At the Mouth of the Treacherous Pit
 STORY OF LOVE, INTRIGUE AND REVENGE

CHAPTER XX.

"But, Frodsham," cried his mistress, with tears in her eyes, "he would not be detained I am sure. He would be so anxious. He would know my alarm. After promising to return at half-past nine, he would never have stayed out until eleven."

All the nervous forebodings of the past few weeks returned to her, and she trembled like a leaf.

"I will walk just a little way into the park myself," she said.

"But not alone, my lady. I will follow you."

The picturesque mansion, with its long terraces and magnificent gardens, lay bathed in silvery light. In the ivy near one of the towers an owl had made its home; and its hooting was the one sound that broke the silence of the night. The deep shadows cast by the trees and the melancholy cry of the owl made Lady Allanmore feel strangely depressed. She dared not walk far; innumerable shadows seemed to fall over her. Once she raised her soft voice and cried, "Karl," but no answer came.

"Sir Karl is nowhere in the park, my lady," said the old servant, at last. "It will be better for you to come back to the Hall; and, if you still feel anxious, I will call some of the men, and they can go in different directions to look for him."

She gasped, at the suggestion; and the butler gave a great sigh of relief when he left her to the care of Mrs. Pickering.

"Persuade her to lie down," he said in a low voice, "she will wear herself out; he may not be home for hours yet. I know what masters are! If every lady made as much fuss if her husband was not home by eleven, I do not know what servants would do."

Dolores followed the housekeeper's advice. She lay down and tried to compose herself, tried to believe that there was nothing wrong; but she sprang up with a sudden cry of alarm when she heard the clock strike one.

"Call Frodsham!" she cried. "He must send all the servants out. Oh, how can they sleep when their master is perhaps in danger? They must not delay any longer."

vions evening, intending to return at half-past nine, but nothing had been heard of him since. The men were all there, including James Ashford, the groom who had driven the Squire home. Dolores, whose wife was sharpened by suspense, felt sure she saw an expression of surprise pass over this man's face.

"James," she cried—"James Ashford, do you know where Sir Karl went?"

The groom's face flushed hotly as he answered—

"No, my lady," but to himself he muttered, "I shall have to tell."

No precise directions could be given to the men. Some went one way and some another. The rumor spread quickly in the house that something was amiss, and one by one the woman-servants came down. Dolores, persuaded by her maid, went up to her own room and lay down.

"It will be all right now," the woman told her. "The men will be sure to come back with good news."

Notwithstanding her distress, she fell asleep; and that one hour sleep made the awakening more terrible still. She dreamed that he came back, that she heard his hurried footsteps up the stairs; that the door opened and he entered, with the same bright, loving look on his handsome face. He went up to her, took her in his arms, and said, "My darling, have I frightened you? I am so sorry. I have been at White Cliff. Your father was not well, and I stayed with him. My sweet Dolores, how pale you are, how you tremble! Let me kiss your tears away." Once more his strong, loving arms enfolded her, and he kissed her as though he would never in life part from her again. He whispered sweetest and most loving words to her; she was his love, his darling. With her arms twined round him, she told him all her fears. He laughed at them. She heard the sound of his laugh so distinctly. "My darling Dolores," he said, "rest assured that while I am on earth, nothing will ever keep me from you."

But, alas, it was only a dream! The face bending over hers faded, the figure clasped in her arms was no longer there. She awoke. There was a cold, gray light in the room, and she was alone. No after-hours—not even when the truth was made known to her—was so terrible as this hour.

"Oh, Karl, Karl, where are you?" she cried; but there was no answer.

CHAPTER XXI.

One by one the men servants returned; but none of them had any news of Sir Karl. No one had either seen or heard anything of him. When the clock struck eight, Lady Allanmore came downstairs, looking the ghost of herself. The servants gazed at her in wonder, as at one over whom a great calamity hung. She sent for John Frodsham.

"You have no news for me?" she said.

"No, my lady, no news," and the old man's face was pale and worn. He did not look at her; he shrank from meeting her eyes.

Quick as thought she cried out: "You know something, Frodsham, and you are keeping it from me!"

"I know nothing, my lady," he answered; "but, if I may make a suggestion, it is that your ladyship should send for some friends—some gentleman—the Squire perhaps, or Lord Rhysworth."

"I will send for both," she said. "Give orders, Frodsham, at once!"

John Frodsham did so; and she felt some little relief. But she could not rest. She wandered from room to room, through the grounds and gardens, and along the terraces, always with the vague idea that she would find Sir Karl or hear of him.

Then she became conscious of something that annoyed and perplexed her. Wherever she went in the house she found groups of servants whispering. They broke off abruptly when they saw her; and in each face she perceived a peculiar expression, as though they knew something, but would not, or could not, impart it. She felt as though an atmosphere of mystery surrounded her. Ah, if he would but come—the sight of him would dispel all this! Once she spoke to the women-servants more sternly than she had ever spoken to them before.

"Is there anything kept from my knowledge," she asked, "that you whisper together and look so strange?"

 By EDGAR A GUEST

THE LARGE FAMILY.

Brothers and sisters and cousins and aunts, uncles and grandfolds, too. Children of this one and children of that, all of the blood of you; this is the family—your's and mine—and bigger it yearly grows; Oh, the pleasures come fast when the family's large, and so do the cares and woes!

When the family's small you may run the years with seldom a touch of grief. Two or three lads you may keep in fold away from the wolf or thief; But so many to love and with many to guard there are some that will go astray. And over and over your tears shall fall when the Shepherd calls one away.

They bring you their joys with their smiling eyes, they lavish their love on you; When the family's large you have much they miss who cherish but one or two. But your faith must wear to the circle's rim for many a blow shall fall. For as often come joys to the larger throng, so often shall sorrow call.

There is always a care when the family's large, there is ever a pressing need. For the strength you have and the faith you hold, and often your heart will bleed. But this is the price you must pay for all the love that has come to you— You must braver be, for you'll suffer more than the smaller families do.

TOKIO, July 16. No trace of Al Stewart Maclaren, British aviator, overdue at Paramasbiru Island, in the Kuriles, and his companions in the round the world flight, has been found up to nine o'clock to-night.

ANOTHER MURDER CASE IN HALIFAX.

HALIFAX, July 17. "I went there to get him. I did not care whether I killed him or not. I did not take a rifle and ammunition down for nothing." So declared Bombarrier George Coleman, of the Royal Canadian Artillery, who shot and killed his comrade in arms, Acting Lance Bombarrier W. F. Groves, at Connaught Battery, near here, this morning, following a quarrel which the two men had yesterday. Groves, who was shot in the abdomen, as he was engaged in opening the Battery gate for Coleman's admission to the Fort, was rushed to Camp Hill Military Hospital, where he died shortly after one o'clock this afternoon. Coleman, who had been placed under arrest, made a statement to the police this evening, in which he admitted the shooting and declared it was intentional. Coleman is unmarried and is 33 years of age. Groves is an Englishman, married, and 41 years of age, and has been known to Coleman for the past four and one-half years.

U. S. REPRESENTATIVE WILL SIT.

PARIS, July 17. The reported statement that Col. J. A. Logan, Jr., had announced at the opening of the Inter-Allied Conference yesterday that Washington had no objection to a United States representative sitting on the Reparations Commission in the event of its having to deliberate on Germany's defaults, is viewed here as the most important event of the opening session.

DOMINION PRESENTATION.

LONDON, July 17. Although the form in which the various Dominions will be represented at the Allied Conference here has not yet been determined, the probability is that if the Empire is represented by three delegates, one of them will attend as representing the Dominions, but the same person will not necessarily represent the Dominions on each occasion. J. H. Thomas, Colonial Secretary attended yesterday's sitting of the Allied Conference in view of the fact that the question of direct representation by the Dominions was then pending.

OLYMPIC RESULTS.

ARGENTEUIL, July 17. Yale's champion varsity eight oared race. Canada was second. Yale crossed the finish line three and a half lengths ahead of Canada, setting a new record for the course of 6min. 33.25 seconds. This victory of the United States in the eight oared event made her winner of the Olympic rowing competition, giving her 33 points to Switzerland's 32. Italy came third and Great Britain fourth in to-day's contest. In the four-oared race without coxswain to-day, Great Britain was first, Canada second, Switzerland 3rd, France 4th; time 7 minutes 3.35 seconds. The single sculls race in the Olympic Championship here to-day, was won by Jack Bressford, Jr., of Great Britain, defeating W. E. Garrett Gilmore, Philadelphia, United States rival.

KEEPING TO THE VITAL PURPOSE.

LONDON, July 17. The Experts' plan for Reparations is going through the most critical period of its existence under the scrutiny of experts who spent the second day of the Inter-Allied Conference at work in the Committee Rooms in Downing Street. To-night it was authoritatively stated the Prime Ministers of Great Britain, France and Belgium were highly satisfied with the progress made. The British are said to be particularly pleased because the delegations are keeping close to the vital purpose for which the Conference assembled, that of adopting broad sweeping measures for making the Experts' scheme workable.

DEPOSITORS HAVE CLAIM FOR COMPENSATION.

OTTAWA, July 17. The long advertised debate upon the claim of the Home Bank depositors for reimbursement, took place in the House of Commons to-night and lasted less than two minutes. In fact in the usual course of that word there was no debate, nevertheless the House committed itself to the proposition that the depositors of the Home Bank have a moral claim in equity for compensation by the country on account of any loss they may suffer by reason of the failure of the Home Bank.

DOMINIONS RIGHT ACKNOWLEDGED.

OTTAWA, July 17. Canada has sustained her point at the Inter-Allied Conference. Senator Belcourt will attend the Conference as a member of the British Empire Delegation with full power from the King to represent Canada and to sign on behalf of Canada. The system of representation to be followed will be similar to that adopted at the Paris Peace Conference, with three delegates, one of whom will be the representative of the Dominion. There may be some minor differences from the method followed at Paris. In this regard the Dominion Government is not insisting on technical, but the broad moral principle of Dominion representation, which, it is intimated, has been accepted.

PROHIBITION DEFEATED BY BIG MAJORITY.

REGINA, July 17. The majority against the continuation of prohibition in Saskatchewan passed the 26,500 mark this afternoon and continued climbing. On the basis of the day's returns, all of them from rural points and most of them contributing to the majority, some people were predicting that full returns will show a majority against prohibition 35,000 and 40,000. This evening 2,168 polls had reported and from 964 there was no information. These 2,168 polls had given a total vote against prohibition of 92,082 for prohibition of 65,462, majority, 26,620. The majority against licensed beer premises dropped slightly during the day to 7,658. The vote was 64,263 for straight Government control and 56,565 for such control plus beer licenses.

CANADIAN PARLIAMENT CLOSES.

OTTAWA, July 18. With very little important business outside routine in committee of supply the House of Commons assembled this Friday morning for what will probably be its last business day of this session.

The World Loves a Pleasant Man

If we were delivering a dissertation for the development of the better nature of the races the above headline would represent our subject and the following quotation, true to nature, would be appended, says the Mt. Sterling (Ky.) Advocate, as it is now given for serious thought:

Learn to laugh; a good laugh is better than medicine.

Learn to tell a story; a good story, well told, is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick room.

Learn to stop croaking; if you cannot see any good in the world, keep the lid to yourself.

Learn to hide your aches and pains under pleasant smiles; no one cares to hear whether you have headaches or rheumatism.

Learn to meet your friends with a smile; a good humored man or woman is always welcome, but the dyspeptic is not wanted anywhere.

Above all, give pleasure; lose no chance of giving pleasure.

You will pass through this world but once.

Any good, therefore, that you can do, any kindness that you can show to any human being, you had better do it now; do not defer or neglect it.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR HEAD-ACHE.

Medical System of British Army Found Defective.

London, June 25. (A.P.)—Lessons from sins of omission and otherwise, in the medical services during the war, have been compiled into an 11 volume edition of the Official Medical History of the Great War, recently issued. They should furnish the basis for the reorganization of the medical staffs of the forces of the great powers on a level with modern science, say the editors of this voluminous work.

The books deal frankly with the tactical and strategic errors of the medical service in the war, notably in areas typical of middle eastern conditions. No attempt has been made to place the blame on the lack of co-operation between the combatant and medical staffs is frequently noted, and it is in this that the editors find the greatest lesson.

Although in some respects faulty administration was a factor in the breakdown of the medical services in the Dardanelles, Mesopotamia and East Africa, the chief lesson to be learnt from the study of these campaigns, say the editors, is the need of a close liaison between the medical administration and the general staff from the outset, and clear and definite preparations before the campaign is begun to meet all possible contingencies. Too often in the last war the medical service was found to be totally inadequate because the medical staffs had no clear idea of what was to be expected of the campaign upon which they were engaged.

The Dardanelles operations was an example, it is shown, of the necessity for establishing large general hospitals near the scene of operations and for providing a sufficient number of steamers and small craft for the evacuation of sick and wounded when the fighting takes place on or near water.

In Macedonia the dominant feature was warfare in mountainous country or in river valleys, the hotbeds of malaria. In this sector the percentage of hospital beds to the numbers of troops reached the largest proportion, that of one in three. Malaria was rampant here and, while the medical service was handicapped by lack of scientific knowledge, it also failed to protect the troops by a lack of proper equipment on the spot.

The medical administration in Mesopotamia during the early period of the campaign was dulled by many years of economy practicing in peacetime in India. This explains why the ambulance wagons and cars, hospital steamers and other equipment provided for the services in France were not even asked for by the headquarters of the Indian Expeditionary Force. They were unaccustomed to their use.

