MR. DONOVAN WINS

When the votes recorded on Monday were counted Mr A. E. Donovan was found to have been elected by a majority of 325. It was a very quiet election, free from any exhibitions of the votes and Hunter—great in the interest they arroused in Athens and for many will a roused in Athens and for many supporters escorted him from the Conservative committee rooms to Victoria Hall. Fireworks all along King street and the music of the 41st Batt. street and the music of the 41st Batt.

In Athens in the evening three big bonfires blazed, while groups of young men and boys sang popular songs or cheered for the successful candidate. The result of the polling was as

THE CAMPAIGN MEETINGS

The political meetings held here last week were attended by comparatively small numbers, owing to the evangelis tic services being in progress at the

On Thursday evening the speakers the choir sang with feeling expression were Messrs. G. A. Wright and H. "God be with you till we meet again." Stewarr of Brockville and the Conservative candidate, Mr. A. E. Dono van. Mr Thomas Berney occupied the chair, and seated with him on the platform was Mr A, W. Johnston, president of the Conservative Association of Rear Yonge and Escott.

On Friday evening Mr W. G. Parish presided over a meeting at which the speakers were Rev F. Chishom of Elgin, Messrs James Cumming of Lyn, W. A. Lewis, the Liberal candidate, and Mr A. G. McKay, the recently selected Liberal leader in Ontario. The Hon. Geo. P. Graham was also on the platform and many expected a political speech from him, but in this they were disappointed, for he con fined his remarks strictly to an intro duction of Mr A. G. McKay.

At these meetings the addresses re exceptionally good, probably equal to the best ever delivered in a campaign in this riding. Of Mr McKay we should make special men tion. His address stamped him as one of Canada's most gifted sons. Possessed of a fine physique, pleasing in manner, a full, rich voice, eloquent, aggressive, forceful, he has all the qualities of an ideal leader, and the people of Ontario, irrespective of party, should welcome to the public service of this province agrees with Mr McKay's policy or not, winter. one could hardly help admiring his evident sincerity and able advocacy.

Sudden changes of weather are especially trying, and probably to none more so than to the scrofulous and consumptive. The progress of scrofula during a normal October is commonly great. We never think of scroffula-its bunches, cutaneous eruptions, and wasting of the bodily substance-without thinking of the great good many sufferers from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose radical and and permanent cures of this one disease are enough to make it the most famous medicine in the morld. There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in arresting and con pretely eradicating scrotula, which is almost as serious and as maten to be eared as its near relative-consumption

The singing of the union choir was an effective feature of the meetings, at times swelling into a great volume of harmony, as some triumphaut note was struck, and again sounding so soft and low as to serve only as a sweet accompaniment to the pleadings of the evangelists. Mr Crossley's solos were great ly enjoyed, and valuable aid to the song service was rendered by Mr War ren of Elgin and Rev. J. E. Blanch ard of Montreal.

The good by e services were held on Sunday by Rev. Mr Hunter, Rev. Mr Crossley having gone to Whitby to open their series of services there. It was a great day in the religious life of this community. Three union services were held in the Methodist church and over eight hundred attended each meet ing. In the evening the pastors of the Holiness Movement, the Presbyterian and the Methodist churches took part in the services. Following a beautiful song service, and address by Rev. Mr Hunter, the good byes were said, and as the large audience left the building the choir sang with feeling expression

Just before closing, Rev. Mr Hunter would be continued in Athens by the Rev. Mr Russell, an evangelist of the Presbyterian church, commencing on Tuesday evening of this week.

CONGRATULATIONS

The Reporter has pleasure in congratulating our townsman, Mr. A. E. Donovan, on his election as representa tive of Brockville riding in the Ontario Legislature. The contest was fairly fought by both sides, so far as we have been able to learn, and the result is highly creditable to Mr Donovan's personal popularity as well as being a strong endorsation of the government's record. He goes to strengthen an already strong government, but even under these conditions his ability is such as to secure him prominence and recognition in the councils of his party.

From reports received at the office of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance at Toronto, it is learned that there is likely to be another tremendous Local Option campaign in the Whether one Province of Ontario this fall and Campaigns are now well advanced in 89 municipalities, of which 35 are incorporated towns and villages. It is likely that there will be additions to this list.

Within the past six years, 191 municipalities have polled a majority for Local Option bylaws. Last year the three fitths requirement prevented it coming into force in 44 of these municipalities, and in some other places the bylaws were quashed in the courts, but the law is in force in 153 municipalities and there are 133 other municipalities in the province in which no licenses are granted for various

A striking feature of Local Option bylaws is that when passed they stay passed. Last year there were 84 municipalities in which bylaws had been in force for three years and where a repeal vote could have been brought on. In 8 places repeal was tried but in only I was it successful.

God has His own way of calling, and calls in many ways. Elijah did not hear God in the fire, wind or earthquake, but in the still, small voice. Some will not hear till the Lord comes very near to them and speaks dreadfully in their ears, as with the voice of thunder to wake the dead. The death of a child or other dear one some-times appears to be the voice of God to call sleeping or resisting souls into His service. The Lord seems often to call persons by name, as He called Samuel, and many others who have personal intimations, of the Divine inter-

Degrees in Glory.

