THE FIGHTING HOPE By Virginia L. Wentz, from Wm. J. Hurlburt's Play

PROLOGUE

A strong man bravely facing the foes who would brand him with disgrace, calmly, silently fighting them to a finish; a con-vict declaiming his innocence from behind prison walls which enfold him because of his weakness and his wickedness; a beautiful young mother battling for a stainless name for her children and for the fair name of their father-what more interesting hemes than these could a novellet devise for a real life romance of today?

CHAPTER L MAN AND WIFE.

OBERT GRANGER, JR., who had already learned "The Purple Cow," was endeavoring to master another gem from the is Nonsense book. The drawings appealed to him immensely. He sat on the edge of the rug, his back against his father's chiffonnier, his gs of six years' growth stretched out. the book open upon his knee. Occa-sionally he made a dash with his hand at an inquisitive fly.

Across from him on a low rocker, her shining head bent slightly over in the serious operation of sewing a button on a coat, softly hummed his young mother. Presently the boy shuffled along the floor, still keeping the book on his lap, till he got close to her and lodged his chin on her knep. "See if I don't know it, muddle, said he. And he began:

"The roof it has a lazy time A-lying in the sun; The walls they have-they have"-

'An incipient dimple shewed in his mother's cheek.

"to hold him up:

They do not have much fun," Finished she gayly. She pushed the boy's hair back from his brow and d him. "Now run down into the garden, honey, and play with nurse and Baby Harold. Plenty of sun and fresh air and deep breathing, you know. That's what makes a little fellow into a big.' strong man, eh-not too many nonsense verses?"

Robert put his book away reluctant-"But I love po'try, too, darling, dear," asserted he, stroking her face prettily, before quitting the room. "He's his father over, and over again

-ventle, appealing, winning. And sentimental, too, I'm afraid," added Anna, with a slow, enigmatical smile, as she snipped off the thread with her sound, perfect white teeth.

she was rather at a loss. There was a senseless ambiguity about the affair that bailled her. She flushed botter. It seemed to be an indignity that even for a second Robert should have become so exceedingly small in her eyes. When she returned from "fixing it with the boys she crossed to the up" window and looked out into the garden. The sun was still shining, but it had lost its gold to her. There was a-plenty of its gold in the ripples of her brown hair, however. Robert noticed it. He saw, too, that her slight figure, dressed in the simplest of white dimities, ran around the corner of pretty curves wherever one's eyes lighted and followed lines. There was an offended look about her back and a half amused displeasure touching her profile.

"I'm sorry I spoke like that, Anna," said he, trying to apologize. "A man has a lot to fight against"-at the end of several halting sentences-"of which even his wife knows nothing."

"Have you to fight?" asked she, turning around and laughing in spite of herself. "You don't look like fighter, Bobs. You look like a man to

HOCKEY Athens at Westport

Friday morning last, the local hockey team journeyed to Westport local to play a return match and the gam to play a return match and the game was much faster than the score would indicate. Westport tallied the first score during the last minute of the first period. In the second period the Athens boys, "went up into the air" and Westport hung up six more scores. The third period was real backey in which both terms were at bockey in which both teams were at their best and Athens scored two goals leaving the score at the final whistle seven to two for Westport.

The above game was probably the cleanest exhibition of hocky that has been played for some time. Gord. been played for some time. Gord. Lawson acted as referee and W. Brackenbridge as judge of play and credit is due these officials for the sportsmenlike way in which they handled the game.

Although the Athens team had little or no practice before the trip they played a surprisingly fast game. Layng was at his best and Gifford was in good form at centre.

Through poor train connections the visiting team was forced to spend the night at Westport and the boys wish to thank those who so kindly assisted in making the evening pleasant and enjoyable. The rink offered the best means of passing a pleasant hour and the Athens skaters were agreeably surprised with the cordial reception accorded them on the ice by Westport's fair sex, who were one and all remarkably good skaters.

An exhibition match is being talked of between the two teams to be played at Westport at a later date. On January 17 Portland plays at over her knee. She stooped to replace them, the contents varied and inconsequential as any boy's. Then her glance fell upon a bill of fare-a French bill re, full of naughty things to eat of fa and drink for two. It bore the date of the day previous.

A dancing little spirit of mischief played in the beautiful grav eves.

