VANCOUVER WOMAN MURDERED AND BODY BURNED IN FURNACE

Bloodhounds Lead Detectives to Scorched Remains of Mrs. Charles J. Millard—Most Fiendish Crime Revealed.

CHINESE SERVANT IS ARRESTED

[Canadian Press.]
CHINAMAN CONFESSES.
[Later.] Vancouver, B.C., April 4.—Jack Kong, the 17-year-old Chinese boy suspected of the murder of Mrs. Charles J. Millard, confessed today that he committed the crime.

The boy told the police that at breakfast on Wednesday Mrs. Millard had found fault with him. He struck her with a chair and stunned her, and then choked her to death, he said. Later he took her body to the basement, where he cut it up and placed it in the furnace, piece by piece. He hid the clothing in order to convince Mr. Millard that his wife had gone out in the morning.

The skull and other bones have been found in the chimney beyond the furnace, the police said.

[Canadian Press.]
Vancouver, B.C., April 4.—Hounds tracing human bloodstains from the dining room to furnace in the home of Mrs. Charles J. Millard, 1650 Pendrell street, Vancouver, yesterday picked up ashes in their teeth, ashes which the police believe are the remains of the woman who was the wife of Charles J. Millard, chief ticket agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway here.

The murder has created a tremendous sensation, for the Millards were well known socially. There is no direct clue to the murderer, but suspicion rests upon a Chinaman, employed by the Millards, who is now in custody. The celestial absolutely refused to make a statement.

It is recognized as the most brutal and most fiendish crime ever perpetrated in this city, and there was great public wrath when the facts leaked out.

Found Bloodstains.
When the police were called in after Mr. Millard has been unable to solve the mystery of his wife's disappearance during his brief absence in Victoria, they discovered bloodstains on the dining room floor. Hounds were immediately requisitioned. With detectives on all four tracing the stains, dogs followed up trail. One of them whined, then slowly picked his way into the hall. The leading dog picked up his ears, then again bent low and followed the trail to the stairway leading to the basement. Down stairs the dog and men went. The animal picked up some ashes in its teeth, but was immediately forced to disgorge. Examination of the ashes told the detectives plainly that a horrible murder had been committed. In the words of one of them "Crippen had been out-Crippened."

A Terrible Sight.
This was not all. Searching further the detectives opened the furnace door, and a sickening sight met their eyes. Bones and human flesh, mangled and partly burned, were found. Discoveries left no doubt that Mrs. Millard had been murdered and her body concealed in the furnace, where an effort had been made to destroy it by fire. A police official said that after the dogs had sniffed the dining room carpet, examination of the carpet was made and it was found to be saturated with soap and water. The carpet was taken up and bloodstains were found underneath. It was apparent that an attempt had been made to wash it.

Previous Burglary.
Burglars rifled the Millard house about two weeks ago and took about $200 worth of jewelry. The Chinaman now under arrest is alleged to have stated that burglars must have committed the murder, but there is a theory in police circles that the celestial was concerned in the theft and, being discovered, killed his mistress. The bloodstains in the dining room seem to indicate that the woman was either clubbed or stabbed.

VILLA'S FORCES IN CONTROL OF FULLY HALF OF REPUBLIC

Federals in Precarious State Retreat, Being Full of Danger.

FALL OF TORREON DENIED

Government Refuses to Acknowledge It—More Ammunition Captured.

Mexico City, April 4.—The Federal Government still obstinately denied today the capture of Torreón by the rebels. It was, however, assumed in many quarters that General Huerta and his ministers were in no ignorance of the fate of that city.

It was suggested that the reason for withholding the news from the public was based on psychological rather than on military grounds. It was pointed out that serious-minded people here that the capture of Torreón might easily start an avalanche of public opinion against the administration, which would thus find itself seriously embarrassed at a most critical moment of its career.

The taking of Torreón gives the Constitutionalists control of practically half the republic, with the exception of the cities of Saltillo and Monterrey, and the capitals of the states of Coahuila and Nuevo Leon.

Dangerous Retreat.
Military men here regard the retreat of General Velasco from Torreón as a most dangerous undertaking, and they consider the position of General Javier de Muro and General Joaquín Mías at San Pedro as precarious.

It is pointed out that northward from Saltillo toward Monterrey, a comparatively short distance, little difficulty might be encountered by the Federal troops and it is thought to be not improbable that the fugitives from Torreón may make an attempt to join the rather strong Federal garrison at Monterrey.

CITY WILL DEMAND TRACK EXTENSIONS FROM ST. RAILWAY

Now Entitled to Three Miles
More, Declares City Engineer Ashplant.

DOUBLE TRACK YORK ST.

Richmond Street, Across G. T. R. Tracks, Will Have to be Double Tracked.

According to City Engineer W. N. Ashplant, the board of control proposes to create fresh trouble for the London Street Railway Company in the shape of a demand for a number of track extensions.

At the present time, the new service schedule is the big bone of contention between the city and the company, and following its settlement, the question of system enlargements is to be taken up.

The engineer states that with the increased population, the city is entitled to the last day of April, 1914, is reached.

EXPECTS MONTH'S BUILDING TO EXCEED HALF MILLION

Building Inspector Figures That April, 1913, Record of $521,330 Will Be Exceeded—Many Permits For Houses To Be Issued.

Building operations during the first four days of April have exceeded by many thousands of dollars, the expectations of Building Inspector A. M. Piper. Permits issued since the first of the month represent an expenditure of $92,220, and there is every prospect, according to the inspector, that the total in April, 1914, will reach the $250,000 for the new McCormick factory, which will be reached and passed before the last day of April, 1914, is reached.

With the exception of a $20,000 permit for the new hydro radial station on the last day of April, 1914, is reached.

SURVIVORS ARE NEARING ST. JOHN'S

Bellaventure, Bringing Some of Newfoundland's Crew May Not Enter Harbor Until Evening.

[Canadian Press.]
St. John, April 4.—The steamer Bellaventure carrying 30 survivors and most of the bodies of the 77 members of the crew of the sealer Newfoundland, who lost their lives in Tuesday's storm, was 30 miles east of this port at daylight today. Heavy ice was so impeding her progress that it was thought probable that she would not come into the harbor until late in the day.

The steamer Kyle, fitted out by the Government, sailed early today in search for the missing Southern Cross, which with 170 men on board was last seen Tuesday morning off the southern coast, just to the westward of Cape Pine. The Kyle is equipped with wireless apparatus.

PROMPT ACTION SAVES AGED GARDENER'S LIFE

Motorman and Policeman Save Him From Certain Death
—Car Struck Him.

The prompt action of Motorman Percy Southern and P. C. Westman saved the life of James Gall, an aged Asylum gardener, when he was struck and knocked down by a street car at the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets this afternoon. Gall was cutting across the north side of Richmond to the south side of Dundas, and failed to notice an Ottawa car approaching from the north. Motorman Southern rang the bell, and seeing that the man failed to get out of the way, he dropped the fender as the car struck him. P. C. Westman, hearing the noise, turned in time to hold Gall on the fender until the car was brought to a stop. A few bruises and a bad cut in the right leg were all his injuries.

A woman, seeing Gall struck by the car, fainted, and had to be taken into a Richmond street drug store, where she was soon revived and sent to her home in a cab.

ENGINE OBJECTS TO G.T.R. STATION

Peevish Locomotive Endeavors To Batter Down
Old Relic of the Stone Age, But Is Mired Instead After Jumping the Track and Ploughing Up Platform.

When even a frisky mogul objects to the unsightly structure that serves as the Grand Trunk station, and in its elephantine way attempts to express its dissatisfaction, surely it is time that steps were taken to provide a better building for a city of the importance of London.

The dissatisfied engine is known as 562. Drawing a through freight of 49 cars from Mimico to Sarnia, it was running at a speed of about four miles an hour when it sighted the station. Shy and lumbering, it piled its 138 tons across the platform between tracks 1 and 2, crushing the heavy plank as if it was matchwood. The front wheels ran twenty feet up the platform and fully fifteen feet from the outside rail. The heat from the engine softened the frozen ground, and the hind wheels sank two feet into a miry slough.

It was 2:25 a.m. when the accident happened.

Engineer Revelle had been signalled his through track, and was drawing in from track 3 across the switch at the east end of the platform to track 1. This is the shortest switch in the yards, and the lead did not see to be sufficient for the heavy mogul. As it reached the frog it left the track, dragging the tender after it, but leaving the length of train safe on the tracks. Another engine was rushed up and an attempt was made to draw the recalcitrant locomotive back to its proper place, but the effort was futile. About six o'clock a wrecking crane was called for from Hamilton. From eight o'clock until after eleven the crew worked, blocking and lifting, before the engine was finally replaced on the track.

Divisional Superintendent Davidson placed the damage this morning at $25. No trains were held up, and the damage to the engine was insignificant. About six hundred square feet of platform will have to be laid to replace that torn away.

Half An Acre From Government.
London in those days was staked out in five and ten acre blocks. Mr. Hiscox had secured from the Government half an acre between Dundas and Queen's avenue, on which stands the present residence of George T. Hiscox. Mrs. Hiscox remembers the purchase in 1845 for $1,200 of another half acre on Dundas street, now occupied by leading stores. It was regarded as a fabulous amount to pay.

East of Wellington street was what was then called the New Survey. Here the land was laid out in ten acre blocks. The business centre was in the immediate vicinity of the court house. In those days Wellington street was the main thoroughfare of the city.

Hopeful and Enthusiastic.
The people of London were hopeful and enthusiastic with respects to the future of the city. This was one of the first things Mrs. Hiscox observed.

MRS. ANNIE HISCOX.

tario was still Upper Canada when Mrs. Hiscox came to London, and the Forest City was then a forest in very truth. With an aunt and uncle, the young girl made the adventurous trip across the Atlantic in "The Calcutta," and old sailing vessel, the voyage taking nine weeks. Of thirty who came to Canada on that trip of the "Calcutta," she is the last survivor. Her last cousin died five years ago.

Love at First Sight.
The party arrived in London on September 2, 1840. It was an eventful day for Mrs. Hiscox, then Miss Annie Nott, for on that day she saw for the first time her future husband, Thomas Hiscox. It was a case of love at first sight, as the old lady likes to remember it, and before many days went by

PEACE MUST BE PEACE WITH HOOR SAYS PREMIER ASQUITH

Praises Army in Fife Speech, But Makes It Very Clear That It Must Keep Out of Politics—Will Not Submit Home Rule to Country.

[Canadian Press.]
Ladybank, Scotland, April 4.—Premier Asquith opened his election campaign this afternoon in the Masonic Hall of this little village. The hall is a diminutive building with a holding capacity limited to 300. Under these circumstances the speech of the prime minister was made to the sixty reporters present, rather than to the delegates of the Scottish Liberal Association, who filled the rest of the hall.

The elaborate telegraphic arrangements for the circulation of the premier's address throughout the United Kingdom testified to the importance attached to the speech in political circles.

New Office a Duty.
Premier Asquith, as befitted a man who had just assumed the duties of Secretary of State for War, quickly approached the subject of the army crisis. He said he had felt it to be his duty in the higher interests of both the army and state to assume his new office because "a grave situation had been created, both in regard to the discipline of the army, and in connection with its relation to the civil power."

The premier continued: "There is a certainty that if things went on as they had threatened to do, a controversy would have arisen which every patriotic man would have been anxious to avoid until a tribute to the army arose."

Paying a tribute to the army, Premier Asquith declared: "The British army can be counted on from the highest to the lowest rank with full qualification or reserve, to undertake all the duties its obligations require it to discharge. The army is not, and I pray may never become, a political machine. The army has no place and no voice in the making of our policy or the molding of our laws. The army will hear nothing of politics from me, and in return I expect to hear nothing of politics from the army."

Turning to exceptional circumstances in which the army might be called upon to assist the civil power, Premier Asquith said that in such emergencies "it is the duty of the soldier and the duty of the civilian to comply with the lawful demand of the civil power. The doctrine promulgated lately by the leaders of the Tory party struck at the very root not only of army discipline, but of democratic government."

The Premier emphasized the idea that "the new dogma, now counter-signed by the Tory leaders, will be invoked whenever the spirit of lawlessness claims to stop the ordinary machinery of self-governing society."

No Vote on Home Rule.
Mr. Asquith definitely refused the Unionist demand that the question of home rule should be submitted to the electors. He said: "We believe it to be a wise and just measure, and we have disclaimed and will continue to disclaim any submission of it to the country."

The premier declared that there was complete moral and constitutional justification for the application of the parliament act, restricting the powers of the electors.

CHANCE FOR INVESTORS Demand For Accommodation

With Capital.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:
You are booming your city as all good citizens should, and I feel if you knew conditions as strangers find them you would use your influence to remedy them.

Any kind of an undesirable foreigner, however, can get all the accommodation desired. Why is there not some place where a public registry of vacant houses or some easier way devised for one to find a home? This is a beautiful city, and it is a pity it has not houses suitable for people of moderate means.

NEW ARRIVAL.
There is no doubt of the truth of the claims set forth in the above communication from a gentleman who has not been long in London, and who is seeking both a place of business and a home for his family.

House and Store Famine.
At the present time London is suffering from a house and store famine. In the business section there is not a desirable store to be had, although there have been scores of applications for them in the past few years. The same conditions exist in the residential district. The house that rents from $18 to $25 a month is a non-existent quantity. One may search high and low and not find a house with modern conveniences which can be had for moderate rental. Recent arrivals at The Advertiser, brought to the city because of the additions made to the force of this newspaper, have all had the same story to tell. It has been next

29 MILL TAX RATE UNLESS ESTIMATES ARE CUT $120,000

Controllers Have Gigantic Task on Their Hands To Reduce Rate.

BE NO SCHOOL SLICING
Board's Consent Must Be Secured First and Items Are Chopped to Limit.

Unless the board of control and city council are able to chop in round figures, $120,000, from the estimates that are to be submitted next week, London will have a 29 mill tax rate this year, according to the wise ones around the city hall. Fortunately the law prohibits the striking of a greater rate than 30 mills, or it is difficult to say where the year's expenditures would stop.

The controllers have a neat little job on their hands in order to keep the tax rate in reasonable bounds. Just where $120,000 is to be clipped off is a puzzle, indeed. The estimates for street lighting and sprinkling cannot be altered, and the fire department expenditure certainly cannot be cut down, while the estimates of the public library board and the board of education, both higher than last year, cannot be reduced without the consent of the two boards. It is hardly likely that the school trustees or the public library board members will consent to any reductions. The school board estimates have been shared in the last notch, and according to even the most cautious members of the board, will stand no further paring.

The estimates of the works department running in the neighborhood of $88,000 may be shaved sufficiently to save half a mill although the city engineer contends that the work he has laid out, particularly an item of several thousand dollars for bridge repairs, is decidedly necessary.

$23,000 For Electrification.
The question will also arise of providing for the sinking fund and interest.

GALICIANS OFFER WIVES AND DAUGHTERS FOR BREAD TO EAT

Starvation Driving Thousands Into Silesia—Prussian Police Send Them Back—Harvests Have Failed and Men Were at War.

[Canadian Press.]
Montreal, April 4.—A cable from Cracow, Poland, says: Pitiful scenes are being enacted daily at Miplovitz, Silesia, and the immediate vicinity. Thousands of men, women and children, facing starvation in Galicia, have been pouring into Silesia, begging frantically for bread, their harvest having been a total loss.

So extreme is their distress, through the failure of the harvest and the enforced service of able-bodied men in the army during the mobilization caused by the Balkan war, that the men are willing to sell their daughters and even wives for a morsel of bread. Many hundreds are already dead from starvation and exposure.

Despite the terrible plight of the refugees, the Prussian police are driving ragged and famishing peasants back across the border like so many cattle.

NEAR THE CENTURY MARK, STARTS STUDYING MUSIC

Thomas Collins, of Biddulph Township, Has Lived in the Reigns of Six British Sovereigns, and Has Remarkable Agility.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Clandeboye, April 3.—Ninety-nine and a half years old and starting to take music lessons!
Thomas Collins, of the first concession, Biddulph Township, who has lived in the reigns of six British sovereigns, is the remarkable individual.
From fifteen minutes to half an hour each evening he "practices" on the organ, and his own testimony is that he is making good progress. He bought a new organ six months ago, having grown tired of a melodeon, and only six weeks ago he decided to learn to play "by music" the "New Method"—a system that had been recommended for those ambitious to be self-taught—and the venerable gentleman with the soul of a Christian set about to still improve his talents and keep a cheerful heart so long as he is blessed with life and his faculties.

He pumps the organ pedals with energy and follows the numbers from the music book to the numbers along the keyboard, and makes melody. He sings a great deal and attempts his own accompaniment, but his course has thus far been too short to effect a satisfactory result in this regard.

Hundred Years in November.
On Nov. 12, if he is spared, Mr. Collins will be 100 years old. He is wonderfully smart. His mind is clear and his memory almost a marvel. Nor is he bereft of agility and vigor.

Last fall his eldest son, David, who lives on the homestead and who is 70 years old, was startled one day to see his very aged parent half way up the steel windmill tower and still mounting. The son shouted, "Come down from there, you'll fall!" But Mr. Collins, senior, only looked back and smiled and kept on climbing.

The old gentleman had come out to get a pail of fresh water. The pump near the house was out of order, so he proceeded to the windmill pump.
But when he threw the windmill into gear there was no wind. He placed the pail under the spout of the pump, climbed aloft 40 feet to the top of the windmill, turned the windmill round and round by the blades until the pail was filled. And all the while he was looking down, watching the pail, from his dizzy height.

He worked outside on "the place," trimming trees and the hedge last fall until the snow began to fly. During the winter he painted and grained the house within, and tinted the walls with a paint brush.

The winter being unusually severe, he has felt a few aches and had depressed spells which he never before experienced, and so he has taken up music.

Music Has Helped Him.
"The music has been a great lift to me," he told The Advertiser yesterday.
"I was glad as soon as I found there was a means whereby I could learn, and this more than makes up the value of the organ to me."

On account of his not being out all winter to exercise his legs, the organ tries him, he stated, and watching the figures on the music rack and at his fingers alternately, he has been feeling badly at times," he added. "I don't know that I am quite the same man that I was, but the Lord has not despised me. He seems to keep me up. He will not throw me over. I hope to live to be a hundred. I think I had better," he laughed, "because there are so many people waiting for it."

Here the son explained: "He never had a headache or was sick in his life, and if he feels a little bad it affects him. He fancies it is worse than it is."

"Would you like to hear me sing?" volunteered the patriarch, and upon being so assured, he announced a favorite "love song" and sang through seven or eight lengthy stanzas of "Betsey Baker."

"I have strange thoughts sometimes about singing these songs, whether the Lord likes that kind. I have always tried to be good and to do some good to someone every day I could."

Came to Canada When 27.
Mr. Collins then told of his migration to Canada from Kent County, England, when he was 27 years of age, and of the courtship days which followed.

He showed an immense Bible which he had brought with him, a complete volume but in loose leaflets then.
This he bound firmly and neatly and made a hinged cover of carved walnut to increase it. All through the Book he has made notes during his numerous perusals.

He has entered statistics about himself and his family. There were twelve children, ten of whom are still living.

"He has read that Bible through several times, and once on his knees," said Mrs.
David Collins, who regards the old gentleman with reverence.

Mr. Collins was a carpenter by trade, and followed this calling for a number of

THOMAS COLLINS.

years, but when children began to arrive he decided he must have a home of his own. He bought the 50-acre farm on which he now lives and himself built the brick homestead and barns. He did the stone work, brick work and carpentry work inside and out. The material he cut from his farm and turned the staircase rail himself on a hand lathe, from selected cherrywood cut on the farm.

Is Systematic.
He always kept a careful accounting of what he earned and spent, and can tell almost to a cent what his assets are today.

"I know what everything has cost me,
of the trouble I've had and of how much I've been robbed," he declared. "But I have had good crops; the Lord was good.
I know how much my children cost me, too," he laughed; "yes, every one of them."

He writes in a plain, steady hand, and dictates The Advertiser every day.
"I have taken some interest in politics and have been a life-long Reformer," he announced proudly.

WHY HAS SIR MELVIN DESERTED THE PARTY?

Question Asked in Upper House
by Senator Cloran—Not Enough Rebates.

Ottawa, April 3.—The Senate today passed the interim supply bill from the Commons and arranged for a joint hearing of evidence on the consolidated railway bill with the Commons. The Upper House then adjourned over Easter.

Before the orders of the day were called Senator Cloran asked the following question, which, however, was unanswered:

"Has the Government any intimation that a stalwart Liberal of this House has transferred his allegiance from the Liberal to the Government ranks?
His name is Sir Lyman Melvin Jones, president of the Massey-Harris Company. Is it because the rebates of his company, of $100,000 last year, are not enough, and he is trying to get more?"

cut a gash over his right eye.

MAY PUT A CHECK ON GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC

Borden Refers Requests From Quebec Board of Trade to Legal Authorities.

[Canadian Press.]
Quebec, April 3.—Three important questions affecting the operation of the Transcontinental Railway, the establishment of a shipbuilding plant at Levis and the abolition of the Quebec Corporation of Pilots were taken up today at the meeting of the Quebec Board of Trade.

Regarding the first matter letters were read from Premier Borden and L. E.
Pelletier in answer to suggestions recently made by the board. The suggestions were as follows:

1. That the Government should not hand over any portion of the Transcontinental to the Grand Trunk Pacific Company before the whole line is completed, the object of this recommendation being to insure that traffic should not be diverted out of Canadian channels.

2. That a clause should be inserted in the lease fixing a maximum rate at which wheat should be carried from western points to Quebec, St. John and Halifax.

Want Security to Cover Contract.

3. That the Grand Trunk Pacific should give undoubted security that the Government should be faithfully carried out. Clause 42 provides that the export traffic of this railway, when not specifically routed otherwise by the shipper, shall be carried to Canadian ocean ports, and that the through rate on freight to "points of destination" shall at no time be greater via Canadian ports than via United States ports. Clause 45 obliges the company to provide at Canadian ocean ports vessels sufficient in tonnage and in number of sailings to take care of and transport "all its traffic" both inward and outward, so that no diversion of traffic from Canadian ports can be made on the plea that ocean tonnage is insufficient at Canadian ports.

Looking Up Legal Right.
Mr. Borden in reply says that the suggestions have been referred to the department of railways and canals and also to the department of justice for a decision as to the legal right of the Government to insert stipulations in the contract.

During the meeting reference was made to negotiations which are being carried on between the Levis Board of Trade and Sir Percy Grouard, director of the firm of Armstrong & Whitworth, relative to the establishment of a branch of that firm across the river in connection with the huge graving dock on which Messrs. M. P. and J. S. Davis will commence work this spring. The Government urging it to concentrate its shipbuilding energies at Levis on the ground that a large staff of shipwrights and steel workers should always be available for the repair of large vessels for which the dock is intended.

Toronto, April 3.—Mrs. Margaret Durrell, 52 St. George street, Toronto, shot herself through the heart in her home this evening. Her dead body was found on her bed by a sister-in-law, Mrs.
Wainwright, 264 St. Patrick street. The deceased was 53 years of age. Her husband died last month and she had been melancholy ever since.

A peculiar feature of the suicide was a tentative arrangement made by Mrs.
Durrell with the undertaker who had buried her husband, and also with the cemetery officials, as she wished to be laid beside Mr. Durrell. In arranging for her burial, she did not intimate that she contemplated ending her life. It is understood that her wishes will be carried out.

GODERICH REFUSES TO PAY EXPENSES

Asks Government to Provide Water and Light For Camps.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Goderich, April 3.—At a special meeting of the council tonight a letter was read from Col. Hodgins, D.O.
C., London, asking that the expenses of water and light for the military camp be borne by Goderich.

