ENGLISHMEN WILL OBSERVE ST. GEORGE'S DAY

Red and White Roses will be Worn and Many Flags Flown in Honor of England's Patron Saint -- Life and History of the Pattern of All Britons.

Tomorrow will be St. George's Day—England's day—and from every flag-staff in the Empire, flags will fly and patriotic Englishmen and descendants of Englishmen will wear red and white roses in honor of St. George and Merle England and in remembrance of the brave and noble deeds of Englishmen. As this year the day falls on Sunday, from many pulpits the clergy-men of all denominations with a com-mon English ancestry will tell the story again the story of the great English martyr, St. George, and of the deeds and sufferings of the saint, for he was a mythical hero by any means, but a real soldier of Christ and one who fought and died for the Christian faith. Nor is it right to call him a mythical hero; St. George, a butcher, and dishonest con-tractor, who persecuted the great Athanasius and finally intruded into the See of Alexandria and made himself a bishop, or intended to do so.

Shakespeare has countless refer-ences to St. George. In Henry V., the king cries: "God for Harry, England and St. George!" In Richard II., the king encourages his soldiers with the words: "Our ancient word of courage, fair St. George." In King John refer-ence is made to "St. George who swung the dragon and ever since sits upon his horseback at the horses' head." Ballads and plays have been written on St. George, many of which provided amusement in country houses on holidays.

200 Churches. In England alone there are over 200 churches dedicated to St. George, and in the United States there are many more. The chief altar in England is in his honor. St. George was early recognized as a worthy of reverence by the churches, and was favorably mentioned by Pope Gregory, whose missionaries reported the veneration in which he was held, and later his name was entered in the calendar of the English church by the Venerable Bede, and so his name still stands today in that calendar as a black legend of the church.

Eczema was Spreading Till D. D. D. Cured It.

This is a translation of a letter written in French on April 16, 1910, by Mr. Dan Babineau, Cap Lumiere, N. B.: "I have been suffering from eczema for about 6 months, and had consulted several doctors who did not do me any good. The disease was spreading and I was most uncomfortable. I thought I would go crazy. All my friends were telling me I would lose my hands unless I found the right treat-ment. One day I read in the Messenger about your D. D. D. treatment and I decided to try it for a sample. It did me so much good that I immediately ordered two large bottles. It took eight bottles altogether to cure me of this terrible disease. I shall never be without a bottle of D. D. D. in my home." The records of ten years of com-plaints of eczema of the hands and severe cases show that D. D. D. stands today as the absolutely reliable eczema cure. Write today for free trial bottle to the D. D. D. Laboratories, Dept. B, 49 Colborne St., Toronto. It will give you instant relief. OUTGUSSING THE BATTER—BY CHRISTY MATHEWSON

No pitcher, no matter how powerful or agile can hope to become a great performer without being thoroughly equipped "from the shoulders up." It isn't the iron in the arm that makes a pitcher; because lots of "long-shoremen" could snap a pitcher's arm in two with a single twist. It's the combination of brain and body, the perfect co-operation of mind and muscle, that makes a man a successful major league pitcher.

MATHEWSON HAS A "HEAD" AND THAT'S WHY HE OUT GUESSES BATTERS AND WINS

Christy Mathewson has been pitching for the New York Giants for 10 years. In that time he has won 262 games and lost 118, a percentage of .689. Lots of pitchers have as much speed, lots of others have as wide curves. But no others seem to have something which he possesses in the same degree. That something is "head." Mathewson has a great head. He outguesses the batter. In the following story published today in Pearson's Magazine for May, he explains how he fools the batter and base runner.

Joe Tinker of the Cubs is a man with whom I have fought many a battle of wits, and I am glad to acknowledge that he has come out of the fuss with flying colors on many occasions. There was a time when Tinker was putty in my hands. His weakness was a low curve on the outside, and I fed him low curves on the outside so often that I had him looking like an invalid every time he came to the plate. Then Joseph went home one night and did a little deep thinking. He got a nice long bat, and took his stand at least a foot farther from the plate, after that night of meditation, and then he had me.

From that day on, Tinker became one of the most dangerous batters I ever faced, not because his natural hitting ability had increased, but because he didn't propose to let the pitcher do all of the guessing. The greatest strength of a pitcher, aside from his control, is what the players call his "mixture." That means no more, nor less than what the word implies—his variety of fast and slow balls, his serving of this or that curve.

Some batters a few of the chosen, have no weakness that the most studious pitcher can detect. Men like Hans Wagner and Lajoie don't care much what the opposing pitcher has to offer.

They stand well back from the plate, as a rule, and if you put the ball on the inside, they are ready for it. If you keep it on the outside, they simply reach out and cuff it.

When I am facing a new batsman for the first time I pay particular attention to two things—how he stands, and how he holds his bat. If he holds his bat well up toward the middle, as Keeler always did, there isn't much use of sending him speed. Batters of this type are always ready for speed. A low curve on the inside will go for a starter and if such a batter goes after it and fails to connect, you have his number.

A batter who stands well back from the plate with a long bat and a grip near the end is the batter who can send a low curve into the southeast corner of the next county.

I shall never forget a trimming I once got from a village team in Michigan. Just after we had defeated the Athletics for the world's championship in 1905, Frank Bowerman and I went on a hunting trip.

As soon as the natives of Frank's home town, Romeo, Mich., knew that I was his guest, they came and begged us to do the battery work for the Romeo club in a game they were to play with a club representing the adjoining town.

We agreed, and I am afraid that our willingness cost a lot of honest Romeo villagers everything except their family plate. The thought of defeat never entered their minds, any more that it entered ours, but that little town's club came over to Romeo and gave Messers. Bowerman and Mathewson, fresh from their big league triumphs, a touch of high life that they never forgot.

