SEELYE'S COVE (The Smart Set) Newport is not over-critical, in fact, accepts many things that would not be accepted in many other places and is a great deal about them at the same time. But it is curious to a degree, "I wish you'd tell Mr. So-and-So, marked an unassuming leader, gazed out under the edge of her parasol at young man at table's who's swimming parcel was somewhat dejected as to his shoulders, "I wish you'd tell Mr. So-and-So that I think his bathing suit is deplorable. Go ahead! tell him said so. It's really quite-er-disreputable."

ENGLAND'S PROUD POSITION AT HEAD OF THE WORLD Free Trader Finds Satisfaction in Signs of the Times.

Dr. J. T. Macnamara, the Secretary to the British Admiralty, in addressing his constituents in North Cumberland some days ago, expressed his belief that the splendid condition of Radicalism in North Cumberland-as testified by the meeting-was only a reflection of radicalism throughout the country.

The outlook, although not without its anxieties, was a good deal brighter than it had been for a long time past, and particularly could they, as free traders, find every satisfaction in the signs of the times. (Cheers.)

When tariff reform was first proposed the country had just been passing out of a time of grave depression, and there was a distressing amount of unemployment. At the moment when the pinch was most severe the tariff reformer came along with his programme of "all prizes and no blanks." (Laughter.) That so seductive a programme failed was a splendid tribute to the shrewdness and sagacity of the working classes. (Hear, hear.)

"There are lots of things in this country," he continued, "that need alteration, but so long as I find that under free trade, my country, with all its shortcomings, stands at the head of the world in trade, industry and commerce, national stability and national credit, and in the soul maternal comfort which its industrial population as a whole enjoys than as a practical man, I shall stick to that which has been tested and tried on the anvil of experience, and has proved itself admirably adapted to my country's needs." (Cheers.)

In the course of his further remarks, Dr. Macnamara paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Lloyd George. Far more important than labor exchanges, unemployment insurance, and invalidity insurance were, he said, the modifications and developments of national finance that were ever to be associated with the name of Lloyd George. (Cheers.)

"In fifty years time," he proceeded, "your sons will talk of Lloyd George and his budget in terms as grateful as those which you and I now use when we speak of the statesmanship of Cobden and Bright and Peel and Gladstone, in striking aside the cramping fetters of protection." (Cheers.)

The Japanese Way

The island of Formosa, situated off the coast of China, is now a Japanese possession, and Japan is setting about the work of pacifying the country in her own peculiar way. The interesting thing about Formosa is not its peaceful rice growing, tame lowlands, but a core of volcanic mountains, 4000 feet high, inhabited by dwarf aborigines. They are few-not over 20,000-but they have brought Mausers, they are just the color of the gray volcanic soil and they wholly refuse to accept the tax gatherer of Japanese rule. Bierce, active, able to climb anywhere, good shots, having no wants and few virtues but courage, they hold their mountain valleys against all comers.

So Japan has begun the task of conquest. The Japanese forces have brought 300 miles of barbed wire fencing, fenced in the territory, in a great loop from coast to coast set up dynamo, worked them with water power from the streams and charged the whole 300 miles so it is death to the touch. Around this is the Japanese force, with mountain howitzers and gatlings. Each day a section of barbed wire is moved inward, the jungle well searched, the natives gathered in and a junction made with the dynamo. The next day the electric cage moves again. Standard.

Eastern Enterprise

Consular and other reports from the far east are continually telling of the wonderful development of the Chinese in what is termed western civilization. Under the instructions of British and German officers, the Chinese soldiers are learning the tactics of modern warfare. At the same time the cities are adopting general utilities, schools are being established, and the printing presses are kept constantly going in turning out text books of all descriptions. As there are no copyright laws, the best school books of Europe and America are being translated and printed in Chinese. Not alone in warfare and learning are the Asiatics developing, but they are fast becoming manufacturers, especially in the making of cotton. One mill, employing several hundred hands, is reported to be in operation both day and night, with the average wage of the employees fifteen cents per day, while the highest paid skilled operator earns thirty cents.

In the natural course of events, the Chinese will soon become factors, if not in sending manufactured cottons to western countries, in holding the "home market." Now comes a consular report from Japan stating that a Tomskamal, in Hakaibo, Japan, a four million dollar pulp mill was completed in August. This is said to be the most important individual commercial enterprise of this nature in the far east. Only one foreigner is employed, and he is installing the machinery.