"I'll keep it forninst my lord's re-turn," quoth she. "I'll chaff him with it a bit when he gets home this afternoon, pretend I'm catty and jealous, injured virtue through and through. Oh, lordy. lordy, fancy me being jeak ous, and of dear old Bobs!"

Robert Granger reached his suburban home in Westfield early that afternoon. It was Saturday, a fine sum-mer day, and he'd promised to take his boys to Cranford, a few miles distant, for a sail on the river.

"Glad you have on that dress. Anna." "It's awfully becoming, and said he. I want you to look your prettiest. Brady is coming out this afternoon, and"-

"But the boys-the river?" Her first thought was of her children's disappointment (though her dislike for the man Brady, who always "got on her nerves," came in a close second).

"The boys? I'd quite forgotten Well, you'll have to fix it up with them; put them off till some other time.

"Robert, I wish-I wish you wouldn't torget like that. It's growing to be a habit with you, dear, and I hate-I hate to have the children lose faith in your promises. I want them to learn that a promise means"-

He interrupted with some sharp inconsequence, and Anna's wide, surprised eyes goaded him into a tempest of words.

"Are you so burdened with motherhood." he cried, "that you can't even be a wife? It's plain to see that I'm only worth to you what I may be worth to the children, and no manno man, I repeat-can stand that sort of thing."

Anna flushed and wondered what she could have done to cause this ex-fraordinary outbreak. Her first imguise always where Robert was concerned was to try to accentain where whom-well, to whom things con "Nothing," observed he, with befitting gravity-"nothing comes without hustling and exertion and perspiration, either of brow or spirit."

"In that case," said she, still regarding him reflectively, "I ought to know about this perspiration and the other accompaniments. With two children it's quite time I began to face things." She came nearer and laid her hand on his shoulder. "Things might strike me differently, you see, if I knew more. Your odd, puzzling little moods -I could make allowances for them." He grew confused beneath her candor.

"My ill temper," he blurted out, was of course, inexcusable. Still"-"Oh, nonsense! 1 don't mind the ill temper in the least. I've heaps of my own to match it. It's the freakishness of the thing, the-the weakness of such a twisted, untrue mood that bothers me. How would you feel," she added quickly, "if you got some remote hint that your mahogany cabinet was a veneered imitation or if the smallest doubt came to you about the genuineness of that Inness landscape there? You'd have forty fits on the instant. Now, that's how I feel about you and the children-my small collection. If I should discover one day that you were sham products of a bad period instead of being originals of the best-oh, deary me!" "But, Anna, you want perfection. Now, a man"-

"Perfection? Not a bit of it! To live in the company of three angels would be a nightmare. It would demoralize me to feel myself so abject an outsider. As to temper, you may even on occasion storm because you've mislaid your gloves or your commutation tickets or throw the soup at Bridget's head if it's not hot and well seasoned. In those cases, you see, I should understand your motives and your modes of action would not be baffling. It's the-the illusive, twisted moods, as I say, that confuse me, make me think of bad periods and things." Here the bell rang, and Bridget usin-

III. Christian courage and unity. The incidents of the lesson including the imprisonment of the apostle constitute the official answer to what precedes. We have studied the first conquests of the Christian church. We now proceed to its first conflict with preestablished, but degenerate the Judaism of its day. I. The first persecution. It is striking fact that all reforms have their origin and greatest poposition within the church. At the moment when the usefulness of the apostles seemed to be at its height and their words and works were effecting an entrance into the hearts of the people, they were apprehended. Two motive have entered into the opposimay tion. The miracle was acknowledged to be undeniable. Its subject was known, was present in person, and by voice and action attested the reality of his restoration. The first cause of complaint was that "the taught the people." About Feeds and Live Stock Timely Items and Practical Information to Be Put Into Effect

