WAS ROOSEVELT FORCED TO ACT?

New York Times Says That Real Reason of the United States Intervention in Cuba was Because the British Government Protested Against Destruction of British Property.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The Times today says: According to a story which is being told in financial circles here, the real cause of the action of President Roosevelt in regard to Cuba was not the appeals of American sugar planters near Cienfuegos, but a complaint made through the British embassy at Washington...

In an interview with a Times reporter, a prominent financier who arrived from Cuba yesterday said: "The management of the Western Railroad at Havana called to the London office stating that cuts had been blown up, water reservoirs destroyed, and the traffic of the lines totally paralyzed by the insurgents, and that further damage might be expected if the United States did not take some action in the matter."

According to his statement about a dozen other properties drain into his sewer and if he were to cut these off he feared trouble from them. HIRAM WOULDN'T BUY. Mr. Hiram Hornbeam is in the city today and in company with the mayor and several aldermen, paid a visit to Queen Square.

It appears that when Hiram was in town attending the exhibition, he let fall a remark to the effect that he was looking for a logging chance for the coming winter—not a large operation, but one that would keep him and the hired man busy at odd spells.

LOCAL CHURCH UNION The proposition to unite two congregations of the United Baptist Church in this city will be considered by the members of each church this week. The two church buildings are close to each other, and neither has as large a congregation as it can accommodate. In each there is lacking the force that numbers give for carrying on the necessary work of a church. Each has its financial problems. The two could unite, and with one plant carry on doubtless more effectively the various branches of church work. The people of the two congregations would be brought into closer touch with each other, and they all have the same desire to make the church an instrument for greater good in the community. No merely sentimental reason should weigh for a moment in the consideration of the question of union. The vital question is: Can a strong and united congregation do more good in this community than two separate ones struggling with burdens that are a result of separation? In that spirit no doubt the people of the Brussels street and Waterloo street churches will this week approach the very important matter they have in hand. There would seem to be here a fine opportunity to manifest the true spirit of Christianity.

WOULD UNIONIZE SCHOOLS The gradual disappearance of the apprentice has presented to the industrial world a problem which is not easy of solution. Even if trades-unions did not aim to restrict apprenticeship, there is a growing reluctance on the part of the young to undergo such a course. Doubtless this is in a measure due to the artificial and highly injurious distinction made by society between occupations requiring manual labor and those which are called the professions. There are fewer honors for the man who toils with his hands and less of social recognition. One method of solving the difficulty is the trades school, and it is being adopted, or has been adopted, in a number of countries as an adjunct to their public school system, with satisfactory results. In general, working men have been favorable to this plan, because their children benefited by it, but a curious result has developed in Philadelphia, where the board of education has arranged to establish trades schools. At a meeting of the Central Labor Union it was recently asserted that these schools would be nurseries for "scabs" and a menace to unionism. To prevent such a calamity it was proposed to "unionize the schools, exclude all but union teachers, and see to it that the principles of unionism were instilled into the minds of the pupils. Surely this is unionism gone mad. It is a blow aimed at the system of free public schools, which are the safeguard of the nation.

SPECULATIVE DANGERS A little over a year ago the Winnipeg Free Press and other papers in the west deemed it necessary to sound a note of warning to farmers and tradesmen, because of the wild speculation in lands, based on the belief that there would be an enormous harvest to provide the necessary funds. Everybody seemed to be hand hungry, and credits had been extended to such a degree that had a crop failure occurred the result would have been widely disastrous. Bankers as well as merchants became somewhat nervous over the general situation, and the press reflected their feeling. Happily there was a great harvest, but it is noted that this year there has been less disposition to discount the future. The proper course to pursue is very well put by a Montreal paper as follows: "Even times of prosperity are not times for extravagant extensions to plant and property that would discount a dozen rearing years of activity, but rather for a concentration of resources and a gradual expansion that will not cripple the finances of an establishment should a sudden reversal of trade conditions occur. For another twelve months at least there is abundance of wealth and the reputation of success, and every section of the community should devote extra effort to the building up a stronghold of reserve."

