

FRASER COMPANIES LTD. MILL AT BAKER BROOK AND TWELVE HOUSES DESTROYED BY FIRE

Ten Days' Cut of Lumber Goes Up in Smoke and Seventy-Five People Deprived of Homes—C. N. R. and Temiscouata Tied Up—Hartland and Woodstock Have Fire Losses—Forest Fires Raging Along Line of Fredericton and Grand Lake Railway.

Edmundston, N. B., May 5.—As the result of a fire, which broke out this afternoon, the saw-mill of the Fraser Lumber Companies at Baker Brook, fourteen miles below here on the St. John River, was completely wiped out, together with a ten days' cut of lumber, which was piled in the mill yard where the fire occurred. Seventy-five people are homeless tonight, as seventy houses have been incinerated in the village, and the lines of the C. N. R. and Temiscouata R. R. in that section, are temporarily tied up.

The loss to the Fraser Companies which could not be estimated tonight, will be very large, while other losses amount to about $50,000. It is thought that sparks from the refuse burner at the mill started the fire, which quickly spread to the lumber in the yard, and thence to the mill, completely destroying both, and then spreading to the houses in the vicinity. Of these twelve were burned to the ground, but the people were able to make their escape without any serious results. Fire-fighting apparatus was sent from here and the united efforts of a large number of workers saved the western section of the village from destruction.

Started From Refuse Fire.
The fire broke out at one o'clock this afternoon, and it is thought to have started in the mill yard from sparks from the refuse fire. The blaze quickly spread to the pile of newly sawn lumber—the mill having been in operation for the past ten days—and consumed every stick that was piled in the yard, as well as a cartload which was standing on the siding. The mill itself was the first to take fire, and this was also spread to the ground, before anything could be done to cut off the flames, there being no fire-fighting apparatus or fire brigades in the village, which has a population of 1,200.

Called For Assistance.
The town of Edmundston was called on for assistance as soon as it was seen that the fire was spreading, and a special train was made up on the Temiscouata R. R. This train was loaded largely with men from the Fraser Company's pulp mill here, and dispatched to the scene of the disaster without delay. An alarm was also sent to the C. N. R. for help, Baker Brook being situated on the line of both these railways, and Superintendent Frank O'Brien of the division took charge. Two special trains were made up, one a fire-fighting water tank, containing 10,000 gallons of water, was on this road within a few hours from the time the alarm was received. The C. N. R. fire-fighting crew was in charge of Chief Mechanic McKenzie, L. J. Levesque, and J. P. Huard. The efforts of the C. N. R. men undoubtedly saved the western side of the village. Action was pressed into service and a determined effort was made to quell the fire.

Wire Connections Down.
A standard representative was at the scene about eight o'clock tonight, and at that time the fire was under control. The telegraph wires of the C. N. R. and Temiscouata R. R. and the telephone lines were out of commission, and within one hour after the fire started the Temiscouata R. R. bridge at Baker Brook was entirely destroyed. The trains on the Edmundston to Comers branch are tied up, and cannot proceed either way from the scene of the fire. A heavy wind blowing from the west, and this aided greatly in saving that part of the village. As it was, the windows in the houses on the west side of the town were broken by the intense heat. Twenty houses and two barns, one containing five stacks, were burned to the ground, and all the household goods were lost. Some of the families were able to escape with only the clothes they were wearing at the time.

Only Industry in Place
The mill employed upwards of eighty men, and the loss to the workers will be heavy, as it is practically the only industry in the place. The loss to the Temiscouata R. R. in its section of $5,000, while the C. N. R. section houses and all the equipment were destroyed at a loss of $1,000.

Special to The Standard
Amherst, N. B., May 5.—John William Gould, age 61, who lives on the Highlands here, hanged himself this afternoon in the upstairs hallway of his home, by placing a noose around his neck, which leads to the attic, tying a heavy rope to the handle and one end around his neck. Finding the door locked he climbed by on the wood shed and looked in the window seeing his father's noose body hanging, the child got some neighbors near by, and the wood was forced open. It is thought he had committed suicide early in the afternoon as the body was cold when found about 7 p.m. The cause of his act is not known.

SEINE RIVER IS OVERFLOWING BANKS
Yarmouth, N. S., May 5.—Much damage is being done by the overflow of the Seine River, which continues to rise. Navigation stands still and many villages are flooded. The famous Yarmouth dykes and causeway, containing thousands of cases of wine at all values, are under water.

Woodsack, N. B., May 5.—A fire broke out this afternoon in the rear of the Woodsack Hotel, which was completely destroyed, together with a large amount of furniture and a large amount of stock. The cause of the fire is not known.

WILL SUPPORT THE IRISH FACTION OF EAMON DE VALERA

American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic So Vote.

Washington, May 5.—Unqualified support of the Republican party in Ireland in the candidacy of Eamon de Valera and unanimous decision to exclude participation of all those who do not subscribe to the policy of supporting the Irish Republic, marked the opening session here today of the National Convention of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic.

FLOODS FORCED MANY FAMILIES TO LEAVE HOMES

Area of Two Square Miles at Brandon, Man., Inundated by Swollen River.

Brandon, Man., May 5.—About 150 houses, scattered over an area of two square miles, have been vacated by families forced to leave their homes and most of their effects owing to the flood which completely covers the land from one end of the city to the other, north of the tracks, and spreads across the fields in many places to the foot of hills north of the city. No further rise in the Assiniboine River has been reported since noon, but a slight rise is probable Saturday morning. The tendency of the water throughout has been to move northeast along the flats and the flood is confined to the flats only.

Residents north of the city are practically cut off from the city, as far as travelling is concerned, and it is feared that the situation will become more serious.

Relief Work.
Relief work among the families forced to leave their homes is being carried on by the city, and the winter fair area has been placed at their disposal. In the flooded areas families have pitched tents on higher grounds and others are residing with friends and relatives outside the town.

Conditions on the whole are slightly improved, as with no further rise in the river, it is hoped that the low water, which is expected to set in about the first of next week, should the water stay on the land for any length of time, further relief will have to be given to flood sufferers.

CANADA AND PAN-AMERICAN CONFERENCE

Asked to Participate in the Fifth Meeting at Santiago, Chile, Next March.

