BY TELEGRAPH. EVANGELICAL ALLIANCE.

The Cape of Good Hope.

New York, Oct. 3.-At the evening session of the Evangelical Alliance, the Rev. Mr. Davis, Secretary of the British Alliance, furnished a long report of the origin and progress of the Alliance, and then delivered a short address, recounting the good effected the Alliance in different countries. This Conference was not held for the exaltation of any man, priest, or pope, but to diffuse the Gospel of Christ. The motto of the Alliance was - "In essentials, unity; in non-essentials, liberty; in all things, charity." The power for good of the Alliance is in its unity, and it is a power which will be mighty against superstition and infidelity. Rev. J. S. Russell, of the British Alliance, said the hope that something would be done at this Conference to do away with disunion, had been the magnet which drew them to this country. It was time to be sick of the word denomination, a word not found in scripture. His motto was "E pluribus unum." Rev. Mr. Weiden, of London, said his idea of Christian unity was unity in variety, as there is no real difference between men bound by one spirit and serving one Eternal Lord. The Dean of Canterbury said that while he differs in small things we could show the world we were agreed on essentials. He favoured denominationalism as a developer of truth, but we must remember that we were all one household in Christ.

Town and County News.

POSTPONED - Mr. D. Allan's sale of house plants, which was to have taken place to-day, has been postponed till Thursday next.

Mr. John McLeod, of West Zorra, brother of Mr. R. McLeod, organ manufacturer, of London, fell from a building, and died within two hours.

CHANGED HANDS - We understand that Mr. L. Cossitt has purchased the premises lately occupied by Messrs. Thain & Elliott, near the Erasmus Bridge. It is Mr. Cossitt's intention to carry on his business there.

THE LATE BISHOP FARRELL - We have received from Mr. Day, bookseller, an exceedingly well executed cabinet photograph of the late Bishop Farrell. Mr. Day has received a number of them from Hamilton, and there are no doubt many persons in Guelph who will be glad of a copy. The thieves were tracked to the saviour of the deceased prelate.

NEW BOOKS - My Opinions and Betsy Bobbit's; The Unprofessional Vagabond; Fun for the Million; Johnny Gibb of Gushetnek; Miss Dorothy's Charge; Reminiscence of Old Court Life in France; Pocket edition of Waverley novels. New books daily at Anderson's cheap bookstore.

STOLEN - Early in the morning of Tuesday Mr. James Mason, of Puslinch, had a keg of butter stolen out of his cellar, which he had put up for Exhibition. The thieves were tracked to the concession, on which they turned east. The same morning Mr. Aiken, a neighbor of Mr. Mason's, lost three horse straps and a horse brush. As the parties are well-known, it would be to their interest to return the butter.

Sons of Temperance. The public installation took place as announced last (Friday) evening. P. W. P. Bro. Bishop opened the meeting, after which Mr. McLean, Deputy G.W.P., of Galt, was escorted to the chair, and duly installed the following officers: - Robert Hyam, W.P.; S. A. Anderson, W.A.; Wm. Porter, R.S.; S. A. S. B. S. Kenning, F.S.; Bro. Conlon, Treas.; Rev. Mr. Howie, Chaplain; Bro. Newbiggin, Conductor; Bro. Elliott, Inside Sentinel; Bro. Sinclair, Outside Sentinel. The singing by the choir was first-class, and reflected credit upon them.

Rev. Mr. Howie made a speech, in which he explained the office of Chaplain, after which he mentioned about the Directors of the Guelph Central Exhibition allowing the sale of intoxicating drink on the Exhibition grounds during the holding of the Show. He said he saw some of the same Directors themselves drinking at the booths during the Show, thereby encouraging the violation of the law of the land. Mr. McLean, Deputy G.W.P., also gave a brief address, and the meeting was brought to a close. The audience was very much pleased with the good number of the Sons of Temperance themselves being conspicuous by their absence.

There will be a public temperance meeting in the Good Templars' Hall tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon, at which the Rev. Mr. Howie will be present.

