

GERMAN REPLY ONE OF DEFIANCE

PRES. WILSON FACES SITUATION OF GRAVITY---NO REPARATION FOR PAST OFFENSES OFFERED

GERMANY REFUSES ASSURANCES TO THE UNITED STATES

Virtual Defiance Breathes Through Tenure of Note.

Washington, July 10.—Although the official text of Germany's note on submarine warfare has not reached here early to-day, the press copy which was read by officials, was accepted as verification of earlier impressions that Germany had refused to give the United States the assurances asked for in the American note of June 9. Everywhere in official quarters the unsatisfactory character of the reply was discussed, along with the probable action that the United States would be compelled to take as a result of Germany's unwillingness to concede to Americans the right to travel on the high seas on peaceful merchantmen of any nationality.

GRAVE SITUATION

President Wilson will start from Cornish, N.H., for Washington, in a day or two to consider with his cabinet the grave situation impending. Comment in official quarters to-day was spurring as to the course that would be pursued, the general feeling being that nothing should be said until the president had returned.

On the other hand, those in official quarters familiar with the precedents and the progressive development of the American attitude, believed that, having stated its position and asked for assurances which no answer returned, the only course left open for the United States seemed to be an announcement that it intended to assert its rights as established under the rules of international law. This would mean in effect that the United States would await a violation by Germany before taking action to compel respect for the rights asserted.

NEVER DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS.

There was a revival of talk concerning the severance of diplomatic relations, it being recalled in official circles that in the now famous cabinet meeting of May 11, when the sinking of the Lusitania was first considered, there was an informal understanding that if the negotiations with the United States to secure reparation from Germany for the destruction of American lives in that tragedy failed, the American Government might be justified in discontinuing diplomatic intercourse with Germany. Germany's complete evasion of liability for the loss of Americans on the Lusitania, has revived the subject most acutely, according to well informed persons.

UNDERTONE OF DISAPPOINTMENT

For several days there has been an undertone of disappointment and apprehension over what Ambassador Gerard intimated the state department that the German note would contain. The feeling has been, however, that nothing formal or official could be said concerning the American position until the official text arrived. President Wilson has given quiet consideration to the character of the reply, and some of his advisers have already been making suggestions with reference to the course that should be pursued.

END OF DIPLOMACY.

Analyzing the German answer to-day, officials found little on which it appeared that the negotiations could be further prolonged. The United States had devoted its attention to the principle that the Americans should be able to travel on the high seas on unarmed and unresisting belligerent merchant ships of any nationality in accordance with recognized principles of international law. Assurances had been asked that before any destruction would be attempted, the visit and search of peaceful vessels and the transfer of passengers and crew to a place of safety would be accomplished. It was recognized that Germany in its latest note had ignored this vital question and had shifted now emphasizing the conditions under which it would promise complete immunity from danger to American ships. A situation which since Germany's circular note with reference to neutral vessels received on May 11 had not been called into question.

LEAVES IMPLICATION

The expression by Germany of a "confident hope" that the United States "will assume to guarantee that those vessels have no contraband on board, details of arrangements for the unhampered passage of these vessels to be agreed upon by naval authorities of both sides," left the implication in the minds of many officials that Germany was prepared to destroy American passenger ships if they were found to be carrying contraband. Even though passengers and crew of a neutral ship were transferred to a place of safety the destruction of the vessel for carrying contraband has been held by the United States to be in violation of international law, except in an extreme case. With reference to destruction of American ships such destruction has been held specifically to be in violation of the Prussian-American treaty of 1828. It was recalled that in the last case which Germany sent on the Frye case, this treaty was given a new interpretation in that the right to stop American ships carrying contraband and even to destroy them was declared for the first time to be a natural inference from the language of the treaty.

REFUSE TO DISAVOW

The reference in the new note to the Lusitania tragedy created a profound impression. After having asked the United States in the first place to consider that the Lusitania was in reality an armed auxiliary cruiser and carried high explosives which the American Government could not contradict with official information, the German Government commander could not have halted the vessel without submitting his boat and crew to danger of destruction and the assertion that it was not expected that the Lusitania would sink immediately after being torpedoed but would remain afloat while passengers were removed to her

"ALL THAT WAS LEFT OF THEM" Officers 4th Batt. Ontarios After Laugemarck

Maj. M. A. Colquhoun (Commanding the 4th Ontarios), Acting Captain and Adjutant F. Miller, also Acting Captain Percy Jones, are prominent in this plate. The central heavily built figure is Col. Labatt of Hamilton.

The above picture taken in the billets, behind the Canadian lines in France, is one of the scenes of the present war that mark the climax of Canada's Sacrament of Battle at Langemarck. In it are the officers of the 4th Battalion, the Ontarios—that dauntless regiment, whose hard won reputation is kept alive in the vernacular of the troops as "The Mad Fourth."

The story of its exploits on that memorable day have been recorded by Sir Max Aitken, and the fact remains that out of about two hundred officers, those in the picture are all that remained unscathed. Colonel Birchall fell leading his men; Colonel Labatt was invalidated home, shattered in health, and the way for promotion thus opened, Major Colquhoun has since been gazetted to command the battalion.

The Courier publishes the above exclusively and historically it is of great value when the fact is considered only one has so far come to this city.

TRIBUNE'S TRENCANT STATEMENT

No Nation Can Consent to the Murder of Its Citizens.

New York, July 10.—The Tribune says: "In dealing with the note, there is precisely one point that the people of this country must at all times keep in mind. No nation can consent or assent to the murder of its citizens; to do this is to relinquish one of the prime purposes of national association."

"The questions that are to be settled between Germany and ourselves are difficult, but not insoluble. A method of separation of ammunition cargoes and American passengers can be found. A majority of the American people seem plainly willing that certain American rights should be waived, that American citizens may not be used as a screen for the transport of ammunition intended to destroy German soldiers."

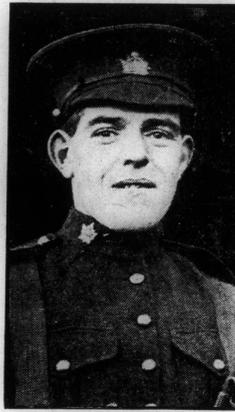

"But such an agreement cannot be made so long as Germany declines to face the Lusitania fact."

WILL BE DISHONORED

"If the United States to-day abandons the case of its murdered citizens it will be dishonored; but even worse, the whole world will suffer through the successful assertion of the doctrine that law, humanity, all that civilization can mean, can be abolished with perfect impunity by any nation at war and ready to seek victory in any pathway."

"We do not want to make war to avenge the dead of the Lusitania. But since our government sent them to their death, it cannot abandon them. It cannot become the accessory after the fact of their murder. The American citizens on the Lusitania were traveling under the protection of international law, and under the expressed guarantee of the president of the United States, as contained in his message to the German government on his submarine blockade. In declaring that the German government would be held to strict accountability for any infraction of American rights the president frankly invited American citizens to take ship as the passengers of the Lusitania did. Now it remains for Germany to deal with our demand for a settlement in the Lusitania case."

INTO CITY SUBURBS.

Washington, July 10.—Despatches to the Carranza agent to-day says General Gonzales and his troops attacking Mexico City have now penetrated to Villa de Guadalupe about two miles from the capital. Heretofore all fighting has been in the outer suburbs.

SHELLED AND SUNK.

London, July 10.—The British Steamship Ellesmere was shelled and then torpedoed and sunk to-day by a German submarine off the Cornish coast. The crew of 21 men, with the exception of the Norwegian fireman, who was killed by a shell, was saved.

AN IDEA FOR CITIZENS CORPS

Many Opinions Are Stated in Story Printed Below—Special Feature.

About two weeks ago more recruiting began for, roughly speaking, 400 men from the two local regiments. About 35 so far have enlisted. This is by no means an inspiring number, and threatens to become a serious reflection upon the readiness to serve the Empire of the citizens of Brantford. Consideration of this matter opens up the whole question of the best means to obtain recruits. There is no lack of desire upon the part of numbers of young men about the city to do their duty in this present crisis. But they hesitate to join the army because it is such a tremendous step to take. They know nothing of military life, and before the war, wanted to know nothing of it. At present they would like to experiment so to speak and see just what it is like. But there are only two ways by which they can gain any experience. One is to enlist for service abroad the other to join the militia. As regards the former, they keep putting it off. As to the militia, they do not care to join because they would have to serve three years. If the war were over in a year they would be compelled to remain attached to their local regiment for two more years after all their interest in matters military were dead. Rather than take that chance, they don't join at all. In order to meet the requirements of these people, and there are scores of such in the city—a suggestion is put forward that some sort of organization be formed, capable of offering, which would enrol numbers of people throughout the city and drill and have rifle practice once or twice a week. There need be no equipment supplied except rifles and the men joining would be under no expense, and would receive no pay. They would drill in civilian clothes. We feel sure that if such an organization were formed, scores of likely candidates throughout the city would join it, and besides gaining a valuable training, would learn at first hand what military life is and thus arouse their latent enthusiasm so as to make the organization a splendid supply for both militia and overseas.

NINE BOMBS FOUND ON BOARD SHIP

Sailed From New York With Cargo of Sugar For Marseilles.

New York, July 10.—Six of the bombs were found in one sack of sugar which burst as the steamer was discharging its cargo with slings. The bombs were round and small and rolled on the vessel's deck. Another sack contained three bombs. The bombs were all alike. Where the explosive had been placed was sealed with soft tallow or grease, placed over the opening, apparently with the idea of producing combustion in the heat of the hold. Beneath the grease on each bomb was a percussion cap. None of the bombs had been affected by the heat. The sacks containing them had been taken from the ordinary cargo hold.

The Kirkoswald is a vessel of 4,021 tons gross register, is 370 feet long and was built in 1912. She was cleared from this port May 1 by J. W. Elwell and Company, agents of the Fabre.

New York, July 10.—Nine bombs were found aboard the steamer Kirkoswald at Marseilles when the vessel went to discharge its cargo of sugar from New York on her last outward voyage, according to the Kirkoswald's officers, who reached here to-day on the steamer's return trip. None of the bombs exploded, and all were hidden in bags of sugar, the Kirkoswald's officer said. The sugar was taken aboard, they said, at the Fabre Line pier in Brooklyn. All the bombs were found while unloading the cargo.

Britain is Feeling Better Since News of Botha's Victory.

London, July 10.—A feeling of optimism which had been absent for some time, again is manifesting itself here. The feeling is chiefly due to General Botha's victory in German Southwest Africa, which at one stroke deprives Germany of territory larger than that of the German empire.

The size of the captured territory is enormously disproportionate to that of the defending forces, which consisted of 204 officers and 3,066 men. These numbers included reservists and police as well as the regular military.

The cheerfulness of the entente allies also has been aided by the stands being made by the Russians near Lublin, in Southern Russian Poland, and along the Zlota Lipa River in Galicia. It is believed in London that the stubborn resistance of the Russians is doing much to postpone the German offensive along the western front.

Only fragmentary summaries of the German reply to the United States have so far been published here, but for several days the British press has been busy predicting that Berlin's reply to the second Lusitania note would be unsatisfactory.

The newspapers comment at length on the speech of Field Marshal Earl Kitchener, at the Guild Hall yesterday, according to their views regarding conscription, one faction maintaining that the war secretary uttered a direct warning of the possibility of forced military service, while other organs profess to see in his remarks a reaffirmation of the belief in the efficiency of the volunteer system.

MAKING RAG RUGS

Revival of an Old Domestic Art With New Variations.

"HIT OR MISS" PATTERNS.