I don't know just how I managed it, because I was in perfect trim at that time. I had everything, as we say in professional circles, they hit everything I had. I didn't mind it much myself, but I felt sorry for poor Bowerman. He had to keep on living there, and I didn't.

NEW IDOL FOR CUB FANS

FRED TONEY.

Cubville pennant prospects this year may depend upon the service of a kid pitcher, as they did last year, when a recruit from the south Michigan league, King Cole, led the league and held the Bearcats in the lead when the veterans were floundering like bewildered elderly persons in the maze of corner traffic.

Cole is in the hospital temporarily, but another kid, Fred Toney, who has been kept under wraps by Manager Chance, Murphy et al., and was so excited when Chance chased the elongated fox-chaser to the hill that they failed to pass upon the others, Even Zimmerman at third failed to attract notice.

might have been. When I go against Wolgast I'll be at my best, and the best man will certainly win. If that man isn't Hogan then I'll quit the game entirely. I believe in being a champion if one has to be a pugilist. There's no money or glory in being anything else. So it's me for the title or bust."

NEW WHITE MAN'S HOPE IS FOUND

CHARLES CONWAY.

Atlanta, Ga., April 20.—The search is ended. The White Man's hope is found. His name is Charles Conway, of the Washington American league baseball club.

Quiet, modest and unassuming, the youthful Hercules trained with the Washington club in Atlanta this spring, never letting slip the fact that he differed from his fellows in any degree of physical development.

Yet all the time Conway dreams of the day when he shall stand face to face with the champion; when he will see that famous "golden smile" fade beneath his mighty blows.

Be it known Conway is a fighter. His name rings right. He comes of fighting stock and since his earliest childhood he has fought his way through life.

Twenty-two years ago Conway was born at Youngstown, Ohio. His home lay in the toughest section of the town where it was as natural to fight as to breathe.

They say in Youngstown that "Charlie Conway was never licked. His boyhood was an endless chain of battles, and he has, at one time or another, fought and defeated every tough and every bully in his home.

Conway's muscles were hardened to the springy strength of cables in the steel mills.

Beneath his shiny skin like muscle ripple like the coils of an accordion. His waist is slender and his great chest swells to his shoulders. His blonde head is supported upon a neck like a corded column.

And fight! Once in the Senators' club house, Trainer Joe Quirk induced a player of gigantic proportions to don the gloves with Conway. The youngster, with the club but a few weeks, looked insignificant compared to the man opposed to him.

Then it happened! There was a round of sparring, in which the youngster got a line on his opponent. The second round was short.

"Time," said Quirk, and the men left their corners.

THE BRITISH CHESS KINGS WIN 1ST GAME

New York, N. Y., April 21.—The British chess players, who have but one more leg to capture, on the Newnes trophy, before it becomes their permanent property, started the 13th annual Anglo-American chess match today by gaining the first win. Of the 10 games begun only two were finished when the boards were left at 7 o'clock (New York time) and of these one was taken by Amos Burn, of Liverpool, from Frank Marshall, the United States champion; the other was drawn between A. B. Hodges, Staten Island and H. E. Atkins, the British chess federal champion.

Play will be resumed at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning with the score standing 1½ to ½ in favor of the players across the sea, but as the game at the 6th board looked tonight as a possible American win, the score may promptly be evened up tomorrow.

Of the games on the other seven boards, the results are altogether phenomenal. The Marshall-Burn match was played in London, and being the only exception to the cable play, it was finished first. The American champion was outwitted by a man who had been placed much below him in the international masters' tournament at San Sebastian. Marshall got slightly the better of it in the opening by a queen gambit declined. Burn played the white pieces with his 17th move the Englishman set a trap which Marshall fell into and compromised the game beyond all redemption. He tried to escape his queen for two bishops rather than face an ending with a pawn down besides a bad position. Burns scored without much difficulty except as to the had been made.

Hodges, of Staten Island, the only player who has taken part in all of the international matches, since the start, without losing once, drew a carefully conducted game from the British champion after 22 moves.

R. T. Black, Brooklyn, champion of the international masters' tournament at Montreal, Scotland, at the 6th board, and at adjournment was confident in his ability to win tomorrow.

BALL PLAYERS CASE IS DISMISSED.

Cincinnati April 21.—Charles French and C. A. Gandill, former members of the Chicago American League team, failed to convince the National Baseball Commission that Comiskey's club owes them money for back salary. They attempted to collect under a recent ruling that in case a player is sent to a minor league team within ten days of the end of the minor league season, that he can collect his full year's salary from the major league club.

THOMAS FINISHED 18TH IN BOSTON MARATHON.

Charlottetown, April 21.—Michael Thomas, the Indian, finished eighteenth in the Boston Marathon. A letter received prior to the race stated he was suffering from a severe cold. He was carefully trained in Boston, the Abercrombie club in Charlottetown, whose colors he carried, providing for every detail. Father McDonald, priest in charge of Lennox Island Indians, had been with Thomas for the past month, overseeing his training. The Abercrombie president says considering Thomas had not recovered from the severe cold last week the position secured by him in his first Marathon with the most classy runners is very creditable.

Country Jay, 205 1-4, will be out after the record for 15-year-old trotters this season.

The 245 and 215 ponies of Grand Rapids did not fit. The slower class will meet Frankie Burns on May 25 and Owen Moran on July 8th.

ONE ROUND HOGAN MAY QUIT GAME

New York, April 21.—Mr. John Hogan, otherwise "One-Round" Hogan of California, announces that his battle with Adolph Wolgast, world's lightweight champion, may be the last of his career. Hogan and Wolgast are scheduled to box at the Madison A. C. of Harlem on Wednesday, April 26. The California lad, who has won the "Michigan Wildcat" in action, and he believes that he will have no difficulty in "flattening" the champion.