The most deplorable inefficiency was in the actions for the relief of Kut-el-Amara. At that action the medical service found itself with only 14 sections of field ambulances, instead of the authorized 30. When the operations toward Kut were started no strenuous efforts had been made to reinforce the medical units or to prepare a plan for the evacuation of the sick and wounded. The battles of Shikh Saad, Wadi Hanna still remain a nightmare to those who took part in them. The wounded lay out over night and many died from exposure. Those collected could not be properly housed or treated. They were evacuated to the base on any available boat and arrangements at Basra for the disembarkation of the reinforcing divisions were defective. When the divisions arrived large convoys of sick and wounded were coming down the Tigris. The steamers met at the Basra and confusion prevailed. Officers and men wandered about in mud trying to find their way to new camps at Makina and Magil from vague directions given them by other overworked officers.

The Father of Prohibition.

A writer in The English Review has at last enlightened the world as to the identity of the father of prohibition. He was not an American politician as many may have surmised but a very ancient statesman, no less a person than Lycurgus, King of Thrace, who lived about one thousand years before the Christian era. He was himself the earliest teetotaler recorded in history, and believing that his subjects were too much addicted to the juice of the vine, set about to check the habit by enactment of a most drastic character. Inasmuch as he was an absolute monarch—a "tyrant" as kings were known in those days, he was not obliged to consult his subjects as to methods; and the measures he adopted to stop the sale and manufacture of intoxicants were even more sweeping than the Volstead act. He not only prohibited the use of wine by his subjects, under most painful penalties, but to make sure that he would be obeyed rooted up all the vine-vines in his dominion. What steps he took to check importation are not recorded but it may be taken for granted that a king so thorough in his methods revealed efficiency in his respect.

But what happened to Lycurgus? Did a trial of prohibition convince his subjects that wine-drinking was wrong? Did his measures eliminate the taste for stimulants from the human anatomy? Not so. His subjects finally mutinied and killed him. They charged him with blasphemy and attributed all their misfortunes to the fact that he had drawn down the anger of the gods on Thrace by insulting Bacchus the god of the vine; and that was an end of prohibition in Thrace, until the coming of the Turks. The fate of Lycurgus is strangely suggestive of that of the late Czar, who abolished vodka by a stroke of the pen, an act which undoubtedly contributed to the outbreak of the Russian revolution of 1917. Possibly the subjects of the King of Thrace, like those of the Czar, had other causes of complaint, for the fathers of arbitrary measures are seldom content to confine their energies to a single field. But Lycurgus certainly in the end, had reason to know that humanity cannot be driven.

CAN THERE BE A GREATER MISTAKE!

"But I'm so afraid that if I do I'll regret it."
A neighbor of mine has been hesitating on the verge of an important purchase for several weeks. Two or three times she has almost committed herself and then she has drawn back at the last minute. It isn't that she has any good reason to doubt the value of her purchase. It is only that it is an important step and that she is temperamentally afraid to take it. And when anyone asks her why she hangs back, she says the words "I have quoted above."

"But I'm so afraid that if I do I'll regret it."
It's a natural and universal fear, isn't it?
A Joy Killer and a Mistake Breeder. There are none of us who haven't felt it sometimes. And up to a certain point it's a commendable fear and saves us from hasty mishaps. But beyond that point it is a dangerous fear, a joy killer, and a mistake breeder.

As I look backward it seems to me that it is the things I haven't done that I regret more bitterly than those I have. There is a certain neighborhood. I almost hate to pass through because there is a house in it that always reproaches me. I could have bought that house eight years ago for a figure that I knew was reasonable even then. The only reason I didn't buy it was fear. To-day, well, I won't tell you how much more it is worth to-day than it was then, because I simply can't bear to try to estimate it. It makes me too mad at myself!

But prices might have gone the other way, you tell me and I might have been sorry that I bought it. Yes, they might have, but the price was reasonable even for those days and one must always take some chance. But you won't get anywhere if you don't.

People who are always taking chances come to grief sometimes, of course, but it is equally sure that no one will get anywhere in life who does not take some chances. I've always loved that sentiment of Stevenson's, "We can forgive mistakes, but not even God can forgive the hanger-back."

It always seemed to me that phrase describes Roosevelt, and one whom I regarded as a spiritual ancestor of Roosevelt's—the disciple, Peter, who was always first to speak when Christ called.

It seems to me that if Christ cared more for one of his disciples than the rest it was for Peter. True, Peter did not call himself the disciple whom Christ loved, but there are many other signs that point that way.

We all need some of the Peter in us if we are going to be whole men. We shall make mistakes, of course. But could there be a greater mistake than the fear to move lest one regret that more.

He Will Lose His Harvest.

"He that observeth the wind shall not sow and he that regardeth the clouds shall not reap."

He will not lose his harvest by wind or rain, to be sure, but he will lose it just as surely.

Have courage for life if you want to get the best there is out of life. Of course regrets for the things we do are sometimes bitter, but not more bitter than our regrets for the things we didn't have the courage to do. Have courage for life, don't be afraid of it, and you will have your reward.

A Great Declaration Against War

The Methodist Episcopal Church of America Makes Some Notable Affirmations Against War, and Calls for a World Conference to End War.

A Great Decision.

A great decision against all war has been taken by the great Methodist Church of the United States at its recent General Conference at Springfield, Massachusetts.

The decisions reached were expressed in uncompromising terms, and will doubtless give a lead to other churches which have not yet declared war against all war.

"The final action on war taken by the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States," says the Christian Century, "is one which places this church unitedly against war, in what is by far the strongest and most definite pronouncement on the subject which this church has ever made, and one which calls for definite action of an immediate nature, in the calling of a conference of the religious forces of the world to consider plans and methods for making the impact of united Christendom against the evils of war."

Qualified War.

"After two weeks of the most careful thought and study of the whole matter, the committee on the state of the church brought in a majority report which was not only a strong statement of the responsibility of the church, but also contained the declaration that we as an organization separate ourselves from war and take no part in its promotion." This majority report is so brief and compact and clean cut that it is printed on page 588, and should be studied if one is to gain an idea of the significance of the war discussion.

"The minority report was exactly the same as that of the majority, with the all-important exception that it added a qualification to the separation of the church from war in these words: 'Unless indisputably in self-defence or in defence of humanity.' This exception, of course, is the usual loophole, leaving the way open for participation in any war, and weakens, if not entirely nullifies, any statement which can be made."

Not the Usual Thing.

"The majority report was adopted by the committee by a vote of two to one. When it was presented, and a vote involving a division was imminent, a strong movement developed, inspired principally if not wholly by those favouring the minority report, to have the whole matter committed to a special committee of thirteen, to be named by the bishops. To those who expected anything with real teeth in it to come from the conference, that looked like the end—the usual, weak-kneed evasion.

"A committee was appointed, but it did not do the usual thing. It presented a document which won the support of the entire conference, including those who were emphatically in favour of the majority report. It is an indictment of war which contains a practical and constructive step of large promise."

"The main points in the report are these:—

"1. A determination to brand war by having America take the lead in an aggressive campaign to teach the nature, causes and consequences of war. The glorification of war must end.

"2. To hold the cause of peace dearer than party allegiance and tolerate no dilatory or evasive attitudes on the part of those who represent the church constituency.

"3. The President of the United States is asked to summon another conference of nations to consider more drastic reduction of armaments."
"4. A demand is made for the immediate entrance of the United States into the Permanent Court of International Justice. Participation of the United States in a league of nations will receive the active support of the church.

"5. It is proposed that the Methodist church assume responsibility and appoint a commission of twenty-five authorized and instructed to call a conference of the religious forces of the world to consider plans and methods for making the impact of united Christendom against the evils of war."

Stand Against War.

"Two points are particularly worthy of emphasis. The first is that the report contains one sentence which logically involves the strongest stand against war which any Christian may desire to take. That sentence is: 'Governments which ignore the Christian conscience of men in times of peace cannot justly claim the lives of men in time of war.' That is emphatically, in the literal sense of the word, a radical statement about war under which the most sincere Christian conscience can operate to the full limit."

"The other point is the appointment of a commission of twenty-five members authorized and instructed to call a conference of the religious forces of the world to consider the best plans and methods for making the impact for united Christendom against the evils of war. That proposal was taken in deep earnestness, and a commission will be appointed immediately. If such a conference can be called by the co-operation of many branches of the church of Christ, it will meet one of the most urgent of the world's needs in this hour."

"The whole course of the general conference in regard to war has given many reasons for encouragement. For one thing, it afforded a very definite check upon how far the sentiment against war throughout the churches of America has been growing at a rate never before approached. The Methodist conference indicates that that sentiment has been more widespread than any, even the most optimistic, had hoped. It is not merely in the minds of the leaders. It is permeating the entire church."

"In its proposal for a conference of all religious forces to challenge all bodies of Christendom to a co-operative endeavour which may prove a deciding step in Christian history."

Captain's Resolve to go Down With Ship—Deathless Heroism On Drowned Liner.

Heroism of a kind recalling the thrilling adventures of the shipwrecked crew of the Trevesa some months ago was associated with the dramatic fate of the Clan Macmillan in the Bay of Bengal. When she was on the point of sinking the officers and crew tried in vain to persuade the captain to leave. He was firmly resolved to stick to his ship to the last, and throwing discipline to the winds his men carried him bodily from the bridge to one of the lifeboats. Happily all on board, numbering 77, were rescued. The Clan Macmillan, of 6,608 tons gross, was built at Sunderland in 1913. Glasgow was her port of registry and Messrs. Cuyzer, Irvine and Co., her owners. She left the Clyde on April 15 and Liverpool on April 25th, with Rangoon as her destination, and was overtaken by a gale after leaving Madras. Wireless calls for help were flashed out, indicating her position, and a tense drama followed whilst other ships raced to the rescue. The first message, picked up by the Bibby liner of Leicestershire, stated that the crew was abandoning ship, and that the Clan Macmillan was then 30 miles east of Table Island. At 10.45 the following morning the Leicestershire picked up a further message stating that the liner was still afloat having drifted 16 miles from her original position. From the time the first distress call was received the Bibby liner's captain was on the bridge for two days and two nights. When his ship reached the spot mentioned in the messages, there was no trace of either the Clan Macmillan or her crew, and the gravest fears were entertained. A systematic search was organized, in which other vessels assisted, including the Royal Indian Marine steamers Minto and Clive, and the s.s. Minhia, of the Burma Oil Company. One by one the Clan Macmillan boats were then accounted for. Altogether 59 officers and men were picked up by the Minhia, south of the mouth of the Irrawaddy, and taken to Rangoon. The boat occupied by Capt. Mackinnon, of the lost liner, was found by the British tanker Schwaydagon off Krishna Shoal. Having recovered from their exhaustion the rescued men told a thrilling story. "The gale was terrible," they declared, "and no ship in the world could have kept straight with it. Off Preoparis Islands we ran into a mighty current that drove us on to a submerged rock. To get out the boats was no easy task, for the wind was terrible, and

Revealing an Island Power

THAT FLOURISHED BEFORE THE DAYS OF ABRAHAM.

Sir Arthur Evans Makes Further Astonishing Discoveries of the Ancient Civilization of Crete—He Unseals Long Locked Chambers.

The Greatest That Was Crete.

"Scarcely a quarter of a century has passed since the spade, under the scientific direction of Sir Arthur Evans and other investigators, began to reveal the glories of Minoan civilisation in Crete, and to transform the wonderful legends of Minos and the Minotaur, of the Labyrinth and the Corymbantes, handed down to us from Homeric times, into facts still more astounding," says the Scotsman.

Every year has brought something to our knowledge of the Sea Power that had reached its zenith centuries before the date of Tutankhamen, and had receded into a myth of antiquity before the fall of Troy. Each year has added, also, to the rich treasures of art and archaeology which Sir Arthur Evans has dug from the soil of Knossos and other ancient Cretan sites, and has generously presented to the British School at Athens.

Before Greece Was

"His latest discoveries are among the most remarkable of a series that have gone far to revolutionise ideas as to the place of origin and the period and range of development of European culture, and to set back by many centuries the beginnings of the historic age in the Aegean area. Crete, which until a generation ago was a somewhat despised and neglected island, subject to Ottoman domination, has not only proved to be the seed-bed out of which, with the help of the inspiring brain and modelling hand of Ventzelos, a New Greece has arisen; but has been shown to have a history that goes much farther back into the mists of time than that of Continental Hellas, since it was the seat of a civilisation out of which was derived that Mycenaean art which in its turn was the precursor of the 'glory that was Greece'."

An Island Power.

"From whatever original source it was drawn—and the known facts seem to point to Egypt—Minoan civilisation attained developments in the luxuries as well as in the useful arts of life that, considering its isolated situation, seem almost as incredible as the myth of King Minos; and this at a time when Western and Northern and most of Southern Europe was plunged in the depths of barbarism. For us, in our island, not the least interesting aspect of the story of Knossos, now in course of excavation, is that this insular position, with the command which it gave of the adjoining sea and coasts, combined doubtless with the commercial and fighting instincts of the population, was the real secret of the power and wealth of the Minoan Empire and culture."

Sealed Chambers.

"Thanks to the labours of Sir Arthur Evans and his fellow-workers, we are enabled to enter chambers that until now, besides being buried under and blocked by the ruins of later periods, have been sealed, as in a cyst, by the petrification of alluvial deposits impregnated by gypsum springs. It was only after weeks of quarrying through what had been taken for a rock surface that access was obtained to 'the cyclopean piers of a Minoan viaduct and bridgehead, the most imposing structure that has yet come to light in Crete,' over which had passed the great road that crossed the island from north to south, and adjacent to what has now been revealed as the southern entrance of the Palace—a path with ascending staircase, and supporting columns on a scale and in a style worthy of the vast extent and dimensions of the building to which it was the main access.

