She had kept Dick's letter till the last. He wrote-offen and in the key of his talk. She dropped a limp of sugar into her coffee cup and read his hurried acrawl: "What do you think has happened now? I have tild worth of telegrams from Senator Senderson wiring from some God foresaken hele in Montana that it's all not about Armitage being that fake Baron, you. Kissel. The newspaper accounts of the expose at my supper party had fust reached him, and he says Armitage was on his (Armitage's) ranch all that summer the noble baron was devestating our northern seacoast. Where, may I ask, does this leave me? And what end gave that story to the papers? And where and who is John Armitage? Keep this mum for the present, even from the governor. If Sanderson is right, Armitage will undoubtedly turn up againhe has a weakness for turning up in your neighborhood—and soner or later he's bound to settle accounts with Chauvenet. Now that I think of it, who in the devil is he? And why didn't Armitage call him down there at the club? THE CRUEL CROSS OF LIFE. What silences we keep year after year With those who are most next to us and dear With those who are most next to us and dear We live beside each other day by day And speek of myriad things, but seldom say The full sweet word that lies just in our real section of common speech. Then out of sight and out of each they go— These close, familiar friends who loved us st And sitting in the shadow they have left, Alone with loneliness and sore bereft, We think, with vain regret, of some fond work That once we might have said and they have heard.

as though I had been kicked by a horse."

Shirley langhed softly, keeping the note open before her and referring to it musingly as she stirred her coftee. She could not answer any of Dick's questions, but her interest in the contest between Armitage and Chauvenet was intensified by this latest turn in the affair. She read for an hour in the library, but the air was close, and she threw aside hes book, drew on a light coat and went out upon the veranda. A storm was stealing down from the hills, and the fiftly wind tasted of rain. She walked the length of the veranda several times, then paused at the farther end of it, whese steps led out into the pergola. There was still a mist of starlight, and she looked out upon the vague outlines of the garden with thoughts of its needs and the gardener's work for the morrow. Then she was aware of a light step far out in the pergola and listened carelessly For weak and poor the love that we expressed Now seems, beside the past, sweet unconfessed; And slight, the deeds we did to those undone, And small the service spent to treasure won, And undeserved the praise far word and deed That should have overflowed, the simple need.

This is the cruel cross of life, to be Full-visioned only when the ministry Of death has been fulfilled, and in the place of some dear presence is but empty space. What recollected services can then Give consolution for the might have been?

"What is your name?"

"Whom did you take that man to be, Mr. Selfridge?" asked Shirley, and in her eagerness she bent down above the mountaineer's bared tangle of tow.
"The name you called him ain't it.

had consumed only two or three minutes, and Shirley now waited, her eyes bent upon the darkly outlined pergola, for some manifestation from the re-maining intruder. A man now walked rapidly toward the veranda, carrying a cloak on his arm. She recognized Armitage instantly. He doffed his hat and bowed. The lights of the house lamps shone full upon him, and she saw that he was laughing a little reathlessly.
"This is really fortunate, Miss Claiborne. I owe your house an apology, and if you will grant me audience I will offer it to you."

He threw the cloak over his shoulder and fanned himself with his hat. "You are a most informal person, Mr. Armitage," said Shirley coldly. "I'm afraid I am. The most amazing il luck follows me. I had dropped in o enjoy the quiet and charm of your to enjoy the quiet and charm of your garden, but the tranquil life is not for me. He was still laughing, but Shirley felt that he was again trying to make light of a serious situation, and a fur-ther tie of secrecy with Armitage was not to her liking. As he walked boldly to the veranda steps she stepped back from him.

"No, no! This is impossible. It will not do at all, Mr. Armitage. It is not kind of you to come here in this strange fashion."

She had undoubtedly gained information that Chauvenet had gone forth to seek; she had—and the thing was funny—served Chauvenet well in explaining away his presence in the mountains and getting him out of the clutches of the mountaineer, while at the same time she was learning for herself the fact of Armitage's whereabouts and keeping it from Chau-venet. It was a curious adventure, and she gave her hand smilingly to the mystified and still doubting mountain-"I give you my word of honor that "I give you my word of honor that neither man is a government officer and neither one has the slightest interest in you. Will you believe me?" "I reckon I got to, Miss." "Good, and now, Mr. Seifridge, it is growing dark, and I want you to walk down this trail with me until we come to the Storm Springs road." "I'll do it gladly, Miss." "Thank you. Now let us be off."