The council passed a resolution flatly refusing to pay the costs on the ground that it was the Government's duty to pay its own way.

The expense, which amounts to $1-400, has been borne for two years by Goderich council, and this year it is claimed the town is not in a position to stand the outlay.

The Government will be requested to pay the amount, and if it will not Goderich will likely lose the camp.

GREEKS ATTACK ALBANIANS

Town Reported in Flames and Many Persons Killed.

Vienna, April 3.—A report was received here today from Avlona, Albania, that Greek irregular forces were fiercely attacking Koritsa and other towns on the Argyro-Castro and Koritsa line. Koritsa was reported to be in flames, and many persons were said to have been killed.

A later dispatch received here reports that the Albanians were reinforced and repulsed the attack of the Greeks on Koritsa.

THE EXCHANGES.

Canada Chief Borrower With £24,448,000.

New York, April 4.—A cable to the Tribune from London says: The Statist says that never before have there been so many applications for British capital and never so great a response. In the first quarter of 1914, new issues totalled £108,605,000, compared with £75,075,000 in 1913, while the previous high record was the June quarter in 1910, with £83,412,000. The market shows no sign of being overhardened. One explanation is that there were many short term loans last year, and many of the new issues are for the purpose of liquidating and floating debts.

Reports are current that the insurgents are in the pay of the Greek authorities.

Disgust—May Resign—Dr.
McQueen Strengthened.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Toronto, April 4.—Dr. McQueen is the hero of the hour in the Legislature. He has been congratulated on every hand by Conservatives as well as Liberals. The attack made on him by Captain Machin of Kenora, although undoubtedly inspired and engineered by the Government, has strengthened Dr. McQueen's position as one of the most popular, valuable and straightforward members of the Legislature.

Anyone who watches the House closely knows that many of the rank and file of the Conservative party are incensed at the Government's attitude towards the temperance question. This attitude is not new, but it has been a constant refrain since the Government's surface has been exposed by the temperance revolt.

The Government's alliance with the liquor interests is becoming more apparent every day. This dramatic McQueen incident, showing still more letters turned over by hotel-keepers to the Government, has emphasized the Government's liquor alliance.

Whether it is because of lack of leadership or not, the Government has made more blunders in the six weeks of this session than most men make in six years. The attack on Dr. McQueen was meant to embarrass the Liberal party on the Temperance question, has hit the Government instead.

A Conservative member from the North in the lobby of the House after the Machin-McQueen incident, frankly expressed his disgust. "I am about through with politics," he said, "if that is the kind of politics the members of the Government are trying to play. The mud they tried to throw has dirtied themselves, and they deserve all they get."

WAS FAMOUS HORSE
AND SHEEP BREEDERThomas A. Cox, of Brant, Dies
Suddenly From Heart Attack.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
Brantford, April 4.—Death came with startling suddenness yesterday afternoon to Thomas A. Cox, a former resident of Hamilton, but for some time past a resident of Brant County and one of the best known horse and sheep breeders in Canada. On Wednesday last Mr. Cox suffered from an attack of heart failure, but rallied and was able to be about again. Yesterday afternoon he suffered from a second attack and this time it proved fatal before medical aid could be summoned.

Mr. Cox had an international reputation as a breeder of horses, particularly hackneys and clydesdales, and also as an exhibitor and judge. He had also exhibited with success in New York and Chicago and more than once had carried off honors in the big horse show held annually in London, England.

WABASH MUST OBEY LAW
New York, April 3.—The State supreme court announced its decision today in the suit brought by James Pollitz in the lower courts in 1906 concerning the legality of a plan proposed by the board of directors of the Wabash Railroad Company for the exchange of debenture mortgage bonds for new issues of preferred stock, common stock, and refunding bonds. Justice Donnelly directed the company to repay Pollitz the amount of money invested by him in the old bonds, with interest from the date of investment in 1906, and enjoined it from further exchanging issues in a manner adjudged illegal. The original amount invested by Pollitz was $21,000.

RECIPROCITY OF LICENSE
[Special to The Advertiser.]
Windsor, April 3.—Hon. W. J. Hanna is in communication with the American consul at Sarnia, trying to arrange for reciprocity between Ontario and Michigan in regard to auto licenses for the coming year. It is estimated that at least 50,000 owners were compelled to take out Michigan licenses while equally as many Ontario licenses were secured by Americans. It is not only the cost, but the inconvenience that the motorists complain of.

APPOINTED AND SUSPENDED.
Port Hope, April 3.—Constable Allan C. Royce, just after being appointed chief of police of Port Hope, was suspended from office by Mayor Bush for thirty days. The appointment was made on a close vote. Royce has been acting chief since the dismissal of the former chief by the council last year. Some charges were recently made against Royce and an investigation of them by the police committee did not satisfy the mayor and some members of the council. The mayor says he will refer the charges to the county judge for an investigation.

YOUTHFUL MONTREAL BURGLARS.
Montreal, April 3.—Five boys, aged from 12 to 14 years, of respectable families, confessed before the juvenile court today to a series of exploits that took them as far as Ottawa. of Board.

"Resolved that the board of public utilities for the city of London places on record its sincere and profound regret at the sudden and untimely death of Mr. John Marr, an ex-member of this board.

"The board recognizes the sterling integrity of the deceased, his genial and courteous bearing to his fellow citizens, and his untiring efforts to advance the interests of the city when opportunity offered.

"His services as a member of this board were greatly appreciated, and the unbounded sympathy of its members is extended to the bereaved family."

An engrossed copy of the above resolution has been sent to the family of the late John Marr, the prominent wholesaler who died on Wednesday night. Mr. Marr was a former member of the public utilities commission, or, as it was known during his term of service, the water commission, and his sudden demise was referred to with most sincere expressions of regret at yesterday's meeting of the board.

Members of the commission attended the funeral this afternoon in a body.

When Anglophobe Senator Lodge declares against tolls exemption as a violation of treaty, the American jingoism must have morally a bad case. And yet it is pathetic to find so sturdy a champion of the right as the New York World forced to appeal to the lower motives of self-interest. It urges that exemption votes a million a year into the pockets of a special interest, contrary to Democratic principle, and that, to help a monopoly, "95,000,000 Americans are made to pay the bill in money and to pay the bill in international enmity." But it is to the honor of this great American newspaper that it rests its argument primarily and with splendid force upon the principles of national rectitude.

More than six months ago The Advertiser suggested that more lives could be saved by the stationing of a life-saving crew at Niagara Falls than are saved along the ocean coasts by all of the corps in the employ of the United States Government. The frequent loss of life at the cataract through lack of proper facilities for the effecting of rescues no doubt brought the same thought to many minds. It is gratifying to learn that a rescue station has been established on Goat Island. Persons carried down the river will have a chance of escape from that awful plunge into eternity, and many a dependent one may be detained by the officials and prevented from throwing his life away. Any work that saves life is good work.

THE LAST OF THAT REPORT.

THE debate on the notorious trans-continental report has come to an end. It commenced with a brilliant speech from Mr. Graham. It closes on the Liberal side with a burst of illuminating eloquence from Sir Wilfrid Laurier. When the garbled synopsis was first sent out through the Conservative press the question in the minds of most people was: What defence can the Government make? So far as the Liberals are concerned their defence soon became an attack. And an attack it has been all along the line.

The commissioners have been the subjects of attack. Not as to their ability, but as to their character. They have been cited to appear before the public without disguise. The one a bitter partisan, and a strong opponent of the Transcontinental Railway, the other an employee of a rival road, temporarily in the service of the Government at the highest salary Canada has ever paid. They have been attacked for the way they carried on their investigation, holding their sessions behind closed doors, confining themselves to the time of the late government, and making no inquiries into the conduct of the present administration, though the terms of their appointment covered the latter period as well as the former. It has been shown that they presented false statements, and gave a garbled account of facts, that in their conclusions they have disregarded the opinions of the best legal and railway experts; and they have overlooked the well-considered policy approved by parliament and people, that they have accused the former government of business methods which, if bad, have been imitated by the present authorities, that in their report "from every syllable partisanship oozes out in distortion and misrepresentation."

The present Government has been attacked with vigor. Its animus object in appointing a commission of partisans for the sole purpose of proving wrong-doing on the part of its predecessors was self-evident. But most clearly has been shown another underlying motive—the desire to injure the Transcontinental, and to justify themselves in completing it as an inferior line, at a serious disadvantage when compared with rival railways. And they have been attacked for their possibly unintentional blow to the credit and good name of the Dominion. That Mr. Borden and his colleagues should have been anxious to injure their predecessors was perfectly excusable. But when they undertake to damage what should be one of Canada's greatest assets, and cast reproach on their country besides, that is unpardonable.

So far as the defence of the Liberal Government was concerned, the attack on Mr. Borden and his commission served the purpose amply. Sir Wilfrid for himself and his associates is prepared to take all the responsibility for the course pursued in constructing a railway that should have no superior on this continent. The Liberals have faith in Canada, and are not ashamed of any effort to have our public works worthy of Canada's future. And they can confidently appeal from the judgment of prejudiced partisans of the present to the common sense of the people both now and hereafter.

GET DOWN TO CASES.

THE suggestion of Mayor Graham that it may be necessary to stop the operation of streets cars in London if the company does not adopt the new schedule prepared by the city is silly.

By the same logic if the city came into dispute with the telephone company, he would no doubt advise that the telephone service be cancelled. The telephone company might be struck a severe blow, but the business interests of London would suffer to a far vaster extent. The same would be true of the suspension of the street railway service. The thousands of men who use the cars would be inconvenienced to a degree that would offset the lesson taught the company, even if the lesson were deserved.

Too much talk for the sake of talking is the case in connection with street railway conditions in London. Some other or other has been threatening to do something to the street car company ever since the operation of trolleys began. City engineers have in their turn promised drastic action. Checkers have been placed on the street corners to time the cars. New schedules have been prepared and enforced. The franchise has been threatened. And the whole method of attempting improvement has been nonsensical so far as results were concerned.

The street railway is not a perfect system. There is need for improvement in its services. But there are some extraneous causes for delays and disrupted schedules. The daily blockades at railway crossings are the principal barrier to good service. But no one has taken any action to co-operate with the company and remove this difficulty. To make any move for mutual benefit would take away the opportunity to attack a public service corporation, and appeal to a certain ignorant class in the community that thinks its legislators should be first of all loud-mouthed. So long as the city permits conditions to exist over which the street railway has no control, and which prevents it from maintaining a service, no matter how much equipment it might have, the company can justly place the blame with the city, and if it is seeking to withhold im-

Competition.

The Ams, the Nats and the Feds are ransacking their heads. To interest the baseball fan, and get all of his trade they can. We may expect the rival camps to offer him some trading stamps or car fare for his patronage. It is the rage. To bid for trade. They may put up free lemonade, free ice cream cones and peanuts, too. Ever they are through. Yes, they even may set forth free pop. Before they stop. If competition grows more keen, I ween. They may even offer well to pay the fans to come and see them play. The war is on in earnest and the baseball bugs think it is grand. The ultimate consumer of baseball is offered all inducements for his patronage. A golden age. His days of grovelling are past. He's come into his own at last.

Uncle Abner.

It is some question whether the gang down to the grocery store will get the Mexican situation straightened out in time to get busy and do their spring plowing. In just a short time we will have to change our brand of unhappiness. Instead of being froze to death, people will be suffering from heat prostrations. To him that hath shall be given, but, by gravity, I'd rather have my digestion than Rockefeller's oil company. So long as a fool ain't got enough sense to know he is a fool, there ain't much harm done. It is durned mean of a fellow never to have a cold, for it deprives all of his friends of the pleasure of recommending forty different cures for it.

Improvements, it is given a very good excuse by the superficial and hypocritical attitude of such men as the mayor and those others who are supposed to advance the city and attend to its problems.

The present administration has certainly done nothing remarkable but make threats so far this year. It has failed to commend itself to public approval by taking up the transportation difficulty clause by clause, and adopting a sane policy, instead of one of corporation bailing. The intelligent element in the community is not blind to the "four-flushing" attitude of the mayor. He talks of cancelling the franchise. If he were foolish enough to have such a decision carried into effect he would completely cripple the city's transportation facilities and would make himself most unpopular with those who are dependent on the car service.

FINAL EXAMINATIONS.

AT this time of the year cranks begin to condemn school and college final examinations. If they have ever left off grumbling. An American writer tells us that such examinations are an insult to the teacher who has had charge of the class examined. Should not he or she know who are fit to pass?

The school teacher has burdens enough to bear already without being saddled with the whole responsibility for promotions. Then again, how can the teacher of a class of 40 or 50 be sure, even after term tests, in all cases? Pupils may have been absent from this or that test, or uneven, or hovering near the plucking point. Some pupils do fairly well on a term's work piece by piece, but when it comes to grasping the whole, they are found to be unretentive as an hour-glass. The final examination gets them. Sometimes they lack "nerve," which is no recommendation.

Of course, examinations are often unscientific or misconducted. But that is no argument against an examination as such. A final should tend to be a better test than the monthly papers, for it ought to be more general in character, estimating more the general powers and acquisitions of mind and less the detail information derived from the daily round.

 There's a laughter in the valleys and a sunshine on the hills
 Where the dreaming wanderers wanders by the borders of her rills
 And along the violet spherys
 That come up from vales of May

 Of the green lands far away.

I love it most in winter, when the snow and sleet are here,

 When I hear the phantoms say
 That we'll soon be picking clover

NEW GAME FOR HUNTERS.

[Youth's Companion.]
 Clay-bird golf is a new sort of game that will appeal to the business man who wants exercise and likes to shoot, and to the sportsman who loves the slaughter of birds repugnant. The game is played on a stretch of rough land, similar in extent and irregularity to the average golf course; but instead of holes and traps concealed at varying intervals along the course. As the gunners tramp over the ground clay birds of different shapes and sizes are released from the traps, so that the sportsman gets the same kind of unexpected shots that live wild birds would offer in their natural haunts. Clay-bird golf violates no game law, sheds no blood, causes no suffering, and yet there are healthy, vigorous men who enjoy it.

 Ordinarily, long speeches in Parliament are ineffective, because they are essentially and incurably tedious, but the seven-hour speech delivered by the Hon. As ex-minister of railways he was already well acquainted with his subject, and he greatly improved and systematized his knowledge of it by the appearance of the printed re-

No Man Can Justify Higher Tire Prices

Higher Than Goodyear No-Rim-Cut Tires

Many other Canada-made tires are offered from one-eighth to one-third higher than Goodyears.

More Can't Be Given

We say to you—after 14 years of trying—that more of value can't be given than we give in No-Rim-Cut tires.

And no other tire costs so much to make, unless that cost is due to wasteful methods or to smaller output.

We give you here, in a costly way, the one feasible tire that can't rim-cut.

We give you the "On-Air Cure"—to minimize blow-outs.

We have reduced by 60 per cent the risk of loose treads.

And in All-Weather treads we give you an anti-skid with which nothing of the kind compares. Yet for these you actually pay less than for other Canada-made anti-skid tires.

And not another tire on the market offers you any one of these costly features.

port of the inquisitorial commissioners and the delivery of the speech.

Mr. Graham was intensely analytical in his treatment of his theme. He tore the complacency to tatters and hung the fragments up to ridicule in dozens of ways. His speech, as reported in extenso in the official debates, should be republished and scattered everywhere to educate public opinion. It is a storehouse of facts, and a perfect chain of reasoning.

Special Notice

Through some misunderstanding it has been reported that the Lake Huron Hotel at Sarnia has changed ownership. This is not correct. We want to announce that the hotel will be opened for guests on June 20th under the same management and ownership. From the number of reservations already made, this promises to be a very busy season for this popular resort, and we would advise an early application for rooms. J. O. S. A. THE HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, APRIL 6, 1914.

In the planet's way
Find good luck today.

Many good influences prevail today. Astrologers find that the Sun, Mars and Jupiter are friendly and they advise activity in all matters of business.

Jupiter changes in aspect as the day advances, so that financiers and merchants who begin important transactions in the morning may discover that their least promising ventures are successful.

Since Jupiter reigns as the star which presages good luck in commerce and industry, the time is particularly favorable, the seers announce, for initiative in new enterprises and the establishment of new places of business.

The Sun promises fair return for efforts to interest persons of prominence in investments or schemes that involve financial aid or business influence. There is a fortunate sign for solicitors and canvassers.

The good aspects of Mars tend to awaken ambition and energy. The conditions are said to be favorable for muscular development and athletic exercise.

It is an auspicious time for dealings with contractors, engineers, ironworkers, carpenters, lumbermen and machinists. Building is subject to lucky guidance from the stars.

Those who handle animals, whether in teaching, transporting or buying them, are fortunate under this configuration, which is supposed to bring success to equestrians.

Warning is given of increase of pulmonary troubles this month.

It is predicted that a great improvement in business will be experienced next month by publishers. A boom in periodicals and books is indicated. This is said to be one sign of the reaction against dancing and moving picture shows.

Theaters are still controlled by sinister influences. The stars foreshadow many changes in management east and west.

Persons whose birthdate it is are warned against the reckless use of money. They have the prognostication of many benefits from friends' aid with success in business if they are careful in financial matters. Farmers, builders and sailors should benefit especially. Girls will have advantageous offers of marriage.

Children born on this day have kindly stars to guide them. They will probably be exceedingly generous and will meet with great success. There is a happy augury for marriage.

LOCAL COUNCIL.

Interesting accounts of the executive meeting of the National Council of Women, held in Ottawa a few weeks ago, were given yesterday at a meeting of the local council by Mrs. R. M. Graham who represented the local organization at the executive. The annual meeting of the national council will convene in Toronto this year, from October 24 to 30, it being the 21st birthday of both the dominion and Toronto councils. At the executive meeting it was unanimously decided to invite Lady Aberdeen to be present on that occasion.

Mrs. Graham also reported that the national executive had decided to change the official organ from "The Canadian" to the "Woman's Century." This will doubtless take effect shortly. Another interesting report was that of the Social Service Congress, held in Ottawa at the same time as the National Council Executive, and to which Mrs. Graham was also the representative from the local council.

Night Police Matron.

Among various matters of business discussed at yesterday's meeting a recommendation was passed to the effect that a police matron be engaged to be at the police station at night. It was decided to postpone the annual meeting of the local council until June, when Mrs. Boomer would have returned to London. Mrs. T. G. Duncan was appointed to act as the council's representative on the social service committee. In the absence of Mrs. Boomer, Mrs. Barker occupied the chair, and among those present were Mesdames Tilley, Graham, Edwards, Duncan, Graham, Marshall, S. F. Lawrence, Callard, Miss MacKinnon and Miss M. A. Moore.

LADIES' SANATORIUM AID.

It is not much more than a year ago that the Women's Sanatorium Aid Society, realizing the prevalence of tubercular symptoms amongst school children, conceived the idea of a sanatorium at the Byron Sanatorium—an institution where children affected with the disease might receive education and treatment at the same time. They undertook to raise $10,000 in one year towards the erection of the sanatorium, and marvelous success has crowned their efforts in every undertaking. Previous to the bazaar held in the Masonic Temple yesterday afternoon and night, some $7,000 of the fund had been obtained, and it is proposed to open the sanatorium during this month. Free baths for the tubercular children of the poor will be maintained. The need for the sanatorium can quickly be realized when it is stated that there is already a waiting list of 28 children, and it is estimated that all the accommodation will be taken up when the sanatorium is ready for occupancy.

Cynthia Grey's Mail-Box

[Correspondents are requested to make their inquiries as brief as possible, and to write on one side of the paper only. It is impossible to give replies within a stated time, as all letters have to be answered in turn. No letters can be answered privately.]

Wants to Correspond.

Dear Miss Grey.—As I am a constant reader of The Morning Advertiser I would ask you kindly to answer the following question for me. I am a young man of nineteen years of age, and wish to correspond with a lady friend. I have sent a card to her and got an answer back. Now I want to know how to commence the letter, should I commence by writing: Dear Friend, or Dear Casey. If you will answer this you will oblige as I am anxious to write to her. Yours truly, E.H.L.

Ans.—I would suggest you start the first letter with "Dear Friend," and then as the correspondence progresses, change to "Dear Casey."

For Dry Shampoo.

Dear Miss Grey.—A lady who is an invalid has very long thick hair. It is dangerous for her to wash it in cold water as she might take cold. Would you please tell me what a "dry shampoo" is and how to use it? I think it would be a good way to keep her hair clean. Thanking you, MARIE.

Ans.—Many use talcum powder mixed with a very little powdered orris root for a dry shampoo. It cleans the hair and scalp but requires a deal of patience to brush entirely out. Part the hair and sprinkle the powder on the scalp; after half an hour or so commence to brush.

PREPARE FOR MOVING DAY

Do not begin to tear up a month before moving day, not yet leave it until the last day. Neither way is right nor comfortable.

Weed out and dispose of unnecessary possessions that someone else may be glad to make use of. Pack unused clothing into boxes and mark the contents on each box. Books, pictures and ornaments are best packed in rather small boxes that are easy to handle. Have carpets, rugs or matting cleaned, rolled and tied.

For packing kitchen utensils, jars of fruit, etc., tubs are good, for they have handles. Be careful not to have any-

Reads Column First.

Dear Miss Grey.—The first thing I do when picking up the paper is to go to what you have to say. I often think of the patience you must have and also the "laughs" in between. Now this is my first letter to you and I hope sometime to see it in print. Could you please tell me how to clean a rice straw hat? I have a Chinese scarf? And Miss Grey do you know of a cement that will serve the purpose of putting together a marble image, or better still, maybe you could say where I could purchase same. Thanking you in advance. Sincerely yours, MINTO.

Ans.—Most of the drug stores sell preparations for cleaning straw hats of any kind. If you desire a home treatment, however, first free the hat from dust, then put a small quantity of oxalic acid into a basin; dilute with hot water, and with a small hand brush go over the hat quickly. Dry before a brisk fire.

2. For the scarf, buy a sealer full of gasoline, put the scarf in and let it remain for two or three hours; remove and dry the scarf between towels.

3. I think this cement would prove of service to you: Mix plaster of paris into a strong solution of gum arabic until it is the right consistency; apply with a brush to the fractured edges and let dry for three days. This cement is very white and strong. The unbeaten white of egg mixed with plaster of paris is another good cement.

Barrels for China. Barrels are best for the fine china and glassware. When packing breakables remember that every article must be prepared so that none of its surface is left exposed to pressure without support, so stuff all hollow articles as full as possible, surround all handles, stems, etc., by padding so thick that the article becomes, as nearly as one can make it, a solid ball.

Cups and glasses should not be slipped inside each other unless well covered with padding. Plates and saucers may be made in a pile with stuffing between them and the whole made solid by bands of muslin wound round them. Excelsior and newspapers are good packing material, but often kitchen towels, holders, underwear, etc., may be used to steady things and get themselves transported at the same time.

Two days before moving day will suffice for the general breaking up in an ordinary household and will give ample time to plan how it should be done with a view to condensing and safe packing.

The kitchen and dining room necessities should be so packed that one can lay hands on them on arrival at the new place; also sheets, pillows, blankets, etc., for the first night's rest. It is in the final packing that the housewife realizes the benefit of the plan of packing leisurely the articles not in general use.