Washington, May 5.—(Canadian Press)—Canada may be invited to participate in the fifth Pan-American Conference which meets in Santiago, Chile, next March, and the Dominion may possibly be asked to become a permanent member of the Pan-American Union.

It was learned here today that steps are being taken to ascertain the sentiment in various countries on this question. In this connection attention was called here today to the reported announcement of the Canadian Prime Minister that Canada was considering the appointment of a Minister to Washington, and to the participation by Canada in recent international gatherings, such as the League of Nations, the Washington Arrangement Conference, and the Genoa Conference. It is not believed that any of the Latin-American countries will object to Canada's entrance into the Pan-American meetings. The matter will be placed before the governing board of the Pan-American Union, and if approved, Chile will invite Canada to the Pan-American Conference at Santiago.

TUCODORA INDIANS IN REBELLION

Hamilton, May 5.—A state of insurrection exists on the Tucodora reserve, south of Hamilton, was a contribution to a number of articles between the council of the Six Nations and the Dominion Government.

GENERAL WU IS NOW IN CONTROL OF SITUATION

CHANG'S AUTHORITY AT CAPITAL ENDED

General Wu Recognized by Peking Government as Having Assumed Control.

Peking, May 5.—The forces of General Chang Tao-Ling, the Manchurian leader, have been completely driven from the region of Peking, and General Wu Pei-fu is now in control of the situation.

Chang's authority in Peking was eliminated today with the dispersing of his guard inside the capital, and General Wu was recognized by the Peking Government as having assumed control. It is understood that General Chang will remain in office until the end of his term, in October, 1923. General Wu says he does not intend to interfere with him. A reorganization of the cabinet, expected by Premier Liang Shih-yi, who is regarded as a supporter of General Chang, will be automatically eliminated. The Premier is at present in Tientsin. Acting Premier Chow Tzu Chih probably will resign. He conferred today with General Wu's plenipotentiaries with regard to the Government.

General Wu in Control.
General Wu has remained outside Peking thus far and has given no indication of an intention to enter the city. He purports to be consulting with the plenipotentiaries of the peace committee as soon as the military problems are solved. It is his intention to unite North and South China, and to establish a government to be held in Central China.

The defeat of General Chang is attributed to lack of support he expected from the Southern Provinces, the neutrality of Shantung and the failure of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, head of the Southern Government in Canton, to support an epiphic seizure or nodus operis against General Wu.

MEMBERS DIDN'T UNDERSTAND PAIRING

Government Majority on Drayton Amendment Reduced by Two Votes, by Correction.

Ottawa, May 5.—The Government majority on the resolution providing for the appointment of a special committee to deal with railway freight rates, which came to a vote last night, should have been fifteen instead of seventeen. In the House of Commons this afternoon, it developed that a number of votes had been cast by Liberal members who were opposed to the amendment, but who had voted by mistake on the Drayton amendment to the main motion.

Chief Government Whip Kyle explained that there had been a number of errors owing to members not understanding about their pairs.

STRIKERS ACCEPT THE REDUCED WAGE

Montreal, May 5.—Differences between the Shipping Federation and the syndicated longshoremen will be ended tomorrow by the signing of an agreement under which the union accepts the reduced scale of wages offered by the companies while the latter agree that their dock labor shall be supplied by the union. The settlement was reached after a meeting between the union heads and members of the Shipping Federation in the latter's office here this afternoon, held at the special request of Mayor Martin.

The settlement brings to an end a situation which existed since April 15 and which on April 25 and May 3 resulted in lawless outbreaks involving the shooting of two constables while they were on duty.

The men go back on a wage reduction of ten cents an hour, as compared with last year's rates. They will receive fifty cents an hour, with extra pay for overtime and night work.

CANADA'S NAVAL ESTABLISHMENT TO BE REDUCED TO MERE SKELETON

Naval Colleges at Halifax and Esquimaux to be Closed; Few Ships on the Seas to be Recalled and Tied Up to the Docks.

Special to The Standard.
Ottawa, May 5.—Canada's naval establishment is to be reduced to a mere skeleton. The fight which the enemies of defence within the Liberal party have been successfully waging against the militia, has now been directed against the navy, and, judging by the admissions of authoritative Liberals here today, the ministry is yielding before it. Already it is reported it has been decided to practically close the naval colleges at Halifax and Esquimaux, to recall what few ships we have from the seas and tie them up to the docks, and to cut the vote for the department to the smallest possible minimum. In the words of one Liberal, all that will be left of the Department of Naval Affairs will be the deputy minister.

DAIL EXTENDS IRISH TRUCE TO WEDNESDAY

Public Meetings Scheduled by Rival Republican Factions Have Been Suspended.

Dublin, May 5.—The Dail Eireann held only a brief session today adjourning to Wednesday in order that those of its members who are on the peace committee might have opportunity to continue in attendance upon the conference, aimed at bringing about unity between the rival factions. Meanwhile, the truce, which was to expire Monday, has been extended to Wednesday.

The sitting was not begun until 3.45 this afternoon the delay being due to the prolonged session of the peace committee which said it might be able to report by eleven o'clock Saturday morning. By general agreement, however, adjournment to Wednesday was voted.

Lord Mayor O'Callaghan, of Cork, suggested that no public meetings be held meanwhile. Meanwhile Collins, head of the Provisional Government, who was about to visit Kilkenny, raised no objection to this.

MAJOR TRUE FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER

London, May 5.—Ronald True, former major in the British aviation service, on trial for the killing of George C. Y. Johnson, otherwise Olive Young, was found guilty this evening of willful murder and sentenced to death.

In his charge to the jury, Justice McCardie said he would leave them to decide whether the murder, if committed by the prisoner, was committed during an epileptic seizure or under the influence of epilepsy, as claimed by the defense.

The counsel for the defense, in his final address to the jury, had proved that True's appetite for drugs was enormous and that during five months, while he was being cured of the habit, he consumed 4,000 half-grain tablets. "In February," he declared, "a weak brain man became an insane person with homicidal tendencies."

AVIATORS DROWNED IN POTOMAC RIVER

Washington, May 5.—Lieutenant Harold F. Selden, of this city, and Flight Instructor, the Bureau of Aeronautics, were drowned in the Potomac river late today when their naval seaplane was in collision with one piloted by Lieutenant Commander C. Y. Johnson, in command of the Annapolis naval station and his mechanic, C. W. Jacobs. The last two escaped unharmed.