A Prehistoric Caravan.

"Close by the bridge, and a revelation of the ordinary life and habits of the citizens of Knossos, the excavators met with 'what seems to have been a caravan, with conveniences for travellers, and stabling in the basements,' and having as its central feature 'an elegant little pavilion,' set round with pillars 'supporting a frieze very delicately executed with decorative plants and birds, chiefly partridges,' forming, as is pointed out an 'appropriate subject for the walls of a dining-room' in this inn of four millennia ago. In a separate room were 'arrangements for washing the feet'; while an underground chamber, furnished with a fountain, stone benches and ledges for stone lamps, giving the impression, with its 'masses of vessels offering the censers,' of being a place for the celebration of religious rites.

A Buried Civilization

"The breaking of the shell of gypsum has brought to the light 'of day' a buried civilization, more than twice as old as that of Herculaneum. Already we know a good deal concerning Minoan arts and religion, and the habits, costumes and occupations of the inhabitants both of palace and city; the new discoveries open a further chapter, illustrating their modes of travel by land and water, their engineering achievements, their domestic and urban arrangements. They possess a literature, or at least a written language, although the secret of its decipherment has still to be unlocked. Doubtless the discovery of the key would enable much to be added to our information concerning this Island Power that flourished before the days of Abraham. But it would probably tell us little regarding the causes and circumstances of its downfall, which, in the case of the Knossos of the chief Minoan Era, seems to have been sudden, and ultimately so complete that hardly an echo of its greatness came down to later ages."

WANTS TO HELP OTHER WOMEN

Grateful for Health Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Toronto, Ont.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for backache and for weak and dreary feelings caused by my condition. Sometimes I felt so bad that I could not do my housework. My neighbor told me of your medicine and I read about it in the 'Toronto Telegram' and thought I would take it. I got very good results. It built me up and I have told several friends what it has done for me. You may use this testimonial as it may be of help to some one who has suffered as I have."—Mrs. J. Lee, 25 Harvie Ave., Toronto, Ont.

Mrs. Lee is willing to write to any girl or woman suffering from such troubles, and answer any questions they may like to ask.

Women suffering from female troubles—backache, irregularities, pains, bearing-down feelings and weakness should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Not only is the worth of this splendid medicine shown by such cases as this, but for nearly fifty years letters like this have been received from thousands of women.

huge waves were lashing the vessel, making us fearful that every moment we should be hurled to the bottom. Capt. Mackinnon told us and the men to save ourselves, but he refused to leave the bridge. Every time we shouted to him to come and get into a boat he waved his hand indignantly as much as to say, 'Get along with it, and leave me alone.' We could see that if the ship were going to the bottom he was determined to go with it, so we decided, regardless of discipline, to use force. Rushing up to the bridge, we gave him a last chance to come voluntarily, begging him, for our sake as well as his, to leave the doomed ship. But he was adamant; bravery and love for his ship predominated; even when we used a little force he only pushed us away. So, closing in upon him, we literally picked him up and carried him from the bridge, lowered him into a lifeboat, and pushed him clear. It was no pleasant task for us, but there was nothing else to be done; and we are heartily glad Captain Mackinnon is now with us to share in the rejoicing after our lucky escape."

In further conversation it was indicated that the Indian seaman behaved none too well, and was ever eager to get into the lifeboats. The rescuing vessel was attracted to one lifeboat by the flashing of an electric torch. Throughout the night two of the crew held up a third man, who manipulated the torch. But for this it is doubtful whether they would ever have been seen, owing to the mountainous waves.

EXERCISE.

Along the path bycombe and strath, by floss and for I journey; I climb the hills and leap the rills and cross the hollows ferny. The Old Doc said, "You'll soon be dead if you remain so sluggish; you can't escape the bier and crape by taking nostrums druggish. You cannot dodge the boneyard lodge by sloth and meditation, but you must tramp until you're damp with honest perspiration." I sadly romp by mere and swamp and walk beside the rivers, and envy says who go their ways in limousines and flivvers. I walk and run beneath the sun, I chase when rain is pelting; I labor hard and feel the lard upon my person melting. I journey home all flecked with foam, and feeling like a martyr; I've sprained my thews and torn my shoes and spoiled a costly garter. I've skinned my nose and wrenched my toes, my weariness is shocking, and I decide that I will ride and cut out all the walking. The Old Doc comes; "Ods bones," he hums, "I see your health is mending; to-morrow walk from nine o'clock until the daylight's ending." "This life," I say, "is bright and gay, to quit it I'm unwilling, but better far a grave afar than all this futile drilling. Far better sleep some ten feet deep where mortal ashes mingle, than sprain my knees on verdant leas, by ten and coope and dingle."

Fads and Fashions.

A frock of beige lace has an under-ship and long tight sleeves of a darker shade of beige crops. A straight frock of headed Georgette is finished at the hem with ostrich in a matching shade. Colored soutache braiding and knife-plaited ruffles are used on black taffets and satin bathing suits. An apron tunic of navy Georgette bound with dark ribbon is used on a frock of navy and white foulard. Russian influence is seen in the lines of a frock of amure crepe de chine tie in a contrasting shade.

Talking to-day with Walls, he tells me how the tourist traffic from America is very small this year, and is because of the cheap trips which are now being given to England.

Comes Mr. McKay, and talks with me of the Industrial Exhibition which he will hold in the Prince's Park this Fall. He tells me of divers articles that are well manufactured here, and one, a veneer, which being exported to America, was sold there to a firm in this city.

Exception Taken to Introduction of Outside Workers Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—Permit me through the columns of your popular journal to ask those in authority why is it that with so many men at present unemployed in the city, a number of men, are actually brought in from the outports to perform work on Government buildings whilst permanent residents of the city are left to walk the streets.

I don't think this is fair. Mr. Editor, the city work should be left to those of the city, and if unemployment exists in the outports and the district representatives want to relieve the situation let them have the men employed in their own districts. I have been an ardent supporter of the present government and I cannot get a day's work and yet I can see a number of buildings trying to around the public buildings trying to do mechanical looking for work.

I think to say the least that this is an outrage, and requires the immediate attention of the city representatives to do justice to their constituents. Trusting that this matter will receive consideration from those in authority and thanking you in anticipation for publication, I remain, Yours truly,

FOX POPULI.

Musical Entertainment and Distribution of Prizes

Thursday, July 10th, was a gala day for the music pupils of the Presentation Convent, Cathedral Square. It was prize day, and a whisper had gone round previously that his Grace the Archbishop would honour the event with his presence and distribute the prizes. The hearts of the children literally bubbled over with joy and excitement and they were not disappointed, for at 5 o'clock p.m. his Grace accompanied by the priests of the Cathedral Parish, Rev. Dr. Carter, Frs. Flynn, Kennedy, McGrath and McGeethan entered the school to the music of the "Empire March," played by Miss M. E. O'Neill, L.T.C.L.

There were also present the Rev. Mother General and the Sisters of the Convent, the Mother Superior and several sisters from St. Patrick's Convent, and their guests from U.S.A., and the Mother Superior and Sisters of a nearby Convent.

After a brief address had been read in a very distinct voice by little Miss Smyth, the entertainment opened with the Overture of the famous French Opera "Le Taisse, Roi," by Theo. Herbert, beautifully rendered by the Misses O'Neill, Shortall and O'Keefe. Then followed sextettes and quartettes (on two pianos), several piano solos, some songs and recitations, which were very much enjoyed and appreciated. A pretty Cantata entitled "Where Fairies have gone" and an action song, "Hark! it is the Cuckoo," performed by the Juniors, were very pleasing items and evoked great applause.

Then the prizes were distributed to the lucky winners by his Grace the Archbishop. One could see the delight on the face of each child as she received her prize and heard from the lips of the Archbishop kind and encouraging words. After the last chorus his Grace addressed the pupils in general. He said it was a long time since he had been given an opportunity like the present to meet the children of the Convent School, Cathedral Square, and he was happy to be once more in their midst and renew old acquaintances with those whom he had not seen since they were tiny tots. He complimented them on their school, and their teachers on their brilliant performances, and that he had been noticing, time and again, their successes in the Trinity College Music Exams, but now he had personal experience of their musical talent and ability, and he concluded by saying it would be a pleasure to him, to preside at any entertainment they should have in future.

The concert was repeated, with several additions, on Friday night, to the parents and friends of the pupils, and the applause and accolades the children received were an evidence of their keen appreciation. A Matinee on Saturday at 3 p.m., closed the event and the children dispersed for their well-earned holidays.

FLIGHT RECORD BROKEN. CHARTRES FRANCES, July 18. The airplane duration record of 37 hours, 15 minutes, 48.8 seconds, made by Lieut. Smith and Lieut. Richter of the United States Army, was broken yesterday by the French aviators Coupet and Durbin, in a flight which lasted 37 hours, 59 minutes, 10 secs.

KILLED IN THE SAME WAY. HALIFAX, N.S., July 18. While discussing an accident which had just occurred at a construction camp at Sheet Harbor, N.S., when three men had been slightly injured by bolt lightning, William H. MacLean, aged 50, of Truro, was struck by a bolt and instantly killed.

CAUSE OF EXPLOSION NOT YET KNOWN. NEW GLASGOW, N.S., July 18. No light was shed on the cause of the Allan Shaft explosion of June 29, when four men were killed, at the opening session of investigation now being conducted at Stellarton. Judge Paterson heard evidence of several witnesses yesterday and there are yet eight to be heard before the inquiry terminates.

Bebe Daniels in a "Game Chicken" The majestic last night screened another big hit when "A Game Chicken" gave ample opportunity to the ever popular Bebe Daniels to shine.

The story in brief: Inez Hastings, daughter of Joshua, has been brought up in Cuba, in the best Spanish traditions of her mother, who wants her to marry Jose Lavendera.

Joshua Hastings is secretly engaged in the rum-running trade between Cuba and his old home in New England, and Jose is his partner. Inez, irrepressible tomboy, dresses as a boy and sneaks out of the house to attend a cockfight. She gets into a mele, and meets Rush Thompson, a young American. She falls in love with him, and continues to see him, which arouses Jose's jealousy and leads to a fight between Rush and Jose.

To avoid further trouble of this kind, her father sends her to his cousin, Hiram Broadfoot, of Stopy Point, Mass. Hiram is the American agent for the rum-smuggling combine, but protects his interests by being also the president of the local Purify League.

Rush Thompson is really an agent of the revenue department looking for the source of contraband liquor and right here the real excitement starts. Ben Redden is singing three songs pleased the audience immensely, and will be heard for the last time this evening.

Midwives' Club

On Tuesday at the Public Health Building the above club held its final meeting for the years 1923-24. A representative gathering was present of those who had attended the different classes since the club's formation in 1920. Mrs. Hiscock reviewed the work of the club since its inception and paid a tribute to the efforts and aims of those who had so far become members and taken an active interest in the work. She also gave a final word on the future working of the club, adding hope that its success from the standpoint of appreciation would be at least commensurate with the efforts for better nursing that each and every member had made since its inception four years ago.

Concluding the evening, Mrs. Thorburn, on behalf of the club, thanked Mrs. Hiscock for what she had done, not only for the club itself but in the interest of those unable to be present, "the mothers and future citizens." The latter, though unable to speak for themselves even if they were present, Mrs. Thorburn felt sure would in future years learn to appreciate what had been done for them from 1920-24. She also felt sure from personal knowledge that the good work made possible through the start-up of the first Midwives' Club in Newfoundland under Mrs. Hiscock would show the benefits to be derived in generations of the future.

The work of the club itself in being able to place on its roll sixty midwives during the past four years, should prove sufficient stimulus to others to follow the example set by Mrs. Hiscock, who had given freely of her time and talent in promoting such good work.

Mrs. Thorburn then asked Mrs. Hiscock to accept a token of appreciation and esteem from those who were in a position to realize the value of the services she had given. Mrs. Hiscock, in thanking the members, replied that success could not be accomplished without the co-operation which had been so heartily accorded her by the members themselves.—Com.

Rotary Luncheon

SIR EDGAR BOWRING THE SPEAKER.
In introducing Sir Edgar Bowring at yesterday's luncheon of the St. John's Rotary Club, Chairman Dr. V. P. Burke paid a well-merited and graceful tribute to our philanthropic and eminent citizen. "Since the days of Mr. S. Codner, that benevolent Christian gentleman who founded the Newfoundland School Grant in 1823, and which later developed and became world known as the Church Colonial and Continental School Society," said Rotarian Burke, "no private citizen has done more for the welfare and advancement of Newfoundland, than Sir Edgar Bowring."

Sir Edgar's address—"A Trip Around the World"—proved an exquisite treat from start to finish. Picturesque scenes, bold, rugged mountains, fertile craters, lazy and turbid rivers, historic places, quaint customs and manners, beautiful and old architecture, all were portrayed so vividly and graphically that imagination ran rampant, and the experiences and thrills of the tour took life.

Stanzas from the Ritz Carlton, New York—supposed to be the finest hotel in the world, Sir Edgar took his hearers through the awe-inspiring, incomparable scenery of the Rockies; thence to Vancouver where Canadians are making wonderful strides in transportation development. The not distant future will see the greater part of grain and other products of Western Canada passing through Vancouver.

Next, Victoria, an ideal city with an ideal climate; just such a place where a retired business man would like to spend his days in comfort and luxury. Boarding the luxuriously equipped Cunard liner "Franconia," at San Francisco, the Hawaii Islands were next visited. Here, the soft, gentle manners of the natives, the delightful lanouan, and the wondrous subtleties of the ukulele, are most alluring. The temperature rarely above 80 and seldom below 60, is most uniform. Umbrellas are unknown.