At the beginning of the New Year everyone has great resolutions and plans for what they are going to do in the ensuing months. Too often, it is true, these same plans and resolu-tions are never realized, and as the days slip by, they pass again into oblivion like many before them. It days is very pleasant to sit by the fire and build "castles in the air," but re-muneration comes only by the realistreams. zation of the project, which, in turn, is brought about only by direct ac-tion. It is better to plan one thing is brought about to plan one thing tion. It is better to plan one thing well and carry it through, than to let fancy run on a score or more, which are born only to die again. This may sound like a sermon, and he practical farmer may say, "What the practical farmer may say, "What has this to do with me?" But do farmers not have plans? We are sure good ones do, because no man can accomplish anything worth while who does not plan ahead. The "slip-and-go-easy" farmer who does things the easiest way, or as father did twenty years ago, will certainly did even neve need to worry as to the probability of his being inconvenienced by the in-come tax, for large salaries. His trouble will be a lot closer to home than that, and he will find that the hired man is better off than his master Last year the war was just over, and we were not just sure what would happen concerning the H. C. of L. and prices in general. One thing is however, they are still with us and bid fair to stay for some time ounless our new Government can something more than simply inyet, unless our new vestigate, as has been too often the case in the past. The farmer, like everyone else nust in making his plans for the coming year take into account the exist-ing circumstances, and also, as far as ossible, figure out what is likely to develop in the near future. Will feeds go down in price more than hogs or beef cattle; if so, he will aim to raise more. Will concentrates for dairy cattle be cheaper? Will wool remain at remunerative figures? remain at remunerative figures These and many more, are question that many have been pondering over and their resultant action is depend ent on the conclusion they come to. One way to keep in touch with afbecause it is noticeable that the men who make a success of farming are, in the majority of cases, those who read well and keep posted on affairs. Every farmer should at least take one daily for news and one weathread Every farmer should at reast the adding for news, and one weekly, as a farm paper, for farm topics. If you farm paper, for farm topics. If you haven't sent in your subscriptions for he year, now is a good time to do so, while it is on your mind. Then there is also the matter of cing that system of farm ookkeeping, which is so convenient in helping you to figure out just what operations are paying you and which ones are not. Too often the teeps tab in his head of expense Too often the farmer However, now, when everything is so dear, it is necessary to figure more closely in order to realize a profit on each operation. One of the easiest yet comprehensive forms of bookkeeping yet ar ranged for the farmer was worked out some years ago by A. Leitch, now head of the Farm Survey Department at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. Anyone wishing these forms can obtain them by applying either there or to the Department of Agriculture at Toronto. D'rections are sent with them and a sample form also, so that anyone can understand it. Now is a good time to start when you are not extra busy on work outdoors.

If a farmer is not near a stream or | If a farmer is not near a stream or body of water, he can make his ice at home if he has a sufficiency of well water. In some instances a cement reservoir of small size is built with aloping sides, and the ice is made in this. When this is done, the clean well water makes a finer quality of well water makes a finer quality of ice than when taken from many circulation among the blocks. It is well to keep an eye on the roots and vegetables to see that they are keeping in good shape. At times, roots kept in the same stable as stock commence to spoil because of the warm al., and the dampness caused by the moisture from the breath of the stock. Slatted ventilator pipes through the bins will pre vent and tendency toward heating and rotting, by allowing air circulation, A cool atmospher , around 40 degrees, best for most roots.

Pack ice cakes slowly, so as to prevent any air

The straw in many section of On ario was very short this year, which, n many cases, will limit the quan tity of feed at the farmer's disposal. He, therefore, will need to make as good use of it as possible, especially if he hadn't an extra large crop of have to help out.

As much straw often contains good feeding value, it is often used to lend bulk to the ration. In order to however, to get the stock to relish it ome means must be taken to make it more palatable. This can be done by cutting it up fine and mixing it with other feeds, such as ensilage and pulped roots. At the Ontario Agricultural College, for, the beef cattle, all the feeds are mixed together som time before feeding. The hay and straw are cut, and a certain amount salt is sprinkled over the mixture In this way the whole is made palamuch straw can be mad table, and good use of.

Quite a number of cows will be refreshing this month and the following one. They need good care and feed-ing. The cow that is carrying a call should be fed well, else she cannot be expected to give a good flow of Breeding may be necessary for a large vield, but no cow, no matter how well-bred, can produce abundant-ly if she is not given the required feed. Don't stint, it doesn't pay.

Cows that give a large flow of milk need to be carefully handled at time danger of milk-fever, and injury to the udder. Do not milk completely dry for the first few days, but dray a little frequently, as this will hel to prevent milk-fever. It is at time will help also necessary to milk before the calf arrives if the udder becomes too distended and is causing pain to the cow

The care of the calf also is impor With dairy cattle especially, the tant. best plan is to take it away from the mother at once, as it will learn to drink much easier from the pail never allowed to suck. It may be left 12 hours before feeding, and will then be hungry enough to take some food from the pail.