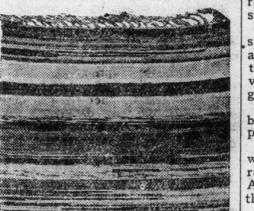

But Borders and Designs in Colors Show Many Artistic Possibilities; Also Rugs Can Be Made of Old Carpets With Success.

In this illustration is pictured an old fashioned rag rug like grandmother used to ornament her floors with. All sorts of brilliant and subdued colors were used "hit or miss," with some times very surprising artistic results. A little lady who makes her living by weaving rugs tells her story of how it all came about.

"Mine is an old fashioned way of earning a living, and my grandmother bequeathed me the means of doing it—'hit or miss'." She pointed to the cumbersome wooden object, and there was a note of pride in her voice. "Nobody knows exactly how old it is, for it has been in our family for generations," she continued. "My grandmother had it from her mother, and she could not remember when it was new. And she taught me to weave carpets of the long, narrow strips of rags which we had saved together."

"At first I stuck to the old fashioned 'hit or miss' pattern because everybody round about made their carpets in that way. One day, however, I found myself with a collection of all red and all white balls of material and conceived the idea of making a red rug with lines of white just inside of a red border. I sold that rug for $5 and took an order for a white and yellow one which was to bring me $10. That gave me my start and the incentive to continue.

RAG RUG.

"Of course I try nearly every new dye as it comes upon the market, and I do not confine myself to any particular sort, although I prefer to use the old recipes given to me by my grandmother or along with the old loom. Experience with dyes has taught me which materials are most easily colored the desired shades, and in considering the purchase of rags for carpets I chiefly buy those fabrics.

"Rag carpet weaving has not made a fortune for me," concluded the middle aged weaver, "but it has supported me for years in perfect comfort, and I need not deny myself anything within reason.

I find that another excellent, artistic and durable rug is made from old carpets and rugs. Anything that is carpet can be used, and all rugs are double faced. The rugs are exactly the original colors of the carpet in mottled design, very handsome if the carpets are rich, and if there be less color they are of the neutral tones, which are always very satisfactory in wear and to some more beautiful than the brighter colors. For places of hard wear, such as halls, dining rooms, porches, these rugs are without a rival in general utility. While carpets may appear worn, the surface or top layer only is gone, and there remain three or four layers of unworn wool beneath the fray almost as good as new."

Mrs. F. Roy gave an Instrumental solo after which Mrs. G. Rose read a report of the morning session of the annual convention which was very interesting. Some recipes were given for summer beverages.

Mrs. Wilson sang a solo, followed by a discussion on "The care of house plants" led by Mrs. Reid.

During the meeting some business was transacted. The members are raising $50 to furnish a Hospital cot. After singing "God save the King" the meeting was adjourned.

Music and Drama

THE COLONIAL

The Colonial Theatre was packed last night by an enthusiastic audience to see and enjoy the war pictures. Seven reels of active warlike scenes showing the great conflict in Europe and its side lights in Canada were heartily applauded. Actual fighting scenes were presented, and the allies driving back a company of Germans brought down the house. All the different phases of warfare, life in the trenches, trench construction, Red Cross workers, different enlistment campaigns, army service corps, field kitchens, blacksmiths, and scouts routing out information were depicted in clear and clever pictures. Several splendid views of the different Canadian contingents drilling, being reviewed and embarking for the front elicited storms of applause.

Nothing could exceed the enthusiasm of the crowd who thronged the house. The applause given was free and unstinted, and scene after scene of the allies was a signal for renewed outbursts of enthusiasm.

The Colonial is well worth a visit and it is a distinct privilege to have such films in this city. One can easily understand how it was the Massey Hall crowds thrilled at the sight of their stirring scenes.

A bumper house last night is the forerunner of great crowds to-day. Manager Symonds said "he never saw such popular movies as the war scenes have proved, before, and the long queues at the entrance bears out the statement."

* CAN'T FIND DANDRUFF? Every bit of dandruff disappears after one or two applications of Danderrine rubbed well into the scalp with the finger tips. Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderrine at any drug store and save your hair. After a few applications you can't find a particle of dandruff or any itchy hair, and the scalp will never itch.

BRANTFORD LAUNDRY LOOKING FOR MORE IMPROVEMENTS

Manager of Brantford Laundry Talks Enthusiastically About National Launderers' Association Convention.

"The Convention in Portland, Oregon, July 18-22, is going to be the best ever," said Mr. Garry Pickles, Manager of the Brantford Laundry, as he left last night for Chicago, "and we're going to learn all about any improvements in laundry methods that have developed within the past year."

"The Brantford Laundry is to-day one of the finest in Canada. Improved laundry methods, and the newest and best laundry machinery, make Brantford Laundry Service the best that Brantford citizens can enjoy.

"Why, take that collar you are wearing. That was laundered at Brantford Laundry. I can tell you by the finish! Well, there's a great difference between that soft, velvety, domestic finish and the "looking-glass" finish you get from a hand laundry. And there's just as much difference in the methods we use, and those used by hand laundrymen."

"Thousands of dollars have been invested in the finest laundry machinery that we can buy. The collar ironing machines mechanically do work the most skillful worker could not expect to do."

"Expensive you say? Well! We find that every improvement we make in our service tends to bring greater satisfaction to our many customers, and satisfied customers are our best advertising.

"This year laundrymen from Halifax, N.S., down to Key West, Florida, and from Vancouver to San Francisco, will gather in Portland, Oregon. Any bright idea that has been put to practical use and that has shown an improvement in laundry work will be made known. If we can use the idea to advantage in the Brantford Laundry, in a short time Brantford will be getting the benefit of it."

"But there are always new ideas, and a great deal is to be learned at the convention, and apart from that, we will visit the finest laundries in Chicago, Seattle, Tacoma, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Salt Lake City and Kansas City. The laundry business is like any other business—always going ahead. A few years ago, few families sent all their washing to the laundryman. Now, the situation is reversed—few homes in the cities are burdened with laundry work. The people find it cheaper to send their work to the laundryman, because the actual expenditure is small, indeed, and, because of the saving made in wear and tear, by modern laundry methods that cannot be introduced into the home."

British News

At the police court, Liverpool, a few days ago, a German named Freybank, was charged with failing to register himself as an alien enemy, and with being in possession of five cartridges, the property of the British War Office. His wife was also charged with failing to register. The male prisoner was a lamp trimmer on a British troopship. Police inquiries as to his nationality resulted in his being challenged on his return to Liverpool from a voyage. He at first declared that his name was Peter Thompson, but subsequently said his name was Richard Freybank, and was a native of Pomerania. He had sailed under the name of Thompson all his life. His wife said she married Freybank twenty-seven years ago under the name of Thompson, and she always believed he was a Canadian. Addressing the Court from the dock, Freybank said he took the name of Thompson many years ago, because he found it difficult to obtain employment in an English ship under a German name. As to the cartridges, he picked them up from the deck of the troopship. The female prisoner said she was British born, and had not suspected her husband's nationality until he was arrested.

While trying to escape from the concentration camp at Leigh, Lancashire, a German prisoner was shot dead by a sentry. At the inquest, the commandant of the camp said there was some refractory conduct among prisoners, and some of them made an attempt to escape by penetrating through the wall of their dormitory. The attempt was discovered, the sentries were doubled, the strictest vigilance was imposed upon them, and every precaution taken. Those precautions had just been completed when he heard a summons for the guard to turn out. He rushed out and found deceased lying apparently dead, with the medical officer attending to him. He received a report from the sentries and found that they had acted under a Royal Warrant issued in August last regarding the regulations for the maintenance of discipline among prisoners of war. These rules had been issued to the prisoners themselves, and were perfectly well known by them. Under those regulations, if prisoners attempted without permission of the commandant to pass a boundary, and disregard warnings, they could be fired upon.

Old World Notes

The toy manufacturers of the United Kingdom are greatly pleased with the result of the exhibition of the new British-made toys at the Board of Trade Fair. One new firm which has been in business only a few months has succeeded in manufacturing five toys which hitherto have been German specialties. They include the miniature kitchen range with pots and pans which is to be found in every German nursery. One of the novelties shown at the fair is a cannon with machine action which is capable of firing 200 real lead bullets a minute. But there will be no bloodshed in the nursery for the bullets fall as softly as snow. Another success is the series of Hilda Cowham kiddies, one of the quaint wooden figures christened "Dainty Daphne" having been purchased by the Queen. Her Majesty also bought "Curly Locks," an unbreakable doll whose features have been blocked out in relief instead of being merely painted on.

The latest benefactor of Lord Iveagh to the city of Dublin is one for which he will receive universal thanks—He has, with characteristic generosity, requested the British Red Cross Society to equip at his expense the existing spare wards in the Dublin hospitals, which will mean an addition of 167 beds. He has also generously agreed to conform to the suggestion of the military authorities to extend the accommodation for wounded soldiers at King George V. Hospital by the erection of an auxiliary hospital, consisting of huts which will contain 200 beds.

A wealthy beggar was arrested a few days ago in Dublin. He was sentenced to a month's imprisonment for stealing religious emblems from St. Mary's, the Roman Catholic Cathedral. The defendant's son said his father had been in business as a draper in Cork, and had also been a landowner. He sold his land, and was at present worth $10,000. The police stated that the prisoner was originally arrested for begging from door to door, and the stolen emblems were found on him.

A farmer's daughter of Pilmore, near Youlth, was attacked the other Sunday morning by an unknown assailant, who attempted to cut her throat. It appears that while the girl was entering an outhouse to feed the fowls some person rushed at her from behind, threw a cloth over her head, and drew a sharp instrument across her throat, inflicting a nasty, but not dangerous wound. The assailant acted so quickly that he did not even see him before she fainted.

THE SITUATION

Matters have taken on a more hopeful tone with the fact not ignored that there is still very serious work ahead for the duration of many months. Lord Kitchener in his Guildhall speech was able to inform his hearers and the nation that lack of equipment has now been overcome and would be for the future.

The French forces are still holding well and the Russians are once again taking it out of the Austrians. As a tactician, the fact has become more and more emphasized that the Grand Duke Nicholas is in the very front rank.

The Turks have been reinforced in the Gallipoli peninsula and are making counter-attacks, but without success.

The commendations of the great work of General Botha in Africa have been general and unreserved, and everyone must admit, quite deservedly so.

MR. ASQUITH'S SPEECH.

Elsewhere in this issue The Courier gives in full the notable speech which Premier Asquith made in the House of Commons in submitting another vote of credit for the prosecution of the war.

He dealt with stupendous figures in a clear cut manner, but the chief interest of his remarks centered in his references to the reasons for his adoption of a coalition ministry.

In this regard he paid generous tribute to the fact that the members of the opposition had from the inception of the war given generous co-operation to the government, and this, of course, has been especially true of Ex-Premier Balfour, who at once placed his unrivalled services at the disposal of the administration. The point emphasized by Mr. Asquith was that he thought it the better plan to give concrete evidence of the co-operation prevailing by forming a combined cabinet from both sides.

His reference to the regret with which he had asked former colleagues to make way for others was marked by the tone of sincerity, and there was almost a pathetic note in his statement that having served in responsible positions under three successive sovereigns he had not left any unsatisfied personal ambition. It was the remark of a Titan somewhat weary of his load, but still resolved to serve his King and his country to the last drop of value there is in him.

THE GERMAN REPLY.

The final reply of Germany to the United States means in effect that the Kaiser and his colleagues do not propose to yield to the demands of Uncle Sam. As a matter of fact they do not seem to care very much whether or no the United States become added to their foes. They are, of course, well aware of the unpreparedness of our neighbors, both with regard to navy and land forces, and they know that they are shipping all munitions they can to the Allies—would do the same, of course, for Germany, if the latter country could secure safe transport for them, which she cannot.

