"NATIONAL HERO SERIES" NO. 6

William Wallace—Scotland's Great Patriot

FOR nearly seven hundred years the sons and daughters of Scotland have revered the memory of Wallace. It is not too much to say that this will continue for seventy times seven hundred years. When but a youth the love of Personal and National Liberty burned so fiercely in the breast of Wallace that he revolted against England's tyrannous rule. At the head of his gallant band of riders he won skirmish after skirmish, and finally, at the opportune time, quickly organized an army and routed the English at Stirling Bridge. William Wallace admired a good Barley-Malt brew just as do the Scotchmen of to-day. Prohibition has ever been a detestable word to the Scotch people. They will not have it enter into their private lives, and the Scotch vote is always registered by a large majority against such sumptuary legislation. In America they have done much to build up the country. Thousands of our solid Scotch citizens are patrons of the honest brews of Anheuser-Busch and have been constant users of BUDWEISER. They have helped to make the annual sales of this world-famed brand exceed those of any other beer by millions of bottles.

Bottled only at the home plant.

CHAPTER XVII.

"Because I am here to-night. They told me that you had gone, and I came to see the place you had left, the place you had lived in and loved. Listen, Harry; I must speak. Ah, you ought not to make me; but if you will not, I must! I—!" Her voice broke, and her face crimsoned, and drooped, but she lifted it proudly, almost haughtily. "I want to tell you what you were too proud to hear."

"I proud, proud!" he murmured, inarticulately.

"Yes, Harry. Proud! See—you are so proud that you draw away from me—"

It was more than mortal man could withstand. With a low cry he caught her in his arms and held her, looking down into her eyes until she hid them against his breast.

"Yes, you are prouder than I am," she murmured, with a little sob, "for I have dared to come and tell you what I have thought."

"What have you thought?" he asked hoarsely.

"I have thought of all you said, and—Harry—must I say it?—I do not care!"

"You do not care?"

"No! I do not care! What does anything matter—what does all the world matter to me, if—if you love me? And you do love me, Harry!"

"Yes, I love you," he said, and the words rang solemnly in her ears.

A thrill of delight ran through her. "You love me! Yes, I know it! It was of yourself you were speaking when you told me—ah, Harry! what cruel words you spoke! You would leave me, leave me all alone, and loving you!"

"My angel, my queen!" was all that he could say.

"You will not go now?" she whispered, raising her eyes to his, half proudly, half piteously—"not now?"

"No!" he breathed. "I cannot! I cannot!"

There was silence for a moment, as he kissed her hair reverently, passionately.

"Have you counted the cost?" he whispered gravely.

"The cost?"

"Yes," he said, hoarsely. "Do you know what the world will say—your friends—"

She put up her hand and laid it on his lips.

"The world! What do I care for it? What do I know of it? And I have no friends, can have no friend one-half, one hundredth part so dear as you!"

"Oh, merciful Heaven! what can I say—do?" he murmured. "They will say, dearest, that you stooped to marry your servant; you, the lady of Darracourt—"

She smiled up at him.

"My servant! My master in everything, Harry! Yes, everything, for you have taught me to—love you!"

As he held her closely to him he caught sight of the clematis spray.

"You wore this?" he whispered, holding it.

She took it from her dress and kissed it.

"I would have worn it if it had been of thorns!" she murmured.

He took it reverently and pressed it to his lips, and silence reigned supreme for a moment. Then he seemed to awake from the spell of happiness which had fallen upon him.

"Lucille! my darling! you must go!" he murmured hoarsely.

"Yes," she said, with a sigh, "I will go. But you will not?"

"No," he murmured. "Ah, my queen! do you know what it is that you are making me do?"

She shook her head, looking up at him trustfully.

"You are making me sacrifice honor—fidelity—conscience! Lucille, you will never regret it? You will never reproach me? In the future, when you come to know what it is that stands between us, this gulf which our love has bridged over, you will never cast it in my teeth—"

She drew away from him as far as his arms would permit.

"I reproach you!" she murmured. "No! Not while I love you!"

"Then let it be as the gods have willed it!" he cried, with a glance round him. "Dearest, I will stay. You shall be—my wife!"

"Harry!"

"Yes, I will dare all, even your scorn in the future when the truth is known to you! I will dare all. You are my honor and my conscience! and the bent and kissed her, letting his eyes rest upon her lovely, tear-stained face, and the jewels gleaming in her hair. And she shrank from the embrace of his strong arms no longer, but gave him kiss for kiss. Then suddenly she took alarm.

"I must go, Harry, at once. I—I have forgotten everything, the hour—everything. Come to me to-morrow. Ah, to think that you are here still—and not gone! Harry, when I told me, it nearly killed me, for I did not believe it when you said that you would go. I did not think you would be so hard and cruel, knowing that I loved you!"

"Not not!" he said. "Come, now, darling, you must not be seen here by prying eyes."

"Who should see me, Harry?" she said, with a tremulous laugh, as he gathered the shawl round her, kissing her hands as he did so.

