American German-Irish Protest Ruhr Occupation.

Untrained French Troops Loose Rifle Fire on Populace—165th Session of Nova Scotia Parliament—Republican Chief Surrenders.

NEW YORK HYPHENATES PROTEST. McNeil, whose discharge last week precipitated the strike, will be made at a meeting on Friday.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22. One hundred and fifty thousand persons were in Madison Square Garden to-night and adopted resolutions protesting against French occupation of the Ruhr. The audience was composed for the most part of native born Germans and Irish Americans. Outside of the Garden were three hundred patrolmen in uniform, 25 motor cycle officers, twenty-five mounted policemen, six detectives in an emergency car and a riot squad with rifles.

IN CHICAGO ALSO. Resolutions protesting against the invasion of Ruhr by the French, and against further enforcement of the Versailles Treaty as "a menace to the peace and prosperity of the world," were adopted at a mass meeting at the Coliseum tonight, attended by several thousand persons. The resolution called upon President Harding to exert pressure on France to cause the withdrawal of Ruhr troops.

FRENCH START SHOOTING. BOCHUM, Feb. 22. Two French soldiers to-day fired point blank into a crowd of Germans in front of the Law Courts, killing one man and seriously wounding two others. The trouble occurred while French troops with tanks were occupying the Law Courts building and neighbouring prison on suspicion that several Frenchmen had been incarcerated as spies. During the course of the operation one German official was arrested and placed under arrest with a guard of French soldiers. Some bystanders hooted the soldiers, whereupon two of them fired into the crowd. The scene was witnessed by several foreign newspapermen. The crowd had not molested the soldiers and shooting was apparently due to nervousness of young and untried French soldiers. The population are greatly enraged over the shooting. Townspeople finding a Frenchman alone in the street mobbed and man-handled him. The Frenchman was removed battered and bleeding to the police station.

N.S. PARLIAMENT MEETS. HALIFAX, Feb. 22. The hundred and sixty-fifth assembly of Nova Scotia's Legislature opened this afternoon with the traditional ceremony by Lieut. Governor Grant, who read the speech from the Throne. There are many changes in the Ministry, notably the appearance of Hon. E. H. Armstrong, Minister of Works and Mines, as Premier, replacing Hon. G. H. Murray who resigned the Premiership a month ago, and his seat in Victoria County last week. Victoria County is the only constituency vacant this session. The speech from the Throne indicated progress during the past year and credit balance in provincial treasury.

Who Founded The Foresters?

The Story of a Famous Friendly Society.

Among the many great organizations without known beginnings is the Ancient Order of Foresters. Probably its founders were a number of men who met nightly for convivial purposes, and the idea of establishing it was suggested by the occasional absence of one of the party.

Learning that he was ill, the others may have made a collection for him, ultimately formed a society for helping one another in times of need. The earliest record of the Foresters consists of a list of members made in "Court No. 1" of the Ancient Royal Order of Foresters at Leeds in 1780. This order continued in existence until 1834, when 294 courts—then called "swainmotes"—were incorporated in the Ancient Order of Foresters, which held its first court at Salford in 1838.

The Peaceful Doves.

From the outset its colour has been green, and mainly for this reason it has always been the most popular friendly society in Ireland. Its processions, with bands playing patriotic airs, struck public fancy, and as the colour of the sashes worn by members was supposed to have something to do with the "Young Ireland" party, whose aim was indicated by the "wearing" of the green, people joined its ranks in large numbers.

When Forestry was reconstituted it spread rapidly. It reached the United States, and subsequently obtained a firm footing in Canada and Australia. About the same time—1837—was begun what is now the immense London district.

Foresters were founded a number of Juvenile Foresters Societies, some of which are still flourishing. Two were established at Hull and Wilmalov in 1847, and one at Blackrod (Lancashire) was established in the following year.

Women's lodges were often proposed, but Foresters, in common with other friendly societies would not accept women and girls as members. However, special orders with highly poetical names such as the Female Druids, the Odesses, and the Peaceful Doves, came into being.

In 1895 the claims of the fair sex could be resisted no longer, and they were admitted to membership.

Only a few years after the foundation of juvenile societies the Foresters had become such a power that it was the first affiliated society registered under the Act of 1850, which legalized societies with branches.

The society's jubilee gathering in 1885 was held at Manchester, and was attended by delegates from all parts of the country, as well as from West Africa, South Africa, and Australia.

A home delegate helped to intensify the general sense of bigness. On rising to speak he was asked his name, whereupon he replied, "Nelson."

"Your full name, please?" said the president.

For a moment he hesitated, and then said, "Thomas Hill Joseph Napoleon Horatio Bonaparte Swindlehurst Nelson."

In more recent times Forestry has continued to forge ahead, and has divested itself of some of the "mystery" of its early days—"mystery" which at one time was common to all friendly societies. (This was always innocent enough, but some years ago the order removed all reference to it from its publications.—Tit Bits.

Beating "The Bear."

The performing brown bear had escaped from the menagerie, and he roamed eagerly around the countryside in search of prey. Suddenly he espied a sweet maiden standing beside a tree, waiting for her sweetheart. Stealthily creeping up behind her, the bear seized her in his tremendous paws and pressed her to him in a mighty hug. For five minutes he held her thus, and he was about to drop

Human Nature in The U.S.

In times gone by the average man consumed his mess of pottage. But rarely ever pushed the can within his lowly cottage. Though of the juices of the vine he seldom was a scolder. The thirst he had for beer or wine was quenched around the corner.

The village youth who came to pay advances to his daughter, would take their cocktails on the way—

She served them only water. Nor did they hang about the place till midnight struck, or longer. Each with a sad and wistful face, expecting something stronger.

In sideboards silverware was kept. And no one would be able to find a thing in them except the service for the table. Within the cellar bin was pent what coal one might require, and when he went downstairs, he went.

To poke the furnace fire. But altered much conditions are— Beside the mess of pottage A nicely stocked, though home-made bar.

Now graces every cottage. And every man who has strong drink Before his friends will set it. The reason being, so we think, To show that he can get it.

BOOKS AND MAN.

As I was riding home in a trolley car the other evening, the car paused to take on a passenger outside a house where the evening lamp had been lit and the curtain left up. I love to catch suggestive glimpses of the life that is forever going on behind the blank fronts of these strange contrivances we call houses, so I glanced toward the lighted window.

I could see just one bit of the room—a fireplace with several deep shelves either side of it filled with books, and a man sitting in an easy chair in front of it reading. In a few seconds the car moved on, but what I had seen seemed to open a vista to me, a vista down which I looked and caught a glimpse of what books mean to man and what life would be without them.

Life Without the Printed Word.
By books I mean, of course, magazines and newspapers and all the forms into which the printed words are put. Try to imagine life without them, no newspapers to read at breakfast or to steal time from the dishes to glance over; no magazine to be brought by the postman to brighten the day with its promise of the next installment in that thrilling serial to be read after your work is done; no absorbing novel to form an undercurrent in your thoughts (again and again I catch myself subconsciously wondering how the person in some book I have been reading is getting along, without at first reading that he or she is not a real person) and to crown the days work with an evening of escape from reality; no record except inaccessible written ones of the vast and intricate development that has made the world what it is to-day; no biographs to thrill and inspire, or shame one out of depression and discouragement.

Of course it is obviously unthinkable and if it were not for all that has grown out of the little printing press of Gutenberg the world would not be in the least like the world as it is to-day. But just to glance down that vista gives one a shadow of an idea how large a part in our lives the printed word does take.

A Whole Evening to Oneself.
You may wonder why a man in front of an open fire with a book and the background of bookshelves should mean all this to me. He simply served to startle the whole train of thought, beginning with rich delight of an evening to oneself, in a comfortable chair in front of an open fire with a good book in one's hand, and shelves of other good friends old and new waiting to be communed with.

