Life's Lot.

BY THE DEAN OF CANTERBURY.

I know not if the dark or bright

Shall be my lot;

If that wherein my soul delight

Be best or not.

It may be mine to drag for years

Till the heavy chain;

Or day and night my meat be tears

On bed of pain.

Dear faces may surround my hearth

With smiles and glee;

Or I may dwell alone, and mirth

Be strange to me.

My bark is wafted to the strand

By breath divine,

And on the helm there rest a hand

Other than mine.

One who has known in storms to sail

I have on board;

Above the raging of the gale

I hear my Lord.

He holds me with the willow's might—

I shall not fall;

If sharp, 'tis short; if long, 'tis light;

He tempers all.

Safe to the land—safe to the land,

The end is this;

And then with Him go hand in hand

Far into bliss.

CURING THE SULK.

BY MARIE LOUISE HAYDEN.

What is it, Hal? I asked of my handsome nephew as he came into my cozy smoking-room, and tossing his cap upon the table, threw himself into the chair which I had bought for his own particular use, and which always stood in a cozy angle in my smoking-room. Hal Duffey was a favorite nephew of mine, and had always lived with me since my sister died, which was when he was about four years old, so that I grew to love him as my own, and when I die I mean to leave him a hundred thousand, well secured. He had always been with me until about four weeks previous to the opening of my story. At that time he had got married, and set up an establishment for himself.

His wife was a handsome, sparkling, little woman, scarcely twenty, very fond of Hal, and he—well, he fairly idolized her. I could not account for the cloud upon his brow as he entered my room, and threw himself into his chair so gloomily. He did not immediately answer my question, and I repeated it.

Really, uncle! I don't know as I ought to mention it, but the same thing has occurred several times since I have been married, and as I always come to you for relief from anything that troubles me, I suppose it was the mere force of habit that led me here to-night. I smoked away in silence, well knowing that Hal would soon free his mind of whatever it was that troubled him. I passed him another cigar and he continued:

Between you and me, Emma has an unaccountable habit of refusing to speak whenever anything occurs to displease her. You must know that I would not have anything of the kind happen, but she is so sensitive or something, the first thing I know she will be sulked at something, and I cannot coax her to speak one word to me, either good, bad, or indifferent.

At first she would only remain in this state for an hour or so, but every time she is vexed, she lasts longer, until, to-day, she has not spoken a word, not even looked at me; and all because I could not go over to Toby's Island strawberrying with a party of our friends. Of course I wished to go very much, but had business at the store that must be attended to to-day. I told her so, kindly, and added my regrets that I could not accompany her, but she told her to go if she thought she should enjoy it, and I would recompense her for the disappointment by taking a drive into the country to-morrow afternoon. Before I had finished speaking she had grown silent, her mouth was drawn up very firmly, a frown contracted her pretty brows, and her head was advanced about six inches in front of its usual position. I could not help smiling as I looked at her, although I felt a little vexed. At dinner time she spoke not a word, nor has she opened her lips in my presence since.

My boy, your wife has the sulks!

The what? I asked.

The sulks, I answered.

And what is the sulks? Hal asked, with such gravity that I roared with laughter, and answered:

It is a habit, resulting from the failure of a child's mother to apply a 'birch' when the signs of rebellion first appear. I have had some experience with this disease, (quite common among women) and will tell you how I cured my little wife of sulking.

Do so for Heaven's sake, and if I can be equally successful I shall be the happiest man alive. Emma is all any man could ask for, with the exception of this habit, which is the only cloud to shadow our domestic sky.

I will tell you the story of my own experience. Hal, and you may follow my example or not, just as you think best, I answered.

When I was a young man, I became attached to a very sweet girl. Her name was Bessie Reed; you have seen her picture in the oval case in my private desk, the face you thought so beautiful. There was only one fault with Bessie, she was quick-tempered, would fly in a passion in an instant, and say a few hasty words; but laugh before she had finished them, and be as smiling as ever, a moment after.

I feared this temper would mar our domestic happiness should I marry her, and as I had never spoken to her of love, I absented myself from her home soon after I became aware of this quick temper of Bessie.