"No, no one," he said. "Hope is at home with his sick wife, and I am on watch for him. There is no one. But come now, my queen!"

"No," she said, half meekly, half imperiously. "You shall not come. I will go alone. But you will come to-morrow?"

"Yes, to-morrow."

"And then all the world may know?"

"All the world," he said.

She put up her face and kissed him once, then, breaking from his arms, with crimson face and throbbing heart, darted down the path.

He stood like a man bewildered, rooted to the spot, looking round him with a dazed, incredulous air, such as a starving man might wear who had heard that he had suddenly come into a large fortune. With uncertain steps he moved towards the door of the hut, but he had no sooner reached it than he seemed to awake. With a low cry of remorse he dropped upon the stone step, crying:

"What have I done? What have I done? Oh, my queen, my queen! I, who ought to have warned you against yourself, to drag you down to my death! No, never, never! Rather death itself than that! Death! Flight will be death; but I must fly! Yes, I must go while there is time! What, drag that peerless creature to your level? No, no, Harry! You are not so vile and base as that! No, I will go!"

Then he held out his arms towards the spot where she had stood.

"Farewell, my queen! It is for your sake—yours!" and with heavy steps and leaden feet, he dragged himself into the hut.

A minute afterwards Marie Verner crept up to the window and looked in. He had lit a candle, and was hastily packing a small handbag. She waited and watched with keen, merciless eyes until he had finished, then she drew back into the shadow.

Five minutes afterwards he came out, and locking the door after him, threw the key with a wild gesture on to the doorstep. He stood while one could count twenty, and looked at the hut and round about him; then, with a heavy sigh, he slung the bag over his shoulder by a stick, and went slowly, heavily, from the spot.

Marie Verner stood perfectly motionless for full five minutes. She knew that a movement would discover her to his quick ears, then carefully she glided out of the glade. She proceeded slowly and noiselessly until she had reached the skirt of the wood, and then ran swiftly to the park fence and gained the Hall grounds. There was a light burning in the window of the small dining room and she went towards it.

A dog barked in the stable, and she stood still, listening to the beating of her own heart, for a minute or two.

Then she went carefully up to the window, and gathering a handful of the gravel from the path, threw it at the window. A minute that seemed an hour passed. Then she heard a step within. Some one carefully let the bar drop from the shutter, and opened the window.

It was the marquis. He was still in evening dress, and he held a revolver in his hand.

"Now then, please," he said, in his most impassive voice; "what is it?"

Marie Verner glided into the patch of light that streamed from the room, and laid her hand on his arm.

"Quiet!" she whispered.

He started slightly and dropped the revolver in his pocket.

"You!" he exclaimed. "What has happened?"

"Happened! What do you think has happened?" she retorted scornfully.

"Come inside," he said.

She followed him in, and threw the hood from her face. It was white to the lips, which seemed bloodless, but her eyes burned with the lurid fire of malign triumph.

"Give me—some wine first!" she said, panting a little.

WOMAN IN TERRIBLE STATE

Finds Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cape Wolfe, Canada.—"Last March I was a complete wreck. I had given up all hope of getting better or living any length of time, as I was such a sufferer from female troubles. But I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and today I am in good health and have a pair of twin boys two months old and growing finely. I surprised doctors and neighbors for they all know what a wreck I was.

"Now I am healthy, happy and hearty, and owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies. You may publish this letter, if you like. I think if more women used your remedies they would have better health."—Mrs. J. T. Cook, Lot No. 7, Cape Wolfe, P.E.I., Canada.

Because your case is a difficult one, and doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has remedied many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, and it may be exactly what you need.

The Pinkham record is a proud and peerless one. It is a record of constant victory over the obstinate ills of women—ills that deal out despair. It is an established fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored health to thousands of such suffering women. Why don't you try it if you need such a medicine?

A Thought for the Times

CHAPTER VI.—THE WAR.
I. C. MORRIS.

There have been so many strange places mentioned in the reports which have come to us from the seat of war, that at times one is somewhat at a loss to know where they are really situated, and what bearing one country has upon another, and how they are each bounded. It may not, therefore, be amiss to devote this chapter to the geography of the nations now at war, and to endeavour to clear up their boundaries and define their position a little, as all our readers may not have maps to consult.

As a centre around which the other powers revolve we will begin with Germany, which, with Austria-Hungary, may be said to be the heart of Europe. The northern boundary of Germany is Denmark, the Baltic Sea, and the North Sea. Its eastern boundary is Russia, and its western boundary is France, Belgium and the Netherlands while it is bounded on the south by Switzerland and Austria. This shows us that but one fourth of German territory is bounded by water, and that the remaining three-fourths are totally surrounded by land. All these boundaries have been marked by the devastations of warfare, and it may be said that they have been sealed with blood; and not only by modern wars, but by the conflicts of a thousand centuries.