A QUESTION - Why will people keep four or five ill-looking sickly horses to do the work that one good horse might perform? If the horse has the heaves, is he any more fit to do a day's work than his wind in any way affected; if his appetite is bad, or his digestive organs deranged, has a rough skin or is hide bound, we would in all cases recommend the use of "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Hovee Remedy." It never fails to benefit and almost remove the disease; it is free from anything that can injure, and may be used at all times with safety. Try it. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Did you ever think that what is termed a common cold, when systematically neglected, often leads to the most fatal and distressing disease - consumption - when attended to at once is generally easy of cure? If you are troubled with a cold or cough, Bryan's Palmolive Wafers will be found most efficacious in relieving it. They give immediate relief, and generally effect a cure when used in time. Sold by all druggists and country dealers. Price 25 cents per box.

The Mints of the United States have coined since they commenced operations (some seventy years), the large amount of eight hundred million dollars, about one-fifth of the whole metallic currency of the world, of which amount about $500,000,000 has been derived from their own mints; we are not without mints, but while we feel that they will not produce so much gold, we have the pleasure of knowing there is a sovereign remedy in the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" for sudden colds, rheumatism, neuralgia, toothache, etc. Sold by all medicine dealers at 25c per bottle.

I am, sir, Yours, SOBRIETY.

Guelph, Sept. 22, 1873.

The Grand Trunk. The great work of changing the G.T.R. is now going on, and the main line is about finished. The sidings will take a longer time to complete, but everything is expected to be ready for traffic on Monday morning. Men have been busy during the day upon the switches, &c., in the yard at the Guelph freight station.

Our main line was changed about two o'clock this morning (Saturday) and the first mile was done in the extraordinary quick time of 32 minutes. A salvo of fog signals was fired yesterday afternoon at the passenger station by way of salute to the last broad-gauge train - which, by the way, had four red lamps at its head and tail, with a large painted board, bearing the words, "Last Train."

New Books. - Day receives all the leading publications as soon as issued. Everything new will be found in stock and cheap.

Stray Leaves from the Old Land.

HEXTER, Sept. 17, 1873.

I closed my last letter by noting my arrival in Inverness, the capital of the Highlands, and one of the prattiest and most advantageously situated towns in Scotland. It consists of regular streets, all well paved, and elegant houses, many of which would do no discredit to the most pretensions streets in Glasgow or Edinburgh. The Ness, a broad clear stream, runs through the town, and adds greatly to its beauty. On the High street, which runs through the most ancient part of the place, stands the Town Hall, which is adorned with some very old oil paintings, and likewise contains a fine marble bust of Dr. Carruthers, the venerable and highly esteemed editor of the Inverness Courier, whose literary labours, as well as his long and honored connection with the Press, has made his name well known in America as well as in Britain. The bust was presented to the Corporation by his friends and admirers, and the execution of it was entrusted to his son-in-law, who has succeeded in securing an admirable likeness. I had the pleasure of an introduction to Dr. Carruthers, and enjoyed greatly a short interview with him. He is a general unassuming worthy man, and is universally respected.

Under the guidance of a most obliging friend and genuine Highlander we visited every point of interest in and around the town. The Castle, which stands on an eminence, and commands a fine prospect, is a modern building, in the castellated form, and is used as a court house and for other judicial and municipal purposes. It occupies the old site of Inverness Castle, originally one of the strongholds of Macbeth. From the Castle grounds the stranger gets a fine view of the suspension bridge which spans the Ness, and also of the English Church Cathedral, a large and elegant modern building, the towers of which are not yet finished. Passing up the river we traverse some beautiful grounds and walks, and gradually reach the new park which stretches along the slope of a hill, and over the level plain below. It is supplied with a capacious skating pond and curling rink. Farther on we pass through the Islets - skirting the river - which are laid out as pleasure grounds, and in a short time reach Craig-Phadric, a hill 550 feet high, where there is a fortified fort. To the south west lies a singularly shaped hill, called Tom-na-hu-ich, which signifies the "hill of the fairies." It has been laid out as a cemetery, and is the most picturesque burying place I ever saw. The road to the top winds round the side of the hill, and in its steep sides, which are wooded, solitary graves lie here and there. The top of the hill is level, and occupies a considerable area. The graves and monuments are most numerous here, and from the commanding position of the stranger gets a splendid view of the town, the line of the Caledonian Canal, with a rampart of hills and mountains in the distance. The prospect seaward is equally fine. The landlocked bay stretches out before you, and at its extreme end stands Fort George, which commands the entrance to the bay. Away to the right may be seen a part of Collden Moor - the scene of Prince Charlie's defeat. A carriage road passes through the scene of the battle, and two or three green trenches mark the spot where the hottest part of the battle took place. Collden House, where the defeated Prince lodged the night after the battle, lies a mile to the north of the field. To our left we can descry the Cromarty and Sutherland coasts, and like a thread winding round the Highland hills can catch glimpses of the Dingwall and Skye Railway, which intersects the County of Ross from east to west, and connects the Cromarty with Loch Carron, nearly opposite the Isle of Skye. At the distance of ten miles from Inverness this line passes the village of Beaulieu, with its stately old tower, and ruins of an ancient priory. On the whole my impressions of Inverness and its people are of the most favorable character.