Soon after I became acquainted with Mary Stanley. She was always amiable, even-tempered, and being quite attractive, I soon became interested in her and asked her to be my wife, thinking I could do no better. About this time I received a letter from my brother Paul, saying that he was about to be married to Bessie Reed. He wrote, Bessie pined for a long time after you went away, and we all felt as if you were the cause of her pale face and sadness. So mother and the girls tried to comfort her, and invited her down to the farm quite often. It fell to me to see her home, and for a long time, I never thought of loving or marrying her, I was so much older than she; but one day I was thinking of her pretty ways, and at once flashed into my mind, Mary, marry yourself. That evening I asked her to be my wife, and she told me that she did care a great deal for you when you went away, but she loved me a thousand times better. So we are to be married on Thanksgiving day, and remain at the old home for awhile.

I was engaged to be married to Mary on that day, and we were both married in church together. Paul and Bessie first, and I afterward. Hang it! I had rather have taken Bessie, quick temper and all, instead of Mary. After we were married, and settled down to a sober life, Paul proposed that we buy a farm together and settle for life. He did so, and it was in contrast to Bessie's disposition that the alarming sulks of my wife seemed unbearable.

Bessie would get mad, and sputter for a minute, then it was all over, and Paul would only laugh at the 'dear little under-box' as he called her.

But Mary, who never gave me a word in the least unkind, would sulk for days together. I bore it about a year, and then I resolved to punish her, and the very next time she subsided into a sulky fit, happened to be one day when she was expecting company; I believe I did not bring a new dressing-bureau I had promised her. I forgot it. She refused to speak.

Madam, said I, you have played this game nearly a year. I have borne it in silence. Now you may speak or not, just as you think right.

With that I commenced. I tumbled the bed down stairs, I ripped up carpets, broke chairs, broke the mirrors, upset the china in the closets, and looked at Mary, she was standing back toward me, looking as if nothing had happened.

Mary, said I, you shall see the last thing in this house destroyed, and I resolved to punish her, and the very next time she subsided into a sulky fit, happened to be one day when she was expecting company; I believe I did not bring a new dressing-bureau I had promised her. I forgot it. She refused to speak.

No answer. I followed her up stairs to her room. She seated herself in the midst of the confusion, while I advanced to her wardrobe. Rip! went the skirt of her new silk dress, cut completely across, her new cloak came next; it came both sleeves just above the elbow. Her ban-box next met my eye with a tremendous crash my foot found the bottom of the box, completing the ruin of twenty-five dollars worth of millinery, only yesterday brought home. I was in the act of taking down another dress, when she spoke:

Really, husband, you are too bad, this does no manner of good, and you have already ruined several hundred dollars worth of property.

I replied, you have an exhibition of my temper, Mary. Yours is still worse, and whenever you choose to sulk, I shall choose to smash. As long as my money holds out to replace the broken articles, you will not think, but after it is gone you will not think it pays to sulk.

As I finished speaking, Mary came to me and placing both hands on my shoulders, said:

My dear husband, I am completely cured, I will never be sulky again.

And of course I kissed her and we made up and after that, if she showed any signs of sulking, I would just say, I must break up house-keeping, when she would grow smiling, and all would be fought again. After that she was as good a wife to me as Bessie was to Paul, although she did not hold her color as well.

I have a good mind to try your plan with Emma, said Hal, half to himself.

As you please about it, I returned.

Hal arose and looking at his watch, remarked that it was nearly ten, and bidding me a hasty "good night," departed. He went directly home and found Emma in bed, face to the wall, while three fourths of the bed was left for his use.

He said, you have retired early, my love. Not a word of reply from the figure in the bed. He thought she might be asleep, and bent over her lightly and pressed his lips to her forehead. She pushed him from her angrily, but said nothing. Then Hal spoke:

Emma! I have been shocked beyond measure by your exhibition of temper—sulky temper! I have also a very troublesome disposition—it only shows itself when sulks are about I always rave, and smash things when I am excited.

He went to the handsome mirror and smashed the beautiful glass in a hundred fragments. Emma sat bolt upright in bed for a moment. Hal turned to the closet where she kept her wearing apparel, and after considerable damage to her fine clothes, turned to the bed with the wedding cushion in his hand. Heavens! Emma was not there! He went to the door. It was locked on the outside. In a few moments he heard footsteps on the stairs. Heavy steps, they were too, another moment and a loud knock was heard upon the door.