About the best way yet devised to each the youngster to drink is to give it the end of your finger to suck, while its nose is in the milk. In this way it soon learns, and will drink quite readily. Like putting up stovepipes, the job is often a trial to one' per, but if gone about correctly can generally be accomplished in a few sons. At the same time, experience inclines us to think that the "drinking habit" is inherited in calves well as humans, as some calves learn much easier than others.

Don't neglect hogs during the cold weather. Their bedding needs renew-ing frequently to keep them comfortable, especially if their quarters are anyway cold. While pigs of any size will do well in a house that is not frost proof, they, at the same time, and freedom from dryness draught.

In cold weather it is often hard to get brood sows and stock boars to take the exercise that is so necessary for their health and vigor. This can be done by feeding them at a distance from their house, which compels them to take a certain amount at each meal time

It Has Secome a Lost Art in Britain.

Counterfeiting is almost a lost art in Britain. So far as the coinage of silver money is concerned little has been the work of the police since about ten years ago they unearthed a plant that was busily engaged in coining a better grade of silver than the standard, and the gang went down for a few years. Since then silver has risen considerably in price, and it no longer pays to coin the metal.

There were quite a number of cases of counterfeiting the 10-shilling note printed on thin paper during the first few months of the war, and quite a few of these were drawn with pen and ink, but the Bradbury issue stopped this practice.

Only the other day a man was charged with aving in his possession copies of these early 10-shilling notes, and his defence was that he had, made them fora joke, which he exmade them for joke, which he ex-plained as having on his pais by peel-ing them from a roll and solemnly lighting his pipe with one. "Since we've become mere pegs on which to hang psychological discus-sions, my boys, we'll return to our na-tive heath." said Anna langhingly. Brady watched with singular inter st the easy strength with which she walked off with her sons. Hitherto she had seemed to him altogether frag-ile, Dresden china-ish.

"I saw a look on Mrs. Granger's face awhile ago." he said half to himself, "a look that surprised me. I believe there are very few things she couldn't do once she set her mind to action."

An uncomfortable, prickly sensation ran down Robert's back; his smile of satisfaction weakened. Then over their cigars they began to talk of other things. From the open door of the pursery Anna could hear broken frag-ments coming up:

ner unreservedly, and there was a certain scintillating novelty about his wife's looks that engaged his attention. His after dinner smoke was his favorite one. It seemed vixenish to interfere with it, so Anna waited, playing idly with the almonds and raisins on her plate. Robert, between his puffs, noticed that they were delicate and pretty hands, and that there were only two rings-the wedding ring and the engagement ring. He felt a vague impression that most women wore more than that. At least, one woman whom he knew wore more. He remembered her hands distinctly. He had made her a birthday present of a diamond ring only a few days before and when she thanked him for it later he had noticed that her hand fairly flashed with diamonds. Presently Anna got up, and, leaning lightly against the mantel shelf, watched him oddly. She might as well out with it.

"Robert," said she, "you like Mr. Brady through and through?"

"Like Brady? Why, yes, and he's a decidedly useful man to know-interested in all sorts of big concerns, nothing of a snob, and"- "i-I rather wanted to compare notes with you. You're so quick and sensitive. I wondered if you had noticed-things." She flushed hotly.

"Nothing at all, except that he seems to approve of my selection of a wife. Would you prefer, then, not to be admired?

The Refinement of Purity

CAREFUL cooks know the value of purity. In the making of cakes or pastry they use those ingredients which they believe to be pure and wholesome.

Betsy Norcross, waiting in the den for the return of her lover, knew by the expression of his face that he had met with disaster. He had gone into the library where Mr. and Mrs. Norcross were reading, and there he had asked permission to wed the girl of his choice, who happened to be their bright-haired, blue-eyed daughter.

"No luck, Ray?" Betsy asked. He sat down glumly. "Not a bit. Your mother did the talking, and informed me that under no circumstances was I to have you. She was willing that we continue as friends, but as for marriage not a bit of it! And she made no bones of saying so. Then your father agreed with her!"

"I can't understand father!" Betsy shid explosively. "He likes you, I' know; and all mother has against you is—is—well, dear, she thinks you aren't blue-blooded enough, while I think—" She snuggled herself beside him by way of completing the sen-

"I'm hot blooded enough just now," he answered, smiling faintly down into the petal-like uplifted face. "Betsy, how can I ever, ever give you Pain and longing were in his up?" voice.