With geographical interests so closely allied, it is an easy matter to understand how a breach of treaty on the part of one nation, would arouse the opposition of the others; and more especially where there is such a network of dynasties as the present scene of combat includes. Thus was it that Germany's intrusion of Belgium complicated the European powers, and brought on this great war now raging. Germany had two hundred miles or more of boundary-line by which she could have invaded France without intruding on Belgium soil. By attacking France along this line she would have been within the limits of international law, and the fight would have been a fair one. But this line is well fortified by the French, and every precaution taken for defence; and with the understanding that neutral powers were not to be interfered with, the French nation naturally expected, that should war break out between herself and Germany, the scene of conflict should be at this place. But Germany saw, or thought she saw, an easier way of attack; hence her intrusion across the little State of Belgium. By this route the forts of France would be avoided, and a possible easy entry into Paris be made. But Germany found her mistake. She thought she had a short cut to victory, but her plans have been frustrated, and the little power which she seemed to have despised, has taught her a lesson not soon to be forgotten. It is an old saying that "the shortest way round is the longest way home," and it has proven so with the German attack upon France. Her supposedly short cut, and her presumably open march across little Belgium has cost her the loss of tens and tens of thousands of her forces, and has caused her such delay in her movements as she will find entirely impossible to overtake. But it has cost her something more than even these—she has forfeited her honour. She has broken, and openly violated the laws of neutrality, and by this action has brought a bluish upon her escutcheon. But this is not all, for the bluish is darkened by the fact that the neutral State was a comparatively small power, and therefore was not the equal of such a large nation as Germany.

Belgium has indeed done nobly, and the persistence of her soldiers will be long renowned. The Spartans of old were noted for their bravery, and in verse and song their praises have long been spoken, but the daring of little Belgium has won for her the praise and admiration of the world, and shown her the Spartan of the twentieth century. She did not make this war, but she exerted her rights and stood up in self defence. She certainly had her quarrel just, and "twice armed is he who hath his quarrel just," so says Shakespeare; and so say we all.

The European powers which are engaged in this war represent the greatest factors in civilization, and have done a great deal for the benefit of the world. In the early ages of Christianity and in the medieval ages, before our Western World was known, the power of Europe was felt, and the annals of history contain many pages of her great deeds. Those deeds were divided among the different nations of the continent, and at various dates each nation did its part. The chivalry of France and the gallantry of Spain and the renown of Portugal are established, and the soldier of Greece and the strength of Italy have all played their part in the story of Europe; and now it falls to Belgium to rank among these greater powers as one of the bravest of the brave. At present the full importance of her achievements cannot be fully appreciated, but when the war is past, and its black clouds are gone, and the situation properly considered, the true strategic value of her victories will become the better known. Belgium's soldiers have added to the glory of their nation, and the allies of the Empire, and the world at large, will join in the universal acclaim and say: "Well done!"

Meeting of the Patriotic Association.

A meeting of the Patriotic Committee was held at the C.I.B. Armoury last night, and was presided over by His Excellency the Governor. With him on the platform were Sir Joseph Outerbridge the Premier and Mr. Kent, Leader of the Opposition. At the opening of the meeting His Excellency read the latest official dispatch, which told of the success of the allied troops, and was greeted with much applause. His Excellency suggested that the committee resolve itself into an Association, stating that the idea had come to him through the Secretary's incidental use of the term "Association," instead of "Committee."

Mr. Cliff, the Chairman of the Nominating Committee, stated that there was nothing of importance to report. Committees had been formed in the outposts and were doing their work satisfactorily.

Mr. H. Outerbridge, on behalf of the Equipment Committee and the Commissariat Committee reported that it was found impossible to procure khaki serge for uniforms, and as a substitute fatigue uniforms are being made from material supplied by a local concern at a small cost. A supply of puttees will be made here, and stock hats will be imported. Great coats have been ordered from Montreal and these will arrive in due time.

The Committee also reported on the regimental pay of the various ranks, engaged in service, as in the militia, and the amount granted officers towards defraying expenses of their outfit. The report was adopted, and the rate of pay will be left to the decision of the Governor in Council.

The Quartermaster reported an improvement of conditions in the camp, which at first were not up to requirements owing to lack of experience. Some recommendations made by the medical officer are now under consideration.

Mr. W. H. Rennie, on behalf of the Musketry Committee submitted a lengthy report, showing that considerable progress had been made. Some of the recruits were found to have defective sight and consequently their success at the range was not possible with them. The Committee wished to thank Commander McDermott, of H. M.S. Calypso, for use of service rifles and ammunition, and Mr. R. Templeton for the use of miniature rifles. The Committee also reported on the matter of rifles, which have been ordered, and will cost together with ammunition, Colt revolvers, web equipments, etc., in the vicinity of $38,400.

His Excellency explained that they were unable to obtain the 500 Ross rifles at first, but they will probably come later, though 500 Lee Enfield have been ordered.