The total cost of the machinery in the plant is placed at one million dollars, while the electric plant, outside of the reservoir and powerhouse, costs another million dollars. The electricity is generated by water, and at present 15,000 horse power is developed, to which 7,500 more horse power will be added. The daily output of the plant is over seventy tons. This is said to be over fifty per cent of the total consumption of news and book paper in Japan, while the supply of wood will last over a century. The Japanese who are interested in this enterprise say the selling price on the tonnage basis of their product will, for the present, be placed at two and a half to three cents per pound, and at the reduced cost of production will enable the Japanese manufacturer to cut prices, if necessary, to secure a ready market for the output. The plant was planned by a Japanese engineer who for many years was engaged in the paper business. The pulp washers, as well as the ten naval boilers, of 300 horse power each, are Japanese inventions. Globe.

Panama Canal to Have World's Greatest Gates

Pittsburg, Oct. 30.-Michigan boys dreaming tonight of gates they will seize as hollow-er trophies would not, in the wildest nightmares, imagine such enormous gates as are being made in Pittsburg for the Panama canal. They will be the largest gates in the world. Any one of the ninety-two of them will be about as high as a six story building, as wide as many city buildings are, and seven feet thick. The structural steel that will go to make them will weigh 60,000 tons required, the heaviest single pieces will weigh about eight tons. These will be huge girders, which are seven feet long and will be placed much like the first floor girders of a skyscraper. The thousands of individual pieces will be shipped by steamer via Baltimore and with them will go over four hundred skilled structural steel workers from Pittsburg to set them up. It will take three years to complete the job. Each lock will be ample for a ship 50 per cent larger than any vessel now afloat. The gates are no locks approaching these in size. The famous Suez canal is a sea-level affair and the few great lock canals would have to combine their gates to equal this. Exchange.

Mr. F. C. Gutelius, general superintendent of the lake division of the C. P. R., will succeed Mr. Charles Murphy as general superintendent of the eastern lines at Montreal.

The King's Coronation And Evil Portends

London, Oct. 29.-King George is particularly anxious that his coronation ceremonies next June shall be free from any untoward incident which might be construed as ominous. This is not alone because he himself, like all members of his house, is imbued with a certain amount of superstition, but it is likewise because he is thoroughly aware that popular confidence in himself and his reign will be shaken in the event of any occurrence at the coronation which could be construed as portending evil.

The coronations of Queen Victoria and King Edward were remarkably free from anything that could be looked upon by the people as a bad omen, though the fact that the coronation of King Edward had to be postponed on account of the illness with which the monarch was suddenly stricken led many persons to predict that his reign would be short.

At the coronation of George IV, the Marquis of Anglesey, officiating as lord high steward, while carrying the crown to the altar, let it slip from his hands. When George III. was installed on the throne, Lord Effingham, master of ceremonies, forgot to provide the sword of state and the chair and canopy for the banquet. At the coronation of George II., the Dean of Westminster forgot the chalice and paten, and at the coronation of the ill-fated King James I the communion service was omitted.

At the coronation of Charles I., the wing of the glove on Edward the Confessor's sceptre was broken off accidentally. And the Bishop of Carlisle, in preaching the coronation sermon, selected as his text, "I will give thee a crown of life," a text which put everybody in mind of the funeral service, to which it so frequently figures. It may be remembered that King Charles lost his head on the scaffold.

It is also well to remember, in reading of these gloomy prophecies of doom, that such incidents are seldom thought of until an untoward incident has occurred. Then the superstitious mind seeks some occurrence to serve the purpose of an omen, a thing not hard to find, since almost every occasion is attended by some unfortunate incident.

The coronation of King George V. will be celebrated at the white city, Shepherd's Bush, by an exhibition which is intended to show the dominion, power and resources of the British empire. For the first time in history there will be seen representatives of all races and nationalities who owe allegiance to the King, and all their special industries will be reproduced.

From India will come some of her most skilled artisans, and some of her precious treasures. Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Jamaica, the Fiji Islands and others will tell the story of their origin and development. The resources of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales will also be shown.

