Lord Cecil's Dilemma

—OR—

The Picnic

—IN—

Woodall Forest

CHAPTER XLIII.

He rose and examined the door to see that they were not likely to be disturbed by any intruder; then he sat well in the shadow, as though ashamed of being seen, and began the recital of the story that is already known to the reader.

He had turned it over so many times in his own mind that there was no faltering, no disconnection. He told everything fully, placing himself in the worst light of all, and Gardner listened without sign or comment.

At length there was silence, and the young barrister looked pityingly at the man whom we must still call Lord Cecil.

"I honor you from the bottom of my heart," he said. "You are a thousand times a better fellow than I had ever imagined you to be."

"Thank you for that; but you must confess that it is hard upon me."

"Terrible hard, but you will be the happier for it. I am astonished, too, by the light that you throw upon the fate of Edgar Emden. It may be that he still lives, but the chances are slender. Now, all I shall say at present is that we must find the real Lord Cecil, and, if he is a man, your future shall be assured. I am sure that I can speak for Lady Stanhope. I would not like to break the news to her yet, though."

"What shall you do?" asked Cecil, glad of any relieve, no matter how brief.

"I shall first make some inquiries in the village about the nurse, her real name, and a careful description. I will send this to every hospital in the country. Something may come of it. It is evident that the steward holds some threat over her. We must find her and promise that she shall be pardoned if she reveals the truth. I can do all this to-morrow morning. In the afternoon I will go to Emden, and you shall hear from me in the course of two or three days. Further than this I am undecided at the present moment, but I have not yet had time to work the matter out."

Lord Cecil buried his face in his hands and sobbed.

"It's an awful come-down for a fellow," he groaned.

"It is your first step toward an honorable and useful manhood," declared Gardner. "Give me your hand, old fellow, and look upon me as your friend for all time."

"It's very good of you, Gardner—by George, it is! I quite expected that you would look down on me after such a confession. I deserve nothing better. The son of a thieving steward! I don't care a rap about his being the earl's half-brother. He is an infernal scoundrel, and I am his child! I thank you from my heart for your friendship, Gardner, and from this day all is settled; I swear that I will begin a new life!"

The barrister left him to get over his injured feelings, while he conveyed the result of the interview to the ladies, who were awaiting him anxiously in the drawing-room.

CHAPTER XLIII.

The prompt measures adopted by the Birmingham physician probably saved Miss Ada Craythorne from a serious and protracted illness.

The fright she had received in the woods had completely shattered her nerves, and the shock was accentuated by the strain to which they had been subjected for so many days.

She spoke of the madman in the forest, and said many things that mystified the doctor, but the old nurse was most assiduous in her intentions. She would admit no one into the sick girl's room, and guarded her utterances with jealous care.

Strong as she was physically and mentally, it was a surprise to the doctor to find the fever abated on the second day and the patient become quite rational.

"Well," he smiled, "you are an extraordinary young lady! I gave you a week in which to recover."

"There is not much the matter with me, sir," she told him. "I was only dreadfully frightened. Nurse has told me that the madman is put safely away. He fancied that I was some one else, and wanted to murder me. Oh, doctor, it was the fear that I had killed him that shocked me so terribly."

"There, there! never mind. I am very glad to see that my fears are not likely to be realized if you take care of yourself. You did not kill the poor fellow, and you must be a most uncommon girl to keep your nerve as you did. This will be good news for Lady Hastings and Sir Charles."

LADY IRIS' MISTAKE;

—or the—

Hero of 'Surata'

CHAPTER II.

"I am sure that you will always try to help me and be my greatest comfort. You know, Iris, that every man has two sides to his life; the outward side of mine is that I am a man of wealth and position, the inward side is that I had a passionate love for your mother."

"She was the one love of my life and losing her—ah, well, you could not understand that, I am sure!"

"I will be so careful, papa," she said, with such pretty penitence that he was charmed, and the gray lock left his face. He smiled, and tried to turn her thoughts into another channel.

"It is time you thought of your presentation, Iris," he said. "There will be a Drawing-Room during the first week in May. Will you be ready for that?"

"Yes, I can be ready—at any time I have three days' notice I shall see Madame Vallere about my court dress. Am I to wear the Caledon diamonds, papa?"

"They are yours, my dear Iris, and I have had them exquisitely reset. Will Mrs. Bellow present you?"

The lovely dainty face flushed crimson.

"Mrs. Bellow, papa? No, certainly—that is, I hope not."

"Why?" asked the earl.

"Why? I should not like. I wish some lady of higher rank even than my own to do so. You said the other day that you had spoken to me to the Duchess of Clifton when you met her in Rome. I should like the duchess to present me."

"I am sure she will be delighted. But what a proud young lady you are, Iris!"

"Yes," she answered "I am proud; I do not deny it. To my rank as your daughter certain privileges are attached. Why should I forego them? One most certainly is that I should be presented to the queen by a lady of high degree."

"You argue very logically," laughed the earl. "Madame told me you were proud. I begin to see there is some truth in it."

"There is pride and pride, papa. I am proud—I own it most frankly—of my name, of my birth, of the ancient honor and grandeur of my race. I am proud of my beautiful home. I could not endure to see it profaned by vulgar people; nor could I endure that a word or deed of mine should ever bring even the faintest stain on my name. I am too proud to be mean or to tell a lie. I feel proud when I think of those words, 'Held with honor.' Anything that could shadow that honor would be more bitter than death to me. You knew the two lines, papa—

"All the Faynes are proud and cold— They their name with honor hold."

I am proud and cold, and I should not care to change my nature."

Lord Caledon looked thoughtfully at her. Young as she was, she had evidently firm and settled ideas of her own. She would have but little pity or mercy for any one who brought the taint of disgrace on her ancient name.

"I often think," continued Lady Iris, "that pride and courage go together. Who was prouder than the beautiful Marie Antoinette? She never quailed before the horrible crowd who reproached in her death. I could do that. I would have faced that crowd with a smile, and not one should have been able to say I feared to die."

"Such courage comes from something higher than pride, Iris," said the earl. "You have peculiar ideas for so young a girl. Pride, however, disguise it as we may, is a sin."

"Nay, papa, I cannot think that. Pride is a great preservative of character, I think." And Lord Caledon laughed as he quitted the room.

"A few years," he thought, "will make a great difference in her. What a proud girl she is; and how well her pride suits her beauty! Any great blow to her notions would kill her, I believe."

GOOD CREDIT.

To have good credit in your town! There is no worthier renown; to have the merchant princes know I pay up promptly as I go, and when I drift into their stores, they and their clerks are simply bored; they want to sell me all they have, from anvils down to beeswax salve. They hate to see me get away; they want to sell me hats of hay, and suits of clothes and pairs of shoes, and stovepipe hats and liquid glues. They want to show cane-seated chairs, stuffed crocodiles and pickled pears. They've just received a shipment fine of sherkins in imported brine. They grab my coat when I'd go, and yank and pull me to and fro, to show me corn beef in a pail, and tripe and prunes and shredded whale. They grab my sideboards in their haste to show me pots of rancid paste. At last, when haply I escape, my form is pulled all out of shape, my coat is split, my collar spotted, my temper and my whiskers soiled.