GEN. TREPPOFF General Treppoff, Russia's man of blood and iron, is dead. He would have been dead long since, had the revolutionary spirits of that unhappy country been able to reach him with dagger or with bomb. Treppoff was the product of his time and training. Trained by his father in the police department, and his own life threatened and assailed in consequence, he lost any sympathy he might otherwise have had with those who sought to effect a revolution. Resourceful, courageous to the last degree, he was equally relentless in his methods of quelling disorder. How much he was hated may be inferred from the fact that two of his own men were involved in one of the many conspiracies to take his life. Since the close of the war with Japan, during the internal convulsions that have shaken the Russian government almost to its downfall, Treppoff rose rapidly in favor with the reactionaries, as the one man who could give blow for blow, and thrust without remorse the sword of power into the heart of disaffection. A hated figure, he yet stands before the world as a great type of the men who in the face of hatred do their duty as they see it, unmoved by public clamor or the fear of death. "I had only my life to lose," said the Russian girl who lately paid the penalty for the assassination of a general. With equal fervor Treppoff, misguided if you will, might have said: "If I guard my life it is that I may spend it for the dear."

Strong souls there are on both sides of this great conflict in Russia, indicative of what the race is capable of producing for the world's good in happier times to come.

The mayor's invitation to a banquet in St. John is in hot pursuit of Hon. Mr. Hyman, and may overtake him at any moment. A morning paper states that it had reached Ottawa and would proceed at once on the trail of the minister. As in other matters dealt with by the city council, time is necessary to complete the service of this invitation.

THE BURIED LIFE But often, in the world's most crowded streets, There rises an unspoken desire, There rises an unspoken desire, After the knowledge of our buried life: A burst to spend our fire and restless force In tracking out our true, original course: A longing to inquire Into the mystery of this heart which beats so wild, so deep in us-to know Whence our lives come and where they go. And many a man in his own breast then derives, But strong enough, alas! none ever mine. And we have been on many thousand lives, And we have known on each spirit and power; have we, for one little hour, Betwixt our own line, have we been our selves? Hardly had skill to utter one of all The manifold feelings that course through our brains. But they course on for ever unexpressed, And long we try in vain to speak and act Our hidden self, and what we say and do We discover, as well-but it is not true! And then we will no more be rack'd With lowest striving and demand Of all the thousand nothings of the hour. Ah, yes, and they beset us at our call! Yet still, from time to time, vague and forlorn, From the soul's subterranean depths upborne As from an indistinctly distant shore, Come sighs and floating echoes, and convey A melancholy tale all our day.

Only-but this is rare- When a beloved hand is laid in ours, When our world's-endless day Of the interminable hours, Our eyes can in another's read clear, When our world's-endless day, He by the tones of a loved voice caress'd, Is as if he were in our breast, And a lost pulse of feeling stirr'd again. The eyes are low, and the heart lies plain, And what we mean, we say, and what we would, we know. A man becomes aware of his life's flow, And hears its winding murmur, and he sees The meadows where it glides, the sun, the breeze. And there arrives a lull in the hot race Whence he has forever chase. The flying and elusive shadow, run, An air of coolness pervades his breast, And an unspoken calm pervades his breast, The hills where his life runs, And the sea where it goes. -Matthew Arnold.

IN LIGHTER VEIN "I'm ashamed of this composition, Charley," said a teacher in one of the local schools this morning. "I shall send it for your mother and show her how badly you are doing." "Send for her-I don't care," said Charley. "My mother wrote it, anyway." -Albany Journal.

ALWAYS THE WAY. "Don't you want to take a chance on this lovely silver shavings set?" asked the fair attendant at the church bazaar. "Not me," replied Sinxex. "I'd never win that." "But even if you don't shelve yourself." "Oh, but I do; that's why I say I'd never win it. It's bound to go to some fellow who has no use for it." -Philadelphia Press.