The Australian Commonwealth parliament has decided to send a delegation consisting of eighteen members to the coronation. The ministerial party will be represented by eleven and the opposition by seven members. Exchange.

Germany Will Swallow Holland

London, Oct. 25.-Germany is gradually drawing Holland into her grip. Holland, despairing of British protection, is considering what terms she can make with Germany.

This information is published by The Express, which says that the statement is made by a Dutch gentleman of the highest standing in Amsterdam. "Annexation," he adds, "is a word which, if used, no doubt would breed patriots, but it would be called by another name. A great deal will be talked about preserving our integrity and also about obtaining protection of the great German Empire. It would be suggested that a trade would derive enormous advantages. All this would sound better, but the result would be the same."

Story of Fall of Lisbon is Told by a Boston Man

New York, Oct. 25.-A thrilling story of the bombardment of Lisbon during the revolution by four of the battleships of the Portuguese navy, manned by rebels, was related by George Banchor of Boston, when he arrived on the Cincinnati of the Hamburg-American line.

"I was a passenger on board the Cape Blanco, which arrived in the harbor of Lisbon from Brazil on Oct. 4, the day the revolution broke out," said Banchor. "Our ship got into the harbor about 10 a. m. It was a beautiful day, and we were all on deck watching the shore. There was no apparent sign at that time of any revolution; in fact we were impressed with the continued quiet that appeared to rest over Lisbon."

"We were much interested in four Portuguese battleships that lay at anchor in the harbor and I watched the men on them at work. They appeared to be very busy and I could see them running up and down the decks and the officers issuing orders. To me it appeared as if they were preparing to sail."

"We were much surprised that we were not permitted to dock. About 11 o'clock a man rowed out to the ship from the shore. I asked him to take me ashore. In reply he dropped his oar and drew his finger across his throat. The royal flag was flying from the flag poles of the four forts scattered about the harbor and also from the Necessidades palace. A feeling of unrest became apparent suddenly and we saw armed men waking up and down the wall along the harbor."

"Promptly at 12 o'clock we saw the flag on one of the forts lowered and almost instantly the guns of the four battleships began belching forth their missiles of death and destruction. It all happened so quickly that it was not until fifteen minutes later that we realized that a revolution had broken out. The bombardment of the city by the four Portuguese battleships lasted for exactly two and a half hours."

"One by one the forts were crumpled under the heavy fire of the battleships. The surprising part of it all was that not an answering shot came from any of the forts or from the shore."

"Shortly after the last fort flag was lowered we saw the royal flag on the Necessidades palace lowered. A great cheer could be heard from the shore. A few minutes later the fire of the battleships suddenly stopped. Then we saw the royal standard again flying from the castle. The royalists, we later learned, had rallied and temporarily beaten off the revolutionists. Within the next twenty minutes the flag had been lowered again and the flag of the revolutionists ran up."

"Later hundreds and hundreds of armed men--the revolutionists--began parading along the streets. Our ship was only a quarter mile off shore and we had an excellent opportunity to witness the proceedings on shore."

"In that long parade of the victorious revolutionists there must have been many English speaking persons, for we could plainly hear them shouting 'Long live the republic.'"

"During the bombardment of the Necessidades palace, we saw a great section of the wall fall out, displaying to our view the royal church in the enclosure of the castle wall. Later we saw this church completely demolished. We saw scores of buildings fall under the fire of the shells from the ships." Exchange.

THE GRANITE TOWN GREETINGS

The Ovarinas.

The ovarinas are perhaps the most interesting people in Portugal. They are probably the lineal descendants of the original inhabitants of the land, and now come from a small place called Murtoza (Estarreja), not far from Oporto. As the termination indicates, the ovarinas are the women of these people.

Both old and young, for even young children are thus employed, are exceedingly active and energetic. They go about barefoot, wearing a peculiar costume, and carrying huge baskets of a peculiar shape on their heads. They travel many miles a day and penetrate into every corner of the city crying their wares in a loud, unmusical shout. They mount even to the sixth floors and bargain with buyers. They go about barefoot not because of their poverty many of them possessing gold ornaments, but because they can more easily cover the many miles they run during the day. Attempts have been made to do away with this method of selling fish, but they have all failed. The customers like to deal with these fish girls and can purchase from them very small amounts.