There is a little poem by Emily Dickinson which carried this thought better than pages that I might write. I think I could not do better than to stop here and give her the rest of my space.

"There is no frigate-like a book
To take us lands away
Nor any course like a page
Of prancing poetry
This traverses me the poorest tale
Without oppress of toll;
How frugal is the chariot
That bears a human soul!"
Emily Dickinson.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE HOCKEY
CAUSE OF GREAT EXCITEMENT.

A large attendance of representatives of the various Mercantile firms witnessed the hockey match between Harvey's and Knowling's teams at the Prince's Rink last night. The former defeated the latter by a score of 6 goals to three in a game that would do credit to many of the players in the Senior League. The brand of hockey exhibited far exceeded the exhibition as witnessed in the opening slash, and all players are to be heartily congratulated on their stick handling ability. There was plenty of snappy play, while good combination play featured the contest. In the opening frame the honors were equally divided, each team scored two goals; Bailey and Marshall doing the needful for Harvey's, while Snow and Piercey were instrumental in tallying the counters for Knowling's. The second period saw good hockey. The shooting by both sets of forwards can be considered good, and the goalies were given a very busy period in clearing the disc out of danger. It was not until nineteen minutes of play had elapsed that Bailey from an end and dash went clear through, thus giving Harvey's a one goal lead. The play was witnessed in the third period, the rubber was chased all over the surface and good clever play by Brown and Piercey for Knowling's saved the situation. Harvey's however, increased the pace, and through the efforts of Bailey who played a great game, and Martin and Tilley, they increased the score to six goals. Knowling's lone tally was scored by Badcock in the dying moments of the game. The game ended leaving Harvey's victorious by a score of 6 goals to 3. Mr. J. M. Tobin refereed. The teams were:—

HARVEY'S—Goal, E. Cornick; defence, R. Bailey, J. Kenny; centre, H. Tilley; wings, F. Martin, W. Barrett; subs, Heale, Walsh, Carter.
KNOWLING'S—Goal, C. Thomas; defence, J. Piercey, F. Brown; centre, Knight; wings, Badcock, Snow; subs, Meadus, Bancroft, Kelly.

The third game of the series will be played by Bowring's and Jobs on Wednesday next.

Greater Achievement Through Electric Service

Out of the great central power plant, electric energy leaps to do your bidding, in home and industry, lighting houses and streets, driving sewing machines and lathes, turning the wheels of transportation. Yet before the advent of this great power, generated for every conceivable use, women laboured at their household tasks from dawn to darkness; through the same hours men struggled to produce the world's goods.

How different now. Households are lighted, rooms cleaned, clothes washed, food prepared, by clean, silent, invisible energy, created miles away by the central power station. Men are transported to their labors, the heavy tasks are lightened, the scope of productive activity becomes boundless; gifts of a new era. The magic to electricity.

Keep ahead of the times, encourage this new industry on which so many other industries depend, not merely by using its product; electricity; but by investing in successful hydro-electric company stocks, put your spare funds to work for you and incidentally help build up new industries and increase your country's prosperity.

Prosperity will never come of its own accord. The time to act is now. Buy United Towns Electric Company 7 per cent. Preference Shares. Particulars, Prospectus, etc., on application to the Company's Office, Telephone Building. Feb 19, 23

OCCUPATIONS THAT KEEP OFF DISEASES.

It was stated recently that skin-dressing is the healthiest industry in which a man can engage.

It has, of course, long been recognized that a man's general health, and the consequent length of his years, are largely influenced by the character of the work he does; and to "walk round the tan-pits" has long been a favourite remedy in Bermondsey for people suffering from lung and chest complaints.

Salt-workers, again, are amongst the "long-livers." Northwich, the chief seat of the salt industry, is one of the healthiest towns in England.

Some occupations that used to be notoriously unhealthy are now the reverse. For instance, years ago there was a disease known as "distemper's phthisis." It exists no longer. Scavengers and dustmen are now remarkably healthy, and the expectation of life amongst them is very high up in the scale. This is no doubt due to modern improvements in regard to the collection and disposal of street and other refuse.

Workers in oil or varnish factories, in any places where turpentine is used, are practically free from rheumatism, and the same thing ap-pies to tobacco workers. Should by any chance, one of these latter be attacked by sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, or any kindred ailment of rheumatic origin, he has a sovereign remedy at hand. All he need do is to throw himself on a heap of tobacco and go to sleep. In nine cases out of ten he will wake up cured.

Men employed in making printers' ink rarely suffer from consumption. Neither do the women and girls who work in places where sealing-wax is produced. Colliters, too, it has been noted, are practically immune from the disease.

Finally, it may be stated as a proved fact that anything to do with refining or handling of petroleum constitutes one of the most helpful occupations in the world. Men so employed rarely suffer from throat, chest, or lung troubles, and in America those subject to these complaints frequently go to work in the oil refineries with wonderfully beneficial results.

Freedom of the City.

AND HOW IT CAN BE OBTAINED.

When anyone becomes a Freeman of the City of London, he has certain advantages which do not come the way of the man in the street. He is eligible for appointment to the office of Alderman, Sheriff or Common Councilman, and may, if he can prove necessity, enjoy the benefits of certain charities.

The Freedom of the City may be obtained in four different ways—Ser-vitude, Redemption (or purchase), Patrimony or Honorary Presentation (or gift of the City).

To be admitted by Ser-vitude a man must complete an apprenticeship with a Freeman, according to the customs of the City; Freedom by Redemption necessitates certain fees being paid to the chamber of London, after the candidate has attained his majority.

Admission by Patrimony means that a child of a Freeman, whether a boy or girl, may gain the Freedom of the City, when he or she is twenty-one years of age, provided that the approval of the Court of Common Council is obtained.

Honorary Presentation is usually made to distinguished people on a resolution of the Court of Common Council.

Women, says "Debreit's City of London Book" whether unmarried or widows, are admitted to the Freedom in the same way and on the same terms as men, but they are suspended when married.

Have you not often wondered what has become of the ragged boys who used to offer to carry your grip up from the station for a nickel?

His Journey For Nothing.

Miss Jessie Stephens, the well-known Labour leader and social worker, recently told a good story—and pointed a moral at the same time—in the course of an address she delivered at a mother's meeting.

Motherly love, she explained, was a beautiful thing, but one must not exercise it at the expense of others. Then came the story.

It concerned a poor old rag-shed man, who bent nearly double under his heavy bag, was making his feeble way down the street, croaking in a cracked and wheezy voice:—

"Rags, bones, old iron."
A woman came out on the fifth-story landing of a big block of artisans' dwellings, called down, smiled and beckoned.

The old rag man totted painfully up to the woman's floor.

She stood smiling in the doorway. "Won't you?" she said, and she winked and nodded.

The old man put down his bag, and wiping the sweat from his brow, looked at the woman in bewilderment.

"Won't I what, ma'am?" he panted.

"Won't you," said the woman, "take Willie away in your bag if he isn't a good boy?"

"Mel" Wasn't
Goog Enough.

Telling stories against one's self seems to be all the rage just now. The latest to "fall" is Melbourne Inman, the billiards player.

He and Willie Smith were to play an exhibition match in a Midland town.

There was a fair there, and on the evening of their arrival the pair of them paid a visit to it.

Going the rounds, their attention was attracted by an open-air side-show, consisting of a full-sized, but dilapidated billiard table.

Two packets of cigarettes stood upon it, and the public were invited to try to drive a billiard ball between them without knocking the packets down. Smith tried his skill first, but met with no success.

Then "Mel" had a go. He, too, failed.

"Why, man, it's impossible," he said to the stallholder. "It can't be done."

"It ain't impossible," said the showman. "Any decent billiards player can do it."

The Lighter Side.

How careless not to mind 'em;
For Bo-Peep had no Telegram ad,
That would help her to find 'em.

Wally Bean says: "Treat 'em rough" was a good war slogan, but we fail to understand why the laundries should adopt it.