Lieut. Selden was said to have been trying out a new propeller and was about 500 feet up when the collision occurred. His seaplane fell into the river, just below the naval air station, while that of Commander Johnson flew off, but made a forced landing in the river and was wrecked. Both Johnson and Jacobs were picked up by rescue boats.

PREMIER KING DENIES REPORT FROM GENOA

Ottawa, May 5.—The question of whether or not Canada had subscribed $1,000,000 to a consortium for assisting in the economic reconstruction of Europe, was brought up in the House of Commons this afternoon by Hon. T. A. Cresser, leader of the Progressives. He stated that a news dispatch from Genoa reported that the Canadian Government had subscribed this amount. He wished to know if there was any truth in the dispatch.

The Prime Minister replied that the report was not accurate, the Government had taken no action on this matter. He was informed that some documents in regard to it were being sent, but they had not yet been received.

IRREGULARS USING EXPLOSIVE BULLETS

Reinforcements Being Rushed to Aid of Regulars Ambushed—Several Killed.

Belfast, May 5.—Staff Captain O'Doherty said today that after the bank raid yesterday at Buncrana, County Donegal, a message was sent to R. F. A. headquarters at Drumboe Castle for reinforcements. Several carloads of troops started, and while passing through Newton, Cunningham, they ran into an ambush extending 100 yards along the road. Irregulars lying behind the walls opened heavy fire. The regulars, unable to find cover, ran straight through, with the result that three were killed and four wounded. One of the irregulars was killed and three were wounded.

The irregulars, Captain O'Doherty charged, used explosive bullets, some of which he declared were now in Buncrana.

O'Doherty denied reports that British troops were to be sent to Buncrana, although he said the British Government would be entitled to do so under the terms of the treaty. He added that the ambush occurred after the truce was to have taken effect, but that the combatants were not aware of its having been signed.

Further complications over the Russian memorandum may arise tomorrow on the return to Genoa of M. Barthou, of the French delegation, who has been on a visit to Paris and discussed the situation with Premier Poincare and the members of the ministry. Belgium still is obdurate in her insistence on a new clause in the memorandum to the Russians relating to the treatment of private property. It is reported that M. Barthou will submit such a clause as a substitute for that at present contained in the memorandum.

Even if the entire commission on Russian affairs agrees to approve a new clause, it will be difficult to induce the Russians to accept it, as they now are complaining bitterly of the present clause and the French and Belgians are insisting upon new provisions which will be much more drastic. They are demanding that they must be guaranteed that the Russians will not eventually turn over the property of foreigners to new owners.

Lloyd George may quit London, May 6.—It is generally believed, says a Reuter dispatch from Genoa, timed midnight, that M. Jasspar, the Belgian Foreign Minister, will not maintain his opposition to the memorandum presented to Russia, while it is expected France and Belgium will accept it as now framed if the memorandum is not accepted, Premier Lloyd George probably will return to London immediately.

LOOK OUT FOR FIRE, BUSINESS IS DULL

Liverpool, N. S., May 5.—That the head barber told him to expect a fire in the barber shop shortly as business was dull and the work bad, was the testimony given by Chinese laundryman Charlie Wong, at the inquest held here today in the case of J. W. Comosa, barber, and his assistant A. R. LeBlanc, who were charged with arson in connection with the fire in the Brooks building here last week. William Brooks, owner of the building, whose family lived above the barber shop had a narrow escape from the flames, stated that the Chinaman had told him what Comosa is alleged to have said, and that his family had lost much else through fear of the threatened fire.

LARGE FUND AT POLICE DISPOSAL

$50,000 to Draw on in Defraying Expenses in Investigating Small's Disappearance.

Toronto, May 5.—When Chief S. J. Dickson stated that the Ambrose J. Small estate had placed a sum of money in the hands of the police for the purpose of defraying the expenses in connection with the investigation of Small's disappearance, he did not state the amount which had been placed at their disposal.

It is learned this morning that the amount to which he referred was $50,000. This is open to the police to draw from without application or interference from anybody at all.

NEW DEFEATED FOR U. S. SENATE

Former Senator Beveridge Trims Harding's Friend in Indiana Primaries.

Washington, May 5.—(Canadian Press)—The result of the Indiana primaries, in which former Senator Beveridge defeated Senator New, a close friend of President Harding, for the Republican Senatorial nomination, promises to affect the tariff situation in the Senate. It has already encouraged opponents of the pending bill to make a harder fight on the high rates of the annexation committee.

MAY PROPOSE ADJOURNMENT OF CONFERENCE

Little Entente to Make Move, Being Dissatisfied Over Complications Existing.

JOFFE OFF TO CONSULT MOSCOW

Russia's Reply to Memorandum of Powers Not Expected for Two or Three Days.

Genoa, May 5.—It was asserted here tonight that the Little Entente, in view of the complications that have arisen over the memorandum presented by the Allies to the Russians, contemplated proposing adjournment of the Economic Conference until the problems which now are unsettled can be taken up with some probability of successfully ironing them out. This plan is especially supported by Dr. Eduard Beneš, the Czechoslovak Foreign Minister.

Adolphe Joffe, of the Russian delegation, started for Moscow tonight to confer with the Muscovite central executive committee which is now in session in the Soviet capital. While the Russian delegation has full powers to act at Genoa, it is desired that M. Joffe explain the progress of the conference to the executive committee which has authority to ratify agreements entered into.

The Russian reply to the Allied memorandum is not expected to be presented for two or three days, but, according to members of the Russian delegation, it will not necessarily be delayed until M. Joffe reaches Moscow.

WILD HEMLOCK CAUSED THE DEATHS

L'Original, Ont., May 5.—Within twenty-four hours after having eaten poisonous vegetables, the seven members of the Lacroix family who died in agony, following a hearty meal, were traced to the cause of their deaths. The Roman Catholic cemetery here today, the condition of the bodies, due to the virulent nature of the poison, made it imperative that burial take place as soon as possible. The herb which was the cause of the seven deaths in the Lacroix family was wild hemlock, which is described as a large biennial herb of the parsley family, according to the investigations made by G. G. Smith. This morning he said that the foliage of the herb resembled celery, while the root is not unlike parsnips.