Our next trip was down the Caledonian Canal, which consists of a chain of salt and fresh water lakes, extending from the Atlantic to the German Ocean, through what is called the great Glen of Scotland, a distance of 60 miles. Of this 37 miles are natural sheets of water, and the balance cut as canal. The steamer is large and commodious as the size of the locks will allow. After a pleasant sail, partly through the canal and through Loch Dochfour, we come in sight of the isolated peak of Meall-Beinn, which rises to a height of 3,050 feet. Its bare and rugged sides are cleft with many fissures, down which rush the mountain torrents, streaked with foam, and in their colour contrasting strangely with the dark brown of the heather. Around its top are creeping the mist, which now leaves its peak bare and solid, and anon encircle it in their white shroud. At the foot of the mountain stands the ruins of Urquhart Castle, once a large and well built stronghold. The scenery here, and for many miles farther on, is singularly bold and striking. On either side mountains in all shapes and sizes sentinel the Glen through which we are passing. Sometimes a fringe of stunted trees, of the variety and size which skirt the north side of Lake Superior, stretch down to the water's edge. Occasionally between two hills we get a glimpse of some lonely glen, extending miles into the interior, until the vista is again closed by a fresh line of hills. But soon we and the rest of the passengers - nearly all of whom are tourists - are impatiently waiting till the steamer lands us at the pier of Foyers, to afford us an opportunity of viewing the celebrated Fall of Foyers. After a long and wearisome ascent, which occupies nearly half an hour, the roar of the water, and the appearance of the spray tell us that we are near the spot. The lower fall is the most imposing. Standing on a ledge of rock overhanging the abyss below, we get a fine view of the whole scene. Fancy an immense gorge, somewhat circular in form, and 200 feet deep from the edge of the cataract. It is walled round with rocks, whose rugged sides are continually dripping with the rising spray, and whose tops, covered with an inch or two of earth, give life to a few hanging trees and shrubs. From a deep and narrow cleft in the rock the water rush over the ledge and dash down with awful force into the abyss below, which seethes and boils like some monstrous cauldron. As Burns in his description of this Fall truly says: -

"From down the rock the whitening sheet descends, And echoes echo's ear astonished rends. Dim seen, through rising mists and ceaseless showers, The heavy covers wide surrounding fens."

The scene below the Fall is equally grand. The waters after circling and seething in the huge basin find an outlet through masses of jagged rock, which continually break up the current into disjointed streams. For a long way the waters are bounded in by precipitous walls of rock, until at last the level ground is reached, when they quietly mingle with the water of the lake.

The stream next passes through Loch Ness, a beautiful sheet of water, 21 miles in length, and in many places very deep. At the southern extremity of the Loch stands Fort Augustus, which was built after the rebellion of 1715 to overawe the Highlands, and which in 1867 was sold to Lord Lovat. The Fort, of course, is now dismantled, only a few old guns pointing their innocent mouths to the water, but the ancient houses and the beautiful green slopes and embankments remain the place quite beautiful.