Did He mean to tell them that the office of dispensing those glories was not His, but another's? Surely not; for the Son of Man will dispense them as the Judge at the last day. Did He mean the Judge at the last day. Did He mean to say that He had no authority of His own to give away the glories of heaven? Surely not; for there is given to Him authority: "All judgment is committed to Him, because he is the Son of Man." NEW CONDITIONS IN SELLING MEAT.

FARMERS WILL DO WELL TO TAKE NOTE OF THE INSPECTION ACT.

Ottawa Oct. 7.—The custom prevailing among farmers throughout Canada of slaughtering animals, particularly swine, upon their own premises and sell ing the dressed carcasses on the local market, is one which entails more or less loss to the producer. Before the advent of packing establishments, the domestic trade was supplied by the local butchers, who were necessarily compelled to provide for future supplies, and, as a result, the local markets were created. vide for future supplies, and, as a result, the local markets were created. Conditions have changed, however, the local dealers no longer supplying the domestic trade, which has passed into the hands of the packing houses, which are now the distribiting centres for meats. Packers can afford to, and actually do, pay higher prices and sell at lower values than the local butchers for reasons which are obvious when conreasons which are obvious when considers that profits are represente the by-products. The packers are ad verse to buying dressed carcases as they represent smaller profits in by-pro-ducts. Again, dressed carcases are im-perfectly handled by the farmer, the meat in many cases being bruised and meat in many cases being bruised and unsightly, this, as well as the improper chilling, being deter ent to good prices. Animals, especially hogs, require scientific chilling, otherwise those parts which particularly during the fall and winter in dressed pork, as well as in other dress ed meats, attention may be directed to one of the regulations made under the new Meat Inspection Act, which is likely to have a considerable effect on the business above referred to. The Departmen ness above referred to. The Department of Agriculture at Ottawa having assumed the responsibility of inspecting and practically guaranteeing the healthfulness of all meats and meat products sent out by the packing houses, must, of necessity, protect itself by making sure that no diseased carcasses are permitted to enter these establishments. The most effective way of preventing the entry of such diseased meat is, of course the careful ante-mortem inspection provided for by the regulations, but in view of the large trade carried on in dressed car-casses and of the fact that both farmers and packers have been in the habit of handling meats in this way, the officials in charge of the enforcement of the act have decided to admit to the establishments under inspection dressed carcasses under such conditions as will enable them to judge with reasonable certainty as to whether the animal, prior to also the property was free from discase. slaughter, was free from disease. Provision has therefore been made for the admission on inspection of dressed car-casses with the head, heart, lungs and liver held by their natural attachments, such carcasses to be inspected before en-tering the establishment, and if found fit for food to be so marked and ad-mitted for packing purposes, while if found to be diseased, to be condemned

This being the case, it is incumbent on every farmer bringing dressed hogs of other animals to market to remember that unless the carcasses are dressed in ccordance with the regulation mentio above, namely, with these organs left in their proper positions, it will not be possible for the representatives of the packing houses to buy such carcasses for use in any of the establishments coming under the operation of the Meat and extent, a safeguard against possible attempts by local combinations of butchers and others to depress the price of dressed meats, and it will be well for produced meats, and it will be well for produced who tied the knot so long as it was tied, ducers to bear in mind the new conditions and when, for any reason, unable to market their stock on the hoof as they should undoubtedly do whenever pasible, dress their hogs, as well as other animals in such a way as to meet the requirements of the new act.

New York, Oct. 7.-Forman announ nent of the engagement of Miss Gladys Vanderlibt, daughter of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, to Count Laszlo Szie chenyi, of Budapest, is made in the Herald to-day. THE UNWORLDLY CHURCH

The Only One That Can Dominate the Future.

Richmond, Va.. Oct. 7.—In a sermon in Holy Trinity Church during the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of Anglican Christianity in America the Lord Bishop of London, gave his idea of the characteristics which the Church that shall dominate the future must possess.

The most evangelistic, the most catholic, the most orthodox Church, he said, will produce no effect upon the world if it is not clearly and unmistakably, and before all the world, unworldly itself. Bear with me, then, when I say as my last word, that the greatest dan-ger of the church on both sides of the Atlantic is worldliness. In one sense it is impossible for the church to mix too freely with the world. Into the slums of East London, into the business of Wall street, into the mining camps at the Klondike, the church must go, and no human interest in the world is outside the interest of the church.

"But, on the other hand, to run church simply as a man runs a successful business is to spell ruin and failure and shame for the most orthodox church in the world."