Mr. A. Montgomery, on behalf of the Recruiting Committee, reported that 880 had enrolled for service. The number considered fit for foreign service totaled 620, and medical reports had not been received from 120. Recruiting in the city has been suspended for a time, but correspondence is being kept up with the magistrates in the outposts with a view to output recruiting.

Mr. A. J. Harvey reported for the Transport Committee, saying that a steamer was available for the transportation of the regiment, but matters are not yet finalized.

Hon. E. R. Bowring, Chairman of the Finance Committee, reported that some $12,900 had been spent for equipment and other necessities. The Patriotic Fund is now $38,000 with $36,000 in sight. Mr. Bowring urged the necessity of the people sending along their amounts as soon as possible.

Sir Joseph Outerbridge stated that many applications had been made for commissions, and the provisional recommendations of the Committee had been forwarded to His Excellency. These mentioned were under observation with a view to finding the fittest for final selection.

His Excellency appointed Hon. Jas. Harvey as convener of a select committee to draw up a programme for the establishment of a permanent Volunteer Corps.

After a brief report of the conditions at Pleasantville, by Major Franklin, and some remarks by His Excellency the Governor, the meeting closed.

The Great German Coup Has Failed!

There can be no doubt now that the great German coup has failed. The strategy that planned to cripple France in the West before Russia could become formidable in the East has miscarried. A week ago Paris was threatened from the North and the East, and Uhlans had even penetrated to its west. Paris is no longer threatened from the north and the news is that the Germans are retreating in disorder to the East along the valley of the River Marne. Russia has already proved herself formidable in the Western theatre of the war. She has overrun most of the Austrian provinces of Galicia and has succeeded in driving apart the Prussians and Austrians who were attempting to join in the South of Russian Poland and defeated them. Further north she has inflicted heavy defeats on the Germans in East Prussia at Soldan, Gumbinnen and Tilsit and is overrunning the greater part of East Prussia. In addition to exerting pressure along the whole German frontier of West Prussia, Posen and Silesia. True she met with a severe setback a fortnight ago at Allenstein, but disregarding that she is assuming tremendous proportions in the Western theatres of the war and contributing largely to the failure of the German coup. One of the gratifying features of the struggle is the prominent part played by the British expeditionary force under General French. After doing effective work in destroying the great enveloping movement of the German right wing operating in the North West of France, by forced marches, it has been put in the centre of the fighting with the French on its right and left wings in the Marne department and is playing a leading part in driving back the Germans along the Valley of the Marne. The lesson learned by the British as to the value of marksmanship in the Boer War has not been lost, for British marksmanship has according to General Joffre, the French Commander-in-Chief, been wonderful, and assisted the allies materially. The hard-training of the British expeditionary force at Aldershot, and the field sports of the army have turned out an army which the French look upon as an army of athletes. The part played by our troops is most gratifying and will put a British hall mark on the million troops Kitchener is training. Kitchener made an army in Egypt. His drill sergeants won admiration nearly twenty years ago. His officers won renown in South Africa, and for years they have been at work on the army which is now winning renown. He may be trusted to turn out a big army of Ironsides, whose prowess will go down in history like the Cromwells of Ironsides. As Churchill put it: "It is our life or the Germans." This is a fight to a finish and the German coup has failed. Six weeks has elapsed since Germany commenced her invasion of Luxembourg and Belgium to strike the crippling blow at France and to-day France is not yet crippled and the Russians are worrying Germany and Austria. In the Franco-German war in six weeks France was crippled by Germany and the battle of Sedan had been fought. To-day the armies of France, Britain and Russia are practically intact and their resources are far greater than Germany can bring in the field in future. True it is that the German armies are also practically intact and in the east they are concentrating and trying to get clear routes in the north east of France, to move by the shortest route either forward to Paris or back to Berlin as occasion may require. Whatever Germany may do in future and she is undoubtedly formidable, the great coup of her strategy—the quick crippling of France has failed.

RUSSIAN TROOPS WIN GREAT VICTORY.

SPECIAL TO EVENING TELEGRAM.
PETROGRAD, To-day.
It is announced the Russian troops have succeeded in separating the left wing of the Austrian army from the troops which were operating around Tomoscow and Rawa, in Russian Poland. Tomoscow has been taken after a desperate fight. The German troops near Alystac and Cherezi, in Russian Poland, have been repulsed with heavy losses. Russian troops have taken by assault the fortified positions of Opel and Tourbine in Russian Poland, and pursued the enemy for a distance of 25 miles.

GREAT GERMAN COUP FAILED.

LONDON, To-day.
The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph has sent the following from the front: The last remnants of the German cavalry have been destroyed and a large part of mobile artillery and ammunition trains have been taken and a huge number of their rank and file have been either captured or cut off. A wireless message to Berlin which was intercepted here said: "We are badly in need of horses and supplies." A German General who stopped in an inn here last night was overheard to say to one of his aides, "a great disaster has overtaken us. An English officer of an Aviation Scouting Corps remarked: 'It will be a miracle if any of these Germans get home again.' Their only anxiety now is to increase the distance between themselves and their pursuers. They do not know that the tide has turned in the Allies' favor. The great German coup has failed. There will be no siege of Paris and the Government can safely return from Bordeaux at once.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING OF LIBERAL, CONSERVATIVE AND LABOR PARTIES. CHURCHILL'S G. B. E. T. SPEECH—MILLION BRITISH FOR THE FRONT.