The steamer next enters Loch Oich, the central lake of the chain, along the western bank of which stretches the territory of Cameron of Lochow. The fathers were among the most noted of the old Highland chieftains. Not far off are the ruins of an old castle, a former stronghold of the chief of Macdonnell, and near to that again a monument commemorates the mercenary vengeance inflicted by a former chief of Glenngarry on the murderers of the Keppoch family. You cannot travel any distance through this wild country without passing some place of historic interest, or which figured prominently during the stirring times of the rebellion. After leaving Loch Oich, we enter Loch Lochy, and then Loch Eil, at the head of which stands Fort William, and immediately behind it towers the lofty Ben Nevis, the highest mountain in Scotland, being 4,396 feet above the level of the sea, and its circumference at the base exceeding 24 miles. The top of this mountain of mountains was shrouded in mist as we passed, and we were therefore disappointed in getting a sight of its peak, or forming an idea of its altitude. But we could see far up its weather-worn sides - the fissures and gles which in many places run from top to base - the torrents which leap from rock to rock in their descent, and the precipices which here and there shoot out from its sides to a great altitude. The town of Fort William is small and surrounded the fort, which was originally erected by Gen. Monk to overawe the untamable Sir Ewan Cameron of Lochiel, who persisted in waging war against the forces of the Commonwealth long after every other Chieftain had recognized its authority. Near by stand the ruined castle of Inverlochy, where the Marquis of Montrose achieved one of his most decisive victories over the Marquis of Argyle in 1645, which is described at length in Scott's "Legend of Montrose."

We next sail through Loch Eil and a portion of Loch Linne, and reach the pleasantly situated town of Oban, where we rest for the night. The scenery along the Caledonian Canal is unsurpassed for its grandeur and variety, and no one can say that he has really seen the Highlands of Scotland until he travels by this route.

Next morning we started from Oban by one of the line of steamers which makes direct connection between Inverness and Glasgow. In our course we skirted many of the islands which stand the Loch, and ere long reached Crianach, where we took the Crinan canal to avoid the long sea passage by the Mull of Cantire. On the Loch Fyne side we embark on the Glasgow steamer "Iona" - one of the finest and fastest boats ever built. For she makes her 20 miles an hour quite easily. The sail down the Loch and through the Kyles of Bute is extremely beautiful. In passing through the Kyles - which is a narrow channel separating the Island of Bute from the mainland, we only see in the dim distance the wild and rugged Highland hills. The scenery if tamer is no less attractive - the gentle slopes of Bute, with its corn and grain fields, please the eye, while the wooded slopes and gentlemen's seats nestled among the trees enrich and adorn the landscape. We soon emerge from this most attractive scene, and are once more steaming up the Frith of Clyde, with its prettily situated watering places nestling on each side, and which are so much resorted to for rest and recreation by the hard-worked and cautious business men of Glasgow.

My next trip was through the Trochachs by Lochs Lomond and Katrine. After leaving the main line of railway at Dunblane, a branch line carries the tourist to Callander. At the old village of Doune, we enter on the scenery of "The Lady of the Lake." Proceeding along the northern bank of the Teith we see the mountains of Uam Var and Benvoirich in the distance. A line of railway runs from Callander through the pass of Leny to Killin, from whence the traveller can go by Loch Tay to Aberfeldy and Dunkeld. At Callander we take coach to the Trochachs, the road winding along the spur of Ben Ledi. In the hollows to the south is Collantoglo Ford, the spot where Rodrich Dhu challenged Fitzjames to single combat -

"See, here all valiant I stand, Armed like thyself with stie brand; For this is Collantoglo Ford, And thou must keep thee with thy sword." Shortly after we reached Loch Venchar, a fine sheet of water, still near by is Lanrick Mead - the ancient gathering ground of the Clan Alpine. Further on is Duncraggan, and to one side stretches the deer forest of Glenfinlas. Soon we reach Loch Achray, where the scenery still preserves its gentle character -

"The rocks - the rocky cherticles sleep, So stilly in thy bosom deep." From this to Loch Katrine extends the Trochachs, forming a bewildering scene of mountains, rocks and woods. It is impossible to give the reader anything like an adequate idea of the place by a mere word description - it must be seen to be understood or appreciated. Soon Loch Katrine comes in sight -

"With promontory, creek, and bay, And mountains that like giants stand, To soothe the eyes aching with this view of the sea." The sail over this Loch is enchanting, for at every point the eye feasts on new beauty, only to be chased out of remembrance by some new one still more striking. From its bosom we get a fine view of Benvenue, which rises to a height of 2,866 feet, throwing down upon the lake

"Crags, knolls, and mounds, confounding hurd, The fragments of an æolian world."