Next, Honolulu, with its wonderful beach, and fascinating, thrilling surf-board riding. Yokohama and Tokio in Japan were next recovering from the terrible earthquake catastrophe, and many points of interest were forbidden. Nikko with its magnificent Buddhist temple of indestructible cedar and exquisite enamel, and its unique religious festivals were worth seeing. Kiova, the Manchester of Japan was a beehive of industry.

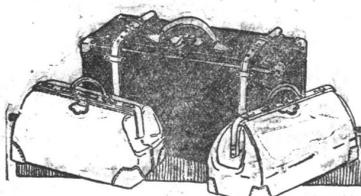

Shang Hai and Hong Kong where the natives look upon the railway as a luxury for the high and mighty, and prefer to carry the heavy freight on their backs. Manila, still Spanish to the core. The capital of Java with its large exports of rice, coffee, tea and spices. The rubber plantation at St. Paulo. All proved interesting, delightful and instructive. The visit of old Neptune when crossing the line furnished untold amusement. Calcutta brought memories of the gruesome murders of the Black Hole, and the unmentionable Surajah Dowah, Delhi, Bombay, through the Suez Canal, then Cairo and up the Nile to the Valley of Kines was a most wonderful trip, historic sights on every hand furnished continued interest. Next, Naples and Rome were visited, the latter being a feast of historic interest. Venice, the city on the sea, with its glowing gondolas, beggars' descriptions, To Florence and Milan, then Switzerland, Paris, Cologne, and back to London, completed a marvellously fascinating and educating tour—one which leaves a life long impress on the mind.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Sir Edgar for his delightfully vivid and interesting description of his world tour.

Amongst the guests were Padre Nangle, Mr. Eric Bowring, Mr. Harry J. Crowe, Mr. Robert Duff, of Carbonear, Mr. J. A. Young, Mr. Coward of Montreal; Mr. H. Leowe of Halifax, Mr. Barton, Mr. H. B. Thomson, and Rotarian Arthur Brown of Halifax.

Have You Seen "Enemies of Women"?

If you have not seen the wonderful film "Enemies of Women," you are reminded that there are only two more showings at the Nickel, being tonight and to-morrow night.

Produced with apparently absolute disregard for expense, this picture is spectacular and beautiful. This applies to the interior sets, which are the work of the celebrated artist, Joseph Urban, responsible for the magnificent sets in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," and in this instance he had even greater opportunities for lavishness and gorgeous effects and greater rein for the magnificent artistry. It is also equally true of the exteriors of Paris and Monte Carlo, which were actually filmed in those continental cities. Nothing ever shown on the screen exceeds in scenic beauty the scenes filmed with Monte Carlo as a background.

Against such a magnificent background, is laid a story which holds your interest tensely throughout. There is a sabre duel which is undoubtedly the finest and most thrilling ever seen on the stage or screen. Presented with unusual realism. And this is not one of the magnificent instances of action. Naturally, the war elements is predominant, for it is a story of the over, and the thrills are not confined to posed situations.

Municipal Council

WEEKLY MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided and Councillors Martin, Outerbridge, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present.

After the usual preliminary business, a deputation from the Truckmen's Protective Union was admitted to the Council Room, consisting of Messrs. Fitzgerald, Barral, Summers and Murphy. The President, Mr. Fitzgerald, referred to the present lack of employment amongst members of their Association, and asked if the Council could not make some arrangements whereby the work on the roads could be more evenly distributed. His remarks were endorsed by the other members of the deputation, and were favourably received by the Council. It was decided that the names of men seeking employment be furnished the City Engineer, and when work of this kind offers he will endeavour to share the work as far as possible. The deputation then retired.

A communication was tabled from A. J. Harvey and Company with regard to Leo's Lane. The Engineer will meet this firm, as regards repairs.

J. L. Lakin, Malta Street, called attention to the need of having a fountain placed on the corner of the street for domestic use for the residents of the annex. At the present time, he stated, water is being obtained from wells in the vicinity, and they are to a great extent being polluted which may result in the outbreak of a serious epidemic. The Engineer was requested to look into the matter and give estimate of cost of extending mains from Goodridge Street.

An application was read from W. Dalton, for the position of Swimming Instructor at Long Point. This application, with the others already received, will be given consideration.

Dr. F. Stafford and Son asked that concrete sidewalk be placed in front of their premises, Theatrical Hill; they being prepared to pay proportion of cost according to frontage for this improvement. The City Engineer was asked to report on same for next meeting.

Plan of houses for Mr. Henebary, Boncloddy Street, was passed, subject to the approval of the City Engineer. The City Engineer reported generally on the macadamizing and oiling of streets, etc., which work he stated was being rushed to completion. It is hoped within the present month to have many of the principal thoroughfares macadamized and put in good condition.

The Medical Officer of Health reported three new cases of Scarlet Fever in the city during the past week.

Following the reading of the departmental reports, and passing of accounts presented, the meeting adjourned.

Reception and Profession

On Wednesday, July 10th, an impressive ceremony took place at St. Bridget's College, Littlefield, when his Grace the Archbishop of St. John's officiated at the Annual Reception and Profession of the Sisters of Mercy. The very edifying retreat conducted by Rev. Father Harmon, S.J. of New York came to a close on Wednesday morning. At 8.30 a.m. the Sisters re-assembled and advanced in processional order to the Convent Chapel. His Grace made the usual intercessions as to the fitness of the applicants for the holy habit of religion and then blessed their religious apparel. At the Mass which followed the Archbishop was assisted by Revs. J. J. McGrath P.P., Bell Island, J. J. Rawlins, P.P. Killbride and P. J. Kennedy. At the Communion of the Mass the new Sisters of Mercy pronounced their three vows of Poverty, Chastity and Obedience and then received the habit and veil from the hands of the Most Rev. Celebrant. Mass being concluded, an eloquent sermon was delivered by the brother of one of the newly-professed religious Rev. W. McGrath of China Mission College, Scarborough, Ontario. Father McGrath took his text from the Gospel of St. Mark, chapter 10 verse 28 and applied it in chaste and appropriate diction to the religious event that had taken place. He demonstrated that the life of the religious though apparently one of self-cruelty brings manifold consolations even in this world. Its marvellous efficacy for good in the hidden world of souls will be manifest only hereafter where, life-long sacrifice receives its true reward. The preacher congratulated the relatives and hoped that vocations would abound to supply the needs of religion, and of the Church in foreign lands as well as at home.

After the sermon, the Archbishop gave Benediction to the assembled sisters, their relations and friends. Two young ladies were received in to the Order, Miss Carrie Hartigan and Miss Bride Flynn, in religion Sr. M. Scholastica. Two sisters made profession of their vows; Sr. M. Bernadine McGrath and Sr. M. Constance Henley, whilst Sr. Paul, Ryan, Sr. Margaret Mary Collins, Sr. M. Patricia Hogan and Sr. Clare Lawless pronounced their final vows.

AMERICAN SUGAR REFINING Co.
 Results of the First Half Year's Operations.
 Boston—Considering the market year.

difficulties encountered, the showing of the American Sugar Refining Co. in the first half of the current calendar year is reasonably satisfactory. Including the profits of the two Cuban producing estates, the company earned all charges, reasonable depreciation and something towards preferred dividends. The deficit after the half year's dividends on the $45,000,000 7% preferred was in the vicinity of $1,000,000. It should be remembered in this connection that Cuban raw sugar declined in the first half year from 5% cents a pound to 3 cents (now 3 1/2), with corresponding reduction in refined. From a refining standpoint a low sugar market is a safe basis on which to operate. The risk of inventory loss is thereby lessened. With this in mind it is felt that the second half-year for American Sugar will be more profitable than the initial six months, making it appear probable that the company will show its preferred dividends earned for the full year.

Fort William Men Find Silver Vein

Experts Describe Samples of Ore "Richest Ever Seen"—Rush Expected—Discoverers of Treasure Looked by Early Prospectors Take Claims.

Fort William, July 9.—A mining romance, probably unequalled in the history of Canada, comes to light with the discovery by two Fort William men, of a vein of silver, first stumbled across by two prospectors. It is stated, in 1870 and since lost. Although assiduously searched for on many occasions, George Harris and R. J. Closs, while timber cruising 100 miles east of Fort William accidentally came across shingles and camp material. This aroused their curiosity and further search rewarded them. They discovered an open silver vein on the side of a mountain six feet in width and sixteen feet in depth. How much larger the vein is under the surface can only be surmised. The strike is believed to be the same as that lost by prospectors 50 years ago. Samples brought into the city by Closs and Harris are described by experts as the richest they have ever seen. The men who made the find are convinced that the discovery is part and parcel of the famous silver islet vein, out of which silver ore to the value of $3,000,000 was taken, and which it was impossible to mine longer on account of water flowing in so rapidly. Miners here, however, are inclined to believe that the discoverers are wrong in this contention, some holding that the silver islet vein has been located on the mainland and that it is practically worthless. Be this as it may, mining men are agog over the discovery and have seen the samples brought in predict there will be a mining revival here that will overshadow anything previously undertaken.

Closs and Harris have sent several samples to the Capital for assay. In the meantime they have taken four claims comprising 160 acres and state that they have already made arrangements to start work in the field.

Russian Crown Jewels HISTORIC TREASURES STILL INTACT.

There is no truth in the picturesque stories relating to the sale of the Crown Jewels of Russia, according to Sir Martin Conway, M.P., who recently made a tour of investigation into the conditions of art in Russia. "In the Treasury at Moscow I saw the Crown Jewels, and held them in my hand, including the crown of Catherine II, and the sceptre with the great Orlov diamonds," stated Sir Martin. "I have no doubt at all that they were the original Crown Jewels. They are very brilliant and wonderful, and I do not think the authorities have any intention of selling them. The jewels that have gone out of Russia were probably private property. I also saw seven rooms full of church treasures, and was told that another room contained five times that quantity in boxes. The church treasures I saw were very poor stuff, mostly 19th or late 18th century specimens of no artistic merit. I obtained every assistance from the Soviet Government in my investigation. Everything I wanted I had, every door I wanted opened was opened. I went to most of the Royal palaces and found them intact, even pens, ink, blotting-pads and paper lying in their places." Sir Martin's inquiries seem to show that art has made wonderful progress in Russia since the Revolution. "Whereas there were 50 museums in the country before the Revolution, there are now 250," he explained. "There is a sort of rush to museums on the part of the public. The difficulty there is to prevent too many museums being established. They really have more than they can look after. Palaces and private houses containing art treasures have been preserved and are well dusted, and and looked after. The great galleries have been enriched by confiscations from private collections. On the ground that they are artistically bad a large number of street monuments have been destroyed, but the authorities have preserved any that have any artistic merit, such as statues of Tsars and Generals. There has been no destruction of anything of value because it belonged to the hated Tsarist regime, as in the case of the French Revolution. Russia takes great pride in its national art collections, and I doubt whether the Soviet would sell any part of them. So far as I could see the people are well clad and have enough to eat. The countryman is better off than the townsman, because he has his own land to live on."

Cockfighting Thrills

Steel Heels Fastened to Birds' Spurs—Police Raid a Contest on Cumberland Moor. In the remote parts of Cumberland cock-fighting, according to the police, is a "sport" still very much practiced. The other day seven men were charged at Cockerthorpe with being concerned in a cock-fighting, main on an isolated moor between Ribton and Buckhill Colliery, near Cockerthorpe. The court was crowded with spectators, who were amused by the continued crowing of the cocks seized by the police and who saw the steel heels fastened on to the cocks' natural spurs and the weights and scales which were also part of the sport appropriated. James Hodgson, farmer, of Rowan Hall, and Robert Stephenson, collier, of Broughton Moor, charged with causing the cocks to fight, pleaded guilty and were each fined £10. Five others, Joseph Armstrong, Fred Armstrong, Henry Dempster, Jacob Frear and James Downie, the last named a retired miner of 77, charged with assisting, were each fined £3. The weights and scales were confiscated, and the police were complimented upon a successful and expertly organized raid. Inspector Brown stated that having reached a position 70 yards away from a field surrounded by plantations, in which a crowd of some 40 men were congregated, he and four other policemen saw the preliminaries being arranged for a cockfight. Hodgson and Stephenson acted as pitters and baited the cocks by putting their heads against each other. The birds were then placed on the ground and fought, and five times became locked so that they had to be separated before the battle could start anew. When they renewed the fight a sixth time he and his officers ran towards the men, who stampeded in all directions. They found that six of the cocks had been clipped for battle, their wing, back and neck feathers having been clipped out. One was wearing steel spurs, a dead bird had been punctured through the head by a sharp instrument. This class of cruelty was very much practised in East and West Cumberland. Mr. Johnstone, defending: "I don't think you have any right to say that. It does not come in. Inspector Brown asserted that most of the defendants were men who, he knew, kept game cocks. Mr. Johnstone: "I think that is most unfair. I keep game cocks myself. Clerk: A dangerous admission. Mr. Johnstone: "I only keep them to show. Mr. Johnstone remarked some people contended it was more cruel for cocks not to fight than to fight. It was natural for them to fight, and he had known a pair of cocks travel half a mile to meet each other."

Crime of the Scarlet "S"
NEW LIGHT ON A MOST MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

On December 18th, 1910, three policemen were shot dead and two severely wounded by a gang of alien criminals who were surprised while preparing to perpetrate a burglary in Houndsditch.

A fortnight later, Leon Beron, a Russian, resident in Stepney, was found murdered on Clapham Common. On his face were certain curious S-shaped cuts, presumably inflicted by his murderer.