"I was at the ring-side and saw Ad Wolgast fight. I have never 'knocked' anybody in my life, and I do not intend to start now. But all I have to say is this: If I can't beat Wolgast I never want to fight again. I have a very good opinion of my own ability. You fellows who write about fighters and fights know better than I do whether I have a swelled head or not, but I don't think I have; I only believe that I can fight well enough to beat Wolgast, and if I can't I know I can never be a real champion. Therefore if Wolgast beats me when I fight him, I'm going to quit the game for good. That's all."

"If I had been right when I fought Brown I would have won easily," says Hogan. "I met him before I was acclimated. I'm not making any excuses, but I was not as good as I

HUSBAND DRAWS LAUGHS, WIFE TEARS, IN THEIR "AUTHOR" PARTNERSHIP

WALLACE IRWIN AND GRACE LUCE IRWIN.

Wallace Irwin can and does make everybody laugh; his wife, Grace Luce Irwin, has made people cry with her special stories in the San Francisco papers, and occasionally she still makes a love-lorn maiden happy (which means tears) with her little stories in the magazines. But Wallace Irwin's "Letters of a Japanese Schoolboy," which ran in Collier's, will never be forgotten. His face looks good natured and it does seem that this man cannot write seriously, even on a very serious subject—and this may account for the happiness of the Irwins who were married in 1901.

BLIND AND DEAF, THIS LITTLE GIRL "SEES" AND "HEARS" AND SEWS

MABEL VERA GAMMON AND TEACHER.

A 14-year-old child, whose sense of smell is perhaps the most marvellous in the history of humanity, is Mabel Vera Gammon of St. Paul. When four years of age she became blind through illness. A year or so later she also lost her hearing. At the age of ten she was little more than existing. She knew not a single word. The first day that she was placed in the Minnesota school for the deaf she learned three words—doll, doll, hear. Today, four years later, she has a vocabulary of over 3,000 words and is well versed in all general studies taken by school girls of her age. In addition, she sews nicely, makes all the clothes for the many dolls she loves so well, and operates the typewriter. Her quickness of mind is demonstrated in the fact that she had to be told the letters of the typewriter keys but once.

The flight was made near Potomac park, and lasted only a few minutes. Senorita Riviero said she was delighted with the sensation, but was disappointed because they didn't go higher. At the highest point they were about 70 feet from the ground.

TO PROBE LONDON POLICE FOR GRAFT WRITES A BOOK IN SLANG ABOUT TRIP WITH PEARY

London, April 20.—Graft and crookedness in the London police department? The London police system has been held up as a model for the world, but now an investigation impends that threatens to reveal wholesale boodling.

A LONDON POLICEMAN.

The investigation is to be brought about by Inspector Sime, who was discharged from the police department, and who has retaliated by talking things that have made British citizens go up in the air. An inquiry cannot be anothered much longer. When it comes, the critics of the department propose to show that the department is inefficient because high offices are held with incapable aristocrats; because the police levy tribute on criminals, gamblers and the like; because the police manufacture evidence and maintain secrecy to hide scandals and to ruin officers who interfere with the "machine."

THE CAMORRA INFORMER

Viterbo, April 18.—The most interesting revelations made by Genaro Abbatemaggio, the Camorrist informer, had to do with the real nature of the Camorra, the dreaded association which first found its way from Arabia into Spain and from Spain into Southern Italy and how its adherents are chosen.

The Camorra in the city of Naples, Abbatemaggio explained, is divided into fourteen bands, one for each region of the city. Each band is composed of twenty-four Camorristi and forty-eight picciotti (recruits), each one of the former having two of the recruits at his disposal. Each picciotto in turn is served by five or six giovani onorati (honored youths). The latter are aspirants for membership in the society.

When Commander Peary took Geo. Borup, a graduate of Yale, on his last trip, he added a live one to his party. Young Borup, only 22 years old, was the laugh maker of the crew. Members of the expedition say that no night was too dark for Borup fun making.

Since his return to America, Borup has written a book entitled, "A Tenderfoot With Peary." He writes mostly in slang, but his story is perhaps the most interesting, popularly, that has ever been written of the Arctic regions. Whatever young Borup had to do he did in a spirit of fun.

ORRIS PORKINS GOES SHOPPING

By Edgar Nicolle.

Mrs. Perkins had been very busy during the week, but although Saturday afternoon had come there was still much work to be done about the house.

Mr. Orris Perkins was a very tractable husband, ever willing to help in any way to ensure domestic comfort. His exploits in that direction, however, did not always meet with that success which might have attended them had he been an ordinary man. But he was not an ordinary man. He was constantly doing something that was not quite what was intended. For instance on one occasion, when Mrs. Perkins had asked for the well-known scuttle, he absent-mindedly lifted from its little chair, the one and only heir to the Perkins estates, and was proceeding with all his might with coal until the ever-watchful mother came to the rescue by heading the scuttle to the spring Orris in exchange for the well-known babe. Incidentally she administered with the aid of the aforesaid scuttle a vigorous tap on Perkins' body. But he merely said, "Dear me, how are you, how stupid am I!" And then he went for the coal.

In view of Mr. Perkins' peculiarities, therefore, it is safe to assume that it was not without some hesitation that Mrs. P. had determined to ask him to do some shopping for her on the afternoon in question. There was just the possibility, in short, that he might retard progress instead of helping in an emergency.

"Orris, I want you to go to the grocer's, and the draper's, for a few things," she said, when he came home from work.

"Certainly, Clementina, I'll go at once, if you'll tell me what you want and give me the basket," was the cheery reply.