LONDON, To-day.
Under the auspices of the National Liberal and Constitutional Clubs, the two great rival organizations of the Metropolis, whose members before this war were scarcely on speaking terms, an enthusiastic meeting was held last night in support of the Prime Minister's call for recruits. The chief speakers were Winston Churchill, F. E. Smith, Director of Official Press Bureau, and J. Will Crooks, a Labor Leader in the Commons. In concluding his speech, Churchill said, the number of battleships that will be completed within the next twelve months will be more than double the number for Germany, and the number of cruisers will be three or four times as great. The superiority of the country being effectively maintained. "What we now have to do is to make under cover and shield of the Navy a great army strong enough to enable the country to take its proper share in the decision of this terrible struggle. To make the assistance of the Empire more effective we should put on the Continent and keep there an army of at least one million men. That figure is well within the compass of the arrangements now on foot, and well within the scope of the measures which Kitchener has taken. By the New Year we will have an additional half million men ready for the field and by the summer of 1915 we will have 25 army corps in fighting shape. It is our life against the Germans. Upon that there must be no compromise or truce; we must go forth unflinchingly to the end."

BRITISH CAPTURE 6,000 PRISONERS AND 15 GUNS.

SPECIAL TO EVENING TELEGRAM.
LONDON, To-day.
A despatch to the Daily News from Paris, says a motor car brings news from the front that the first and second divisions of the British army with French cavalry and artillery cut off and defeated a large force of the enemy, sixty miles northeast of Paris, taking 6,000 of the enemy prisoners and fifteen guns. The Germans are reported as being demoralized. The half starved prisoners ravenously devoured beef and biscuits supplied by the British troops. During the fight 50 British cyclists from the cover of a small wood wiped out 150 of the enemy's cavalry. The Allies' losses were severe, but they are as nothing in comparison to those of the enemy who is now retreating north of Marne and west of Ouro.

$3,000 in Fines.

To-day was "fox day" at the Magistrate Court, and a very profitable one for the revenue of the country. Dr. Foster, who was charged with having purchased eleven foxes out of season for the purpose of exportation, pleaded guilty and was fined $1,000 or 6 months, besides the confiscation of the foxes.
Two men named Murphy pleaded guilty to violating two sections of the Act. They were fined altogether $1,000, which was paid.
Four trappers named Beck, Bennett and Barrington (2), who sold the foxes to Dr. Foster in close season, were each fined $250 or 3 months. They went down. Out of the amount paid, Sergt. Nosworthy, who rounded up the defendants, get half, which is $1,000.

GENERAL FRENCH'S ARMY PLACED IN CENTRE AND PLAYS LEADING PART IN DRIVING BACK THE GERMANS.

LONDON, To-day.
Reuter's Langy, France, correspondent in a despatch sent on Thursday says: A trip along the valley of Marne to-day brought gratifying evidence of the reality of the German retreat. On Sunday the British and Germans were at Grippe East of this place. Since then the Teuton has been driven steadily back beyond Trolport and Grey-en-brie, the line where the hardest fighting occurred beyond the Meaux where the Teuton now is. In this strategic movement of General Von Kluck's army rearward along the Marne Valley, the British army has played a leading role. General French's army advanced to meet the German Emperor's hosts with what must have been forced marches from their temporary base to Southeast of

GERMANY'S ARMY DEMORALIZED.

LONDON, Sept. 11.

To the Governor,
St. John's, Newfoundland.

The following is from the Press Bureau, regarding the position in France: The general retreat of the enemy continued yesterday. Between prisoners and wounded the British force captured fifteen hundred, besides several guns, maxims and a large quantity of transport. The enemy is retiring very rapidly east of Soissons in some disorder. A later telegram states that yesterday's captures were larger than stated above. Considerable bodies of infantry are being found hiding in the woods, having been left behind owing to rapid retirement. They surrender at sight. This and the rifling of villages and evidences of drunkenness point to the demoralization of the routed enemy. The pursuit is being vigorously pressed.

The general retirement of Germans east of Paris continues, according to a statement this afternoon by the War Bureau. It is stated that British troops yesterday captured 1,500 prisoners and several guns.

GERMAN ARMY FATIGUED.

LONDON, Sept. 11.

A despatch from Rome says a telegram received there from Berlin states the evacuation of Upper Alsace by the German troops continues; they are withdrawing to the fortresses of Strassburg and Metz. It is admitted the German army in France is extremely fatigued, whereas the Allies are continually being reinforced by fresh troops.

GERMAN COLONY ATTACKED.

LONDON, Sept. 11.