CAROLINE COE'S TESTED RECIPES

Escalloped Fish

One pound of halibut.
One pint of stale bread crumbs.
One cupful of white sauce.
Cook the halibut in hot water for a few seconds; drain and pick into small pieces. Place a layer of crumbs in a buttered baking dish; then a layer of fish over which sprinkle a little parsley if at hand. Then add a layer of white sauce and more crumbs and fish until all ingredients are used. Have the top layer of crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven until puffy, and a rich brown on top. Serve immediately. For the white sauce place a tablespoonful of butter in a fryer and when melted stir in one level tablespoonful of butter, warm smooth and one generous cupful hot milk, stirring until smooth and creamy. Season with salt and pepper.

Potato Rusk

One cupful hot mashed potato.
One cupful milk.
Four tablespoonfuls flour.
Quarter cupful sugar.
One compressed yeast cake.
Half cupful lukewarm water.
One tablespoonful salt.
One large tablespoonful shortening.
Two eggs.
Half cupful currants.
Soften yeast in the warm water and pour into deep bowl; add sugar, potato, salt, milk and flour, then beat into a smooth batter; cover and let rise until foamy; add the beaten eggs, salt, melted shortening after it has become cool; then the currants and enough more flour to make a soft dough easily molded until velvety; replace in the buttered bowl, cover and let stand in warm place to rise. Tear off bits and mold into long biscuits, place side by side in greased pan; let rise again and bake about twenty minutes in hot oven.

If your kitchen is small and crowded take out the kitchen table and have a hinged shelf made. A shelf answers every purpose of a table and can be put down out of the way when not in use.

To flower pansies in the house sow the seed in shallow boxes of sandy soil. When they are rooted, transplant them in window boxes or separate pots. Keep them quite warm, give them abundance of water and a great deal of sun.

To test silk, fray out the threads and break them. If they snap easily, it is not good. The warp thread running lengthwise should be of equal strength with the wool thread running crosswise.

Songs We Used to Whistle and Sing

The Little Red Caboose Behind the Train.

Alto—Little Old Log Cabin in the Lane.

I am a jolly railroad boy, and braking is my trade.

I work upon the train both night and day.

Turning switches, making fly stops as along the line I go.

And to see that all the train is on the way.

O, we are always ready when we are called to go.

Whether in the sunshine or the rain; And a jolly crew you'll always find, if you will come and see.

In that little red caboose behind the train.

CHORUS—

Here is luck to all the boys that ride upon the cars.

May true happiness with them always remain.

May the angels all watch over them when they lie down to rest.

In that little red caboose behind the train.

We hang a red light on each side and another on behind.

As the day goes by and night comes stealing on.

And the boy who rides ahead, you bet he keeps it on his mind.

To see that all the train is coming on. And when we're near a station we are startled from our thoughts.

By the sounding of the whistle's shrieking scream.

As we climb out on the hurricane deck while the cove winds up the wheel.

In that little red caboose behind the train.

Now this little car I speak of is more precious than all the other cars upon the line.

And the reason why I say so is because it is our home.

And we always keep it looking very fine.

Although we have no fashion plates or velvet cushioned seats.

Everything within looks neat and clean; And many a good true heart there beats beneath the rusty roof.

In that little red caboose behind the train.

There are to be eleven woman representatives on the borough council at Christmas.

BOB" EMSLIE ENTERS UPON HIS TWENTY-THIRD SEASON AS MAJOR LEAGUE UMPIRE

Famous St. Thomas Skip and National League Arbiter Is Handling Brooklyn-New York Series—Many Critics Think He Is Best Umpire in Big Leagues.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

St. Thomas, April 3.—"Bob" Emshie, the well-known National League baseball umpire, has gone to Brooklyn, where he is working the "pre" season exhibition games between the Trolley Dodgers and "Frank Chance's" New York Americans. Emshie is entering upon his twenty-third year as a National League umpire, and is the dean of professional baseball umpires. He has been in the game constantly since he was 19 years of age, playing on the old Guelph Maple Leafs and the St. Thomas Athletics. He afterwards pitched for the Toronto club in the old International, and his last engagement was with the old Baltimore club when it was in the National circuit. "Bob" umpired a few years in the International prior to going into the major league. Two years ago ex-President Lynch thought his best days as an umpire had passed, and placed him on the staff as relief umpire, but last season he worked as a regular again, and his work in handling the Cleveland-Pittsburgh post series, with Billy Evans, brought forth much favorable comment from the sporting writers of the press in those cities, some going so far as to state that he was still the best umpire in the business. Emshie at one time also played with the old London Tecumseh, when Fred Goldsmith was a member of that organization. "Bob" is one of the best known men in Canada and the United States, being an ardent curler, a great lover of the harness horses. He has owned and campaigned some real good ones. However, perhaps next to baseball, he is better known as a great wing shot, having taken part in big trap shooting tournaments all over the country for the last score of years. Three years ago when Bob was entering upon his 20th season as a National League umpire the citizens of St. Thomas gave him a banquet at the Grand Central Hotel and presented him with a handsome diamond ring.

D. L. A. WILL HAVE SIX CLUBS THIS SEASON

Ottawa Has Not Yet Entered, But Intends Doing So.

SHAMROCKS ARE NOT IN IT

Quebec is One of New Clubs Which Have Entered—Meeting Will Be Held April 25

Montreal, April 3.—That there will be six clubs in the Dominion Lacrosse Association this season is now practically assured. Two applications from Ottawa and Quebec will be dealt with at the annual meeting. The Ottawa Club has yet to put it in writing.

President Percy Quinn, who was in Montreal today, stated that he had informed Ottawa that he would not accept a verbal application for a franchise and that they must apply in writing. He also stated that the annual meeting of the "Big Four" would be held in Montreal on Saturday, April 25.

Up to the present there has been no application from Shamrocks and unless they buy the franchise owned by one of the "Big Four" it is not likely that they will be members of the D. L. A.

WADDELL'S GREAT STUNT AT CHATHAM

Fanning of 25 Varsity Players is Still Remembered.

JACK COUNSEL PLAYED

Hamilton Barrister Was Member of Toronto Varsity Club Which Opposed Rube.

[Special to The Advertiser.]
St. Thomas, Ont., April 3.—The demise of the great left-hand twirler, "Rube" Waddell, at San Antonio, Texas, is bringing out in the press some of his wonderful feats during his term with the Philadelphia Athletics and the St. Louis Browns, but the fans closer home, probably will recollect a remarkable performance given by the eccentric player in 1897 when he was a member of the Chatham semi-pro team. "Rube" had been with the Detroit club in the old Western League prior to the formation of the American League, and had some misunderstanding with the management, and pulled up stakes and drifted over to Canada, where he twirled for Chatham that season. The Toronto University Ball Club toured the country that year, with such players as Johnny Counsel, now a well-known barrister in Hamilton, and many other good players. The Rah-Rah boys hit the Maple City for a game on the Queen's Birthday, and had not lost a game up to this time on the trip. The "Rube" that afternoon perhaps made a world's record. Out of the possible 27 men facing him he turned back 25 by striking them out, and the other two were retired on easy outs.

QUEBEC WILL ALSO PUT IN ARTIFICIAL ICE PLANT

Quebec, April 3.—Now that Montreal has taken the initiative in the matter of getting an artificial ice plant for its arena, the management of the Quebec Arena, who promised artificial ice for the local arena just as soon as it was installed in Montreal, will likely decide on putting in the plant during this summer.

PETERBORO HAS BIG ROSTER OF PLAYERS

Manager Blount Will Have Big Bunch to Pick From.

FIVE CATCHERS ON LIST

Several Infielders Will Also Take Part in the Workouts.

Peterboro, April 3.—Manager Curley Blount has about completed his work of getting his team together and has forwarded the following list of players to the local management:
Catchers—E. Chappelaine, New Bedford, Mass.; Mully Miller, Massillon, Ohio; F. Kelly, Erie, Pa.; M. Ryberg, Ridgway, Pa.; E. McClure, Dundard, Pa.
Pitchers—Robert Sterling, Mt. Vernon, N. Y.; Kenneth Tracey, Detroit, Mich.; Knut Belling, Rockford, Ill.; Stanley Cresswell, Peterboro; Louis Schettler, Youngstown, Ohio; Sid Tirrell, Rochester, N. Y.
First Basemen—Ed. Flanagan, Erie, Pa.; Frank Schrage, Bronx, N. Y.
Shortstop—George Miller, Massillon, Ohio; Lawrence Bucklew, Tyrell Hill, Ohio.
Third Basemen—Frank Fox, Portville, Pa.; Charles King, Parkersburg, W. Va.
Outfielders—Curley Blount, Youngstown, Ohio; Paul Dawson, Clarksburg, W. Va.; J. J. Gaffney, Cleveland, Ohio; Charles Naw, Jeannette, Pa.

Outfielder John Bane, of Uniontown, Pa., was signed up some time ago by Manager Blount, acting on advice given by Charles Hickman, the Cleveland scout. Hickman wrote Blount a few days ago and tipped him off that Bane necessitated a little more seasoning, so Curley gave him his release.
Outfielder Naw and Third Baseman King have not been signed as yet, but will be in the course of a few days. Frank Schrage, who is going to try out for second, was on the team last year. He came here with Thompson, but was weak in batting, and as Byrne was coming strong he was let out again. He gave every promise of becoming a nifty ballplayer, and if his work with the stick has improved he should find no difficulty in catching the team.
Several other pitchers from Youngstown will try out with the team, but it is improbable that they will land a berth. If, however, they show the necessary class, Blount will pick them up.

TREMBLAY BEAT BAYLES IN MATCH AT OTTAWA

Won the First Fall in Thirty-Nine Minutes and the Second in Nineteen Minutes.

Ottawa, April 3.—Eugene Tremblay defeated John Bayles in their lightweight wrestling match tonight in two straight falls before one of the biggest crowds of the season. Tremblay won the first fall with a croch and back chancery in 33 minutes, and the second with a leg scissor and head hold in 19 minutes. Tremblay the aggressor for the greater part of the time. Bayles showed a lot of clever wrestling, but the lightweight champion proved too fast and too strong for him. Bayles defeated Tremblay some time ago at New York, tonight's match squares up the account between them.

SLIDING PIT'S NEWEST WRINKLE IN SPRING TRAINING; "IT WILL PREVENT INJURIES AND INCREASE NUMBER OF STOLEN BASES," SAYS FULLERTON

[BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.]

Alexandria, La., April 3.—Cleveland already is setting up the cry of hard luck because Ray Chapman splintered a leg sliding to a base in an exhibition game.

Cleveland, the Phillies, the Cubs and a few others for years have cried hard luck because their players are continually being injured while sliding to bases. They howl about the "luck" of John McGraw and some others in having so few players damaged.

It is not luck at all, but failure to keep abreast of the times in baseball. Wise managers like McGraw, Jennings and now Herzog, believe in prevention.

The most striking feature of the spring training of ball clubs now is the sliding pit, in which young and old players are taught the art of sliding to bases. The managers whose teams are still playing 1894 baseball scoff at the sliding pit and declare that the team will not steal any more bases by practicing sliding in the pit. The managers who do use it believe that it will increase the number of stolen bases, but that is not the basic idea of the pit, which is a mere square hole in the ground filled with sand, with a regulation bag hitched in the centre. The real idea is to teach the players how to slide without injuring themselves.

And it does. If you don't believe it compare the number of players on the Giants, who run the bases more than any other team in the country, and those of Brooklyn, who run as little as possible, who are injured each season.

There is another value to the pit. It is the quickest and best and surest test of the nerve and determination of a player, and nerve and determination count for a great deal.

I told Jennings at Gulfport not to tell me his promising men until I had seen the entire squad go into the sliding pit. When it was over I gave him the names of four new players and told him that they were my pick. He was amazed and said they were his four most promising men—and one of them a pitcher.

To make the test further I took the same position with Charlie Herzog here at Alexandria. I picked five men, merely from the way they hit the dirt, for the determination and grit they revealed. In the Cincinnati test, three of the new men I watched are Herzog's choices for the team. But this test was rather unfair, for all five of the men I picked were college men who had been trained in sliding at their schools. Every one of them slid better, harder and more skillfully than did the old members of the team.

HAMILTON MANAGER HAS NOT SHOWN UP YET

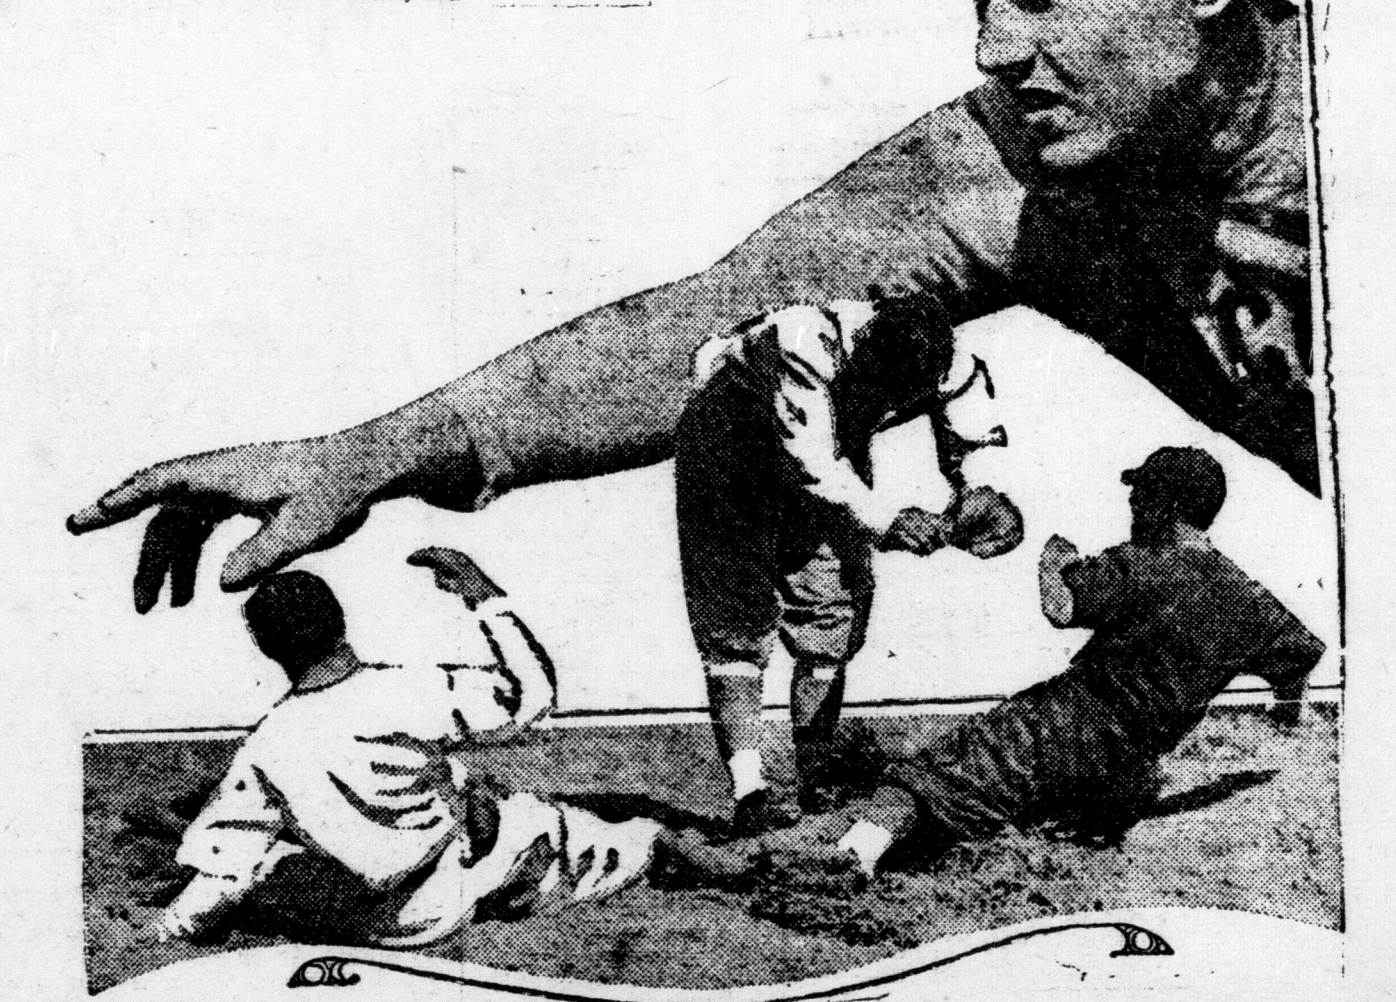

Is Expected Monday, However—Hamilton Fans Are Eagerly Awaiting His Appearance.

Hamilton, April 3.—Manager Bob Yates, of the Hamilton Ball Club, will arrive in the city not later than Monday next. This information was handed out at baseball headquarters this morning as the result of a communication from Yates, in which he stated that his father, who has been seriously ill, had shown much improvement in the last couple of days, and that he would be able to leave for Hamilton by Saturday. The arrival of Yates is eagerly looked for.

Dudley, the Western Canada League player, will be the first of the Hamilton squad to report. Dudley has already left his western home for the east, and expects to arrive in Toronto on Monday. It is his intention to visit a few friends in the Queen City before coming to Hamilton. Dudley is a first baseman, but if Dolan makes good will be given a chance at an outfield position, as he has the reputation of being a real heavy hitter.

GOLE AND CALDWELL PITCH GOOD BALL FOR YANKEES

Chance's Men Win Second Game of Series From Brooklyn by Score of 6 to 1.

Brooklyn, April 3.—The New York American Leaguers evened up the exhibition series with the Brooklyn Nationals today by winning the second game 6 to 1. Both Caldwell and Cole pitched ball of mid-summer brand although a cold wind kept the few hundred spectators shivering throughout. Brooklyn's solitary run was made off Caldwell through an error by Hartzell. Score: R. H. E. New York.....3 0 0 2 0 0 1 0-6 8 2 Brooklyn.....0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0-1 5 0 Buttrick-Caldwell, Cole and Sweeney; Brown, Pfeiffer and Fischer.

KILLIFER CASE IS ON
AT GRAND RAPIDSFirst Real Legal Battle Between Major League and Outlaw Federal Organization.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 4.—Decks were cleared in United States district court here today for the first real legal battle between organized baseball and the Federal League. William F. Killifer, the catcher who began his baseball career with Michigan teams, and who worked his way to the majors, was the storm centre. The question for the court to decide was whether Killifer is the property of the Chicago Federal League team or belongs to the Philadelphia Nationals.

Last season Killifer was with Philadelphia. During the past winter he signed a Federal League contract; then he renounced the independent organization and signed a new contract with the Philadelphia club. As a result the Federal League started in-junction proceedings in United States district court here to restrain Killifer from playing with Philadelphia. The petition also asks that Killifer be declared the property of the Chicago Federals.

The reserve clause, sometimes termed the bulwark of organized baseball, may not be attacked by the attorneys for the Philadelphia club although officials of the Federal League have held the clause to be illegal.

[Canadian Press.]

New York, April 4.—With the professional match between George Covey of England and Jack White of New York today, court tennis will hold away for eight days at the New York Racquet and Tennis Club. The professional match will serve as a curtain raiser for the amateur championship in singles, which starts next Monday and continues throughout the week. Eleven entries have been received for the championship, which will be defended by Jay Gould, the little holder. The only notable absentee is Joshua Crane Jr., who is in England making another effort to capture the British championship. Unusual interest is being shown in the tournament owing to the entry of Kingdon Gould, the brother of the world's champion, who will make his first appearance in a championship tournament.

the results have not proven very encouraging, and it is feared the scheme will fall through for this season at least.

BIGGEST CROP OF NEW BASEBALL STARS EVER GATHERED IN ONE SEASON WILL STEP ON FIELD OPENING DAY

By Hugh S. Fullerton.

Staff Special.

Memphis, Tenn., April 4.—Having given the majority of the teams of the American, National and Federal leagues the once and twice over, it strikes me that this spring has been surprisingly productive for new material in baseball. America has been rated as never before for talent—and a lot of new stars are twinkling right now. I have seen more excellent young players in the present tour of the South than I ever have seen before. By this I means fellows of extraordinary promise; fellows who will, barring accidents, develop into great players. There always are a number good enough to hold their jobs, but what is most needed are men of the type to develop into Wagners and Speakers, Cobbs and Mathewsons in a few years.

The best youngster of the spring, I think, is Karl Von Kolnitz, the young catcher picked up by Charlie Herzog of the Reds. Herzog has sprung a new idea. He has a coking man in Niehoff, if he makes good his training camp symptoms.

Collins, with the Boston Nationals, would be my second choice of young stars. This fellow was a Vanderbilt University man who, according to Dan McGuigan, is the best athlete that ever came out of the South.

Stallings has more good material than any of the others. He has Fred Tyler, a husky, likely-looking catcher, and Dugger from Waco, and James from Seattle, all coking good major league material.

Hughie Jennings seems to have stumbled upon a covey of good youngsters, the trouble being that most of them are men who are best in positions that Jennings does not need to strengthen. Needing a good third baseman he has routed out a squad of fine shortstops and second basemen, Kavanaugh and Fitzsimmons, infielders, are rare discoveries, and Compton is likely to show a lot.

Rickey has dug up half a dozen good men. Enzenroth seems most likely to become really great. Rehg, Scott and Cooney are three unusually promising men with the Boston Red Sox.

Cleveland appears to have been out of luck in the prospecting. The most promising of the new men is a come back—Rip Hagerman.

Pittsburg has dug up a wonderful lot of kids from somewhere—and every where. I like Watson, an outfielder who wears a chew of tobacco like Jimmy Sheekard's, and Jim Kelly, both outfielders.

—and not one dared to risk the test!

Government Objects to Public Ownership—Defeats
Elliott Motion.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Toronto, April 3.—Public ownership of telephones, which was advocated by Hon. Adam Beck a few weeks ago, is not in favor with the Ontario Government at the present time. After a strenuous session all week occupied with committees and night sittings the House discussed the telephone situation leisurely. The motion came up late Thursday night on a resolution proposed by J. C. Elliott (West Middlesex), who emphasized the fact that great benefits would come to the people of the province through a publicly-owned and operated system. It would lessen the cost and enable thousands of families to enjoy the telephone who were now unable to do so through the high tariff charged by private companies.

Hon. I. B. Lucas said Mr. Elliott's motion was too vague in the suggestions and really had no indication as to the lines upon which the Government might proceed. He could not find that this was such an important plank in the Liberal platform, as the entire matter only occupied seven lines in the "Little Red Book," which was used for campaign purposes during the last election. It would probably cost $30,000,000 to buy out the Bell Telephone Company in Ontario, and fight the thing out with the Bell Telephone Company," he asked. It would mean duplication of plant, economic waste and years of bitter fighting.

Government Lacks Ideas.

Mr. Elliott remarked that Mr. Lucas had taunted the Opposition with lack of expression. He thought the Government was troubled with lack of ideas. What kind of a speech would the honorable provincial treasurer have made but for his trip to England, Mr. Elliott wondered.

Amendment Adopted.

Mr. Elliott's motion was negatived on the adoption of an amendment by George Pattison (South Waterloo) approving of the report made by the provincial treasurer in 1913, advising that the experience in Great Britain did not justify the Government in duplicating existing lines and entering into competition with the Bell Telephone Company, a corporation over which the province had no jurisdiction and regretting that when the Bell Telephone Company applied to the Federal Government to increase its capital stock of $30,000,000 no stipulation for interchange of service with other systems was imposed. The House also approved of the policy of the Government in enabling municipalities to establish their own lines and the assistance given to municipalities in meeting the engineering situation.

William McDonald (Center Bruce) introduced a bill to amend the motor vehicles act reducing the speed of cars to four miles an hour when passing vehicles drawn by horses, and to prohibit the use of streamers on cars.