"You don't want any basket," said Mrs. Perkins, "what you order at the grocer's they'll send home, if you ask them to do so, but I want you to bring from the draper's a reel of black cotton and a few yards of white tape; ask for a bundle of tape—a hank I think they call it. The things to order from the grocer's are half-a-dozen eggs, a gallon of oil, two pounds of sugar, ten pounds of soda, a quart of beans and two bars of soap. I'd go for the things myself if I had time, but I'm all behind today, and by the way, didn't we promise to go to tea with the Nagintons' today?"

"I don't know whether it's today we are to go, or whether it is on Saturday, or whether we ought to have gone last Saturday, but I don't think I want to go at all, in particular," remarked Mr. Perkins, somewhat humbly.

"Of course you don't know, and of course you don't want to know, but we've got to go, for now I come to think of it today is the day when they expect us," snapped Mrs. Clementina Perkins.

"Very well, my dear. Give me the basket," said the obedient Orris.

"Basket! Didn't I tell you just now that you won't want a basket?" shouted Mrs. P. Whereupon her devoted husband started for the business part of the town a mile or so away.

Whether or not, Mr. Perkins had become unnerved by the emphatic use of the word "basket" may only be surmised, but it has to be recorded that after proceeding a couple of hundred yards he had to return home, a kindly neighbor having called his attention to the fact that he was not properly equipped for a journey to town. He had, in fact, left the house without either hat or cap.

Having donned a cap Mr. Perkins made another start for the grocer's and the draper's, and after the lapse of about two hours returned tired, albeit with a satisfied look.

He evidently considered that his errand had been a success. Both arms were supporting sundry articles, the bulk whereof seemed to indicate that he had brought home many things other than, or besides, the cotton and tape that Mrs. Perkins had requested him to bring. He made his way hurriedly to the kitchen which Mrs. P. had vacated a few minutes previously. Instantly there was much commotion as of many things falling to the floor, as indeed was the case. This was the signal for the speedy appearance of the lady of the house, who beheld a scene that was confusion indeed. For there was Mr. Orris Perkins, in a sitting posture on the floor, with divers groceries distributed around, and upon him in such fashion as caused Mrs. Perkins to hold up both hands despairingly and to shriek the one word, "Foot!"

Mr. Perkins had, it was seen, attempted to sit on a chair in his own particular corner of the kitchen, loaded, as he was, with the goods from the grocer. He had miscalculated the distance with dire results. All the eggs had been broken and sugar, biscuits and many other articles lay spread about the floor.

"Lunatic!" shouted Mrs. Perkins, "what on earth have you been doing?"

"Can't you see, my dear, that I've brought the groceries?" queried the willing worker.

Mrs. Perkins was at this point clearly at a loss for more inventive, and for fully half-a-minute remained silent accordingly. But her whole attitude was that of a very wrathful person. She stood before the prostrate Orris exhibiting by sundry facial contortions and by alternately folding and unfolding her arms, a deal of perturbation.

Observing this Mr. Perkins slowly and awkwardly arose from the floor and very gradually moved toward the kitchen door. Just as he had reached this much-desired means of retreat, however, Mrs. Perkins recovered power of speech, and to some extent her equanimity, the result being that questions and answers followed in rapid succession.

"Why have you brought these things here, and what are they? Didn't I tell you the grocer would send what you ordered of him?" was the first question.

"Oh, my dear, was it the grocer who was to send his things? I thought you wanted me to bring 'em and that the draper was to send the cotton and tape."

"Idiot! Do you suppose I would be so ridiculous as to ask a draper or anyone else, to send home five cents' worth of trifles?" was the rejoinder.

"Well, no, Clementina, but he said he would send 'em," replied Mr. Perkins, not knowing what else to say.

"What have you brought, then, anyway? I see you brought the eggs, but I didn't want 'em delivered in bits. And where's the oil? I asked you to order a gallon."

"I've got some oil in my pocket all right, but you see I couldn't bring a gallon because I didn't take the oil can. So I've brought half a pint in a bottle."

"Bottle! Half a pint of oil in a bottle! Good gracious, why should I be tied to such a man? The bottle I expect you've broken judging by the smell of paraffin," exclaimed Mrs. Perkins. And she was right.

"And what's all this sugar you've fetched? There's more than two lbs. there, I know, and I don't see any ten pounds of soda which I wanted so particular this afternoon, and the two bars of soap I wanted to use now," said Mrs. P. despairingly.

"Oh, did you say two pounds of sugar? I thought you said ten pounds, two pounds of soda and two cans of soap—I see I have made a mistake."

"Mercy, man, what do I want with canned soup, and where's the soda, anyway?" asked Mrs. P., who was now getting somewhat exhausted.

"You see, Clementina, I thought you meant soda biscuits, when you said soda. So I have brought some," replied Orris.

This ended the questioning, as well it might, but it may be stated that the other items on Mrs. Perkins' list of goods required, one quart of beans, was represented by a can of pork and beans which lay on the kitchen floor with the other articles deposited there, involuntarily, by the obliging husband.

The draper's boy came soon afterwards, not with a reel of black cotton and a hank of white tape, but with a reel of white cotton and a bundle of red tape. "They hadn't got any black tape," explained Mr. Perkins, "and red seemed so much prettier."

The boy also brought a third item, enclosed in a box. This box Mrs. Perkins instantly seized, enquiring excitedly about the contents thereof, which information Mr. Perkins, strange to relate, resolutely refused to impart. Stranger still, Mrs. P. did not open it, but handed it to her husband. It seemed obvious that she was softening, for, after all, what had been accomplished by Mr. Perkins that afternoon had been done in good faith.

Ultimately Mrs. Perkins suggested that the visit to the Nagintons should be postponed and that they should have tea at home. This plan received the unqualified approval of the master of the house, who was now fairly sure of getting a serving of pork and beans which he was unlikely to get at the Nagintons' table. The female head of that eminently respectable family having declared that "that dreadful mixture is too ortul to think on."