PERFECT EXAMPLES.
Teacher: "We borrowed our numerals from the Arabs, our calendar from the Romans, and our banking system from the Italians. Can anyone think of any other examples?"
Willie: "Our lawn-mower from the Smiths, and our vacuum cleaner from the Thomasons."

EGOTISM.
A kind of self-love, induced by looking at things too much through one's eye, and which often causes the victim to throw up his job.

No matter what opinion people may have for the street car company the majority stand up for them every night.

It used to be women were the only responsible for bad. Now we have the auto kind also.

IMPERIAL UNITY.

Work and Object of the British Empire Exhibition.

FIELD-MARSHAL SIR WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Bt., G.C.B., in "The Daily Telegraph," Jan. 18th, 1923.

For the last three or four years we have been constantly lectured from platform and pulpit, by Parliament and in the Press, as to what should be done in order to extricate the world from the quagmire into which it was cast by the Great War. Remedies suggested have been as numerous as the stars in the firmament, but we are still in the same predicament—a reasonably peaceful and economic procedure, international conferences have the same object in view, and held with wearisome frequency, have had no less abortive, notwithstanding the unanimity of opinion which we have invariably been told, and in large type, characterized their proceedings.

SCIENCE AND WAR. The role played by science in the last war, great as it was, will be surpassed a hundredfold in the next. Tanks may be amphibious; they will have more powerful armament, will be used in larger numbers, and will travel more rapidly. Aeroplanes will have greater carrying capacity and a wider radius of action; they will be far more numerous, and will drop bombs containing chemical substances the effects of which will dislocate for days the whole life and business of the cities attacked, and drive the inhabitants away from their homes. We are also threatened, according to expert chemists, with the use of chemical products which will cause entire armies to lose their equilibrium, and to become incapable of advancing in a fixed direction, or of anything more than a sort of drunken movement.

All this may seem fantastical, and it is not to be wondered at, that soldiers and sailors should base their preparations for the next war mainly on the experiences of the last one. They can hardly do otherwise, since they have nothing better to guide them. Meanwhile, however, science moves relentlessly and progressively forward, and its explorations and achievements may be such as to render the tactics and weapons of the last war as obsolete and futile as bows and arrows were rendered by the invention of gunpowder, and infantry squares by machine-guns. We should, therefore, be careful to call science to our aid, before and not after the emergency has arisen, and remember that we can wage war successfully and economically only by the systematic development and mobilization of our peace industries.

The British Empire Exhibition will give a much-needed impetus in this direction, and will help to ensure that the Empire shall not be found wanting in the unhappy event of another war.—B. E. R. News Service.

Worth Seeing.

A teacher, after a lesson on the prominent men of the day, asked the members of her class individually which of the persons he had mentioned they would most like to see.

Some said the King, some the Prime Minister, and so on; but one small boy at the back shouted—

"Please, miss, I'd rather see my father's governor."

"Well," replied the teacher, "he can hardly be classed as a prominent man; but still, let the class hear why you would like to see him."

"Because, teacher, I've heard father say as how he 'as got over two hundred hands."

Shows That Coaker's Day is Done.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir:—Please give me space in your widely read paper for a few lines tending on public matters, which I hope will be of interest to your readers. I, with thousands of others, read with eagerness your able editorials. I appreciate the way you are showing up and exposing the tricks and dishonesty of the Squires-Coaker Government, and the way they are trying to fool and deceive the down-trodden labourers and fishermen. Knowing that very soon they will have to appeal to them again for their support. Thousands throughout the country who supported them in 1919 knowing the suffering and destitution they have brought upon the country, are waiting eagerly for the time to roll around when they will be able to mete out punishment through the ballot. Our people throughout the country during the past year have been thinking deeply and seriously and have made up their minds if they and their families are to remain here, action must be taken so that great reforms will have to take place to make Newfoundland fit to live in, and support their families. The conditions existing among our fishermen during the past three years have become unbearable. It is sad, Mr. Editor, to witness the circumstances of our people in such a short space of time: being comfortable, living independent, and happy, now reduced to poverty. What has brought the change? First, Coaker's infamous fish regulations, which brought ruin to merchants and fishermen from Cape Race to Cape Ray. Second, an army of useless officials, and third, the borrowing of millions of dollars and extra taxation put on the people to provide interest, whereby the Government machinery of the country could be carried on, which burden has now become unbearable on our people, as the greater part of their earnings are taken from them to provide revenue. With the result that thousands are being driven out of the country to seek a living, leaving behind thousands who are now worn out in the service of their country—and those of the earning power—their little savings gone, fishing property valueless, there being no persons to purchase, and taxation now so heavy upon them that their very life's blood is taken by those individuals who have the audacity to try and bluff them with tales of all the good they have done for them since taking charge of the Government four years ago. What would be the result if another issue of power were given them? It would mean that all they have done has been approved by the country, and it would embolden them to add to the yoke. "I chastised you during these past four years with tariff whips, now that you have given us another lease of power, I will chastise you with tariff scorpions." Think it over, taxpayers. No amount of persuasion and blarney will influence you to send them back again. Your minds are fully made up and when the time comes around your decision will be eagerly awaited. You have been disgraced, fellow fishermen, with the men you elected two terms for dear old Trinity District. You had no use for them, you knew they had neither education nor ability, and could not properly represent you. We know why you gave them your support, simply because they were representatives of Coaker and the Fishermen's Union. It did not matter at that time if they were the greatest ignoramuses in the District you would have supported them. You now see the great mistake that was made in sending men of such calibre to represent this intelligent district. Every district in the country should have the best men as their representatives. Men of culture of brains, who can use both tongue and pen to work for the uplifting and prosperity of our people, not men who have to take every kind of slurs and sarcasm which pours forth from the opposition ranks, and have not the ability to reply, or are afraid to do so. We remember reading in the debates last year where one of the members for this district was referred to by Mr. Bennett as a stone statue. Sir M. P. Cahill said they had lips but did not know how to use them. These, so-called representatives will sit in the House as dumb members, but they are to count when a vote is taken. They have to sit and listen to the intelligent men of the Government and opposition and at the end of the session pocket their cheques of one thousand dollars and go to their homes. Those days are past, never to come again. The residents of the island have learnt a lesson during the past years of Coakerism that they never forget. It is amusing these days, Mr. Editor, to read the Advocate. Last fall, when the Union Trading Company was offering to pay its shareholders 5 per cent. in truck due on these shares, Mr. A. E. Morine offered to give his services free to collect their dividends in cash which they could claim by law. As soon as his offer was made known, it was as though a cloud had burst. The shareholders were summoned from the different councils by order of the Boss and protest sent out through the Advocate to Morine that they did not want him in any way to interfere, and were quite satisfied to be paid their per cent. in truck. His (Morine) was the "Boo Man" to be dreaded and his name continually has been dragged through that vile sheet, since, although quite a number were induced not to accept his offer, I am informed there were others who gladly accepted of it, and who thank him for his kindness. A few years ago, when he was lawyer for the Union he was lauded to the skies by W. F. Coaker, but when he got out and entered politics, all that could be raked up was published to damage him in his Election Campaign. Now the political battle is to be fought very soon and Morine is dreading, fearing he is going to enter the stronghold of the Hon. W. F. Coaker in Bonaville Bay. Coaker pretends to hold that District in the hollow of his hand; but I can tell him he will get the surprise of his life when the time comes around. He has been making very light of the United Fishermen's Movement. The Advocate has been calling it "Joseph Winsor's Fizzle," and forming the messages published in Daily News, and Telegram from time to time take messages. As soon as the Movement began to spread the Union Councils were called together in Bonaville Bay, and other places to show their strength, messages were sent on and published in the Advocate, signed by a number of men from each council simply to show the support of the Union and Coaker, and to bluff the public. Now, Mr. Editor, I with hundreds of others can tell Mr. Coaker and the Advocate that the U.F.M. is not a fizzle, nor the messages sent to the press faked ones, but true so far as Captain's Roberts and Bragg's work is concerned, they opened their campaign at Harbor Grace, with grand success came down through Bay de Verde District, held a public meeting in every place from Fresh-water to Grates Cove, Old Perlican included, which was crowded with eager men who were aroused as never before, and who supported their Resolutions unanimately. From the last named place they came into this district on the 7th inst., and held their first meeting at Brownadale on the 8th, New Melbourn 9th, Hart's Hr. 10th, Winterton 12th, New Perlican 13th, Heart's Content, leaving the last named place for Heart's Delight on the 14th. From place to place their movement has spread like wild fire and the people were glad to receive them as they went along showing them every kindness and supporting their movement. The people are deeply moved and greatly appreciate the work they are trying to accomplish in travelling the District at this time of the year to solicit signatures for the removal of taxation. Every man where they have gone has shown his interest. Halls were given them free of charge, clergymen of the different denominations, and Salvation Army Captains were their chairmen at several of their meetings. Collections were also taken up in some large centres to pay men to drive them along the route, so that they would not be put to the expense of so doing. That is the kind of reception Capt. Roberts and Bragg have been meeting as they travelled the south side of this Bay and people throughout the Northern District are showing the same interest to the Delegates travelling down there. The country is getting fully alive to the movement and realize what it will mean to one and all to have taxation removed and when the Delegates are through with their work of canvassing the country and meet at St. John's at the end of the month they will be fully armed having the people at their back in seeing their wishes carried into effect. Hoping I have not trespassed too much on your valuable space.