The next move of President Wilson will be watched with interest. That he and his administration have been openly flouted is the plain truth of the matter and the only self respecting course would seem to be to break off relationships with Berlin. That this will be done is still doubtful, and not desirable from the standpoint of the Allies.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

The Minnehaha has the last part of her name on those bombs.

Kitchener's magnificent reception on his way to the Guildhall, leaves no doubt whatever as to the popular sentiment regarding him.

Kitchener's fine tribute to the work of the Overseas contingents was splendidly given and had been fully earned.

The Turks are now threatening Aden, the port of call in connection with the Suez Canal. No one can tell where the sparks from this great conflagration will next fall.

Upon his arrival in London Premier Borden was subjected to the inevitable interview. As usual he struck a high note in his remarks and rightly declared that the Canadian feeling was that the war must proceed until German militarism has been crushed.

WORLD PRESS ON THE WAR

THE HYPHENATED DANGER

Boston Transcript—In Col. Roosevelt's words, "the events of the last few months have brought vividly home to all of us the extreme danger to this country of permitting the upgrowth here of any system of group citizenship. The hyphenated American is a danger to the country. This is true whether he call himself English-American, or French-American, German-American, or Irish-American, or Hungarian-American or Jewish-American. He particularly emphasizes that it is well to remember that it is also true if in a narrow spirit of intolerant exclusiveness he call himself native-American. Americanization is a matter of spirit and soul, not a matter of a man's physical birth place or his national origin or his creed. It is a wicked and abhorrent thing for such a citizen not to understand that his whole and undivided loyalty is due to the United States, and only to the United States."

HONOR AND DUTY

London Daily Express—Honor is a force within us that compels us to obey the behest of duty, that "stern daughter of the voice of God." No man can teach another his duty. No man is really doubtful what his duty is. If he is to be himself—and that is the first necessity of a satisfactory life—he counts the world well lost if duty be fulfilled. If, because it is hard and unpleasant, he runs away from duty, he can never again be a comfortable companion to himself, and "ourselves" are the only companions we can never avoid. The man who skulks when he might be fighting, and who goes on in idle self-indulgence when he should be making sacrifices, has lost his honor and his soul—and "what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Men who have no great yearning for adventure and no love for fighting, men who care for peace and dread violence, have hurried to the fighting line because honor and duty and self respect leave them no alternative. For many of them pain and death have real consistent terrors, but they love duty more than they fear death.

A PLEASANT REMINDER

Springfield Republican—The assurance from the Dominion Government of continued hospitality in Canada for Americans, whether travellers or prospective settlers, and for unaturalized foreigners from "the States," as well without the requirement of passpo is a pleasant reminder of the 100 years of peace just ended and the second hundred just begun.

A WORD OF WARNING

New York Tribune—The spirit of outrage manifested by pro-German partisans should not be allowed to stalk any longer behind a pseudo-political propaganda. The whirlwind of indignation which swept the country after the destruction of the Lusitania will be a zephyr compared to the storm which must overwhelm the introductors to our soil of the German methods of crime and savagery which have just manifested themselves in the Morgan assault and the bomb operations in the Senate wing of the Capitol.

OUR HEROES

London Daily Mail—The nation lives because its sons are willing to die. To them death brings no mean and miserable terror. Rather may it be said of them in the words of the true and tender poet who laid down his life for England not two months ago, that they, "proud, clear-eyed, and laughing, go to greet Death as a friend." And their spirit has been the reflection of the spirit of England's womankind, of those mothers and wives who have given unflinchingly of their flesh and blood for their country's sacred cause. For such depositions as theirs there can be no human recompense. For such grief as they must suffer there can be no consolation of man.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

"MASS PSYCHOLOGY."

London Daily Mail—The Germans are not naturally an original or an originating people. Bismarck, whose admiration for his country was well known, with a good deal of supercilious contempt, said: "We, Germans, are a nation of house-servants." What the Germans lack in independent thought they make up for by what they call "mass psychology." They think, practice, and act as one man. For some reasons that fact makes them a specially dangerous enemy. They have not the dogged courage of the English, or the elan and dash of the French. They are unaccustomed to the monotony and obedience of German life even in peace time. It is their weakness as well as their strength.

KUNO MEYER AGAIN

Providence Journal—Prof. Kuno Meyer, in his address at a German meeting in this city, declared that "the Englishman thinks himself superior to all other races." But there is a pretty general impression that the German has a similarly exalted opinion of himself. However, mixed with this Teutonic self-confidence there has long been noticeable a strong jealousy of England and the English. Somebody has described the present German state of mind as envy translated in terms of hatred. The Englishman, at any rate, would never willingly assert his superiority, however, much he might feel it. The German, on the contrary, passionately endeavors to prove to the world that there is no civilization, no culture, no efficiency like his own.

"LIFT UP YOUR HEADS."

Inverness Courier—We have nothing here to do with these slackers, but only with our British soldiers, who have gone readily to the help of the Lord against the mighty. They may not have thought much of their danger, but they knew their danger; they were prepared, as they said themselves, to do their "bit of work," and to risk the sacrifice of their lives; and their wives, their mothers, their fathers, their sisters, joined in the sacrifice, not perhaps without apprehension, but without any attempt to turn them from the perilous road. The spirits of our fallen warriors would turn from us if their death brought no man or woman that the loss of life is fruitless, or that our soldiers have fallen in vain.

THE RUSSIAN PROBLEM

London News and Leader—The misfortunes which the Russians have suffered in this spring and early summer campaign are no mystery. We imagine Russia as a country with inexhaustible resources in men, but these resources can be drawn upon only as fast as they can be equipped. We knew now that when the war opened, Russia was very badly off for equipment. As a result the Russian throughout the winter campaign could never put more than 2,000,000 into the field, and were certainly outnumbered. These deficiencies have apparently not yet been made good, and in all probability during this present campaign the Russians have been heavily outnumbered as well as out-gunned.

PEACE TALK.

New York Tribune—It is easier to make war than it is to restore peace. A nation may realize dimly the cost of going to war. Carried away by enthusiasm and passion a country seldom considers the greater cost that may be involved in failing in war and being obliged to ask for peace. Rumors of peace negotiations—of round about attempts on the part of one set of belligerents to get an inkling of the terms acceptable to the other set—will continue to circulate. But peace will not be imminent until one group of combatants becomes far more concerned about ending the war than about the particular conditions on which the war is to end.

GERMANY

boats was taken to mean that Germany held that regardless of whether the Lusitania was armed, the submarine commander took a proper course in torpedoing the ship without warning.

ENTIRELY IRRELEVANT

The argument that England by violating international law in her embargo on neutral commerce with Germany has begun a policy of starvation for Germany's civilian population was viewed by officials as entirely irrelevant. The United States has insisted that its relations with one belligerent are not to be confronted with its controversies with another and that the Lusitania case constitutes a separate question which must be settled apart from any negotiations this government may have with other nations. It was recalled by some officials that Herr Von Jagow, the German foreign minister, only recently in a published interview announced that England had not succeeded in starving Germany and that the blockade policy had been a failure. In view of this announcement, officials were not inclined to attach much weight to the starvation argument.

VIGOROUSLY DISPUTED

The view that the Americans on belligerent ships were entitled to no more protection than neutrals would be on land in a war zone, was vigorously disputed by officials who pointed out that jurisdiction of the belligerent on land was complete while the high seas are jointly owned by all nations.

CERTAIN OF REJECTION

The only definite proposal made by Germany to change the present status—the suggestion that four enemy ships could sail under the American flag if neutral passenger facilities proved inadequate—was considered certain of rejection because, aside from other considerations of principle involved, the United States could not undertake to guarantee any interference with the lawful shipment of contraband from its shores to any of the belligerents. Not only is there no federal statute which could be invoked in this connection, it was pointed out, but it always has been recognized as a fundamental right of merchants in neutral countries to trade in contraband, the burden being upon the belligerent to capture the cargoes on the high seas.

MEANS OF COMPROMISE

Officials wondered to-day what influences had caused the German Government to completely disregard the American point of view. There were intimations that in Berlin official quarters the belief prevailed that in the United States public sentiment was divided since Mr. Bryan's resignation, and the separation of passenger and contraband traffic was considered here as a means of compromising the issue.

NINE BOMBS

The Steamer Kirkoswald, flying the British flag, sailed from New York, May 2 for Marseilles. This was about the time that the activities of the bomb-placers, so far as yet disclosed, reached their height. Of the three other vessels, which it was learned recently, sailed out of New York with bombs secreted in their cargo, two departed within a few days of the Kirkoswald. They were the Lord Erne, sailing April 29, and the Bankdale, which left here May 7.

Like the Kirkoswald, both these vessels were British and both sailed for a French port—Havre. The United States secret service and the French Government, it was said, have been pressing investigations of these attempts to destroy the vessel.

A CORRECTION.

To the Editor of the Courier: Dear Sir—A paragraph in last night's Courier, identically the same as the one in the Expositor, stated that the Ministerial Alliance had passed "a strong resolution" endorsing an organization known as "The Boy Knights" for the work they were carrying on. The statement is altogether incorrect. The promoter of the organization urgently requested the Alliance to take such action, but the Alliance merely appointed a committee to look into the matter and report later.

A CIRCULAR TO EXPRESS AGENTS.

Mr. V. G. R. Vickers, manager of the Foreign Department of the Dominion Express Company has issued a circular to agents, pointing out that according to intimation he has had from the British railways, the latter will not accept, after July 1st, any shipments on which charges have not been fully prepaid. This rule, as Mr. Vickers was informed, was made necessary by heavy depletion of staff, due to the large number of railway employees who have joined the colors. Agents are, therefore, requested to notify all shippers at once that all shipments for Great Britain and continental Europe should be prepaid in future for the reasons given.

This picture shows the battle ship Wyoming, flagship of the Atlantic fleet, just after she left the New York Navy Yard to join the fleet at Newport. For a month she had been in the navy yard, undergoing repairs. Two of her twelve-inch turret guns were replaced with new ones. Each of the new guns cost $80,000. The gun crews warped the old ones in winning the championship of the Atlantic fleet for target practice. That is why her turrets are marked with the letter "E," meaning excellence.

A petition, signed by Thomas Quinlan and others, was sent into the City Clerk's office this morning, and requested that a concrete curb be constructed on the West side of Maple Avenue from Palmerston Avenue to Dufferin Avenue. The petition will be read before the Council on Monday night.

AUSTRIANS EXAMINED

Five Austro-Hungarians were examined late last night in Chief Slemm's office. With the aid of Interpreter Stander, they were subjected to a strict grueling. Nothing of a suspicious nature could be found, however, so they were allowed to go. They have to report every week to the chief.

GOOD CHANCE

The Dufferin Rifles are open to enrolling as members several young, enthusiastic and capable men. Should they join now and show the proficiency expected in their work, they would quickly be promoted to corporals and sergeants as there are several vacancies in the non-com. ranks owing to the war. This is an exceptional opportunity for bright young chaps to join a good knowledge of military matters with more than usual possibility of quick promotion.

VISITING IN CITY

Mr Roy Hill arrived in the city this morning from Edmonton, Alta. He is an old Brantford boy, and besides his relatives here, he has many friends. He will return to the West in a month or so, to resume his work of teaching. He stated to a Courier man this morning that everything was quiet in Edmonton. Railway construction work is about the only labor that is progressive. It is difficult to borrow from the banks, no matter how good a person's securities may be. The wheat crop is in an excellent condition, however, and will be large this year. It is at present four feet high in some places; that is a good height for such an early date.