Hal asked, What do you want? I am a policeman, and I have orders for your arrest. Go away about your business. I won't! I go away about your business.

My business is here until I have secured your body! I open, I say.

Hal stormed, and after a little further parley, the door was burst open, and Hal was made a prisoner, and marched off to the lock-up, where he passed the remainder of the night. Emma, meanwhile protesting with tears, that she was afraid of him. He had come home drunk, and the appearance of the room seemed to justify her assertions.

The next morning the affair was hushed up and was never made public, but Hal has never since undertaken to cure Emma of the sulks, and really, she does not need to be cured; for she does not sulk now, for Hal is a most obedient husband without. All woman wants is to be petted and caressed, and Hal probably by thus early yielding the reins of government to his wife! That night in the station house, cured him of curing his wife of the "sulks."

The Farmer's Garden.

WHAT, WHEN, AND HOW TO PLANT AND SOW.

We can do no more in our brief space than to give some general hints upon these points. For the germination of seeds, heat, air and moisture are essential; and for any growth, light is also necessary. Plants differ very much in the temperature necessary for the germination of their seeds. We have seen rye throw out roots 2 or 3 inches long in blocks of ice in an ice house, and actually penetrate the ice so as to break off by pulling them, and rye no doubt makes some growth under the snow. The snow drop grows up even through snow. Indian corn, on the other hand, will not grow at a temperature much, if any below sixty degrees and will rot in the ground at fifty five degrees. We think Indian corn may be taken as a fair type of many garden plants we may call tender, and which perish by even slight frost. Robust plants, however, like corn and potatoes, often have their tops killed to the ground by frost, and yet grow again.

Among the plants that are uninjured by frost, and therefore may be planted early, are the pea, beet, carrot, cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce, parsnip, onions, celery, radish, turnip and spinach. Among those which are tender and suffer by frost, are the bean of all kinds, corn, melon, cucumber, squash, tomato, nasturtium, okra, egg plant and pepper.

THE SOIL SHOULD BE FINE AND FRESH.

There is a sort of fermentation induced in the ground by stirring it and the conditions heat and moisture are best met by putting in the seed just after moving the soil, as by opening furrows with the plough, or hills with the hoe. With the small seeds like the corn, which is very sensitive, this is very important. If the soil is not fine, light soil contains more air and moisture than a coarse lumpy soil.

DEPTH OF PLANTING.

Small seeds are often smothered by too deep covering. Beets and mangold, rough as they look, may be kept from vegetation by one inch of light earth pressed lightly upon them. They, and nearly all small seeds, should be covered from one fourth to one half inch only and the earth lightly pressed down with a spade or very light roller. In our list above, we think all those named are better covered one half inch or less, rather than more, except peas and corn. If the soil is very dry and light, seeds may be planted a little deeper than is otherwise proper.

Given at our Court at Windsor Castle, this 22d day of May, in the year of our Lord, 1867, and in the 30th year of our reign.—
God save the Queen

A lady fainted a few days since in the cars. A medical gentleman being present went to her relief, exclaimed: "Has any gentleman a flask of whiskey or brandy? Over thirty pistols flashed in the air at once."

LOCAL ENTERPRIZE.—The Sackville correspondent of the Farmer writes:—

"Speaking of hay reminds me that an effort has been made to get our hay trade on a better footing. Messrs. Lindsay & Vickie, dry goods merchants of Sackville, feeling their own prosperity depended largely upon the prosperity of the farmers by whom they were surrounded, resolved last Fall to try the experiment of exporting hay to a foreign market. They at once put up a large barn, and set a Beater Press at work in it, giving $8 per ton for hay delivered at their farm. They have shipped since they began, about two hundred tons, and now seem quite sanguine that their business will pay. Messrs. Lindsay & Vickie are young men just starting in life, and they deserve a great deal of praise for the energy they have shown."

FLOUR TO THE LOWER PROVINCES.—The Commissariat Department at Halifax, Nova Scotia, advertise to day for 2000 barrels of flour for the troops in that city. The idea of advertising here for flour required by the Government for the troops in Nova Scotia is a new idea, but undoubtedly a good one; as, aside from drawing Canadian dealers into competition with the Lower Province merchants, it will tend to lead our merchants to make enlarged business transactions with the Lower Provinces.—Toronto Globe.