THE C. P. R. CRITICISED (Toronto Globe). There is need for a little more humanity in the make-up of some of the operating officials of the C. P. R. A very bad railway wreck occurred near Sudbury early yesterday morning in which over a dozen people lost their lives. The first news of the disaster came in such fashion that the people of Ontario did not know whether the victims were harvestmen from this province or from eastern portions of the main line. There was intense anxiety when the news became known, and requests for a list of the dead were sent to every quarter from which information might be obtained. That some at least of the dead could have been named was quite apparent from the statement that five of the injured had succeeded in being rescued from the wreck. The last editions of the Toronto evening papers contained no list of the dead, and hundreds of families all over the province remained in anxiety all night, knowing that a disaster had occurred to a train on which their relatives might have travelled. We do not believe the C. P. R. officials on the spot were deliberately callous, but we do hold that the making up and sending out of an official list of the dead should have been one of the first duties of the officials in charge. Such a task was far more urgent than even the clearing of the line. The reckless disregard for human life on the railways of the United States can have no place in Canada. It would be interesting to learn why with an efficient telegraph service at their command the C. P. R. officials at Sudbury sent out no official list of the dead yesterday morning. The press and the public had a right to reliable official information at the earliest possible moment. Interests of humanity were involved.

Referee Hearing Testimony in Investigation of Judge Deuel

MELLIS WOOSTER JOHN H. ISLAIN MARTIN J. STOVER MR. CRAIG JUDGE JOS. M. DEUEL

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Testimony in the proceedings instituted by Edward M. Sheard, James W. Osborne and District Attorney Jerome against Judge Joseph M. Deuel, of the Court of Special Sessions, to remove him from the bench, was heard today before former Judge Martin J. Stover, the referee appointed by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.
Judge Deuel sat with his back to the audience, which gathered in Mr. Stover's office, at No. 60 Wall street, and maintained an attitude of extreme reserve, while Assistant District Attorney John H. Islain, counsel for the petitioners, offered testimony to prove that Judge Deuel had violated the statute prohibiting any city magistrate or member of the Special Sessions Bench from engaging in other business.
In presenting his case Mr. Islain said all the facts relative to the charges against Deuel should be received. He anticipated that there would be technical objections offered by Mr. Craig, of Hooley, Lasterbrook & Johnson, counsel for the judge. He explained that the chief charge was that Judge Deuel was engaged in the publishing business, while he was in the court of Special Sessions, and that he had large interests in the publication of Fads and Fancies, the book which figured so prominently in the trial of Norman Hapgood, who was charged by Colonel W. D. Mann, editor of Town Topics, with libel.
Mr. Craig said when the proper time would come he would raise the question of the constitutionality of the law prohibiting a judge from engaging in other business. He said the order of the Appellate Division required Judge Deuel to answer the charges, but did not make it obligatory to go into the merits of the case.
M. Ellis Wooster, a member of Town Topics' staff, who managed the business of getting out Fads and Fancies, called by Mr. Islain, testified that he lived at the Hotel Breelin, and first met Judge Deuel in 1901, in the office of Town Topics' Col. Mann introduced him. He identified a signature affixed to the contract the witness made with the publication company as that of Judge Deuel. He also identified the famous letter written to him by the judge, telling him to go after the subscription of Commodore E. T. Geary, and another in which the writer designated Wooster as the man with the gun who would make the well known visitors to Palm Beach come down into the basket.
Adjournment was taken until next Wednesday.

THE GOLDEN RULE IN BUSINESS LIFE

Rev. P. J. Stackhouse Hears That Only Small Percentage of Business is Done on That Basis.

The first of a series of sermons on current questions was preached by Rev. P. J. Stackhouse, last evening, in the Tabernacle Church. His subject, "The Golden Rule Practiced in Daily Life," in opening he referred to a prevailing prejudice against what are known as moral sermons, and stated that the revival we need is not an emotional one, but one of righteousness.
He stated also that society never was and is not today, conducted on a Christian basis. For years it rested on an egotistic basis, the fundamental assumption of which is the essential inequality of men.
Modern society is dominated by the idea of the survival of the strongest—a case of the white man has been represented as a kind of missionary, doing kindergarten work among the black and yellow races. His primary motive has not been altruistic, but the practical motive of dollars and cents. The golden rule is governed by ideals and tagonistic to the spirit of the golden rule. The preacher then pointed out that the golden rule was practical in business; that he had been informed by deals as men that of business was done on that basis.
The preacher held that the only solution of the labor problem is the application of Christ's law of love. He gave illustrations to prove his employer and said: "I believe if the employer would treat his employees not as 'hands' to be exploited for selfish interests, but as living men and women with immortal souls that it would pay not only in a good sense, which is a valuable asset, but in dollars and cents as well.
In conclusion he said that for moral being the question is not, "Is the Golden Rule practical? Will it pay in dollars and cents?" but, ought it to be the standard of conduct? If it ought to begin to pay it into practical operation."