On Thursday night there was a very busy and successful time among Brantford Oddfellows when joint installation of officers took place under D.D.G.M. Ed. Aver, of Paris, for the subordinate lodges and D.D.G.P. Ed. Beatty for Brant Encampment. The work was splendidly put on by each of the teams, there being a large turnout to witness the interesting ceremony.

After the installation, refreshments were served and speeches given by D.D.G.M. Aver, D.D.G.P. Beatty, P.D.D.G.M. Newton, of Paris, as well as the newly installed Noble Grand and acting Past Grand. The officers installed were:

GOOD SUGGESTION

It seems to be the unanimous feeling among those who attend the baseball games that the Parks Board should negotiate for the purchase of the property at the East end of Brant street, along side of the Agricultural Park. With the acquiring of this property it would mean a much shorter route to the park and could be used as a drive way for automobiles. Cars could after crossing the bridge, turn to the right and run along the new park drive until they came to the grounds, then turn to the left and go right into the park. Besides being a shorter route it would then eliminate the two dangerous G. T. R. crossings. This transaction if completed would no doubt meet with popular approval.

FORD PICNIC

A mammoth Ford Picnic will be held in the picnic grounds at Port Dover on Thursday next, July 15. All owners of Ford cars along with their wives and children and sweet hearts are cordially invited to attend.

A first class program of sports will be held including a base ball match between Waterford and Simcoe. A continuous moving picture show will be held in the Town Hall showing the assembling of Ford cars. The Villa Nova band has been engaged to furnish music during the day. C. J. Mitchell, Ford dealer for the County of Brant is one of the committee and will be pleased to see all Ford owners, along with their families at the big picnic, what he says "will be the event of the summer and guarantees all who attend a royal jolly good outing.

COST OF UNPREPAREDNESS

Buffalo Express—A Canadian officer, writing from the front to a friend in St. Catharines, says: "All this misery and waste could have been averted if we could have thrown a million men into France and Belgium at the commencement of the war, because Germany would not have taken the risk, but anyone who advocated national training in England or Canada was looked on as a scaremonger and a fool." May the United States avoid having to reproach itself a year or two hence with the thought that similar misery and waste might have been avoided by it if it had made adequate defensive preparation.

TWO FOR THE DUFFS AND SIX FOR DRAGS.

The small number of two men passed the doctor last night at the Munition Rifles Armories. Small as that number is it is quite up to the average, none at all having enlisted the night before. If the Dufferin Rifles are really not started in earnest yet, as they say, it would appear that they will have to go some to obtain their quota before the summer is over. 25th DRAGOONS Six more men joined at Dragon Headquarters last night and two more will probably be through at noon. The Dragon officers are well pleased at the way things are going. Thirty men have already enlisted and the first thirty are always the hardest to get. Pretty nearly a hundred ought to have put their names in by next Saturday.

THE NATION AND THE WAR

To me it seems that the nation still fails to grasp the meaning, size, and significance of the war. Looking back on the last ten months, it seems that there have been great efforts to deal with different aspects of the situation, some of which were successful and some of which seem to have had no co-ordination and no real deep consideration of policy. Voluntary service were asked for in millions instead of in thousands. The appeal has been attended with success. Still I consider that the system was unfair and indiscriminating, and it has been expensive. Managers and foremen have come from works, where their skilled labor was indispensable and equally so, as we have heard from the Minister, metal workers are lost in Flanders or in India. Married men have gone to the front when single men should have gone first; and the charge upon the nation will be the greater if these married men leave widows and orphans behind. The attempt to deal with the drink problem was also watched with great interest to us that were in a time of interest in munitions. If that were so, it seemed bad that in the middle of the war the House of Commons should have allowed vested interests to continue just as if they were in a time of policy of weakness and delay. Now at the end of ten months the Government announce the tardy establishment of the Ministry of Munitions.

NATIONAL SERVICE

Capt. Guest M. P. Back From Trenches Says This is Needed.

When a few days ago the cables brought the news that Captain Guest M.P. for East Dorset had from his place in the House of Commons, made a strong plea for national service, it was at once realized that here was a voice from the front, which spoke with authority. Captain Guest is a strong Liberal; he was for years one of the most fervid opponents of "militarism"; he was amongst those who derided "Bobs" appeal to the nation. But he has been converted by the weight of facts as against

Here is the text of his speech in the House of Commons on June 23rd, as reported in The Times:—

I have been for ten months in France, but do not come here as a voice from the trenches. At the same time I have been near enough to have my wits sharpened and to be in a position to judge things in their true perspective. I realize very clearly that anyone who speaks in this House as a soldier must accept peculiar responsibility, and I can assure the House that I will take great care to keep within the right bounds. But I cannot divest myself of responsibility as a member of Parliament and as a member of the Government, and as these are abnormal times I think some latitude must be granted (Hear, hear). The bill seems to me—if I may be allowed to say so—to be very good so far as it goes. Of this I am sure, that the mere fact that the supply of munitions is at last being taken up with spirit will be received in the trenches with a sigh of relief. I understand it is now the universal feeling that as many munitions as possible should be got to the field without delay. Is then, this new department merely to be a supply office to the War Office, or is it to be allowed to establish direct communication with the Army in the field, so that the Minister of Munitions should have a responsible commissioner with the Army in the field in order to enable the Army to regulate demands by being previously able to ascertain what there are of its requirements being met. This plan would short-circuit delays that would be unavoidable if every demand had to go through the ordinary channels and back again to the two big departments. (Hear, hear).

But the main feature of the scheme which has made me feel it my duty to take part in the debate is the section which deals with the State control of labor. I understand that the Minister of Munitions has said that should he not obtain sufficient voluntary battalions of munition workers promptly some form of compulsion must be introduced. I think it is of the very start, once for all. (Hear, hear).

OVER TWENTY THOUSAND

Calls Answered in the Brantford Bell Telephone Exchange Each Day.

Those who live in the "Telephone City," the place where Bell, the inventor literally pleaded with people to take stock in the invention without any result because they considered it only a toy, seldom stop to think of the "central" hive of activity which is daily and hourly connecting voice with voice to the annihilation of space. A Courier representative, by the kindness of Mr. Dixon, recently dropped into the "works" in order, like the proverbial kiddy, to see the wheels go round. The company building on Dalhousie street, provides most spacious quarters and there is a magnificent air of good management throughout the establishment. In the main room some 26 operators were hard at work inserting with deft fingers the plugs in the long board as the tiny discs of light indicated the numbers calling. It all looked like a Hampton Court maze of intricacy to an uninitiated spectator but how seldom any mistakes are made, the average individual who has much cause to use the phone, is well aware. When there are "sich" it is usually the fault of the phone, who doesn't know enough to keep his or her mouth close to the receiver.

There are no fewer than 2715 Bell subscribers in this community and picking up a recent day at random, it was found that during that period, there had been 22,688 local calls and "out" calls of 372 and "in" calls of 658 via long distance, or 23,728 in all. Not a bad voice clearance that for each working day.

In all there are 35 operators, including the all night staff and in addition other help essential to the efficient maintenance of the system. Right here it might be as well to refer to one of the most common and most unwarranted causes of complaint by some subscribers. It is the query "who was calling, central" when some one has been tardy in responding. The rule of the office is two rings and then, with no response, on to other business. Moreover, with the multiple board system in force, it is very probable that a different operator from the one first called, may be

ITALIAN PERFDY.

London Chronicle—The enemy press is very loud about Italian perfidy; but what other word adequately describes the Austro-German attempt last summer to steal supremacy in the Balkans and the Adriatic behind their Ally's back. Readers of the Italian Green Book will wonder much more at the patience shown by Italy under continual provocations and slights, than at her final decision to secure her safety and her future in the only possible way.

Bowser's Premonition

He Felt That Something Would Happen and It Did.

By M. QUAD. Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

It was an hour after dinner, and Mr. Bowser was sending and smoking when he suddenly observed Mrs. Bowser happened to be looking at him, and she said: "I am afraid you are in for a cold." "I guess not," he replied. "But that shiver indicates it." "Hang it!" he exclaimed, as he got up to walk back and forth. "I've had a feeling ever since dinner that something was going to happen." "A premonition?" "I believe they call it that." "Is it a feeling that something bad is going to happen?" "Terribly bad." "Merzy, but I hope not! What can it be?" "I am to be run down by an auto, maybe." "You go out and take a walk. Such forebodings often come from indigestion." Mr. Bowser went, and when he came back an hour later he said he felt better, though he was very sober the rest of the evening, and his face wore a gloomy look as he departed in the morning.

"WHAT! YOU—YOU HERE!"

pointed. He came scuffing in, and before he had his overcoat off he demanded: "Don't you know that I want my dinner some time before midnight?" "Our usual 6 o'clock dinner is ready," she quietly replied.

"What is wrong with my way of running the house?" "What is wrong? A thousand things are wrong. Mrs. Bowser, you and I are going to have a talk after dinner—a straight, plain talk."

"I thought you said we might go to the church festival this evening." "Church festival be hanged! We are more apt to go to the poorhouse."

"Mrs. Bowser had no more to say, and Mr. Bowser felicitated himself that he had made a proper beginning. If he had only been a little more observing and noticed the smile playing around the corners of her mouth it would have been better for her later on. When dinner was finished and they had returned to the sitting room he assumed his most judicial demeanor and began:

"As I stopped at the gate for a moment this evening I observed that one of the panes in a front window was broken. It was all right when I left the house this morning. Some time during the day you sneaked up there with an ax or crowbar and gave it a bat. You did it to spite me."

"You are talking foolishly, Mr. Bowser." "I am talking facts, woman! As I entered the gate I stumbled over a clothespin. While it was only a single one, it showed the carelessness and waste prevailing in this house. You probably threw it from a window at a dog."

"As there is a foot of snow on our sidewalk and more falling, I don't see how you stumbled over such a small thing as a clothespin," observed Mrs. Bowser.

"There are lots of things you don't observe, and you needn't try to split hairs with me. I presume the gas bill has come in for last month?" "Yes."

"And we are charged with burning about a million feet of gas?" "The bill is only 50 cents higher than the month before."

"Only 50 cents! By the great horn spoon, woman, but it ought to have been $2 less! Who has wasted that gas? Who has deliberately gone at it and turned it on in the daytime and let it whiz away?"

"No one, of course. I must tell you that the coal for the range is out. It lasted four days longer than the last one, but I suppose you—"

"The range coal is all right," she declared. "Circulars have been distributed amongst Canadians, criticizing the Ross rifle."

whooped as he jumped up and down and his eyes hung out. "Why, it's only ten days since I ordered the last ton!" "It's exactly twenty-seven days, my dear."

"Don't contradict me. A ton of coal burned in our kitchen in ten days! Ten days, Mrs. Bowser! Don't try to fool me. You sold at least half that coal to get money to attend bargain sales. You may deny it, but nothing on earth will convince me that you didn't. Great Scott, sell the coal out of my cellar by fool humdoodles!"

"I say that the coal has lasted twenty-seven days! Mr. Bowser, and you are talking nonsense. You might as well charge the cook with selling it. There's a leak in the water pipe down cellar, and are you going to say I struck it with the ax?"

"A leak in the water pipe! Of course you struck it! Yes, sir, you couldn't see any other way to spite me, and so you whacked away at the pipe with the ax. By John, but I don't know what prevents me from demolishing this house and murdering three or four people! A water pipe burst, and $10 to pay out for repairs!"

"Don't water pipes ever burst?" "Never! Never in the world! Water pipes are all right until some one hauls off with an ax and bursts them. I suppose you'll tell me next that the roof of this house is leaking in a dozen places!"