Yours truly,
FISHERMEN.

Cash From News Cuttings.

MEN WHO CUT PATTERNS FOR A LIVING.

More than a generation ago a young Russian-American, who was trying to earn a living as an artist in Paris, happened to notice a well-known French artist paying handsomely for newspapers several days old, which contained notices of his salon pictures.

In that moment a brilliant idea was born in the brain of the youngster. Why not make a business of furnishing such notices to all who needed them? He followed up the idea, and all in a moment a huge new industry had sprung into being.

Millions of subscribers. Within the next fifteen years there were over fifty firms engaged in the business of making and distributing newspaper clippings, and so long ago as the year 1900 thirty thousand people were engaged in the work.

Today the subscribers to press cutting agencies are numbered by the million, and range from crowned heads to circus proprietors. Oil magnates, railway and cable companies, theatrical managers, authors, artists, musicians, politicians, publishers—almost everyone who has any sort of public position subscribes to at least one such agency.

Filling the Cuttings.

All the great newspapers have their own press cutting department, but instead of distributing the cuttings these are all filed for future reference. Many journalists and authors have a similar habit of cutting and filing useful matter from periodicals.

The great Charles Reade had whole scrap books of cuttings, and that wonderful Frenchman, Jules Verne, got most of the basic ideas for his wonderful romances from clippings out of scientific journals.

The number of clippings received by a well-known actor or author is simply enormous. Sarah Bernhardt at times received them at the rate of fifty or sixty a day, and Leonora Duse, once had nearly three thousand in three months.

Seeing Themselves in Print.

Any well-known author will receive from two hundred notices upwards of each new book. He finds it impossible to read them all.

Yet the people who are the most keen upon newspaper cuttings are not authors, actors or artists. Society folk are far more anxious to know what the outside world thinks of them.

Such cuttings are enshrined in expensive scrap books, and many a society woman treasures such books under lock and key.

Another branch of press cutting is the supply of information. A man who is writing a book on a certain subject will often give an order to an agency for all possible cuttings on this subject, and can thus obtain much valuable material.

Pens Made From Feathers.

MAKING QUILL PENS IS A HIGHLY SKILLED JOB.

When you read in novels about the dear old gentleman who goes out in the farmyard, picks up a quill that has dropped from the wing of a goose, cuts it into a pen, and starts writing, don't believe it. He doesn't. The quill as it comes from the goose is tough and pliable and filled with pith, instead of being hard, hollow, and transparent. To get it fit to write with it has to go through a special process known as "dutching."

Curiously enough, practically all the dutching for the trade has, for the last hundred years or so, been carried out by one family, named Bowers. To-day the family has almost died out, and only one old man is left.

Each Quill Treated Separately.

Before the quills are dutched, they are tied up in bundles of a thousand and their points thrust into a mass of damp clay. When they have obtained the proper degree of moisture, they are passed on to the dutcher, who sits before a fire which he has cunningly built up so that he has a little hollow cave of glowing coals into which he can thrust the quills.

Each quill in turn is held in the little furnace till it is heated sufficiently. As quills are of varying sizes and weights, the skill of the dutcher largely consists in knowing exactly how long to heat each quill. At the proper moment the quill is taken from the fire, the end laid on a hot iron plate, and a lever pressed down hard on it. As the dutcher presses down the lever with one hand, he pulls the quill with the other, dragging the quill from under the lever and extracting the pith and moisture.

Pens Made to Order.

The quill is now flat and crushed, but after being put back in the fire for a few moments it springs out to its normal shape, and presents the familiar appearance of a hollow, shining tube. A quick polish with a piece of shark skin, to remove the last traces of roughness, and the quill is ready to be cut.

The cutting is by no means simple, and a good many quills will be spoiled by the beginner before he masters the knack.

In the old days, when the use of quill pens was universal, fussy people with the money to gratify their whims would send for the quill-maker and get him to cut a special pattern pen to suit their handwriting. The pattern would always be kept by the pen-maker, and Lord This or That would be sure of getting the only pen they possibly could write with. It was a remarkable thing that the worst writers were invariably the most fussy.

Few Are Used Nowadays.

Comparatively few quill pens are used nowadays. Some old-fashioned people still cling to them, and they are used to a certain extent in India by the natives. Also, some legal documents are still engrossed with turkey quills. But the fountain pen has really killed the industry. Besides, most of the quills used to come from Russia, and Russia is too busy with revolutions nowadays to trouble about exporting quills.

One other little thing most people will have noticed. When an artist draws anyone using a quill pen, he invariably draws the quill with all the feathers still on it. Whereas, if you examine a quill pen, you will see that the broad fringes of feathers is always shaved off, leaving only the narrow fringe running along one side of the quill.

Aligning Their Forces

The Government press, with melodramatic suddenness, quite recently announced the names of the administration candidates for the district of Burin. The gentlemen, upon whom the lot has fallen, are Hon. S. J. Foote and Mr. John T. Cheeseman, both of whom were returned as members of the House of Assembly by the electors of that district in 1919. It means a lot that Messrs. Foote and Cheeseman can lay claim to the fact that they were born in the district which they, at present, misrepresent. The former had his birthplace at Grand Bank, the latter's place of nativity being Port au Bras. That being the case it would have been expected that such stalwart champions possessed a desire to do as much good as possible for their respective native places, if not for all the district at large. Mr. Foote is one of the most prominent members of the legal fraternity, practising in the city, and has been since 1919 one of the Executive of Sir Richard Squires. Mr. Cheeseman is a general merchant and exporter of dry cod and other fishes, the produce of Newfoundland, with headquarters at Port au Bras, which is a portion of the town and harbor of Burin. The commercial bodies of Grand Bank and Burin—not to speak of Marytown, St. Lawrence, L'Anse-au-Loup, and Fortune, all important fish exporting centres of the district—will easily recollect that Mr. Foote was a member of the Executive which permitted the infamous Fish Regulations of November, 1919 to become effective, and voted for the Bill making them legal in 1920, while all the time knowing how vicious they were in effect, and how seriously their operation would militate against the mercantile and fishing classes of the district which had sufficient confidence in his ability and integrity to elect him at the head of the poll at the last general election. His failure to register a protest against such iniquitous legislation is more of a crime to be held against him, than is that of Mr. Cheeseman's support of the same measure. Mr. Cheeseman was young and inexperienced, and representing a district for the first time, it was not to be supposed that he possessed the acumen and disposition to analyse, in an equal measure with his lawyer colleague, who, though in similar case with Mr. Cheeseman, represented a district for the first time, had yet a better and clearer knowledge, by virtue of his legal training and practice, of legislative enactments, Burin district thus being represented by exponents of law and commerce, it was at least expected that both should have had at least a superficial knowledge of all that the operation of the Fish Regulations Act implied. But if either of them had even that, they failed miserably in putting it into effect. Whether or not Mr. Cheeseman voted for the Bill in the House of Assembly does not matter. That he never raised his voice in protest does, and that is what will count against him, when the ballots are being marked a few months hence. Burin remembers, Grand Bank remembers, St. Lawrence remembers, Fortune remembers, Marytown remembers, L'Anse-au-Loup remembers, and that remembrance will sound the political death knell of Messrs. Foote and Cheeseman, the Squires-Cheeseman candidates for Burin district in the forthcoming election.