Two days afterwards, two of the Houndsditch murders were traced in a house in Sidney Street, Stepney, which caught fire after a regular siege by the police (the two wanted men perishing in the flames).

These three tragic happenings were all closely interwoven, according to a statement set forth by Mr. C. L. McCluer Stevens in his book, "Famous Crimes and Crimings."

This statement, which was imparted to him by a man closely in touch with the Russian revolutionists in London, throws an entirely new light on the series of crimes in question. Incidentally it tends to show that Stinie Morrison—the man found guilty of the murder of Leon Beron—was guilty of that crime, which was in fact committed by a woman.

According to Mr. Stevens, Leon Beron was a spy in the employ of the Russian Secret Police, as was also the mysterious "Peter the Painter," whose name cropped up so constantly in connection with the Houndsditch affair. Both professed to be red-hot revolutionists. Both, however, had been for some time suspected by the genuine revolutionists.

Within a week of the Houndsditch murders certain information came into possession of the Russian revolutionary leaders in London which confirmed these suspicions, and the two men were condemned to death. "Peter the Painter" escaped abroad, Beron, as we know, was murdered.

His death, however, was not brought about by the revolutionists who had informally tried and condemned him. Indeed, they were greatly astonished at the news that the vengeance they contemplated had already been consummated.

Beron met his death at the hands of a young Russian woman whose brother he had betrayed to the authorities at St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) whether he had gone from London to carry on revolutionary propaganda. The young man's sister got to know of this, lured his betrayer to Clapham Common, and there killed him.

As regards the mysterious "S" marks on the murdered man's cheeks, these did not stand for "spy" or "schpik" the Yiddish slang word. They were an attempt to reproduce three circles, placed pyramid-wise, the badge of the L.F.L. or Ligue Fraternelle Internationale, a secret, oath-bound revolutionary organization, to which Beron belonged, as did also Mr. Stevens's informant.

The latter, suspecting the identity of Beron's slayer, sought her out and faced her with the deed. She did not deny it. In fact, she gloried in it. She was a strong, muscular young woman, absolutely devoid of fear, and she told in detail exactly how she accomplished her vengeance. Stinie Morrison, she said, had nothing whatever to do with it.

The fact that the larger concerns nevertheless rebuilt on an average one-third of their old tonnage, is due solely to their watering their stock and assuming new debts.

"Germany has taken up her principal former routes, such as those to North America, South America, the Orient, Dutch East Indies, and Australia. The tonnage at the service of these routes is, of course, considerably reduced, especially since greater emphasis must now be placed upon the routes to Sweden, England and Spain inasmuch as Germany's production of iron and coal has been considerably diminished as a result of the peace treaty.

"The indemnity payments for the merchant vessels delivered were continued only until March, 1923. Since that time no additional payments have been made by the Reich for the uncompleted part of the reconstruction programme.

"The building programme undertaken as a result of the indemnity payments, is now complete to within four or five ships. It is self-evident that for years to come the building pace of the last years of reconstruction or even of the years before the war cannot be kept up."

Despite War Loss Germany's Shipping Regains 7th Place

HAMBURG, Germany, July 5.—(A.P.)—German shipping claims to be fighting against tremendous odds in its attempt to regain its place in the sea. The loss of 90 per cent. of the German commercial fleet through the war and the terms of surrender means that German ship owners practically have had to start anew. By taking up loans, buying back some of the ships delivered to the Entente victors under the Treaty of Versailles, and refraining from paying dividends in recent years, the shipping concerns of Germany have gradually worked up a post-war tonnage of 2,800,000 gross register tons, which is about one-half the German pre-war tonnage, and which comprises 4 per cent. of the total world tonnage as compared with 11 per cent. in 1914.

From eleventh place in 1920 among the shipping nations in the world, Germany has moved to seventh place by 1924, as compared with second place in 1914.

Count Siegfried Roedern, chairman of the League of German Ship Owners and Freighters, in a prepared statement replying to specific questions, gave the following picture of shipping conditions:

"In 1914 the German merchant marine occupied second place among the merchant fleets of the world as far as actual tonnage was concerned. It then comprised 5,200,000 gross register tons and was surpassed only by Great Britain.

"In the course of the war Germany lost about half of her ships through seizure, sinking, etc. Next, in accordance with the terms of the Versailles Treaty, she had to give up approximately the second half. Included among the vessels that had to be turned over to the victors were all the larger passenger boats. The Germans were permitted to retain only the ships under 1,000 tons and one-half the vessels between 1,000 and 1,600 tons. By the peace treaty and the German legislation resulting therefrom German shipping was compelled to be a part of the war bill immediately in kind, by giving up not only the ships already in the service, but also those under construction.

"It was the sense of the Treaty of Versailles that this delivery by private capital was to be regarded as a payment on account by the German Empire and hence to be refunded to the individual concerns by the German state. The financial condition of the Reich made complete indemnification impossible. An agreement was therefore reached between the government and the ship owners, by which the latter were to receive an amount sufficient to rebuild but one-third of their pre-war tonnage. Because of the inflation of the last years the indemnity payments of the government did not suffice to rebuild the third of the old tonnage agreed upon. Besides, in distributing the government indemnity, the small ship owners were to be given the preference, so that most of the larger concerns were able to finance a replacement programme of 20 per cent of the pre-war tonnage out of the funds furnished by the government. The fact that the larger concerns nevertheless rebuilt on an average one-third of their old tonnage, is due solely to their watering their stock and assuming new debts.

House of Assembly Proceedings

OFFICIAL SYNOPSIS.
THURSDAY, July 17.
The House met at 3 p.m. pursuant to adjournment.

NOTICE OF MOTION.
Hon. Minister of Finance—To move that supply be granted to His Majesty. In the absence of the Hon. Minister of Finance the Hon. Prime Minister moved that supply be granted His Majesty.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.
Mr. Warren asked the Hon. Prime Minister (a) if the Railway was being operated under the supervision of commissioners as heretofore; (b) if so, who are the commissioners; (c) if it is the intention of the Government to continue this system; (d) have any steps been taken to provide for any other mode of operation.

Hon. Prime Minister replied that the Railway was being operated by Mr. Russell, and that no commissioners have been appointed; also that it was the intention of the Government to continue this system for the immediate present, and that no steps had been taken as yet for different system of operating.

Mr. Grimes asked the Hon. Prime Minister (a) when the new Normal School would be open; (b) how many teachers would be employed; (c) if any teachers would be engaged outside of Newfoundland; (d) if so, how many and from where.

Hon. the Prime Minister replied that it was proposed to open on September 1st; he could not say how many teachers would be employed, probably about the same number as formerly. He informed Mr. Grimes it was not proposed to employ or engage teachers outside of Newfoundland. He also said that if the Carnegie Fund of $15,000.00 was available a Junior college could be run in connection with the Normal School for a further sum of $4000.00 whereas now the cost was about $6000.00.

Mr. Grimes asked the Hon. Prime Minister if it was the intention of the Government to act on the findings and to put into force any or all of the recommendations of the Royal Commission appointed 1921 to enquire into the workings of the Prohibition Act.

Hon. the Prime Minister replied that the question was receiving the consideration of the Government. It was only yesterday that he had seen the commission's report, and he was surprised that nothing had been done although the report was presented in 1921. The report contained some excellent suggestions and well worth consideration.

Mr. Randall asked the Colonial Secretary to lay on the table of the House the answers to the following questions:—What amount of coal has been brought or contracted for by the management of the Newfoundland Government Railway since the first day of March of this year to date? If tenders have been asked for such coal? What price is being paid or agreed on by the management of the Railway? The names of the Companies or persons through whom the purchases or contracts had been made? What are the prices, terms and dates of such contracts, if any, and if the coal has been brought c.i.f. St. John's? If other than Sydney coal has been contracted for?

Hon. Colonial Secretary tabled reply.
Mr. Brown asked the Hon. the Prime Minister if it was the intention of the Government to operate the steamer Watchful on the Bonavista Mail Service this season.

Hon. the Prime Minister replied that at present it was not the intention to operate the Watchful on Bonavista Bay, but that as soon as certain repairs which are now being effected on the Government wharf at Port Blandford were completed the Malakoff would take up the Clyde route.

Mr. Halfyard asked the Colonial Secretary to lay on the table of the House copy of the latest agreement made between Dominion Steel Corporation Ltd., and Newfoundland Government for the operation of the iron mines at Wabana; also if it is the intention of the Government to introduce legislation during the present session for the continuation of the operating of the said mines after the 31st December 1924, so as to avoid Minute of Council Government which was so strenuously objected to by certain Members of the Legislature during past sessions.

Hon. the Colonial Secretary replied that since the advent of the present Government in power there had been no agreement. He also said that when his Hon. friend was Colonial Secretary an agreement was entered into; the present Government had made no decision regarding the policy which it intended to pursue.

Mr. Scammell asked the Hon. Minister of Posts and Telegraphs if so, to state (a) for what work in particular she has been engaged (b) at what rate per day had she been engaged.

Hon. Minister of Posts and Telegraphs replied that the S. S. Earl of Devon was employed on cable work in Notre Dame Bay and Greed

Bay, and that the steamer was being paid at the rate of $450.00 per day. Mr. Scammell asked the Minister of Justice to lay on the table of the House the report of G. N. Read, Son & Watson, chartered accountants into the affairs of the Controller's Department for the financial year 1921-22 and 1922-23.

Hon. Minister of Justice replied that he was not prepared to give the answers to these questions as it involved certain proceedings which were undertaken elsewhere.

ADDRESS IN REPLY.
Mr. Grimes spoke to the motion of the Address in Reply to the speech from the throne. He congratulated the speaker upon the high office conferred upon him. He said that when he first entered the House as a Member in 1914 Mr. J. R. Goodison, Carbonear, was the speaker, and that he himself always looked upon the address of the Speaker with respect and dignity. Mr. Grimes felt no doubt whatever, but that Mr. Fox would conduct his office in a dignified way, and he felt certain that the House had made a wise choice when they chose a man with the education, experience, training and legal ability possessed by Mr. Fox.

In speaking of the Speech from the Throne he pointed out that the theme of Mr. Lake's speech was harmony and good will, and he also said that if we were to have harmony and good-will in the House there should be harmony and good-will between the Government and the Opposition. Continuing Mr. Grimes said that the speaker of the Address in Reply announced the fact that he was the representative of Labour. He expressed himself as being pleased to see a representative of Labour with a seat in the House. He agreed with the Member for Twillingate that we should have more and that we need more representatives of the labouring and artisan class. We must recognize that not only have the Labouring and artisan classes rights, but the merchants, the tradesmen, etc., have rights as well, but that the one class was as much entitled to representation as to champion their rights as the other. Continuing he said that it was not only the Labour, and artisan classes that had been productive of good, but the other classes as well. He pointed out that if one looked over the history of legislatures, one would find that the more wealthy and prominent classes among the legislators had been productive of a great amount of good and benefit to the labouring class. He pointed out for instance the fact that shorter hours had been advocated by manufacturers. He also referred to it having been expressed that we were entering on an era of prosperity, but he said that we had not yet got the results of our shore fishery, and conditions pointed to the unfortunate result of a smaller catch than was expected at the beginning of the season. He said that it was necessary to make some provision to cope with the unemployment which would undoubtedly experience during the coming winter. He said that the Humber would be closing down in November, and there would be four thousand men without work when that time arrived, and also that the Construction work at Grand Falls would be closing down about the same time and that it was necessary that some arrangements were made to contend with conditions after that time.

Mr. Grimes thought the Government should learn by the experience of previous administrations and not deal haphazardly with public affairs but bring in legislation worth while and according to the prevailing conditions, which, it is true, are good at present. The Labor bureau at present in existence is not giving satisfaction, but this is not due to capitalistic efforts, but to the Government limiting its efforts. Abroad there are bureaus where all unemployed register so that the employer can easily locate those seeking work; here there is no way or means of discovering this or the nature of the work offering. This is a situation that should be remedied by the Government. It is true that many imposters seek employment and obtain it but by a proper bureau the truth of their claims would be discovered. In connection with the establishment of new industries such as the Gander proposition and the four mill, the Government should make provision as to labor. As to the salaries of civil servants Mr. Grimes felt the giving of extra caused trouble for the heads of departments and tended to the detriment of that spirit of co-operation that is so necessary to the proper working of the service. To deal fairly with the civil servants a commission should be appointed to oversee their work and apportion the salaries. These employees should be dealt with fairly to ensure the proper working of the service. He wished the Government success in the efforts at reform in this connection and suggested the establishment of examinations to show the qualifications of applicants for positions. Unless this is done the Prime Minister, as thought, would not be carrying out the programme which he presented to the electorate. He hoped that economy would be practiced in the right direction and doubted the wisdom of abolishing the Mounted Police as very little saving would be effected thereby. He was also dubious as to the advisability of having the Government printing done by contract as after the cost of a responsibility to head and assistants for the work there would be very little saving. He would like to see the figures tabled showing where the economy would come in. The abolition of the Hansard will prevent outport members from keeping in touch with the affairs of the House or informing their constituents of what transpired during the sessions while no saving will result and necessary information will be withheld from the representatives of the districts. As to amending the Prohibition Act there is no authority to do so without consulting the people who put it on the Statutes and the whole question should be submitted to a plebiscite. In any steps the Government may be taking they would find valuable suggestions in the report of the Commission appointed in 1921 to enquire into the workings of the Act. That Commission suggested the appointment of a board to take over the control of liquor—a board free from political influences—whose ideas would be helpful in the carrying out of the Act. He had noticed from the Prime Minister's remarks that none but those who actively canvassed against the Government in the election were to be dismissed from the civil service but he knew men who had not been partisan and had conducted themselves as servants should but who had been discharged. He quoted the case of George Roberts of Port de Grave District, a light keeper at Labrador, who had been removed to make room for Mr. Chalker. This was unjustifiable he thought. Doorkeeper Connolly of the House had also been dismissed and this was not in keeping with the promises of the Prime Minister. The heads of departments should be consulted in the matter of dismissal. The employment of men living on the Labrador coast in the war would be a saving in connection with light-houses. In reference to Customs affairs, local business men have been up against unfair competition the last 4 or 5 years and any effort of the Minister of Finance to remedy this would receive the strongest support of the Opposition. It is claimed that certain merchants here have a better knowledge than local men of the market abroad but Newfoundland buyers are just as capable of bringing in goods as cheaply as the others. Imports have been questionable in nature and he hoped the Minister of Finance would do this duty to those who have been doing a legitimate business. Dealing with the establishment of new industries, Mr. Grimes, hoped to see herring oil factories opened not only in the northward but in Placentia and other bays and every assistance given this industry to be done in Norway. Great benefit would be derived from the opening of such factories.