Sheep and Lambs—The run was one of the largest of the season, and, like all other classes, there was a large percentage of poor quality, which sold at the lowest prices of the season. Export ewes sold at $4.25 to $4.40; rams at $3 to $3.50 per cwt.; lambs sold from $4 to $5.70 per cwt. but the latter price was for selected lots. Those sold at $4 per cwt. were culls, one drover taking a double deck of these back to the country to deck of these back to the country to feed. As usual. 90 per cent, of all the Hoge—Like everything else, the quality of many of the hogs was not good Since peas have gone to 80c and over per bushel, and barley 70c, the farmers bushel and barley 70c, the farmers are neglecting their best friend, the hog, and many of them do not see peas or bar-ley. Mr. Harris quotes selects at $6.12½, and culls at $5.50 per cwt.

And he gently unclasped her arms from around his neck, and sat

Father Goodrich came, and they all knelt and prayed together—except Norah—she, too, not to disturb them, knelt, but did not pray. And it was well they could not see her face, so full of anguish and rebellion. At last they arose, strengthened and comforted—ex-cept Norah!—who would not sak comcept Norah!-who would not ask comfort, who would have hurled it back in the face of angels, had it been offered.

A few minutes after this, the turnkey's tap at the door warned them that the final moment of separation had come. The priest went and spoke a few moments with that officer, then came and told O'Leary to get the parting over as soon as possible—the sooner it was done, the less painful it would be, he William got up and approached

CHAPTER VII. Daniel Hunter, like the majority of our most distinguished men, in every department of fame, sprang, as has been said, from the very humblest of the people. His immediate progenitor was a country blacksmith, in one of the west-ern and mountainous districts of M——, and the father of eleven children, six sons, of whom the future Governor of M——— was the third, and five daugh-dressed in deep mourning.

She was about eight years of age, but her superior height, the regal cast of her regular features, and the masses of long, jetty ringlets hanging down each side of her pale face, made her look two years older.

So strongly was Daniel Hunter at-tracted toward this beautiful, pale child that he spoke to her, thinking it no breach of etiquette to address a strange little girl on the deck of a packet boat; but the little lady deemed otherwise. Raising her jetty eyebrows with slight surprise, and glancing at him from the corners of her long, almost almond-shaped eyes, she moved slowly off.

The next afternoon, when the packet was entering the mouth of the P——o River, they were overtaken by one of those sudden squalls so frequent upon the bay. The skipper put his head down to the gangway, and vociferated to Daniel Hunter and the old man, his fellowpassenger:

Come, come and help us, or we shall all be fn h-1 in five minutes!" Daniel Hunter sprang at once upon he deck. But before a sail could be the deck. But before a sail could be reefed, the little vessel was driven furiously toward the shore and capsized. They were in the water, the skipper three men that formed his crew buffet the waves like lusty swimmers, and striking out for the shore.

Daniel Hunter looked wildly around the heaving, foaming waters for the old man and the child. The old man was never seen again, but the child was thrown up to the surface of the tossing waves. Daniel Hunter saw her cast her white arms wildly up and, uttering a strangling cry, sink again. He struck out like lightning for the spot where she arose, caught her as she was sinking, and, throwing her upon his shoulders, so that all but her face should be under water, he syam to the shore. The skipper and his three men were already there. There was no one missing—no one lost except the old man. Daniel Hunter left the gray on the beach to wait till the squall. crew on the beach to wait till the squall should pass, and right their vessel if they could, and, carrying his prize with him, ran across the barren coast toward a pine grove, from the midst of which he saw smoke ascending. Here he found a farm house, where every kind attention was given to the half-drowned child. It was with strange emotion that the youth gazed upon his "prize," as he instinctively considered her to be. All that he knew or guessed of her was that she was the child of the old man age—and that both were foreigners just arrived. From certain signs of penury in their dress and conduct, he had judged that they were without means, and probably without friends. And now he believed that the little, beautiful creature just cast upon his care would never be reclaimed from him again. And at that thought, despite the catastrophe that had given her to him, he felt a strong thrill of joy, of the proud joy of possession, such as, in boyhood, he had once felt in capturing alive, a beautiful eaglet! And standing over the sofa where she lay sleeping, he lifted the rich black ringlets and traced the pretty eyebrows, black, sleek and tapering as water-lecches, with the same sort of earnest delight that he once drew out the wings and gazed upon the bronzed and burnished plumage of the eaglet! He concluded thus: "Your father, Augusta, has not been seen since yester-

Her start of wild alarm, her gaze of intense anxiety, almost unmanned him; but he saw that the only thing proper to be done was to tell her the worst at once. He did so, as gently and considerately as possible, quite prepared for the wild outburst of sorrow that followed. And after this first outbreak of passionate grief it was pitiable to see how the little lady strove to maintain self-possession in the presence of strangers.

In the coarse of the day she said to

"I will ask you, sir, to be good enough to write to my aunt, and I suppose these good people will let me remain here until I hear from her—she will send for me, and pay them for their trouble."