New Screen For Cathedral.

A new carved oak screen arrived by S.S. Digby for the C. of E. Cathedral and is now being erected in the archway between the Choir stalls and the North Chapel. It is a fine piece of workmanship and is similar to the screen on the south side of the Choir.

B. I. S. PREPARING FOR IRISH FEAST.

The members of the B.I.S. have definitely decided not to produce anything theatrical on St. Patrick's Day this year. The ladies of the Auxiliary are contemplating the holding of a "Ceilidh" on that night, which will comprise singing, dancing and cards. The arrangements as yet are not finalized.

St. Mary's Club.

INAUGURATES LECTURE SERIES. There was a large attendance at the concert and lecture held last night under the auspices of St. Mary's Club, South Side, The Club, only recently formed, proposes to hold a series of lectures during the next couple of months. The speaker last night was the Prime Minister Sir R. A. Squires. He was introduced by the Rector of the parish, Rev. A. B. S. Stirling. Sir Richard, after congratulating the Club on its present standing, gave a very interesting address on his impressions gained whilst abroad. He held that what struck him first was that Newfoundlanders were to be found in all parts of the globe, holding down big positions, and that they were always able to hold their own. While in Paris he found that the Branch Manager of the Bank of Montreal was a Newfoundlanders. In London a Newfoundlanders held a similar position in the Bank of Nova Scotia, and so on they had always reached the top of the ladder of success. At the conclusion a vote of thanks proposed by Mr. Kenneth Payne and seconded by Mr. H. J. Bishop, was accorded the speaker. Previous to the lecture a short concert programme was gone through, Messrs. E. Cranford, B. Colton, H. Macklin and Hy. Whitten contributing numbers.

Charming Playlet.

PERFORMERS GIVEN UNSTINTED APPLAUSE. To an audience which packed auditorium, gallery and pit to capacity, the production of Jean Webster's delightful story "Daddy Long Legs" was repeated for a third time in the Casino theatre last night. The entire cast were in splendid form and received hearty applause from the large audience. The players were more at ease than on previous nights, and in their portrayal of the different parts, well merited the appreciation expressed by the audience in continual applause. Mrs. J. Baxter is a revelation. Her acting as Mrs. Lippert in the dining room of the John Grier Home, was exceptionally fine, and displayed her talents to better advantage than we have hitherto witnessed. The story of the play need not be repeated here. Miss Mary Ryan as Judy, made a decided hit in her role, and was more at home last night than in the previous performances. Her actions, speech and very dressy appearance won for her new stage laurels. Mr. F. J. King ably performed the arduous role of Jervis Pendleton. Mr. King is well known for his realistic acting and he certainly lived up to his reputation last night. Mrs. Chas. Hatten played the part of Miss Prichard and evoked much applause from the large audience. Miss Kathleen Fraser as Sally McBride, Miss Madeline Kavanagh as Julia Pendleton, Miss Susie Crane as Mrs. Pendleton, played excellently and gave substantial support to Miss Ryan in her very important role. Mrs. F. L. Bradshaw as Mrs. Semple, Jervis's old nurse, was exceedingly clever and Mr. Percy Jardine, as Jimmie, McBride, as ever kept his audience in good humor. The others of the cast played their parts creditably. The play will be repeated tonight, and on tomorrow afternoon there will be a matinee for the children. We take this opportunity to extend to Mrs. J. Baxter and her talented troupe our congratulations on their splendid production. Between the acts the Mount Cashel Band, under Mr. Bulley's direction, rendered very pleasing selections, and the applause which greeted each item was well deserved. The object of the affair is to help the orphans.

Obituary.

MRS. LAKE, Fortune. A message to Mrs. (Dr.) W. Roberts yesterday, conveyed the sad intelligence that her mother, Mrs. Lake, had passed away at Fortune. The news was not unexpected for Mrs. Lake, who had been an invalid for a long while, and at her age—she was in her 77th year—there was little hope of recovery. The deceased lady, until laid aside by illness some years ago, took a leading place in the social, philanthropic and religious life of the town, and her home was ever hospitable to itself. Her husband, the late John E. Lake, predeceased her two years ago. Beside Mrs. (Dr.) Roberts, the deceased lady is survived by two sons, Freeman and Hubert, to all of whom the Telegram extends sincere sympathy.

Letter From Sir R. Bond.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—In yesterday's issue of your paper you did me the honour to declare that "popular sentiment favors my recall to public life," that I am "being approached on the matter," and that "when the call comes the country can rely on me." As the kindly sentiments so generously expressed, in the article under reference, may be construed, by some people, as meaning that I am waiting a "recall to public life" and that they may expect compliance therewith, I cannot help thinking that it would be wrong, perhaps, of me to remain silent, for my silence too, may be misconstrued. Pray permit me then to say, that I voluntarily laid down the proud post of leader of the Liberal Party, and resigned my seat in the House of Assembly, on the 2nd of January, 1914 for reasons fully set forth in a letter over my own signature published in the Evening Telegram of date January 10th, 1914, that since that date I have rigidly maintained the attitude of private citizenship, that I have no immediate intention of re-entering the political arena, and that I have so advised the gentlemen who approached me on the subject. Faithfully yours, R. BOND. The Grange, Whitebourne, February 20, 1923.

Approval From Placentia

Placentia, Feb. 22.—Placentia strongly approves of the Opposition's wisdom in selecting J. R. Bennett for leader of the Opposition in the coming election. We offer him and candidates a loyal support, and will do our best to upset a Government of wasters, and boodlers. Sir Michael Cashin's retirement from the leadership was expected, but he has proven himself a lover of his country by remaining in the fight, which is to take the Government from the most irresponsible party that ever commanded the ship of state.

Hockey League Throws Out Feildian Protest.

COMPLETELY EXONERATES REFEREE TOBIN. At a meeting of the Hockey League held last evening to discuss the Feildian protest, which was entered in connection with the Guards-Feildian game, the League was of an unanimous opinion that there were no grounds on which to protest the result. The Feildians then withdrew their protest and the League passed a resolution completely exonerating the referee.

Tie-Cup Series.

TO-NIGHT'S GAME. The third game of the Tie-Cup series takes place to-night in the Prince of Wales rink. The contesting teams will be the Guards and Terra Novas, and an exciting clash can be looked forward to by all fans. The Terras will be strengthened in the line-up by the addition of George Meaden, who, it will be remembered, played good hockey for Brigus against our local players quite recently. The orange and black are also trying a new man in the forward line. With the Guards playing to full strength to-night, the game should resolve itself into a hard fought battle from go to gong. The game of the season will be played on Monday next, when the St. Bon's and Feildians meet.

Inter-College Hockey.