Mr. Duff, member for Carbonear, congratulated the Speaker on his appointment and the Mover and Second-er of the Address in Reply, and went on to deal with the necessity of improved roads in Conception Bay. He hoped to do his duty to the District which had produced most of the master mariners of the country. As a Labor representative he would take second place to none in the House as his constituents were engaged in every credit to themselves. He pledged his support to the Prime Minister in his efforts to clean up, and congratulated the Minister of Finance on his vigorous efforts to institute economy. He looked forward with confidence to the time in the near future when the affairs of the country will be greatly improved and the present Government will be able to show substantial returns for their efforts. Mr. Lake had referred to the percentage of outsiders engaged on the Humber but he would like to know what was their percentage in the wages being paid. Sons of big men from the other side of the water are being sent there at high salaries to gain experience while the sons of Newfoundland have to go abroad to seek a living.

We are satisfied for them to get their experience, but we are not satisfied when our own men have to go elsewhere to earn their living. He thought that a Commission should be appointed to look into the matter and felt sure that the Government were going to have some grave trouble, if they did not do so soon. He said that it was disgraceful that one man should be working for 25 cents an hour while another get three or five times as much just because he comes from the outside. He had no doubt that Mr. Butler was doing his work in an able and efficient manner but why should honest working men have to go to the members of the Government to seek for work which they should get on their merits. In connection with the tourist traffic he touched on the enviable position of the island right in the mouth of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the beauty of the climate in the Summer time. He next brought up the matter of women's suffrage. He thought it ridiculous that half females should be allowed to vote while intelligent women were deprived of this privilege. Another point which he brought up was in connection with the running of the trains. In Carbonear where the train is supposed to arrive at 10.30 it did not arrive last Sunday night until midnight. When it is considered that people have to move from one train to another at one, two or three o'clock in the morning a serious accident is bound to happen. Also there is no opportunity given for people to get in to work Monday morning. Regarding the dismissal of officials he cited one instance in Carbonear where a fire warden, a very decent old fisherman had been dismissed and another man 63 years old had been appointed in his place although for all the work that was to be done he could just as well be in bed. And only this morning he had received a message from Carbonear stating that the assistant caretaker at the post office had been dismissed. He questioned the Prime Minister's sincerity as in many places there is no need of fire wardens three being nothing to burn. He also explained how owing to the pensioning of two former janitors for the post office in Carbonear and the appointment of a third there we now have three men getting paid for the one position.

Mr. Hickman said that he felt very proud of his opposition. He had men on this side of the House of ability and good sound judgment. He regretted very much that Sir Michael Cashin was not a member of his House as he had been for so many years past. He felt that his great ability as a business man would be missed. He understood that it was the intention of the Government to use the estimates prepared by the past Government. If the previous government had such a record he thought the estimates should be brought in now and if they were not ready the session should be delayed to prepare estimates. He would like to see economy practised but that could not be if the government spends more than its income. If the government continues to borrow money each year to meet expenses the day will come when it will get no further accommodation. The result will be either confederation with Canada or the States.

He next took up the subject of prohibition. He said that the prohibition law is just as binding as any other law and no man has any right to break it. If it is to remain as at present it is the duty of the Prime Minister and the Government to see that it is carried out. If it cannot be carried out it is also his duty to change it. This has been in the past a subject that the government were afraid to tackle because certain religious sections were opposed to it while other sections were in favour of it. He said he was not afraid to express his views on the matter.

He said that he was in the Opposition and that he introduced the Bill because he wanted the open bar done away with. It was a curse. Labourers spent their money there, and their children were hungry. There were rabid prohibitionists on the Government side, however, and the Bill that he introduced was not accepted. He did not believe in total prohibition, but in an ameliorated measure, so that the liquor will be distributed evenly and properly. Some people are afraid to express their views on prohibition. Mr. Hickman said that he was not afraid to do so, nor on any subject for that matter. Members of the Government were taught to think that they could bring in any legislation that they liked whether the Opposition liked it or not. There are members on the Opposition side of the House who are able to give help and suggestions and they should get an opportunity to do so. Mr. Hickman also criticized the system of recording the speeches of the House. The members of the House have a right to have their speeches on record. Now there is no reason why members should keep themselves in order. A member can come in here and make the most outrageous charges against any other member and there is nothing to stop him because there is no verbatim copy of his speech. There is no Hansard. If, said Mr. Hickman, he wanted to refer to anything which has happened before he had but to go to the Government library and look up the Hansard, after this, however, this will not be able to be done. The Government is establishing a precedent. Mr. Hickman thought that there should be a Hansard and for the further expenditure of another three or four hundred dollars there should be one. The Government is doing away with the Hansard and establishing a Government Printer with a probable salary from $2500.00 to four thousand dollars and an assistant and stenographer and an office all of which will amount to a lot of money. There are a few people who can take a synopsis and leave out what they like and put in only what is to advantage to a certain party. It is up to the Government to take the matter into consideration.