"I discovered two leaks yesterday, but they are not very bad ones. I can put pans on the floor to catch the water."

"Leaks in the roof! Forty leaks in a roof that was overhauled only last summer! Woman, do you know where you start when you do that?"

"You are standing in the shadow of death! You have gone up on that roof and jumped up and down. You have played tag and pull-away. You have turned somersaults and hand-springs. You have taken the crowbar and thumped and pounded. You have done this to spite me and by the bones of the one horned cow!"

"Are you through, Lemuel Bowser?" Mr. Bowser turned to find his mother-in-law standing in the door. She had arrived hours before, but had kept in the background to make a dramatic debut.

"What! You—you here?" gasped Mr. Bowser as the red left his face in an instant.

"Yes, Lemuel, I am here, and I have been an interested listener. Sit down!" "What for?"

"Because I tell you, I've got a few words to say to you, and perhaps your knees won't wobble quite so much if you sit down. Now, then, about that clothespin. You fled about it simply to have an excuse to raise a row!"

"Woman, don't you call me a liar!" "Don't excite yourself, and don't call me woman! I am your respected mother-in-law, and as such I can't be offended or humiliated."

"I won't stay in the same house with you!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he jumped up.

"Oh, yes, you will! You and I have got to have a plain, straight talk, and the sooner we get at it the better. I figured that it was about time for one of your spells, and so I got aboard of the train and came down. If you think you could talk better with a pillow behind your back well and good, but talk you must. You know me, don't you?"

"You bet I know you!" "Then no further introductions are necessary. Mr. Bowser, do you realize that you are one of the meanest old kickers on the face of this earth?"

"What! What?" "Don't you about at me. You may sneer the cat or the cook, but I'm not mad that way. You know that pane of glass was cracked four weeks ago by a boy throwing a snowball, but you seized upon it tonight as a pretext. Do you know what I'd have done if you had come bulldozing to me about it?"

"I say I won't listen!" "And I say you will! If you'd come charging me with breaking that glass I'd have sent the shillab out that had beat of yours in about ten minutes. What you need is a strong hand, and it's fortunate that I've got one. No use for you to glare at me like an enraged bull, for I don't care. Where are you going?"

"I'm going to leave the house until you get gone."

"Lemuel Bowser, come back here!" But Mr. Bowser got his overcoat on and but was out before she could reach him. He didn't know where to go after he got out, but five minutes later he brought up at a drug store on the corner. He wanted sympathy. He wanted to tell the druggist all about it and be consoled, and he had just got ready to talk when in walked the mother-in-law. There was no hesitation on her part. She walked up to Mr. Bowser and took him by the hand and said:

"Lemuel, come with me!" "You'll either come along with me or follow me in the ambulance!" "That's what he needs—a strong hand," said the druggist, as he nodded approval.

"The family cat had followed the mother-in-law. Under the sky of a winter's night, side by side and holding hands, walked Mr. Bowser and his conqueror, and behind them followed the wonderful tale, and when the procession had reached a well known gate it turned in, opened the door and a moment later what was happening there was hidden from all outside eyes.

BRANTFORD ALLOWED VISITORS NOT A RUN

"SLAB" WARNER STRUCK OUT EIGHT—DOLAN PULLED IN THE FOURTH—COMSTOCK, WOODS AND CRISTALL RESPONSIBLE FOR TWO-BASE HITS. SCORE 6-0.

There is no doubt about the fact that Warner pitched well yesterday. He got excellent support from his men too and that means a great deal. But it so happens that whenever Brantford wins, London wins, and neither can get out of the cellar. But that condition won't last long. The Brants are going to win both games to-day, a thing which London will not accomplish.

There were some pretty tight corners in the game and these, with the two runs Brantford made in the first made it interesting for the local fans. In the Cristallites' fourth, the bases were filled when Schroeder went up. He slammed out a long fly, and it looked for a minute as if the Hams would score, but "Buster" Burrill was right there with his gluey mit and saved two or three runs. Again the bases were all occupied in the fifth. With two out, Ivers went up and smashed out a stiff one to Warner. He couldn't get a hold of it, but Dunlop picked it up and pegged to Barger, thus saving at least one more.

FOUR IN FIRST FRAME
 A surprise was certainly handed to the Hams when Brantford quietly scored four times. Dunn singled, Comstock sacrificed and Cooper rapped out a liner over shortstop McGroarty's head, scoring Dunn. Burrill landed one out to left field but Cristall dropped it, and Cooper scored. Barger drove one out to centre and

THERE'LL BE FOOTBALL

Alarmists have been quite strong of late in their assurances that rugby football will not be played in Canada this fall, and that if it is it will be on a small scale and quite uninteresting. This belief was given a slap in the face to-day when one prominent in local football circles stated that there would be football and that it would be just as productive of enthusiasm as it was last season. The Interprovincial union will be back on the job and there will be no change whatever.

Hamilton is Strengthening

Hamilton Herald—That Manager Cristall is allowing no grass to grow under his feet is a fact that will prove encouraging to local fandom. Big games have been left in the ranks of the Hams by recent developments, but the pilot is working about quietly and will soon be prepared to announce some acquisitions that will put them right back in the hunt. The two games played with St. Thomas proved that one or two changes and additions would bring the squad back to fighting strength, for even with the make-shift team that Cristall sent in to battle against the Section Town crowd, he managed to make them go the limit to pull out narrow margins. Pilot Cristall is not the least worried, so it behooves the fans to keep up their cheer. The locals are lying in third place, close up, and when they start to come along again 'twill not take long to reach the top.

NEW SOUTHPAW REPORTS TO LONDON CLUB MONDAY

London Advertiser: Manager Reising announced last night that he had completed the deal whereby London secures the services of Pitcher Caesar the former Bay City South Michigan League twirler. Caesar is a southpaw and he has pitched good ball for Bay City for the past couple of seasons. It is the intention of the London club to carry two left-handers. The porters do very nicely in the Canadian League as a rule, and two good ones will help the club along wonderfully.

SUNDAY BASEBALL CASE TO BE TRIED IN HULL COURT

Ottawa, Ont., July 10.—The interest of organized baseball promoters, particularly those of the International and Canadian Leagues, will centre next week in the hearing of the Ottawa Baseball Club directors and players on a charge of violating the Lord's Day Act by conducting a game in Hull on Sunday, May 23rd. Knotty Lee and the officers of the Guelph club are co-defenders, as their team opposed the Senators during the match in question.

Soft Ball

In one of the best and before one of the largest crowds that ever saw a softball game the Beavers defeated Marlboro street church last night at Recreation Park by the score of 5 to 1. The features of the game were a home run by Graham, a great catch by Anderson and the pitching of Simmons who held the church team to two lone hits. McMann and Wright were the ones to connect. Simmons retired the side on strike outs in the third and held them hitless until the ninth. He also struck out fourteen men an error by Moss gave the church their only run.

Speech in the House of Commons Reviewing Progress of War and Asking For New Vote on the Expenditures.

The following is a verbatim report of the speech delivered in the House of Commons on June 13th by Premier Asquith in submitting the vote of Credit for the prosecution of the War.

RECEIVED WITH CHEERS

The Prime Minister, who was received with cheers, said:—"When you leave the chair Mr. Speaker, I shall submit in Committee, a supplementary Vote of Credit for £250,000,000. This will be the fifth Vote of Credit which the House has been asked to agree to since the outbreak of the war. It may be convenient that I should summarize the votes, although they are fresh in the recollection of the House. In the financial year of 1914-15 there were three Votes of Credit, providing for the amounts required beyond the ordinary grants of Parliament, in order to meet expenditure connected with the war. In that financial year the full normal supply on a peace basis had been voted before the outbreak of the war. Consequently the votes of Credit provided only for the additional expenditure necessitated in consequence of the war itself. The first vote of Credit on August 6th was for £100,000,000. The second vote on November 13th was for £225,000,000. The third Vote in March was for £37,000,000 making a total for that financial year of £362,000,000. As I have already said, that did not include the normal expenditure on a peace footing of the Army and Navy. As a matter of fact the £362,000,000 so provided was about £5,000,000 in excess of the actual expenditure of the financial year. The war covered 240 days in that year and the daily expenditure out of Votes of Credit was therefore roughly about £1,500,000 per day. That was the state of things as regards the last financial year. For the present financial year the first Vote of Credit to which I asked the assent of the House on March 1st was for £250,000,000. I then pointed out to the Committee that the vote differed from its predecessors, inasmuch as it provided not only for war expenditure, but for the whole of the normal expenditure of the Army and Navy during the year, which, roughly speaking, amounted to about £80,000,000. We accordingly proceeded to the House for the purpose of Parliamentary discussion separate estimates—taken votes—for the Army and for the Navy. It was calculated at that time that the Vote of £250,000,000 would last approximately one hundred days, that is to say, until about the second week in July. The basis on which that calculation was made was as follows: For Army and Navy expenditure a total of £2,000,000 per day, of which the normal peace expenditure, being as I have said about £80,000,000 a year or £220,000 per day, is to be put down under that head. It follows that the Army and Navy for the hundred days require £200,000,000. To this has to be added another £50,000,000 at the rate of £500,000 per day, to meet other expenses, such as advances to our Dominions and to Allied Powers and other foreign States, purchase of foodstuffs and other commodities, and miscellaneous minor items.

FORECAST RELATED

The House will be interested to know how far the forecast which was made on the first of March has been realized, I will take the figures for the 1st of April, which is the first day of the present financial year, to Saturday last, the 12th of June, the expenditure has been approximately as follows:— The Army £121,000,000, on the navy £36,000,000, on loan to Foreign and Colonial Governments £36,000,000 on foodstuffs £10,000,000, other services £1,000,000, making a total of £194,000,000. Accordingly the average expenditure out of the Vote of Credit passed on the 1st of March during the 73 days up to the 12th of June may be put approximately at £2,660,000 a day, which, as the House will observe, is slightly, but not much, higher than the estimate which allowed for £2,220,000 a day. I think it was a fairly exact forecast. If we take the expenditure on the Army and Navy alone during that period it amounts to £157,000,000 or an average of £2,155,000 a day, corresponding to our estimate in March of £2,000,000 per day. On the evening of the 12th of June, Saturday last, the Treasury had still in hand out of that Vote of Credit a sum of £5,000,000 which will be sufficient, it is estimated, to carry on the public services until the end of the present month. So much as to the past. The further vote for which I am going to ask the assent of the Commons presently is for the same amount as the previous one, namely £250,000,000. It is very difficult to make anything like an accurate forecast as to the rate at which public expenditure will continue during the next two or three months. It is clear that the expenditure on the Army and Navy will expand to some extent. And we think it will probably require not less than £2,250,000 per day during the period to be covered by the vote. Further as the war continues and extends its area, the obligations of His Majesty's Government in regard to the financial assistance to our Allies will certainly not be lighter than they have been. On any showing, it will not be safe to assume that the total expenditure from the Vote of Credit will be much less than £2,300,000 a day during the ensuing months. It might conceivably be more. There is only one new feature in the Vote of Credit, which I am about to submit, as compared with the four others that have preceded it. Those who have the White Paper will see that it comes under Head I. It is expressed in these words: "Repayment to the Bank of England of advances made by them at the request of His Majesty's Government for the general purpose of the Vote." I do not think it is desirable to say more in regard to that at this moment than that such advances have been made, and made on a very large scale, and that we desire to have the power, and we hope the House will give us the power, if circumstances show it to be necessary, to repay to the Bank out of the sums not without doubt as to how I should best respond to the call of public duty. The situation is without a parallel in our national history. The demand which it makes, and the energy and the patriotism of a nation, and in a wholly exceptional degree upon the patience and the foresight of those who are responsible for its government, and I shall add—a most vital consideration—upon the confidence felt by the one in the other, cannot be measured by any precedent.