The youth trembled for his "prize." He felt that under some circumstances t was possible to be guilty of an abduc-sized vessel had been righted, the little girl's relative, and at the same time informed her that she must accompany him home and remain under the care of his parents until her natural protectors nis parents until her natural protectors could be heard from. Nor was it auntil the farmer had totally declined such a charge that she consented to accompany. Daniel to his father's house. When the capsized vessel had been riughted, the little girl's trunk had been rescued, and the farmer's kind wife had opened it and overhauled its contents, and dried and ironed them, and then repacked them, to be in readiness when the travellers should set out again. In kind consideration of his charge, Daniel Hunter declined going upon the water again, and hired the farmer's carry-all to take them to B—, where they entered the stage-coach, which conveyed them the remainder of the integers of the conveyed. mainder of the journey to St. Inez.

Daniel Hunter's mother listened to the story of the squall and the capsized vessel with surprise and curiosity, and re-ceived the little orphan with much maternal tenderness.

As months slid into a year, and no letter had been received from England, the little girl was sent to a convent school for a long term of years, and Daniel Hunter, engrossed with his profession, and with politics—his passion—did not see his protege during all these years. It is true that he had not intended so to abandon her; he had purposed to visit her every year; but after missing the first annual visit it was easy to forego the succeeding ones. Besides, the formal half-yearly reports of the mother superior assured him of the maternal tenderness. the mother superior assured him of the health and progress of his little girl.

In the meantime, five years slipped away; Augusta was now nearly seventeen years of age. And at the close of the term, the mother superior, instead of sending her bill for the next half-year in advance, whether to remind Mr. Hunter sending her bill for the next half-year in advance, wrote to remind Mr. Hunter that the time for which he had entered his ward was up, and to know whether he intended to enter her for another term. This letter startled Daniel Hunter from his temporary forgetfulness. He had le t all interest in Augusta as a child and a plaything. The only remaining interest he felt in her was the generous one of a benefactor for the helpless object of his benevolence.

It was with mingled feelings he set out for the school to bring her home. Augusta had grown up, yet as he sat in parlor of The unique character of her noble countenance had not changed, except to mature in beauty, and there were the same long, jetty ringlets, only longer and more abundant.

He arose, smiling, to receive her. She advanced and placed both her hands in his, and raised her eyes ta his majestic countenance, instinct with power and goodness, and an overwhelming but and goodness, and an overwhelming but delightful sense of gratitude thrilled her heart, and spoke in eloquent light from her dark eyes. It was a gratitude that could not be put in words—that must be lived and acted out—so her speaking gaze said before it sank under his eyes. He drew forward a chair for her use, and then seated himself. She inquired with nterest after each member of the family and testified much pleasure in hearing of their health and prosperity. They talked of several things, and then Augusta beame grave and thoughtful, and, finally, after a little hesitation, said:

"Mr. Hunter, I have been reflecting that I ought to make another effort to open a communication with my aunt, Mrs. Percival. I would not do it without consulting you. But do you not think it is probable that the two letters you wrote to her nearly nine years ago might have miscarried?"

"I do not think it probable that both could have been lost. It is at most barely possible."

She smiled gently and seemed satisfied. And then they arranged their departure for his mother's house. One morning a month later a foreign letter, directed to "Lady Augusta Per-cival," and dated Florence, was put in her hands. It was from Mrs. Percival, who stated herself to be an invalid, and, for the benefit of her failing health, was living in Florence, where her niece's letter had been forwarded to her. "Nay, Augusta, do you want to go?"

"No, no!" she exclaimed, hastily, earnestly, and then her face was suffused with sudden blushes, and her eyes drop-

FIGHT FLAMES IN FORESTS.

MILLION-DOLLAR BRIGADE MAIN-TAINED BY UNCLE SAM.

Use Fire. Not Water-Battle Carried on by One Man or Many as Case Requires.

The greatest fire-fighting brigade in the world is that maintained by the National Government. It extends the rough protection of its ventursome arm around all the store of timber wealth in the national forests from Mexico to Alaska. The quaintest from Mexico to Alaska. The quaintest fireman of them all is the grizzle cowboy ranger, whose equipment is a mustang pony and a pine bough, who may combat single-handed for a week in some lone solitude the creeping flames that seek to devour the forest primeval where the wealth of the ages is being stored for the generations that are to come. ages is being stored for the generations that are to come.

The battle has been on for two months past, for this is the season when the dry twig crackles under foot and the absence of rain invites disaster. Here and there in the stretches of solitude a curling smoke has turned in the alarm to the vigilant fireman and the battle has been waged.

The national forests, aggregating in area more than 156,000,000 acres—enough for five States the size of Pennsylvania, or ten like West Virginia, or forty-five like Connecticut —are not uniform in topography, or in climate, or in vegetation. Some portions are steep, rugged, almost inaccessible. Other parts are comparatively flat. The forests in one locality may consist of meture traces with paratively list. The forests in one local-ity may consist of mature trees, with not much undergrowth. In others the undergrowth is dense. High mountains predominate in one region, valleys and ridges in others and tablelands in still others. Excessive drouths in one section may be rare, and in others dry weather is the valle. the rule.