She made him turn back when they reached a point from which they could look upon the electric lights of the Springs colony and where the big hotel and its plazzas shone like a steam-ship at night. A moment later Chauve-net, who had waited impatiently, join-ed her, and they rode down together.

She referred at once to the affair with the mountaineer in her most frivolous people, but they're as loyal as the stars. And please let us never mention the matter again—not to any one, if you please, monsieur."

Chapter XVI HE judge and Mrs. Claiborne were dining

HE judge and Mrs. Claborne were dining with some old friends in the valley, and Shirley, left alone, carried to the table several letters that had come in the late mail. The events of the afternoon filled her mind, and she was not sorry to be alone. It occurred to her that she was building up a formidable tower of strange secreta, and she wondered whether, having begun by keeping her own counsel as to the attempts she had witnessed against John Armitage's life, she ought now to unfold all she knew to her father or to Dick. In the twentieth century homicide was not a common practice among men she knew or was likely to know, and the feeling of culpability for her slience crossed lances with a deepening sympathy for Armitage. She had learned where he was hiding, and she

Stellarton's baseball manager was last evening in telephone communication with our Halifar baseball manager. Stellarton now has a new pitcher and have otherwise strengthened their team and are anxious to again invade Halifax and face the team that defeated them here a week ago in two games, the first by the score of 5 to 3 and the second by the close score of 8 to 7.
There is likely to be a couple of changes in the Halifax team for the next game.
The Hyde Park team will likely visit the

ST. JOSEPH'S WINS LEAGUE.

Last night St. Joseph's won the Juvenille Baseball League by defeating St. Mary's by a score of 8 -5. St. Joseph's played their usual heady game, making only one error. For St. Mary's, R. Butler pitched a good game, but received poor backing. This league has excited much interest on account of the teams being so evenly matched, but it is generally admitted the best team won. Both teams played good ball throughout the season, St. Joseph's losing four and St. Mary's six games out of 24. St. Patrick's started off well, but went lame toward the finish.

the bodies recovered. Washington, D. C., Aug. 12.—The existence of a belief in President Wilson's mind that there was an organized effort to involve the United States and Mexico in war was conveyed in hints to callers at the White House yesterday who discussed the Mexican situation there.

The President, it was said, was inclined to agree with the accusation made in the A very sad accident is reported from seabright, St. Margaret's Bay, 23 miles rom Halifax, by which Ainsley Collishaw, his little son Edwin and nephew, Claude Allen, were drowned while out for a sail, shortly before 4 o'clock yesterday afteron. From information received from Mrs. Hubley, of the Seabright Hotel, the RECORDER is enabled to give the following articulars of the distressing catas-

The President, it was said, was inclined to agree with the accusation made in the Senate last Saturday by Senator John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, that an organized lobby was at work in Washington, with the object of forcing American intervention. Who is behind this suepected movement he was not prepared to say. particulars of the discressing catastrophe:

Mr. Collishaw, who was about 33 years of age, went out for a sall in a small bost early in the atternoon, and sometime afterward the weather becoming somewhat threatening Mr. Collishaw decided to return, as he had his three-year-old son and fiteen-year-old rephew with him. When off Collishaw Point a sudden squall upset the boat and all the occupants were thrown into the water. Mr. Collishaw endeavored to save both his son and nephew, but was unable to do so.

Several persons were on the shore at the time of the accident, and they immediately put out to render assistance and if possible to save them from meeting a watery grave. Little Edwin was secured, but the others had disappeared beneath the surface. The little boy was then taken immediately back to the shore, as there were still signs of life. Every possible means was used to resuscitate the lad, but without avail.