MONCTON MAY HAVE HOME FOR NURSES

All Records for Passenger Traffic on the I. C. R. Broken this Summer—To Take Legal Proceedings.

MONCTON, Sept. 14.—It is stated that Ald. Fryer, chairman of the police committee, contemplates taking legal proceedings against the Rev. Herbert E. Thomas, pastor of the Wesley Memorial church of this city, in reference to certain statements made by Mr. Thomas in the course of his sermon last Sunday evening at St. John's Anglican church.
Mr. Thomas was speaking on the responsibility for the enforcement of the Scott Act in the city of Moncton and made the statement that the chairman of the police committee was a protector of criminals. The charge that he is a protector of criminals is taken exception to by the chairman of the police committee and he has consulted legal advice with a view to beginning an action for libel against the clergyman making the charge.
The Moncton hospital board is taking active steps towards the establishment of a nurses' training home in this city. Some difficulty is experienced in getting nurses for the hospital and the board has come to the conclusion that a training home is the only solution of the present problem. Temporary quarters have been secured and three young ladies have already entered the home to take a course in professional nursing.
Railway men report that all records for passenger traffic on the I. C. R. have been broken this summer.
Heavy loaded cars, are not an unusual thing. The result is that the regular trains have been unable to make any thing like running time.
T. E. Daloum, the well known lumberman, who was taken suddenly ill while on a recent trip to the Gaspe coast and was taken to Montreal for an operation for appendicitis, has returned home and is still showing the effects of his severe illness.
Dr. A. R. Myers arrived home today from Edinburgh, where he has been taking a special course in the hospitals for the past three months.

MANTELL TONIGHT

Noted Tragedian Begins Brief Engagement at the Opera House.

Robert Mantell and his company will begin their engagement of six performances tonight in the St. John Opera House, opening with a spectacular revival of Shakespeare's "King Richard III." Mr. Mantell's, Duke of Gloster in this tragedy is already reckoned as a triumph; and promise is made of a very treat when his characterization is disclosed on a stage where he has been, more than two years ago, in a purely romantic repertoire. Marie Booth Russell, who accompanied him on that visit, returns, and the engagement will close on Friday night with "Othello" Thursday night, and the engagement will be repeated in Moncton on Saturday night.

A LORD WITHOUT A TITLE

The lord of "Lucky" Baldwin's ranch could drive eighteen miles in a straight line across his own general merchandise store, maintained for the convenience of his own people, the school supported by the children of the neighborhood, the church and the post-office, all belonging to the equipment of the estate. He will raise horses, his wheat and his grapes through his vast orange and fig and vineyard orchards, his walnut groves and his vineyards where the Mission grape is gathered from the gnarled vines planted by the padres. There are also one hundred acres of lemons, one hundred acres of grape fruit, two thousand acres of vegetables, and twenty thousand acres of corn, hay and small grains. His thirty thousand sheep graze on the brown hillsides, and he could clothe his people with their wool, if he wished. His wheat ranch Parks, with the result that when Parks arrived the boat and Colwell had departed. Parks immediately looked about for a boat and found Dr. March about to go to his boat house launch to the island, where the Chief was anchored. The steward secured his passage but on arriving at the wharves, the captain refused to take him on the boat. An altercation followed and Parks finally landed in the water. Edger March threw a line to him and he was rescued. Parks was taken to the launch and after getting out of dry clothing he found that the Chief had called with a suit of clothes of his and some money.

HAD A NARROW ESCAPE

Edward Parks, steward of the woodboat Chief, had quite an experience in the harbor Saturday evening.
It appears that Parks and his mate, Colwell, took a boat and went ashore for supplies. Both had been imbibing and the mate returned to the boat earlier than Parks, with the result that when Parks arrived the boat and Colwell had departed. Parks immediately looked about for a boat and found Dr. March about to go to his boat house launch to the island, where the Chief was anchored. The steward secured his passage but on arriving at the wharves, the captain refused to take him on the boat. An altercation followed and Parks finally landed in the water. Edger March threw a line to him and he was rescued. CONDENSED DISPATCHES