North Riding Show. The North Riding of Wellington Agricultural Society held their sixth annual exhibition in the village of Arthur, on Wednesday and Thursday, October 1st and 2nd. The weather was good, and there was a large gathering on the ground.

FIRST DAY. The Drill Shed was used for the display of ladies' needlework, grain, roots, &c. In the domestic department there was a good display of fancy needle-work. Some very beautiful quilts were shown, got up in very nice patterns, but the quality of the needlework was not equal to that of the patterns. In fancy needle-work, such as embroidery, crochet, and fancy knitting, the show was very good. In worsted work, plain and raised, there was a fine display. The flower wreaths did not amount to much. There was a fine show of gents' shirts, both machine and hand made. In rag mats there were some very nice patterns and good work. The blankets shown were good, but were the work of only two exhibitors. Stockings and mitts were good.

There were 43 entries of different kinds of grain. The samples shown were plump and well colored. We noticed some very fine timothy seed, which for color and quality would not be easily beaten. In flax there were six bags shown, which looked to be of a very good quality. Dairy produce was good. There were 40 entries in butter, some of it elaborately got up—most of the samples tasted nice and sweet. In cheese there were only three entries, two of them home-made; and one of factory, which was considered by the judges not worthy of a prize. Three fine jars of honey were shown, also two samples in the comb. The show of fruit was good, there being quite a number of exhibitors. Apples were of good size and well flavoured; plums were good but few shown; in pears the show was poor; of crab apples a considerable variety was shown. The show of roots was excellent. In potatoes and roots generally, the show was ahead of the Central, held in Guelph, for size. There were 26 entries of potatoes, all fine, and large. The turnips, mangel wurtzel, and carrots were also very large. Onions were very good, especially some very large English potato onions. Squashes, &c., were very good. Cabbage and cauliflowers were fair.

As there were only one set of judges for the grain, roots, &c., they did not get through with their duties on the first day. They appeared to be very particular in thoroughly testing each article. In roots the prize did not go always to the largest; every entry was thoroughly tested with the knife, and those best adapted for feeding, if smaller, were awarded the prize. Where roots had been forced they generally got nothing.

The day's proceedings were brought to a close by THE DINNER given by the society, held at Mr. Wm. Clark's Hotel. The repast was got up in Mr. Clark's best style, the tables being well furnished with produce of barnyard and field, displayed to the best advantage. About fifty gentlemen sat down to dinner. The President, J. Prain, Esq., Reeve, of Minto, occupied the chair; the vice-chair was occupied by the 1st Vice-President, Peter Robb, Esq., of Maryborough. Among those present were D. Sturton, Esq., M.P., N. Highbotham, Esq., M.P., Professor McCandless, of Guelph, J. Robb, Esq., Reeve of Maryborough, Alex. McLaren, Esq., Caledon, —Cross, Esq., —Gordon, Esq., Jas. Moore, Esq., John Anderson, Esq., Registrar, James Paisley, Esq., and several other prominent gentlemen.

SECOND DAY. Weather still fine. There was a large turnout of people. The horses were a splendid show. A great number of entries were made in the class of brood mares and farming horses. There was a good show of cattle generally. The display in thorough-bred was a fair one, but not so good as expected. Grades were well represented, but rather poor in flesh. Thirty pens of very good sheep were shown, also some fine pigs, both large and small breeds.

In implements and vehicles, S. Marshall, Drayton, shows a fine buggy and a long sleigh. Mr. Downing, Elora, shows a nice top buggy. Williams & Cruickshanks, Sturton, show a lumber wagon. Fair & Moore, lumber wagon, sleighs, and harrows. B. Kilgour shows a combined reaper and mower with Johnston self-rake. A. & A. Cochran, combined reaper and mower with Dodge self-rake. J. Chelan, Ferguson, shows a fanning mill. Several others exhibited implements, but we did not learn their names.