Fish is not purchased by weight, but by the fish or part of fish. The price averages 12 to 15 cents per pound. There are not less than 2,000 ovarinas engaged in selling fish in Lisbon.—Consular Report.

The apple crop will be a worse failure than was at first anticipated, and it looks as if there would not be available for export more than 15 per cent of the average. Nearly the whole fruit region is in the same condition of barren trees, and some farmers whose orchards yield an average of 1000 barrels, this year will only have 100. They are the rule, not the exception. The export of apples to Great Britain last year from Nova Scotia was about 700,000 barrels, while at the most this year will not reach 170,000 barrels during the season. The failure of the apple crop is not only a serious thing for the orchardists, but it is a blow at the traffic of the Dominion Atlantic Railway, which hauls practically the whole crop.—Ans. Spectr.

Far too Official

During a portion of the South African war, Lord Kitchener had as an orderly a young scion of a noble house who had joined the Imperial Yeomanry as a trooper. He could not quite understand that he was not on terms of perfect equality with the members of the staff, and having been summoned one morning to carry despatches for the commander-in-chief, he entered the room with a jaunty air. "Did you want me, Kitchener?" he asked calmly, while the rest of the staff gasped for fear of what would happen next. Kitchener, however, merely looked at him with a quiet smile. "Oh, don't call me Kitchener," he remarked gently, "it's so beastly formal. Call me Herbert!"

Pole Discovered in 1630

Washington, Oct. 25.—If ancient records in the possession of the navy department are to be taken as authentic, Captain Robert F. Peary was not the first to visit the North Pole, but was not anticipated several centuries ago by an old English friar skilful in astronomy and navigation.

Department officials have unearthed an old history in which the claim is made that the North Pole was discovered in 1630 by a friar of Oxford. It is called "A Naval History or Complete View of the British Marine," and was published by John Entick in London in 1757.

Two Trees Yield $125.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 24.—What is considered a record apple production has just been made the Pomona orchard, near Dayton, Wash., where two trees of bellflower apples yielded 120 boxes of first-class fruit that netted the grower $125.

There are sixty trees to the orchard, and each tree yielding at the same rate makes the return $37.50 to the acre. When the fall harvest is in from this orchard some more surprises are expected.

KEEP YOUR MONEY AT HOME.

An ardent advocate of home buying and boosting relates an incident which among other things, shows how thoroughly the mail order fever permeates all conditions of life. A girl who earned her living as clerk in a dry goods store had told him that she had got a certain article in a certain Toronto store, if our recollection of the name of the place is not at fault, and when he asked her why she did not buy it at the store she worked in and which had the same article for sale, she replied: "Oh! I got it ten cents cheaper by sending away?"

"Well," commented the other, "suppose every one in town did as you: send away for all you need, what would become of your employer's business, your own position and the salary by which you live?"

Presented in this light, it did not take long for the clerk in question to see the harm of the mail order business. And if every one would sit down and read the matter out each would see for himself where he was not only hurting local merchants, but actually hurting himself by every dollar he sends out of town.

"The Little Man With the Whiskers."

painting man, so I heard Patrick tell a friend. I don't quite know what that is, and Patrick had some difficulty in explaining it to his friend, but anyhow he does something that keeps him sitting all day in front of a board while my mistress and I stay the other side of the brook, and he looks at us. I got over one day when he had gone to speak to Beauty and looked to see what he was doing, but all I saw on the board was a little cow's head something like Beauty's, and a little lady's head something like my mistress, and before I could find out more my master had chased me away.

My master generally stays at this board till afternoon, then he says he has worked enough, and comes over to my mistress, and they sit together under the willow and pat me and tell me how pretty I am; you can't think how happy we all are.

At times they get a little more absorbed with each other than I think quite polite. I spoke to James (the horse) about it—he says they are the most affectionate couple he has ever seen—that half the time, when he takes them out, he has to do all the driving himself, for they will get so interested in each other that if he didn't turn round sharp and bring them home they would drive on forever. He told me that at first he wanted husband dearest, consider that you are still a very young man. Suppose that you had already made lots of fame and lots of money, you might be inclined to idle and enjoy life; and, instead, these slights which are hard to bear have proved very beneficial to us; haven't they spurred you on to do this last work, which I prophesy will turn the tables for us; but even if we have one more set-back, what does it matter? You improve all the time, and I have such an ambition for you, such a determination that you shall gain the very highest pinnacle of fame, that I don't care how long they keep nagging you so long as it spurs you on to greater endeavor."