A search was then u ade for the bodies NEW YORK PASTOR Wedded at Trinity Methodist TORONTO, Aug. 12.—One of the bride-grooms at a double wedding at Trinity Methodist Church this morning was Rev. HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 12.—The Steel Jompany of Canada plant was visited by a disastrous fire last night, the loss being estimated at from $30,000 to $40,000. GRAVES-WAMBOLDT. At a quarter past six this morning the bells of Old St. Paul's rang out a merry bells of Old St. Paul's rang out a merry peel when the Ven. Archdeacon Armitage united in marriage George William Graves, Jr., an employee of J. A. Leaman & Co., and Miss Claudia Frances Anne Wamboldt, daughter of Alfred Wamboldt, of Moran St. The bride looked most charming in her travelling costume, as she was given away by her father. The young couple were unattended. The chosen witnesses for the church register were Wm. J. Ekins and Miss Lottie Wamboldt. Mr. and Mrs. Graves left by the Sydney express to spend their honeymoon in New Glasgow, followed by the best wishes of a large circle of friends. They will reside in Halifax. SOUTH SHIELDS, August 9.—Officers of the steamship Luciline, which has arrived the steamship Luciline, which has arrived here, deny the report that they saw the Titanic wreck, apparently resting on a ledge of rocks.

They saw during the voyage from Philadelphia wreckage consisting of part of a mast and gear probably attached to some submerged object, sixty miles southward of the site of the Titanic wreck.

They discredit the story that the Titanic rests on a submerged reef.

A Sweater Adds Zest

Occasion Like This

It's glorious, of course, to paddle when the sun is high in the heavens and you are basking in its rays; but when the sun has dipped below the horizon's rim and the surrounding air grows cool the Summer Girl slips her arms into a cosy, jaunty sweater-and contentedly keeps on paddling. There's nothing just as comfy as a sweater at such times;—so much better than a coat,

It has no lining, no padding,

It is next to nothing in weight.

It is easy and natural.

It will retain its shape even under most adverse oonditions.

—It is washable. -It is the ideal garment for the out-of-doors.

There are new ones here to look at. A dashing burnt orange in close ribbed knit; a deep purple, a natty cornflower blue, a slate, a tobacco, a sand

-all these come with a jaunty cap to match. The set, $5. A combination of stripes—Saxe and white, black and white, etc. with trimmings of plain color; crochet buttons. Jaegars, in white and colors, with and without collars, $5, $6, $7, $8

A fancy knit-navy, cardinal, white; d.b., with trimmings of plain color, comes at $3.25. A real Sports Coat, with detachable hood, is ticketed $5.75. Grey and tan are the colors. THE FRESH WATER WOLF. The Muskallonge is Built For Swift-

The Muskallonge is Built For Swiftness and Offensive Warferes.
The muskallonge has been called the bugganeer of the fresh water. He loves deep, cool lakes or swift, clear running waters. He is built for swiftness and offensive warfare. He is the natural enemy of all fishes, a ferce and dauntless marander. He is as a tiger in cunning and ferocity, and as ravenous as a wolf. He feeds on his own kind as readily as on any other spedies.

nous as a wolf. He feeds on his own kind as readily as on any other species.

Just why the muskallonge should strike at the nondescript troll of the fisherman no man knows, any more than he knows why the trout or salmon rises to a fly that looks not at all like a fly. It has been argued by muskallonge wise persons that he attacks it in a fit of anger, a spell of uncontrollable temper aroused by the intrusion of the object upon his sight while he is lying in wait for prey to come that way.

According to this belief the muskallonge, thus intent, is attracted by the shadow of the fisherman's boat as it steals along on the surface over his lurking place, and he cocks his eye up at it disapprovingly. Soon the glitter of the spoon on the fisherman's line comes along. That is too much. It is like the waving of a red flag at a bull. Instantly he rushes up and strikes it. Whatever may prompt this dash of the muskallonge on the fisherman's troll, when he strikes it and turns to dash back to his lair with the big hooks in his jaw it is as with the temper of Satan, and the resulting grapple with him by the fisherman is something to write epics about.

The Great Lakes are the natural home of this mighty game fish, and there are traditions of muskallonge weighing 100 pounds having been taken from those waters. The greatest targe of angling muskallonge waters is in the wonderful chain of lakes through Oanada.

Along toward the middle of July a propose the proper starge of the proper of the muskallonge waters in the wonderful chain of lakes through Oanada.

is in the wonderful chain of lakes through Canada.

Along toward the middle of July a curtious thing happens to the muskallonge. His teeth fall out. A sort of piscatorial Riggs disease seems to attack him. Naturally he loses flesh in the toothless season, and his inability to enjoy any of the good things that swim about him increase the savagery of his temper.