MAIN TRUNK ROADS OPEN FOR TRAFFIC

Special to The Standard.
Fredericton, N. B., May 5.—Hon. R. J. Veniot, Minister of Public Works, who returned today from Ottawa, announced that the main trunk roads of the Province will be open for auto traffic tomorrow, May 6. This is an earlier date than last year, the change being made on account of the dry weather.

All official roads will be open for auto traffic on the 16th instant. The Minister is hopeful that, with the roads got thoroughly dried out, motorists will, as far as possible, make use of them only for business purposes.

FIRE LOSSES IN CANADA

Toronto, May 5.—Fire losses in Canada during the week ended May 3, are estimated by the Insurance Times at $1,000,000, compared with $210,000 the previous week.

CAMERA IMPORTANT PART OF ALMOST EVERY EQUIPMENT USED ESPECIALLY IN SUMMER

In the old days—which are called the good old days mainly because they are gone and we are through with them—when the folks had a visitor or sister's new beau called to size up his prospective responsibilities, there was one thing that bridged every conversational chasm, the family album. Every respectable family had a family album, also a little table on which to exhibit it.

"Why, how do you do, Mister Spiffers?" May would say, "do come in and set down in the parlor. Mary will be right down; she's ironing some clothes upstairs."

Which wasn't quite correct, because at that precise moment Sis happened to be out in the woodshed taking a bath. And so Ma would drag out the family's picture gallery, genealogical record and emergency entertainer, the photograph album. There was a faded print of Grandpa and his old musket marching to the war—Uncle Hiram and Aunt Mary, and Ma and Pa, and a flock of first, second and more remote cousins, to say nothing of a likeness of the famous pumpkin with which father won first prize at the county fair. And, of course, there was the picture of a couple of celebrities, also that of a tow-headed shaver seated in a high-backed chair, hair slicked down over the temples, hands resting on his knees and eyes staring straight ahead. That was supposed to be you, at the age of 12 or thereabouts.

By the time the latest aspirant to Sis Mary's favor had turned over the final leaf considerable time had elapsed, Mary had come in cool and fresh from her ironing job and the visitor had become convinced that he was dealing with an outfit that had some noble deeds to its credit, that included brave men and bright smart-looking women, a family that wasn't to be sneezed at by any means.

The album of today is an entirely different affair. Back & Co. tell me. Quite unlike its solemn-faced, generously embossed and gilded predecessor, it has a strictly utilitarian aspect and the pictures in it, instead of being made in a stuffy studio, smelling of vinegar, by a sallow-faced man wearing chin whiskers and a flowing Greenwich Village tie, are "taken" by the folks themselves. Also instead of exhibiting serious-looking men and women, who apparently never, never cracked a smile, these present-day photographs picture living human beings in action, scenes and events that had a part in the family's history, doings and travels of which the camera has made a faithful and permanent record.

From long acquaintance with their idiosyncrasies and characteristics I have come to assign motorists to three classes. They are either Hurriers, Worriers or Tarriers. A Hurrier is a motorist who remembers not much more of his trip than that somewhere between Smithville and Umplova he met a stretch of smooth and level road, on which he was able to let 'er out to sixty-two. That's all.

A Worrier is he whose touring tale is punctuated with references to a valve stem slap and otherwise needless itself with purely mechanical matters of one sort or another. But the TARRIER is an entirely different sort of person, the only one of the trio who recalls that up in the mountains there is a place from which three cities may be seen at one time, who recalls that there are farmhouses in which the art of warlike making may be seen in all its toothsome splendor, who lingers long enough to view "the roaring cataract, the snow-topped hill inspiring awe, till breath itself stands still!"

With this type of motorist bits of exquisite scenery, the local history of places, as told in stone and bronze have their own subtle appeal, and to make certain that an elusive memory will not rob him of his treasures he has photographed the scenes and kept a picture record of his travels, a veritable mine of recollection that enables him to retrace his transcendent journey within an hour, to live in memory associations that would have died but for the aid of the camera in holding them.

To thousands of motorists, particularly those given to venturing far from home, the camera is an important touring accessory, without which their outfit is not complete. One thing that makes the camera a logical addition to the tourist's equipment is the fact that in his case the problem of transportation is very satisfactorily solved. Whether the camera of his choice be large or small the car carries it as well as the spares in the way of plates or films. Even developing outfits may be included in cases where the tourist's equipment is, if enough, or sufficiently familiar with the mysteries of the dark-room, to prefer to do his own work of this nature.

If you don't already use a camera, get one at the first opportunity, you will find photography a delightful pastime. If you know nothing whatever about the operation of a camera, be assured that it is easy to learn. Camera makers, film manufacturers and optical inventors have succeeded in simplifying picture taking to a point where if you push the button while observing a few easily-remembered instructions you will enter into a brand-new interest that offers genuine pleasure, as well as downright utility. Here, for instance is the story of an eye-witness whose testimony saved time, trouble and annoyance: About a year ago a Ford delivery wagon, driven by its owner, a tailor, sailed into me, full tilt, smashing my fence and dislocating my steering gear, while bending its own wishbone so thoroughly as to put the Ford out of commission. While the car was still locking horns I thought myself of the camera in the tonneau, a somewhat impressive-looking Press Graflex. "Just a moment," said I, to the Ford man, waving him aside with a determined air—"just a moment, please." And there and then I photographed the scene, from a point well forward and somewhat high, so as to show not merely the position of the two cars, but also the road behind.

"Now," I said, closing the camera, "the thing is simply this: You see, you are in a place where you had no business to be. The picture I just took will prove that and photographs don't lie, you know. This picture will also show, behind your car, a stretch of nice, white road and a stretch of black dirt road right behind it. On the white road you see two dark streaks; they were made by your tires when you locked your wheels with the brakes and caused them to slide on the white road. This proves that you realized the situation and attempted to stop, but for some unaccountable reason you released your brakes again and smashed into me. You can see yourself how it is. What are you going to do?"

By this time the majesty of the law, in the person of the village cop, had appeared, an acquaintance of the Fordist. "You can't beat that, Issy," he said; "he's got you beat to rights. Better move that load of yours out of the way."