"That sounds very fine," said my master, sighing, "but in the meantime, how do we live?"

"Now, don't talk about money and bread and butter; those departments belong to me. We can never be poor as long as we have each other's love, and even if we have to give up our pretty home and go to smaller and poorer quarters we will be happy. Indeed, I think I could make them so much nicer than our present ones that they would inspire you more than these have ever done. Nothing can hurt us while you love me and I love you. All you have to do is to love me."

May be I ought to have walked away at this, but I wasn't going to just when things were getting interesting, so I watched them, and under the shadow of the big willow saw my master embrace my mistress.

"I will love you always," I heard him say, "as long as there is a critic left to abuse me."

"Don't," she cried, "don't make our love the price of our ambition. You couldn't find a critic who would want to work us such harm."

Then they went away, and I stood wondering and wishing that I knew what a critic was like, that I might tell them they were wrong.

One morning Patrick was quite late in fetching us in to breakfast, and Beauty had not been milked, and we were both beginning to let them know at the house that we didn't approve of their ways, when out came my master and mistress and stood looking down the road. In a few moments there was a great cloud of dust and up came James in a lather with Patrick astride him carrying a great bundle of papers. My master seized them and hurried over to the willow; then began to open them nervously and search through them. My mistress stood looking over his shoulder. Suddenly they both gave a great cry and fell into each other's arms.

"At last! At last!" my mistress cried, "they have acknowledged you at last!"

"Yes," said my master, "but I wonder how much of my success is due to the lovely face I copied?"

"The two lovely faces," laughed my mistress, blowing a kiss to me.

My master smiled, and twirled his mustache, and looked so happy that I wanted to know what it all meant, and trotted up to them to find out when Patrick must needs come up and chuck me off to breakfast. I was very mad, for I hated not to know what it was all about.

After that morning things changed a little. My master was never at home any more. The talks under the willow were over, and I only saw him in the early morning when he would come out with a high hat and gloves on and pat me in absent-minded way, and say to my mistress:

"You don't mind my going to town to-day, do you, darling. Now that things are beginning to look brighter for us I ought to go round amongst the boys a little."

My mistress used to smile and say she liked him to go, but I noticed that after he had said the same thing every morning for about six weeks, my mistress smiled less and seemed to be less cheerful when she told him she liked to have him go.

Quite a wet spell came after this. I saw nothing at all of my mistress, and I used to see my master driving away with James and Patrick as usual. It worried me to know what was the matter. James could not tell me anything, and none of the dogs came to the barn, so I absolutely knew nothing. I could not stand it, and set to work to call my mistress with all my might the first morning that it was fine enough for her to get out.

Some hours passed—I kept on calling, but nobody came. At last Patrick put his head over the fence.

"That calf beats all!" was all he said, and disappeared.

A few moments later out came my mistress. Her eyes were red; she had evidently been crying. She came up to me and I was so sorry to see her sad that I licked her hand and tried to comfort her. At this she broke down completely, and laying her head on my neck began to cry.

"Oh, Ethel, Ethel!" she said, "he doesn't love us any more! He isn't happy with us any more! He is restless and wretched until he can get away from us. Now that he has nothing but praise from everybody and there isn't a critic left to abuse him he has no use for us! When I longed for a critic to find out his worth I little thought I was longing for the wrecking of my own happiness!"

She seemed so unhappy that I began to cry, too, for sympathy.

"Mistress," I said, "just show me what a critic is like and you shan't have to cry any more; I will take care of you."

Before she could reply Patrick came through the gate.

"Well, he do baw!" he said. "I guess 'd better change his food."

"Is any thing the matter with her?" asked my mistress, starting up.

"I dunno," Patrick replied; "he's been having that way all month; 'Tain't for the want of food; he's fat enough. Mebbe he's lonesome. A man's never done foolin' with a calf that's been reared by wimmin."

"Poor little thing, may be she misses (To be continued.)"

Crushed Coffee— what it is

By a process of crushing between steel rollers, instead of grinding, the skin, which remains in the eye of the bean after roasting, is separated from the kernel and removed by air suction, while the kernel is broken into small even grains. These grains when steeped, being free of the skin or chaff, settle quickly, leaving the liquid clear and bright, and give the true coffee flavor.