B. F. C. VS. S. B. C. The Challengers—The boys of Feild College, who this year and last year, have dashed right bravely into the breach, whence they have been rejected, but are not crushed. Undeterred by the result of the game, they are making a second attempt to win the championship. The Feildians then withdrew their protest and the League passed a resolution completely exonerating the referee. The Defenders—The boys of St. Bonaventure's, who have successfully held the pass against all contenders since 1915 are determined not to be dislodged therefrom, save under stern duress. "Come and take it," is their response. The Issue—A win tomorrow for the Defenders gives them the championship for 1923, it will moreover retain for their possession of the Hockey Cup, captured in 1915 from the Methodist College team, and none so far has been able to wrest it from them. A victory for the Challengers, however, will leave each team with an equal number of points—six—thus necessitating a further game to decide the championship. Much excitement, in consequence, centres around tomorrow's encounter. Neither team makes any pretence to "modest mediocrity," there will be naught of the David and Goliath element about the struggle as the teams are well equipped, and when bits and gold, and light and dark blue, launch forth tomorrow, upon the surface of a perfect "sheet," the partisans may in all reason settle themselves down to enjoy the varied phases of what promises to be an epic duel in the history of the College Hockey.

M. C. L. I.

The debate last night at the above Institute proved most interesting. The Resolution was, "That under present conditions Democracy is impractical and injurious." Messrs. William Drover, H. J. Russell and a substitute, Rev. R. B. Fairbairn appeared for the affirmative, and Messrs. I. C. Morris, P. H. Cowan and Herbert Butt for the Negative. The main points brought out by the Affirmative to prove that democratic Government had failed, were, that group Government as in Great Britain and Canada had absolutely failed; the Russian Government which professed to be the most democratic Government in the world had positively failed and the election of all Governments, especially in Newfoundland, under the patronage system had to an alarming extent proved inefficient to bring Newfoundland along the road of prosperity on account of pandering to the party supporters who are looking for patronage in return for their votes. The words "under present conditions" were stressed and it was contended that there was no pure democracy in existence to-day but only representatives of democracy. The people as a whole had not the capacity to govern themselves. War is as likely to happen to-day under our present conditions as it is under conditions of monarchy. The great trouble to-day is we are very likely to be carried away by people searching for power who are only dupes. The democracy as represented by the U.S.A. failed the world after the world war. The Negative contended that today's conditions were brought about by the war, and who caused the war. The Kings, Emperors and rulers of the Nations concerned. Democracy did not cause the war but we had to fight to make the world safe for democracy when the blow fell. After the war came the Conferences, and they have been largely failures, and who caused them to fail. The diplomats who were representing their several nations were bound by their rulers. The settling of accounts after the war could have been represented by a hundred of themselves. The people did not want the war, but the war was forced upon them. The American nation was put forward as a typical example of democratic government. During its one hundred and fifty years existence it had made greater strides and developed more largely than any other Eastern Nation in all its long history. The Theocratic action of France to-day is endangering the peace of the world. From the floor a large number of speakers took part and a very interesting debate was the result. On the vote the Institute stood in favour of the resolution by a small majority. Next week's debate is "Resolved that the claim for women to an equal status with men can only triumph by the abolition of chivalry."

Senef Takes Provisions.

SAILING FOR WESTWARD. It is understood that S. S. Senef will sail to-night with a supply of provisions for La Plante, Placentia Bay. The people of this section are reported very short of provisions, and it is hoped the Senef will be able to make the port in time to prevent a tragedy. La Plante is on the west side of Placentia Bay, but is not easily reached at this season of the year owing to ice conditions.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES.

FEBRUARY 23rd. A fair, frosty day as I ever saw; but I did not go abroad much, being in great fear of the flu, which Dr. Topp tells me is afflicting many in the city. My wife makes complaint of the grocer, his prices still being high, and not a cent the less for the taking off the surtax. I did waste little time in discourse with her, seeing how it were easier to find a needle in a haystack than to discover some knowledge of business in the mind of a woman. To Water Street where I met with Mr. Rendell, who did tell me of the models for the War Memorial, they having arrived, and are now in the Board of Trade where all men may see them. Hewer coming in, tells me of the gossip about the election, and how Mr. Chalker will go to Port de Grave for the Opposition. He would also have it that Mr. Hunt and Mr. Emerson would go to the West End of the City, but for what parties, he knows not. His discourse turning to matters of business, he speaks very highly of the Government that they did make Argentina for an ice-free port, and yet a steamer with much goods for the West Coast is held there for three weeks. To the Casino playhouse with my wife to see Miss Ryan play in "Daddy Long Legs," and the play, indeed, a most pathetic one, and did mightily please me. Anon home, and to mix myself a hot potion, and, to bed.

HAWKES BAY;

Its Naval Associations and New Industries.

How the Trading Company and the "Edmund Donald" Saved the Coast From Starvation.

By J. D. HENRY.
 ARTICLE VI.

Hawke's Bay, Jan. 24th—Hawke's Bay has interesting naval associations. It is reminiscent of old British naval heroes. Itself named after a Great Britain admiral. It also has Keppel Island, which lies across the entrance, christened after another old sea dog of the Navy, while it is now suggested that either the old whale factory site or Muddy Cove, on the opposite side of the Bay, shall be known as Raleighville to commemorate the visit of H.M.S. Raleigh which sailed from this bay on the morning of the day she was lost in the Straits. Close to Keppel Island is Port Saunders, the parent settlement of the bay, where, in connection with the industry started by the Hawke's Bay Trading Company, men have arrived from all parts of the coast to work in the woods. The bay is a scene of industrial and business activity concerning which no one can write pessimistically, and what has taken place here—actual work in the woods and the taking up of mining claims by at least two London groups—is a practical indication of the reliability of the new industrial movement started on this coast. It is also the first centre of aviation on the West Coast. Hawke's Bay is now boldly on the map with a bright future and, given proper Government encouragement and support, it should fast develop into a working centre of many different interests and revive those good times of nearly a generation ago when the fishery and lobster factories furnished in this part of the country OPERATIONS MUST BE KEPT GOING.

It is not conceivable that the Government will do anything to check industry. The operations which have been started must be kept going at all costs, and the fishermen, by petition, are making this plain to the Government. Let me state the facts. I have arrived here to find a crisis in the new industry. At the moment a shut-down is seriously threatened. If this takes place it will be a calamity

- The Government has repeatedly refused to grant reasonable concessions and rights asked for by the Trading Company.
- The Government was largely responsible, through some of the members and supporters, for the premature dispatch of a number of unsuitable men to work in this bay, thereby causing trouble here and, later, the circulation of untruthful reports concerning the working conditions before the stores were finished and stocked and the camps were erected in the woods.
- The Government, later, failed to maintain the usual proper and adequate transport on the coast with the result that when an early winter set in food supplies were down to starvation point, and the people found their only hope, and stand-by was the Trading Company.
- That when this Company brought round the Edmund Donald, loaded with flour and general provisions, the Government completely failed in its duty to the people, leaving all the unforeseen winter risks with the Company, and taking none itself, although as a Government it was responsible for transport and, in any way, for the grave shortage of food supplies and unemployment on the coast.
- That although the Government knew that failure to land the cargo of the Edmund Donald meant the closing down of the Hawke's Bay industry, (the only one giving winter employment on the coast) it failed to come to the assistance of the company, although it was placed in possession of the full and serious facts of the case and must have known it was imperilling the industry and the winter employment of hundreds of fishermen.
- That in the end the Company, appealing in vain for concessions and reasonable guarantees, was obliged to ask for an official investigation of the Hawke's Bay conditions, and, further, make an appeal to the workmen for their support in the form of a public petition, which in one day secured more than a hundred signatures.

Major Cotton and Mr. J. M. Smith (Manager), had several most friendly meetings with the men with the result that not only was the company thanked for starting the industry, but the Government was petitioned to grant all concessions asked for, a course of action which shows the good feeling existing between the Trading Company and the workmen.

FORTUNATE BUSINESS ARRANGEMENT.