PORT ELGIN.—Stanley Brany, while playing at school was struck in the eye by an arrow shot by another lad. He is now in Toronto receiving treatment.

SIR HUGH DENIES HE OWNS TRAMWAY STOCK

Montreal, April 3.—For months the Montreal Herald before it was merged with the Telegraph, printed this query in connection with its campaign against the street railway system: "Who owns ten thousand shares of tramway stock?"

A "reader" has written to the Montreal Star asking if it is possible that Sir Hugh Graham, its head, owns the stock and Sir Hugh has issued a special denial with the offer to give $300,000 between different hospitals and $300,000 "for a fund to provide a decent living for the blacksmiths of the Montreal press if his denial is found incorrect."

WINDSOR WILL ASK FOR ANOTHER SEAT

Has Now Population to Warrant the Request.

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Windsor, April 3.—At the meeting of the Windsor council tonight a resolution was introduced by Mayor Clay, and unanimously adopted, that the city should present a claim for a separate member of the Provincial Legislature in the next redistribution of seats.

At the last government inquiry into population Windsor had but 19,000 people. The city has grown so fast that now it has the requisite 25,000 necessary to entitle it to a separate seat.

A resolution to compel the street railway company to equip its cars with air brakes also was adopted.

PURSE OF GOLD FOR A FORMER LONDONER

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Sarnia, April 3.—The local officers of the Twenty-Seventh Regiment tonight gave a banquet at the armories in honor of Sergeant Instructor Prowse, of the Royal Canadian Regiment, who has been stationed here for the past six weeks in charge of a school of instruction. The banquet was arranged by Sergeant Batty and was a great success in every way.

After the banquet Major Mullin presented the instructor with a purse of gold from the class, as a token of its appreciation of the interest that he has shown in its work. Mr. Prowse in a few words thanked the class, and stated that he was sorry to leave them.

Those present were Major Gorman, Major Mullin, Captain McVicar, Captain Foster, Captain Robinson, Captain Rougier, Captain Bird, Lieutenants L. Lucas, Geo. Lucas and C. Randolph, also Mr. R. E. LeSueur and Sergeants Smith, Lucas, Kent and Batty.

The instructor leaves on Saturday for St. Thomas where he will again take up his work with the Twenty-Fifth Regiment.

C. was run over by a freight car in Cobalt yards this morning and died shortly after. He leaves a widow and family at Quyon, Que.

New York, April 3.—Officers of the New Haven Railroad system admitted today that negotiations for the sale of the Merchants' and Miners' Transportation Company to the Mercantile Trust Company of Baltimore were under way, but they said that the price of the property and other details had not been settled. Chairman Howard Elliott, of the New Haven, who visited the financial district today, declined to discuss the matter.

Montreal, April 3.—Fifty dollars in bills having been left on the desk of H. M. Necker, city superintendent of motive power, as he believes, for the purpose of corrupting him in connection with the purchase of automobiles, the board of control this morning decided to leave the money where it was found.

Newport News, Va., April 3.—When the steamer Robert M. Thompson was struck amidships early yesterday off the Virginia Capes by the schooner Augusta W. Snow, the impact shifted the coal in the steamer's bunkers and she listed so heavily that the two holes the schooner had ripped in her hull were lifted clear out of the water. But for that, the steamer probably would be at the bottom of the ocean instead of awaiting repairs here today. The Snow was waterlogged and her crew was taken on the Thompson.

Washington, April 3.—W. C. Maxwell, general traffic manager of the Wabash, at the hearing before the interstate commerce commission today on the proposed increase in freight rates, declared that a five per cent. advance would only afford partial relief to the carriers and save the situation for a time. "The situation in Central Freight Association territory," he said, "is bad and growing worse. I am confident that the five per cent. advance would not meet our needs."

Montreal, April 3.—Vice-President Kelley, of the Grand Trunk, this morning considered the plans prepared for the proposed union station in Toronto. He is stated to be forthcoming from either the Grand Trunk or the C. P. R. as to when construction work will begin, but it is understood that the plans now being considered are the last that it will be necessary to produce, and that they may be adopted in the near future.

Washington, April 3.—Constitutionalist outposts within five miles of Tampico are preparing to attack the city. Rear Admiral Fletcher reported today, adding that he had private advices that the Federals were preparing to surrender without resistance.

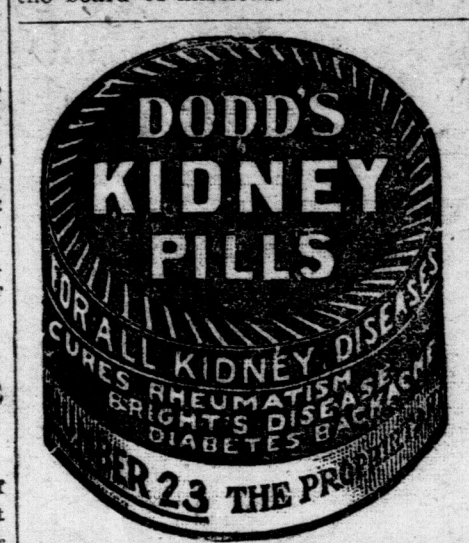

Limoges, France, April 3.—The Limoges chamber of commerce, which hitherto had been actively opposing official French participation in the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco, owing to the undervaluation suits brought by the American Treasury Department, has now changed its mind. It sent today to the Ministry of Commerce and to the Foreign Office an expression of the hope that the French parliament would vote an appropriation for French representation at San Francisco. It requested that the question should not be delayed or obscured by the Limoges controversy.

Washington, April 3.—Claims amounting to $40,000 growing out of seizure by Canada in 1877 of the seines and seine boats of the Gloucester fishing schooners Argonaut and Jonas H. French were heard today by the British American pecuniary claims commission. It was charged that the fishermen were working within the three-mile limit off the coast of Nova Scotia. In defence, it was claimed the boats and seines had drifted beyond the limit laid down by law.

Peking, April 3.—All the missionaries in the vicinity of Shan-Fu, Province of Shen-Si have been ordered to take refuge in Shan-Fu, as the brigands have invaded the nearby plains and now are within twenty miles of the city. A Government force from the city of Shan-Si is proceeding to the affected district to relieve the situation.

Nashville, Tenn., April 3.—Appropriations for 1915 for Southern Methodist mission work in China, Japan, Korea, Brazil, Mexico, Cuba, and Africa, will aggregate $130,000. In addition there will probably be $50,000 for foreign work coming from a special fund being raised now. The sums do not include appropriations from the woman's work department. The announcement was today given out by the board of missions.

Do You Suffer From Nervous Headache?

If so you know the distress of it, the despondency it breeds, the incapacity for any real enjoyment, not to say for the strenuous work of life. Why suffer longer?

Of all the known remedies Dr. Stohr's KEPHALDOL is the safest, the quickest, and in results the most permanent. It cures and leaves no injurious after-effects. Even where the heart is weak KEPHALDOL may be taken with confidence. Can that be said of other remedies? This absence of cardiac depression after the use of Kephaldol explains above all else the enthusiastic endorsement by medical men in all countries.

KEPHALDOL, discovered and introduced by Dr. Stohr of Vienna, not only takes the place of dangerous Headache powders, but is equally valuable in all Nerve Pains, Neuralgia, Neuritis, also in Gout, Rheumatism, etc. KEPHALDOL is the pain-reliever that NEVER FAILS.

Dr. Stohr's KEPHALDOL does not cause intestinal irritation and is far preferable to Quinine, Phenacetin and the like. Many thousands of letters from medical men testify to the immense usefulness of this natural remedy. Pain cannot resist it. Its effect is immediate, safe, positive and permanent.

No one who uses KEPHALDOL fails to praise it.

MISS R. MOSS, Cambria Cottage, Ruan, Eng., says: "I have suffered from headache for many years, and find the KEPHALDOL Tablets give greater relief than any other remedy. I used to be utterly prostrated when I had an attack, but am now able to continue my ordinary duties."

"I find KEPHALDOL Tablets all you say. Each time they have cleared my headache off in a few minutes. I shall always keep them by me." MRS. J. WHITE, 21 Prince of Wales Ave., Reading.

822 Lafontaine St., Maisonneuve
Montreal, Sept. 5th, 1913.

"I have suffered from Neuralgia Headache 8 or 9 years and have spent over seventy dollars for doctors' bills and drugs and got no relief. I saw an advertisement in an English paper for KEPHALDOL, and sent to my sister and had a small bottle sent out, and I am pleased with the results. It is the only remedy that has given me any relief."

MOTHER! IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

If Cross, Feverish, Constipated
Give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! It coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children ailments, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation, poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrup. Ask your druggists for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children, all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

Biological Club Wants Government to Reward Kingsville Man.

HAS PROTECTED GOOSE M. HUESTON GETS DIAMOND

The London Biological Club meeting in the Institute of Public Health last night unanimously passed a resolution asking the fisheries and games department of Ontario to give official recognition and assistance to the work of Jack Miner, of Kingsville, who for years has been providing breeding reserves, feeding ponds and protected territory for the Canada goose. Mr. Miner has spent thousands of dollars in this work and the biological club suggests that the Government rent him a reserve at the nominal rental of $1 a year and appoint him caretaker or warden. W. E. Saunders prepared the resolution, but in his absence at Point Pelee, the resolution was moved by J. F. Calvert and seconded by S. N. Best.

Dr. S. Woolverton, lecturer in geology at the Western University, gave an interesting address on "The Mammoth Cave of Kentucky." The address was illustrated by microscope views, John C. Clarke, of the institute, operating the scope. Dr. H. W. Hill presided. The mammoth cave was discovered in 1838. At one time along with 200 acres of land, it was sold for $40, but now it yields a comfortable income to half a dozen or more descendants of the original proprietor. There are 200 other caves in Edmondston County, Kentucky. Views of the colossal cave were also shown. In the mammoth cave the avenues are said to aggregate 500 miles in length. Hereditary guides, whose vocation is handed down from father to son, show the visitors through the cave. The river, flowing through part of the cave, is traversed by flat boats for a great part of a mile. Each sound on the river produces five echoes.

Uniform Temperature.
The temperature of the interior of the cave is uniform at 54 degrees Fahrenheit all the year around. Air currents rush out of the cave in the summer. Caves breathe out in the summer, said Dr. Woolverton, and breathe in in the winter.

All caves are caused by running water, explained Dr. Woolverton. Water flowing through the crevices in the limestone rocks gradually wears great caverns and hollows. The interior of the cave is rocky and the floor is of extremely variable levels.

Many Visitors.
From 4,000 to 6,000 visitors annually see the sights of the mammoth cave. A smaller number explore the colossal cave, which remains today just as it was first discovered.

Views of the beautiful stalactites and stalagmites which hang from the roof and are found on the floor of the cave were shown and explained.

Every spring numerous inquiries are made by girls seeking some reliable recipe for removing freckles. Last year very favorable reports were received from many who had used mercolized wax during the freckling season. The wax seems to possess unusual properties, which completely absorb the freckles, with no harmful effect. The complexion improves wonderfully, becoming as soft as a rose petal, and as delicately tinted. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist's, spread a thin layer of it over the entire face every night for awhile, washing this off in the morning. For rough, spotted skin, sallowness, blackheads, pimples, and all cutaneous blemishes, this treatment is superior to any other.

Springtime also brings wrinkles to many sensitive skins that are much exposed to winds and changing temperatures. To a half-pint witch hazel add an ounce of powdered saxolite, which quickly dissolves. Rub the face in this; the effect on a wrinkled skin is remarkable.—Adv.

PRIZES AWARDED AT WOMEN'S BAZAAR

Lucky Ticket Holders in Pre-ventorium Contest Selected Last Evening.

Waterloo St. Man Draws Solitaire Ring as First Prize—Fine Program Heard.

If success is to be measured by the size of the audience which attended, then the concert given last evening in Masonic Hall by the Ladies' Sanatorium Aid Society was the most successful that has been given for some time in London. The hall was crowded. Every available seat was utilized, and over one hundred stood at the back of the hall throughout the lengthy program. Measured by the talent that took part in the entertainment the concert scored an artistic triumph, and the bazaar proved one of the biggest social events of the season.

The main interest lay in the announcement of the prize winners in the draw. Thousands of tickets had been sold, and when Mayor Graham called on little Master Greer to draw for the first prize, a solitaire diamond ring, a tense silence held the large audience. M. Hueston, of Waterloo street, held the lucky ticket, while Miss E. Buck, of Dufferin avenue, carried off the three-stone oval prize, diamond ring, offered by the society. The third prize, a beautiful twin diamond ring, went to Mrs. Clark, of Chicago. The other prize winners were: Mrs. S. E. (Eva del Aquia) a number to be remembered. Miss Pauline Fitzgerald revealed a voice of considerable strength and purity in her number, "The Last Rose of Summer" with excellent effect. Edward Webster sang Schumann's "Two Grenadiers" with fine shading and expression. Miss Elsie Green, Miss Emma Kinder, Miss Myrtle Hicks, and Mr. Cecil Carling also offered vocal numbers.

Got the Goat.
Mr. Durst, 12 Ridgway street, carried off the goat with number 97, much to the amusement of his friends.

The honors of the concert belong to Miss Frances Evans, whose pure, clear soprano found in the florid numbers, clear an excellent vehicle. Soft, she chose an excellent vehicle. Soft, she chose an excellent vehicle. Soft, she chose an excellent vehicle.

The double quartette, "Carmens," was offered by Misses Evans, Zavitz, Kinder, Hicks, Fitzgerald, Lashbrook, Layman and Mitton with nice phrasing and full, warm ensemble tone that called for a repetition.

The sextette from "Lucia" (Donizetti) as sung by Misses Winnetta Cox and Lita Layman and Messrs. Sinclair, Albert Webster and Greasman was an ambitious effort and a pleasingly rendered.

Will Attend Convention.

Delegates from Huron College and local chapters in connection with the Anglican churches of London will attend, but have not yet been appointed, according to local officers.

MOTOR CAR SMASHED ON CENTRAL AVENUE

Sideswipe at Switch When Clamped Wheels Slip on Slippery Rails

Overturning the switch on Central avenue, between Waterloo and Colborne streets, at 11:15 last night, Normal car No. 98, westbound, sideswiped Normal car No. 96, eastbound, battering in the vestibules of both cars, denting the latter and throwing it across the rails. Motorman H. F. Humphrey of car No. 98 sustained several scratches on his neck, while members of the crews and several passengers who were aboard at the time were badly shaken up.
Car No. 98, in charge of Motorman Humphrey and Conductor J. Seelhoff, was running behind schedule and the crew it took the east end of the line. As the other Normal car, in charge of Motorman Perry and Conductor Karn, was bowling along at a good rate, also making up the minutes, and a short distance from the west end of the line.
Realizing that the cars would crash, Humphrey put on the brakes. The wheels slid on the slippery rails, with the result that car No. 98 struck the other car a glancing blow. Both cars were able to proceed to the barn under their own power, although the "machines" were badly damaged.

Novel Clothing Demonstration

Messrs. R. H. & J. Dowler, Limited, the progressive clothing firm of Dundas street, this city, put on a novel and unique demonstration of 20th Century brand suits and coats of their new spring stock. Particularly interesting to the young men with a taste for good dressing was the Hawaiian coat shown first in this city by the Dowler firm; also many new "Norfolk" "Strands" and Canadianized English suits, Llama frock suits, and particularly handsome evening dress suits, every garment of which was taken from their new spring stock.

The demonstration was put on in a manner worthy of professional artists by three young men from this firm's special Saturday staff, Messrs. Harley Ponsford, Clinton Dunmore, and Cyril Price. One particularly handsome suit shown was model 14, with long roll lapels, fitted back, and slightly rounded corners, vest buttoned high, with very neat collar; trousers very smart, neat fitting, with cuffs. Another suit featured was a small neat check Norfolk, with smart lapel, stitched down belt, high cut vest with collar, smart, neat trousers with cuffs. This model was shown in several cloths. Also during the demonstration were shown many other 20th Century brand models, Nos. 2, 5, 10, 14, 15, 20, and 22. This firm is now recognized by the trade as the most progressive clothing firm in the Dominion.

SIX OFFICERS HAND IN RESIGNATIONS

Refuse to Participate in Staging Old Boys' Reunion This Year.

PLANS ARE NOT DROPPED

Interjection of "Certain Circumstances" Will Not Interfere With Celebration.

Though six officers of the London Old Boys' Association handed in their resignations, the president, Lieut.-Col. Dr. Harry R. Abbott, stated last night, following a meeting of the association, that the reunion project would proceed. Another meeting will be called shortly to elect men to fill the vacancies.

The officers who resigned last night are: Second vice-president, Ex-Ald. B. W. Bennett; third vice-president, Ald. F. G. Mitchell; fourth vice-president, Squire W. H. Chittick; Chairman R. A. Carrothers, H. Chittick of the sports committee, and Chairman Finlay Marshall, of the printing committee. All were pressed by the president to reconsider their decision, but while expressing their interest in the old boys' movement, declined to occupy any official positions, owing to "certain circumstances," such circumstances being the opposition offered to the reunion by the ministerial alliance, and the consequent refusal of the city council to grant the use of Convent Garden Market for the reunion shows or to hand out more than $1,000 to assist in defraying the expenses of the reunion.

Wanted Reunion Abandoned.
Harry Tozer moved to have the reunion called off, but got no second to his motion. Consequently the meeting adjourned without the members of the association who were present deciding one way or other on the project. At a meeting early in the year a motion was put through to hold a reunion commencing August 3, and there is yet to be a resolution passed rescinding the original order.

Last night's meeting brought out only a slim crowd, due, to some extent, to the rival attraction offered by the summer bazaar at the Masonic Hall. Mayor C. M. R. Graham, who opposed the placing of the shows on the market, and in doing so was supported by the council, failed to show up, and Controller W. G. Coles and Ald. F. G. Mitchell constituted the only civic representatives.

Has $3,500 in Prospect.
The reunion question was thrashed out from Genesis to Revelation first by the executive and then by the association. Some of the members thought that the project could not be proceeded with unless the association had at least $10,000 in sight. Others thought that the show could be put on with $5,000. President Abbott, on the other hand, thought that prospects had never been so bright as the association had not less than $3,500 in sight for the expenses, a larger sum than had been spent in the last reunion.
"We've heard a number of men telling us that the reunion could be financed easily enough," said Finlay Marshall, "but those same men haven't got stamina enough to come here tonight and tell us how to do it. Why should they ask this association to take the responsibility for all the expense upon its shoulders?"
A portion of the audience laughed sarcastically when J. H. C. Woodward suggested that a committee be sent to the Ministerial Alliance to secure a guarantee from that body toward putting on the reunion.
"They won't even pay their dollar to join the association. A fine chance we'd have to get anything more out of them," commented Walter Carrothers.
The president had no option but to accept the resignations of the six officers, and expressed his regret at being forced to do so. A resolution carried to call another meeting to fill the vacancies.

51st YEAR.

LONDON, ONTARIO, SATURDAY, APRIL 4, 1914.

PRICE TWO CENTS

BUSY AND BEAUTIFUL IS ONTARIO'S CLASSIC CITY; STRATFORD IS EXPANDING ALL ALONG THE LINE

Capital of the Perths in the Front Rank, Industrially, Commercially, Educationally---A Clean City With No Better Class of Citizens Anywhere.

[By Staff Reporter.]

Stratford, April 2.—With two large new manufactories coming this spring, with big additions contemplated or under way for several others, with three important civic undertakings to be soon submitted to the people for ratification; with a new school to be built and a considerable enlargement to be made to another; with a great cathedral-type church to be built; with a new country club house to be added to the social facilities; with every house in the city occupied and dozens planned to be rushed to completion to take care of the increasing demand for homes; with all things humming, and a boom spirit in the air, the classic City on the Avon expects the greatest year in her history.

City to Be Proud Of.

The people of Stratford are proud of their city for other reasons than that it is beautiful. They lay claim to enterprise and a front rank place, industrially, commercially, and educationally.

"There is no better city anywhere; there is no cleaner city anywhere; there is no better class of citizens anywhere, and we can prove it!" declares Mayor Stevenson.

The mayor, himself, represents a pretty fair type of citizenship. He is an enthusiast, and since the first of the year has kept appointments or attended meetings in the city's interest on over 250 occasions and has had an eye to his business as well.

No Foreign Element.

"We may not have as many citizens as other places, but we'll get that," he adds, and we have no foreign element at all.

Stratford boasts of being a furniture manufacturing centre. Almost everything for a house, is made here. A young married man lately moved here from Montreal, and upon looking things over he declared with surprise that practically every article of furniture he had brought with him had been turned out in Stratford shops by Stratford labor.

Stratford's Industries.

There are already nine concerns doing big business in the manufacture of lines of furniture, and two more big ones are on the way. There are three plants making machinery or implements, all of which contemplate enlargement this year. These are apart from the immense G.T.R. shops, which are the apple of the Grand Trunk officials' eye. There is a bridge and iron works which does business all over the province and in Quebec extensively. There is a woven wire industry, which makes fences, bed springs, and anything demanded in that line. There is a pork and egg packing concern, and there is the brewery, which may have had something to do with making Stratford famous.

And there are the woolen mills, and this suggests another industry of which the city folk like to speak, namely, the manufacture of knitted wear. There are three enterprises of this sort, which are turning out famous special brands.

Expanding Concerns. Four firms manufacture clothing made up for the wholesale trade. There are three big planing mills, one specializing in sash and door products. One of this group is now enlarging. There is a large lumber company located here, which ships by the carload anything from boards to the heaviest timbers.

A Famous Mill.

There is a rather famous flour mill which does a large export trade and extensively supplies the Eastern Provinces.

Three brick yards, each with an individually colored clay deposit to work on, ship all over. There is an automobile and bicycle manufactory. There is a concern which treats seed grain by a special pickling process.

cess, which practically precludes the possibility of seed rusting in the ground. This process is famed in the grain-growing sections of both Canada and the United States.

There are three cigar factories; a large biscuit and candy manufactory; a paper box company, six banks, and a mortgage and loan company.

Harmony in Business.

There is a spirit of harmony among the Stratford manufacturers seldom seen in business competition. This spirit impressed visitors to the recent furniture exhibit at which all the numerous local factory products were on display. All furniture manufacturers co-operated in the promotion of the show and there was an entire absence of knocking the other fellow's goods among the exhibitors. There was no rude scramble to steer prospective buyers to this or that exhibit and away from those towards which the current of traffic might be leading them. The feature was commented upon by patrons of the show.

Stratford runs to culture and refinement. The love of the aesthetic is reflected in the treatment and development of the picturesque park system bordering the tortuous Avon's shores.