WIDER SURVEY MADE

I have so far dealt with what I call the technical and financial considerations, which are for the moment relevant to the further prosecution of the war. But in the circumstances in which we are placed I must ask the House, and not only the House, but the country and the Empire, to follow me for a few moments in a rather larger and wider survey of the situation. (Cheers.) I have during the last few weeks, with the approval of the King, reconstructed the personnel of the government. Let me say at once in the plainest possible terms, that I should like to have been relieved in what I have done under the pressure of outside influence, of any temporary embarrassment, or of any transient parliamentary exigencies—I would go further—and repugnant as it could fall to the lot of any man, I have a deep and abiding and ineffaceable sense of gratitude to the colleagues who, under the stress of new and unforeseen responsibilities, for the best part of ten months, discharged with undeviating loyalty, and in my judgment, with unexampled efficiency, the heaviest load which has ever fallen upon the shoulders of British statesmen. (Cheers.) No body of men in my deliberate judgment could have done more, or could have done better, and there is not one of them to whom I, as the head of the government, and I think the nation at large, does not stand under a permanent debt of obligation. (Hear, hear.) To part with them or any of them, has been the severest and most painful experience of my public life. I should like, if I may, to add this. I ask not only my old colleagues, but also my friends and supporters to accept my assurance, if indeed any assurance is needed, that there is not a man among them who is more faithful than I to the great principles of public policy which during the last part of thirty years have been to me the aim, the inspiration, the moulding and governing power of such services as I have been able to render to the state. (Cheers.) I receded from nothing; I abandoned nothing; I sacrificed nothing. What I have held in the past I hold to-day as strongly and tenaciously as ever I did; what in the future, if I have any future, I shall work for and fight for, with whatever remains to me I need not say of conviction of faith, of hope, of energy and of vital force. (Cheers.) The House will not think that I am degenerating into an egotistical mood, or that the financial assistance which I make for myself I put forward with an equal measure of assurance for my new colleagues, who in the same temper and spirit felt it their duty to themselves in a supreme national crisis with life-long antagonists (Cheers.)

WHY THE UPHEAVAL

Why, then, it may be asked,—and I am sure the question is in the minds if not on the lips of all good party men in every quarter—have I—for after all I am the person mainly and first responsible—been asked to step down for the time being, this upheaval, this transformation of the normal conventions, the inveterate tradition, and the well-settled practice of our political life? The word "upheaval" is a pleasant savour in the vocabulary of British politics. It is connected, as in the notorious and classical case of Fox and Lord North with associations of faction, intrigue, rivalries, and antipathy, to which it was widely and perhaps justly believed the national interests were sacrificed. On a lower plane, as in the case of the so-called ministry of all talents, in 1806, and perhaps in a lesser degree in the case of the ministry of Lord Aberdeen, in 1853, the name coalition recalls ill-assorted, and in the results more or less ill-starred arrangements, which, with the best intentions, were proved by experience to be lacking in practical efficiency. In the main and in the long run our system of government by party has vindicated itself, and our rare and exceptional departures from it have for the most part been found wanting both in dignity and success. The House and the country will be assured that we are none of us forgetful of these things, and that in my answer to the question which I put a few moments ago is after all, so far as I am concerned, very simple. It may or may not, carry conviction to others. I can only speak for myself, and I will make to the House the fullest and freest admission, that up to the last moment, apart from the almost invincible personal considerations to which I have referred, I was not without doubt as to how I should best respond to the call of public duty. The situation is without a parallel in our national history. The demand which it makes, and the energy and the patriotism of a nation, and in a wholly exceptional degree upon the patience and the foresight of those who are responsible for its government, and I shall add—a most vital consideration—upon the confidence felt by the one in the other, cannot be measured by any precedent.

There was not, and there is not, in my opinion, any call for any change in our national policy. That remains what it has been since the first week in August—to pursue this war at any cost to a victorious issue. Nothing, nothing, anything substantial or worth consideration to be gained by the mere substitution of A for B in this office or that? What I came to think was needed—and here I come to the root of the whole matter—what I came to think slowly, reluctantly, but in the end without doubt or hesitation, was needed, was such a broadening of the basis of government as would take away from it even the semblance of a one-sided or party character, which would demonstrate beyond the possibility of doubt, not only to our people at home, and to our fellow subjects across the sea, but to the whole world, allies, enemies, neutral, that after nearly a year of war with all its fluctuations and vicissitudes, the British people were more resolute than ever with one heart and with one purpose to obliterate all distinctions and to unite every personal and political as well as every moral and material force in the prosecution of their cause. (Loud cheers.) I suppose there is no man on this Bench or among my colleagues in another place to whom the idea of coalition with all that it involves, in the temporary severance of old ties, and in a thousand other ways is anything but uncongenial. Party issues were indeed by general consent, already suspended and put on the shelf. The normal functions of an Opposition which is to oppose the Government of the day, had been replaced by an attitude of responsible and patriotic and not unfriendly criticism. But it appeared to me, and I believe with equal clearness to those with whom I have been before and probably shall be again, in sharp antagonism on the main issues of domestic policy, that a unique national exigency demanded from all of us something more—actual, visible co-operation, unreserved, whole-hearted concentration upon a single purpose, shared and pursued by men of every section of every party, of every political creed. (Cheers.) It is a great, and as many people consider, a hazardous experiment that none of us would have chosen. I suppose there is enough of the old political Adam in the whole of our bosoms that will enable me to say that none of us very much like it, and our friends in the country on both sides are, as everybody knows, doubtful, suspicious, bewildered, perhaps pained.

BRITAIN NOT LETHARGIC

For a moment, if I may say a word about my own personal position, if there be those who think that, having had the privilege of serving in confidential and responsible relations three successive British Sovereigns, I have any unsatisfied personal ambitions, they are welcome to that opinion. (Hear, hear.) They little know the truth. Like other people, I regret the most wicked of calamities and the most unfounded, the suggestion that the people of this country have shown or are showing themselves lethargic. Like other people, not more than other people, I have done, or I have tried to do my best. But like other people when we think of the gravity of the trust which has been cast upon us, we may think that we are all unprofitable servants. What is the personality of this man or that? What does it mean? What does it come to? A supreme cause is at stake. (Cheers.) We have each and all of us to respond with whatever we have, with whatever we can give, and we sacrifice to the dominating and inexorable call. How do we stand to-day? It would be a tempting, but, in my opinion, not a profitable theme to compare the military and international situation as it stands to-day with what it was when, at the beginning of March, I asked for the last Vote of Credit. There is one new fact, indeed, of immense importance, the accession of Italy to the cause of the Allies. (Cheers.) It is impossible to over-estimate either the moral or the material value of her co-operation. But for the rest, I do not think it is well to say much at the moment. The actual fortunes of the campaign fluctuate from week to week and almost from day to day. It is not a war of dramatic surprises or of quick decisions. The theatre is so vast, the scale of operations is so far beyond what the eye can take in at a glance, that it is up to the scene constantly by its splendid acts of heroic adventure, perhaps the main impression at this moment in the minds, both of combatants and of onlookers, is that of a gigantic struggle of endurance. If that be so, let it be said of us at any rate, that we endured to the end. (Cheers.)

For my part, in every speech which I have made to my countrymen since the first day of the war, I have tried to strike notes of warning as to the gravity of our task and a note of confidence as to the ultimate issue. There is no discord. We shall do well to continue to pay no heed to blind counsels of hysteria and panic. (Cheers.) We have for the moment, one plain and paramount duty to perform—to bring to the service of the State the willing and organized help of every class in the community. (Cheers.) There is a fit place, there is a fit work for every man and every woman in the land. And when the time comes, be it sooner or later, when our cause has been vindicated, and there is once more peace upon earth, may it be recorded as the proudest page in the annals of this nation that there was not a home or a workshop in the whole of this United Kingdom which did not take its part in the common struggle and earn its share in the common triumph. (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

A SUNDAY SERMON BY PASTOR RUSSELL

CELEBRATING LIBERTY ARE WE NOT SLAVES?

"Stand Fast in the Liberty Wherewith Christ Hath Made You Free."

Hypocritical Slaves of Mammon and Custom—Ignorant Slaves of Fear and Superstition—Helpless Slaves of Sin and Weakness—The Liberty of the Sons of God—Slaves in the Palpits—Slaves in the Pews—Slaves to Wealth—Slaves to Poverty—Slaves to Sinful Passions and Appetites—Only One Way to Liberty.

PASTOR RUSSELL

New York City, July 4.—Pastor Russell last night at the New York City Temple, W. 63rd St., near Broadway, took for his text, "The Liberty of the Sons of God," also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God."

Not until these shall be perfected by the glorious change of the creation will the time come for delivering the groaning creation from its bondage.

Where lies the responsibility for present conditions—that the millions of Europe are fighting like devils, each army deceived into thinking that it is the Lord's army, fighting for God and righteousness? We believe that the responsibility lies close to the door of the churches of all denominations, and especially close to the door of the religious teachers.

I freely acknowledge that they are not responsible to me; as it is written, "To his own Master each servant stands or falls." It is quite proper, therefore, that we remember the Master's words, "Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked and slothful servant."

The clergy neglect their opportunities for educating the people to a proper conception of the rights of man. They have fostered the fallacy that the kingdoms of the world are of this world, and that serving the king is serving the Lord.

Now that the war has come, and the misdirected people are blindly fighting for their errors and misconceptions, what is the attitude of the clergy? Under the pay or procreation of the governments, are they not all supporting the governments from which they receive their pay?

But the Heavenly Father had a better plan. He had purposed the electing of the saintly few from amongst men, to be associated with our Lord Jesus in His Kingdom and His priestly office.

Policy and hypocrisy are written all over the affairs of the world lately called Christendom—Christ's Kingdom. These are not Christ's Kingdom, nor are these Christ's ministers, if by such judge by the saviour's statements, "His servants are to whom ye are for service."

The clergy of lands not directly involved in the war are praying, and urging the people to pray, to God to stop the war; but we hear no suggestions of their own contribution to the teaching and teaching to show the people the brotherhood of the human family and the sin of murder, whether committed by kings, emperors, or otherwise.

Christ's true followers are courageous. Jesus refers to them as "overcomers," as conquerors, as victors of peace, who contend not with carnal weapons. His followers must necessarily, nevertheless, be true heroes, copies of their Master, not afraid to speak the truth and not afraid to die in His own course.

The giving to all mankind the full opportunities of the Millennial Kingdom will fulfil God's promise. Those who shall intelligently refuse God's gift of everlasting life, by refusing His reasonable requirements, will die the Second Death.

But those who at the conclusion of the Millennial Age shall have professed by the Messiah's Kingdom will be received into God's family and will be granted all the liberties and privileges proper to the sons of God.

Although we should understand that God has promised of Restitution to human perfection for the groaning creation in general, it is still more important that Christians recognize the share of liberty which has already come to them.

This great mass is well represented in the Bible, the one to obtain, and the other to hold, the key of power, and access to the world's wealth. Saints there undoubtedly are in all the warring nations, but there are so few that they have virtually no influence, but are forced by the others into the struggle.

The mass of these nominal Christians neither in Jesus' day, as there are to-day; yet the Master denounced as still greater sinners the religious hypocrites of His time who made void God's Word, substituting for it human tradition—deceiving and misleading the people—blind leaders of the blind.