Cocoanuts as Wealth.

Wealth and rank on the island of Nauru, in the South seas, are gauged by coconut trees. To own much coconut land is wealth and aristocracy; to own none is beggary; in the old time it was slavery. Some men have made a good thing, as reckoned in the islands, by marrying brown brides rich in coconut land.

The land is cut up into very small plots, usually described by square rods and rods instead of acres. The title to the trees does not pass with the land, but is a separate transaction. One may buy a piece of land, but can not use the nuts and the native owner has the right to come upon one's premises to gather toddy and nuts. The trees are not only reckoned by count. In normal times the crop is continuous blossoms, green and ripe fruit being on the trees at the same time.—National Geographic Magazine.

A Double Scotch.

One of the best raconteurs in clubdom is Sir Walter de Frece, Vesta Tilley's husband.

The other day he told me a good one about a man in a West End saloon; he was going up to another who had just entered. After looking at him intently for several seconds he said:—

"Pardon me, but you are De Smith, aren't you?"

The man accented denied that that was his name.

"But surely," said the other, "you attended my wife."

"I did not," was the answer, "nor then you must have a double," was the reply.

"Thank you!" said the man, "I will."

France Determined to Obtain Reparations.

War Department Busy and Occupation of Ruhr Probable—Pessimism Prevails Amongst League Delegates—Government Support of Greeks Condemned by London Press.

FRANCE GRIMLY DETERMINED.

PARIS, Aug. 30.

France's determination to obtain reparations from Germany, seize guarantees, and enforce such payments for the event that the Reparations Commission's decision tomorrow should grant a moratorium to Germany without exacting the securities demanded by France, is everywhere evident in French official circles today. French officers talk and act as if the plan were adopted and France's decision to take coercive measures against Germany already decided upon. The War Office also busy and in constant communication with Gen. Degoutte at Brussels. Large movements of troops are reported from Nancy, Metz and Rheims and there seemed no doubt in the minds of officials generally that the occupation of Ruhr had a foregone conclusion should the Commission's decision go against France.

BRITISH PRESS CONDEMNS NEAR EAST POLICY.

LONDON, Aug. 30.

The morning papers of Wednesday comment with grave concern upon the fighting in Asia Minor between British Nationalists and Greeks. There is a good deal of condemnation of British Near East Policy which some papers describe as excessive and unwise. The question is asked why Lloyd George and the Foreign Office are supporting the Greeks. The Daily Mail says the situation is an international scandal and developing into a serious menace to the peace of the world.

LEAGUE DELEGATES PESSIMISTIC

GENEVA, Aug. 30.

Early arriving delegates to the 3rd assembly of the League of Nations, bring reports of pessimism through Europe, owing to the failure of the Geneva and Hague Conferences and the London meeting of the Allied Premiers. They declare with one accord that the time has come to speak out and call things by their right names and fix the responsibility for the increasing demoralization of Europe. This promises for next week a lively opening for the Assembly.

SPLENDID SPORTS PROGRAMME.

The members and lady friends of the Star Society had a most enjoyable outing at Smithville yesterday. An excellent sports programme added much to the enjoyment of the day. Among the unique items was a lady's relay race, married men's relay race, and old men's relay race. All of these were divided into east and west, a team representing each section of the city. After a very appetizing supper had been partaken of, Chairman Dempsey addressed the gathering. Speeches were also made by Rev. Dr. Greene, Rev. Fr. Kennedy and Mr. Thomas Kelly. Songs were rendered by Miss Parnell, Miss K. Payne, Mrs. Mosker and Miss Marshall, Rev. Dr. Greene, and Thomas Kelly, all of which were well received. The party then proceeded to the ball room where they were accorded a treat by Miss Phelan on the piano. Dancing then took place to the ever popular Star Jazzola Band under the leadership of Mr. William Dugan, and was kept up until 1.30 a.m.

LAST NIGHT THE BABY CRIED.

Last night the baby cried. And I, Roused from a sound and soothing sleep, Wondered to hear that little cry. For ten long years in slumber deep I've lived my nights, and so it seemed That what I heard I'd only dreamed.

For ten long years a banging gate, The milkman's whistle, or the horn Of motors driven at rapid rate, Have wakened me at early dawn; But late last night awake was I, Thinking I'd heard a baby cry.

I leaned upon my elbow there And wondered did I dream or not? But once again upon the air The call came from her tiny cot— Then peacefully I turned and smiled To hear the crying of our child.

Lonely and still the house had seemed For ten long years, but one again We have the joy of which we'd dreamed—

The joy which many seek in vain! Oh, happy, happy home, thought I, That wakes to hear a baby cry.

Armenian Boys

Prove Themselves Good Firefighters.

Constantinople.—A bucket brigade of 200 Armenian orphan boys from the industrial school recently saved thousands of Turkish homes at Beylerbey, on the thickly-populated Asiatic shore of the Bosphorus, from destruction by fire. The fire started in a locality made up of tenements and at one time was most threatening.

There was no firefighting apparatus available, so Mrs. A. A. Burt, of Los Angeles, the headmistress of the school, sent two hundred of the oldest boys to the scene of the fire with buckets. They organized a quadruple line from the waterfront to the fire and succeeded in confining the flames to a group of 12 tenements. About 100 Turkish families were rendered homeless. Doctor Esther Lovejoy, of Portland, Ore., head of the American Women's hospitals, who happened to be visiting the school at the time assisted in directing the boy firefighters.

Scots Village Hoaxed.

TREASURE HUNT IN ATRASHIRE—BOYS PRANK—AMAZING STORY OF HIDDEN GOLD.

An amazingly clever hoax has just come to light in the picturesque little township of Darvel, in the valley of the Irvine, Ayrshire.

As the result of the extremely highly developed imagination of two schoolboys, the entire population of that village was precipitated into the wildest imaginable excitement over a tale of "mysterious documents," "age worn and begrimed charts," and "vast treasure" cunningly concealed in a nearby quarry.

How it all came about was something like this.

On a recent Sunday afternoon, William Gebbie, aged 14, Berkland, Ronaldcup Road, Darvel, son of the chief conspirators in the plot was indisposed, and had perforce to remain indoors.

In the course of that day he was visited by his partner in the adventure, one Guy Morton, aged 13, East Donington Street, Darvel; and, in secret conclave, the two hatched the conspiracy which was to set the whole town agog for days on end.

Adventure Quest.

In the natural course of school-boys' conversations, the minds of these two youthful geniuses turned to things mysterious and adventurous hand it chiefs, pirates, silent menaces, and ghostly tales of phantom riders. Gradually the two became more and more interested, and a suggestion thrown out by one of them, as to a trial of the real thing, was only too readily taken up.

Wouldn't it be great if they could concoct some thrilling narrative of "long lost treasure," only waiting to be unearthed, somewhere in this little town of theirs?