She looked up at his worried, hun-gry eyes, and the rose deepened in her cheeks. Mischief was in her glance and meaning.

"Do yoù have to?" she questioned. He started as he caught her meaning, and she felt his firm shoulder quiver. "You mean?" he asked, hope, doubt and love mingled in his eyes. "Why, my dear, I do not intend to let my mother's prejudice come between me and you; so I say, 'Let's pack up and git!""

He sprang to his feet and caught er to him in a bearish hug. "And I can't! I simply can't give you up! We'll skip-when?"

"Tonight," she said, wriggling loose from his arms.

The quick brain that had made him a valuable man in one of the downtown broker's offices turned the possibilities over once. "Betsy, can you manage to get out-say, about nine o'clock? That will give me time to make arrangements." The fire died in his eyes. "We can do it. I'll telephone Mr. Judson, an old minister friend of mine, who lives about 20 miles out. But is it right by you?" She drew his face down to hers and kissed him. "Everybody trusts you except mother; so folks will be with us. As for me, I am willing to give myself to you and your care; and if you don't take me—grab me now you have a chance—I'll begin to believe you are something of a coward!"

It was a challenge. Ten minutes later Elder was on his way to make the arrangements and she was saun-tering serenely into the library, where her mother sat reading, and where her father came a moment later. Betsy wondered if he had been in a position to overhear the conversation in the den.

"My dear, I am sorry, but Mr. Elder will not do. I have betetr hopes for you," her mother said in her firm "I am sure your father agrees with me."

Her father peered over his paper. "Elder has a fine reputation among the men, but I am inclined to think he lacks something the right sort of

Only one fear remained with Elder. Mrs. Nercross in her determined, tena-clous way might have reached out in some other way to wreck the plans she had sensed might be formulated. But as the lights of Camton showed faintly in the distance and the car sped toward them the fear passed.

In half an hour the fear had gone, for Elder found himself in Mr. Judson's library, the rosy-cheeked. golden haired girl beside him. Mr. Judson smiled at them. "We shall have to locate another witness. Mrs. Judson was called away suddenly. My housekeeper will serve as one. I will see if-"

"We don't want to wait, Mr. Jud-son, really. Why-why not ask the chauffeur?" she queried, turning to Raymond.

"T'll call him," the housekeeper said, hustling out.

A moment later the door opened and the driver stepped in, his low-fitting cap off, revealing grayish hair, and— Betsy screamed: "It's father !"

Betsy screamen: "It's tather!" Raymond stared, beyond speech. Mr. Norcross grinned with delight. "Yes, it's the old man. Now, you youngsters get busy before your moth-er finds out what we are up to!" "But-but-what-how?" Raymond field to say something

I sympathized with you, and made up my mind to help you. When she called Novell, I listened. Novell called, saying that you wanted a car at 8:45. She told him not te let you have it. Then I took a hand-I got it. Then, too, Doctor Judson happens to be a friend of mine and he telephoned to find out if everything was all right. It certainly is. Now let's get busy, and we'll motor back, and all three of us will break the news to mother. I don't want to do it alone-and, Betsy, here's something you don't know-your moth-er and I eloped! I want you to use that as a clinching argument. Now, Judson, your turn !"

On Payment of Small Sum All Who Wished Might See British Monarch at His Devotions.

George III was the last of the British monarchs to live in regal state at the palace where the prince of Wales has taken up residence, says the Manchester Guardian. After George had abandoned St. James' in favor of Buckingham palace, he continued to attend the services at the chapel royal. It was here, as Fanny Burney relates, that the king stayed so long over his prayers that "the queen and family dropped off one by one, used to leave the king, the parson and his majesty's equerry to freeze it out together." An eightcenth century guide book to London informs visitors that "at the St. James' chapel royal, by knocking at the side door and slipping a shilling for each person into the hand of the verger, who opens it, you may have admittance, and stand during divine service in the presence of their maj-esties. Betsy went out, hiding her smiles. "I wonder what they will think after tonight?"

At nine o'clock she was ready, a slight, eager, joyous figure, just where the tall trees on the corner threw their heavy shadows.

Elder's quick, steady stride caught her ear as he came up the almost deserted street. In a moment he was at her side.