There were murderers, thieves and drunkards in Jesus' day, as there are to-day; yet the Master denounced as still greater sinners the religious hypocrites of His time who made void God's Word, substituting for it human tradition—deceiving and misleading the people—blind leaders of the blind.

These ministers of the civilized world, who are the center of a million in number, represent a highly favored class of humanity. The majority of them have much above the average of education, and far above the average of time for study and prayer. How are they using these wonderful opportunities and privileges, and the influence which comes with their positions and which is accentuated by the superstition of the masses?

Lesson II.—Third Quarter, For July 11, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Kings i, 28-40. Memory Verses, 39, 40—Golden Text, I Chron. xxviii, 9—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

To get the connection let us look at the important events since last lesson. After David's return to his throne there was a rebellion under a wicked man named Sheba, the son of Bichri, but he was overthrown and slain, and a city was saved through the influence of a wise woman who may be ranked with the wise woman of Tekoa and with Jael, the wife of Heber (I Sam. xx, 1, 16, 22). In I Sam. xxii we have one of David's great songs of deliverance, which is repeated in full in Ps. xviii. In II Sam. xxii we have some of David's last words, which may perhaps find space to consider in connection with the record of his death in today's lesson.

But there are some things which we must notice in II Sam. xxiv, such as the story of the threshing floor of Araunah, the Jebusite, over which the Lord stayed the hand of the destroying angel, saying, "It is enough, and which David bought for fifty shekels of silver and the whole price of hill for 600 shekels of gold (I Sam. xxiv, 16, 24; I Chron. xxi, 22-25). This hill was the identical mount Moriah on which Abraham offered up Isaac and received him back from the dead in a figure, and on this hill Solomon builded the temple which David desired to build, but was not permitted to, but God gave him the plans of it and allowed him to prepare abundantly for it. See carefully these passages, I Chron. xxviii, 11, 12, 19; II Chron. iii, 1. In I Kings ii, 1-4, we have some of the last words of David, with a few of his words to Solomon, but much more fully in I Chron. xxviii and xxix, with his wonderful prayer in xxix, 10-13, which we found great pleasure in mentioning in the Bible classes not long ago (I Chron. xxviii, 10-13), which we found great pleasure in mentioning in the Bible classes not long ago (I Chron. xxviii, 10-13), which we found great pleasure in mentioning in the Bible classes not long ago (I Chron. xxviii, 10-13).

But let us notice before looking at this lesson that Moriah and the threshing floor of Araunah or Ornan, the same hill, are strongly suggestive of the great atonement of the Lord Jesus, who was really the atonement of the temple was really the atonement. So also in the tabernacle of Moses every board stood on the silver which was paid as a ransom for their souls. The only foundation for an individual or for the church is the finished work of the Lord Jesus. In our lesson today David is said to be old, though he was only seventy (I Sam. v, 4; I Kings ii, 10, 11). He is said to have died in a good old age, full of days, riches and honor (I Chron. xxix, 28). Trouble seems to have followed him all the way, and now, at the very end, Adonijah, his fourth son, whom he had never displeased by even saying, "Why hast thou done so?" (I Sam. iii, 25; I Kings i, 6), seeks the throne and has himself proclaimed king. This stirred Nathan the prophet, and he and Bathsheba, the mother of Solomon, appealed to David, with the result that Solomon was caused to ride upon King David's mule and was anointed king instead of his father. This caused great rejoicing, so that the earth rent with sound thereof and David himself said, "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, who hath given me one to sit on my throne this day, mine eyes even seeing it" (verses 38, 40, 48). "Then Solomon sat on the throne of the Lord as king instead of David, his father, and he prospered, and all is as he obeyed him" (I Chron. xxix, 23).

No throne on earth was ever called the throne of the Lord except the throne at Jerusalem, and we are fast approaching the time when Jerusalem shall again be the throne of the Lord and all nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem (Jer. iii, 17). The Lord had, but David, thrown an utterly false light on the Bible? It is sufficient that they should say, "We no longer believe these creeds?" Do not their names on the rolls, their present at church services, and their contribution to the upkeep of these creeds and their clerical defenders constitute a responsibility in the sight of God and in the esteem of all honest men and women? How long shall intelligent people halt between creeds of hypocrisy and one of honesty? How long will they bow down before creed idols more horrible than any worshipped by the heathen?

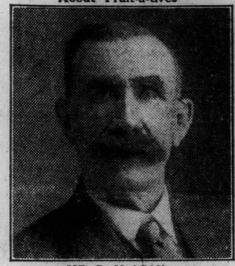

While making it celebrating today the birth of this great nation which stands for liberty, freedom, emancipation from the thralldom of church and state, let us personally make fresh resolutions that we will stand up for the liberty which Christ makes free, and be His servants, loyal, faithful unto death, hoping to receive "the Crown of Life, which fadeth not away."

Huge Austrian Guns. The Austrian troops used a new battery of 52cm. (20.5in.) mortars during the fighting round Tarras. The first shot from one of these guns entirely destroyed a large tower at a distance of eleven miles. The shell weighs over a quarter of a ton more than that of the German 17in. mortars.

Umbrella Handle Trees. Nearly 500 acres of land near Paris is devoted to raising young trees of peculiar shape for umbrella handles.

Train Of Thought Inspired By A Letter About "Fruit-a-lives"

MR. D. McLEAN

"For over two years, I was troubled with Constipation, Drowsiness, Lack of Appetite and Headaches. I tried several medicines, but got no results and my Headaches became more severe. One day I saw your sign which read 'Fruit-a-lives' make you feel like walking on air. This appealed to me, so I decided to try a box. In a very short time, I began to feel better, and now I feel fine. Now I have a good appetite, relish everything I eat, and the Headaches are gone entirely. I cannot say too much for 'Fruit-a-lives', and recommend this pleasant fruit medicine to all my friends'.

BARBAROSSA WAKENS.

Der Alte Barbarossa— Within his cave he lay; He had, for silver shrouding, His magian locks of gray. Der Alte Barbarossa— He slept until a day When roused by mighty thunders He heaved the stone away!

Then rose he from the grave-pit— Swept the world with his glance, From Russia into England, From Oesterreich to France! He saw the German legions To East, to West, advance— Saw men and towers and cities In topling, wild death-dance!

Spake Alter Barbarossa, "What Devil's battle ground! Hah! Have my legions drunken Blood from a skull passed round? Myself did track the Lombards— (God's keen and tireless hound) But no such tender quarries To my account were found!"

And, as he watched the carnage, A patrid darkness fell, He looked from whence it issues— "My legions, is this well? For they who thus have commeced With him—the King of Hell— To spread the smoke of torment, Shall surely with him dwell!"

"What madman leads ye vaunting That Heaven his charter gave? Not this the German glory— The freedom of the rays! The hour has not yet sounded When I shall rise to save— Back to my ancient slumbers In mine own Salzburg cave!" —Edith M. Thomas, in The New York Post.

A DOMINIE AT THE FRONT

The Rev. L. Maclean Watts, of Edinburgh, has been describing some of his experiences at the front. He illustrated the heroism of the men by the story of a sorely wounded Gordon with whom he commiserated. "Ah, well," replied the Gordon, "it's all in the day's work, and we are not here on holiday, ye ken." "And do you expect to win?" The Gordon looked at him with astonished eyes, and said: "That's what we are here for."

Mr. Watt found a good deal of humor in the letter-writing experience of the soldiers, says the Westminster Gazette. They were eager to write, but not always fluent. There was one man whom he watched puzzling his brain for an opening and who did not get beyond the address. His Christian name was William, and Mr. Watt suggested that he should write, "I am quite well, and on my way to have a bang at my name-sake, Bill." The soldier said it was the very thing he wanted to say.

and other men of the name of Bill took the epistle as a model. There were other letter-writers who were imaginative, like the man who wrote: "I am standing up to my knees in mud." The soldiers have apparently a fondness for doing up Mr. Watt said that after a concert of jolly songs a Scotsman rose, and in the most lugubrious tones sang "Why Left I My Home?"

Letters for enemy countries, or for places in the occupation of the enemy, mailed in Great Britain, enclosed in letters for neutral countries, will not be forwarded unless the cover of the letter for an enemy country is left open.

Master butchers in London and various parts of the country met recently to consider the position of the meat trade, and it was resolved in many cases to recommend the closing of shops on one, two, or three days each week during the next three months. It is expected that some thousands of butchers' shops throughout the country will act on this advice.

A number of barrels full of oil, which he recovered from the sea one hundred and thirty miles from the Longstone Lighthouse, have been landed at Blyth by Captain Peterson of the Norwegian steamer Stabii. The significant point is that a German submarine was recently alleged to have been rammed in this neighborhood.

Burns Cottage and Monument trustees have purchased from Miss Annie Burns, Cheltenham, the grand-daughter of the poet, the shell press which was reserled from the sale of the late Mrs. Jean Burns on April 10 and 11, 1834. It is of particular value as a relic because as was stated in the "Dumfriess Courier" in April 1834, "it contained Robert Burns's small but well-selected library." The bookcase is of pine wood, painted a dark oak color and grained. The original locks and keys are on it. The price paid was $2,000. The bookcase has been deposited in the Museum at the cottage.

Sir John Hendrie will open the Canadian National Exposition.

The royal enemy aliens, including the Kaiser would have been struck off the roll of the Garter at the commencement of the war but for one fact. Under the rules of the order no knight can be removed from it until he has been proved unworthy of his knighthood by a majority of the knights at a special chapter summoned by the king. The knight must be heard in his own defence. As this was impossible in the circumstances, the king George allowed the names to remain on the roll. After the sinking of the Lusitania, however, pressure was brought to bear on the King by some of the English peers who are members of the order with the result that all enemy knights were struck off the roll.

OLD WORLD NOTES

An aquarium is to be built in the Scottish Zoological Gardens, Edinburgh, at a cost of $400,000. It was voted for this purpose by the executive committee of the Carnegie United Kingdom Trust. The committee also has under consideration the question of introducing experiments in the provision of books in rural areas on a circulating system.

Henry Sienkiewicz, the famous Polish novelist and the author of "Quo Vadis," is like tens of thousands of his compatriots, a refugee, driven from home by the war. He is at Vevey with the members of the committee for the relief of victims of the war in Poland, of which he is president. Ignace Paderewski is vice-president.

A time limit for claims to separation allowance by dependents (other than wives and children) of soldiers serving at home or abroad, has been set in a recent Army Order. In future, a soldier who desires to secure separation allowance for his dependents must make application to his commanding officer on the prescribed form within one calendar month from the date of enlistment.

The royal enemy aliens, including the Kaiser would have been struck off the roll of the Garter at the commencement of the war but for one fact. Under the rules of the order no knight can be removed from it until he has been proved unworthy of his knighthood by a majority of the knights at a special chapter summoned by the king. The knight must be heard in his own defence. As this was impossible in the circumstances, the king George allowed the names to remain on the roll. After the sinking of the Lusitania, however, pressure was brought to bear on the King by some of the English peers who are members of the order with the result that all enemy knights were struck off the roll.

The North British Locomotive Co. have contracted for the supply of 100 main line passenger and goods locomotives for the French state railways according to the Railway News. The company was approached by the government to see whether it could help the French government in this time of emergency, as some of the important locomotive works in France are in the hands of the enemy, while others, owing to the war are very short handed. The company communicated with our own war office, and having obtained its consent to the work being included in the category of war supplies, a contract has been entered into between the parties on the basis of early delivery.