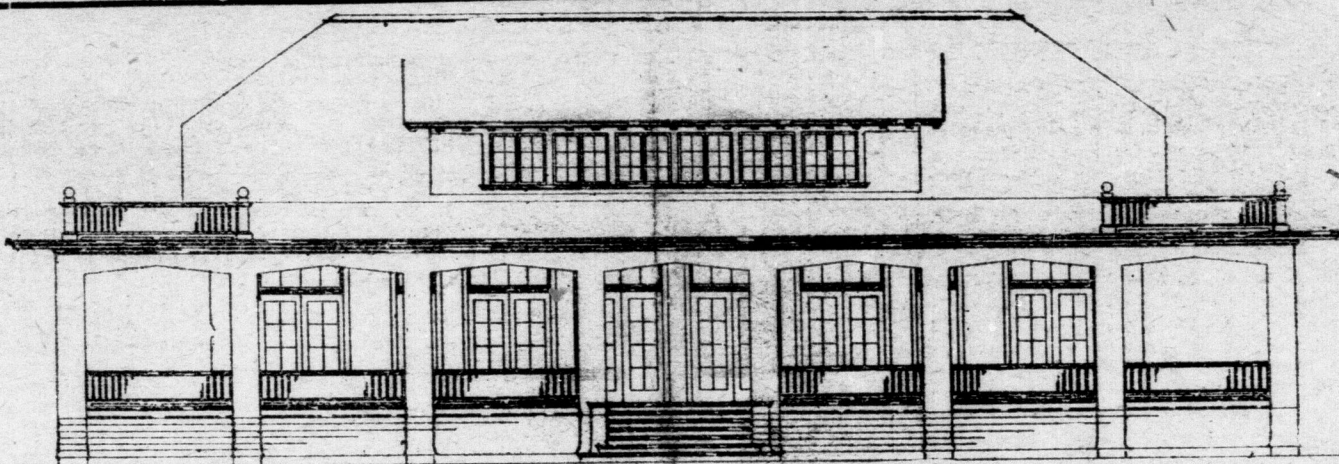

The influence of a cultured environment is also reflected in ambitious men of the laboring class. In connection with the collegiate institute largely attended industrial night classes are held, and these classes are held in connection with the G. T. R. shops, and the apprentice classes of Stratford, have, with the exception of one year, scored first place over the whole. Grand Trunk system, since such causes were

STRATFORD'S NEW COUNTRY CLUB

MUCH LOCAL IMPROVEMENT IS SLATED FOR THE BETTERMENT OF STRATFORD

[By Staff Reporter.]

Stratford, April 2.—Local works are to be undertaken this year, and very soon, to the extent of $78,000. There are four improvements included in this sum. Three will have to be passed upon by the ratepayers, but all are popular and it is considered a foregone conclusion they will all carry. They all bespeak the idealism which seems to inspire Stratfordites.

To Beautify Streets.

Anyone visiting Stratford must be impressed with the fact that the streets are well lighted. But the best is now too good and the city proposes to sweep unsightly poles entirely off the main streets and install ornamental lights upon ornamental iron standards with the wires underground, and in putting their own wires underground, they will force the telephone and telegraph companies to level their poles and crawl into the conduits.

Extensions to the street lighting system in the outlying sections of the city are planned, and the poles and brackets and lights removed from the main streets will be put to this use.

The New Bylaws.

The city council is, therefore, soon to consider the preparation of a bylaw for submission to the ratepayers calling for an expenditure of $22,000, to provide for the lowering of all wires on Downie street, from the Grand Trunk station to Ontario street, and on Ontario street east and west in the business section of the city. Hydrogen-filled lamps of 1,000 candle power each will then adorn the fluted iron poles lining these thoroughfares.

Garbage Collection.

Stratford proposes to launch into a system of garbage collection and disposal with an incinerator attached. Combined, this scheme will cost about $20,000 for the initial year. A special committee has recommended the move and it, too, seems a foregone conclusion. The incinerator site is already in mind, should the bylaw carry. It will burn up every combustible scrap of refuse collected in the city, and will cost approximately $12,000. For the collection of garbage two methods have been considered, private tender, and civic control. The special committee has favored civic control; that the municipality maintain the horses, rigs and men, and that supervision be under City Engineer A. B.

Manson. The cost of collection is estimated at six or eight thousand dollars a year.

A motorized fire department is another aim of the cultured city, and a bylaw is mooted to provide about $12,000 for this purpose.

New Sewerage System.

Then there is the almost complete replacement of the sewerage system. To effect this the city fathers do not require the ratepayers' indorsement. The present septic tanks, which are almost as old as Stratford, are to be done away with and replaced by the double chamber type of sedimentary tank, such as is now employed in Hamilton, Peterborough, many American cities and is in common use in Germany. Probably on Monday night the sewerage question will be decided. The problem also embraces a new sanitary trunk sewer on Erie street, 2,600 feet long, with a storm sewer in conjunction, 1,700 feet long, emptying into Rennie Creek. The estimated cost of the two combined is, in round figures, $21,000.

All the above projects are proposed for this year and once the ward is given, tenders will be immediately called.

STRATFORD'S NEW COUNTRY CLUB WILL BE ONE OF THE HANDSOMEST IN THE PROVINCE

[From Special Staff Reporter.]

Stratford, April 2.—Work has begun on the foundations of the New Country Club in Stratford, the contracts for which call for completion on May 15. While it is called a country club, the whole fifty acres of ground area lies within the city limits. The site was acquired by an association of leading citizens last year. It is a picturesque spot in the northeast corner of the city on Romeo street and the Avon river. The ground is elevated, and the club house will command a magnificent view of the city and country beyond.

Ideal For Golf.

The rolling nature of the ground, is adaptable for ideal golf links. Close by the club house provision is being made for tennis courts and bowling greens.

The Country Club House, as designed by architect James S. Russell, will be 52 feet by 80 feet in dimensions, and will display broad verandahs, eleven feet deep, on three sides. These facades will present a massive colonnade effect. The building is to be of frame and the design is beautifully harmonious with the recreative and social atmosphere demanded by lovers of leisure.

Beautifully Appointed.

Inside the effect will be equally luxurious. There is a profusion of roomy fireplaces. In the centre, and access-sible from the expansive verandah by four french doors, is the main social room, with beamed ceiling, huge fireplace and light areas front and back. Opening from this to the left is a comfortable men's lounge room 16 by 28 feet, also with a large fireplace. To the right of the main social room is a ladies' room 12 by 20 feet, also with a fireplace. Back of the ladies' room is the kitchen, with pantry and refrigerators attached and on the upper floor are men's and ladies' dressing rooms. These communicate with broad balconies over the two end verandahs.

The club house will be decorated in green and cream. The cost will be approximately $5,400.

Mexico's Fighting Man of the Hour

(From Chicago Tribune.)

In the outskirts of Juarez, where the poorer classes exist in wretched hovels of mud and straw, the fighting was over, the dead lay thick, the streets are as silent and deserted as those of Pompeii. It gave me the feeling of riding through a deserted city, for in many blocks I did not see a human face or hear a human voice. Refuse of every kind littered the unpaved streets and smelled to heaven; a dead dog here, the decaying carcass of a mule around the corner, and over them swarms of buzzing flies. There is scarcely a house wall in the place that is not pitted with bullets; in some of them there are apertures the size of a grand piano, such is the dreadful havoc caused by fighting at close range.

The residence of the more conspicuous Huerta sympathizers have been seized and converted into military bureaus and barracks and hospitals by the rebels. It was in such a house that I found Villa—"Pancho" Villa (pronounced, not as though you were starting to say "villain," but as though it were spelled "vee-yah"), less than a year ago a hunted outlaw with a price on his head, but now, if you please, General Francisco Villa, commander in chief of all the constitutional forces in the field.

It was not easy to gain access to him, for he had just arrived from the south to confer with General Carranza, and, incidentally, to undergo a peculiarly painful nasal operation. He was not only a sick man, but a very busy man, for a hundred men of greater or less importance in the Mexican world begged anxiously for a word with him. But he knew of me as a friend of Madero and he sent word that he would like to talk with me if I would wait.

At Villa's Headquarters. The scene amid which I found myself was in itself sufficiently enthralling to keep me interested. In the dusty street in front of the general's headquarters stood a score of ill-groomed cavalry horses, noses to the ground, reins trailing, looking even smaller than they were beneath their enormous saddles. Without the gate a moving-picture operator had set up his instrument and waited, hand on crank, for the interesting, the curious or the dramatic to happen. In the little patch of grassless garden a raucous-voiced sergeant, whose tasseled yellow chevrons stamped him as a federal deserter, barked shrill orders at a batch of awkward, frightened recruits. On either side of the doorway lounged a sentry with a serape wrapped about him, leaning carelessly upon his rifle.

The barren hallway peculiar to Mexican houses of the better class was crowded to suffocation with as motley and interesting a crowd as I have ever seen within the walls of a single room—haciendados from the interior, who had ridden in to offer Villa their fealty in the hope of safeguarding their possessions; representatives of concerns which deal in weapons, in ammunition, in explosives, in uniforms, in aeroplane, smug-faced, frock-coated bankers from El Paso, sent for in the vain hope that they would float a rebel loan; professional fighting men from many lands, who had come to offer their swords and their services in return for lucrative commissions in the rebel army; newspaper correspondents, members of the constitutionalist junta—well-dressed, distinguished-looking cabinet ministers and governors under the ill-fated Madero, and who hoped to be ambassadors and ministers and governors again.

Expert Gunners. "Who's that thin, hatchet-faced fellow with the high boots and the Hebrew nose?" said a newspaper man who sat beside me. "He's one of the few Americans in the rebel service. He was formerly in an American cavalry regiment and served in the Cuban and Philippine campaigns, but now he's in charge of Villa's machine gun section. He's a nifty chap, too. They say that he won't let his men begin firing until they can see the numerals on the Federals' caps."

"Who's the young man with the light hair and pink cheeks, who looks like a Prussian officer?" "He is a Prussian officer," was the answer. "That's Baron von der Goltz, a son of the German field marshal who trained the Turkish army. I understand that he got leave from his regiment and came over to offer his services to the rebels as much for the sake of seeing some fighting as anything else. But Villa doesn't want any foreigners in his ranks unless they have a special knowledge of some sort —artillery or hospital work or railway transport. Still, there's a foreigner over there whom he trusts implicitly—the dark-faced fellow in the slouch hat standing by the door. That's young Garibaldi, the grandson of the liberator of Italy. He commanded the foreign legion, you remember, in the Madero revolution."

A pleasant-faced well-groomed young fellow, one of the few whose clothes seemed to fit, bustled by amid a shower of greetings and inquiries. "That's Raoul Madero," volunteered my informant, "the younger brother of the murdered president. He regards Villa as his brother's avenger, and serves him like a faithful dog."

Just then the door to Villa's cabinet opened and the man who had been pointed out to me in the lobby of the El Paso hotel as Felix Sommerfeld, late chief of the secret police, caught my eye and backoned. "The general will see you now, senor," he said, and motioned me within. Sitting on the edge of a disordered bed, clad with no single insignia of his rank, was the master of northern Mexico—Francisco Villa. I had been told that for eighteen years he had been a brigand—and he looked the part. He sat humped over, with head drooping, in quite obvious pain as a result of his recent operation. His bloodshot eyes and tousled hair would have led me, at first glance, to assume that he was just recovering from the effects of a prolonged debauch. As a matter of fact, however, he does not drink; his life has hung by a thread for too many years for him to imperil it for the sake of whisky.

He is stockily built and of medium height—not over 5 feet 10, I should guess—with the chest and shoulders of a prizefighter and the most perfect bullet-shaped head I have ever seen. Receding from the back of the neck and from the jaw, it tapers upwards in the most extraordinary fashion. His head is covered with black hair as crisp and curly as a negro's; his skin is the color of a well-smoked meerschaum; a small black mustache serves to mask a mouth which is cruel even when it is smiling. The most attractive feature of the face is the eyes, which are large and brilliant and extraordinary piercing. Indeed, they are really not eyes at all but gimlets which seem to bore into your very soul. After I had looked into them I began to understand the deadly fear in which his subordinates stand of him.

His methods in this particular had been strikingly illustrated only the day before. Villa had ridden over to the railway station to superintend the departure of a punitive expedition which he was rushing south to Madero to check the depredations of Maximo Castillo's bandits. Owing to some mishap to the engine the train was late in starting. After taking a few angry turns up and down the station platform Villa strode across to his chief of transport, and jerking loose his heavy automatic, shoved the muzzle of the weapon in that startled official's face. G. T. R. STRATFORD SHOPS PRIDE OF THE SYSTEM

"Let Us Go Forward," Declares Hon. Winston Churchill, "If the Unionists Have No Wish for Peace in Ireland"

The First Lord of the Admiralty, in Addressing Great Political Gathering, Says the Government Has Made Its Last Offer in Regard to Ulster, and Will Not Shirk Responsibility

Hon. Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, addressed a great meeting in the St. George's Hall, Bradford, at which between 3,000 and 4,000 persons were present. The gathering was arranged in connection with the annual business meeting of the National Union of Liberal Clubs. The doors were besieged long before the hour for throwing them open and all the entrances were guarded by detachments of police.

Mr. Churchill's Speech.
Mr. Churchill, on rising, was greeted with another outburst of cheering. Mr. Churchill then proceeded: "I have come here this afternoon to speak to you about Ireland (hear, hear), and about the situation which has developed there and here in Great Britain. This great meeting was fixed with only one special reference to other affairs. It was not arranged in connection with events at Westminster, but I consider myself very fortunate at a moment when some plain words have to be spoken, and when it is the duty of a minister of the crown to speak them—I think myself lucky to be face to face with this great audience representative of the Liberalism of England, and here in the heart of unshakable Liberal and Radical Yorkshire."

Orange Leaders and an Agreement.
The counsel which I wish to offer to you today are serious, and they are rightly addressed to earnest men who know their own minds, who are thoughtful men, who are law-abiding men, who, having considered well what course they would pursue, are prepared to carry it through to the end. (Cheers.)

It is six months or more, I think, since I last had the opportunity of speaking on the Irish question. It was at a place to which I could not help being partial—Dundee. (Cheers.) It was the first speech which any of us had made since Parliament rose, and in consequence it was a speech of particular difficulty. We had had a demonstration which had taken place in Ulster in September. We had had the restless agitation of the Conservative press. We had Lord Loreburn's letter, and following upon that letter we had for the first time language used by the Orange leaders and by those who were associated with them—and in particular by Sir Edward Carson and Mr. Smith—language to the effect—I am not quoting their actual words—to the effect that the Orange resistance, that Orange resistance would not be used as a pawn in the Tory party game, and that agreement in some form or other might prove the means not of a lasting agreement, but of a lasting agreement.

Ulster and Special Treatment.
In common with Sir Edward Grey and with the Chancellor of the Exchequer and with Mr. Burrell, and other members of the government, and in full harmony with the views and leadership of the Prime Minister, I have always held that, within proper limits, the Ulster Protestant counties had a strong case for special treatment. There is no case, said the Prime Minister more than two years ago in the House of Commons—there is no case which would better repay temperate and reasonable state-ment. On the second reading of the home rule bill, which I had the honor of moving—a memorable honor which I shall long treasure—on that occasion and during the passage of that measure through the House of Commons I was always very careful to keep the door open for a friendly settlement, even if that settlement should require, as I had long foreseen it would require, the temporary exclusion in one form or another of what may be called the Orange counties.

And so when I came to speak at Dundee in the autumn I thought it right to use the following words, and as they were spoken six months ago perhaps you will let me read them to you. I said:

Our home rule bill holds the field. In the circumstances which have hitherto prevailed it is the best solution open to us of a question which must be settled now. Our bill is not unalterable, and the procedure of the Parliament act renders far-reaching alterations possible, but only upon one condition—there must be agreement. Only one thing could make it worth while, or even thing could make it alter a measure upon which so much depends. It is a very simple thing—goodwill. Only one thing can compensate an Irish Parliament for the grievous loss to its efficiency and strength which would result from even a temporary absence of the representation of Northeast Ulster—I mean the binding in honor of both parties in this country to carry the settlement through, and bring it in the course of years to final and complete success.

The Constitutional Remedy of Unionists.
That was going a very long way. (A Voice: "Too far.") I fully recognized at the time that it was going further than many of my Liberal friends were then prepared to go. Perhaps it was going further than some here today thought it wise to go, and I am sure I made that speech that it would be looked at by some whose opinion I value, and that I should be blamed by others, and I was quite right. But I feel, and I think many of you will feel, in a question of this kind, where one may easily proceed to extremes—in a question of this peculiar character it is of importance not merely to be legally right, but to be absolutely fair, and not only to be fair but to be considerate, but to be generous. It would never do for you or me or any of us who pursue a question like this to its final stage to get drawn into the crisis of it without being quiet, and to let everything possible be done to reach an agreement.

Strictly speaking, no doubt, the constitutional remedy of the Ulster Protestants and of the Unionist party is clear and plain. They should obey the law. (Loud cheers.) If they dislike the law—it is a free country (hear, hear), let them agitate for a majority when an election comes, and then, if they choose, they can amend or repeal the law. But they have been and they are now, and they will be, against which the country would have pronounced. That is a full remedy. It is the only remedy which is open to Liberals when we are in a minority. And when the law is invaded, as they have been and they will be again, by reactionary or one-sided legislation, in temperance (hear, hear), in education (hear, hear), on tariffs (hear, hear), on land, on rating, on any of the grave political issues, we have no remedy but that. (Hear, hear.) It is the only remedy which the Conservative party would ever offer to labor or laboring men engaged in a dispute, no matter how keen and how desperate, might be, and however bitter the pinch of suffering and poverty might have become. Obey the law, agitate, and, having persuaded the country, amend or repeal the law. Repeat itself a step so drastic and so extreme that there are scarcely any precedents in modern times for its employment.

Their Only Right.
But I repeat what I said in Dundee that the most extreme course in which the Opposition would be justified would be to obtain a majority, and then to amend or repeal the home rule bill. That is their right. It is their extreme right. And it is their only right. This right is no empty form, because we know, as we have always known, that an election, which cannot be very far distant (hear, hear), was bound to take place in this country before any administrative or legislative action of an Irish Parliament in Dublin could possibly have affected prejudicially the interests of the Orange counties of Ulster. Still, in dealing with a larger community and in dealing with a question which raises in acute form racial and religious passions, and around which so much melody history gathers, I felt, and I think you feel, that you must not always stand on the strict and hard interpretation of your rights—that you must sometimes go further than that.

It is enough for Liberals to remember that the Unionists are anxious and unhappy and alarmed and resentful, that in Ireland we are seeking to ally old hatreds, not to kindle new ones, that we are seeking to unite, not to divide, to conciliate, not to offend, that we want to give them what they wish, and not to force upon them what they dislike. (Cheers.)

The Prime Minister's Offer.
And therefore I have always hoped and urged that a fair and full offer should be made to Northeast Ulster in all friendship and goodwill, an offer going beyond anything which on a strict interpretation of our rights was required of us, but which should be made as an earnest effort to produce agreement and lasting peace. I hoped that offer would be in such a form as to remove altogether not merely reasonable fears, which no doubt are many, and more than that, to cut away altogether the ground and foothold of fear and apprehension, and to deprive the Ulster movement of the slightest pretext for unconstitutional action. That was the offer I have always hoped would be made. (Cheers.)

That offer has been made. (Cheers.) It was made last Monday by the Prime Minister. (Cheers.) It was made with the assent of the Irish National leader. It is made in all sincerity. It is made in earnestness. It is a real offer. It is a straightforward offer. It is an offer which as a safeguard is thoroughly effective.

God forbid that I should ever stand in the path of conciliation, but I seem to me, and I dare say it will seem to you, that in principle I do not speak of detail in principle this is the last offer—great and prolonged cheers—which His Majesty's Government can make or ought to make. (More cheering.) Consider what the offer is. Any Ulster county upon the requisition of a tenth of the electors can by a simple vote stand out for six years of the whole operation of the home rule bill, and remain exactly as they are. It is to say that two general elections in this country must take place before any county exercising its option would be compelled to change the system of government under which it has hitherto been administered. Consider what that offer is. (Cheers.) When I think of the patience, the wisdom and the eloquence with which Mr. Redmond (cheers)—has conducted this great historic controversy, and when I think how dearly he and those who are working with him cherish the dream, the hope of a united and self-governing Ireland, I can measure the cruel pang with which this temporary but none the less serious change has been accepted by him (hear, hear) and by the great mass of the Irish nation. It is their hope—and I think they are right and wise in hoping—that the day will come, perhaps before that period is passed, when of their own free will the Ulster counties that have exercised the option will seek to be incorporated in the ancient Parliament of their mother-land, when the brilliant and courageous Mr. Devlin will lead the democracy of Belfast to take their true position in the council of a united and progressive Ireland. (Cheers.)

How It Has Been Received.
But that offer, which represented the hardest sacrifice ever asked of Irish Nationalists, has been made. How has it been received? Before the offer was made the Unionist party demanded exclusion or a general election. Unless they had them both. (Laughter.) Unless they had them both, but they still say there is going to be a civil war. Before the Prime Minister's speech the Tory cry was for a general election on home rule. How often have we pointed out in the last few months that it is practically impossible to have an election fought in this country exclusively on home rule? Witness the cruel pang about which we have nothing to be sick of sorry. (Cheers.) We have pointed out again and again that a general election now would not in any special degree or in any particular way help the solution of either the Ulster or the larger Irish question. But still the Tories have gone on demanding one. Again and again they have dinned this demand for one into our ears. But now there are to be two before any Orange Ulster county can be brought within the scope of the home rule bill.

But are they satisfied, are they pleased, are they gratified? Oh, dear, no. Within a few hours of the Prime Minister's statement Lord Robert Cecil was writing to the "Times" newspaper pointing out that two general elections would be no protection to Ulster, because the country might vote Liberal on other matters. (Laughter.) What! Two general elections are no protection for Ulster? Where, then, are the Tory hopes of victory? (Laughter and cheers.) Don't they think they can even win with one out of these two elections—not even the second one six years hence? (Laughter.) We know that in their hearts they were very disappointed, but we never had such an open and such an abject confession of their sorrows. (Laughter.) What, then, becomes of all this clamor that we do not represent the electors, and we have not got the electors behind us, and that the constituencies are only waiting to install the Conservatives in power, when, in the next breath, they tell us that even two elections would not be so little safeguard to Ulster, that the Tory chance of victory is so desperate throughout the whole of the next six years, that rebellion must not even afford to trust its case to the repeated verdict and consideration of the British electorate? (Cheers.)

Why, gentlemen, to satisfy these gentry—(Laughter)—you would have not only to promise them an election, but you would have to guarantee that it will go the way they want. (Laughter.) You will have to promise that they are to have a majority at the election, or else, of course, to have a civil war. (Laughter.) To satisfy their friends in Ulster you must not only arrange that the counties where there is an Orange majority should be excluded, but those counties where they are in a minority must be excluded too. Of course—what did you expect? (Laughter.) Majority or minority, they must have their own way—or else it will be civil war. (Laughter.) But what is the last unmeasured infamy of radical power of which they complain? (Laughter.) It has all been put off for six years. "Here," they say, "we had our rebellion all ready. (Much laughter.) It is costing us a lot of money to pay our volunteers—(laughter)—and we can't keep it up indefinitely. (More laughter.) And now the Government has had the incredible meanness to postpone all possible provocation for six long years." (Laughter.) And they say "For all we know now it may never come off at all." (Renewed laughter.) No, it may never come off. (More laughter.)

No Liberal will ever deny that there may be circumstances and that there have been circumstances in many periods and in many States which have justified and which, if repeated, would justify again rebellion. But there are two supreme conditions—by no means the only conditions, but two supreme and indispensable conditions which must be satisfied. First, there must be real and unbearable oppression, and, in the second place, it must be clear that there is no other remedy except a resort to arms. Now apply those tests, which are moderate and reasonable tests, to the Ulster position at the present. There is no oppression. (Laughter.) Even if there was going to be, it has not begun yet. (Laughter.) Nor can it begin, even if it ever would begin, for six long years. (Laughter.) As for the remedy, they have it in their hands. If they reject the offer we have made, it can only be because they prefer shooting to voting—because they would rather use the bullet than the ballot. (Cheers.) We live in a strange world. (Hear, hear.) Many extraordinary things have happened. But what are we to say of persons, professing to be serious, who are ready to raise an impious hand against the laws of their country, who are ready, so they tell us, to shed the blood of their fellowmen, at least, to walk into the polling-booth and mark a voting paper?