This solution was thoroughly satisfactory to me and better than I hoped for. As many motorists have found out to their sorrow, when an accident occurs there is generally no lack of evidence and no scarcity of witnesses. Though the street may have been positively deserted when the collision or other mishap occurred, there will be a half dozen persons willing to swear that it was you who tore along at the rate of 70 miles an hour. They will tell with astonishing exactness how many feet separated you from the car ahead—but a photograph! That's different. Photographs don't lie. The one just described admirably served the purpose for which it was taken, even if the Ford gentleman didn't know that development of the plate produced nothing but a piece of clear glass, innocent of any picture. In the excitement I had forgotten to pull the slide of the plate holder! I had gazed through the motions without securing a photograph.

Nobody sees more unaccounted-for sights and visits more interesting places than the motorist. By the same token no one enjoys greater opportunities for picture taking than he. There is no such thing as a camera particularly adapted to the motorist's needs. Whether his recording instrument be the modest and inexpensive Brownie or a large and costly Graflex or Reflex camera depends on his enthusiasm and on the question whether he desires merely records of real pictures. It is a safe rule to buy the best the purse allows, bearing in mind, nevertheless that satisfactory pictures can be made with the least expensive cameras. Practically all amateur work is done with small film cameras. In many of the amateur photographic exhibitions large pictures may be seen, but in most cases the foundation of these pictures was a small film negative. (Continued on Page 11.)

Weekly Chat

Dear Chums,—Before going into my chat, I wish to thank Marlon Johnson and Arthur Cox, for the boxes of beautiful Mayflowers they sent me. The flowers arrived good and fresh, and I greatly appreciated the kindness of these two members of the Corner. I also received some flowers in a letter from another member of the Corner, and have been promised some more by other members, and I will be very glad to receive such a lovely present. Well, I suppose you are all happy that the warm weather is at hand, and you are looking forward to the summer holidays, and then what a fine time you will all have! When I think of the many weeks holidays you will have, I feel happy to know that you will enjoy them, and I only wish I was a school boy again, and had the same opportunity that those boys have only come once in a life time. One of the members informs me this week that there is no school where she resides because the school has been closed for a boarding house. This appears to me to be a shame that children are obliged to go without an education when they are willing to attend school, but at the same time the teacher must have some place to live.

I have received quite a few letters this week and was indeed happy to hear from so many members and learn that they are all well and enjoying themselves.

Members of the Corner have been writing stories and I have received so many long ones that I am unable to use them all. Perhaps I will please the writers by publishing them all within a short time. I would welcome shorter stories, and then they would not have to be continued.

When I hear from some of my nieces that they are proving a great help to their mothers at home it is good news, for any girl that can assist in looking after matters about the house, shows that she is industrious. I suppose the boys do a lot of work and they also deserve credit.

I would like to write a long chat this week, but there doesn't appear to be very much of interest to talk about, and although you all like to read the chat, I am sure you find the stories even more interesting. It is quite a task in filling a page with interesting material, and I think that you will please the reader, and all I think those sent in by the members are among the best.

I regret to say that some of the members of the Corner have not sent in a letter for a number of weeks and I am wondering what has become of them. I would like to see the papers and I trust that they will all take time and write this week. I'm sure that there is not one member of the Corner who can't find a few minutes to write a letter to Uncle Dick. It doesn't take very long and I will be looking for a large number of letters this coming week. There are many members who write almost every week, or every other week, and it is nice to know that they have not forgotten me. Those who have not written to correspond should ask them to make up for lost time and tell me how they are making out, as I am greatly interested in every member of the Corner.

I will have to close now. With plenty of love, UNCLE DICK.

Sammy And Black Watch

Spring was in the air. Yes, spring was in the air. There was still snow and ice all through the Green Forest and the days were cold, but there was a something in the Green Forest and the Green Meadows that spring was not far away. They began to watch for signs.

Sammy Jay happened to be over in the Old Orchard one morning when Farmer Brown's Boy came out of the house with an ax in his hand and started toward the Green Forest. Right away Sammy was curious. Where was Farmer Brown's Boy going? What was he going for? Sammy decided to find out. He followed, never once losing sight of Farmer Brown's Boy, but keeping far enough behind him not to be noticed.

Blacky, the Crow, who, as you know, is Sammy Jay's cousin, was sitting overhead when he spied Farmer Brown's Boy tramping through the Green Forest. Of course, he also saw Sammy Jay following.

He wondered what those two are going for. "I thought Blacky," he wondered what is up now. I suppose the way to find out is to keep watch.

So Blacky turned and headed in the same direction as Farmer Brown's Boy and Sammy Jay were going. Because he could fly much faster than Farmer Brown's Boy could walk, he could stop from time to time in the top of a tall tree from which he could keep his sharp eyes on Farmer Brown's Boy.

Whistling merrily, Farmer Brown's Boy tramped through the Green Forest until presently he came to that part of it where the maple trees grow.

There was a little house in among the maple trees. Farmer Brown's Boy went straight to this little house, unlocked the door and went in.

Presently he came out with a lot of big pails. Then he started over to the nearest tree. In the trunk of it he bored a little hole and into this drove something. Sammy and Blacky didn't know what it was, but probably you will have guessed. It was a little metal spout. From this he hung one of the pails. Then he moved on to the next maple tree and did the same thing. He hung the pails to catch the sap that would run out of these little holes he had bored into the sides of the trees.

Sammy and Blacky had seen this done before and they knew what it meant. "The sap is running in the maple trees," they said to each other. "It's a sign that spring is almost here."

Blacky nodded his black head. "I know," said he. "This is going to be a busy place over here for a week or two."

Answers To Letters

ALICE.—Glad to hear from you, and while you were looking after the house you certainly had a good chance to write a letter. I'm sorry you lost the first row in school this week, but I am sure with hard work you will regain your place in the first row next week. You must enjoy playing with your little baby sister, and it will not be long before she will be able to say a number of words. I am just of the same mind as you, and that is I am happy to know that summer will soon be here. I suppose you like living at your summer home, and when the opportunity comes, I will be very glad to accept your invitation and pay you a visit some day. Keep hard at your studies and I trust next week you will be able to tell me that you have arrived in the first row.