A despatch from Blantyre, British Central Africa, says the steamer Gwendolin from Lake Nyassa, shelled the German station at Langenburg Head, on the Lake in German East Africa. No opposition was offered.

ITALIAN MILITARY ATTACHE LEAVES BERLIN.

PARIS, Sept. 11.

AN IMPORTANT CAPTURE.

KINGSTON, Sept. 11.

The Hamburg-American line steamer Bethonia was captured by a British cruiser when two days out from Charlotten. The prize was brought here last night. She had on board six hundred tons of coal and six months' supply of provisions for the German cruisers Dresden and Karlsruhe. She had been equipped as an auxiliary cruiser, but threw her armament overboard on sighting her pursuer. Her crew was composed of five hundred reservists.

GERMAN AVIATOR KILLED.

LONDON, Sept. 11.

A despatch from Amsterdam says that Count Urmul, a German aviator, died from a fall from an aeroplane.

A TALKATIVE AMBASSADOR.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.

President Wilson, to-day, asked Secretary of State Bryan to call the attention of the Turkish Ambassador, A. Rustom Bey, to recent statements attributed to him in the newspapers, and to enquire if they were authorized.

THE STORY OF THE BATTLE.

PARIS, Sept. 12.

Officially announced that the German centre as well as their right wing is retreating. "Germans continue to retreat. British have taken eleven cannon and many prisoners." This was the gist of an official report issued here to-night. French military authorities who, heretofore, had confined information made public concerning the military operations in East Prussia, and laconic statements of very general character, to-day gave lengthy descriptions of the most important battle since the beginning of hostilities. Evidently the left wing of the Allied armies facing northeast have before the brunt of the preliminary engagements, in which the British took such a prominent part. They are the object of the highest compliments on the part of French military men.

The combat, according to the official announcement, seems to be developing into the abandonment of at least the advance positions held by the Germans, who, it is announced, are retiring along the greater part of the line. This retirement is said to have been for forty-five miles at some points. Furious onslaughts, some times by French, again by Germans, occurred about the centre of an extensive line in the neighborhood of Vitry Le Francois.

Three great German armies, commanded by General Von Kluck, the Crown Prince Frederick William and the Duke of Wurttemberg, effected a junction and repeatedly hurled themselves against the French positions with the greatest vigor, but they were not able to achieve the seeming object of breaking the Anglo-French armies. The French and British offered an equally vigorous resistance, eventually compelling the Germans to withdraw.

Fighting continued throughout last night, and the Allies' position, it is understood, was improved to-day. Rain storms caused great difficulties in the marshy districts, but did not stop operations. Fusillades by troops and artillery duels proceeded all day. It is believed the retiring Germans suffered more than the Allies from the rain storm, as their withdrawing columns were encumbered with baggage and ammunition wagons.

INVITATION ACCEPTED.

CAIRO, Sept. 11.

By invitation of the British military authorities, the German Charge d'Affaires and the Austrian diplomat agent were deported from Egypt to-day.

Sciatica Vanishes Instantly If Nerviline is Used.

CAN YOU BEAT THIS CASE?

No ordinary liniment will even relieve Sciatica. Nothing but the most powerful kind of a remedy can penetrate through the tissues and finally reach the Sciatic Nerve. You can always depend on the old-time "Nerviline." Nothing made to-day is as good for Sciatica as Nerviline was when first produced, about forty years ago. All this time the same old "Nerviline" has been curing Sciatica, Lumbago, Rheumatism. It is considered to be without an equal in relieving pain or soreness anywhere. "Nerviline" couldn't be made stronger or better," writes James E. Edwards. "The way it cures Sciatica is to me simply a miracle. For years I suffered frightfully. I ruined my stomach with internal dosing. I rubbed in gallons of oil and liniments—none were strong enough. One good rubbing with Nerviline relieved. I kept on rubbing and shortly was cured. My father cured rheumatism in his right arm and shoulder with Nerviline, and my mother cured herself of chronic lumbago with Nerviline. Our family simply swears by Nerviline and we are never without a 50c. family size bottle in our home. We find that for external pain, for coughs, colds, earache, such minor ills it is a veritable family physician."

An Excellent Programme.

The excellent programme presented at the Crescent Picture Palace yesterday was thoroughly appreciated by all who had the good fortune to attend. The feature picture, "The End of the Trail," is a mexican masterpiece, and the "Boob's Honeymoon" is a delightful comedy that had everyone in good humour.

Miss Clark's singing of Moore's immortal melodies is a treat in itself, the same bill will be repeated to-night, and no one should miss taking in this great show.

OFFICIAL FRENCH NEWS.

Sept. 12th, 1914.