Thoroughly fascinated with the idea, it was not long ere both had set their minds in action to formulate some feasible scheme which would help them to carry out their object.

Various suggestions were made and turned down before anything definite was decided upon. At last they decided on their plans.

First of all they agreed to draft out a last will and testament, alleged to have been prepared by some wealthy old recluse, who had died in the district many, many long years ago.

Treasure Trove.

Once started on the task, the boys went to it with a will, and the finished article was a marvel of detailed accuracy.

The document revealed the fact of untold gold, hidden somewhere in the Law Quarry, situated about 15 minutes' walk out of the town of Darvel, and in close proximity to the historically famous Loudoun Hill.

For over a hundred years this quarry has been in existence, being greatly increased in dimensions during the construction of the Darvel to Strathaven railway some twenty years ago.

A sequestered spot, beside a quietly running stream the quarry has all the aspect of the probable location of "vast hidden treasure."

Having done full justice to this part of the programme, the boys next set to work upon a chart indicating where the treasure could be found, instructions as to the whereabouts of this mysterious chart being attached to the "last will and testament."

Not content with merely choosing an ingenious spot for the situation of the alleged treasure, the boys also

By Ruth Cameron.

GREEN FLIES AND FEARS.

"Fear is implanted in us as a preservative from evil but its duty, like that of other passions, is not to overbear reason but to assist it. It should not be suffered to tyrannise over the imagination, to raise phantoms of horror, or to bestial life with super-natural distresses."—Johnson.

This is the tale of a little girl and a green fly. Maybe you do not see how Samuel Johnson could have anything to do with a little girl and a green fly, but he really could.

The little girl belongs to a neighbor of mine. She is by nature a nervous, fearful little girl, the kind of child who is afraid of thunder, storms and cows and the dark, and who never needs to be warned not to go too deep into the water or not to eat strange dogs.

Just a Hateful Fly.
The green fly was just a green fly, of the same pervasive, illbred personality as the rest of his ilk. The little girl and I were sitting together out doors when the green fly buzzed around us and bit me. The little girl got up: "I think I'd better be going in the house," she said.

"Why?" I asked.
"I'm afraid that green fly might bite me," she said. "My aunt told me she knew a little girl and a green fly bit her and she was awfully sick and when she got well she couldn't walk by herself and had to go around on crutches for years. Oh, there he is again. I think I'd better go right into the house."

Fears and More Fears.
Poor little girl! To think that never before witnessed in the valley, or even in the Shire.

Picks and shovels, forks, hammers, chisels, every conceivable tool, were brought into action, to lay open the great treasure chest.

With the search at its busiest, the arrival of the local police on the scene somewhat perturbed the assiduous treasure seekers, and activity became less pronounced.

Approaching certain members of party, the police constable explained how two schoolboys, Guy Morton and William Gebbie by name, fearing the consequences, and seeing the trend of events, had come to him and disclosed the facts.

Upon the "hoax" became known to others engaged in the hunt, and, with many expressions of disappointment and angry imprecations, a galled and disgusted "treasure party" turned sadly back to their homes.

The "treasure hunters" have since been made the standing joke of the district, and many of them were afraid to face up in public streets and places.—Daily Record and Mail.

when by nature she has far more than her share of fears she should have to have more implanted in her by her family.

When she should be helped to cultivate courage and unconcern, how dreadful to fill her mind with more anxieties.

Of course one understands the state of mind of those who have children, they long to warn them of all dangers and set them as much as possible on their guard.

But there is a danger that way, too, especially to the nervous, timid child.

I know a woman who with her first baby was so anxious that he should not take cold that she always covered him too warmly. When the doctor protested she said, "But isn't it better to put an extra blanket on him than to run any risk of his taking cold?"

Je Extreme Safe.
"Decidedly not," said the doctor, "there are just as many risks that way as the other. He may get hot and sweaty and throw off the blankets in his sleep and catch cold that way, or he may just get more sensitive to cold so that he will always be taking colds. The thing to do is to cover him just enough; not too much or too little. One is as bad as the other."

Is there not an analogy in that? We think we will be on the safe side and warn and restrict too much instead of too little. But is it the safe side? Isn't one as bad as the other? May we not make him as rebellious that he will throw off all restraint or so timidous that he will suffer all his life from apprehensiveness and anxiety?

Dies Claspng Folds of Union Jack.
(The Vancouver World.)
Placing in his dead hand the folds of the Union Jack, that he revered so much, Lieut.-Col. H. D. Hulme recently fulfilled the last wish of his old friend, the late J. C. Dockertill, deputy court registrar. The ceremony brought tears to the eyes of many and brought to light a pretty story of the last days of the old court official.

A week before his death, Mr. Dockertill sent for Col. Hulme and asked him to procure a regulation Union Jack, properly flown from a flagstaff with truck and toggles. He wanted to make sure that it was correct in all details.

When the flag was brought, by instruction of Mr. Dockertill it was suspended over his bed, the flagstaff being tilted at an angle of 45 degrees so that the flag should hang properly.

"I want to die under the Union Jack," he said contentedly, after the work was over.
As a last request Mr. Dockertill bade Col. Hulme promise that he would personally place the folded Jack in his hands after his death, so that he could go to his grave holding the old flag. A quiet, retiring, friendly man, with an Englishman's aversion to display his feelings, the strong affection he held for the flag of his country was shown in his preparations to say farewell to life.

ON THE DEATH OF THE LATE MICHAEL OREGAN.

There's a newly made grave out in lonely Belviders
And one of Nature's noblemen is laid to rest there;
You will seek among thousands his equal to find
So noble, so generous, so true, and so kind.

But death's dark angel that always brings woe
Had entered his dwelling and laid
dear Mike low;
To his most bereaved family the warning was brief
But others do share in their heart-rending grief.

His death has cast over the city a gloom
The poor and the needy shall weep
o'er his tomb
On the weak and the erring he looked not with scorn
But with kind words of pity helped them to reform.

For the wait and the outcast
He had a kindly word
He is gone to God's kingdom
To gain his reward.

K.D.

The Lily Of The Valley.

Once upon a time a long while ago there lived in a tiny house near a large garden a fairy mother with ever and ever so many fairy children.

All the children were dressed alike, in green slippers and stockings, white suits, and white pointed caps with a dewdrop shining on top.

One evening the fairy mother said:
"You may take your small ivory buckets and fill them with dew from the flowers in the garden but be sure to come home before the sun rises."

Of they started, running and swinging the buckets in their hands;
but when they reached the garden, instead of working, they began to teeter on the grass blades and play hide-and-seek among the flowers.

And, do you know, they played
and played all that night and forgot all about the dew and the ivory buckets till the great sun could be seen.

It was past time for going home
and played all that night and forgot would the fairy mother say?

"We'll hang our ivory buckets on these stems and to-night come and fill them," they said.

Then they went home, and they felt very sorry when they saw how sad their fairy mother looked.

As soon as the sun went down they hurried to the garden. First one little fairy, then another and another tried to pick his bucket from the stem where he had left it, but it was of no use. All the buckets were tightly fastened to the stems and turned upside down.