If a British Soldier is Killed. It is not strange that they should be so eager to begin the horrible work— which at the very best must be a tragic adventure—that they cannot even wait for the result of the general election which cannot now be long delayed, and which, according to what they say of their prospects, may quite easily move all need for revolution? (Hear, hear.) Why, in European affairs it has for years past been considered wicked and immoral to use the argument of nations who brought a war on in a hurry because he believed that sooner or later it was bound to come. The conscience of the modern world revolts against such a doctrine. We have learned, however paradoxical it may seem, that inevitable wars can be postponed. (Laughter and cheers.)

But in Ulster a six years' interval of peace is apparently an added insult. Although they can secure this period by the simple exercise of their voting power, er, they tell us that they will have nothing of it, that nothing will satisfy them but to begin killing and shooting us almost immediately. (Laughter and cheers.) They might, at any rate at least, allow their intended victims to pass the six years' interval with their wives and families. (Laughter.) Ah! gentlemen, after this offer has been made any unconstitutional action by Ulster can only wear—in a phrase which Mr. Gladstone once used on another occasion—can only wear the aspect of unprovoked aggression, and I am sure and certain that the first British soldier or constable (Continued on Page Nineteen.)

Vibrant Nerve Force Supplied to Man.

[From "Man's Maladies"]

Without stamina, man is a failure. What is stamina? It is constitutional vigor—health. It is keen, responsive, vibrant nerve force. It gives wonderful inner strength of will, sustains a sound body, supports a well-kept mind, makes a man mentally and physically strong, sensitive, nervous, and energetic. Without it he is apt to be weak, vacillating, and feeble in motion, with cold hands, cold feet, nervousness, timidity, fear without cause, the back of melancholy, pain in the head, neurasthenia, and a general lack of grit, courage and nerve. It is impossible to act so that it is impossible to act naturally under all circumstances, as a man with stamina should. It should be the condition responsible for failure and unhappiness, for it can be done by the simple fulfillment of nature's law that the nerves receive their nourishment through the blood, which enables the nerve fluids to recover the daily waste which is constantly taking place. The nerve fluids and body tissues undergo constant changes, and unless the supply is equal to the demand the stream of health ebbs low, and misery prevails.

Astonishing strength, nerve force, and poise is quickly restored by the following valuable formula, which anyone can prepare in the privacy of home.

First, obtain three ounces of syrup of sarsaparilla, add one ounce of compound fluid balmwort, shake well, and let stand two hours. Then add one ounce tincture of cadomene compound (not cadomene) and one ounce compound essence of cardol. Mix. Shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one when retiring.

The above ingredients, except the syrup, are rare concentrations of purest drugs without opiates and are used for various prescriptions—Adv.

"LET US GO FORWARD," DECLARES WINSTON CHURCHILL

guard, blue-jacket, or Royal Irish Constabulary man who is attacked and killed by an Orangeman will raise an explosion in this country—(cheers)—of a kind they little appreciate or understand, and will shake to its very foundations the basis and structure of society. (Cheers.)

Spurred and Taken Advantage of.

A fair offer has been made, and up to the present it is only up to the present we can view it—it has been not only spurred but taken advantage of. I wish to speak with all respect of Sir Edward Carson. He is bitter in his feelings. He is unfair in his controversial methods. He is wrong on their merits. And he will be proved wrong by history and by time. No doubt he is moved by passion the depth of which no one can doubt. But let me point out this: Passion in itself, however intense, is not necessarily proof that one is right. Nor is it necessarily exclusion as regards other people. What does Sir Edward Carson say in reply to the offer of the Prime Minister? I was reading coming down in the train a report of a letter which he has written to some organization in Ulster since the Prime Minister's offer was made, in which the following passage occurs: "So far as our preparations are concerned, it (that is, the Prime Minister's offer) necessitates, if anything, a still more forward movement." What did he say in the House of Commons? This was his reply: "If you will agree to the permanent exclusion of Ulster, then, and only then, will I consent." To what? To accept Oh, no. To recommend acceptance? Oh, no. "Then and only then will I lay your proposal before the Ulster convention." (Laughter.)

Observe what that means. If his majesty's Government, supported by a great parliamentary majority, go much further than they have gone up to the present, if concessions even greater than those which have been made were put forward, then, and only then, would Sir Edward Carson bring their offer to the notice of the Ulster convention—a self-elected body composed of persons who, to put it plainly, are engaged in a treasonable conspiracy, and this convention is graciously to consider the matter while the Imperial Parliament stands on tiptoe outside the door waiting for the verdict. (Cheers and laughter.)

"We Have Had Enough." And then this convention is to dictate its further terms, and communicate them to his majesty's Government. Then, if these terms were accepted, what is to happen? Agreement, peace, reconciliation? Oh, no, we are to let off civil war. (Laughter.) That is the best we are to hope for. The fullest constitutional opposition to the general policy of home rule is to be maintained. Even if an agreement were reached over Ulster, even if we met the full and extreme demands of the Ulster convention, still there is to be no settlement, no fair chance for an Irish Parliament, no co-operation between the Ulster convention and the Imperial Parliament, no pledge against repeal of the measure. But the threat of violence, having served its purpose, would be laid aside. That is all. That is the sole result that would be offered for concessions far beyond those which we are prepared to offer. The sole result would be that they would graciously consent not to commit acts of rebellion and levy war against the state. (Hear, hear.) Well, I go as far as I can in my desire to see a conciliatory treatment, and an agreed settlement of this question. But I think when we look at the position which has now unfolded itself before us, that we have had just about enough of this sort of thing. (Loud cheers.) Many years ago, in the darker periods of the Irish controversy, there was a great attempt made to bring about a common policy of action between the physical force party in Ireland and parties met together in Dublin. These two parties met together in Dublin, and had prolonged conferences, in hopes of reaching an agreement. In the end these conferences were terminated brutally by the anti-physical force party throwing the physical force party downstairs. (Great laughter.) Well, I am on the side of the anti-physical force party. (Renewed laughter.)

What treatment do you suppose these Orangemen would mete out to their Nationalist fellow-countrymen who are in a minority in their midst if language like that was held over them? What treatment do you think we should receive from a Tory Government if we were to adopt such a tone? They scarcely take the trouble to veil their intentions now. An incident occurred in the House of Commons in the debate on the address. The Prime Minister asked in one of his great speeches: "If home rule were to fall now, how could you govern the west of Ireland?" Capt. Craig, an Ulster member, a man quite representative of those for whom he speaks—(laughter)—interjected blithely, "We have done it before." Ah! now, observe that here is a man appealing to the good feeling and good sense of the British democracy.

WISE WOMAN CHOSEN TO PATCH UP BROKEN HEARTS OF DESERTED

Miss Georgeanna Hopkins

(Special Correspondence.)

Philadelphia, Pa., April 3.—That women are growing more and more popular as administrators of justice in the courts of the land is demonstrated again in the appointment of Miss Georgeanna Hopkins as special agent in the Domestic Relations' division of the Municipal Court here.

She is the court of first appeal for every woman in the city who intends to sue her husband for support.

She is a refuge for old people who are turned out of their homes and refused support by their children.

She acts as arbitrator in all family feuds where there seems to be a possibility of patching things up, either for the sake of the children or other good reason.

Here is a man claiming to rebel himself, and asking for special consideration, asking that he shall not be ridden roughshod over, and in the very midst of this agitation, of this act of his, he shows the kind of measure he would mete out to others.

There you get the true insight into the Tory mind. (Cries of laughter.)

There is a healthful, exhilarating, salutary exercise, but lay a finger upon the Tory fifth—sacrilege, tyranny, murder. (Laughter.) "We have done it before, and we will do it again." There is the ascendancy spirit. There is the spirit with which we are confronted. There is the obstacle to the peace and unity of Ireland. There stands the barrier which, when all just claims have been met, and all the fears, reasonable and unreasonable, have been prevented, still blocks the path of Irish freedom and British progress. There stands the barrier, and it is a barrier before which Liberalism cannot recoil. (Loud cheers.)

Whisper of the Party Manager.

But at any rate when you are dealing with Orange rule, and with real anxieties of real people. No such excuse is open to Mr. Bonar Law. Behind every strident sentence which he rasps out—(laughter)—you can always hear the whisper of the party manager. "We must have an election—(laughter)—before the pural voting bill passes into law. (Ah!) Ulster is our best card. It is our only card. This is our one chance to smash the Parliament act. This is our one chance to restore the veto of the House of Lords and carry a protective tariff on to the statute book." (Cheers.) Oh, it is this grave complication which adds so seriously to the difficulty of the Irish problem to-day. And let me say this. We must be careful that the honest necessities of the Ulster case do not suffer from their entanglement with Tory party interests and intrigue.

I dare say your experience in thinking of this question have not been dissimilar from my own. I have found in my mind two different trains of thought and feeling. First, I have greatly desired that we should not do an unilateral or hard thing to the Ulster community, mistaken though I think they are; and, secondly, and not less strongly, I have felt that we cannot let ourselves be bullied. (Great cheering.) We cannot let ourselves be bullied by threats of force or, let me add, by force itself—(cheers)—from doing justice to the rest of Ireland, and from making good arrangements for the future of the whole of Ireland and maintaining the authority of the state.

Mr. Bonar Law is really in some respects a public danger. (Laughter.) He believes apparently—I suppose he means us other by what he finds in himself—he believes apparently that these threats of force are the only means by which a settlement will be achieved. He quite sincerely thinks, if I may judge from his speeches, that he is going to continue to terrorize the Government to wreck the Home Rule Bill and force his way into the councils of the Sovereign. Why, gentlemen, that is a disastrous and a fatal delusion. (Cheers.) Those who think that these events can be adjusted by the use of threats of violence against the Government do not know the British democracy; they do not know England; they do not know Yorkshire—(loud cheers)—and they do not know Aquilith. (Renewed cheers.)

Mr. Bonar Law says in effect if there is civil war in Ulster it will spread to England too. (Laughter.) I agree with him. (Cheers and laughter.) I go further. Once resort is had to violence by the leaders of a great British party Ulster and Ulster's affairs will dwindle to comparative insignificance. They will become a matter mainly of local concern. It will not be a Ulster question which we shall have to face, but a much larger and a much simpler issue. This will be the issue—whether civil and Parliamentary government in these realms is to be beaten down by the menace of armed force. Whatever sympathies we have for Ulster we need have no compunction here. It is the old battleground of English history. It is the issue fought out 250 years ago on the field of Marston Moor. (Cheers.) From the language which is employed it would almost seem that we are face to face with a disposition on the part of some sections of the proprietary classes to subvert Parliamentary government, and to challenge all the ancient and constitutional foundations of society. Against such a mood, wherever it manifests itself in action, there is no lawful measure from which the Government should shrink, and there is no lawful measure from which this Government will shrink. (Loud cheers.)

What Would Be Worse?

Bloodshed, gentlemen, no doubt is lamentable. I have seen some of it—more perhaps than many of those who speak about it with such vigour. (Hear, hear.) But there are worse things than bloodshed, even on an extreme scale, the eclipse of the central government of the British Empire would be worse. The abandonment by our public men of the righteous aims to which they are pledged in honor would be worse. The cowardly abdication of responsibility by the executive would be worse. The trampling down of law and order which is the duty of a civilized state, assure life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness—all this would be worse than bloodshed. (Cheers.) Three years ago there was a great railway strike, a most momentous and anxious event. I was home secretary at the time, and the Government felt that they were bound to make sure that great cities were not starved through a breakdown of the vital supplies. (Interjection.) We had to do it. The railway men were our good friends. We labored—and we shall labor—to secure fair conditions for them in their employment. But many who were not strikers had joined in. There was widespread disorder and disruption of traffic. It became my duty, from which, however reluctant, I did not shrink, to send 50,000 soldiers—(cries of "Shame.")—(Hear, hear.)—and cheer.) to the railways of England. Order was kept, and then, thank God, Lloyd George made peace. (Cheers.)

Tory Party and Force.

I well remember how on one occasion I was abused for sending police instead of soldiers to the South-West coast. I know well how the Conservative party governed Ireland in the last few years. We know the treatment that they considered quite appropriate to mete out to Nationalists tomorrow if they obtained a majority. We cannot help watching with amusement the transports of unadvised enthusiasm with which they have applauded the exercise of martial law in South Africa. When Generals Buller and Buller were fighting the Boers in defence of their own people no word of abuse was too harsh for them from Tory lips. (Interjection.)

They take violent action—(more interjection) and "Hear, hear."—and then they have taken in the last few months, which I am not discussing one way or the other—at that moment, they become heroes and the idols of the Tory party. From that very moment we are told what a pity it is they are not brought over here to govern us. (Laughter.)

Ah! so long as it is workmen in England or Nationalists in Ireland, there is no measure of military force which the Tory party will not readily employ. They denounce any violence except their own. They uphold all law except the law they choose to break. They always welcome the application of force to others. (Hear, hear.) But they themselves are to remain immune. They are to select from the statute book the laws they will obey and the laws they will resist. They claim to be the party in the future to use force in all directions, but never to have it applied to themselves. Whether they are decided on this, as they have very often told us, they are to govern the country. If they cannot do it by the use of the law, they will do it by the veto of violence. If constitutional methods serve their ends they will use them. If not, they will use force. (Hear, hear.)

Violence All on One Side. If law suits charged with the high duties of government must act on such an issue as we were the trustees not only for the present but for the past and for the future, and we are bound in honor not to flinch and not to fail.

I thank you most earnestly for the way in which you have listened to my words. I recognize that I cannot be in all respects a complete exponent of Liberal thought and opinion. I have a heart's desire the social betterment of the masses of the people. But still there are many others in this hall, on this platform, in the Government, or among our colleagues in the House of Commons, who have a far better right than I have, who are much more capable of interpreting the instinctive promptings and the inner thoughts of Liberals and of Liberalism. ("No, no.")

A Message. It is, however, possible that at particular moments I may be able to be of some use. (Cheers.) There are times, and there are occasions when I have a message to give which is of vital consequence. And now, I am this afternoon, and here is the message which I bring you. (Cheers.) If Ulster seeks peace and fair play, she can find it. She knows where to find it. If Ulstermen extend the hand of friendship to the rest of the country, they will be clasped by Liberals and by their Nationalist countrymen in all good faith and in all goodwill. But if there is no wish for peace, if every concession that is made is spurned and exploited, if every effort to meet their views is to be used as a means of breaking down home rule and of barring the way to the rest of Ireland, if Ulster becomes a tool in party calculations, if the civil and parliamentary systems under which we have dwelt and our fathers before us for so many years are to be brought to the crude challenge of force, if the Government and the Parliament of this great country are greater empire is to be exposed to menace and brutality, if all the loose, wanton, and reckless chatter we have been forced to listen to all these many months is in the end to become a sinister and revolting story, then, gentlemen, I can only say to you, let us go forward together and put their grave matters to the proof. (Loud cheers.)

I thank you most earnestly for the way in which you have listened to my words. I recognize that I cannot be in all respects a complete exponent of Liberal thought and opinion. I have a heart's desire the social betterment of the masses of the people. But still there are many others in this hall, on this platform, in the Government, or among our colleagues in the House of Commons, who have a far better right than I have, who are much more capable of interpreting the instinctive promptings and the inner thoughts of Liberals and of Liberalism. Mr. Skiddings pilots THE ONADEKA SQUAWS

By L. H. BICKFORD

(Copyright, 1914, by the Newspaper Enterprise Association.)

Pork Skiddings had been four weeks late getting back to Clark street. Matty Morse, of the Chin Yon Chop Suey House, usually looked for him when the post-season baseball games started. This year the games were won and lost and October lengthened into November, when late one morning, just after Morse had settled with his Chinese partner, a wanderer entered wearily and leaned over the cigar case.

"Here now, you," Morse began, "this is no—"

And there he stopped. Behind the stubble of beard he recognized his friend. Clicking the cash drawer, he led the way down the decorated room toward a screen in one corner, gave Pork a chair, and took a seat opposite.

"Now then," he asked, "how did it happen?"

Pork looked warily about.

"It was last May, when I thought it was about time for the summer lay that I answered the ad. for the bright young man who knew something of the country, and who was wanted to take charge of a novel touring proposition at a good salary and all expenses paid; must be sober, reliable, and of good address—my very picture. So we met.

"I liked the tone of your letter," says she, "for it showed refinement and was right to the point, although, of course, I

Mrs. L. A. Hamilton.

President of the newly-organized National Union of Woman Suffrage Societies of Canada. Mrs. Hamilton now lives in Toronto, but she is a former resident of both Vancouver and Winnipeg. The women of Canada are showing a wonderful interest in the suffrage question, she says. Inquiries for literature both for the purpose of debate and in the interest of organizing societies are pouring in upon her.

at Miss Sadie Delaney.

"It seems," says she, "that this town is somewhere near an Indian reservation, and that in writing here for a date I got hold of the wrong party. We are not to play the Ranger Brown, champions of Chinchilla County, but a real club from the agency, and even now the committee is hammering at the back door of the car asking for an interpreter. But nevertheless you must meet these gentlemen and see us through while I get the ladies ready. Sadie Delaney was never bluffed yet."

"On the car steps I met three parties bearing a sign reading thus: 'Baseball Today. The Onadeka Squaws versus the Navajo Reds. The Most Unique Ball Game Ever Played. See Emancipated Indian Womanhood Play Their Former Lords and Masters.'"

"And if a train had come down the other track just then, Pork Skiddings, the celebrated interpreter, would have gone on his way and this adventure would end right here."

"Up and down the tracks were camped the noble red men and their wives. The Squaws were priming for the afternoon, and I relate to Miss Sadie Delaney. 'I am afraid the Indians are suspicious,' I says, 'and if you take my advice you'll play this game in double-quick time and hike for the train. I'll leave an order to have the car backed down to the depot to be shoved right onto the five-five the minute it gets in.' But Miss Sadie Delaney didn't seem fazed a bit. 'All I ask of you, she says somewhat coyly, 'is to keep the plate, and the Onadeka Squaws came sober.' And with that shot she turns to on Sadie Delaney for a two-base hit, and this put her so far up in the air that she passed the next two men. Here were the bases full and nobody out, and Miss Mazie Magoon hopping about the infield and only keeping her mouth shut by her marvelous self-control. Well, here it happened. The next batter up was Lone Crow, their second sacker. He lifted a high pop over toward my little friend, Wind-of-the-Prairie. It came down right into her mit, the easiest proposition ever—and she dropped it. The ball rolled out into the field, and the Navajos went hastily around the diamond until it was discovered that Lone Crow had cleared the bases and made a home run on a bum error. But that was not all. As Lone Crow went floating on his way he ran into Miss Mazie Magoon and spiked her left foot.

"You great big, awkward, pig-footed slob," says she, following Lone Crow down to third and then on home, "you unspeakable brute; I've a notion to hand you one in your ugly face," and with that, while Miss Sadie Delaney looks on horrified, she lets fly at the son of the prairie and then takes him by one ear and twists him around until he writhes with pain. He was very much astonished. Up to that time the Navajo Reds had been going ahead minding their own business in stolid Indian fashion and taking advantage of the Squaws' errors, but they had shown no feeling. This attack on their noble brother settled it. They started toward the plate, and the Onadeka Squaws came in to meet them. The cowboys turned combining out her Indian wig and declaring to Miss Mazie Magoon that, after all, one man is like another.

"The Squaws came out in single file, while the real things crowded up to watch 'em and babbled after 'em and seemed more or less over the whole proposition."

"I speak of the events of the afternoon as one who, looking into the past, finds that his mental camera does not take all the details. It was a different crowd from what we had played to. Most of the grandstand seats seemed to have been taken by cowboys and sheep herders."

"Miss Sadie Delaney was in fine form that afternoon—the best form I'd ever seen her in for the first six innings—and it was a case of the braves whiffing the air about two an inning and returning to the bench to talk it over and try to fix up a scheme to get onto her curves. And, in how we broke in on the grand tour at Outworks, cleaned up $250, and beat the Blues—11 to 8."

"And so we came to the 6th of September and Ranger, New Mexico. Miss Sadie Delaney herself aroused me by entering my travelling boudoir and shaking me by the shoulder."

"Is there anything unusual, ma'am?" I asks, trying to collect myself.

"Is there anything unusual?" she repeats, and then she lifts a corner of the curtain and says: "Look there!"

"I look. The car is surrounded by Indians. They are fraternizing all round me, and they are most theatrical Indians, made on Broadway, in any respect. I look loose their guns, and right there came the riot."

"I heard a yell and then saw Miss Mazie Magoon's fake hair seized by the Navajo catcher, and pretty soon there were screams and Lone Crow was wandering up and down with Rippling Water's wig at the top of his bat. All the time the mix-up at the plate was getting worse, and Miss Sadie Delaney was laying about her with her good left arm, sending Navajo braves to the dust and calling on the police to stop the outrage. Right in the middle of this, however, she seemed to find but to stop and grab me and demand the receipts, which I was carrying around in my right hand, done up in a buckskin wallet. If you'd been tending to your business—she hissed at me—as she grabbed the proceeds and knocked down her fourth Navajo with a left jolt to the stomach—but I didn't catch the rest. I got in the way of somebody's fist, and the whole horrible picture was blotted out."

Pork Skiddings looked around at the gaudy adornments of the restaurant. He seemed to be lost in thought, and Matty Marsh respected his silence for five minutes before he asked:

"But the end—after that?"

"That," said Mr. Skiddings, "is indeed the end. That is where the curtain falls. I learned afterward that the Onadeka Squaws fought their way to the bus and made the five-five train. With that they passed out of my life. The people at the hospital were kind to me—but, say, New Mexico is a long way from Clark street."

(THE END.)

GERMAN SLUMS.

In an account given by Charles Reade at the Royal Institute of British Architects in London of German town planning, he emphasized the extent to which land speculation has gone in Germany and the utter inadequacy of the old ideal of town planning which made wide streets, vistas, and green squares its be all and end all.

Mr. Reade dealt in turn with Cologne, Frankfurt, Leipzig, Munich and Berlin, and of each of the same tale was told, with mere variations of detail. Fine, straight streets and avenues are there to impress the stranger who does not penetrate through tunnel entrances to the airless "lacks."

In other words, in Germany town planning is divorced from housing. Thus we find such scandals in Berlin as a Rents generally are higher and accommodations worse in Germany than they are in England. Speculation has inflated land values in many cases to seven and eight times what they would be here. Consequently, along with congestion, there may be large plots of vacant land on which the speculator cannot afford to build until rents rise still higher.

Mr. Reade asked land reformers to note that the exceedingly ease of land transfer in Germany is only an aid to speculative dealing. It is significant that leasehold is practically unknown.

HERE'S THE PLAIN TRUTH ABOUT MARTIAL GLORY HORRORS OF HELL THAT ARE OVERLOOKED

[From Public Opinion.]

People discuss the cause of war, its futility, its glory, its expense, barbarity, laws. But they will not imagine war. They will not enter the purgatory of vision, and gaze into the hell of actuality. Mr. W. Douglas Newton takes them by the neck and shoves them to the brink of a river of blood in "War" (Methuen, 2s. net.).