The following has been posted at St. Pierre: As already announced a big battle has been going on since the sixth on a front extending from Paris to Verdun. From the first of the section the German right wing which had attained the region at the north of the province was obliged to retreat before the strong conditions of the Allies. The Germans sustained very heavy losses, thanks to the bravery of the Allies, permitting our offensive army to progress. This German army, commanded by General Von Kluck, is actually in retreat towards the Aisne and the Oise, so this shows a retreat of 10 to 30 miles since 4 days. The Franco-English forces continue to harass the Germans at right wing; the situation is still unchanged. The Germans abandoned numerous ammunition. The British captured eleven important cannons and took twelve to fifteen hundred prisoners. Although the important reinforcements the Duke of the Austrian army is thrown to Jalonne, the Russians are besieging the fortified position of Crodek la Sec Conde. The Austrians attacked near Tomachow were compelled to retreat. The Servians have crossed the Save and Danube at Chablatz in Bosnia and have taken the offensive towards Visegrad. The Italian Government has recalled her military attaches from Berlin and Vienna though renewing her declaration of neutrality. The Turkish army will not be able to move on account of mutiny among troops and lack of finances.

The Soldier's Farewell.

Upon the hill he turned
To take a last fond look
Of the village and the village church
And the cottage by the brook.

He listened to the sounds
So familiar in his ear;
And the soldier leant upon his sword
And wiped away a tear!

He turned and left the spot
But do not deem him weak,
For dauntless was the soldier's heart
Tho' the tear was on his cheek!

Go watch the foremost ranks,
In danger's dark career,
Be seen the hand most daring then
Has wiped away a tear!—Selected.

The Silent Briton.

An American Tribute.

(By Herbert Kaufman, in the London Times.)

The following article has been sent to us as a record of the impressions of a distinguished American journalist who was in London at the outbreak of the war. It is a remarkable tribute to the temper of the British people at a time of national crisis.

War! Seven nations simultaneously battling for existence; Europe trembling under the tramp of 12,000,000 soldiers; war by Dreadnought and submarine; war by Zeppelin and aeroplane; the combined armies of Genghis Khan, Timur, Xerxes, Hannibal, Caesar, Saladin, and Napoleon pyramized by contrast with the hostile hosts; war at a cost of $12,000,000 per day; the proudest of centuries threatened by the most appalling ruin that ever scarred the memory of man; the delicately-adjusted and exquisitely organized machinery of production vandalized for 3,000,000 square miles; the commerce of the universe in chaos; art and science, agriculture and industry, halted by the bayonet; civilization with a sword point at her heart; the Bank Act suspended; the Stock Exchanges of the world closed; the calculations of the five races dislocated; bewilderment from Canton, U. S. A., to Canton, China; and this, the biggest piece of news that ever broke since the Deluge, is calmly tucked away in the heart of the London morning papers, while page one, as per wont, is devoted to the necessities of sundry anonymous ladies and gentlemen in quest of loans, lodgers, and lovers, the latest additions to Madame Tussaud's Exhibition; intelligence of steamships, and undertakers' advertisements!

Magnificent! One reads the temper of a people in the attitude of its Press. What may humanity not expect from a hand capable of such calm and poise in the most dread hour of its history? The self-possession of London is incredible—and Britain is as London is.

Let foemen beware of a nation whose women do not wall, and whose men do not cheer at the call to arms. The Semite, and therefore emotional Xerxes, failed to comprehend the significance of Sparta's deliberate never as formidable as when pertumescing. The Lacedaemonian was never so formidable as when pertumescing and unincensed to face his gods in befitting elegance.

And beneath all this seeming disregard of potentialities, which deceiveth more than an alien observer, I sense a Spartan resignation on the part of London.

To me she is working to the last hour to order her affairs—availing herself of every opportunity to protect—so far as lies within the power of her citizens—the welfare of the non-combatant population.

And what may appeal to many as an underestimation of the struggle upon which Britain has entered is rather the sober and far-sighted intent of the community to support King and country, as and when needed, with a patriotism too deep for surface display.

I stood in the throng before Buckingham Palace when the King's Proclamation was read to the people. I moved from point to point in the crowd, listened, and watched.

Only a witness of the scene could understand the British heart that night. There were mothers and wives, and daughters, and sisters in the press to whom the portentous words were sentences of desolation. Not a tear peeped from the cheek of a child or a greyhead. Instantly there were born a thousand new soldiers, who there received summonses to the most desperate conflict upon which the Empire would ever embark.

Their vision rent the veils of the horizon, and disclosed the ominous German millions, and there was at least one gun in those silent ranks for each of their hearts. And they must have remembered the women whom they were to marry, and their minds must have caressed the wives they would leave behind, and they must have thought of the families dependent upon their earnings and protection. But what they spoke to their souls only God heard.

There were but few cheers. Even the boys and the occasional boogian, feebly mafficking here and there, were soon silent. Perhaps they could not interpret the reverent and solemn spirit of their elders, but something deeper than their ken laid its spell upon their tongues and stilled them to respect all of the unknown.

When their Majesties appeared all heads were uncovered. "God Save the King" sobbed through the night as though cathedral arches spread about us, and the notes were those of an anthem.