They have been fastened that way ever since, and perhaps if you look in your garden you will find some of the fairies' ivory buckets.

Ferryland Roads.
REFLECT CREDIT ON SIR M. P.
CASHIN.
A gentleman who visited and toured the Southern Shore yesterday as far as Ferryland, was so favorably impressed by the attractions of that part of the country as a resort for tourists that he wonders there is not more said about the beautiful scenery and good motor roads, and above all the hospitality of the people there.
The condition of the roads is a credit to Sir Michael Cashin, and they are all kept in good order without pauper relief money. All the work is done out of the ordinary District grant. A motor drive right up the Shore to Ferryland is a easy as any road in the suburbs. The fishery continues good at Cape Broyle and Bay Bulls, and boats are getting three guineas
a day.

miles from the mouth of the latter river. The graphite area forms a horizontal plateau, the elevation of which varies from 20 to 50 feet above the normal level of the River Kuroika. The plateau contains two layers of graphite, which is of a solid steel-gray color, soft and of an excellent quality for the manufacture of pencils. It is believed that in the future these graphites will supply Russian demands

graphite have been Ceylon, Bohemia,

States. The annual world production has been approximately 120,000 short

France Preparing.

The advices contained in press dispatches from Paris to-day are distinctly alarming, and when read in conjunction with others from Constantinople and London reporting the progress of the Greeks against the Turks, in the Near East, cannot but leave the impression that the peace of Europe is once more dangerously threatened. France is becoming more and more determined to exact from Germany the final sum due by the latter on Reparations account, and should the Reparations Commission grant the moratorium asked for by Germany, France is prepared to act upon her own initiative and will take such steps as the Government may deem necessary, and will use coercive measures, even to the extent of crossing the border with an armed force, the objective aimed at in the first instance being the Ruhr district. The movements of French troops are significant. They are being mobilized at points from where, at a moment's notice, the advance into Germany may be begun simultaneously. That all military plans have been finalized, pending the ultimate decision of the Commission at to-day's sitting is patent. Statesmen and the high military command appear to be in complete accord, and should the ruling of the Commission be adverse to France, the armies of the latter will be set in motion at a moment's notice. Thus the torch will be rekindled in Western Europe and its blaze may again destroy the feeble foundations upon which the peace structure has been so hastily and so weakly erected. With France and Germany in conflict, and one that will be more bitter than any yet fought between these two countries, all Europe will be obliged to stand to arms. If such should happen, it would be next to impossible to avert a general mix-up, for eventually every nation would take sides with both belligerents. The trouble between Greece and Turkey would serve as a pretext. Thus a grave and a great responsibility belongs to the Reparations Commission. It is in their power to hold the balance between peace and war. Upon them is laid a tremendous burden, for upon their decision depends probably the fate of the world. That they will be directed to a wise conclusion should be the prayer of all who see hope for the uninterrupted pursuits of the arts of peace.

Funeral Service.

Many citizens comprised the cortege which followed the mortal remains of the late Richard H. O'Dwyer to their last resting place in Belvidere Cemetery yesterday afternoon. At the R. C. Cathedral the office for the dead was recited by Rt. Rev. Mr. MacDermott.

WATCH FOR "FALS." aug23,11

Sir M. P. Cashin, K.B.E.

RESENTS ATTACK ON MARONITES AND PRAISES THEM AS CITIZENS.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—My attention was drawn a few days ago to an article in a Saturday paper containing a gross and unwarranted attack on the Assyrians—or, as they are generally known, the Maronites—in our midst. As citizens, they will compare favorably with any other class in our country, and to condemn and stigmatize them all on account of the delinquencies of one of their race is as cowardly as it is contemptible, and as unfair as it is unjustifiable. There are black sheep in every flock, and this applies to every class of every section of the community, and if a roll call were to be taken to-morrow, I venture to say that the Maronites, who have made their homes amongst us, would, as a class, be found to have better records than most of those righteous reformers who think that they can vilify and slander them with impunity. I have known the Assyrians for the past thirty-five years as unoffending, decent, law-abiding citizens. The history of the race is interwoven with the best traditions of earliest Christianity, and they have suffered more for their faith throughout the ages than any other Christian people in the world. It is hard enough to endure the persecution of the Turks, but the Druses never did anything more cruel than to slanders a whole community and dub them as being "boose sellers" because of the act of one man. The Maronites did not leave their country by choice, they were driven out by the persecution of the Turk, and they sought freedom and liberty and fair play under the British flag. They have settled amongst us, married, and are rearing their families and leading decent lives. Their names are a credit to the police records, and I have never known one of them to be condemned for immorality, theft, or drunkenness. Surely this is a record as good, at least, as that of any other class of people amongst us. When the Great War broke out their young men freely enlisted and did their part as well as they could, and now, because one man has been condemned by the Court, of breaking the Prohibition law (which is broken every day by our blue bloods), the writer of that article wants the public of St. John to give them all in the category of scoundrels, and in implication to have them all driven out of the country. What, I wonder, do the Bashas of Bay of Islands think of this? What do all the other business men think of it, men who have been established in business in the country for thirty years, decent, respectable, law abiding citizens, whose general conduct as good-living men, whose I venture to say, challenge competition for decency with that of any other class in the community. Yours truly, M. P. CASHIN.

Open Letter to Opposition.

CREATES MUCH COMMENT. Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir.—"Pink, White and Green" in your issue on Tuesday cited in a straightforward manner the necessity for immediate action on the part of His Majesty's Loyal Opposition, and Sir M. P. Cashin in the Legislature. Since its publication, a great deal of comment prevails, all tending towards political reformation and reorganization in opposition to the rotten control of political affairs as exist now, under the dual management of W.F. Coaker and R. A. Squires. The people are at a loss as to how to best set about such reorganization because of the attitude manifested by Sir M. P. Cashin. Sir John Crosbie, Mr. Bennett and others on the Opposition bench to-day, and in the general discussion, created as the result of "Pink, White and Green" letter, the views of your contributor are upheld and the Telegram is commended for the publication of same. Any further delay will have its serious effects. We are facing a crucial situation for the coming winter, and the time has arrived when men must conduct themselves as men. It is easy to be brave when there is nothing to be afraid of, yet whilst it may pay some people to hold a position from which they might reap the lash of fear and influence, business interests, it is unfair that they should destroy the expressed determination of their one time followers and supporters in an honest endeavour to rid the country of incompetent and incapable legislators. The feelings of the people must be considered, and I join with the Telegram's correspondents in the great multitude that is making itself heard, in declaring that the time for imperative immediate action has arrived, and it is up to the members of the Opposition, and their leader to act—it not to resign, and let others who are just as willing and equally as patriotic do so. Thanking you Sir, for publishing this expression in your esteemed journal, I remain, Yours truly, R. S. A. Mechanic.

Home at Humbermouth.

WAS DELAYED BY BAD WEATHER. S. S. Home arrived at Humbermouth yesterday afternoon, over two days late, from the North West Coast Service.