At the tea table the voice of little Joe Perkins, the heir to whom reference has already been made, was heard in the adjoining room. He was yelling lustily and needlessly, saying "By" to his aid. She brought him into the kitchen and there, in the centre of the table was, to her astonishment, the article which had been brought in the box by the draper's boy.

"Dear old Orris!" exclaimed Mrs. Perkins, "I thought you had brought something for our darling little Joe. And what a beautiful Teddy bear it is!"

"That, my dear, is a little piggy-wiggly, not a bear, is it Joe?" said the pleased father as he smilingly handed the furry toy to the babe. As a matter of fact the thing was never meant to resemble either a bear or a pig, the maker thereof having intended it to represent a Mex cat, and having been very careful to construct it without a tail. This question of identity, however, could have but little significance so long as the tiny Perkins liked the animal. That he did so seemed evident, for he was already engaged in what appeared to be very much like an effort to eat it.

After that the meal proceeded peacefully, Mrs. Perkins having so far changed her mood of the early afternoon as to call Mr. Perkins "dear old Orris" at least ten times.

When tea had been finished, and Mrs. Perkins had "tidied up," Mr. Perkins inquired, half humorously, as an observer might have thought, "Do you want me to do any more shopping, Clementina?"

"Heavens, no! I will do it. You stay at home and look after Joe, Orris dear," replied Mrs. Perkins with quite a winning smile.

"THE PINK LADY" SETS NEW YORK A-WHIRL; IT'S JUST MUSIC, SMILES AND PRETTY GIRL

FRANK LALOR AND GROUP OF GIRLS OF "THE PINK LADY" CHORUS.

By W. G. Shepherd.

New York, April 21.—Just as the dramatic season was waning toward its close there bursts into public favor a new musical comedy "The Pink Lady," the best thing not only of this year but of many years.

C. M. S. McLellan, taking the clever French farce "The Satyr," made from it a book and set of lyrics that would be delightfully interesting, even if Ivan Caryll had not put his beautiful music to them. You might toll together all the merit of all the musical shows—yes, including "The Merry Widow"—that we have had in recent years, and in the result, you would not find any music sweeter or any lyrics more clever than there are in "The Pink Lady."

For instance, there is the song, "My Girl by the Saskatchewan," the chorus of which goes like this:

"Flow river, flow, down to the sea,
Bright sea, bring my loved one home to me,
True, dear one, true, I'm trying hard to be,
But hear me say,
It's a very long way
From the banks of the Selme
For a girl like you to stray
By the banks of the Saskatchewan."

It will be a nation hit, this song. And then there is the "Beautiful Lady" waltz song, the chorus of which is:

"To you, beautiful lady, I raise my eyes,
My heart, beautiful lady, to your heart sighs;
Come, come, beautiful lady, to Paradise,
Ere the sweet, sweet waltz dream dies,
Glide, glide, beautiful lady, on light, bright wings,
While the rapture of music around us swings,
Dream, dream, dream and forget
Care, pain, useless regret;
Love, love, beautiful lady, in my heart sings."

You hear the music of these two songs and the music of several other pieces of "The Pink Lady" wherever there is any music in the whole town. Hazel Dawn, Alice Dovey, William Elliott, Teddy Hudson, Philip Laro, John E. Young and Crauford Kent are the stars.

FOR THE "SWEET GIRL GRADUATE"

(By Cynthia Grey.)

Here's her graduating gown and wrap and hat. The sweet girl graduate is all of a tremble at the very thoughts of her coming grandeur.

She knows that fashions never were so favorable for her to look her best and at the same time live up to the popular idea of the "sweet and simple" styles for graduating day.

This dainty little frock may be made up in cotton voile, handkerchief linen, batiste, marquisette, organdie, or fine lawn—all of which materials are fashionable this spring.

The neck is low, the sleeves are short and the frock is made in one piece. The popular heavy embroidery is used, combined with German lace. The tucks are hand-run, and on the flounce they are shirred to form the fullness.

The sash of soft ribbon is laid in folds about the waist and tied in the upstanding butterfly bow in the centre of the back, with ends that hang to the hem of the skirt.

It will be well to note the perfect plenty of the culture, and the fact that the hands are bare of gloves. The French wrap is made of loosely worn black chiffon, braided sailor collar, the broad cuffs, down the seams and flap in front and over the wide hem. It is most effective over the white gown.

Rough soft black straw broad is the material of the "foppy" broad brimmed hat, and it is trimmed with soft flat loops of satin ribbon on the crown, which is surrounded by a wreath of foliage and tiny satin flowers. The hat has a narrow facing of satin.

WE NOW KNOW RIDDLE OF THE SPHYNX; STYLES OF 2700 YEARS AGO SOLVE IT

The mystery of the great sphinx, which has puzzled scholars for ages, has been solved at last—by a Harvard man, Prof. George A. Reisner. It is a sculptured portrait of Chephren, a pharaoh of Egypt of the fourth dynasty, who ruled about the year 2560 B. C. The discovery was made during the recent archaeological expedition sent into Egypt in charge of Dr. Reisner.

The proof which settles the identity of the great mysterious monument was unearthed in recent excavations in the Mycerinus valley temple in Egypt.

"The sphinx is nothing but the body of a lion with the head of the king reigning at the time it was built," says Prof. Reisner. "The great sphinx is the guardian of the sacred precincts of the second pyramid."

For centuries the huge statue has looked down inscrutably from its lofty eminence defying identification. Archaeologists have studied every crack and crevice in the massive head and body for a clue.

But after 3000 years comes King Mycerinus of the fourth dynasty, pharaoh of Egypt about 2800 B. C., carved in slate and alabaster and whispered into the ear of Prof. Reisner. Chephren was the father of Mycerinus.