"Betsy, the deuce is to pay. Your mother telephoned Novell's garage, and Novell, afraid he'd lose her trade, wanted me to promise I was not up to anything. It's enough to drive a man Now I've got in touch with some downtown garage. It's a-'

A car rolled softly to the curb. "Pardon me, sir, but is this Mr. Elder? I am from Novell's garage. He told me tell you that he had changed his mind, and that I am under your or-ders, sir," the husky voice of the driver said. One moment for thought and Elder acted. He lifted Betsy into the car, gave the directions to the driver. The powerful motor whispered a little, and they rolled off into the dusk on their adventure.

Elder gathered the slight figure beside him into the shelter of a protecting arm, and he whispered into one small ear: "Betsy, we are on the way. Novell evidently had a change of heart. But if anywhere along you have the least doubt, say the word and we will turn back."

She pressed a cool cheek against his. "I am with you, dear, to the very end of this ride and all the years!" The big car whispered rapidly through the quiet residential streets, picked up speed as the country roads were reached, and soon was speeding

There were no race courses nor trotting parks and the roads generally were so poor that speed was not desirable had it been possible with safety. Oxen were found to be much better for all farm work.

Most of the land was rough, rocky and full of stumps, so that oxen, being strong, patient and slow, made much the better team for agricultural purposes and lumbering than did rses, and they were cheaper kept, needing but little grain even when at hard work and none at all when in pasture. They required no expensive harness like horses, only cheap yoke and chain, and were quickly yoked.

Hampton Court

It was just before he became a cardinal that Thomas Wolsey, on Jan.

11th, 1515, took a ninety-nine years lease of the manor of Hampton Court from the Knights Hospitaller of St. of Jerusalem, and at once set Johr about building the magnificent pile which remains his most enduring monument. scribed it as the most splendid, most magnificant royal palace of any to be found in England or any other king-dom, and the details which he gives seem to bear this out. More especial was he struck by what a later verse writer described as "that most pomp-ous room called Paradise," a room which, according to the ducal descrip-tion, "captivates the eyes of all who enter by the dazzling of pearls of all and "in particular there is one apartment belonging to the Queen, in which she is accustomed to sit in state, costly beyond every tapesthies are garnished with gold, pearls and precious stones-one table cover alone is valued at above fifty thousand crowns-not to mention the royal throne which is studded with very large diamonds, rubies, sap-phires and the like that glitter among other precious stones and pearls is the sun among the stars." The casual visitor to Hampton Court probably carries away two or three definite impressions of the place, of a medley of decorated chimneystacks, of warm red bricks, of cool quadrangles, of broad lawns and blaz-ing flower beds, of an outlook over a boat-dotted river, of galleries filled with a bewildering succession of old paintings, of tapestried walls-and of the whole set amid stretching tree-grown levels. It is, however, necessary to know the place closely to appreciate it fully—it grows upon one, as the saying is; we should have seen the homely court of the Master Carpenter as well as the stately Fountain Court, the sculptures in the gardens as well as the encycluoyacdic clock, the kitchen as well as the pictuer galleries, to have lingered about seasons and not merely to have scam-pered through it as the central inci-dent in a half-day's excursion. It is, indeed, properly a place for restful enjoyment rather than for hurried sight-seeing, though a hurried silmpse may well prove a provocation to fur-ther visits and more leisurely inspec-tion tion

Grand Mufti Firm Against Milner's Plan.

Present Unrest Due to Disappointment.

Cairo cable: A conversation between Viscount Milner, Special British Commissioner, with the Grand Mufti of Egypt, who is the religious chief of the Mohammedans in Egypt. is reported in the newspaper Ei Misr, in which the Grand Mufti attributed the present troubled spirit to the country's disappointed expectation regarding its independence.

garding its independence. Lord Milner contended that a pro-tectorate was necessary to Egypt's in-terests and that a discussion could settle nine of ten disputed points. The Mufti replied that no Egyptian would enter into discussion except on the basis of independence. Lord Milner maintained that some Egyptians were willing to discuss the subject, but fear deterred them.

The Grand Mufti replied: "Every ountry has its traitors. But any country has its traitors. But any patriot would refuse to enter into such discussion"

The Commissioner sought to contince him that Creat Britain, was ac tuated by friendship and did not wish to impose her will forcibly, although able to do so. To this the Grand Mufti replied:
