge and long experience, viz., Mrs. P. H. Brogan, of Wilson, Pa., who says, "I know from experience that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is far superior to any other. For cough there is nothing that excels it." For sale by all dealers.

ALGONQUIN NATIONAL PARK

The high altitude of the Algonquin National Park of Ontario is one of the attractions and has much to do with the benefit derived from a visit to it. The elevation above sea level at Algonquin Park Station the objective point on the railway, is 1700 ft. There is tonic quality to the air which must be experienced to be understood. With prevailing winds from the north and the west, the air is purified by its journey over millions of square miles of forest land, much of which is pine and balsam. "The Highland Inn" offers exceptionally good accommodation to visitors and any season of the year is a good time to visit this territory. The Inn is open all the year round. Handsome publication and all information free on application to J. H. Coreoran, T. P. A. Moncton, N. B.

GRAVE CHARGE AGAINST PASTOR

Death of Young Woman From Poisoning Leads to Arrest of Baptist Minister.

Boston, Oct. 20—Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson, the young pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church, Cambridge, was arrested here today under circumstances as dramatic as any ever known to the police of Boston, charged with the murder of Avis Linnell of Hyannis, Mass., to whom, it is said, he promised himself in marriage, but had broken the engagement. The arrest was made after a group of policemen, headed by the chief inspector, Joseph Dugan, and Deputy Superintendent Watts had been on guard over night in the home of Mczes Grant Edmunds, in the fashionable Chestnut Hill district, whose daughter, Violet, was to be married to the prisoner on Oct. 31. At a brief formal hearing in the Municipal Court after his arrest, Mr. Richeson was held without bail for further examination on October 31.

Avis Linnell, a 19 year-old girl, whose home was at Hyannis, Mass., was found dead in the bathroom of the Young Women's Christian Association Home, Warrenton St. this city, last Saturday evening. At first it was believed that she had committed suicide, but later developments indicated that she had unknowingly taken cyanide of potassium given or sent to her by some other person, and which she used in the belief that it would remedy physical conditions which were causing anxiety.

Mr. Parker who has been away for 30 years came to Millerton on the 7th of October and now in less than two weeks has taken his first love, of over thirty years ago, to be his bride. After the ceremony the couple came by auto to the home of the groom's brother, Mr. George Parker, where a delightful wedding supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Parker leave next week on a trip through the leading American cities. -- Saturday's "Miramichi News."

DALTON—BURNS

The wedding of Edward Dalton, proprietor of Dalton's Livery Stables and the Windsor Hotel, to Miss Regina Burns of Redbank took place Monday morning at seven o'clock in Redbank R. C. church, Rev. Miss Kathleen Dalton, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and wore natural color shan-tung silk with black picture hat with white osprey plumes. The groom was attended by Robert Burns, brother of the bride. Wedding breakfast was served at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Burns, after which Mr. and Mrs. Dalton drove to Newcastle to take the train for a honeymoon trip to Boston and New York which will take about a week. The groom's present to the bride was a gold watch with gold fob; to the bridesmaid an amethyst brooch; and to groomsmen a pair of gold cuff links. The other gifts received were numerous and costly.