With the coming of September he has cut an entire new set of teeth, has cut an entire new set of teeth, and they are like knife blades set up and they are like kinter blades set up on edge in his jaws. Then he takes on new vigor, voraciousness and aggressiveness, with the memory of weeks of pent up fury and unappeased appetite to avenge. And then comes the angler's best opportunity with him.

Galt's G. O. M.

Galt's G. O. M.

The clotest male resident of Galt, Ont., is Nicholas Grenfell Kinsman. He was born in St. Day, Grunnuk Parish, Cornwall, England, on January 25th, 1819, so at the present time is in his 96th year.

Early in life he responded to the call within him for adventure and in 1844 went to Mexico where he engaged in work as an engineer at the Mineral Del Monte and other silver mines of that troublous and unhappy country. Here he led an exciting life and a story of the adventures and dangers he met with would read like a romance. Bandits and robbers roamed the country, and human life was safe, in many cases, only behind the shining muzale of a revolver or gun, In those days in Mexico men carried their lives in their hands.

He was there married to his present wife, the eldest daughter of Captain Joel Whitburn, in 1850, and consequently they have been man and wife for the long period of 64 years.

It was in the apping of 1858 that he came to Canada with his wife and two children and took up a home in Galt when the now prosperous town was nothing more than a straggling villegs. In Mexico he had gained a competence which assured him a good income for the remainder of his life, and during the years that passed he has enjoyed his well-earned prosperity.

Both Mr. Kinsman and his wife pos-

Duke Wouldn't Stand It.

The Duke of Connaught is quick to nail a lie. The other day a Canadian paper received a letter which tells its own story.

From Lt.-Col. H. O. Lowther, secretary to H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught—

"The attention of His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaugh has been called to a peragraph in The Daily Blank of June 25, headed, Prince Arthur is Unlucky, at Cards."

"His Royal Highness desires me to give an absolute denial to the statements contained in the said paragraph. Neither His Royal Highness himself nor Prince Arthur of Connaught were at Windsor Castle, or near it, during Ascot races, and Their Royal Highnesses never play cards for money except an occasion game of bridge for very modest stakes."

Three Capt. McNeills. Three Capt. McNeills went to sea with their ships from Montreal the other day. Capt. McNeill, a big burly Scotchman, took the Lettita to Glasgow; Capt. McNeill, an Irishman, commanded the C.P.B. One young officer got up and tried to tell a story. His imitation of the Sootch brogue was, however, painful. was married. She made aim aappy 101 another twelve years.

Wife number three was a widow when he met her by chance one morning in Oxford Street, but she was his wife by the afternoon of the day following. They never had a tiff or a cross word. His fourth wife, who only died last October, was courted and wed at similar express speed, and with like happy results.

The late George Gissing, the novelist, tiring of his lonely life in his "digs" in Islington, strolled out into the Marlebone Road, having previously made up his mind to propose to the first passable-looking woman he met. He carried out his resolution, and was accepted, but the resultant union was far from being a happy one. Better luck attended a somewhat similar venture on the part of a well-known author said journalist now living. Disgusted with a spoilt breakfast served one morning by a slatternly landlady, he sailled forth into the London streets in search of a girl who would marry him and "do" for him.

First of all he made a trip right round the underground" railway, stepping off at every station, and silently appraising the physical charms of the young ladies who dispensed cigars and eigarettes at the little klocks on the various platforms. He proposed to two of them, one at Charing Gross, the other at Earl's Court. Both of them laughingly declined. Probably they thought he was joking.

Nearly a Nursemaid.

Next he tried a nursemaid whom he scraped acquaintance with in Hyde Park. She seemed inclined to accept, but her mistress appeared unexpectedly upon the seene and the interview had to terminate prematurely.

Eventually he proposed to a barmaid whom he found disengaged during the slack hours of the afternoon behind the seloon bar of a well-known city tavern. She accepted him after some slight demur.

They were married two days later, and it is satisfactory to be able to add that their joint venture has turned out an unqualified success. In fact, although more than seven years have elapsed since then, their friends, and they are many, unite in agreeing that they are as happy and as well-matched a couple as any in England.

Quite recently a man who was temporarily deprived of his eyesight through an accident proposed to the nurse who was engaged to look after him. He had not seen her at the time, for the bandages had not been removed, but what he admired about her, he explained, was not her face or her figure, but the sweet, gentle tones of her voice. He was accepted, and the wedding took place as soon as he was sufficiently recovered to leave the hospital.