In the Boston art museum, standing in majestic dignity with his queen is King Mycerinus carved in slate. This statue is one of the most perfect specimens ever unearthed by archaeologists. In the king's ear on one side of his face is some red paint. This red paint, together with some paint in his headdress of a statue in Cairo, brought about the solution of the reigning fashion in the fourth mystery. The red paint is what remains of a style of headdress with pleats—shown more plainly in the statue of Mycerinus in Cairo—that was the dynasty. Upon the great sphinx is found the same millinery adornment. These two things set at rest all doubts as to the identity of the silent sentinels of the desert.

Old Time Forfeit Games

By Mary Dawson.

AMONG the influx of good new games constantly being discovered or devised it is well not to forget the many delightful ones which no one has been able to improve.

finger, the latter pays a forfeit. Fingers should not be lifted, except after the names of birds, insects or other flying things. An amusing forfeit obliges the inactive player to proceed around the circle, bestowing a beaming smile on each member of the group in turn. Another good one for children consists in kissing one's shadow on a wall.

A Pantomime Game. Each one of the company selects for himself a trade which he imitates in pantomime. The blacksmith hammers an imaginary anvil; the cook kneads dough; the spinner turns a wheel and works

When using this printed design from the paper the directions are as follows:—

If the material used is very sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your linen is heavy buy a piece of impression paper, the kind that does not rub off, lay it on your material, place the design over it and draw firmly with pencil over each line. You will find the design neatly transferred and ready to be embroidered.

In transferring a design when only one-half is given, fold your linen so that the two right sides come together. Between these two sides insert two sheets of impression paper, placing the wrong sides of paper toward each other, then place your pattern on the folded material and draw each line firmly with a hard, sharp pencil. You will find that both sides of the design are reproduced on the linen.

I have drawn for to-day a pattern which may be used as a cushion cover or a center-piece. In the latter case the eyelets must be omitted.

If you wish to embroider it as a cushion, choose a substantial linen in white or a pale shade of green. If using white linen the leaves, stems and scallops would look well if worked in shades of green mercerized cotton.

The scallops must be padded with darning cotton, then worked in the buttonhole stitch.

The eyelets and dots should first be run around with a thread, then pierced and embroidered over and over.

The leaves should have a heavy outline, worked in the long and short stitch, with the vein in the center in the outline stitch.

The stems must be done in the outline also.

The under part of the cushion cover has only the scallops and eyelets stamped and worked upon it.

When the embroidery is finished the cushion is put between the two covers and they are laced together with a white or green cord run through the eyelets.

If embroidered as a center-piece use white mercerized cotton No. 25 for the work.

Miss Hunter's Correspondence

TO K. B.—There are so many women anxious to dispose of embroidered articles on commission that I should think you would have no difficulty in finding them.

I think the best way to get in touch with these women would be to put a short advertisement in the Sunday paper stating just what kind of thing you desire.

If you will send me word where your shop is to be I may be able to give you more definite information.

To Mrs. H. J. D.—I am glad you were so successful in stamping and embroidering the corset cover. I will give a pattern for another in a different style before long which I hope you will like as well.

Fancy Belts.

To Margaret—There are so many fancy belts that you will have a large assortment to choose from. Those of silk webbing covered with steel beads and fastened with jeweled clasps are charming, and are brought in white, black and colors.

The linen belts are very popular. They are hand-embroidered and can be made of linen or pique in white or colors.

If you have an old-fashioned brooch which is large enough for a buckle you are a fortunate girl, for they are much used at present to fasten belts in front.

Embroidered Cap.

To Mrs. L. A. V.—A charming little hand-embroidered cap is made in one piece. The brim is a long straight piece scalloped at each side and along the front.

The part which forms the crown of the cap is almost square, and is attached to the brim in the center of the back, leaving about five inches of the brim on either side.

These are attached to the straight sides of the crown, which is scalloped along the bottom, and draw the cap into shape.

There is no fullness to the brim, and the cap fits the baby's head closely and with a pretty Dutch effect.

Pin-cushion.

To Miss E. M. A.—A very dainty little heart-shaped pin-cushion is made of two pieces of cardboard, cut in the shape of a heart about four inches in length.

Cover these with flowered ribbon and sew closely together over and over around the edges.

Put a little rosette at the top, with a loop of ribbon to hang it up by. Three of these little cushions tacked together and filled with black, white and fancy pins make a most acceptable Christmas gift.

Border for Handkerchief.

To Agnes—Lace braids are used so extensively now that I would advise your making the border of your handkerchief in this style.

A very pretty one can be made by using a square of sheer linen for the center, rolling the edges and making the border of five rows of lace braid, faggoted together. Where the braid is mitred at the corner a half wheel stitch is introduced.

The border is finished by a narrow picot edge braid and the effect is very dainty. Sets of collars and cuffs can be made in the same way.

Embroidered Collars.

To Miss E. N. V.—Round embroidered collars, with cuffs to match, are much in vogue.

This is a revival of the old style, and if the throat is full, the round collar is as becoming as it is comfortable.

They are usually done in the eyelet and solid work combined, and while all white is most popular, very pretty effects are obtained by making the sets of colored linen, embroidered in white mercerized floss, or in a shade a little deeper than the linen.

Set for Dressing.

To Mrs. N. S.—You can make a charming and inexpensive set for your dressing table of ecru scrim. Make the cover the exact size of the table, with a two-inch hem, finished by a row of featherstitching.

At each end work in the ribbon embroidery, a design of forget-me-nots and wild roses.

The long cushion should be covered with blue or pink, and have a scrim cover with a garland of the same flowers, worked upon it, and a ruffle of ecru lace headed by a beading through which baby ribbon is running.

Patterns Asked For.