He understood from the Prime Minister that the railway had to be run as before under the management of Mr. Russell and a Commission. Mr. Russell is a good man but he should be left alone. Members should not be getting passes for their constituents because if the practice becomes general three quarters of the people travelling by the railway will be going back and forth without paying their way. If Mr. Russell is in charge of the Railway no clerks should be appointed except at his own discretion and not on the recommendation of the members of districts. If the railway is to have a favourable balance-sheet it will have to be left to the management of Mr. Russell, and if the balance is not favourable we are not going to get any corporation to take it over and run it as a good investment. If a man really needs a pass there should be some officer in some department such as the Public Charities who should look into his case. Mr. Hickman said that he would not like the occasion to pass without expressing his views on the members of districts. This was erected through the energy of Colonel Nangle and is a credit to St. John's and Newfoundland, and will serve to keep in memory those who fought in the War. Mr. Randall spoke of the Dock. It should receive the consideration of the Government. Newfoundland should be the repair shop of the Atlantic, but this is not the case, because of the excessive port charges and the careless manner in which work is done. The system was to employ a certain number of men, to pay them a salary and have them employed a certain length of time. The authorities at the Dock never took occasion to see that the men worked conscientiously, but when the job was done handed a bill to the ship owners stating the charges with a certain percentage for the dock. The result is that only temporary repairs are attended to here and the real work is done elsewhere and we lose both money and labour. There are several ships sailing the Atlantic which have instructions to steer clear of Newfoundland if possible. The Government, said Mr. Hickman, came into office at a time when a change was coming over the country. The fishery was looking a good investment because it was thought that prices were going to be good, the Humber industry and Bell Island were offering lots of employment. The Government had not to undergo the same trouble as did their predecessors. Much squandering had been indulged in by the previous Government but much of it had been necessary. In consideration of this then the credit of this recovery will not be due to the Government at it would have happened no matter who was in power. Mr. Hickman hoped however that the Government had embarked upon the wave of prosperity on which the Government had embarked would continue. It would take an old politician to say what was likely to happen but no business man could come into the House of Assembly and run the country's affairs as he would his business. Mr. Hickman remarked that there were three Ramsay MacDonalds in the House of Assembly of Newfoundland. Mr. Brown and Mr. Duff of the Opposition and Mr. Linsgar of the Government. He was glad to say that these men would have the support of the Opposition in anything they might do to help the working man. He hoped that the Government would bring down legislation concerning a minimum wage. If the Government did not do so the Opposition would. Men are receiving only twenty five cents an hour for labour and this is not sufficient to support their families, and at the same time foreigners are receiving seventy five cents for the same work. A man needs thirty or thirty-five cents an hour. He cannot live on less. A comparison in wages was the fact that our men can leave here, and before they go they have been used only to the roughest work and in the United States they receive one dollar and $1.25 per hour. In his Manifesto the Prime Minister promised a bounty on fish. If a man is fishing and does not earn sufficient to support his family then there is nothing else to be done but to give him a bonus to help him out. It is the duty of the Government to carry out its promises in that respect. Mr. Hickman said that he understood that there was a statement made in the Upper House. It is a prerogative of the Lower House and he hoped it would not be taken away. Mr. Hibbs spoke of the tourist traffic. He trusted that something would be done in this connection because it would mean anywhere from one million to two millions of dollars to the country. That would mean that that amount of money would be spent on goods imported into the country, and on which duty was paid. Take the Chateau Frontenac Hotel in Quebec. When that immense structure was under construction people thought it would be a "white elephant," but after it was finished and open for business one could scarcely get accommodation there, with the result that millions of dollars went in to Quebec. According to statistics, he said, the same could be said of British Columbia, due to the encouragement they gave to tourist traffic. When the people of those Provinces made the money in that way everybody got the benefit of it; and he saw no reason why the people of St. John's and the surrounding outports could not benefit financially, if only a proper system was adopted here for the handling of the tourist traffic. He thought that more attention should be given to the making of good roads. He did not suppose that the Government were in a position at the present time to make any outlay in that direction, but if in the future they proposed to make any expenditure on roads, he trusted that the first consideration would be given to the roads in Conception, Trinity and Bonavista Bays. He was glad to know that the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs had saved over $100,000 by the elimination of some of the coastal services and hoped that the Minister would continue his methods of economy next session. Speaking of labor again and the local industries that employ our people, he said that there were in this town industries that were over-protected and industries that were under-protected and that it was the duty of the Government to find out the true standing and position of each individual one of them. He thought that every manufacturing concern in this country could easily pay a fair dividend to its shareholders without paying as low as five or six dollars a week to employees. He said that no destructive criticism would be agreed in the House by the Opposition and expressed the hope that in the "clean up and keep clean" policy of the Government that consideration will be given to the requests of representatives of all the different districts. Mr. Warren said he was elected to the House as an independent member and he took it that it was his duty to vote for or against any measure introduced from either side of the House. He then referred to the speech from the Throne which he found to be with reference to the Estimates. He wished to point out that these Estimates, while they were never submitted to this House before, were made up by the Government of which he was Prime Minister and were made up with due regard to all the economy possible. There was no question in the House who had the greater desire to see economy and that himself and every member of the Government supported the present Prime Minister's policy of "clean up, keep clean and a square deal to all". But he felt that he ought to draw the attention of the father of the House, the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, to the fact that in the House he had been informed officially by the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs that the "Wren" had been taken off Fortune Bay because the cost of the service was out of all proportion to the service rendered. He was aware that the "Wren" earned very little for the amount spent on her; but there were very many other services, he said, which did not give returns to the Government commensurate with the money that was spent on them. He thought that if the Government was going to practice economy they should give a square deal to all and not start on the West Coast which had already been deprived of certain services while no attempt was made to practice economy on the North Coast. He thought the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs had taken the credit for saving $113,000 by curtailing certain services, because provision had been already made in the estimates by the Warren Government, to discontinue the Labrador service, meaning the saving of $25,000 out of $113,000, as well as for the taking off the West Coast route the "Glencoe" when necessary, but not permanently, as had been done by the Government. He wanted to tell the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs that the "Glencoe" will have to be put on this service again because the Portia is not able to handle the traffic alone. There are no railroads on the West Coast while there is a big population assembled there. He had documentary evidence to show that when his Government took off the "Portia" in the early spring, the "Glencoe" was unable to cope with the service. Although the ship was only capable of carrying 40 passengers comfortably, yet she carried at a time as many as 250 passengers who lay around the decks like cattle. The result was that the then Government had to put on the other steamer. He felt sure that the members for this House would hear him out that it was impossible to run a West Coast service, between April and October, with one ship. He did not think that $38,000 could be saved, as the Minister of Posts thought. It was all right to take off one ship when the traffic fell down; but he considered it false economy to take off one ship permanently. When he was Minister of Justice two years ago, for the sake of the economy, it was proposed to run the West Coast service by motor boats, but this was found unworkable, as he had no fault to find with the attitude of the Minister of Posts, if he was actuated by economic motives and if he thinks that the people of Fortune Bay must pay for what they get; but he did not fault with the Minister's answer, namely, that the "Wren" had been taken off the Fortune Bay route because the cost of the service was out of proportion to the service rendered while there were other services in the country that gave this return for the money spent on them and were yet untouched for the purpose of economy. He noticed on perusing last year's Hansard dealing with the Railway Resolutions that according to the report of the railroads the Branch Railroads lost heavily. The Trepassay Branch alone lost $113,000, which alone equals the amount that the Minister of Posts proposes to save by his method of economy and partly at the expense of the people of the West Coast. He would like to know if the loss on the Trepassay Branch was out of proportion to the service rendered. He thought that in practicing economy that the members of Ferryland should be punished as well as he was, and that if the Minister was going to be fair he should be fair to all. Another method of economy on the part of the Government with which he disagreed was the new system of reporting in the House. It had always been the practice, he said, to have speeches taken down verbatim and from time to time members were given their speeches to revise after they were published in the daily papers. He supported the Government in 1909 when he was Speaker the speeches were made up into Hansard, which was found to be useful when making a reference any time. It appeared to him that it was not the idea to have speeches taken verbatim this session. He had only spoken once this far and no speech was brought to him. As he understood it, the synopsis when prepared go straight to the papers and he did not think that this system should commend itself to members of the House of Representatives who are to depend on authentic accounts of what happens in the Assembly. He thought that if this digest system was to be continued that members should be furnished with the digest first and not have reporters put down what they think members said. Referring to the Prohibition Act he said that the Justice Department was so mixed up with the enforcement of the Prohibition law that the only way the Department would be able to carry out the law was for the Minister to transform himself into a policeman. He said that he had kept the "White Shoulders" case, so that no smuggling was carried on and take trips around the Island to put a stop to the illicit manufacture of liquor. He had reported to the Department which he had produced to the House showing how impossible it was to enforce the Act no matter how conscientiously the police or the Customs officials did their duties because the Act was against public opinion and was carried on a minority vote. He felt sure that if the vote was put to the country to-day that the same spirit would prevail in Newfoundland, as prevailed in some of the Provinces of Canada where prohibition was defeated by overwhelming majorities, although the people of those places were rabid prohibitionists a few years ago. If it cannot be enforced in the West Coast, he did not see how it could be enforced here. The best thing that could be done, he thought was to accept the Bill that was going to be introduced by the present Government for the purpose of amending the present state of affairs. In conclusion he congratulated the members of the House who had made such able maiden speeches, particularly Mr. Ashbourne. The Prime Minister congratulated the various members of the Opposition on the addresses they had made and for the apparent feelings of good will they expressed to himself and to the Government in general. He did not remember stating that only civil servants who actively opposed them would be dismissed from office, and if he did say it, he did not want to say it because some people have already lost their positions, not through politics, but because of reports furnished the Government by the Auditor General. He wished to say, however, that he knew of men who held Government positions in Northern districts who a few years ago were thrown out for no reason whatever and members of the F. E. Union put in their places, and he thought it right that proper now to have these men reinstated. Last year he said he had occasion to bring under the notice of Mr. Hawco, the then Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, that a girl, who was Assistant in the Post Office at Greenspond, had been dismissed without reason. He asked the Minister to enquire into the circumstances and if there was any good reason why she was thrown out of office he would be satisfied; but that if it was found that she had done her duty, he wanted to have her re-instated. Later he said he was informed by Mr. Hawco that the girl had been fired at the request of the F. E. Union and Mr. Hallyard, the then Colonial Secretary. Mr. Hallyard said that as this was a personal matter, he wished to say that the Prime Minister had been incorrectly informed and that he had nothing to do with the matter. Hon. the Prime Minister said he could not say for sure that his statement was wrong but he could produce Mr. Hawco's letter to clear up that point. Mr. Hallyard said he wanted to be just to himself as well as to Mr. Hawco and to the Prime Minister. Hon. the Prime Minister continuing said that the Government had under consideration a policy for the encouragement of the tourist traffic. He believed that there would be a great future, for Newfoundland through the encouragement of this traffic, but he could not say anything at the present time except that it was receiving serious consideration of the Government. The Prime Minister definitely stated that no passes would be issued by the present Government. He said that that was a thing they were strongly objecting to, and he said he could give instances where people were requiring passes for special trains, because the regular train happened to be a few hours late, and that his Government discouraged this in all its phases. Mr. Monroe said he did not propose to say very much this afternoon, on prohibition, the Bill they proposed to operate in the meantime, a Commission to be chosen from both sides of the house, to sit and take evidence from various temperance organizations or other bodies. With regard to a minimum wage mentioned by the Leader of the Opposition, the Prime Minister agreed that it would be a very fine thing, and very beneficial to the people in particular that it was a good proposition. But it was something that needed to be dealt carefully with, and to go any further, because as he pointed out if it demanded a minimum wage of say $6c. per hour it may have a detrimental effect upon proposed operations and may deter a proposed project from ever maturing, or being developed. He pointed out that it was entirely a question of supply and demand; if there were strong labour unions in the country, they undoubtedly could demand higher wages, but on the other hand if they were scarce and men wanted work they would often times work for a small wage. He pointed out that his friend, Mr. Hallyard, would agree with him in this in so far as labourers at Port Union are working for the same kind of money. The Prime Minister said that we are to-day faced with a problem of wages on Bell Island; the Company is only in a position to offer a certain wage, and the labourers are demanding more than the Company can see its way clear to pay. Capital has its interest and so has labour. The Prime Minister said that he did not want to delay the House this afternoon, but as it has been said people expect him to do all things right, he said that he would do his best. All persons are liable to make mistakes, and he was no exception. We were put here by the people and were given their confidence and will do our very best for them. The Prime Minister continuing said that Mr. Ashbourne said the other day that he hoped there would not be any legislation by Minute of Council, this he considered a very wise and important suggestion, and it could not be said that legislation by Minute of Council was in the best interest, or to the great benefit of the country. Sir John Crosbie wished to say a few words regarding the matters before the House. He said that it appeared as if some of the Members on the other side of the House had become angels in the space of an hour. In referring to the dismissals by the present Government he called the attention of some of the Hon. members on the other side of the House to the fact that the Hon. member who mentioned the dismissals made by the Government, he called the attention of Mr. Hallyard to the dismissal of the Captain of the S. S. Prosper, and the appointment of Capt. John Field 3 or 4 years ago. He also called the attention of Mr. Grimes to the Government in general. He said that he did not want to say that only civil servants who actively opposed them would be dismissed from office, and if he did say it, he did not want to say it because some people have already lost their positions, not through politics, but because of reports furnished the Government by the Auditor General. defeated, him in Port de Grave, when Mr. Grimes dismissed a girl from a Post Office in that district. Sir John pointed out to some of the members on the other side that when they were in power they thought absolutely nothing of dismissals, they dismissed all and sundry, where and whenever it suited their purposes, and in cases where they could not very well dismiss, they granted pensions and made new appointments. Sir John expressed himself as being delighted to hear and note that the Hon. Leader of the Opposition had now come out as a champion of the rights of labour, he was also pleased to note that Mr. Duff, of Carbonear had taken the same stand. Mr. Peter Cashin rose to thank the leader of the Opposition for the good opinion which he expressed of the commendable remarks made by the Leader of the Opposition referring to his father, who was a member of this House for thirty-three years. He felt certain that Mr. Hickman was sincere and in earnest. Mr. Cashin also referred to what he termed as sarcastic criticism on the part of the Leader of the Opposition, which he referred to the visit of Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, when Mr. Hickman said that the people of Newfoundland would be glad that Sir Douglas had been here. Mr. Cashin said that there was more behind those words, than the words themselves actually conveyed. He said that it was a distinguished honour to Newfoundland to come on a visit here to unveil the splendid monument erected to the memory of brave and loyal heroes who had laid down their lives in the great war. In speaking of the subject or question of dismissals Mr. Cashin pointed out that when the Squires Government came into power in 1919 dismissals were the order of the day. They dismissed civil servants left and right and in a great many cases without any provocation or reason whatever. He pointed out that the first thing they did when they came into power was to dismiss the sub-collector at Ferryland, but Mr. Cashin wished to say plainly and emphatically that the person they dismissed was going to be put back, and that he himself was going to be instrumental in putting him back. Mr. Walsh—Mr. Walsh said that it was not his intention to say much this afternoon, but he merely rose to express his regret and reiterate the remarks of the Leader of the Opposition that Sir Michael Cashin was not with them in the House to-day. He said that Sir Michael was a man who possessed some of the finest qualities of any politician who ever stood on the floors of the House of Assembly. He also said that it was regrettable during the last campaign practically a state of war was waged against Sir Michael, and that Sir Michael at the time was suffering from severe and very serious illness. He expressed the hope that it would not be long before they would have the pleasure of seeing him back in the House again. He said that Sir Michael Cashin was a splendid type of man, he was a remarkable man in that he achieved success in most things that he attempted, and in fact made success where many others failed. He sprang from the ranks of labour, and climbed gradually upwards until he reached an exalted position and one worthy of respect. In concluding he said Sir Michael was a man very much misunderstood and appreciated by those politically opposed to him and he thought the following lines were applicable at this moment:—"Not understood we live our lives, Doing our best for our fellowmen, Blushing for shame to have it known Wrong, and misjudged, again and again. Rather lie under judgment wrong Than show the world our secret heart. May he that wishes to bear the name And men understood when we depart." Mr. Pudgester wished to congratulate the speaker on the high honour he had attained. He expressed his regret that he was unable to be present to hear the speaker so heartily. He said that that time was, and not very long since, when those members were not so fond in their praises. He also congratulated the speaker and seconded the motion for an address in reply on the very capable manner in which they had acquitted themselves. He had been pleased to hear the leader of the Opposition utter praise of Sir Michael Cashin. It was well deserved. Hearing this praise he could not help recalling that during the election night in Bay de Verde District a paper was circulated there called the Journal, every second line in which was abuse of Sir Michael Cashin. He had detected the money to run the paper was put up by the Leader of the Opposition and his employees requested it in their names. He liked to see men consistent in or out of the House and if Mr. Hickman spent his money for this purpose and also sent his employees to run the paper, he should stand to what he said of force, he is consistent. He had no

ORDER OF THE DAY. Mr. Hallyard, moving the second reading of the Act to Amend the Election Act, 1918, stated the idea of the Bill was to enable those at Corner Brook, Deer Lake, Grand Falls and Bell Island to vote as in St. John's during an election. This would also prevent the danger of candidates being unseated for bringing men from Bell Island to their home to vote. On motion of Mr. Monroe the second reading was deferred until tomorrow. Second reading of Bill entitled, "An Act respecting the Department of Public Printing and Stationery," was deferred till Monday. Second reading of Bill entitled "Of the Employment of men engaged in logging" was also deferred. Mr. Grimes gave notice of question. Sir John Crosbie gave notice that he would on tomorrow move the House into Committee of the Whole on Supply. Mr. Hallyard took occasion to complain of the reporting as it was entirely unsatisfactory and he hoped the Internal Economy Commission would give the matter consideration. Formerly members were given copies of their speeches for personal before publication, and he would like to see this system introduced again. Minister of Justice Higgins in reply pointed out that the present system of reporting was in the nature of an experiment as he had previously pointed out. No verbatim reports are being taken now and only a digest is being given and he thought the reporting might be as good as ever it was. The idea at present is to do away with the expense of the publication of Hansard. Mr. Hallyard again suggested that the reporters be instructed to take verbatim reports and that copies be supplied the members. A member referred in English to the objection of the Hansard and the Prime Minister in answer to a question said that it seemed the opinion of the older members that these Hansards were never used.

The Will
There comes a time in the life of every man when he must leave his worldly possessions to the care of another. In anticipation of this, therefore, the first obligation resting on an individual who is possessed of property is the making of a will, and this should be done before the capacities become impaired by time or the ravages of disease. LAST NIGHT'S FOOTBALL.

There was only a small attendance of spectators at St. George's Field last night to witness the football match between the B.L.S. and C.L.B. The evening was all that could be desired for good football, and in this such an exhibition was sadly lacking. In the first place the teams made their appearance only half-crowded. Delahanty and Sullivan, ex-Star players, and F. Phelan, who filled up the B.L.S. gaps, while at least four others were called upon to complete the C.L.B. line-up. Due to the delay the first half had the advantage of the strong sun. The ball for the first half was transferred from end to end, with honors pretty evenly divided.

Upon changing over both teams settled down and headed out a better brand of ball. The C.L.B. forwards made determined efforts to score. Muir of the B.L.S. was called upon to save a hot one which went over the top to a corner. This was placed nicely by Keats and headed between the posts by Hooke, thus registering the C.L.B.'s first goal. Encouraged by this they increased their efforts, and shortly after Keats sent home the equalizer on an easy rolling shot which fooled the goalkeeper. Play then changed from end to end with both teams striving hard to send home the winning counter. Freddie Phelan, who was playing his first game for the season, made several good runs west and narrowly missed the mark, while Eddie Phelan, within shooting distance, resorted to skying the leather high over the bar. The B.L.S., playing the better football, kept up the attack and after twenty-five minutes play, Skinner easily found the net, scoring No. 3. A moment later Eddie Phelan eluded the opposing defence but the ball went wild. He remedied himself shortly after by tallying the fourth and final goal. The C.L.B. worked down field in the dying moments of the game, when Chafe lost a good opportunity to score. The game ended: B.L.S. 4 goals; C.L.B. 2. Mr. C. Quick was referee.

Notes On The Game All games are advertised for 7.30. Players are requested to bear this in mind. Several of the players in last night's game figured in the play minus the regular football outfit. For the winners Eddie Phelan, Brown and Constantine were the shining lights. For the losers, Noonan, A. Hennebury and Keats put up a good game. The C.L.B. forwards are rather weak in shooting on goal. The fans are looking forward to a better brand of football from now on, and to accomplish this, Mr. Players of the respective teams, practice is necessary.

ALBEN STEENROOS CAPTURES OLYMPIC MARATHON.