G.S.F.—With good warm weather you will certainly see an abundance of lovely flowers growing. I am just of the same mind as you, and that is I am happy to know that summer will soon be here. I suppose you like living at your summer home, and when the opportunity comes, I will be very glad to accept your invitation and pay you a visit some day. Keep hard at your studies and I trust next week you will be able to tell me that you have arrived in the first row.

VIVIAN.—Thank you for the flowers you sent me in your letter. It is a question if you will like your new home should you move from where you are at present situated, but then it is a nice place where you intend going, and you don't see your story soon doing with it. I have received the names of a few new members during the past few weeks and expect more shortly.

AVRIL.—Your story received and will try and use it at the next opportunity, but I have quite a number of stories besides those sent in by members of the Corner, and if you don't see your story soon doing with it, I will continue to enjoy it as well as I can. I have received the names of a few new members during the past few weeks and expect more shortly.

MATILDA.—You certainly have a large number of cows on your farm. You must have pleasure with so many. You must be kept busy with your work and different amusements. I'm glad that you received a letter from Peggy as she is an interesting writer. What a lot of good news you have for the cows. Write again when you get a chance, for I like to receive letters from the Corner members.

GRACE.—It is nice to learn that you enjoy reading the Children's Page in The Standard, and I hope that you will continue to enjoy it as well as I do. I will try to write you a letter this week. I'm sure that there is not one member of the Corner who can't find a few minutes to write a letter to Uncle Dick. It doesn't take very long and I will be looking for a large number of letters this coming week. There are many members who write almost every week, or every other week, and it is nice to know that they have not forgotten me. Those who have not written to correspond should ask them to make up for lost time and tell me how they are making out, as I am greatly interested in every member of the Corner.

W.W.W.—To receive a letter from a member who writes on a typewriter is something new for me and I might say that you do particularly well with the machine. Now that you have lost your pen, I suppose you will make another and then you will be more careful and hold tight on the string. I'm glad that you have attended school so regularly and I hope that you will keep it up. As for the number of members in the Corner, there is a very large number, but I can't tell you the exact number.

JEAN.—I was very glad to receive another letter from you. You have been kept busy with your story, but I'm sure you will have plenty of fun with Bunnies and Peter, the two pet rabbits. I think they are fine pets. Bunnies should be very tame and allow you to handle them on your terms. As for the bill-of-fare, I think the rabbits have a lot to eat. You have good titles for the stories that you write. What a lot of fun you are having. I'm glad to hear that you are enjoying your visit. I thank you for enquiring about my health and I expect to be all better of a bad cold in a short time. I'm glad to hear that you are enjoying the Spring Bunnies when you have the opportunity of sending them to me. I was looking for a bird book, but could not find one. GRACE.—You never fail to write to Uncle Dick and I always glad to receive your letters. It is good to learn that your cold is better. I will be anxiously awaiting the time when you can send me your story. I'm glad to hear that you are enjoying your visit. I thank you for enquiring about my health and I expect to be all better of a bad cold in a short time. Dreams. His dream of bliss I've never forgot. He hopes to strive, It rich in life. Yet many hours Are busy as a bee. Who backed with coin A hope like that. —Detroit Free Press.

Presently Farmer Brown appeared and began to help put out those pails. Back and forth from the little house in the maple trees Farmer Brown and his boy tramped until at last every maple tree in that part of the Green Forest had a pail hanging from its trunk. Some sprang down in its trunk, some big trees had two or three pails. Then Farmer Brown's Boy brought out his ax and began to chop wood while inside the little house Farmer Brown's Boy was busy putting things in order. And all the time Sammy Jay and Blacky the Crow kept watch that they might miss nothing of what was going on.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

The Disobedient Little Bears

Mother Bear was very busy digging roots in a damp soft place not far from the Laughing Brook. She was hungry and she had no thought of anything but getting something to put in her stomach. Her big claws tore up the soft earth and she grunted impatiently as they hunted for those roots. She didn't give a thought to her half-grown cubs. Boxer and Wolf. She had left them digging for roots a little further down the Laughing Brook. She had left them with a warning not to go away from there and it didn't enter her head that they might disobey. You see, they had been so used to her being so kind and so kind to them that they didn't think they would even dream of disobeying.

But those two cubs were not what she had left them. With Boxer in the lead and Wolf at his heels they were hurrying through the Green Forest toward Farmer Brown's sugar house, where a couple of nights before the wandering Little Night Breeze had tickled their noses with such a delicious smell. Mother Bear had warned them to keep away from that part of the Green Forest, but the memory of that delicious smell was too much for them.

The nearer they got to that part of the Green Forest where the sugar house was, the more Wolf's conscience troubled her. Then, too, she was more timid than Boxer. Supposing Mother Bear was right and that there was danger over there? She turned her head from time to time to look back. She wouldn't have owned up to it, but she was hoping to see Mother Bear following. But Mother Bear wasn't following and there was nothing to do but to keep on after Boxer. You see, she had boasted that she was no more afraid than he, and that if he would go, she would, too.

At last they reached that part of the Green Forest where the maple trees grew. "We are almost there," whispered Boxer, stopping to sit up and look and listen. Wolf also sat up and wriggled her nose a bit anxiously. "I don't smell that delicious scent," whispered she. "Perhaps it isn't over here now. Don't you think we'd better go back?" "I should say not," exclaimed Boxer. "You can go back if you want to, but I'm going to find out where that delicious smell came from and what made it. I'm not afraid of you are."

Truth to tell, Boxer was boasting to keep his courage up. Right down in his heart he was begging wickedly that he hadn't come. Now that they were so near the place where Mother Bear had caught the man smell he was not so sure that there was nothing to be afraid of. But he couldn't do that and he was so hoarse. Somewhere back of them a twig snapped. The two little bears jumped guiltily and turned anxious faces in that direction. Could it be that Mother Bear was following them? They knew just what would happen if she was. They knew that each would get a sound spanking for disobeying. But there were no signs of Mother Bear and once more Boxer started on.

Wolf also sat up and wriggled her nose a bit anxiously. "I don't smell that delicious scent," whispered she. "Perhaps it isn't over here now. Don't you think we'd better go back?" "I should say not," exclaimed Boxer. "You can go back if you want to, but I'm going to find out where that delicious smell came from and what made it. I'm not afraid of you are."