The ship met bad weather throughout the trip to Battle Harbour and back. The ship made all ports of call to Battle Harbour, except Daniel's Hr. on the return journey, which could not be entered owing to heavy seas. She reported good fishing with hook and line from Forteau to Battle Harbour. The Home sails from Humbermouth to-morrow and passengers who left by to-day's express will connect for points along the North West Coast.

I'm Shocked.

WIFEBEATER ON WIFE'S TEMPER. "I'm shocked, your Honor, I'm shocked," answered a man charged before Judge Morris this morning with wife-beating, when asked what he had to say for himself. A police constable said he found the wife of the defendant outside her house in the "Dardanelles," with her clothing torn. She was bleeding from wounds which she said had been inflicted by her husband. Witness entered the house and found accused in a state of deshabille. He was very drunk and apparently had been breaking up the happy home. Accused asked to be sworn. He said his wife had a "maniac temper" and would often beat him with a bottle, and tear and bite him. He said he was bruised all over from her frequent attacks. Asked how it was that his wife had been found torn and bleeding, accused said that when in a bad temper, she would beat herself against the wall. The Judge bound the man over to keep the peace or in default to pay $100 or serve 3 months in the penitentiary. Accused left the court, muttering something about summoning his wife he next time.

HIS DIARY. August 30th.—The weather again warm but much rain all the day. Meeting Dr. Blackall, he tells me of the pleasures of walking down the West Coast, and advises me to make the journey, which I do not think I will do, save if a motor road is built. To Topssall by motor coach, and might wet in going. So to bathe in the sea, but the water very cold, nor could I hear it long. Mr. Howley, the attorney, talks with me of divers matters, but in chief about books, and it chames me to confess how I have not the taste for literature that did inspire my great ancestor to make his collection of books, which is, I think, the finest in the world almost. I did read to-day the evidence in the enquiry about the drowning at Manuela and the way in which the men who saw the accident and did pay no attention to it is indeed a disgrace which will shame them forever.

Badly Fractured.

INJURED TEAMSTER TAKEN TO HOSPITAL. Samuel Simmons, a teamster employed with Adam Barnes, contractor, had his leg fractured this morning and had to be conveyed to the Hospital for treatment. Simmons was unloading broken stone from his cart, when a heavy piece fell on his leg, breaking it below the knee. The accident occurred on Water Street west.

BRINGS MANY TOURISTS. S.S. Rosalind arrived in port this morning from New York via Halifax, bringing a large freight, and the following passengers, many of whom are tourists.—Mrs. F. Field, Mrs. W. E. Brophy, Mrs. F. Wilson, Miss A. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Foster, Miss R. Woodley, W. Waller, P. J. Butler, E. B. Horgan, M. P. Garretson, Miss E. Kontsky, Miss C. Skidmore, Mrs. F. A. Hadley, W. S. Humphreys and wife, S. Humphreys, Misses M. and L. Humphreys, Mrs. J. Dodge, Miss Plummer, Miss G. McGowan, Mrs. H. Hanna, Miss J. Squires, W. Clark, A. A. Chown, J. Bernstein, Mrs. W. P. McKone, Miss A. Martin, W. E. Hutchings, Miss May Chafe, G. Fort. Several tourists arrived whose names do not appear in the above list.

Satisfactory Cargo.

FIRST SHIPMENT FROM HAWKE BAY. The Aerial Survey Company has received a message from the firm to which their first cargo of pit-props was consigned, notifying them of the cargo's safe arrival and of the satisfaction which it gave. This cargo of 2,000 cords was shipped two weeks ago from Hawke Bay on S.S. "Penard" and extreme care was taken to see that every stick was up to contract. That the cargo was satisfactory is a great encouragement to the directors of this infant enterprise.

200 Men on Strike At Hawke Bay

Preposterous Demands Made. -- Armed Guards Constantly on Watch.

Disatisfied with the terms under which they had agreed to work, 200 men employed in cutting pit props at Hawke Bay for the Aerial Survey Co., have quit work and have made preposterous demands to which the Company has no intention of acceding. All operations have been suspended pending a settlement of the strike. Interviewed by the Telegram this morning, Major F. Sidney Cotton, director of the Aerial Survey Company, stated that he would neither see nor confer with the strikers until they return to work. Armed men are now guarding the stores and offices of the Company, but so far the strikers have given no trouble beyond using menacing threats towards Capt. Olsen—who is now in charge at Hawke Bay—and his assistants.

The gasoline yacht "Hawke" has been removed to a safe anchorage in case the strikers may attempt to seize it. The strikers gave no warning of their intention to quit work, but having "downed" tools, went to Capt. Olsen and presented extraordinary demands with a threat of injury to him if he did not get into communication with Major Cotton in St. John's within 48 hours.

Their demands were that each man should be paid $65 a month and found, instead of receiving payment in proportion to the amount of work done, which is the only satisfactory system under which an industry of this nature can be conducted. The lines are down on certain sections of the West Coast and communication was made only with difficulty. When the news reached Major Cotton, he immediately wired back to say that he refused to consider the strikers' proposals. The rates of pay offered by the Company to men who came to work at Hawke Bay were $2.50 per cord for wood cut and left at the stump, $1.00 per cord for strip barking, and $1.00 per cord for carting to the shore. These rates compare favourably with those paid by companies engaged in similar enterprises.

THE SITUATION. The strikers are not in a position to continue their demands for a long period as their only means of transport to their homes is by the coastal steamer, which makes one call a week, unless they attempt to walk—an almost impossible feat with provisions. So far as food is concerned, the strikers, unless they are able to get at the stores, must depend upon what is sent them by the manager of the Company. Further details should reach the city shortly. Major Cotton is in readiness to leave St. John's by plane at any time, should the men make any trouble or return to work and ask for a conference. As an example of the difficulties which he has with many of the men who are engaged by him, Major Cotton cited cases of passes advanced to men on which they travelled as far as Curling and then proceeded at their own expense to Sydney. He reiterated his statement that he would not cater to men of this type, and will see the strike through to the end.

TO-DAY'S MESSAGES.

CENSORING MAILS. DUBLIN, Aug. 31. An instance of the censorship maintained by Irish irregulars occurred on Wednesday near here, when a postman was held up and his mail pouch taken from him. The bag was later delivered at the railway station with every letter slit open, and the contents initialed by the irregular censor.

CLEANED OUT BANK. LETHBRIDGE, Aug. 31. Robbers, who looted a bank at Foremost, got away with a total of one hundred and thirty-five thousand dollars in cash and negotiable securities, according to the latest figures. There is no trace of the robbers and only meagre descriptions are available.

FIGHTING IN STRENGTH. SMYRN, Aug. 31. Intensive fighting is going on to-day between Greeks and Turks, southward Attum Karahissar railway. It is believed here that Mustafa Kemal Pasha concentrated seventy thousand troops, and more than two hundred guns, for an offensive against the Greeks, who, greatly outnumbered, are offering stubborn resistance to the massive German-like tactics of the Turks.

FAMOUS WARSHIPS SCRAPPED. LONDON, Aug. 31. In accordance with the Washington naval agreement, the Admiralty has ordered six large capital ships scrapped. They are the battle cruisers Lion and Princess Royal, and battleships Orion, Monarch, Conqueror and Erin, all among the most famous warships of the British Navy.

ALMOST HOPELESS. JACKSON, California, Aug. 31. Fire in the shaft of the Argonaut mine is out, but the heat is still so intense that it will be five days before a rescue party can penetrate to the level where forty-seven miners have been entombed since last Sunday. Rescue teams are still struggling to get through to the imprisoned men from an adjacent shaft.

THISTLES.—Complaints have been made by residents of King's Bridge Road in connection with the very large growth of thistles which is to be found in that section of the city. The Municipal Council should make it their business to see that these are removed, as they are spoiling the gardens of people who live near King's Bridge.

CREW PHOTOGRAPHED.—The Outer Cove crew which won the fishermen's race in 1901 with the record time, still unbeaten, of 9-13, were photographed in the Blue Peter on Tuesday afternoon with their veteran cox Wattie Power. They afterwards had a spin on the lake. Only one of their members, who is in Boston, was missing.

The Blue Peter.

FORMAL PRESENTATION NEXT WEEK. The formal presentation of the historic race boat Blue Peter to the C.L.B. Cadets will take place in the Armoury next Tuesday, according to a statement made by Major R. H. Tait, M.C., adjutant of the Battalion, to a Telegram representative to-day. The ceremony will be very interesting, and the boat will be given a prominent place in the Armoury of the Brigade for which, in former years, it won so many races.

Impeded Fire Truck.

MOTORIST FINED FOR NOT STOPPING. A motorist was charged before Judge Morris yesterday with impeding a fire truck by not stopping when the big machine was speeding to a fire. This was the second case of its kind to be heard this year. The Judge refused to accept accused's plea that he did not see the truck. He said that fire engines had always the right of way, and he intended to punish severely anyone who impeded them while going to a fire. He fined defendant $5.

Schooner Ashore.

CREW ALL SAFE. The schooner "Atacama," bound from Grand Bank to the Banks, went ashore yesterday at Lories, says a message received by the Sub Collector of Customs from Lamaline. The crew have all been safely landed. The Atacama had recently landed her catch at Grand Bank and had outlived for another trip. She is believed to have been fully covered with insurance. No particulars of the wreck have yet been received.

Life in Ancient Egypt.

With the aid of excellent photographs cast on a screen, Professor Flinders Petrie gave an interesting account of his exploration in Upper Egypt, from which he has just returned, to a large audience assembled in the lecture theatre of University College. Most of the objects cast on the screen will be included in the Annual Exhibition of Egyptian Antiquities, to be held at the College from July 3 to July 20.

The scene of the exploration was Abydos and Oxyrhynchos, the former being about ten, and the latter five hours' railway journey from Cairo. At Abydos, two or three years before the war, some tombs of the first dynasty had been discovered, the Prof. Petrie determined to follow this up. A striking photograph showed the white tents of the explorers pitched under the dark frowning walls of the second dynasty fortress, built of mud bricks, and standing 30 feet high. The wall has not lost more than one layer of bricks in the 6,000 years it has existed. From 500 graves they recovered eighty skulls in good condition, and a few complete skeletons.

In one photograph could be plainly seen the little trays containing pots of grain for the sustenance of the dead person. Another showed a burial place for cats, a sacred animal in Egypt, and the rows of little pots or jars filled with milk for their benefit as seen on the ledges of the tomb. The Professor explained that at the death of their king his court was put to death, this simple method insuring that those around the throne should have a personal interest in keeping their sovereign alive. One photograph showed that one unfortunate courtier had only been stunned instead of being killed, for he had plainly rigged round in his tomb after burial.

At Oxyrhynchos it was useless to look for anything earlier than Roman times. It had been repeatedly plundered for papyrus, of which the explorers obtained a large quantity and these are now being studied. Four are fragments of the earliest Hebrew writings known, and go back to the second or third century.

An interesting series of photographs showed the ruins of the great theatre at Oxyrhynchos, which seems to have been a most important place, curiously enough, as it was far from the Nile and had apparently little to attract people. Yet this great theatre with its stage 200 feet in length, could seat about 8,000 people, as against an accommodation of 6,000 in the theatre at Athens. A strange feature discovered was a spiral stone staircase behind the stage, similar to those often found in our mediaeval castles.

All The Winners.

Here is an amusing personal experience told the other day by Lord Haldane.

One Saturday recently, after a long, trying day, and a tiring journey, he wanted to see the news.

It was just about the time of day when the "late extras" appear. His lordship felt for a penny and asked for a paper.

"Football or otherwise?" asked the boy.

"Otherwise," said Lord Haldane, who likes the serious things of life. "And so," said his lordship, "I got the day's racing news!"

Enquiry Into Manuel's Tragedy.

William James Butler, Sworn.
 I am 44 years of age and am married and reside at Foxtrap. I am a fisherman-farmer, but I spend most of my time farming. On Saturday the 19th inst. I was around my home that day and I went down to the beach about 11.50 a.m. William J. Kennedy came on the beach while I was there and my father, Albert James Butler was there also; he is 77 years of age. My father and I were working at the punt getting her ready to go fishing. Between 12 and one o'clock I should say about 12.30 (Anderson's time) I saw a boat out from the shore about a mile or a mile and a half and bore about N.N.E. from where we were. She was reaching about in a westerly direction. The boat was painted white but I cannot say what build. She had one sail colour white, but I do not know whether they were any gaffs or booms on the sail or not. When I saw the boat the wind was about S.W. and was blowing very heavy, and there was a big loup and was so heavy that we could scarcely see the boat at all. The day was fine but the sky was cloudy. I saw the boat lift up to the wind. The wind was very squally. I have no idea why the boat was brought up to the wind, probably it was to avoid the squall or there was water in the boat. She was in the wind for two or three minutes when the boat was kept away evidently with the intention of keeping on her course and she suddenly turned right over. We could see the side of the boat coming up when she turned over and we could see the sail going down on the water, and then boat and sail disappeared from view. About two or three minutes later we saw a part of the sail appear on the water. It looked like there was wind under it. The sail rose on the water once or twice and then disappeared from view; we could not see the whole sail, only a small part of it. I did not know who was in the boat at the time, but I learned since that the occupants were Mr.

F. L. Southgate and Mr. Thomas Anderson. I saw the same boat going down the shore about 10.30 the same morning. After seeing the sail disappear we did nothing because it was blowing too hard to go out in a boat to the scene of the accident. There were only three of us there on the beach and my father being so old would not be much good at a time like this. There were two boats on the collar, just off Foxtrap beach, one owned by Eli Kennedy which was fitted with sails and oars and she is what is called a three handed boat and was about 15 feet long; the other was a motor boat and was owned by Albert Butler of Foxtrap. It was not possible for us to go out in one of these boats under existing weather conditions, as my opinion is if we had ventured out we would have been lost. The engine of the motor boat was out of commission at the time. There are sails belonging to the motor boat, but I do not know if they were on her at the time. There were four or five three caplin boats on the banks, but they were not fitted with oars or sails as they had not been used since caplin time. Each of these boats was hauled up with a block and tackle by a horse and nine or ten men, and it would take 12 or 13 men to launch one of them. Even if one of these boats could have been launched there would have been too much wind to go out to the scene of the accident. If the regular crowd that usually man these caplin boats were present, and the fittings put in place, I could not say but it would be possible for them to get out to the scene of the wreck. They might do it but would be in danger and in my opinion they would not be able to get back but they might get ashore on the back of Kelly's Island. My little boy, John, aged 12 years, was also on the beach that day. There was no effort made by Kennedy or myself to look for other men to man a boat as we did not know where to look for men; the men of Foxtrap were scattered about that day, some being in St. John's, others in the woods and others at their farms working. We did not go to see whether any of the men were home or not. I would not like to be the one that would call on any man to go out that day, as the man who went would be taking his life in his hands and I would not like to be responsible for his life. I do not know how long I remained on the beach, but I was there when Constable Forsy came and that, in my opinion, would be about an hour after the accident. During that hour there was no effort made by either Kennedy or myself to man a boat to go to the scene of the accident; neither did we go to Kelligrews. It came in my mind to go to Kelligrews to report the matter, but at the time I did not know what to do. As soon as Constable Forsy arrived he asked me did I see a boat off the land and I told him what I saw, and he asked me did I know where the boat belonged and I said no. He asked me if there was one in Kelligrews like her and I said I did not know. He asked me whether the motor boat which was on the collar and whether she would be able to go out and I said she was out of order. He asked me then who owned the boat and he sent me for the owner. My two brothers, Albert and Abraham Butler owned the boat. Constable Forsy told me to ask them if they would go out in the boat with him to the scene of the accident. I delivered the constable's message to the two men who were both together stowing hay on the stable loft and they said the engine of the boat was out of order and she was not able to go. They did not come down to see the constable at all, and stayed on at their work. So far as I know they did not witness the accident, but I told them what I saw. They did not say whether they would be able to go out with sails or not. When I delivered Constable Forsy's message to the two men it was about three hours after the accident and during that time there had been nothing done around Fox Trap about going to the scene of the accident. When I came back I told Constable Forsy the boat was out of order. I did not come back to Constable Forsy right away because I saw a carriage coming up the road towards Kelligrews and I stopped him and asked him if there was a boat like that in Kelligrews. The man was Samuel Hynes of Middle Bight. I told him what happened and he told me that either Ledrews or James Payne had one like it. He did not know anything about the accident until I told him. I went back to the constable and told him about the motor boat and about what Hynes said and the constable said he would go to Kelligrews and I ordered my boy to tackle up the horse and drive the constable to Kelligrews. From Manuel's beach to the place where my brothers were stowing hay would be about as far as from the Court House to the Cabot Tower in a straight line. After the constable went off that was all was done around Fox Trap that day as regards rendering any assistance in connection with the accident. When we saw the boat disappear Kennedy said she's gone and I said yes she's gone and we can do nothing, it is blowing too hard and there is too much sea. It

DELCO-LIGHT The Complete electric light and power plant Specified and used by the U.S. Army and Navy the Red Cross and the Y.M.C.A.

More than 100,000 Delco-Light plants were delivered for war work. They were used to supply electric light in camps, storehouses, hospitals, Y. M. C. A. huts, air-ane kangars, sub-campers and other branches of the service.

In Red Cross hospitals at the front, Delco-Light operated life-saving X-ray apparatus.

Delco-Light was specified by the Government because it is dependable, efficient, simple to operate, requires little attention, and because it is AIR-COOLED.

The result of Government tests and the satisfactory use of Delco-Light on over 60,000 farms are your assurance that Delco-Light will give you the same dependable service.

It better living conditions—increases farm efficiency, and soon pays for itself in time and labor saved.

is about a mile from Fox Trap to Kelligrews by land. I have been engaged in fishing on and over ever since I have been old enough to go. I have been fishing around Conception Bay all the time. I have been trawling around the place where the accident occurred and the water is about 35 or 40 fathoms deep. I have never been out in a boat in Conception Bay or any other place with as much wind blowing as was blowing at the time of the accident. I have often crossed in a boat back and forth to Bell Island, but never with as much wind as was blowing at the time of the accident. I would not attempt to go with as much wind. I would not be able to say whether I was out in as much loup as was on that day. The water was all white that day and while we could see the sail of the boat we could not see the boat itself or the occupants until she came up in the wind. The wind was partly on the land that day and in my opinion there would be too much wind for even a larger boat than we had to go out. I do know that one motor boat crossed from Bell Island to Foxtrap on the evening of the accident about 8 o'clock. The wind had dropped off considerably about that time. Mr. Henry Hibbs of Middle Bight was in charge of the boat; he landed some men at Foxtrap and then he went on to Kelligrews. He works on Bell Island all the week and generally comes home on Saturday night. In my opinion there would be too much wind for any motor boat to cross from Bell Island to Foxtrap at the time of the accident. About 5 o'clock the wind veered further western blew hard for some time as hard as it did at any time during the afternoon but coming on nightfall the wind dropped off. To my knowledge there were no boats went out to the scene of the accident even after the wind had dropped off. I asked one of the men who came over on Mr. Hibbs's boat, named James Butler of Foxtrap, if he had been anything of the boat and he said no. On Sunday I heard from Mr. McKay of the firm of Campbell & McKay that the boat had been picked up in Portugal Cove. Taking into consideration the state of the wind and sea at the time of the accident I do not think it possible for the men to hold on to the boat for any length of time. It would be too rough for the men to hold on long even if they caught hold to the bottom of the boat. If there was a centre board in the boat and it was in place it would be possible for the men to hold on to it for some time. Looking back now to the time of the accident myself and the other people of Foxtrap did all we could possibly do under the circumstances in my opinion and I am of the same opinion now, as I was then, that it would be impossible to get to the scene of the accident without endangering the lives of those attempting to do so. Kelly's Island lies about N.W. from land and with the direction the distance is about three miles. When I saw the little boat first she was about a mile and a half south of Kelly's Island and with the direction the wind was blowing we figured the boat would probably drift ashore at Lance Cove, Bell Island but the wind veering more western in the evening caused the boat, in my opinion, to drift towards Portugal Cove.

Remarkable Case
"Money Madness"

PEASANT'S DAUGHTER
WON FORTUNE FOR 25 YEARS.

Access to four million pounds! The lady of whom, about three years ago, all Paris was talking, has again made her name. Her history or her wealth, she said, the adopted daughter of an American millionaire, Mr. Henry Crawford, who, in his youth, had been a great invalid, had been his favourite companion, and, in gratitude, he had left her his entire fortune of four million pounds.

Her Claim Disputed. It is remembered that a young lady so romantic should soon find the object of much flattering attention. She was invited to the most fashionable houses in Paris, and was surrounded by high-placed admirers, who were anxious to have the hand of the young woman. And it was not long before she had given her hand to a young man, the handsome son of France's leading Minister.

However, Paris was startled when Madame's title to the millions was to be disputed. Two of the dead Millionaire had left another will, also made at Paris, in which the millions were left to be equally divided between them and Madame's sister, while Madame was left a life interest of £14,000 only.

A Cunning Plot. It is remembered, however, who, as a dissembler, were two of Madame's sisters, were conspiring in this matter, and they were quite content to let Madame should retain the millions until the matter was settled in the law courts. The securities were to be sold in her safe, which was not opened except by her own hand.

Unfortunately, the case could not be settled in some months; and Madame wanted money to pay her expenses. But she found no difficulty in getting as much as she needed. Madame was entitled to an annuity of £14,000 a year at least, and it was possible that her claim for the millions in the safe was established. And she found it quite easy to advance large sums of money.

In the case came on for hearing, Madame won the verdict. She promptly appealed; and the appeal—the court order—the securities should still remain sealed in the safe. But now there was little doubt that the millions were to go to her bankers and money-lenders to fall over each other in their efforts to lend Madame money until the safe was finally opened, especially as she was willing to pay any interest.

She borrowed a million francs, two millions there, and so on, ranging from 20 to 50 per cent. until she could have more than £100,000 to play with; and she proceeded to squander right and left.

Content with despoiling the millions and money-lenders, Madame established a company with a capital of £400,000, and she had a stable-boy for directors; and she deposited 20 per cent. in their money.

All France subscribed. In every part of France money was sent to Madame's exchequer. She sent the hoarded savings of widows, small tradespeople, persons and clerks, all of them to the bank. Hundreds of thousands and few acres that might live on the income their money would yield.

lawyers, and creditors. The various bundles of so-called securities were examined, one after another, and with one exception they were found to consist of worthless paper. All the safe yielded was a bond for $300, a few copper coins, and a brass button!

At last Madame Humbert's bubble had burst and the consternation of self was on her way across the Atlantic victims--but not before she had had her fill of the remainder of her spell. And only after she had gone was it discovered that this supreme swindler was the daughter of a Toulouse peasant; and that neither Mr. Crawford, nor his nephews, nor his four millions had ever existed--Pearson's Weekly.

Getting Better Every Day

WILL BE WELL--AND YOU WILL

"Day by day, in every way, I'm getting better and better." How many people are saying that, night and morning, twenty times?

Lots of people laugh at M. Emile Coue, the famous Frenchman, who says that by repeating that phrase one may improve oneself. But anyway, his method is simple and easy. It costs nothing. And if it does no good, it cannot do any harm.

There is, however, a right and wrong way of using the formula. The right way is set forth by C. Harry Brooks, in his book "The Practice of Auto-Suggestion by the Method of Emile Coue."

Take a piece of stout string, and tie it in twenty knots. By this means you count without concentrating too much.

On getting into bed close your eyes, relax your muscles, and settle down comfortably. Now repeat twenty times "Day by day, in every way, I'm getting better and better."

RESULT WILL SURPRISE YOU.

The words should be uttered aloud--that is, loud enough to be audible to your own ears. Say it simply, without effort, like a child absentmindedly murmuring a nursery rhyme.

Do not try to think of what you are saying. On the contrary, let the mind wander, whenever it likes. On waking in the morning, before you rise, repeat the formula in exactly the same manner.

Continue doing this regularly, and in a little while, Mr. Brooks says, you will be surprised at the result.

Auto-suggestion is no new thing. We all make use of it at times. For instance, a person who falls asleep with the fixed idea of waking at a certain hour will wake at that hour.

Again, a mother picks up her little one, who has fallen and bumped its forehead, and says: "Let me kiss the place and make it well." She kisses it, and following her assurance that the pain has gone, the little one runs happily back to its play.

Or we go out into the street in that state of mind commonly known as having a fit of blues. We meet a happy, jovial friend, who claps us on the back and tells us to cheer up, that all will yet be well. And forthwith we do cheer up!

TRY THIS LITTLE TRICK.

Here is a simple experiment, which anyone can try for themselves.

Extend your arms in front of you and clasp the palms firmly together with the fingers interlaced, increasing the force of your grip until a slight tremor sets in.

Now look intently at your hands and think that you would like to unclench them, but cannot, at the same time repeating over and over again, very rapidly in an audible voice, "I can't, I can't, I can't!"

You will find that so long as you keep repeating the words you cannot pull your hands apart, no matter how hard you may try. They will seem locked together by a force outside your own control, until such time as you say, "I can open my hands," at the same time willing yourself to do so.

Then, in response to a little pull, the cramped fingers will come apart. --Pearson's Weekly.

TEMPLETON'S

A PROMINENT AMERICAN MILLIONAIRE SAYS:

"Early in my business career I made it a rigid rule to invest a third of my net yearly income in Life Insurance. Now, at age 66, and with an estate of a few million dollars, I can truthfully say that the third I invested each year in Life Insurance to-day constitutes the greater and best part of my estate."

YOU need more Life Insurance NOW. Let us "fit" you with the proper kind of Policy.

Why Does A Cup of Tea In the Woods Taste Better?

Some of the "kill joys" will tell you it is imagination. But you mustn't mind them for that is what they lack.

The joys of trout are not for them. The music of the berry patch, the red of the partridge berry, the blue of the whort berry and the satisfaction of the well filled basket are not for them.

Even the beauty of our Newfoundland scenery, the glory of the Topsail sunset will leave them cold. But let us forget them and let us make for the old Southside Hill, now carpeted with the green and red of the partridge berry, or out to Topsail, or up to Manuels River, or let us make for the old "Cow Path" leading to beautiful Holyrood (and along the said "Cow Path" the whorts never grew thicker than they do this year) and let us "boil the kettle", and I bet you it will be a good "cup of tea", unless your grocer has done you dirty altogether. For the secret of it is, you steep the tea as soon as the kettle boils, and any old tea will taste pretty good, I'll bet you.

But it is just as well to take the best tea with you, it doesn't cost much more. The last time we were out we had a splendid tea and it only cost us 65c. lb. It had a sort of artistic name—"Mount View". We bought it at Henry Blair's. They had another good tea there at 50c. per pound, but the clerk said "the best is the best", and we believe him.

Freshly boiled water is the secret of the cup of tea you drink out camping, fishing, berry picking or picnicking, but it is just as well to have the best tea.

You can get it for 65c. per lb. at Blair's "Mount View", that is the slogan.

Have You Seen the JEWETT CAR? THE JEWETT IS PAIGE BUILT.

The new Jewett is of Paige conception, designed and built by Paige engineers and mechanics in the Paige shops. From its Paige origin the Jewett inherits those unmistakable marks of Quality, characterizing the work of a group of men, who for ten years past, have been building the fine six-cylinder cars, bearing the Paige monogram.

Let us demonstrate to you its remarkable power and quality—5 passenger touring—$2200; Sedan $2850.