Rudyard Kipling.
The central idea of the book lies in an introductory note by Mr. Kipling. The nearest that a people who have never known conquest or invasion can come to the idea of conquest and invasion is a hazy notion of going about their usual work and paying their taxes to tax collectors who will perhaps talk to a slightly foreign accent. Even attempted invasion does not mean that it means riot and arson and disorder and bloodshed and starvation on a scale that a man can scarcely imagine to himself; it means disorganization of every relation of life and every walk of business from the highest to the lowest, and the more elaborate the civilization the more awful will be the results. The Balkan States can stand for twelve months and still breathe would knock us out of time in six weeks. It seems to me that if there is a reasonable chance, I think there is of such a catastrophe overtaking us, we ought at least to take reasonable precautions to make any attempted invasion so exceedingly expensive to begin with and so painful to the invader that he would not want to go on with, that no enemy would think of facing the risk. As things stand at present we have neither the men nor the means nor the organization to do the will to produce such results. The enemy is coming ashore from warships, forming up and advancing. The advance is covered by shell fire from the ships. The weak defence of rifle fire from the cliffs is useless. The enemy has planned an attack. Railway bridges had been blown up by spies. Also the telegraph system had been rendered useless.

The Stealth of War.
Apart from the puffs of bursting shells and the banging of guns, the scene was silent. Very soon the cliff batteries were silenced and the troops made good their landing. The non-combatant spectator saw a group of prisoners, one of whom foolishly shot at the general. The tall, grey man by Brun's side cursed deeply and softly. "That fool and his revolver have thrown away seventeen lives," he said.

Also on Neck. Big Bare Spot on Crown of Head. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.
198 Chapeau St., Montreal, Que.—"When my brother and I went to school we got ringworm from the other children and our hair all fell out. We had them on our heads and on our necks. For months I had a big bare spot on the crown of my head the size of a fifty-cent piece. smiled.
Brun swung upon him.
"Hey!"
"A firing party and a wall," commented the tall man.
Brun became excited.
"D'y mean? D'y mean they're going to kill those men? D'y mean? They can't. They mayn't."
The tall man was amused.
"Who's going to stop 'em?" he wanted to know. "You or me?"
"But they can't," protested Brun. "It's all wrong. It's savagery. It's not right."
"Huh," grunted the tall man.
"When your trade's killing-killing men—it's the man who has got the grip hand who does the ordering." And this is the "grip" of modern war.

The Man of Grip.
The commander-in-chief, writes the author, at a table in the midst of his staff, received all communications with great calmness. He was a big, quiet man, with a dry-looking face and thin lips. One got the impression from him that he would find it impossible to close his eyes except in sleep. He had the bright, unblinking eyes of a bird. He read the messages that came to him from the hands of orderlies in swift, biting glances. He appeared to master the contents of the papers in the snappish, photographic manner. He sat thinking for a clear moment after reading. He dictated an answer in decisive and unhesitating sentences to the shorthand writer at his side. He never amended a message. He had the valuable habit of precise thought and brevity of expression. He sat for a long time at his table working like this. He plunged unhesitatingly through immeasurable waters of intricate detail. At all times he leaped up quickly and lunged over a large scale map pinned on to an adjacent table. At times he was elbow-deep in masses of papers that rustled and crackled as his arms crunched them. Occasionally he studied with his glasses the rolling face of the land; he clicked a constant stream of orders from his lips without taking his eyes from the lenses. The officers about him jumped and jerked like creatures of wire to the galvanic fervor of his voice.

The Village.
Then we are shown what the "advance" means; how an army corps has to march across country destroying crops, shooting the poor farmers who want to prosecute them for trespassing. The men of blood are come as a scourge of God upon a listless people. Poor frightened women are afraid that they will be massacred. And so they will be the defending army take shelter there. The non-combatant is protected—if he doesn't get in the way. The women are protected unless the enemy happen to get out of hand, when things happen that one would rather not mention.

Nerves Were So Bad THOUGHT SHE WOULD GO OUT OF HER MIND.

Diseases of the nervous system are very common. All the organs of the body may be affected while the nerve centres may be affected.
Many women become run down and worn out by household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with the nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.
Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the nerves, strengthen the heart and build up the entire system.
Mrs. Archie Goodine, Tilley, N.B., writes: "When I was troubled with my heart two years ago, I was very bad. My nerves were so unstrung that sometimes I would almost go out of my mind. I doctored myself with everything I could get, until at last I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and they have cured me. I cannot speak too highly of this wonderful remedy, and will recommend it to all sufferers."
Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

them. They got in front of the hussars' rifles and the discharges at such close ranges tore great wounds. The spraying of the invading shooting scythed them all down. A girl crouched in terror as a frantic hussar, who beat at her face in the terror panic had communicated. The same shell killed both.
Then the defenders retired. And the enemy came in. A hospital was improvised. The doctors paid first attention to their own combatants, to get them fit for the field again. The rest had to wait, for one has to be practical in war.

"My God," the spectator said, "but I never guessed it was like this. No body ever told me it was like this." The medical officer laughed bitterly. "Ay, they never told you. It wasn't nice. It wasn't good form. The horrors are too revolting to put before comfortable domestic people. You mustn't be shocked. All the same, the horrors are. They always are, they always have been, they always will be. And you never know. It could be bad taste to shock you. Bah!—you precious, comfortable, sit-at-home hypocrites make me sick. You never know, you don't try to know, and you don't care. It's because you didn't care that you're here. You're the cause of all this—you. Why didn't you find out all about it and try to prevent it happening to you?"
Yes, there are many things in this book to make men think of the cruel, cowardly horrors that have not come their way as yet.

The Moral of It.
The work is not written in any Jingy spirit, nor has it any obvious foe in mind. But it puts forward what would happen to an island people such as ours, who have ceased to realize what invasion means. If some complication made us parties to a great war. And it shows that war is not only a matter of force, but under certain conditions it is a freeing of the lusts and appetites of men. Modern warfare is likely to be far more brutal after the entry into a town, than when men met hand to hand and fought with swords and spears. This book is not pleasant. But no one could accuse it of being provocative of strife, realistic though his picture of it can be. [Read also Zola's "Downfall" (Chapman and Windus) for detailed scenes of modern warfare.]

Great Opportunity Offered to Our Readers.

Those who have already secured their Panama books from The Advertiser should show them to their friends. Never before in the history of newspaper and book publishing has such an offer been made. The book is a work of art. It is called "Panama and the Canal in Picture and Prose," and is written by William J. Abbot, who is the author of many books of history and travel. This book is beautifully bound in a fine old cloth, is twice as large as the usual size novel, and contains more than 600 rare illustrations, many of which are reproduced from water color studies to full page size.

Your friends would indeed be proud to possess such a volume, and when it is made known to them that they can get it from The Advertiser for six certain shillings and the small expense of distribution they will quickly take advantage of the opportunity. At the present time it behooves all progressive people to learn all they can of this mighty achievement, all they can of this great nation's work for the great Canal will soon become a working factor among all the nations of the earth. Not only is the great engineering feat described in this book, but the country and people are shown in every phase and from every angle, both in picture and prose.

Taken as a whole, the story is complete, and nobody could get a better understanding of the subject, even though months were spent in the Zone, than could be gained by reading this interesting narrative.

In another column of this issue is printed a Panama Certificate. Six of these certificates and expense amount to $4 volume without further cost. City that certificate today.

CHICKEN CHAT

Items of Interest to City or Country Poultry Fanciers—Well-Balanced Ration for the Farmer—How to Care for Growing Stock.

Get out all the chicks you can this month.
Don't hatch more than you have room for and conveniences to properly house and care for.

Overcrowding with chicks, as with mature birds, is the crowning evil in raising poultry.

A small bunch of good chickens, properly looked after, will return much greater proportionate profits and afford the owner much more pleasure than a larger number closely crowded and scrambling for existence.

That old saw about "Going to the dogs" could be changed now to "Going to the chickens." The constant increase in the number of fanciers proves that poultry-keeping is one of the most pleasing hobbies, and one of the best paying side-lines as well, to the man who has a piece of ground and likes to have something to do.

Spade up your runways now and seed freely with clover, alfalfa, grass, rape, oats, or something similar. The crop will sweeten the soil and give a lot of valuable green feed just when you need it.

Essex rape is a quick-growing, succulent green feed, and a little seed planted at intervals on any bare spot in the garden will help out the feed question wonderfully.

Give the baby chicks a pinch or two of fine bone meal in their mash feed occasionally. It is a fine builder of bone and stamina.

If you have surplus settings of eggs put an advertisement in "Poultry and Eggs" small ads. in The Advertiser. You will then find plenty of customers for all you have to sell.

Pure-bred poultry on the farm means uniformity of products, and uniformity of products means increased profits. If products are properly marketed.

A basket of eggs running well to color and size, clean and well handled, attracts the buyer with the price.

Given the same care and feed, pure-bred fowls will make a greater profit than the mongrels, apart from the pride of ownership of something better than ordinary.

For market or private trade produce, the infertile egg. Removing the male bird has no influence on the number of eggs laid by the hens.

Among the specialty clubs the American Houdan Club, under the presidency of James Abernethy, is making its usefulness felt, in increased membership and interest in the standard, thoroughbred. Harry Taylor, of Toronto, is Canadian vice-president.

A Farmer's Ration.
The following is a splendid balanced ration feeding system for the Canadian farmer to use, and does away with a lot of fussing and unnecessary labor.

In winter months the grain mixture is composed of two-thirds corn and one-third wheat, thrown into the straw filter; in summer, one-third corn and two-thirds wheat; in the spring and fall months, equal parts corn and wheat. Feed about a pint to ten hens in the morning and perhaps a little more at night. Rolled oats are fed from a hopper. The hens are also supplied with grit, shell, charcoal, and some wholesome green food. They are given nothing to drink except buttermilk. This is a very well balanced ration for any farmer to use. It is about as simple as you can make it and still get the best results.

Care of Growing Stock.
Do not fall into the all too common habit of thinking that after a chick is hatched the first few weeks it can be left to itself. If a chick is to develop into a healthy, vigorous cockerel, or a strong, active pullet, that will shell out the

NOVELIST TELLS OF NEW WOMAN'S SPHERE

Inez Haynes Gilmore
Special Correspondence.
New York, April 3.—The new woman, just emerging from "social and domestic bondage," is the central figure in Inez Haynes Gilmore's latest story, "Angel Island." Miss Gilmore, who is one of the most ardent leaders of the equal suffrage cause, presents a strong argument for the new feminism.

eggs next winter, it must have the best of feed and care throughout the entire growing period.

Do Not Overcrowd—Many of the ills and much of the mortality among growing chicks is due to overcrowding. The brooder or coop should furnish ample room for the little fellows to stretch themselves out at night without coming in contact with each other. Plenty of fresh air should be admitted at all times in such a way that there will be no draughts, causing the chicks to huddle together.

Fight Lice and Mites—These little pests are always with us, and a continual warfare must be waged to keep them from exacting a heavy toll of dead, dwarfed, and stunted chicks. Watch for head lice. Greasing lightly the heads of all chicks over two weeks old with a mixture of kerosene and lard or lard and borax, equal parts, will serve either as a preventive or cure. Also grease lightly under the wings. Be careful not to use too much grease and oil. Application should be repeated in about two weeks if chicks are badly infested. For mites paint or spray brooding quarters with a mixture of eight parts kerosene to one part crude carbolic acid. This will also serve as a good disinfectant.

Provide Pure Water—The importance of an abundance of fresh, cool, pure water cannot be over-estimated. Filthy drinking water is one of the most common causes of disease, and lack of water a too common cause of unsatisfactory growth. All drinking vessels should be scalded at least once a week. In cool, damp weather sufficient permanganate of potassium to give the water a deep reddish tinge will assist in preventing cold and bowdler troubles.

Good Food Properly Fed—Good food and plenty of it, easily accessible at all times, is one of the most important "secrets" of successfully producing the best birds either for market, laying, or exhibition and breeding purposes. After chicks are six weeks old, if they are on free range, they should have free access to a hopper containing equal parts by weight of cracked corn and cracked wheat. If they are confined to runs in which there is no green feed, they should be given, daily, lettuce, sprouted oats, or lawn clippings.

The grain mixture above mentioned should be sifted and fed in a deep litter of cut clover or alfalfa or chaff from a barn, or finely cut straw, so as to induce plenty of exercise. Plenty of clean, sharp grit should be provided, and a hopper containing the following mixture kept before them at all times. The proportions given are by measure:—8 parts bran, 4 parts cornmeal, 4 parts shorts or middlings, 2 parts fine meat scraps, 1 part fine chaff.

Do not forget that "eternal vigilance is the price of success" in the poultry business.

"It is sometimes made a subject of acid comment that the members of the Indian civil service are supposed to be universal experts and capable of stepping at once into any appointment, however technical," says the Times of India. "But in the House of Commons they have the same strange little way. Mr. E. S. Montagu has served a very useful apprenticeship in Indian affairs. He completed this by a visit to this country, when he saw a great deal and said very little. His last speech on the Indian budget was marked by steadily broadening knowledge and no little courage when he plainly told the House of Commons that every step in the popularization of the administrative machine in India must be accompanied by a relaxation of interference from home."

"Now that he has accumulated this store of knowledge and experience, Mr. Montagu is promoted to the office of financial secretary to the treasury. It is natural that a clever and ambitious politician like Mr. Montagu should welcome this opportunity of advancement, but it does seem to be a weakness in the machine that, to secure this end, it should be necessary to scrap the special knowledge of Indian affairs which he has acquired—at the public expense."

Bellis in Palestine.

A most interesting account of the arrival at Jaffa of the Jew, Mendel Bellis, recently acquitted in Russia, is given in the Jewish Chronicle. "Mendel Bellis arrived at Jaffa by the Austrian-Lloyd steamer. A vast crowd assembled on the landing-stage, eager to have a glimpse of the man of the hour. Bellis was met on board the steamer by members of the Jewish communal council, representatives of the Haham Bashi, and two officers on behalf of the Government. Bellis had a frightened look; evidently he is still suffering from the effects of his cruel treatment in prison. His wife sat near by, looking very ill, and now and then she cried. Bellis' children appeared to be delighted at having arrived in Jaffa."

"At last the boatmen had completed the preparations for landing, but Bellis refused to move, for he espied a photographer ready to snapshot him. 'I will not disembark,' he said, 'until you take that away. I refuse to be exploited and shown up to the world.' Bellis received a tremendous ovation along the route to Tel Aviv. Even Arabs exclaimed: 'That Bellis! He has arrived.' Two rooms were engaged for him by the communal council at Hotel Hezlah in Tel Aviv. Hundreds of visitors are calling on him. Especially touching was the visit of Rabbi Kif, for he embraced and kissed him, exclaiming, 'Mendel, you have been destined by Providence to honor Judaism.'"

Two Doctors Said He Had Consumption.

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP CURED HIM.

Mrs. John Ellis, St. John's West, Ont., writes:—"My little boy was very bad with whooping cough and severe cold. I went to two doctors, and they said he had Consumption. I could get no relief for him, he would cough all night long, with a dry hacking cough. I was persuaded to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and was surprised to see the first bottle did him good. I have had five bottles, and they cured him, he rests well at night now, and is well and hearty. If he gets a cold we always give him Pine Syrup and he is soon better. I did not think I could raise him, but I am thankful to say Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup saved him from being consumptive."

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the admonition to all persons affected by the earlier stages of throat and lung trouble, as failure to take hold at once will cause many years of suffering, and in the end that terrible scourge—"Consumption."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is without an equal for all affections of the Throat and Lungs.

Charlotte Perkins Gilman

[Special Correspondence.]

New York, April 3.—According to Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman, the noted writer and feminist, there are six kinds of love.

She enumerates them in this order: Gratitude for benefits received; friendship, based on sympathy; admiration, which represents a sort of adoration or worship; usage, including love of home and country, and sex attraction, which merges into the greatest of all loves, and benevolence, which desires to serve and do good.

had with Bellis he said: 'I hope to find rest here, but even today I received a threatening letter from the Black Hundred of Kieff, in which they curse and menace, and promise to write me often. I also receive petitions for help, and this grieves me very much, because I am misrepresented and taken for a millionaire, whereas the contrary is the case. What I need now is peace of mind and less hand-shaking. I know that my brethren cannot control their feelings and sympathies, but I am too weak to bear them, and on no account can I allow myself to be led about like an ape to be looked at. If this enthusiasm continues any longer I shall have to take refuge elsewhere.'"

A Loss to English Scholarship.

Mr. T. E. Page, headmaster of the Charterhouse School, makes this pointed comment on the appointment of Prof. Lake to Harvard University (recorded in last week's paper): "Every Englishman who has any regard either for learning or religion must read with regret—and not, perhaps, without shame—the news you publish that Prof. Lake is to be expatriated to America," he writes to the Times.

"Few men have devoted more time or better ability to the study of early Christianity, and there are few studies which today more need and deserve encouragement. It is a study which deals with the very groundwork of belief, and it is of the first necessity that we should come to the clearest possible knowledge and understanding of its subject matter. But those from whom much is to be learned are in England a very scanty band. The Church of England has controversialists and apologists more than enough, but of impartial inquirers a most sad deficiency. Yet for men like Prof. Lake, whose reputation, except in his own country, is of the highest, she has apparently no place. For years he has been exiled in Leiden; now he must, it seems, seek a home across the Atlantic."

Knowledge or Promotion?

"Why is this?" asks Mr. Page. "For just the same reason which more than two centuries ago drove those who loved truth more than conformity to seek the same refuge. The conclusions at which Prof. Lake arrives are not always those that established orthodox demands; and he is one of those unhappy divines who finds that to pursue knowledge is sometimes the surest way to avoid promotion. Ecclesiastical authorities have never been much in love with inconvenient learning. Once they branded it as Gnosticism and heresy; then they took to thumbscrews and the stake; and then they got rid of its embarrassing possession by a convenient but ignominious ostracism. And yet the bishops are ceaselessly lamenting what seems to them the strange fact that the church is steadily losing its hold over educated and inquiring minds."

Martyr to Science.

"Henry Green, born in England 54 years ago, a maker of Röntgen tubes, has died a martyr to science," says the Telegraph's New York correspondent. "The certificate of death states cancer of the liver as the cause, and this, it is explained, was the outcome of his professional work. As far back as 1906, when his partner died of cancer, Green said: 'I shall go the same way, but I will stick to my work and I will not be dangerous to others.' He then showed his hands, both bandaged and sore. Despite various operations to remove cancerous growths, involving many pairs of his body, Green stuck valiantly to his work, and died at the post of duty."

Canon Driver's Successor.

The Rev. G. A. Cooke, D.D., Oriel professor of the interpretation of holy scripture at Oxford and canon of Rochester, has been appointed regius professor of Hebrew and canon of Christ Church, Oxford, in succession to the late Prof. S. R. Driver, D.D. "The appointment of Dr. Cooke, in succession to the late Dr. Driver, has been generally expected," says the Times. "Dr. Cooke was born in 1865, was educated at Merchant Taylors' School, and was a scholar of Wadham. He was called to Oxford in 1908 to succeed Dr. Cheyne in the oriel professorship, to which a canonry in Rochester Cathedral is attached. Dr. Cooke is the author of various books on old testament subjects, and has contributed many articles to Hastings' dictionary of the Bible, the Encyclopedia Biblica, and various journals. His important book on north semitic inscriptions is dedicated to Dr. Driver, to whom he has frequently expressed the gratitude of a pupil to a venerated master."

Postmistress Is Quite Well Again

Found Complete Cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Gray, who was Nervous and Run Down for Two Years, Tells how She Found New Health.

Titchborne Co., Ont. April 3 (Special).—Mrs. H. Gray, the popular postmistress here, is telling her friends of the great benefit she has received from taking Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"For about two years," Mrs. Gray says, "I was all run down. My sleep was broken and unrefreshing, and I suffered from shortness of breath and heart flutterings. I finally decided that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble and decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I took four boxes in all and I feel quite strong and like my self again. I certainly think Dodd's Kidney Pills are a good medicine."

The experience of the postmistress is similar to that of thousands of other Canadian women. They were weak run down, nervous and in bad health generally. They took Dodd's Kidney Pills and are strong and well again.

The reason is that when the kidneys get out of order they fail to strain the impurities out of the blood and general lassitude and weakness ensue. The natural cure is to cure the kidneys. The experience of thousands of others tells you that Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys.

London, April 3.—The night life of the world cities is growing more and more popular.

Conditions in Winnipeg Press Declares a Clean-Up Should Be Made There—Quiet at Berlin.

A good deal of attention has recently been called to the growth of night life in the big capitals of Europe.

These weeks papers give some facts with regard to this matter so far as it concerns London, Berlin—and even Winnipeg.

London's Night Life.

"Night club life in London is growing more and more popular among those who can afford it," says a writer in the Sunday Chronicle. "I made a 3 a.m. tour a morning or two ago of all the more reputable clubs, and found an abundance of light, levity, luxury, and I cannot say quite innocent—enjoyment. The tango and the maxixe have almost entirely ousted the waltz at these establishments, and as most of the ladies who frequent the night clubs are professional dancers, or at least on the stage, the dancing reaches a very high standard of proficiency. Of all the clubs there is none that quite attains the atmosphere of the Cabaret, the Cave of the Golden Calif, as it is somewhat cynically termed. Here alone one has the Bohemian atmosphere of an architectural and human. The appearance of the dancing-hall, with its cubist ballet to the stage, is unlike all the others, and the people, too, are different."

Assortment of Men and Women.

"Murray's is a little garish, the Cosmopolitan frankly theatrical, the '400' is in Bond street, and doesn't let you forget it, the Astor, too like a very smart restaurant. But the Cabaret is different. In the first place it is run by a lady with an individuality, the widow of Strindberg, the gloomy Scandinavian playwright and author who publicly at any rate—had a cynical 'unfaith' in all women, and wrote plays and things to tell us so. Then there are the grotesque carvings of Eysing, the futurist sculptor, and the mad frescoes of Wyndham Lewis and the cubic-futurists. And finally there are people—an amazingly interesting assortment of versatile men and women. I glanced round the tables and dancing-stage the other night, and noticed the following:

A scene painter. A dramatic critic with his wife.

A church organist. A female fresco-painter.

A famous beauty. A cartoonist.

An editor. A much-beringed Mexican.

A singer who recites her own poetry. Two or three Some musical-comedy actresses. Some 'Army officers.

When "Life" Starts.

"Life doesn't start here until about one o'clock, and it goes on until 'any old time,' and often concludes with a Turkish bath at one of the never-closing establishments. The dancing is interrupted by entertainers of various kinds, partly professional, partly voluntary, for many members can do something or other to amuse, or they bring in talented friends who can. The Cabaret Club is certainly one of the sights of modern London. They have pyramas balls every Saturday at present, and on Thursday there was a babies' ball, at which everybody had to be dressed as a baby or a toy."

Night Life in German Towns.

"There is not the least doubt that 'night life' is flourishing extraordinarily throughout Germany, and there is hardly a provincial town of any importance which has not got one or more dancing establishments open until the early morning," says the Times Berlin correspondent. "On the other hand, the establishments carry on their business under the glare of electric lighting, and, as the Socialists maintain, it is doubtful whether they contribute much to the promotion of vice. That they are detrimental to decent living, especially in the upper middle-classes, is, however, hardly open to question."

"The Lower House of the Prussian Diet, or rather the vast majority in that Assembly, has adopted after a long debate, a motion requiring the Government to employ all lawful means to check 'the growing immorality, especially in the large towns.' The motion refers especially to obscure restaurants in which waitresses are employed, to bars, cabarets, and other institutions, demands a new law dealing with cinematograph exhibitions, and suggests a curtailment of the privileges accorded by the police authorities to places of entertainment."

"Dr. Liebknecht, the well-known Socialist, said today that, although there were more night restaurants and so on in Berlin, nobody could maintain that Berlin was really more immoral than London. He declared, moreover, that neither prostitution nor 'night life' was any measure of immorality. The Government did not offer much hope of reform."

"The whole situation in Germany with regard to such matters is most curious," adds the Times correspondent. "Side by side with the police rule, for which Prussia is so famous abroad, goes an astonishing amount of liberty of the individual to do much what he likes, and to do it when he likes, provided that there is no open scandal."