In developing its plans for fighting fires the Forest Service considered all kinds and conditions of country. The forest ranger is the Government's fire scout, picket and skirmisher. The dry summer months are his busy time in national forests of the west, where pine needles strew the ground and the trash and litter become like tinder before the autumn rains set in.

There are in this service a total of 1,-200 men, guards and rangers, at the height of the season. There are veteran References required.

They are the rulers of the small realm in which they are placed, and it is only through their consent that timber may be cut, live stock grazed or other benefit derived from the reserve. The tolls for these privileges are collected and go far toward paying the whole expense.

There is no period in baby's life that mothers dread more than teething time. The little gums are tender and inflamed; the child suffers and is lespless and cross, and the mother is usually worn out caring for the child. The conflagration which this summer threatened Ciricauhus forest, Arozona, was started by lighting outside the national forest, in a region of dense and tangled thickets, which burned like tinder. The flames soon attained a wide front and advanced toward the valuable pine timber in Chiricahua forest. Supervisor McGlone took charge of the 60 rangers, miners and settlers who had responded to the call for help. A lane 40 feet wide and 12 miles long was cut through the jungle of chaparral across the pathway of the fire, which was advancing with a front 10 miles long, and was consuming every combustible thing in its way. Every log, pole, branch or limb was removed from the lane, and the litter was shoveled out, leaving only the soil exposed. Then the back fires were started, with complete success. The fire was stopped and the pine timber was saved.

LUSITANIA'S TELEPHONES.

The System is as Complete as That of Any Hotel.

The great size of the Lusitania necessitates the adoption of some means by which the navigators on the bridge could communicate their orders to the could communicate their orders to the crow's nest, the lorecastle and the aftermost bridge without delay, and it was considered equally desirable that passengers should be able to speak with purser, stewards and the like without incurring the fatigue and delay of a journey which, in a ship of such vast dimensions, might be very considerable. The system adopted to secure this communicability is that of the telephone, and so thoroughly has it been carried out that no hotel has a completer system of telephonic communication. The analogy between the stationary hotel and that possessed of the power of rapid locomotion—is carried still further, for just as the guest can secure trunk conjust as the guest can secure trunk conjustions. just as the guest can secure trunk conat a distance, so can the passenger on the Lusitania when that vessel is alongside the stage or wharf at its mooring. This is effected by linking the telephonic system of the ship with the central exchange, thus enabling the passenger from the privacy of his own cabin to talk with any one in the town.

THE STOMACH ON STRIKE.

The Tonic Treatment for Indigestion is the Most Successful.

Loss of appetite, coated tongue, had taste in the mouth, heavy dull neadache and a dull sluggish feeling—these are the symptoms of stomach trouble. They indicate that the stomach is on strike, that it is no longer furnishing to the blood the full quota of nourishment that the body demands, hence every organ suffers. There are two methods of treatment, the old one by which the stomach is humored by the use of pre-digested foods and artificial ferments, and the duing of great fires, but in preventing the season. Even an engaged girl was not expected to go only with her fiancee, but made things lively by entertaining and going about with other young men, and keeping the community upon the qui vive as to which would be her final choice.

There was time for idling in those days—hours for fooling dull care, and baffling stern necessity. A pretty girl was likely to spy from her window an interesting group of pedestrians or a dashing horseman at almost any hour of the day. If she went downtown (she did not often, gentle reader, as girls do nowadays). It was strange, indeed, if there was not rivalry as to which of the young gallants should walk home with her. A New York woman shopper of forty years' experience suggests the pressing need of a system to expedite making purchases and getting goods and change in the department stores, instead of the present method, which makes patrons lose time and patience because cannot be trusted.

"New York is a starless city," said a recent resident as he sat on his newly-acquired suburban porch and looked on our neighbor Mars. "The only one to be seen there are the so-called stars on the stage, while the real stars are shut out by buildings and the street lights that blind the eyes to anything beyond them."

There will be about ten thousand more pupils in the public schools of New York City this month than there were one year ago at the opening of the schools.

Physicians the world over have known of and believed in the virtues of cod liver oil. They have, alas! also realized its drawbacks and the impossibility of administering it where it would do good Doctors have seen hundreds of people die of con-sumption and other wasting diseases, whom they might have saved had they only been able to take enough cod liver oil to obtain from it a sufficient amount of the medicinal principles which it contained.

o know why cod liver oil has not been a popular remedy, or to realize how few people are able to take enough of it to do them any good. The many who have needed and attempted to take this nauseating remedy, if they are still in a position where they need cod liver oil, are the ones who should throw their bats in the air and shout their joy from the house-tops at the news which comes to us of Vinol. These are the people who will never forget the name of this new remedy, nor will they ever cease to thank Messrs. J. P. It is a delicious wine, only there has been added to it this extract of cod's liver, this peculiar special extract of the curative principles the means of obtaining which is the only discovery about Vinol. We do not believe there is an invalid in this town suffering from throat, lung or bronchial troubles, or in fact wasting disease, but has already inter-