Estabrook's Red Rose crushed Coffee is as easy to make as Red Rose Tea. Directions are in each tin.

Eggs Baked in Tomatoes

Select round smooth tomatoes and wash, but do not peel. Cut a thin slice from the top of each and scoop out enough of the pulp to leave a space large enough to hold an egg. Season these little nests with salt and pepper, and carefully break an egg in each. Cover the bottom of a shallow pan with hot water, olive oil or lard, put the tomatoes in it and bake covered about fifteen minutes. Season with butter and serve on toast.

Stomach Agony.

Abolish the Cause, and Misery and Distress of Indigestion Will Vanish.

Can indigestion be cured? Hundreds of thousands of people who suffer from belching of gas; biliousness, sour stomach, fullness, nausea, shortness of breath, bad taste in mouth, foul breath, nervousness and other distressing symptoms, are asking themselves the question daily.

And if these same doubting dyspeptics could only read the thousands of sincere letters from people who once suffered as badly as they do now, but who have been quickly and permanently cured by the use of Mi-on-a tablets and start themselves on the right road to health at once.

The price of Mi-on-a tablets is only 50 cents, and J. S. Clark guarantees them to cure indigestion, or money back.

Thin or lean or scrawny people will find in Mi-on-a a maker of flesh and blood, because it causes the stomach to extract more nutritious matter from the food, which quickly enriches the blood.

How easy it is to enter an aristocratic mansion in broad daylight, gather up everything of value pack the plunder in elegant suitcases and get away in safety, although a small army of servants may be at work in the lower part of the house was demonstrated the other day by an elegantly dressed man and his stylishly attired woman companion, who performed the feat the other afternoon and carried away art works, rugs and bric-a-brac valued at $5,000 from the mansion of William H. Davidow on Eighty-seventh street. One of the strange features of the robbery is that it is not known how the thieves obtained access to the house and that Mrs. Davidow, on her return from a drive met the thieves coming from her house, but took them for visitors, who had come to call and leave their cards. But they did not leave their cards.

"I'm no Solomon" Said

Magistrate in Despair

(New York World)

The hobble skirt was presented as evidence in court on Tuesday. The defendant came into court with the evidence under her arm.

It was the case of Mrs. Bertha Lang, of No. 81 So. Main street, East New York, against Miss Francis Stultz, of No. 79 Sackman street, in the New Jersey Avenue Court. The women had an argument over Mrs. Lang's husband one day last week. Miss Stultz had Mrs. Lang arrested for assault. When Miss Lang said she was attacked first the judge asked how.

"She punched and kicked me," said Mrs. Lang.

It was then that the hobble skirt was triumphantly produced.

"Do you think I could kick anybody with this on?" Judge? Miss Stultz asked as she held the garment up for his inspection. "Why, Judge, I can just barely glide along with it on, much less indulge in violent exercise. Believe me, if you ever had a hobble skirt on, Judge, you would know that you could never raise your foot in anger."

"I'm no Solomon," said Magistrate Morrow, and dismissed the case.

Woman Hits Man in Court

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 27.—"I'm your lawful wife, and you know you had no right to marry this other woman. You will never live with her!"

Mrs. Rachel Drobins, or, at least, a woman who professes the right to use that name, finished the above sentence today with a blow that landed squarely on the jaw of Lewis Drobins while they were before Judge Stewart in the West Chicago Avenue Court.

The judge pounded with his gavel for order, spectators jumped from benches and bailiffs rushed to separate the struggling couple. Before they reached the latter however, the woman had landed several more stinging blows in quick succession, and the defendant was tottering when she was finally subdued and locked in a cell, where the court ordered that she remain for six hours. The woman preferred a charge of bigamy against Drobins.

In the sixteenth century clothes were sent from all parts of France to be washed in Holland where the water of the canals was supposed to have special cleansing properties. The cost of transport was about ten times greater in those days than at present.

After Wife Deserters

The various charity organization societies are after wife deserters, and an effort will be made to punish this class of miscreant.