Let me preface a short account of what has taken place, with a few facts concerning the bringing of the Edmund Donald to Hawke's Bay with a full cargo of food. She was chartered by the Trading Company to bring a cargo for the company's stores and camps and also for the use of the people on the coast. This was a fortunate business arrangement for the people, as the coast was almost without flour and terribly short of common necessities. To this good service rendered the fishermen must be added the fact that not only are many men employed in the woods, but since the Christmas holidays hundreds of additional men are arriving from almost every settlement north and south of Hawke's Bay. Since the last conference with the managers the men are perfectly satisfied with the conditions. Before the crisis—a threatened shut-down—was reached, Hawke's Bay was in a position, thanks to the enterprise of the Trading Company, to save the coast from starvation and give employment this coming summer on the loading of four, and probably more, steamers with pit props. If the Government does not amicably meet the company and act immediately on the workmen's petition there will be a complete upset of this promising industry, probably a withdrawal of its food supplies and a stoppage of work—an appalling condition of affairs which will be certain to be condemned by every man desirous of securing work on this coast this winter.

HOW THE EDMUND DONALD GOT CAUGHT.

The Edmund Donald left St. John's on December 9th and arrived off Port Saunders on the 15th. She came round by the Straits and encountered heavy weather. Fifteen miles east of Flow-er's Cove a gale caused Capt. Moore to run for Red Bay, where he sheltered for two days. On reaching Port Saunders the Donald ran into thick slob, which hemmed her in for two days. On Sunday she got clear and slowly worked her way in towards Port Saunders, where, at two o'clock on Monday morning, she managed to get the pilot on board. Attempts were made by the Donald to butt down the west side of Keppel Island and she was in a position of some difficulty when the Sagoons (Capt. Taverner) arrived. The ice-breaker tried to cut her way into Port Saunders, but after butting the ice, (salt water slob, eight feet thick) for the greater part of the day she was forced to land her passengers and freight about half-a-mile from the shore. She took back all her freight for more northern ports, making it all the more necessary that the Donald's cargo should be discharged. Capt. Taverner intended landing the freight and then going to the assistance of the Donald, but about 9.30 p.m. he was forced to put to sea, as a strong on-shore wind was packing the ice in tight, with a temperature of 20 below. She managed to get eight miles off, where she stuck in the ice and remained for two or three days before getting clear. The Donald in the meantime was forced to leave the west side of Keppel Island, and by careful manoeuvring Capt. Moore got her in towards Port Saunders, where, however, she stuck fast, about three-quarters of a mile from the wharf, and next morning she was frozen tight.

GOVERNMENT FAILED TO ACT.

I have been assured by one who knows (and I quote his own words), "that the serious position in relation to the food shortage on the West Coast was known in St. John's before the Donald sailed, but the Government, from the start, failed to do anything in the matter. There were more suitable ice-breakers available, and if one of these, either the Kyle or the Stanley, had been sent she would have made Hawke's Bay without much risk or difficulty, and the Donald's cargo could have been discharged and the steamer sent south with the ice-breaker. The Donald was at Port Saunders four days before the Government boat arrived, too late to be of real assistance. Too much praise cannot be given to the Captain and crew of the Donald for the good work they did in reaching this port, and Capt. Taverner did the best he could with the steamer under his command." The full cargo was discharged on the ice about three-quarters of a mile from shore. Every available team—horse, oxen and dog—was employed. The work of discharging was carried on during a spell of very cold weather, the temperature ranging from 10 to 20 below all the time, and several men had their faces badly frozen. On the Saturday work had to be abandoned, owing to the cold weather and a gale blowing. During the time of discharging great anxiety was felt by the people as they knew Capt. Moore had received instructions that if the wind changed and the ice moved off he was to put to sea and prevent his ship from being frozen in for the winter. This is the story of these few exciting days as it was told to me several days later.

TRADING COMPANY MADE VIGOROUS PROTEST.

"The Trading Company, who owned the cargo, was in constant touch with the Government, vigorously protesting that, for the sake of the people and to save the industry in the bay, the steamer must not be allowed to leave before being discharged. The Government refused to do anything definite, and would not assume an ounce of responsibility, although the Department of Shipping knew the serious position of the whole coast regarding work and food. On the Saturday afternoon the Donald was in clear water but unable to put to sea owing to a storm. A sudden change of wind brought the ice back and saved the situation for the people. The question is, if the Donald had put to sea what would have been the result? The answer is, there would have been starvation, especially amongst the people at Flower's Cove and points further north. Who would have been responsible for this calamity? The men here—not being Government officials—realized the seriousness of the position, and worked right through Sunday and Christmas Day from daylight to dark discharging thousands of packages at full speed. Why did the Government fail to send a larger steamer with supplies and, again, why did they do nothing when they were asked to guarantee the company against any losses directly due to the detention of the Donald by ice?"

PLAYED THE GAME.

A hurried investigation of the facts so far as they concern the people of this place has convinced us that the Trading Company has played the game with the Government, its own workmen and the people. These same facts show that the Government, failing to grasp the seriousness of the position, did not act wisely and energetically in an emergency of great gravity for the people of the coast. The people, although they have not a knowledge of the inside facts, are anxiously watching developments, knowing that if there is a shut-down it will be a most serious business for the whole coast. It will cut off supplies and stop work. Men who are now settled down in winter camps, making good wages and with ample food supplies at the company's stores, will have to be sent home, some of them with their families. This spells trouble on a large scale, and when the full facts come to light, the consequences will be serious for those who are found to be responsible for the loss of employment at a time when it is so badly wanted on the coast. Hawke's Bay is waiting and watching. It is for the Government to get the whole of the facts of the case and act immediately. Procrastination will punish the people. This is my frank and independent opinion.

HERBERT SMITH, in The Canadian Magazine)

France lost all her other possessions in the New World she was left with the two small islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon on the coast of Newfoundland as a base for her fishing vessels which she visited the Grand Banks for the purpose of catching cod.

These small islands have been used by the French for the purpose of catching cod which they were retained after the war by the British. The Canadians and Yankees, for the most part, have been using the islands for less worthy purposes—as a base for smuggling, where cargoes of whiskey and wines, recently imported from France or the West Indies, might be purchased and smuggled to the States port and sold at a profit. The price paid for them in the States is large profits.

The revenue induced many a skipper to forsake the legitimate coasting-trade and turned to a precarious but profitable but illegitimate business of smuggling.

The most daring skippers own the fastest vessels could hope to be successful in this business, for they were closely watched by the customs officers in the various ports, and the revenue cutters which patrolled the coast, and ready to give chase to any suspicious-looking craft appearing on the horizon. Many a skipper down east entertains his captives around the fireside during winter evenings by telling tales of his adventures in the close-hauled, half-breath escapes from both men and revenue cutters, in the old days when he was young.

It is the story of how and why the customs officer came out of the way port where he would land a cargo of contraband in the dark, and have it stowed in barns, cellars or even the attics of nearby friends and neighbors. There is hardly a harbor on the coast of Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island or New Brunswick but has a story of a smuggling den. Sometimes, though the smuggling captain succeeded in evading the revenue cutters and in "fixing" the customs officers so that the "goods" were safely landed, they have been known mysteriously to disappear, so that the venture turned out to be a failure. It is hard to maintain honor among thieves, and for this reason, many an otherwise profitable venture came to naught. Here is a case in point. Captain B of the schooner C, after making the necessary arrangements with the customs officer in a Nova Scotia port, laid a course for St. Pierre, where a full cargo was taken on board. In due time, it was safely stored away in a large warehouse built on piles, where it was to remain until the harbor froze over, and then it could be easily hauled away by teams at night and distributed among the dealers who were always glad to get "some real good stuff for Christmas."

During the autumn the owner of this cargo had bargained with the dealers to take the whole cargo off his hands at a handsome profit, delivery to take place as soon as the harbor was strong enough to bear teams; and so far, everything looked favorable for "a merry Christmas."