Clarence De Mar, U.S.A., Finished 3rd OLYMPIC STADIUM, July 13.—The premier mantle of Olympic triumph went to the new Finnish runner, Alben Steenroos, who raced under a blazing sun to the classic marathon championship, a victory which capped the climax to Finland's clean sweep of the distance races and gave the little Nordic country the greatest laurels it has ever won. Chief interest to-day was centred in the marathon. This was manifested not only by the crowd of 25,000 in the Stadium, which sent the band of 68 runners off late in the afternoon and nearly three hours later exclaimed as the conquering hero the sturdy Finn, Steenroos, as he strode first through the portal, but also along the 26 miles of roadside, where probably one hundred thousand more saw the great struggle. Over the first half of the winding hill and dale to the little French village of Portesee and return, the lead changed several times, the glory of the old Greek marathon runner being awarded in the first dozen kilometres by Kranis, who set the pace until he was succeeded first, for a short distance, by De Mar, United States, and then by Verger, of France, who gained the plaudits of his countrymen lining the course, until the ultimate victor, Steenroos, took the lead at the half way mark. From that point the Finnish star, running very smoothly and apparently without any gross strain, despite the heat which nearly equalled that of yesterday, added to his advantage. Three quarters of the way home Steenroos was out of sight of his nearest rival, Romeo Bertini, the Italian, who passed De Mar at the 27th kilometre mark and took up a gallant, but futile chase.

Through crowded lanes, over the last stage of the journey, never slackening his pace, whether up grade, over side paths or the cobble stones of the village streets, Steenroos was vociferously greeted, but, except to a familiar shout from some countrymen, he seemed oblivious to everything but keeping a straight course and a steady pace. While practically half the field had dropped out in the closing half of the race, and others were barely able to keep going, Steenroos came in to the Stadium track running strongly and after breaking the tape, raced around the field to acknowledge his countrymen's greetings, before trotting to his quarters.

"A Boer farmer and his brother shot a python near their farm and tied its body by rope to a tree; 'for,' as Jan said to his brother, 'the mate is sure to come, and we will shoot her, too.' When they returned they found the snake alive and struggling, and on looking closer, found that the live python had swallowed its dead mate and so got tied to the tree too."—John O'London's Weekly.

SHE RAISED HER SON TO BE A FIGHTER.

The Story Of Ma Stribling And The Boy She Seeks To Make A "Champion."

(By HUGH FULLERTON.)

"Months before my first child was born I decided that if it should be a boy I would make a fighter and a champion of him," said "Ma" Stribling. "Jim Jeffries, at that time world's champion, came to Macon, Georgia, where we were living, and I went to see him. He was magnificent, powerful, and I decided my boy should be the same when he grew up, but with less bulky muscles."

"See him to-day—the boy they call 'Young' Stribling, with the championship of the world waiting for him—and you see how nearly I have come already to my ambition. You will not think it only a mother's pride when I picture him as the coming heavyweight champion of the world when he is older. He is nearly nineteen. He has fought more than a hundred times and has never been knocked down. The papers said he was knocked down in a bout at Miami, but he was not. He has held five minor titles. He weighs just over 165 in condition, and when he reaches full manhood he will weigh between 195 and 200 in condition, and then nothing will stop him."

"I do not know whether any other baby's career has ever been planned for him as our baby's has been, and I know of no other one who has been raised entirely on physical culture lines."

"When I knew I was to become a mother I started preparing for the event. Both my husband and I were athletic. We were acrobats and worked fourteen years in vaudeville. We were strong and healthy, and there was no reason why our children should not be perfect if we cared for them properly. I spent much time in the open air, walked, took light exercise, and watched my diet very carefully."

"When the boy was born I rejoiced to find him so perfect physically. He was not a heavy baby, but was very strong and bright, and almost from the first minute I began training him. When he was five weeks old we started to make him a champion."

"Whether our system has been a success or not you may judge by the fact that, although we have travelled all over the world and have taken our boys, even as babies, into all sorts of places, none of us ever has been sick. We were in smallpox epidemics, in plague ridden cities, have been exposed to yellow fever, to bubonic plague, to leprosy, and all kinds of diseases, and never have been ill. The children escaped even the common ailments of childhood, such as measles, chicken pox, and mumps."

"Why? Simply because I had kept them clean inside and out. I studied diet, exercise, and water. The training for boxing started as soon as 'W. L.' could stand alone, which he was able to do at six months. Before that, however, his father and I started developing him, allowing him to hang by his fingers and lift himself."

"While I always intended him to be a fighter, I had more than that in mind. I knew the athletic work and physical training had not very strong girl into a strong, healthy woman and made her better looking."

"Ma" Stribling laughed as she said this. But, with a boy nearing nineteen years of age, she looks like a woman of twenty-six and—his handsome, with perfect skin and fine hair and eyes.

"When he was just six months old he could stand on one foot and balance himself. He had no fear, and would stand on one foot on his father's outstretched hand and laugh as if he enjoyed it, and, being healthy and unafraid, he did enjoy it."

"We kept up the systematic exercise day by day, teaching him and developing his muscles. I looked after the diet, both for his father and the boy. After reading a great deal about dieting I concluded vegetables and fruits were best, with very little meat. None of us is a strict vegetarian and 'W. L.' takes a little meat at times, but not much.

"You see," explained "Ma," I was not born a professional acrobat and had to learn. My husband came of a family of athletes, and not a man in his family for four generations ever smoked or drank. Tobacco and coffee are two things that are barred from our home.

"Month for month the development of our boys progressed steadily, and when 'W. L.' was about four years old and Herbert, who is called 'Babe' Stribling by the sporting writers, was eleven months they went on the stage with their father as the 'Graham Trio' and did an acrobatic turn in connection with his. A little later I became proficient enough to join the team and we became the 'Four Grammas.'

"We toured the world in that act, and the importance of the boys increased. We did not think it wise to let them try boxing too young, although they appeared to love it. When 'W. L.' was six and Babe was nearly three we had a set of boxing gloves made for them and their father showed them how to hold their arms and how to block blows.

"The boxing act of the youngsters was a hit, and it often was more in earnest than the audience knew. 'W. L.' never liked to take a 'fop,' even to his little brother, and he preferred boxing in earnest, although he never hit 'Babe' as hard as he could. His only kick was that he wished he had some one his own size to box with. He loved boxing and wanted some one who could give him a real fight."

"I have noticed one thing—which is that boxing makes boys more manly. A boy who can fight and who knows he can fight never is a bully and never starts fights and never fights a smaller boy."

"It was not until he was seven years old that 'W. L.' had a real fight. Both his father and I were beginning to fear that he was too good natured and did not take fighting in earnest. When he was seven years old he was very fast and clever with his hands and he boxed as if instinctively, but we were afraid he would not realize that it was in earnest and would think it was play. We decided he should challenge any boy of his weight or age to box. He was a very busy boy for the next five years. Among those he defeated was the champion of the Boys' Brigade in Shanghai while we were playing in China."

"He was developing rapidly. The training, perfect condition at all times, and the work made him grow rapidly. He was leading a pure and rather simple life, and I insisted that he get as much education as possible. He liked school and learned quickly, and his mind was as healthy as his body."

"His first ring battle was on January 17, 1921. He was 'hurt' or scared, but he took some hard punches and came back for more without losing his head or forgetting his science, and he showed he could hit with either hand.

"Since that time he has been fighting steadily, and has engaged in more than a hundred battles without being knocked down once or ever being in danger of a knockout. We are very proud of him."

The mother looked fondly at the b'g, lounging, loose joint of a lad she raised, and he grinned and, reaching across one of his big hands, touched her arm gently.

"Have you seen him fight?" I inquired, with a somewhat old-fashioned idea that a mother might fear to see her son hurt, perhaps knocked out.

"Oh yes," she replied proudly. "I've seen practically all of his fights. I've seen him take some hard wallops, and stand a lot of punishment, and he always wins. After all condition is the thing, and he counts, and he has fought anyone to whom he was not superior in condition whether they outweighed him or had more ring experience. He is the best conditioned fighter that ever stepped into a ring and, everything else being equal, he will beat the other fellow. This has been shown again and again. In the early rounds some of the more experienced boxers have had all the advantages, and after three or four rounds condition told and he got stronger and faster, while they got slower and slower. No one has ever hit him hard enough to knock him out, and condition is more than hitting power."

"I have trained him ever since he started boxing professionally, and have had charge of his training camps and directed all his work. He is easy to handle, and never having been out of condition, requires little work. Besides he is young, shows no tendency toward fat, and never has to work of weight."

I asked her whether boxing is good or bad for the morals of those engaged in it.

"Good!" she said. "An athlete must live a clean life, and keep his mind and body clean. I have two of the cleanest boys ever born. Their morals are better than those of any minister I ever knew, and they are clean and innocent in thought and deed."

Whether this is due to athletics or not I don't know. I believe if a boy is going to be a good boy he will be no matter what business he is in, and if he is going to be bad he'll be bad whether he is a fighter or a preacher. But athletics, especially boxing, tend to make boys better and induce them to give more thought to themselves, more poise and self-control.

Hard Times Bring
British Treasures
To Auction Rooms.

London, June 27. (A.P.)—Sir Rider Haggard writes to The Times deploring that the roofs of old English country mansions are rotting and falling in because the owners cannot afford to keep them up and there is no one to buy them, and that with them disappears the old English country life of which they were the centre. The contents of these old houses are pouring onto the market as they have never done before, and popular belief is that some of these valuables are bought in by London art dealers for their American customers.

Even some of the old families which are known to be immensely rich, according to English values, are taking advantage of the high tide of art prices. For example, for sale soon at the famous Christie's auction rooms is a group of old masters of world reputation, put up by the Duke of Westminster, which includes three pictures by Rubens forming part of a series said to have been painted by order of Philip IV. to decorate a Carmelite convent, also a Virgin and Child by Vandyke.

Other lots offered at Christie's, which combine the value of patrician associations with art, are: "Old English Furniture and Needlework the property of her Grace the Duchess of Wellington," and carved oak furniture "the Property of his Grace the Duke of Marlborough" and removed from a farmhouse on the Blenheim Estate." Also porcelain belonging to the Right Hon. Earl Howe, G.C.V.O.; the Sneyd heirlooms from Keele Hall, Staffordshire, which have a romantic flavor and consist mostly of old silver, furniture and porcelain; a valuable collection of pictures left by the late Earl of Hardwicke; furniture belonging to the Earl of Sandwich; and a few old masters put up by the Right Hon. The Earl of Clarendon, P.C., G.C.B., G.C.V.O.

Among the offerings at Sotheby's within the next month are valuable pieces of the property of Lady Edward Grosvenor, Sir John Hippisley, and other articles belonging to the Countess of Gosford and Cora Countess of Stratford.

It is many years since any of the Duke of Westminster's collection of old masters have appeared in the auction rooms, although some star pictures have occasionally been sold by private bargain, and treasures from Blenheim have rarely been obtainable in the life-time of the present Duke of Marlborough.

The belief that nearly everything sold goes to America is not entirely true. The good old ruble, but unimpaired British landscape artists of 40 years ago, whose works harmonized perfectly with the old country houses, are enjoying a boom in prices such as they have never before been honored with. The majority of them are practically unknown in America, and are not in demand here, yet the swiftness with which $2,000 or $3,000 are bid for pictures that went begging on the painters' hands, shows that there is yet money in England for art.

An Imperial League.

Since I referred to it on February 6 the Imperial Settlement League has continued its curious quest for Directors of Organization for countries who as a qualification for appointment are required to advance a sum of £100 to the Central Executive. The repayment of the loan is still to be by means of a percentage deduction from the subscriptions the director obtains in his area. He is, however, no longer promised a salary of £4 per week payable from headquarters, plus a commission of 10 per cent on the money he collects. The latter is now to be the source of both salary and commission, so that if the local public are unresponsive the outlook for the Director is rather dismal. For an Imperial League to raise the wind by borrowing from employees is to my mind the reverse of creditable.

The League does not appear to have yet equipped itself with a president, but as vice-presidents it names Major R. W. Barnett, M.P., Sir Harry Brittain, M.P., Major-General, Sir Harry Prookins, Viscount Chaplin, Viscount Curzon, M.P., the Earl of Denbigh, Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, and Lord Morris of Newfoundland. Lieut.-Colonel G. Matland, Edwards is chairman of the Council. I wonder whether these noblemen and gentlemen have consulted authorities who are perhaps better qualified than themselves to judge whether this addition to existing overseas settlement agencies is really needed. I doubt it because I am practically certain they would be told that the League is an entirely superfluous organization. In its very long-winded statement of its aims and objects it asserts that it can rely upon the constancy and sympathy of the Home Administration, presumably meaning the Colonial Office. This is a delusion. The Colonial Office does not extend its countenance and sympathy to the League, and in my opinion the public will be well advised to stand aloof.—Truth.

CLEAN UP and KEEP CLEAN
This is what the New Government intends doing. We have been doing this for 25 years, as Cleaning, Pressing and Dyeing is our sole business. We devote our entire time to it and therefore we can give you better satisfaction than you can get elsewhere. Owing to the growth of our business we have had to remove to larger premises on the opposite side of the street (No. 22 opp. A. V. Duffy), which gives us ample room. We use the first flat, shop and showroom; second flat, repairing and pressing rooms; third flat, dyeing and renovating.
We would like you to see some of our work before sending elsewhere; all prices reduced since the New Year. Cleaning Orders given our first and personal attention. A rush job is our specialty. We call for goods and deliver them in two hours, if necessary. Suits Pressed while you wait; a nice dressing room to change in. We can handle over one hundred pressing orders daily. In addition to Cleaning and Pressing, we clean and shape hats.
Gents' Suits Dry Cleaned—Hats Cleaned.
Ladies' Costumes Dry Cleaned—Suits Renovated.