A Yankee genius cut wood, conceiving that a little powder thrown upon some green wood would facilitate its burning, directed a small stream upon the smoking pile; and not possessing a hand sufficiently quick to cut this off at a desirable moment, he was blown into pieces. The coroner thus reasoned out the verdict:

"It can't be called suicide, because he didn't mean to kill himself, it wasn't visitation of God, because he wasn't struck by lightning, he didn't die for the want of breath, for he hadn't anything left to breathe with. It is plain he didn't know what he was about, so I shall issue an inquest for the want of common sense."

A Scotchman having hired himself to a farmer, had a cheese set before him that he might help himself. After some time master said, "Sandy, you took a long time to breakfast!" "In truth, master," said Sandy, "a cheese of this size is na' eaten save soon as ye may think!"

"I say, Jones, how is it that your wife dresses so magnificently, and it always appears out at the elbow? Jones (impressively and significantly)—"You see, Thompson, my wife dresses according to the Gazette of Fashion, and I dress according to my Ledger!"

"I want to buy a sewing machine, said an old lady, entering a shop—"Do you wish a machine with a feller?" inquired the clerk. "Sakes, no! I don't want any of your fellers about me."

Some editor says that the destiny of the world often hangs on the smallest trifles. A little mist between Charles Bonaparte and his love Letitia might have broken off a marriage which gave birth to Napoleon and Waterloo. To which the Chicago Advertiser says: "Yes, that is a fact. Suppose a 'little mist' had taken place between Adam and Eve! What then?"

A shawl sold in the New York for $3000. In the same city women make shirts for a shilling apiece.

One of the saddest things about human nature is, that a man may guide others in the path of life without walking in it himself, that he may be a pilot, and yet a castaway.

The iron frame work of a new roof in Buffalo fell recently, killing four persons and seriously wounding fourteen others.

A new Arctic expedition is fitting out in Denmark for the exploration of the interior of Greenland.

A Minnesota man, realized from his wheat crop last year more than twice the amount paid for his farm the year before.

To REMOVE WARTS.—Children are liable to the disgusting excrescences on the hands, which spread if not immediately attended to. They may be removed by dissolving washing soda in water to the consistency of cream, and applying it to the warts regularly night and morning.

An old lady of ninety is building a handsome house in Rockford, Ill., in which to spend the remainder of her days.

TELEGRAPHIC.

Paris, June 6. Another attempt upon the life of the Emperor Louis Napoleon was made to day, while he was returning from a grand review in Champs Elysees, which took place this afternoon in honor of his Imperial visitor the Czar of Russia, who accompanied him.

Dublin, June 6. The Fenians who were arrested a few days since when attempting a landing in Dungarven, County Waterford, that they were from Boston Massachusetts.

London, June 6. Lord Russ chief secretary for Ireland, announced in the House of Commons to night that the sentences of all the convicted Fenians have been commuted.

Frederickton, June 6. In the Assembly the first thing done this morning was to refer the Bill to incorporate the St. Andrew's Deep Sea Wireless and Railway Company. Progress was reported.

St. Andrew's, June 6. Several new mail routes have been opened in districts which have not hitherto enjoyed the privilege of Post Offices, and the number of trips increased. The Postmaster General recommends some improvements which will meet with the unanimous approval of the Public.

St. Andrew's, June 6. After a lengthy debate, Surveyor General got before the House a motion refused yesterday, to take up in committee, two days hence a petition for aid to Woodstock Bridge Company.

St. Andrew's, June 6. The Auditor General's Report is made up with much care, and shows how the money goes. The Chief Commissioner of Public Works—the Chief Superintendent of Schools, and the Militia Reports for 1865, have also been received, and will be noticed in future issues.

St. Andrew's, June 6. The Revenue Bill introduced by the Provincial Secretary has also passed; the duty on certain articles required by our manufacturers, has been removed, placing them on an equal footing with those of other parts of the Dominion in foreign markets.

The bill introduced by Mr. Chandler to repeal the Act relieving the port of St. Stephen from export duty on lumber passed the House on Monday by a large majority, only four voting against it.

The Commissioner of Streets has a number of men at work repairing and building culverts, and making up the streets. We beg to direct his attention to the upper streets, as the water tables are filled up and the sidewalks require something done to them, as they have been untouched for some years.