"Heaven grant that I may dream how I can get you free," she said. The thought filled his heart, the prayer fervently to God for help and even in his sleep her prayer went on. She dreamed that she flew to the place of the cave, that she had courage and composure if you have courage and composure in my hand? Those who grow near the entrance of your cave are the same kind. You must gather them through the blisters rise all over your hands. Tread out the nettles with your feet till you have made them into fax. When you have woven the fax into a long sleeve, draw them over the eleven swans, and the spell will be broken. If you run out of nettles, the only other place you can get them is in the charred-room. How did you come here, my lovely child?" he cried. Elisa shook her head; she dared not speak for she remembered that the fairy had told her, "Come here, now, you must not stay here. If you are as good as you are beautiful, I will dress you in silk and velvet, and set my golden crown upon your head." He lifted her onto his shoulders.

The Wild Swans

Far away from here there once lived a king who had eleven sons and one daughter named Elisa. The eleven sons were princes and each went to school decorated with a star on his breast and a sword by his side. They wrote on golden slates with diamond pencils. The little sister sat on a cut-glass foot-stool and had a picture book which had cost as much as half a kingdom.

When the children were still young their mother died and shortly after the king married again. The stepmother was very cruel to the children and soon drove them from home. She sent Elisa to a far away country to live with some poor peasants and to the sons she said: "Fly forth into the world and provide for yourselves; fly forth like great birds without a home."

No sooner had she spoken than the eleven princes were turned into swans. One day when Elisa was about fifteen, she escaped from the cottage and toward sunset she saw eleven wild swans, with golden crowns upon their heads come flying to the shore, one behind the other, like a white ribbon. She hid behind a bush, and the swans, as they came, she saw them flapping their great white wings.

The moment the sun set in the sea, their feathers disappeared and eleven young princes stood upon the shore. They gave a low cry and sprang to ward them. They were grown and altered, but she felt sure they were her own dear brothers. She ran close to them and the princes clasped their little sister in their arms. The king, too, had grown and was a tall, bearded man. They laughed and cried and hugged each other wickedly their stepmother had treated them. "As long as the sun is above the horizon," said the eldest of the brothers, "we shall be swans, but after sunset we regain our human shape. That is, we are obliged to make for the shore every evening, for if the sun should set while we are in the water, we would sink and be drowned."

"Tomorrow we must fly away from here," said another brother, "but we do not want to leave you here alone. Have you the courage to come along with us? Surely our wings could carry you across the sea."

"Oh, indeed I will not be afraid," said Elisa, "please take me with you." So all night long they worked to make a raft of coarse grass and willow bark. The sister lay down upon it and when the sun rose, she closed her eyes and in the shape of wild swans, lifted the raft in their beaks and flew with her towards the clouds.

"They flew on the whole day and when they reached the shore because of the weight they had to carry. At last they reached a lovely coast with faint blue mountain peaks, cities and palaces. The swan brothers set down the raft in a cave, where they were to pass the night.

"Now, we shall see what you will dream tonight," said the youngest prince, as he led her to her sleeping-room.

"Heaven grant that I may dream how I can get you free," she said. The thought filled his heart, the prayer fervently to God for help and even in his sleep her prayer went on. Whitefoot Spends A Dreadful Night

One night of his life Whitefoot the Wood Mouse will never forget as long as he lives. Even now it makes him shiver just to think of it. Yes, sir, he shivers even now whenever he thinks of that night. The Black Shadows had come early that evening, so it was quite dark when Whitefoot crept out of his snug little bed and climbed up to the round hole which was the doorway of his home in a tall, dead stump in the Green Forest. He had just poked his nose out of that little round doorway when there was the most terrible sound. It seemed to him as if it was in his very ears, so loud and terrible that it frightened him so badly that he simply let go and tumbled backward down inside his hole. Of course it didn't hurt him any, for he landed on his soft bed.

"Whoo-hoo-hoo, whoo-hoo-hoo," came that terrible sound again, and Whitefoot shook until his little teeth rattled. At least that is the way it seemed to him. It was the voice of Hoity the Owl, and Whitefoot knew that Hoity was sitting on the top of that very stump. He was, so to speak, on the roof of Whitefoot's house.

Now, in all the Green Forest there is no sound that strikes terror to the hearts of the little people of feathers and fur quite so to the hunting-call of Hoity the Owl. Hoity knows this. No one knows it better than he does. That is why he uses it. He knows that many of the little people are asleep safely hidden away. He knows that it would be quite useless for him to simply look for them. He would starve before he could find a dinner in that way. But he knows that anyone awakened from sleep in great fright is sure to move, and if they do they are almost equally sure to make some noise. Hoity knows this, too. He knows that if he can get a little sound, his ears are so wonderful that he can hear it. He knows that if he can get a little sound, his ears are so wonderful that he can hear it. He knows that if he can get a little sound, his ears are so wonderful that he can hear it.

Hoity couldn't possibly get that he was in there. There was nothing to fear. But just the same Whitefoot shivered and shook, and almost jumped out of his skin every time that Hoity hooted. He just couldn't help it. "He can't get me. I know he can't get me. I'm perfectly safe. I'm just as safe as if he were miles away. There is nothing to be afraid of. It is only the sound of Hoity's hoot. He doesn't even know I am inside here. Even if he does, it doesn't really matter. Whitefoot said these things to himself over and over again. Then Hoity would send out that fierce, terrible hunting call and Whitefoot would jump and shake just as before.

After a while all was still. Gradually Whitefoot stopped trembling. He guessed that Hoity had flown away. Still he remained right where he was for a very long time. He didn't intend to foolishly take any chances. So he waited and waited and waited. At last he was sure that Hoity had left. Once more he climbed up to his little round doorway and there waited and waited and waited. He was so nervous that he couldn't sleep. He was so nervous that he couldn't sleep. He was so nervous that he couldn't sleep.

Whitefoot didn't go out that night at all. It was a moonlight night and just the kind of a night to be out. He waited and waited and waited. He was so nervous that he couldn't sleep. He was so nervous that he couldn't sleep. He was so nervous that he couldn't sleep.