In little groups the people dispersed. Save for an occasional low voice floating back to the empty square, the masses along the Mall were noiseless shadows in a dim picture. And when all were gone and the scarlet-unicked sentries alone remained before the Palace, a strangely white moon seemed to sail straight to the centre of the vast space, and its light fell as if in augury upon the austere head of the old Queen sitting guard over her royal capital.

As was London that night, so is London this morning. The aspect of the city is unaltered. Save for the Press bulletins, and the cries of the paper sellers, one meets with no sign of perturbation or excitement. For a thousand years I have borne the tread of regiments, and always the Tomorrows of London are greater than her Yesterdays. Take example from me, and attend to your allotted tasks, as I now proceed with mine.

me tremendously. Youth predominates in the ranks, but it is youth rapidly maturing with an appreciation of the responsibility ahead. I am surprised at the number of undisciplined volunteers and cannot but contrast the personnel of the new levies with some of the Dutch and Belgian soldiers whom I saw earlier in the year. The French of the Mid Corps, too, average much better physically. But let it be remembered that this is a struggle in which intelligence will play no small part, and the English boys are of a finer intellectual type—they are clean-cut and wholesome youngsters. Their clear complexions and coats of tan bespeak an outdoor training which will enable them to withstand far more stress and fatigue than their Continental fellows, whose looser habits but too frequently cancel their capacity of endurance.

Despite the spectacular episode at Liege, there will be little of the picturesque and colourful in the approaching campaigns. Personal heroism, the heroism of individual brain and boldness, will obtain little opportunity. The range of the weapons and modern tactics have set the struggle upon a basis of mathematics. The handling of millions of men will necessitate management much akin to the broad principles in practice with huge industrial organizations. Never before have the qualities which make for a successful business career meant so much in producing valuable soldiers.

System, as contrasted with red tape, simplicity of method, clear-headed calculation will count equally with ordnance.

This is to be a war in which Death will keep tally on automatic adding machines. Past military experiences will furnish slight guidance. It demands new rules and new tools. The ability to handle Titanic organizations with economy of action and energy will largely decide its outcome. The gravity of mistakes will be in geometrical proportion to the number of combatants involved.

The calmest nation will prove the most competent. Deliberation and self-control will magnify efficiency. Those least likely to lose their heads are best qualified to win their cause.

I do not fear for Britain's future. A people possessed of such adamant patience, or stubbornness—call it what you will—that they can afford to wait for their war news until the death notices and legal advertisements on the front pages have been carefully perused can hardly be expected to fall before any crisis.

College Education.
By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Swash."

A college education is a parlor game to knowledge. There is a widespread belief that the only way to acquire wisdom is to climb aboard a college and ride for years. This is a great mistake. The college system attains great speed between termini and transports the passengers from a state of heathen darkness regarding Latin, political economy and clothes to a state of erudition in great comfort. But the walking is also good.

The journey takes considerably longer when performed on foot, but large numbers of citizens have hooped the distance with great success. Abraham Lincoln did not get near enough to a college in his youth to apply for the janitorship thereof, yet at the age of twenty-three he was a lawyer and legislator and was extending kindly assistance to struggling young possessors of college degrees.

However, it is a great advantage to attend college and to travel through the wilderness of accumulated wisdom with able conductors and courteous attendants. It enables a young man to acquire in four years what would otherwise take him from ten years to a lifetime to obtain, and in these modern days it is also good for father, because it keeps him using last year's automobile, which is good enough for any one. A college education is a fine thing for a young man who desires to become a lawyer, minister, statesman, author, doctor, scholar, philanthropist, great baseball player or a general all-round good citizen. However, a great many college educations are entirely wasted.

The young man who proposes to become a modern high-pressure business man does not need education. What he mostly needs is a course under some good missionary. This will not help him become a millionaire, but it may prevent him from doing so by borrowing some other man's railroad and forgetting to return it.

THE PROGRAMME for the WEEK-END at THE NICKEL.

THE LUBIN CO'Y PRESENT IN TWO PARTS:—

"THE SEA ETERNAL."

This is a wonderful story of the sea coast. Corson, the miserly fish dealer, of Rorey's Point, sees an opportunity to get rid of his business rival, John Mason. Noticing his friendship for the pretty wife of John Toppley, he succeeds in circulating scandalous reports about them; they are sighted crossing the bay in a storm and are given up for lost—then, this is a powerful story, featuring Arthur V. Johnson.

The Pathe All-Star Cast in a Two-Part Production—"THE DEPTH OF HATE."

The story deals with the bitter hatred of a lodgekeeper's wife, who believes that her daughter has been killed by remorse. Her lover deserts her for the beautiful woman who owns the estate on which the lodge is located. Powerful realism here.

THE ACTRESS AND HER JEWELS—THE CONSTABLE'S DAUGHTER—THE BARBER'S CURE.

(Three rattling, good, laughable farce comedies.)

By Request, DeWitt C. Cairns sings Tosti's "Good-Bye." Professor P. J. McCarthy at the Piano; Joseph F. Ross, Master of Effects.