Winnipeg, Sept. 16.—A final meeting of the unions interested this Sunday afternoon a general strike of building trades was definitely decided on and will be precipitated tomorrow morning. The bricklayers and masons have reconsidered their decision not to strike and will go out in sympathy, making the tie up general.
It is regarded as little short of disaster at this time of year when so much important building is in progress. The building permits to date have reached the splendid total of $10,273,600 which, exceeds the permits issued for the same period last year by $656,150.
Montreal, Sept. 16.—Hon. J. Israel Tarte tonight declined to make any statement concerning the report from Ottawa that he would be the chairman of the new Montreal harbor commission.
Several months ago the former Laurier minister declared that he would not accept the place if offered. His silence on the present occasion is regarded as significant.
Halifax, Sept. 16.—The Canadian customs authorities yesterday seized the American fishing schooner Arthur Binney. The vessel was taken by the officers at North East Harbor, Shelburne, on a charge of smuggling goods to Liverpool about a year ago.

A MINISTER MISREPRESENTED

The Sun's Axe Falls on the Rev. P. J. Stackhouse - Assailed in Big Type.

In its report of a sermon by the Rev. P. J. Stackhouse last evening the Sun says: "During the past fortnight the speaker had asked a number of merchants how many business men in St. John run their business according to the golden rule. The estimates ranged from five to fifteen per cent."

In big type over the report the Sun says: "From 9 to 15 per cent of St. John merchants honest in business according to their own estimate."

It will be observed that the report referred only to the golden rule, while the head lines imply that Mr. Stackhouse impugned the business honesty of merchants. This is a clear case of gross misrepresentation. Evidently the Sun made this entering observation: "Only from five to fifteen per cent of the business men in this city are honest and a clergyman last night. Well, we've safe yet. A smaller proportion than that would have saved Sodom, and Sodom was worse than St. John is. By the way, that sermon would have been more interesting had it contained some names."

The Telegraph's report of what Mr. Stackhouse said is as follows: "He said that he had put the question to a number of business men in this city as to how much of the business was conducted on the basis of the golden rule. The answers varied from five to fifteen per cent. Most of them agreed that the golden rule was practical in business. Personally he believed that if the professing Christian men of any city were to unite in conducting their business in accordance with the golden rule they would not only succeed themselves but in time would force others to adopt the same principles."

Fall and Winter Millinery Opening to be Held on Tuesday and Wednesday

ALL THE WORLD takes its millinery style from Paris. Even London, New York, Vienna and Berlin, each conspicuous in fashion affairs, find it necessary to follow the gay city's lead in headwear.

PARIS MILLINERS are exceedingly keen. They cater, not only to their own Frenchified tastes, but design and trim models a la Americaine, or for the German market; in fact to suit the style tendencies of all fashionable countries.

SO WHEN OUR REPRESENTATIVE enters the buying field in that great millinery centre, he finds what coincides with the Canadian conception of smart headwear - usually a charming combination of French and American ideas.

THUS WE ARE ENABLED to present to our lady friends some of the choicest items in hats, bonnets and materials shown in the foremost market, the world's fair for all that's new and modish in millinery - the very stylish, the moderately so.

OUR FALL and WINTER Exposition commences Tuesday Morning at 8 o'clock in the Silk and Millinery Departments. Every St. John lady is cordially invited to inspect the novelties, for all will undoubtedly need a new hat shortly.

Children's Headwear A SPECIAL DISPLAY

MANCHESTER ROBERTSON ALLISON, Limited.

THE LATEST IDEAS

The "Gamin" and "Peter Pan" shapes will be most popular. They are of soft felt, capable of being treated in many pretty ways. Large dress hats will be broad and luxuriously adorned with ostrich plumes.

Among trimming novelties Frigate and Argus Quills, Blondine Plumes and large Ostrich Plumes are in highest esteem. The first mentioned are dashing, the Blondines graceful, the Ostrich feathers aristocratic.

Feather Hats are booked for generous use, both in the bird-breast and whole-bird effects. Numerous color schemes have been introduced in showing of these entire plumages.

Flowers are abundant again, particularly large roses - one to a hat. Egyptian antique gold is affected in buckles and ornaments. Ribbons are good, and striking rosettes will be seen a great deal.