Messrs. J. P. Lamb & Son are kept busy explaining its merits and telling many friends how it is now possible to take all that is necessary of cod liver oil, or Vinol, its concentrated active medical principles, to overcome disease. It has not been a difficult matter for them to explain, as they have done, the absolute uselessness of the grease itself and to demonstrate the great value of the medicinal properties of the liver of the cod. There are many people right here in our town who know from but a few day's experience how much benefit they are deriving from this preparation. and who have already learned that the medicinal properties of Vinol act in a most wonderful manner in checking the symptoms of disease, while at the same time enabling the stomach to assimilate and digest from palatable, every day food, the necessary nourishment to renew tissue depleted by dis-

A young lady from a rural district, who was something of a belle in back woods society, and used to having considerable homage paid to her, especially by neighbors of the opposite sex, boarded a railway train for the first time not long ago. After she had secured a seat, removed her wraps, adjusted her baggage and smoothed the wrinkles out of her dress, she called the attettion of a passing brakeman and demurely said: "You may tell the conductor I'm ready please."-Portage la Prairie Review.

And yet the abolition of all model schools (except in sparsely settled districts) is the policy of the Onitario government as declared in the law as amended now stands as follows: Legislature and in the leading papers of that party. Is our model school to be abolished? We think not-at least, not until after next $300 per section, all of whech is to election, and even then the government paid on the teacher's salary. will be slow in forcing on the people policy that has proved so unpopular as has this proposal.

Mr Thomas Pounder (better known to many of the younger generation in this country as "Uncle Tom" left this (Wednesday) morning for Montreal where he will remain for a day and then proceed to his home in Boston. Mr Pounder spent the whole summe with friends in various parts of Leeds county and enjoyed very much the warm welcome and generous hospitality extended to him everywhere, He gave to friends about 300 handsome souvenirs of various kinds. Pressure of business forced him to leave at this time visit other friends.

The Reporter is indebted to Malvin Wiltse for a copy of the first issue of the Witness, published at Watson, Sask. Witness says :-"The village of Watson is located in township 36, range 18 west 2nd, on the main line of the Canadian North ern Railway, nearly midway between Winnipeg and Edmonton; or to be exact, 399 miles from the great metropgrowing city of Saskatoon that may some day be the capital, is 90 miles due west, or 106 by rail. Helping the Blind to See A writer in the New Idea Woman's Magazine for November gives an account of the great progress which has been made recently in the work which is being done for the blind. In the past the blind have been considered merely the objects of pity. Now this attitude has changed. More and more every year the blind are becoming selfsupporting. Educators have proved that they may read and write and enjoy all the intellectual pursuits that are thereby opened up, and still more recently have the economic pursuits, despite many invitations to remain and the blind. Sewing, typewritting, massaging and piano tuning are among the occupations in which the sightless may excel, and every opportunity for their pleasure and development is now given them. The photographs which accompany the article are unusually interesting, showing as they do, the blind children and grown people at work and at play. -Wedding stationery - latest type and see these goods.

Pole Later newards that a itreman seening promotion is examined more rigidity in regain to his anowined of the apparation of the continuous promotion is examined more rigidity in regain to his anowined of the apparation of the continuous promotion of the carmination on the carmine in marder to pass than on the engine itself for the ordinary fireman. It is absolutely necessary that each new engineer shall know all about the working of alternates and their effect upon short and long trains under all sorts of conditions, and until he gains this knewbedge there is no chance of his gotting his engine. "The introduction of the emergency brake is largely responsible for this state of affairs, for this invention, useful as it has been, is productive of mischief."

"In the early days of the airbrake when the "straight air's system was used the whole apparatus consisted of a main reservoir on the engine, with a single connection with all the brake cylinders back through the train. When the engineer wanted to apply the brakes he turned the handle of a three way cook in the cab, which allowed, the air pressure from the engine reservoir to rush back through the train, and the sir filled one brake cylinder after another, forcing the brake shoes against the wheels. This old system had many weak points. One of these was that in a long train the air pressure in the reservoir was not great snough to fill the cylinders throughout the train who mough pressure and gave a slow acting brake of low power.

"But the more vital defect was that if a train was running down hill, say, and a hose connection broke on any part of the train the engineer was helpless, and nothing would grevent a bad week except the best of luck or the prompt application of the hand brakes.

would prevent a bad wreck except the best of luck or the prompt application of the hand brakes.

"Then automatic brakes were introduced, which did away with both of these failings. In this system an air tank or reservoir is placed on each car alongside of each brake cylinder. This tank is filled with an air pressure from the engine and is controlled by a triple valve attached to the brake cylinder. This valve has three functions—it rolesses the air from the auxiliary reservoir on each car to the brake cylinder when applying the brakes, then allows the air to escape when the brake is to be released, and also opens a hole through which the air pressure from the engine can once more charge the auxiliary reservoir.

