Union, addressed a public meeting in the McDougall Methodist Church Thursday evening. The attendance was not large, but the reception of the speaker was enthusiastic. She was ably assisted by Mrs. Bulyea, who presided, and Mrs. Crafts, both of whom take a great interest in the work of the Union, and the cause of temperance. Mrs. Hyslop is a charming speaker and was applauded as she scored point after point. Her apt quotation on the evolution of the drunkard made a hit with her hearers. "There are four scenes in a drunkard's career—the wine cup, the hiccup, the lock-up, and the wind The destruction of the liquor traffic defeated by the corruptibility of the politicians and governments, said Mrs. Hyslop. The power of money is abroad in the land. The saloon keepers' version of the 23rd Psalm is: "The politician is my shepherd and I shall not want. He filleth my pockets with good cigars and my glass of beer floweth over, etc." There is not one redeeming feature in the use of strong drink. It is a creator of drunkards. It fills the jails and charitable institutions and is the cause of millions of broken hearts and blighted homes. The trumpedup story of revenue is a false one. Gladstone said: "Give us a sober people and the revenue will look after itself."

Prohibition of the traffic is the only and I shall not want. He filleth my

Prohibition of the traffic is the only sure remedy. HOME RULE FOR IRELAND

The Struggle of a Century For Political Rights

By Wm. Halley

For the length of a lifetime the writer of this has been a student of the Irish question, with his sympathies strongly for the Irish people. In Daniel O'Connell's time he read O'Connell's and Shiel's speeches and learned of some of the grievances the Irish people were laboring under then. He was born and brought up among them and knew there was but little or no exaggeration in what those great orators stated. O'Connell, however, made the mistake as a leader of abusing the Saxon, and made enemies of the English people. There were some excuses for this by provocations received. Lord Lyndhurst said in the House of Lords "the Irish were aliens in race, in language and in religion," and gave it as a reason why the English people did not like them, and this gave Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the length of the Lalor Shiel the opportunity of the Lalor Shiel the lalor Sh lish people did not like them, and this gave Lalor Shiel the opportunity for one of his most celebrated retorts in the House of Commons, when he defended the Irish by asking Lord Lyndhurst to "go ask Arthur Duke of Wellington if their blood or their religion kept them from fighting for the empire, and gave him an army of Irishmen in the Peninsula which was not surpassed in the history of the legions of the great Napoleon in many a battle." So there was during O'Connell's time a racial as well as a political warfare carried on between the two peoples, and when the Irish reapers went over to England in the harvest time they were often chased and driven away by the English workmen, and it was difficult for the poor Irish who sought employment in the cities to get it because of the prejudices that pravailed against them.

Williams' and the beginning of Queen Victoria's reigns was very hard. Bad government in their domestic affairs put them at a great disadvantage. They were ignorant because the government begrudged them educational facilities; they were impoverished because they had to pay exorbitant rents to landlords and church tithes to the ministers of a church they did not believe in. There were no sanitary conditions existing to safeguard the health of the people, and many farmhouses were lunatic asylums, as there were no public places for demented people. They were encouraged to be come drunkards that the coffers of the government might be kept replemished by the excise duty on spirits, and their burdens were so great and their, relief so distant that they are the province and their relief so distant that they are the province and thought and trouble, that should have been given to peaceful and province and thought and trouble, that should have been given to peaceful and province and thought and trouble, that should have been given to peaceful and province and thought and trouble, that should have been given to peaceful and province and thought and the province and thought a and their burdens were so great and their relief so distant that they naturally took to drink to drown their sorrows. But even then they were considered one of the most light-hearted people in Europe. There are a hundred other conditions that might be mentioned to keep the poor of Ireland in misery did space permit or the occasion call for their recital. In the north the Catholic Irish were continually assailed to keep them from getting hold of the land, so that was what the Orange institution was first principally founded for—to keep them from getting hold of the land.

Within my time the first great with the Catholic Irish were continually assailed to keep them from getting hold of the land.

The right man can learn all this quick: and he can learn, too, how we make the CAPITAL buy itself in a very few months' time. The selling terms are the easiest kind of terms. The guarantee back of every CAPITAL machine absolutely protects the environmen and gives the agent a feeling protects the customer and gives the agent a feeling of solid security that's worth having. It's a fair, square, straightcut chance, this, for the right kind of a man to make money and make friends for himself. The CAPITAL does that for every man who sells it, because it makes money for every man who buys it.

Think it all over,—remember you are not called on to invest a cent.—we will show you how and where to sell the CAPITAL,—protect you in your district,—and hand you over a paying business that will profit you well for as much or as little time as you feel you can give it. time as you feel you can give it.