REMOVAL. W. D. HEPBURN & Co.,

Have removed their Boot and Shoe Store to the very extensive premises on the Corner of Wyndham Street and St. George's Square.

Their old store being too small on account of the continual increase in the Wholesale Manufacturing, as well as in the Retail Departments they have now fitted up the new and much larger place in first-class style, and would intimate to their very numerous customers and the public generally that having increased the facilities for manufacturing they are now able to offer to the public first-rate goods in all branches, at lower prices than ever before.

Custom Work

in all its branches made to order. Repairing Done Neatly and Cheaply as Heretofore.

The public are cordially invited to visit the new store, and examine our Goods.

GO TO THE RED MILL

Flour and Feed Store, Opposite Alma Block, WYNDHAM STREET,

ROBERTSON BROS., Guelph, Sept. 13, 1873 dw

A TIMELY ARRIVAL—HECTOR AND FLORA PURSUED BY IAN AND THE MENZIES.
"Back, scoundrel," he shouted to Angus, in such stern, commanding tone as caused the fellow to release his grasp of the young lady and start back. Then cleverly parrying a furious lunge made at his breast by Ian, he sprang nimbly between Flora and Angus, placing the two men before him and Flora behind.

Angus, too, was armed with a claymore, and advancing together, Ian and he prepared to renew the attack.

But if they expected that now when the struggle was fairly commenced, Hector M'Leod would wait on their rearing the conflict, they were much mistaken. His blood was now boiling at the insults which Ian had thrown at him, and at the mean foul manner of the attack upon him, and he was determined that he would—even although they were two to one—teach them that it was no easy matter to murder—for such was the language of the attempt—an armed and desperate man. Let the result be what it might, he was determined that they should not escape scathless.

Like a lion springing on its prey did he dash at them, so suddenly that they reeled and staggered beneath the fury of the blows he showered upon them.

To these sudden attacks, however, Ian seemed to be no stranger, for after the first shock had been received, and successfully withstood, he planted his feet firmly, and fairly met his opponent's onset.

It was a fearful sight. The dim light shed around in the hut; the clashing, circling, whirling weapons, now high, now low, reflecting and throwing it back in many coloured rays; the two young men, with bated breath, flashing eyes, heaving breasts, and eager purpose, smiling at and seeking each other's blood; the low dirty-looking companion of Ian making sly and covert attempts to slip behind young Hector and by a foul thrust disable him; the young girl standing behind the man on whom her hopes were centred, with clasped hands, now gazing fearfully at the raging conflict, and anon casting her eyes upwards as if proffering to heaven a prayer for the deliverance of her lover from the danger to which he was exposed. But, ah! the scene grows ghastlier still. Hector has again commenced to deal his blows around with such rapidity and force that he has forced Ian back upon the screen, behind which lies the rigid form of his father. He makes an effort to gain his ground; but no—his feet are entangled in the screen, and with a loud cry—
"Angus—for Heaven's sake at him," he reels backwards, tearing it down, and stumbling headlong over the corpse.

That moment had surely been Ian M'Kenzie's last, had not the sight which met Hector M'Leod's gaze for the moment distracted his attention and paralyzed his arm.

But a sudden and desperate attack on the part of Angus from the rear caused him at once to recover his thoughts and the command of his weapon.
Angus was no mean foe; and, although Hector plied him hard, and would assuredly have, in a short time, run his sword through him, he stood his ground well, and parried and feinted with no small skill.

Again he was joined by Ian, who had considerably regained his breath by the short cessation of exertion caused by the accident, and Hector felt that he could not long contend against the odds, unless some accidental turn in his favour shortly took place.

Flora, too, saw that his strength was falling—his blows were becoming feebler, and his movements were slower and less sure than at the beginning of the struggle.