"Now with this system, when the engineer wants to put down the brakes, instead of turning on the air as a matter of fact he draw it off. The pressure in the reservoir of each car being, say, seventy pounds on one side of the sliding valve and an equal pressure being on the engine side, the valve remains stationary, but when the engineer atlows a certain amount of the air to escape, this action, weaksning the pressure on the engine side, causes the greater pressure in each car tank to force out each sliding valve, which as it moves exposes an entrance to each brake cylinder, and simultaneously the air rushes into each brake cylinder and causes the application of all the brakes. This device has done away with all danger of a train running away, for the moment a hose breaks the pressure on the engine side escapes and thus causes all the brakes to go down automatically.

"This brake has worked successfully in aimost every respect and the engineers have mastered its workings without much trouble. The came the emergency brake, which supplied the former remaining defect for productive and an entrance to emergency brake, which supplied the former remaining defect for productive and an entraneously the air rushes for the engineers have mastered its workings without much trouble.

But with the emergency brake has come a lot of complicated appartus that has to be thoroughly understood, theoretically and practically, by the engineers.

"To put on the emergency brake the engineers it will go with one quick movement. This lot out every bit of pressure on the train line that is holding each valve in the car reservoirs. Finding no resistance the air from the car reservoir drives out the sliding valve as far as it will go, the great pressure forcing further than when an ordinary service application is made, and this discloses at once not only the whole of the entrance port to the brake cylinder but also another opening leading to the pressure from the engine. At the bottom of the second opening is what is known as the emergency valve, which, borne back by the pressure, allows added power to enter the brake cylinders from the train line in conjunction with the other pressure from the car reservoirs and produces a most powerful brake.

"Scinetimes the emergency device gets beyond control and causes a lot of trouble.

sure from the car reservoirs and produces a most powerful brake.

"Scmetimes the emergency device gets beyong control and causes a lot of trouble. If the sliding valve on a certain car of a train becomes cloged with dirt it won't respond to the engineer's reduction of say, five pounds pressure, and maybe even a ten pound reduction won't have any effect upon it. As a result the brakes on all the rest of the cars are partly down and not on that particular car. Then when the engineer makes still another reduction the high pressure from this one tank forces the valve suddenly back with a jam, causting the brakes to go to emergency not only on that car, but on nevery car of the train, with the result that a train will come to an abrupt standetill maybe a couple of hundred feet from the station.

"That kind of a brake we call a "kicker, and there are times when the engineer of a passenger train has this thing happen to him a half dozen times during a single run. An emergency applied while a train of the sing at fifty or wing to the great momentum, but lost the train be running at ten or twelve miles an hour and there will be a shaking up that will break everything in the dining are and make everybody aboard uncomfortable.

"One odd thing about the application of a signal grain has slowed down his train of a signal frain has slowed down his train of a signal signal train has slowed down his train of a signal of pulling out his throttle and trying to regain his headway the wisest thing for him to do is to bring his train to a standediff and then start afresh. The chances are very much in favor of the train being broken in two if the engineer under these circumstances tries to start up from slow speed. The brakes on account of the wind the brakes on account of the wind the brakes are still down. There was a case the other day where a heavy engine under these conditions setually pulled an empty flat car then account of the cars from which the brakes are still down. "It is just an easy for the conductor to put down the brakes as the engineer, and he can either bring a train to a gradual stop or, by throwing back the lever all the way, cause an emergency application. The conductors on some of the roads, who are a little nervous, have been known to make use of this opportunity in more ways than one. One engineer on a New York road complains that he can never make up time when he has a certain conductor behind him. The latter is a scary sort of a dellow, and when the train gots late the engineer

Of course the train is held down to a cartain greed, no matter how wide down to a cortain speed, no matter how open the engineer pulls the throttle."

THE SECOND WIFE. When a widow or widower announces his or her intention of forming new ties it is often the cause of bitter resentment on the part of the relatives of the one who has died.

They are angry, aggrieved at the idea of anyone filling their loved one's place, and while one can sympathize with them in their affliction, yet it is not a right course to pursue, and can only bring sorrow and enmity in its train. Will not the dear dead one desire the true happiness of the husband who has been left comfortless and alone, after having enjoyed the love and sympathy of happy married life?

Of course, he will mourn his loss, but time is the great consoler, and by and by when the first bitterness of the blow has been assuaged, he will turn his thoughts in the direction of new ties, a wife. If his first marriage has been a success then the second is a compliment to his late wife's memory; if it was unhappily a failure, then can be be bleamed for seeking a more congenial mate? The Decline of Bank Burglary. Previous to 1895 there was seldom vear that the losses through bank burglaries did not amount to $100,000, and in a number of years the losses amounted to several times that amount. The decline of professional bank burglary dates from 1895. In that year the American Bankers' Association formed a protective committee for the extermination of bank burglars, and a contract was entered into with one of the leading detective agencies in the country. In 1895 the banks of the country lost more than $200,000 through burglaries. Of the 8,383 members last year, having an aggregate surplus, capital and de-posits of more than $12,500,000,000, only four members suffered losses from bur-glaries, the total loss of these four mem-bers amounting to only $4,217. These four burglaries were committed by yegg men, there not being a single professional bank burglary during the year. The extermination of these yeggmen is now the chief work of the protective com-mittee.—From the Van Norden Maga-

The Czar's Children.

The children of the Czar of Russia are always dressed with extreme simplicity, says one who knows something about the mestic life of the Romanoffs. The litthe grand duchesses wear plain white cotton or cream serge dresses, with sail-or collars and plain black silk bows tied in an English navy knot. Their hats are shady white straws, trimmed with black ribbons and fastened on with elasties. Their shoes are of stout black lea-ther, with very soft uppers and sensible heels, and they wear black stockings of cashmere, with no openwork frippery. On Sundays and holidays a little more elaboration is permitted, but even then the little Romanoffs do not present nearly so fine an appearance as many American children. children.

. Junior Coiffure. For very young girls there is nothing prettier than the hair parted in the front and brought back over the ears to the nape of the neck, where it is braided, looped and tied with a broad ribbon. Fair hair always looks well so dressed, but dark hair will be equally pretty and girlish-looking if the front portion is tied on top of the head in a pompadour effect, then braided and looped and fastened with a ribbon, the other half of the hair to be braided in the nape of the neck and arranged as above. This looks neater than the wavy fluffiness at the sides of the face so picturesque-looking when the hair is fair

The statistics of the nurses, in smallpox hospitals, are very interesting. In the epidemic of 1871 there were 110 persons engaged in actual attendance on sons engaged in actual attendance on the smallpox sick in the Homerton Fever Hospital in England. All these, with two exceptions, were revaccinated before being allowed to begin their work, and all but these two who had evaded the regulation in the matter, escaped smallpox. Both Experimenting.

Both Experimenting.

The scarcity of timber suitable for Sciephone and telegraph poles has of late absumed serious_proportions, says the Amselvan Telephone Journal.

Latest reports of the Census Office show that there were in operation in 1902 approximately 700,000 miles of pole line. Subsequent additions, however, together with certain railroad pole lines not reported, would enlarge this figure.

It is safe to assume that there are in operation at present fully 800,000 miles of line. The average line contains about forty poles a mile, so that there are approximately $2,000,000 poles in use.

Assuming that the average life of a pole is twelve years, it follows that for the maintenance of the lines now in operation there are needed each year more than 2,550,000 poles. Such an enormous demand must soon deplete the available supply. This is fully recognized by the different companies.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, in co-operation with the Brited States Porestry Bursau, has been carrying on elaborate experiments to determine the best means of prolonging the life of poles.

These experiments show that seasoned timber in contact with the ground will autiast unseasoned, and that dry wood is more receptive for preservative fluids than green wood.

Through the departure last week on the Umbria of one of the principals who, under an assumed name, goes to London to purge himself of contempt before the High Court of Justice and to sue for his sequestered estates, is revealed for the first time the story of this drama of two continents.

In relating the details the Herald is under the pledge of secrecy not to tell the name of the father until it becomes known through litigation which is likely to be instituted within a few days in

He is a member of one of the best families of England, and is of hished ancestry. He had inherdistinguished ancestry. He had inherited a large fortune, and the estates which he derived his income had for many generations been in the possession of those of his race.

His wife was of equally good birth and station. The names of both are very well known in London, and would be York were they mentioned.

All this was changed by the advent of "the other woman." At first reports came to the wife of her husband's flirtation with one who moved in a circle placed little credence in the story at first until affairs took such a turn that she was obliged to recognize that he was the victim of a foolish infatuation, for

Although she still retained her affection for him, she then yielded to the advice of her friends after she saw that a reconciliation was impossible, and re-luctantly brought suit in the High Court of Justice for the restoration of her conjugal rights.

Pending a decision, the English trib reading a decision, the Engish trib-unal awarded to her the custody of the two boys, then six and eight years old, and directed that they be left in the boarding school where they had been sent until their next vacation.

This so angered the father that he decided to leave the country. He gathered all the cash which was available, about one thousand pounds, and made his arrangements to go to the United States with the woman to whom he had become attached as his companion, His love for some extent, for he went to the school where they were staying and, under the pretence of taking them for an outing, got them away from their instructors and brought them and his companion to wife would waive the cont

He lived at the best hotels when he came to New York, and the woman for whom he had abandoned his social posi-tion was introduced by him as his wife. He placed his sons in a boarding school for boys on Long Island not far from this city, paying their board and tuition for a term in advance. The man and the other woman lived lavishly in the metropolis untile his funds were practically exhausted. In order to replenish his dwindling resources he instructed his London solicitors to sell his English property and to send him a draft for the proceeds as quickly as possible. which he knew would serve him to gain money as rapidly as he needed it. It It was then that he thought of one available asset on which he might raise money—the love of his wife for him and his children. It was this which led him to write a letter to his atterneys in England, threatening that unless the sum of $50,000 were forthcoming that he would kin his sons and then commit suicide. This information was sent to the solicitors of his wife. He subsequently sent