Dora's Disappointment

"Oh dear! and we'll have to wait until Wednesday to go to Aunt Emily's place," wailed Dora. "Well there's no use grumbling about it," said Horace, who was also going to visit Aunt Emily with their mother. "The train is not coming this morning nor tomorrow morning, and grumbling won't bring it, so you may as well keep still about it."

Mrs. McPherson had promised to take Dora and Horace to visit Aunt Emily, and they had just received word that the train had been wrecked and couldn't get going again until Wednesday, and this was only Monday morning. They had expected to come back on Friday because Mrs. Patterson and her little boy from about eighty miles away were coming to visit them on Saturday, and they wanted to be home when they came. There were not many railways around so there were the same where Mrs. McPherson lived that was where Mrs. Patterson lived.

Tuesday afternoon Dora's eldest sister, Mildred, brought a letter from Mrs. Patterson saying that she could not come on Saturday, because she had promised to visit someone else Tuesday and Wednesday and they would have to visit them before they visited Mrs. McPherson and they would not possibly come until the next Saturday anyway.

How sad Horace and Dora were for their mother said that if Aunt Emily asked them to stay longer, why they would do it. On Wednesday morning the train came, and Mrs. McPherson, Dora, and Horace went to visit Aunt Emily, or rather Dora and Horace went to visit their cousins, Gertrude, Norman and Duncan.

They reached the station which was about a half of a mile from Aunt Emily's house at four o'clock. Gertrude and Norman came to meet them and show them the way to Aunt Emily's place, for they had never been there before, though Aunt Emily and her three children had been to visit Mrs. McPherson.

"Can't you stay until Saturday," Aunt Emily asked after tea Wednesday evening, Mildred can entertain your company until you get home Saturday night. "My company is not coming until a week from this coming Saturday."

Then it was decided that they would stay at Aunt Emily's place until the next Friday, just what Horace and Dora wanted. The five children had a lovely time the few days that Dora and Horace were at Aunt Emily's place. Dora's disappointment in the train being wrecked on Monday morning had become her happiness because she could stay at Aunt Emily's place longer than she could have if it hadn't been wrecked.

Hilton Belyea To Leave Next Week

Committee in Charge Assembled Last Evening — Tag Day by Women and Amateur Organizations Will Assist.

The committee in charge of the sending of Hilton Belyea away to Philadelphia, met again last evening in the rooms of the Carleton Curling Club, with J. D. Chesley in the chair. The different committees who were appointed to be instrumental in the amateur clubs in the city, asking for financial assistance, reported that they would do all possible to make the fund one that would cover all expenses.

J. A. Gregory stated that a woman's organization had offered their services to conduct a Tag Day to obtain money for the fund. The meeting was adjourned until the evening of the 10th, when the arrangements were left in the hands of Mr. Gregory.

The appreciation of the committee was extended to the Manchester Steamship Line for their offer to transport the champion oarsman, with his trainer and boat, from St. John to Philadelphia, and a committee was appointed to look after the arrangements.

BATHING BEACH GIRLS KICK VIGOROUSLY

Washington, May 6.—The bathing beach girls and the lobster men and their allies from pollution of navigable waters by oil burning ships, today issued a report on a resolution requesting the President to call a conference of maritime nations to stop it. Aside from the first award resulting from the pilling up of oil washed along the docks the report states that the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf lobsters, oysters and fish of all sorts were being destroyed to an alarming extent and that bathing beaches had been greatly damaged because of the pollution.

LIBERALS ACCUSED OF BREAKING PAIRS

Said to Have Disregarded Agreement in Vote on Resolution Thursday.

Ottawa, May 5.—(Canadian Press)—Interest in the Conservative caucus today centered around criticism of alleged Liberal breaking of pairs in the vote on the resolution to appoint a committee to hear evidence on the railway situation taken in the House last evening. After the caucus it was understood that Conservative members charged that several pairs between Conservative and Liberal members were broken by Liberals. Whether or not this was due to misunderstanding was not brought out, but it is believed that the matter of pairs will be the subject of conference between the two parties.

THIRD PARIS MURDER TRIAL WILL BE CONCLUDED TODAY; JUDGE'S CHARGE THIS MORNING

Powerful Addresses by Counsel for Prisoner and for Crown Delivered Yesterday—Paris Coolly Follows Both With Apparent Interest—Added Interest Shown by the Citizens as the Trial Draws to An End.

Today will mark the last day of the trial of John Paris, charged with the murder of Sadie McAuliffe in Silvercreek Park in August last. Judge Harty will begin his charge to the jury at 8:30 o'clock this morning, and the case will probably go to the jury by noon, and their verdict is delivered before a verdict this evening.

Mr. Vernon, R. C. began his address to the jury on the opening of the court yesterday morning, concluding shortly after 10 o'clock. At 10:30 o'clock the court resumed its session and the trial proceeded, and last night the Standard's phone was kept busy answering calls from subscribers who followed the case had gone to the trial.

Mr. Vernon in beginning his address thanked the jury for the attention they had given to the case. They were about to enter upon the most important part of the trial, whether they were going to free the accused or take his life, as sacred to him as was theirs to them.

Mr. Vernon reviewed in detail the evidence given during the trial. He said that the evidence was not only in the mind of the jury but also in the mind of the public. He said that the evidence was not only in the mind of the jury but also in the mind of the public.

Two Men Nearly Lose Their Lives

Two men nearly lost their lives at a fire yesterday at noon, which did considerable damage to a warehouse and stock of H. G. Harrison, Main street, when they were overcome by smoke and rendered unconscious. One of them had to be hurried to the hospital, but the other came around quickly when brought out into the open air.

The men had carried a hose into the upper story of the building and were going good work there, when the water failed them and they found it impossible to get out of the building, as they could not see. A rescue party went in after the missing men and were successful in reaching them in time to save their lives. Edward Harrison, was in a serious state and was immediately rushed to the hospital, where he responded to treatment and last evening was reported to be coming around all right. The other man, David Spink, was not so bad and was able in a few minutes to walk to his home. An all in the hose pipe was responsible for the stopping of the water, and the consequent suffocation of the men.

The building contained a large quantity of hay and food, most of which will be a total loss. The insurance on the building was $100,000, and the stock $1,000,000, both with the British and Canadian Underwriters, White & Calkin, agents, and the British Crown, C. E. Jarvis & Sons, agents, each having $1,000,000.