London, June 10. Despatches from Paris and St. Petersburg state that there is great rejoicing in France and Russia at the escape of the Czar from assassination. The Poles everywhere display all connection or sympathy with the crime.

The "modus operandi" of the hay-rake swindlers is ingenious, to say the least. They sell a right to a farmer for $100 and take his note, on the agreement that if the buyer doesn't make $200 in a year on his purchase, they will give up the note.

An English scientific paper describes a steamer, which is to go in search of Dr. Livingstone. It will be built exclusively of steel and charcoal iron plates, one sixteenth of an inch in thickness.

The late Capt. Stoop. A tourist who visited the Cemetery at Richmond, Virginia, last month, states that he saw the grave of our former young townsman, Capt. John Stoop of C. S. A. heavy Artillery, who like others, yielded up his life in defence of the South.

By Cable despatch dated Dublin June 10, we learn that two prominent Fenians were arrested at Dungarvon who proved to be Col. Nagle and Warren! The latter was on the lines during the attempted raid a year ago—These worthies are in safe keeping now.

Several of these Bills passed the Council and will receive the Administrator of the Government's assent this week.

ST. ANDREW'S, JUNE 12, 1867.

Public Documents.

The Annual Report of the Postmaster General for 1866 is before us, and is made up with much care. The Hon. J. McMillan not only understands, but performs his duty. Several new mail routes have been opened in districts which have not hitherto enjoyed the privilege of Post Offices, and the number of trips increased.

Among them we may mention a reduction in letter postage between the United States and the Province from 10 to 5 cents; a reduction has already been made in postage of books, pamphlets, &c. He also suggests that "all mail matter must be prepaid by Postal Stamps," this suggestion is based on the fact that from the returns compiled in his office, he finds that 80 per cent. of the correspondences passing through the Post is prepaid. He gives other cogent reasons for the principle being adopted, and observes that "the experience of other countries goes to show that a low rate of postage has invariably increased the revenue."

The CROWN LAND Report for the past year has also been received. The Surveyor General Hon. C. Conell has undoubtedly given the public a vast amount of information, going back for some years, showing the amount of lands sold, and he makes some capital suggestions respecting the future management of the public domain. The Report also contains the rules for the government of the Crown Land Department, an excellent Map showing in colours the ungranted lands in the several counties. The total receipts for 1866 were $41,031.07, being an increase over 1865 of $18,434.55. The mileage on timber lands which is now $4 per square mile Mr. Conell believes might be safely reduced, and he proposes to repeal the credit system. Under the Labor Act 449 persons had applied and were approved to settle under the Act in this Province. Several suggestions are made which we cannot notice at present.

The Auditor General's Report is made up with much care, and shows how the money goes. The Chief Commissioner of Public Works—the Chief Superintendent of Schools, and the Militia Reports for 1865, have also been received, and will be noticed in future issues. On glancing over the Adjutant General's Report, we were surprised to notice, that no mention is made of Col. Anderson, his services, or his able reports, as Governor Gordon termed them.

THE LEGISLATURE

Is drawing to a close. Several Bills have been passed; an important one, to extend the Jail limits to the full extent of each County in the Province, passed in the House on the 7th inst. Its provisions do not extend to any debts heretofore made or at present existing. The Bill to close up the old burying grounds in this place has also become law.

The Revenue Bill introduced by the Provincial Secretary has also passed; the duty on certain articles required by our manufacturers, has been removed, placing them on an equal footing with those of other parts of the Dominion in foreign markets. The duty on tea, alcohol and some other articles has been increased, so as to assimilate our tariff with Canada.

The old Bankrupt Act with amendments has been revived; and a Bill providing all trials of civil suits before Magistrates, take place in the Parish where the plaintiff and defendant resides, has been agreed to; this will answer the ends of justice better than the former practice.

The Western Extension Bill also passed a third reading. Several of these Bills passed the Council and will receive the Administrator of the Government's assent this week.

The bill introduced by Mr. Chandler to repeal the Act relieving the port of St. Stephen from export duty on lumber passed the House on Monday by a large majority, only four voting against it.

The Commissioner of Streets has a number of men at work repairing and building culverts, and making up the streets. We beg to direct his attention to the upper streets, as the water tables are filled up and the sidewalks require something done to them, as they have been untouched for some years.