Could she assist him?—and how? were questions which arose in her mind. In the midst of the mêlée and confusion she slipped unobserved to that part of the wall where hung the old frock, and eagerly brought it down in the hope that it might be loaded, and that with it she might disable one or other of Hector's opponents.

One glance was sufficient to show that it was unloaded, and with a pang of regret she flung it from her.

Oh! what was she to do? Every moment her lover was becoming more enfeebled, and if it were to be assisted it must be now, and by her. How was she to act? She did not lack courage, but she was only a weak woman. A claymore yet hung on the wall. Could she use it? She would try, and God might grant her strength to wield it against these villains.

Eagerly she sprang forward to obtain the weapon, and was just putting up her hand to seize it when to her horror she saw Hector stagger and utter a sharp cry of pain as if he had been struck, but at the same instant she was electrified to hear a loud knocking at the outside door of the hut, and a loud voice exclaim—
"What the devil kind o' stramash is this, I wonder? Open the door afore I see fair play."

"Help, help," cried Flora, wildly, as she saw Hector stagger to the ground, drops of blood falling from his breast; and, seizing the sword, she at once sprang between her lover's prostrate form and Ian and Angus, who with exulting looks, were rushing forward to complete their work.

"Back scoundrels," she cried, in a clear, ringing voice. "You have yet a determined woman to overcome."

"Gif there's naeboddy comin' tae open the door, faith, I'll find a wye in myself," again cried the voice outside. A loud crash immediately followed, and in an instant a figure bounded into the room, exclaiming—
"Ye blastit villains, fetchin' wi' a bit lassie, ye'll be a man doon! My faith, but ye've got an opportunity o' layin' anither. Stand back, my kimmer afore Ned Gordon lays his stiek about them."

The Reason Why.
The reason why the magnificent Retail Grocery Establishment in the Alma Block and on Lower Wyndham Street, belonging to John A. Wood, are so very popular with the intelligent public:—

Because the Goods are all of the best quality.
Because the Prices are invariably the lowest.
Because the Clerks are courteous and obliging.
Because the Stock is the largest to select from.
Because the goods are always clean.
Because the Weights and Measures are always correct.

Because, in fact, the proprietor understands his business, desires to please his customers, makes good use of his capital, and buys for cash in the best markets, and always deals liberally with those who honor his stores with their custom.—These and many other weighty reasons have contributed very largely to make the name of John A. Wood, as connected with the Grocery trade of Guelph, so well known, and his stores so very popular.

Guelph, Sept. 9, 1873.

Wyndham Street, Guelph.

The side of the mountain is broken by numerous crags and crags, which, softened by distance, are blended with the surrounding herbage, and Coir-nan-Oriskien, the Gobbins Cave of "The Lady of the Lake" seems but a gentle opening in the sloping ridge.

At the west end of Loch Katrine, we take coach again for 5 miles, through Glen Arkel to Invermail to Loch Lomond. At Invermail is a pretty waterfall and over it a slender foot bridge, the scene of Wordsworth's "Highland Girl." From here a most beautiful view of Loch Lomond is obtained. The north portion of it is narrow and hemmed in by lofty mountains. At this point is the entrance to Glenfalloch, and the commencement of the route through Glencoe to Ballachulish, which traverses some of the wildest scenery in Scotland. At Tarbet is the landing place for those who wish to cross the loch to Ardsheal and Loch Long. About a mile from Invermail is Rob Roy's Cave, and near by as the steamer skirts the mountain may be seen an arch-shaped cavern, named Rob's prison. Soon the "lofty brow of Ben Lomond" looms in sight, from the top of which a majestic view is obtained. From point to point as the boat threads its way among "Those emerald isles, which calmly sleep On the blue bosom of the deep" some new beauty is revealed, which will never fade from the recollection of the delighted traveller. The boat lands us at Balloch, and the railway soon conveys us by Balfron, Banchory, Port of Menzies through the very heart of the well known scenes in "Rob Roy" to Stirling, from whence we started. This trip can easily be made in one day, and at a very moderate cost.

A LABOR VOLUME would not contain the mass of testimony which has accumulated in favor of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry as a safe, efficient and reliable remedy in curing coughs, colds and pulmonary disease. Many of the cures are wonderful.