Spreading false reports was the charge at Castletown, Isle of Man, the other day, against a member of the House of Keys, under the Defence of the Realm Act. The evidence was that defendant was told that 4,000 German prisoners had broken out of Douglas detention camp and were looting the town. On the way to a telephone office to inquire as to the story from the Manx Government Secretary, he mentioned it to certain persons. The Government Secretary informed him that the rumor was untrue and inquired as to his informant. Defendant refused the information, and on the military authorities' order to disclose forthwith being served, said he would reply in seven days. After being summoned on two charges he wrote to the military authority stating that the information had been given him by a sailor whom he did not know. He went to prison for seven days having refused to pay the fine imposed.

Annexation by British Government is to be debated at the next sitting of the Manx House of Keys. The motion would, if carried, reduce the public expenditure of the island. With a population of 22,016 and a revenue of $460,540, Manxmen are called upon to support a Governor, an Attorney-General, a Clerk of the Rolls, two Deemsters, four High Bailiffs, and various other officials, the yearly salaries of all these aggregating over $65,000. Against the advantage of a reduction in this item, however, must be balanced several advantages which would be lost. First, the ability to pass private Bills through the local Parliament cheaply; second, a lower scale of import duties than exists in England; third, freedom from income tax, death, estate, and stamp duties; and, last, the right of applying all surplus revenue to local improvements.

Warning is given from the Press Bureau that the requirements of the Aliens Restriction (Belgian Refugees) Order as to registration, etc., will henceforth be strictly enforced by prosecutions, and that Belgians who neglect to register or to notify any change of address, or who enter a prohibited area without a permit from the Chief Constable, are guilty of an offence punishable by a fine of $500, or six months' imprisonment, and that persons with whom Belgians are living or lodging are liable to the same penalties if they fail to take steps to secure compliance with the Order in respect of any Belgians lodging or living with them.

A proposal for favouring the exclusion of men of alien enemy nationality from the ranks of the United Kingdom Commercial Travellers' Association was unanimously passed by the delegates at the annual conference of that institution in Manchester recently. On the proposal of the Birmingham branch it was decided to petition the Government to insist on the marking of all imported goods, so that the country of their origin was unmistakable. A series of resolutions was also approved asking for the appointment of a Minister of Commerce and the appointment to foreign Consulates of trained British business men.

A police notice was issued by the authority in London, early in the year advising members of the public in the event of an air raid to take refuge in houses so as to be out of the way of falling fragments of the shells that might be fired at enemy aircraft. In a further notice issued from New Scotland Yard recently it is stated that the Commissioner of Police is advised that it would be well for persons thus taking refuge to keep all windows and doors of the lower floors closed so as to prevent the admission of deleterious gases.

A prohibition order has been issued by Rear-Admiral Le Marchant as follows: By virtue of the powers conferred on me under the Defence of the Realm Act, 1914, Section 10, I, Evelyn R. Le Marchant, Rear-Admiral, Kingstown, being the competent naval authority under the said Act, do hereby direct that all public-houses, spirit grocers, and beer dealers licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquor in the districts of Kingstown, Dalkey, Blackrock, Booterstown and Kill o'Grange, are to be closed until further orders to all persons wearing the uniform of the Royal Navy, except during the hours from 4 to 7 o'clock p.m.; and that intoxicating liquor sold to the aforesaid persons is to be consumed on the premises only.

The Armaments committee of Glasgow and West of Scotland, have published particulars of the scheme for dealing with bad timekeeping by workmen employed in shipbuilding yards and engineering shops engaged on war work which was agreed upon at a recent meeting. The scheme, which comes into operation immediately under the Defence of the Realm Act, provides for the imposition of fines by trade unions on any of their members who have kept back time without adequate excuse, and authorizes the employers to deduct the amount of such fines from wages due to the parties penalised. A third offence involves in addition to a monetary penalty, immediate dismissal.

Anglin's Proposals

His Own Love Affair and That of His College Chum.

By HENRIETTA G. ROBINSON

Halfway down the steps of the fraternity house Anglin turned and went thoughtfully back to the room that he shared with Beresford.

"You're dead sure you'll not change your mind and come?" queried Anglin. Beresford, with a volume open on his knee and a pipe gripped between his teeth, nodded emphatically.

"Then I suppose you don't mind if I take your skates. They're sharper than mine."

"Take them, of course." But when Fred Anglin had slung the skates over his shoulder and buttoned on his thick gloves he still lingered. It seemed as though this were not what he had come back to say after all.

"I ought to tell you, Tom—we've been such pals right along—that I'm going to put my fate to the test tonight. The Tremaine girls will be at the skating party. And tonight I intend to speak to Gerla."

Beresford jumped up and wrung his friend's hand enthusiastically.

"Good for you!" he cried. "Go in and win! As long as it isn't Geraldine I can endure the thought of your happiness if she says yes. I'll be able to listen to your raptures without experiencing a perfectly legitimate desire to sling you through the window."

"Thanks, old man," laughed Anglin, adding: "Lucky we've not set our respective hearts on the same sister. Now, I'm blessed if I understand your infatuation for Geraldine. But as long as you are her captive why do you hold back? You are older than I am, and—"

Beresford shook his head with a grim smile.

"It isn't that. You've a wealthy father and a settled income. I've only enough to pull me through this final year. When I get my diploma—well, I shan't have much more in a material line. I don't dare ask Geraldine to wait until I have attained—achieved—arrived. It wouldn't be fair to her."

"It would—her promise—a tremendous incentive to you."

"Oh, I know that. But she must be considered first."

There was another handclasp, a firm and silent one. Anglin swung away for the tramp into the country, where the skaters were to assemble at Pilgrim's pond.

The star studded night closed down early. When Anglin reached the appointed place the amusement of the evening was already in full swing. The expanse of ice was clean swept and of an opaque, turquoise tint. Strings of Chinese lanterns dangled in the multi-bead propriety from bare tree to tree and from pole to pole. In a declivity semi-shaped by a fly tent a royal fire blazed and crackled. In and out, around and about in dullness under the sullen stars or in red relief where the flambeaux, set at regular intervals, flared fantastically, sped and flashed the dark figures of the skaters.

Fred Anglin got on his skates as quickly as possible and started out across the frozen pond. Many turned to look after the athletic young figure, circling through their midst with such easy, swallow-like grace of motion.

But he noticed neither their presence nor their admiration. He was looking for one particular little figure. She would wear a short skating costume of blue velvet, the Russian blouse, which was girt with heavy cords that swung backward when she moved. The high peaked cap would make a penthouse over a mass of fair curls and mischievous eyes, bluer than any violets that ever mocked the blueness of a June time sky. And—

"There she is!" he said suddenly to himself.

Alone in the shadow of the wigwag shaped refreshment tent, apparently fancying herself unobserved, a slender young form was whirling on heel and toe, cutting a pattern of intricate tracery on the ice.

"Come with me!" he cried as he dashed to her side. He held out his hands, crossed at the wrists in the old approved carry-the-lady-out-of-town style.

Together they swung gracefully down the strip of gleaming ice which was least covered.

But when they were quite away from the merry crowd of skaters, whose voices came to them musically through the frosty night air, Anglin turned their impetuous progress to one very deliberate. And then, as he took a firmer hold of her wilted hands, he began, after the manner of many another lover who has been compelled to force his courage to the sticking point.

"Dear," he said desperately. "I can't keep silent any longer. You know how I've cared for you ever since—well, ever since I entered college. Al though I've never been obliged to consider ways and means, still a lawyer has made it possible for me to ask you to give me your hand, I know."

He added hastily, "you won't see about this sort of thing, but I must, to mention it. There's only one question now—do you think you will ever love me—a little?"

His words, voice, even the tendril with which he retarded her flight.

Revised figures show the toll of the Queenstown tragedy to be 12 dead and 92 injured.

holding her hands tight pressed to his side, did not escape the girl's alert consciousness. But she answered in unsteady accents. There was trepidation in her tone, as well as dread, the dread of a sweet girl experiences who hates to give pain.

"I'm sorry—sorry—sorry that I've ever been about anything in all my life," she began. "I did not dream it was I for whom you—cared. Had I done so I never would have permitted you to say—this."

As one stunned he relaxed slightly his grip on her fingers, while he accelerated their speed.

"Don't worry!" he answered bravely. "I must have been awfully stupid to have fancied—you are sure you're quite warm enough? We are almost at the tent now. I'd better bring you some hot coffee, Gerla."

They were at the tent. Yellow streaks of light from its canvas apertures were blinding out at them. The girl came to a standstill, her hand still on her companion's arm.

"What was that you said?" she asked sharply.

"Gerla, I suppose I should have said Miss Tremaine," and then, as she did not at once reply, he wheeled swiftly and confronted her.

She had dashed back the peaked hood of her skating coat. He saw a little, dark, mignonette face looking up at him in the wavering amber light—a face that looked uncertain as to whether it ought to break into smiles or quiver into tears—the face of Gerla's twin.

"Geraldine!" he exclaimed as he fell back in astonishment.

It was her turn to be amazed. "Why, did you think it was Gerla?" she cried. "Sure," he added, with enthusiastic relief. And then when her merry peal of laughter had died away he queried, "But how do you happen to be wearing Gerla's costume?"

"She laughed again—a relieved sort of merriment that made Anglin think suddenly of his roommate.

"Oh, that's what—what fooled you, was it? Why, we changed them just for fun. But if Tom—she flushed furiously at her slip of names—"I mean if Gerla had thought—"

"What?" exclaimed Anglin ambiguously. "Geraldine—do you think?"

"Oh, as to Gerla," she broke in. "She is coming back to you. Ask her yourself." And she skated swiftly away.

The next instant Anglin was facing a girl in a suit of wine colored velvet. The peaked cap was drawn high over tousled golden curls and eyes of deep-set blue.

"How you stare!" she laughed. "Am I an uncanny spirit?"

"I've proposed to one girl tonight," he confessed as he whisked away to the waltz the band was playing, "and I don't want to make a similar mistake again, for she was not the girl at all whom I meant to ask to marry me."

"Are you quite sure you're not mistaken now?" she asked quizzically.

"Quite," he assured her. "But I would like positive proof—and corroboration."

And both Fred Anglin succeeded in securing before he strode home to ask Tom for congratulations and to hearten him with the fondest of hopes.

WATCH IN A PEARL

The feat of making a watch in a pearl has been accomplished by a watchmaking firm at Chaux de Ponds, Switzerland. This wonderful watch, the only one of its kind in the world, was finished a few days ago. A pearl which weighs forty-five grains and has a diameter of about half an inch contains all the works. It took an employee of the firm fifteen months to hollow out the pearl and fix the wheels. The watch is guaranteed to keep good time and may be worn as a ring on the finger.

TAXES IN CHINA

One dollar to get married, 10 cents to go to college and 50 cents to graduate are some of the items in the new regulation "governing the affixing of stamps on certificates concerning human affairs" which were recently promulgated in China.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT

Drowsiness. Drowsiness is sometimes a sign of disease. It is often a symptom of a poisoned system. When therefore a person begins to show unusual and inexplicable drowsiness he ought to find out what the cause is. It may be that malaria or indigestion or some form of kidney disease is poisoning the blood. A diminished blood stream can also produce somnolence, as in the case of the aged, who often fall into a succession of little naps at day long because the amount of blood that circulates through the brain is so small that there is a constant condition of cerebral anemia. Abnormal drowsiness also results from tumors of the brain or injuries to the skull. Then it is usually caused by the pressure that interferes with the circulation of the blood. In diabetes drowsiness occasionally comes on with great suddenness. It is then generally the precursor of the unconsciousness or coma that accompanies the late stages of that disease. The treatment of drowsiness must be determined by the cause. Old people should be permitted to drowse freely. Young people who are anemic should try to improve their blood by tonics and diet and cultivate a habit of living and sleeping in the fresh air.