Beetle Tramps Vagabondage is not restricted to the human species. Insects, it has been discovered, can compete with the best in its members of the "derelict" class.

For instance, a kind of water-beetle, who, by all the laws of bestledom, should dwell in our own island, has crossed the "foaming main"—by what means is not known—and is now to crossed the "foaming main"—by what means, is not known—and is now to be found perfectly at home in the beautiful isle of Japan. It was also discovered, about two years ago, that a certain beetle, becoming, it is supposed, disgusted with the south-east coast of England, had removed its patronage to the Isle of Man—for what reason none width determine.

In a similarly inscrutable and mys In a similarly inscritable and mysterious manner, a mountain-beetle has, of recent years, descended to the plains, and was a little while ago uncarthed at Deal. It would, therefore, appear that even beetles indulge in seaside holidays.

But there is one—and only one, it is true—steadfastly patriotic beetle still left in England; it is the silver-beetle, and is only to be seen on the south-east Why Postmen Are Thin.

Has it ever struck you why a stout postman is such a rarity? The question s worth attention A postman who in a busy London re-sidental district walks from fourteen to

A postman who in a busy London residental district walks from fourteen to sixteen miles a day, starts out in the morning with mails weighing something like eighty pounds. As his letters and packages are distributed, the weight of his bag, of course, grows less, so that the average weight he carries during his trip is forty pounds. A pint of water weighs a pound. A ten-quart pail weighs about twenty pounds, and the average weight the postman carries is equal to two of these. If you want to know why postmen are thin, try a fifteen-mile walk with a ten-quart pail of water in each hand.

The driver of a brewery wagon, on the other hand, is the start on the seat of his dray most of the day, and often consumes large quantities of liquid. Policemen, too, often grow fat through standing about on their beats.

A Big Picnic. A Big Pionic.

Two hundred thousand school children were entertained by the Glasgow Corporation, Scotland. The guests included all pupils within the recently extended city. Fifty-five thousand infants were treated at the schools, while the seniors were conveyed to thirty-three parks, and later amused by Punch and Judy and other shows and sports.

CURING BAD HABITS.

Try a Little Self Hypnotism on You In a large eastern city is a professional hypnotist who has a wide reputation for curing the habit of intemperance. His method is dirt simple. "There is no real hypnotism about it "There is no real hypnorism about it—unless it is a matter of self hypno-tism," this professor once said. "I simply observe the mind process of the man that drinks and advise him how to reverse it. The subconscious solil-oquy in the mind of the man that Academy Fruit Store, cor. Barrington and drinks runs something like this:
"When did I have my last ball?
Whew! Long as that! I don't see how I stood it so long. Wouldn't have thought it possible.' And so on the victim repeats to himself on the prin-ciple that he needs this periodical stimulant just as it is necessary to heap coal on to fire to keep it from burning out. In a word, that man self hypnotizes himself into the belief that he needs a drink.

"My advice to cure this craving is not to fight the appetite, but to fight down the cause that leads to the appetite. Let a man repeat to himsel over and over again: "I really don't need this drink. If I take it, it's simply a matter of pouring so much down my throat superfucusly, for I could get along without. Before long he will be surprised how instead of hyp-notizing himself into drink he will hypnotize himself out of it." Simple, isn't it? But if this sell hypnotism or whatever you choose to call it is a cure for intemperance why is it not equally a recipe for curing other bad habits?—Chicago Tribune.

By using subtle touches of misery and calculated effects of disease and dismemberment the beggan became a master of pathetic appeal.

A delightful story of Dupre, the sculptor, is quoted by Hamilton W. Mabie in the Outlook. For Un ted States 2. 1.00 2.10-7.45

Looking out of his window in a ho-tel one bleak wintry morning in the good old times, Dupre saw an old beggar sitting barefooted on the stone steps below. His heart was moved with compassion, and he began to search for a pair of shoes. He found two pairs, one of them new. "Do not give the new pair away; ou will need them yourself," urged

"Do not give the new pair away; you will need them yourself," urged his prudent wife.

"No," said the sculptor, "I shall find the old pair more comfortable. Moreover, if 1 am to give anything away I am going to give the best I have."
So he hurried downstairs and nut the ### DUE #05 PELIVERY