"A man who will desert his wife is not much of a man," said Inspector Sanders, of the local organization. "We have many cases of wife desertion coming under our notice. I cannot say that there is much of an increase in this particular form of crime, but it is receiving more attention than ever before. I have little faith in women, when their husbands are in trouble. They will come to a magistrate and tell their story of abuse and desertion. The magistrate issues a summons, and the man is brought in to court. The woman immediately starts to beg him out and refuses to testify. The present law fails there. The wife's evidence is necessary to convict, and when she refuses there is no method of dealing with the man as he should be dealt with. We are asking to have the law amended, so that other evidence besides that of the wife can be used to secure a conviction. It is a mistake to allow them to go free. I think we will succeed, as every charity organization from Winnipeg, to the eastern coast is interested in this matter.—Exchange.

A "Gamble" in Real Estate

F. Burgess of the Burgess Powell Co., appealed to the court of revision against an assessment of $40,237 on 431-3 Yonge street, Toronto. Although admitting paying $60,000, and that he would not sell for $75,000 he contended that the assessment should be based on the rental values and not on the speculative values. The property had been bought from Senator Cox, who had paid $45,000 for it four months before. Mr. Burgess got a reduction of $2,550 on the property, the court taking the view that it had been a "gamble" in real estate, and the intrinsic value could not be gauged at all by the purchase price.

As Usual

"Has Spicer heard from his daughter since she eloped?"

"Oh, yes. The young couple telegraphed the next day that they were willing to come home and be forgiven."—Chicago Record-Herald.

JUST LIKE RUSSIA.

Chicago Police Use Clubs.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—Mounted police today charged threatening mobs of striking garment workers and made numerous arrests in three quarters of Chicago, only to be dumbfounded when met by obdurate groups of club women and society leaders, who when taken into custody, produced engraved calling cards at police stations in lieu of bail bonds.

It was a new experience for the police, and it plainly confused them. A score of these women champions of the women champions of the garment workers were arrested, but they were immediately released when their identities became known. One woman was struck by a policeman's club, but her name did not become known, as she was placed in an automobile and taken home. Most of the club women involved in today's demonstrations were garbed as working girls, and the police could not distinguish them from strikers until after arrests were made.

Morgan Purchase Arouses Spain

Madrid, Saturday.—The Cares pondencia de Espana says that Mr. J. Tierpont Morgan has bought the house known as the Casa de Miranda, at Purgos, for the purpose of taking away the patio and stain case, great artistic works of the Renaissance period. It is stated that the Inspector-General of National Monuments, Senior Cristiano Martos, has interfered and is communicating with the Governor of Burgos to prevent their exportation. The Minister of Public Instruction and Fine Arts is considering whether the Casa de Miranda is a national monument or not.

Reciprocity Conference Discussion Saturday

(Special to the St. J. Telegraph)

Ottawa Nov. 2.—Reciprocity negotiations between Canada and the United States will be commenced on Saturday next at Ottawa.

Hon. W. S. Fielding announced this evening that word had come from Washington today from Chas. M. Pepper, who participated in the negotiations last spring; Henry M. Hoyt, former solicitor general, and now controller of the American Department and J. G. Foster, United States consul general at Ottawa, have been appointed to represent the United States.

Canada will be presented by Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. Wm. Paterson, minister of customs.

After the first conference on Saturday it is expected that there will be further conferences throughout next week. It is felt here that the conferences will produce substantial results. What proposals will be made by either side can only be conjectured, as the conference will be held behind closed doors. It is likely that nothing definite will be announced until the negotiations have been nearly ended and an agreement concluded in a written document.

It is probable that the first few meetings will be devoted to an examination of the trade between Canada and the United States, and a discussion as to what lines can be further developed to the benefit of both countries by modifying customs rates, but without substantial change in the fiscal policy of either country.

CHICAGO MERCHANT MAKES STATEMENT.

After Spending Thousands of Dollars and Consulting the Most Eminent Physicians, He Was Desperate.

CHICAGO, ILLS.—Mr. J. G. Becker, of 134 Van Buren St., a well-known wholesale dry goods dealer, states as follows:

"I have had catarrh for more than thirty years. Have tried everything on earth and spent thousands of dollars for other medicines and with physicians, without getting any lasting relief, and can say to you that I have found Peruna the only remedy that has cured me permanently.

"Peruna has also cured my wife of catarrh. She always keeps it in the house for an attack of cold, which it invariably cures in a very short time."