To M. F.—If you will send me a self-addressed stamped envelope or postal card I will gladly give you the address of a firm that will stamp a center-piece such as you wish.

No addresses are given through the paper.

To Shorten Pattern.

Mrs. G. P. Mc G.—I think you can easily shorten the pattern for the shirtwaist by omitting the necessary number of inches from the long tab in front.

I cannot send you a shorter one, but am sure you will have no difficulty if you will omit stamping the lower part of the design.

Measure the length of your shirtwaist, and make the design to correspond.

The satin stitch is the same as the solid French embroidery.

Cushion Pattern.

Miss E. M.—I am glad that you have enjoyed the patterns so much, and hope to draw one for a cushion before long in the eyelet and solid embroidery.

The round pillows are much used, and the latest covers have a scalloped edge, and are laced together with ribbon, or heavy white cord which is run through eyelets worked at intervals around the cover.

To Prevent Embroidery Silks Fading.

To Maude—You can prevent silks from fading by putting it in cold water before using it, and letting the water come to a boil.

This sometimes changes the shade a little, but not nearly in as great a degree as constant laundering, and after the silk is once treated in this way, no future washing will fade it.

Sachets for Corsage.

To Marie—Very dainty sachets for the corsage are made of the tiny hemstitched or embroidered handkerchiefs that are so much used at present.

Make the little three-cornered bags of pink or blue satin and fill them with cotton batting and violet orris.

Fold the handkerchief so that it will form a triangle and cover the satin foundation.

Sew two tiny buttons on the inner edge and make buttonholes to correspond in the upper border.

This will enable you to take off the cover when it needs laundering.

If you wish to make the sachets more elaborate work your initials across them. When finished sew or pin them inside the corsage.

CURIOSITIES OF ALCOHOL.

ALCOHOL is a well-known liquid, and yet few people are acquainted with some of its peculiar properties. For instance, if equal quantities of water and alcohol are mixed together the resulting bulk will be less than the sum of the two when separate, as alcohol has the property, under such conditions, of causing a shrinkage.

To show that this is true, put a small quantity of water into a measuring tube, and empty it into a glass measure the same quantity of alcohol.

When mixed, pour them back into the tube and the curious trick will have been accomplished.

Try to dissolve various things in water, and gummy substances that will not dissolve in it will, in many cases, not only dissolve in alcohol, but will actually disappear. For illustration, put a small quantity of camphor into water, and it will spread out on the surface and will not dissolve at all. Put it into alcohol, and shake it up, and you will have a clear liquid remaining with no signs of the camphor except the odor and the taste.

Now for the leading property of this peculiar liquid. Drop into a glass a teaspoonful of the raw white of an egg and pour the same quantity of alcohol over it. When, behold, your egg will be cooked as if by heat. But you must resist the temptation to eat it, as the experiment is only to prove that the alcohol has the power to do the cooking.

A very pretty effect may be produced by using some aniline dye in powdered form in alcohol.

Fill a small glass with the alcohol and drop the smallest portion of the dye on its surface. It will shoot down through the liquid like a strand of color, dividing into two branches, which will subdivide again and again, until you have, apparently, an inverted plant, in miniature, growing before your eyes. An arrangement of mirrors may be made to throw the reflection of this on a screen or a wall, and the enlarged shadows will be very interesting to watch.

A simple breath sweetener is made by taking one pint of distilled water, and adding to it one tablespoonful of pure borax, one ounce of liquid myrrh and five ounces of thymol. One tablespoonful can be added to a glass of water. Use three times a day.

Arnica diluted with warm water will prove a soothing application to tired, burning feet. After the lotion has dried in, rub the foot gently, using a good toilet cream of oil of sweet almonds. Always draw the blood from the ankle, or the instep towards the toes.

upon, and which should not be allowed to fall into disuse.

When prize contests are impracticable or undesirable for any reason some ancient forfeit play, with which our grandparents before us were amused, could be revived to take their place.

The fun of escaping the forfeits and in seeing these expiated will be as heartily enjoyed by the youngsters as one entailing many trophies and much expense.

Forfeit games tax the wits of the young people pleasantly, without entailing too much brain strain.

If there are grown persons present to join in the fun, so much the merrier.

The Eagle Flies.

This is a very simple game adapted to young children, although older brothers and sisters may occasionally be caught napping at it.

Each of the company places a finger upon the table, around which the players sit, and some one is appointed leader.

As soon as the leader says: "The eagle (or he may name any other bird or an insect) flies" each player must raise his finger.

If for the purpose of catching the other players, he names any creature that does not fly in nature, and any round of it will greatly surprise and amuse.

a treatise.

One of the players acts as king, and commences the game by working as some trade previously chosen.

If the king suddenly changes his trade and assumes that belonging to some one else, all others must remain inactive, except the player whom the king is imitating, and he must instantly take up the king's trade until his majesty is pleased to adopt another.

That player then takes the king's trade and all the rest remain idle until the king returns to his original trade.

This is a signal for all to recommence their respective meters.

Any mistake calls for a forfeit, and many are possible during the progress of the work and changes.

An amusing forfeit in this instance is to spell the name of George Washington, or simply his surname backwards while standing on one foot.

The Ribbons.

This game requires a bunch of different colored ribbons, or strips of cotton goods will do.

Each person in the company takes a ribbon and holds it by one end.

The other ends are all united in the hand of one person, who leads the game and who, consequently, is placed in the middle of the circle.

When he says "Fall," they must let go; when he says "Let go," they must pull the ribbons they hold.

This sounds simple, but the number of mistakes which are made in every round of it will greatly surprise and amuse.