"An American humorist with a keen capacity for observation recently described Berlin as 'all night and no life,'" says the Berlin correspondent of the Observer. "Baron Shenck does not agree with him. Having, apparently, made his comparisons with some care, he asserts that Paris, once the metropolis of nocturnal inquiry, is now far outstripped in that regard by Berlin. London, he said, was primness and propriety personified, compared with the midnight supper and dancing resorts, bars, cabarets and cafe chantants, which is Berlin all night. The popularity of the West End supper-club is evidently not a matter of knowledge to the Baron, for he pleaded for the adoption of London's midnight closing ordinance as a cure-all for Berlin's wickedness after dark."

Winnipeg Wants a Clean-Up.

Even a new country like Canada is wanting a "clean up" on its night side—at least, in Winnipeg.

"The demand made a week ago that the present opportunity be seized to 'clean up' the city has been so strongly backed by public opinion that there is Browning's Housekeeper.

"It has just become known that a former housekeeper of Robert Browning, recently died in Portsmouth Workhouse Infirmary at the age of 85. Her name was Eliza Cawley, and on the return of Browning from Florence, immediately after the death of his wife, she became his housekeeper at his residence in Warwick Crescent."

"Here she used to see Carlyle, Mazzini, and Garibaldi when they paid visits. On the occasion of Garibaldi's visit he wore his favorite red shirt and slouch hat which, together with his foreign appearance, led the housekeeper to refuse him admission until she had consulted her master. On hearing her description of the visitor Browning it is stated, wrung his hands and exclaimed, 'You have shut out my best friend.'"

"Mrs. Cawley eventually left Browning's service on account of ill-health, and removed to Gosport. In the end she was obliged to go to the infirmary, where she was noted for her embroidery work. A number of friends have arranged to erect over her grave a cross commemorating her association with Browning."

He declared, moreover, that neither prostitution nor 'night life' was any measure of immorality. The Government did not offer much hope of reform."

"The Lower House of the Prussian Diet, or rather the vast majority in that Assembly, has adopted after a long debate, a motion requiring the Government to employ all lawful means to check 'the growing immorality, especially in the large towns.' The motion refers especially to obscure restaurants in which waitresses are employed, to bars, cabarets, and other institutions, demands a new law dealing with cinematograph exhibitions, and suggests a curtailment of the privileges accorded by the police authorities to places of entertainment."

What a Savings Account is

A savings account is the best and truest friend on earth. It asks no whys and wherefores, but returns your dollars with interest when required most. It tides over trouble and makes advancement possible when no other friend can.

The growth of a savings account depends largely on the interest paid. Our depositors receive 3 1/2 per cent. compound interest.

CROSS, FEVERISH, SICK CHILDREN NEED "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS"

A Coated Tongue Means Singlish Liver and Bowels—Listen, mother!

Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has sour stomach, diarrhoea, remember a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills. Give a teaspoonful and in just a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food, clogged in the bowels, passes out of the system and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless fruit laxative and it never fails to effect a good inside cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on each bottle.

Mother, keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no cheaper size. Don't be fooled.

Warning to the Hotels.

"One influence which should be thrown heavily in favor of investigation and house-cleaning is that exercised by the real hotelkeepers of Winnipeg. The men who keep hotels should regard as their most dangerous enemies the men who run drinking dens under the masquerade of hotels. Their one chance of retaining privileges of value to them is to exert themselves to stamp out hotels of that class."

Some Ruined Lives.

"Members of the city police force, particularly the city detectives, are familiar with the conditions that prevail in these places and the evil they do to the community. Physicians, clergymen, social workers, charitable agencies and employers can, if they will, tell pitiable stories of the ruined lives which are by-products of these resorts."

"The scope of the inquiry should include not only the clubs, but the hotels. A considerable proportion of the hotels in this city ought to be put out of business. In a criminal case before the assizes less than a year ago an astounding rate was told of a big gambling game in one of the city hotels which was broken up by a masked individual, armed with an automatic revolver, who gathered round for hoping that something effective will be accomplished," says the Manitoba Free Press.

What is happening in Winnipeg is a striking illustration of the power of publicity. The evidence given before the Royal Commission by witnesses, revealing the existence in the city of all-night drinking joints, reacted at once upon public opinion.

"It is clear that if the facts about these 'clubs' and other undesirable meeting-places can be obtained and made known, public opinion can be relied upon to force drastic and final action. What is needed is an inquiry, a searching investigation by a commission armed with sweeping inquisitorial powers."

WHEN RHEUMATISM STRIKES THE HEART

Western Ontario Editors No. 4

Commencing the duties of editor of the Brantford Daily Courier when he reached the age of 15 years, F. D. Reville, managing editor of that paper, has seen 34 years pass over his head while still wielding a trenchant pen. Into that position, and has held it with credit and vigor since.

F. D. Reville was born in Oxfordshire, England, about the year 1865, and when but 15 years of age, came to this country, to join his uncle, the late Major Lemmon, owner of the Brantford Courier. It is admitted that his cleverness with the pen, combined with a thorough knowledge of Brantford's affairs, as well as those of the province and Dominion, place him in the front rank of Canadian journalists. He has always taken a deep interest in politics, following the Conservative persuasion, and he has been offered, on several occasions, the nomination for this riding, though this he always declined, as he did when offered the shrievalty, his feelings rebelling against the leaving of affairs journalistic. He is at the present time a director of the Brantford General Hospital, and the Bell Memorial, and he is also a member of the Brantford Golf Club and the Brantford Club.

men who commit such outrages are for the most part well paid agitators who do not seem to care what happens so long as funds flow into the coffers of the people by whom they are paid. There is some talk of getting at the wealthy ladies who keep up the organization, but if that were done there would be more "martyrs."

To Baffin Bay for Gold.
A remarkable trip to the Arctic regions is being organized to trade in Arctic furs and search for alluvial gold in Baffin Land. Some years ago a Dundee whaling seaman named Charles Smith was sent to Baffin Bay in his vessel in Baffin Bay to obtain freshwater. He picked up two curious nuggets. On his return to Dundee he took them to a jeweller who declared they were gold and offered him a sum of money for them. Smith afterwards went to Newfoundland to live and before he died gave to Mr. John Brown, of St. John's, a map of the place where he found the nuggets. Smith who was wharfinger of the Dundee Sealing and Whaling Company at St. John's, is declared to have been a reliable and truthful man. In 1912 the whaling steamer Algerine, was taken north by Captain Munn, but she met with disaster. The new expedition are out for gold of more than the alluvial kind, oil, whalebone, to take moving pictures, and to carry a company of sportsmen numbering about a dozen who are to contribute handsomely to the profits of the voyage in return for five meals a day, cigars, tobacco and the best of wines.

A Perth Centenary.
Arrangements have been made to celebrate the centenary of Charles Mackay, who saw the light at Perth, on 27th March, 1814. Early in life he lost his mother and removed to a "lovely house" on the shores of the Forth near Newhaven, under the care of a nurse, "a bonnie and buxom lass of Falkirk." Later in life he went to London where he was under the care of the Rev. John Lees, a preacher with no "cure for souls," who preached to a very small Gaelic congregation for a very small salary. Young Mackay sat twice a Sunday to hear the popular Edward Irving, who was a great friend of Jane Welch, who afterwards became Mrs. Thomas Carlyle. Mackay joined his father in Brussels where he met Charles Lever. Returning to London he became a journalist and a poet and a friend of Samuel Rogers and Thomas Campbell. In 1844 he was editor of "The Glasgow Argus." Two years later he issued a volume of verses entitled "Voices from the Crown," which includes, "The cheer," set to music by Henry Russell, and one of the most popular songs of a past generation. His son Eric Mackay who wrote the "Love Letters of a Violinist," adopted Marie Conell, the novelist, as a daughter.

A Highland Romance.
A strange Highland legend is recalled by the death of Mr. James MacDonald, a Braemar carpenter, who was 80 years of age. Mr. MacDonald was one of the family of "Wolf MacDonald." The family has been connected with Glenclunie, Braemar, for many hundreds of years and is said to have sprung from a progenitor who, like Romulus, was suckled by a she-wolf. The late Mr. MacDonald, who supervised the erection of almost the whole of the buildings on the Mar estate, always moved at a sharp trot instead of walking from one job to another. He was in many ways a "character."

The Aberdeenshire Scandal.
The reason of the hostile demonstrations against the Rev. J. A. Crawford, Fintona, Aberdeenshire, which were continued this week cannot be withheld for very long. Last Saturday the village burned his effigy and a small coffin in a bonfire near the church. There were only two members of the church choir present on Sunday and many of the parishioners have left the church. Two policemen in plain clothes attended the service but there was no breach of the peace.

The Duke of Sutherland is to sell a great part of his Sutherlandshire estate in October no less than 30,000 acres in the country will be disposed of to the highest bidder. The Duke owns close on 400,000 acres of deer forest in Sutherland yielding a revenue of £13,556 which at 25 years purchase works out at about 17s. per acre. The sale, which is to include the fishings reserved when an offer was made to the government will show whether the offer of 200,000 acres at £2 per acre afterwards modified to 22s. 6d. was a bargain or a "job." Altogether the sale will be a record one for no such tract of country has ever been offered at auction in this country. It is rather singular that almost on the day that the coming sale was announced the Scottish Land Commission issued a list of several hundred revaluations of rents on the Sutherland estate. In most cases the rents were reduced; in a few cases there were increases. The Court pointed out that the estate to encourage good tenants have been in the habit of making improvements varying in cost from a few shillings to £50 without charging extra rent or interest. These improvements have been considered in fixing the new rents.

Ministers' Pensions.
Are clergymen entitled to pensions unless they are in need? This is the question that will doubtless be raised by the laity in connection with the proposed fund of the Church of Scotland to provide ministers who reach the age of 70 with an old age pension of £100 a year. The Church aims at raising £100,000 in 10 years, and have given £32,000. This the Dundee Presbytery considers satisfactory but it will be a long time before they reach the total. In short, there is a feeling of discontent on the part of ministers in the doubtful course, and that many clergymen should be able to save enough for old age. The fund is intended to get rid of men who have outlived their usefulness.

At the latter banquet, held this week, it was reported that attendance of 9,000 to classes of two hours each—making a total during the past season of 18,000 hours' study in nine subjects. When the night classes were begun three years ago, the season's record was only an aggregate of 3,000 hours of study. One of the teachers, Mr. Mayberry, declared that attendance was not half taken care of. There were many people still who needed teachers—yes, if the teachers were available, the classes could have ten times the present attendance, he declared.

Overland

66 Miles High

OUR 1914 production of 50,000 cars, piled one on top of the other, would reach 350,000 feet or 66 miles in the air.

This is over 355 times as high as the Eiffel Tower in Paris, which is the tallest structure in the world.

This is over 466 times as tall as the Woolworth Building or 630 times as high as the Washington Monument.

Also this is over 432 times the length of the Imperator.

Such figures are dazzling. But they help to make you realize the immensity of our production and the large scale on which we conduct our business. And finally and most important of all help to prove the one great big point we have always endeavored to drive home—the economy of producing automobiles in great quantities.

Manufacturing, purchasing and marketing on a 50,000 car basis is infinitely less expensive than on the thousand car basis.

And that is why we can sell the Overland for 30% less than any other similar car made.

DELHI, THE CAPITAL OF INDIA, DUE TO COLOSSAL AUDACITY

(From London Daily News.)

It is now more than two years since the Government of India sprang its gigantic surprise packet upon a dumbfounded public in the shape of an announcement, by the King-Emperor at Delhi, that the seat of the Government of India would be situated in Delhi for the future. The colossal audacity of the proposal took the breath of India away, and to the many unthinking people outside of India who had not the faintest idea of what it meant it doubtless seemed a bold and magnificent move. Even in India there were a few—mostly Indian princes who imagined it would be more convenient to pay periodical visits to Delhi than to Calcutta—who honestly thought that it was not half a bad idea.

In Bombay the feeling of jealousy of Calcutta has always run ludicrously high, and when the citizens saw Calcutta flung on one side by the Government of India, their indignation knew no bounds. They led the acclamations which the Government interpreted as signifying India's approval of its headless step.

The opposition of Calcutta was, of course, whole-hearted and strenuous, but the advocates of the scheme were naturally able to represent—and did represent—that it was entirely due to Calcutta. From my knowledge of local opinion I can honestly say that this element entered into the matter in a very subordinate degree. The main objection of the Calcutta merchants, who were quite shrewd enough to see that it would make no difference to their trade, was on account of the gigantic expense which they saw it would entail. India, it cannot too often be insisted upon, is a wretchedly poor country, and cannot afford the luxury of a new imperial capital "made to order," as Mr. Ramsay MacDonald says, together with the hundred and one other expenses which the change has entailed.

Unending Expenditure.
For although the Government of India is not yet in a position to say what the new capital will cost—probably will never dare to say it straight out—the expenses of Delhi itself do not give any idea of the total cost of the enterprise to the Indian taxpayer. Three new governments have had to be created, and each of these must have its own paraphernalia in the shape of secretaries, members of council, government houses, council houses, high courts, etc.—adding to the general expenditure by many crores of rupees.

And then the hideous wastefulness of it! In Calcutta today there are gigantic Government buildings empty, that have cost untold money to build, and this is in a city where land can hardly be bought for money, so valuable is it. And the Government which has left these buildings empty is in the meantime building a temporary home of "lath and plaster" (again to quote Mr. Ramsay MacDonald), which is "wasting the revenues of India like a famine."

As to the cost of the work in Delhi itself, the Government of India, in recommending the change of capital to the secretary of state, airily reckoned it at four millions, including land and buildings. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, who is the latest English visitor to publish his reflections upon the subject, puts the cost at a minimum of eight millions. The "Englishman" special correspondent, commenting upon this estimate, congratulates Mr. MacDonald upon being so sanguine, and assures him that no one in Delhi would venture to put it nearly so low!

Last cold weather it was impossible to judge what Delhi was like as a legislative and administrative centre; for the outrage upon the viceroys as he was riding into the new capital so upset the nerves of the Government that practically nothing was done all that session—that is, practically no legislation was attempted, except an abortive effort to pass an amended Companies Act. It was so badly done that the chambers of commerce would hardly look at it, and finally the Government of India, in a very bad temper, had to agree to part of it being kept back for another session.

entirely deadening and soporific. Whenever a member of the Government desires seriously to get into touch with the life of India, he comes quietly down to Calcutta, or, less quietly, across to Bombay.

The Lean Years.
The enormous works which the Government of India is throwing up at Delhi literally regardless of expense, and for the glorification of a handful of officials, who, as the "Statesman" once wittily remarked, could easily be accommodated in a single Calcutta hotel, are steadily growing more obnoxious to public opinion in this country. And during the past few months a situation has grown up which lends special point and emphasis to the scandal. The bumper years which India has enjoyed for so long have come to an end. The opium revenue has been cut off. There is famine in Northern India, and there will be an enormous falling off in the land revenue, in addition to which large grants will have to be made to the famine-stricken areas. The finance member is faced with a deficit. The viceroy was obliged to tell the senate of the Calcutta University, when he was here a month ago, that he had no more money for education. Everybody is asking how the indispensable railway and other public works are going to be financed. And meanwhile the Government of India is pouring out money like water upon a scheme which is perfectly insane alike in its extravagance, its uselessness, and its blind indifference to the stern facts of India's necessity. Is it possible that a Liberal Government will consent to the consumption of a folly into which it was in an evil hour betrayed?

SCOTLAND ANGRY AT THE CAMPAIGN OF SUFFRAGISTS

Mrs. Pankhurst's Visit to Glasgow Did More Harm Than Good to Her Cause.

NEW SEARCH FOR GOLD Centenary of Charles Mackay, the Great Journalist, has Been Remembered.

Glasgow.—We had lively scenes in Glasgow recently when Mrs. Pankhurst was billed to speak at Andrew's Hall. The lady who knew she would be arrested if she spoke, duly arrived and succeeded in eluding three Scotland Yard detectives who were waiting her arrival at the hall. When Mrs. Pankhurst appeared they endeavored to reach the platform. The stairways were blocked, and the ladies in blue and white, who promptly jumped up from the front. They discovered that the ladies were not defenceless. An innocent looking row of plants which had been placed by the women to conceal a barbed wire fence. The cloth was whipped from the chairwoman's table to disclose many pails of water and the women resumed their positions while one person brandished a life life preserver of lead and another discharged blank cartridges from a revolver. Efforts were of course made to secure Mrs. Pankhurst's escape but the local policemen who were having their first battle with the suffragettes were keen on capturing the lady. Those who stood in the way, afraid, received rather rough treatment, but to interfere with the police in the execution of their duty is a criminal offence and as the women refused to leave the hall, they were asked to leave it.

Mrs. Pankhurst refused to walk and had to be half dragged, half carried to the street amid crowds of indignant women. She refused to enter the hall and was put on the floor while, as one lady indignantly observed, "the police occupied the seats themselves." Meantime the other suffragettes proceeded to call on the Lord Provost at 3 o'clock in the morning, while Mrs. Pankhurst in prison declined to take food. All the railway stations were watched by the police but the police quietly drove their prisoner by motor car to Coatbridge where she was put into the London train and so back to Holloway jail. Next day a deputation of suffragettes waited on the magistrates to complain about the conduct of the police. It was amusing to find that the magistrate's table was covered with a collection of suffragette badges but the ladies have no need for logic so long as they get notoriety. The destruction of priceless treasures and ancient buildings is causing a revolution of feeling among those who were formerly to votes for women. Women who commit such outrages are for the most part well paid agitators who do not seem to care what happens so long as funds flow into the coffers of the people by whom they are paid. There is some talk of getting at the wealthy ladies who keep up the organization, but if that were done there would be more "martyrs."

ry the streets over the water, necks of the house's former inhabitants. Hanging on the bedpost was, Villa's whored cap, and on a near-by table were his field glasses and revolver. The latter, I noted, was within easy reach of his hand.

But, Villa, on the edge of a chair, at the back of the room, was a plain-faced little woman with a black shawl drawn over her head, peasant fashion. It was Villa's wife. In strange contrast to her cheap garments were the splendid rings which blazed on every finger of both hands. Still, I believe that the Spanish jewelry shops in Chihuahua were remarkably well stocked. Senora Villa is wholly illiterate, I understood, and when her husband is in the field she lives in a little house in the Mexican quarter of El Paso. If may be, however, that another year will see the little peasant woman with diamond laden fingers and the frightened eyes mistress of the palace at Chapultepec. Who knows?

MEXICO'S FIGHTING MAN

Unreasonable Demands.
"If that train isn't out of the station in five minutes," he snarled, "I'll blow your head off."

"But, general," expostulated the trembling official, "I'm not responsible for the delay. The engine's broken down."

"That doesn't concern me," said Villa coldly. "I'm not an engineer—I'm a soldier. If that train doesn't move in five minutes you'll be dead."

The condition of the room in which Villa received me was indicative of the disorder which marks the present stage of the revolution. Lined against the wall was a row of canvas sacks, each stamped "1,000." There were thirty in all; I counted them. They doubtless comprised the war chest of the rebel army. Piled carelessly in one corner were a dozen Mauser rifles, two or three cavalry saddles and a half empty case of ammunition. In front of these various implements, and half screening them, were a baby's chair and a sewing machine—relics, no doubt of the house's former inhabitants. Hanging on the bedpost was, Villa's whored cap, and on a near-by table were his field glasses and revolver. The latter, I noted, was within easy reach of his hand.

But, Villa, on the edge of a chair, at the back of the room, was a plain-faced little woman with a black shawl drawn over her head, peasant fashion. It was Villa's wife. Educated Advisers.
My conversation with Villa was constantly interrupted by the comings and goings of officers and officials, for the commander in chief is still too new at the business to intrust any decision to a matter less important to his subordinates. The thing that impressed me most, I think, was the fashion in which his advisers—cultivated, educated, polished men for the most part, many of whom were educated at Harvard and Oxford and the Sorbonne and who are at home in the best of society of half the world's capitals—stood, but in hand, awaiting the orders of this illiterate ex-bandit and at his bidding pocketed their dignity and became messenger boys.

Much of the remarkable loyalty is due, no doubt, to fear and some of it to faith in the man's abilities as a soldier, but I can't imagine anyone serving him from love, for there is nothing that is lovable about him. But, mind you, he hasn't lost his head. I could not detect a single evidence of vanity or conceit. I think I can best describe him as a man that I would not care meet in a lonely neighborhood on a dark night.

Always grim and sullen, when angered by anything, no matter how trivial, he becomes as ferocious as a wild beast. He has about as much regard for human life as a tiger. Here is an incident to illustrate my point:

Surveying the Captives.
After a recent rebel victory in northern Chihuahua four-score or so federal prisoners were lined up in the plaza for Villa's inspection. The rebel commander, hands thrust into the pockets of his frayed sack coat, sombrero pulled over his eyes, strode forward and surveyed the cowering captives.

"Viva Villa!" he snarled.

"Viva Villa!" Villa Villa! The shrill cheer, dominated, however, by an unmistakable note of fear, ran down the cringing line.

"You dogs!" he snarled. "You shout 'Viva Villa!' today because I happen to be on top, but if I lost a battle tomorrow you'd be shouting 'Viva Huerta!'"

Then, turning to the commander of the guard: "Take them out and shoot them—and mind that you waste no ammunition. We've none to spare."

They arranged the prisoners in groups of five, as close together as they could stand; and a soldier placed the muzzle of his Mauser against the breast of the foreman in each group—and pulled the trigger. In this way one bullet did the work of five.

"A few more episodes like that, general," I told Villa quite frankly, "and you'll lose for your cause all the sympathy that it has gained in the United States. The report of these wholesale executions is leaving a bad taste in the mouths of Americans."

"Those that I have executed deserved all they got," said Villa, with a sudden hardening of the muscles about the mouth. "Some of them helped to betray Madero; others were prisoners whom I had paroled and whom I had caught with arms in their hands. But that stage of the campaign is over now. Hereafter we shall conduct the war along more executions except in aggravated cases—I give you my word as to that."

Twenty-four hours later a messenger sent to Villa by Felix Diaz was taken out of that very room where we sat and shot to death beneath the very window out of which I had been looking. It made a most unpleasant mess in the little garden.

As I rose to take my departure, Villa, though obviously in considerable pain, stood up and took my hand.

"Good-by, general," I said. "Perhaps the next time we meet it will be in the City of Mexico in the national palace."

His eyes flamed. "In the City of Mexico, perhaps," he answered, "if God let me live to reach there. But in the national palace—never. I have no wish to be president. Who am I to rule a country? I have no education for such a post. For eighteen years I was an outlaw with a price on my life. It was not until I was in prison in the capital, two years ago, that I taught myself to read and write. And my wife cannot read and write at all. I am no politician. I am a fighting man. I am fighting to free my country from the rule of a despot and to avenge the murder of Madero, who believed in me and befriended me. And I shall never rest until I have settled that score."

Whether this former outlaw, who, less than a year ago, slipped out of El Paso with a revolver in his belt and $750 in his pocket, and who is now at the head of 20,000 victory-related men, will ever sit in the presidential chair, only time can tell. For stranger things have happened below the Rio Grande, as those who are familiar with the history of Porfirio Diaz know. And Villa is but following the path that Diaz trod.

As I turned my horse's head toward the river and El Paso I caught a glimpse above the housetops of the great bronze statue of Juarez, the liberator, standing on his marble pedestal, looking southward over Mexico. And, as I rode back into civilization again, I wondered what that great patriot, were he alive again, would have about this bloody, bloody business.