RUSH OF SETTLERS TO PROVINCE EXPECTED. Every Steamship Coming Out for the Next Few Weeks will have Passengers for New Brunswick. In addition to the party of new settlers brought out by Mr. Bowder, practically all the boats coming to St. John and Halifax for the next few weeks will have parties for this province. Owing to the rush to Canada this season the New Brunswick office in London has experienced great difficulty in securing passages for all the parties who wanted to come out this spring. One great difficulty in getting men for this province has been the fact that booking agents in different parts of Great Britain are directly interested in booking men for the far west, because they get a percentage of the price of the tickets they sell, and the farther west they send a man, the more money they get. Mr. Bowder is of the opinion that this difficulty would be overcome if the farmers of this province who are in need of men would get in the habit of writing to the London office, giving a description of the men they want and guaranteeing to give employment to the men sent them at a stated rate of wages. This would enable the N. B. London office to interest the booking agents in New Brunswick by giving them a chance to advertise that they had positions for a certain number of men—such position as might be assigned to them to fill. "All these booking agents," added Mr. Bowder, "are very glad to advertise that they can guarantee a man a situation in any part of Canada. And they dare not advertise positions unless they have orders, because some of the rival booking agents are always likely to ask Obed Smith, of the Dominion immigration office, to investigate, and if the booker can not produce the order for the situation which he has been advertising Mr. Smith is almost certain to take measures to have his license revoked."

THE SUBURBS HATTIE LEDBLAND'S MISSION Girl Accused of Murder of Clarence Glover, of Cambridge, was Examined Before John Kerr, K. C., Commissioner Appointed in Contest to Break Murdered Man's Will.

Counsel for both sides in the Glover will case arrived in the city yesterday morning, and during the afternoon and evening were occupied taking the evidence of Hattie LeBlanc, who, with her father, arrived in the city on Thursday. The evidence was taken before John Kerr, K. C., who had been appointed commissioner for the purpose, and the sessions were private. Hon. Edward P. Barry, counsel for the four brothers, who are trying to break the will, and Melvin W. Johnston, who successfully defended Hattie in the will case, reached here yesterday morning on the Boston express. Samuel D. Elmore, who is supporting the will made in Mrs. Glover's favor, was on the same train; but he was apparently not on friendly terms with the other legal lights. An atmosphere of mystery pervaded the proceedings here yesterday. Mr. Johnston, who came here with the object of guarding Hattie's interests, was not allowed to be present at the examination conducted before Commissioner Kerr by the opposing counsel, Messrs. Barry and Elmore, though his stenographer was sworn in as interpreter, and also acted as stenographer. At eleven o'clock last evening "Lawrence Smith," of Boston, who came here to meet Hattie and her father and keep the reporters away, said the examination was still in progress, and he was very indignant at the hardship being imposed on his "little girl." Then he said that if he was called up in half an hour he would be able to put the reporter in communication with Mr. Johnston or Mr. Barry, but when the reporter called the party had left the Royal and the telephone number which Mr. Smith told the reporter to call in event of ST. JOHN PEOPLE WERE MUCH DISAPPOINTED ON HARBOR BRIDGE CONFERENCE TODAY. Members of Provincial Government will Meet Representatives of C. P. R. and Street Railway on Bridge Project.

About all St. John got out of the first visit of the flagship of the Canadian navy was a case of measles. When Admiral Kingsmill, and Mr. J. G. Desbarats, the Deputy Minister of Marine, arrived from Ottawa yesterday, they went immediately aboard the Niobe, and shortly after the Mayor received a wireless message stating that it was their intention to sail for Halifax during the afternoon. During the morning Commander McDonald and a number of officers landed at Reg's Point, and the commander, in company with C. H. Flood, agent of the Marine Department, paid a visit to the Mayor, and informed him of the intention of the rough weather he would not expect him to return the compliment. The Niobe sailed last evening, much to the disappointment of the citizens who had hoped they would be given an opportunity to inspect her. It was rumored on the street that the reason for her sudden departure was that Halifax wanted her for St. George's Day and that in such a case St. John had to take a back seat. Mr. Flood, when seen last evening said he had not been informed why she left, but he was sure the Admiral had more important business than going to Halifax to attend the ceremonies in connection with St. George's Day. It is understood the Niobe will return here later and spend some time in this port.

TORONTO MAN DIED ON SPECIAL TRAIN. Frank Linton, enroute Here to Sail on Empress of Britain, Died while Passing Through Maine.

Frank Linton, a man of about 35 years of age, died yesterday afternoon aboard the special train bound from Montreal to Sand Point with passengers for the C. P. R. steamer Empress of Britain. Linton had been living in Toronto and being in poor health decided to try to get to his old home in Glasgow, Scotland, in time to die. From the time he left Montreal he had been ill and death came to him while the special was speeding through the woods of Maine. The body was brought through to St. John and on arrival at Sand Point Coroner F. L. Kenney was notified. He viewed the remains and then handed them over to I. O. Beatty, the West Side undertaker, for burial. Coroner Kenney said last night he did not think an inquest would be necessary as the death was from natural causes. Communication with Undertaker Beatty's establishment failed to elicit any information.

Never mind just now whether or not you can afford to wear good glasses, but can you afford to take the risk of doing your eyes permanent injury by wearing glasses of which you know little more than that they were cheap? The man who made your glasses ought to know what the materials in addition to his skill and labor are worth. If he puts a cheap price on the result are you justified in thinking you know more about the real value than he does? Lumbermen Want Warm Weather. Hon. John Morrissey, commissioner of public works, was at the Royal yesterday. Speaking of matters on the Miramichi he said the lumber cut during the winter had been large, but that the prospects for stream driving were not so good. There was not enough freshet to take the ice out of river, and it drifted back and forth with the tide. However, there was plenty of snow in the woods, and a spell of warm weather would doubtless fill up the streams and give the lumbermen a chance to get their logs down the river.