After three nights' hard frost beginning with the tenth of December, the opportune time had come, and at midnight the captain was aroused from his peaceful slumbers by the unexpected arrival of three teams that pressed for an early delivery. The captain repaired to the warehouse and unlocked the door only to find himself face to face with one of the greatest mysteries of modern times.

There, before the astonished eyes of these men were to be seen, in regular rows, 150 empty casks, but of whiskey, brandy or rum there was none. Where had the fire water gone? Where ah, where? That's the rub! Upon more careful examination, it was found that an inch auger hole had been bored through the floor under each cask, and that there was a corresponding hole in the cask itself; so that the whiskey, brandy and rum had evidently been drained off through the floor by some unscrupulous persons who had knowledge of its whereabouts. The captain was furious, but what could he do? It is said that he was never quite able to make up his mind as to who the culprits really were. At first, he was inclined to blame the members of the recently organized Temperance Society of the town, but later came to suspect very strongly some of the crew who sailed with him on that last trip to St. John's. He never felt comfortable with any of them again.

Municipal Council

WEEKLY MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Municipal Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided. Councillors Martin, Outerbridge, Vincombe, Goller, Ryan and Dowden were present. The minutes of previous meetings were read and confirmed.

Following the reading of the minutes Councillor Outerbridge referred to the sad duty of having to record the death of Mr. W. Lloyd Woods, 2nd Asst. Engineer which occurred since the last regular meeting of the Council. The late Mr. Woods by his courteous and obliging manner in social life and in the daily routine of office had gained the respect of all who came in contact with him. The Councillor moved that the heartfelt sympathy of the Board be tendered to the parents and relatives of the deceased on his early demise. Deputy Mayor Martin seconded the motion which passed on a standing vote.

Contract for the supply of C.I. Pipe and Specials for re-laying of water mains at Muldowney's Hill, Cove Road, was awarded Messrs. Wm. Heap and Company, Ltd.

Applications were read from John Woods and Michael Walsh for position in the Engineering Department. As the present staff is considered sufficient for the working of this Department it was decided no further appointment was necessary.

It was brought to the notice of the Board that children were prevented from skating in the open air rink at Bannerman Park unless they paid a fee. When permission was given for this rink it was on the understanding no fee would be charged. The Council has already allowed the person in charge an amount for his labor in connection with same. Enquiry into the matter will be made by the Park Committee.

THE VOLSTEAD LAW.

The well known line I do not draw at Mr. Volstead's famous law. There may be moments when I yearn for drinks that sizzle, smoke and burn, that join a man clear to his toes, perfume his breath and tint his nose; but when such longings come to me I draw a bowl of boneseat tea. I can't pour bitterns in my crew without setting Volstead's law and making Mr. Volstead feel a dark blue fad in his heel. When serpents come and bite my legs, for something strong my being begs. My soul is sick and faint within; my nerves demand a dish of gin. For I've been taught that gin and ryes that venom dire will neutralize. But still I cry, "Far better croak than make the Volstead law a joke!"

Though coverts' coos and adepts add, "and bite me 'neath my liver pad, though copperheads and rattlesnakes shall fill me up with deadly aches, no vital statute shall I bust—obeying law's a sacred trust!" I sit beneath my vine and tree and drink nine quarts of boneseat tea, and wash it down with vinerewart, and lo! the venom is dispersed! And while I sit here, blithe and spry; the humbled snake go off and die. I doubt if alcohol will heat a single ill that mortals feel. And if you'd drink it you must save a stove length from the Volstead law.

One For Her.

An old lady in a bus noticed a man sitting in front of her had his arm in a sling. She was a very inquisitive old person, and couldn't refrain from leaning forward and asking: My poor man, what have you done to your arm?

Broken it, ma'am, the man replied. And how did you break it? continued the old lady.

When I was patting myself on the back, ma'am, he said.

Patting yourself on the back. What ever were you doing that for? He looked hard at her for a moment, and then said:—

For minding my own business, ma'am!

It does not take much strength to do things, but it requires great strength to decide on what to do.

He laughed best whose laugh lasts.

His Choice

A judge on a certain circuit in the west was wont to dore during the speeches of counsel.

On one occasion counsel was addressing him on the subject of certain town commissioners' rights to obtain water from a certain river, water being scarce at the time.

During his speech he made use of the words, "but my lord, we must have water—we must have water."

Whereupon the judge woke up exclaiming, "Well, just a little drop; I like it strong."

It is sad, said Mr. Closestist, how mean some people are.

I went on a fishing trip with Brown and Simpson, and they were both familiar with my reputation as an angler. Before starting, Brown suggested that the first to land a fish should pay for the dinners that night.

I readily agreed, and we began, and, do you know, both those fellows had a bite and were too mean to pull the fish up.

Oh, then, you lost? remarked his friend.

Oh, no, replied Closestist; but if I'd put any bait on my hook I would have done."

Every spirit makes its house; but as afterwards the house confines its spirit, you had better build well.

Report of Officers of Benevolent Irish Society

For the Year Ending February 17th, 1923.

Assembling in accordance with the time honored custom, on the morning of St. Patrick's Day, the members proceeded from the hall, accompanied by the bands of the Church Lads Brigade, Catholic Cadet Corps, and Methodist Guards, along the usual route to St. Patrick's Church, and attended High Mass, celebrated by the Rev. Fr. Sheehan, assisted by Rev. Dr. Carter as Deacon, and Rev. Fr. Flynn, Sub-deacon. The Panegyric on the Saint of the Day was preached by the Rev. Fr. Wm. McGrath and was a most fervid and inspiring discourse. Thence the Society proceeded to Government House, where the then happy circumstances in Ireland, enhancing the appropriate sentiments of the day, were eloquently and feelingly expressed by the President, and sympathetically met in the Governor's courteous response. From Government House, the Society proceeded to the Ania Maxima where his Grace the Archbishop, Patron of the Society, received the body. The President in very fitting terms, tendered the best wishes of the Society to his Grace and the Clergy. His Grace thanked the President and Society for their good wishes, and congratulated the members on the splendid parade. On the return to the hall, the President announced the usual exchange of telegraphic compliments with sister societies in Halifax and Boston.

In the afternoon and night, the Society's dramatic troupe presented "My Irish Rose," a very fine Irish drama. On both occasions the theatre was filled to its utmost capacity, so that the results financially, were highly gratifying. The more pleasing result, however, was the fact, that the performance was of such a character as reflected highly to the credit of all concerned. The Society is greatly indebted to the ladies and gentlemen who annually give their time and talents in this direction.
On Sunday, July 2nd, the day set apart for honoring the memory of the heroic lads, who gave their lives in the Great War, your officers attended the Memorial Service in the Cathedral, and later, the impressive ceremonial at the Monument, erected by the Sergeants of the Newfoundland Regiment. A suitable floral tribute from the Society was laid on the monument, which together with other tokens from sister organizations, formed an earnest mark of respect to the dead heroes, amongst whom this Society has a large proportion.
On Sunday, October 22nd, your Officers attended the formal opening of the St. Patrick's Memorial School, by his Grace Archbishop Roche, our Patron. The erection of this fine building, which provided ample accommodation for the large number of pupils of the Parish, is a splendid tribute to the earnestness of the people of St. Patrick's, in their efforts on behalf of the noble cause of education.

We regret to have to report that death has levied its toll on the Society, by removing from its roll five members, in the persons of William T. Hearn, Wm. G. Dwyer, Michael O'Regan, John W. Kinella, and John Moore. As will be recognized, this list indicates the loss of some of our oldest and most respected members. The last mentioned, Mr. John Moore, held the office of 2nd Asst. Vice-President and is a loss to your Executive. It all causes the officers attended as Guard of Honour at the funerals.

Dealing now with the more active side of the Society's work, we are pleased to again be able to congratulate the body upon the large influx of new members during the year. Fifty-four names were added to our roll, which is very gratifying, especially in view of the fact that a good many of the new members are ex-pupils of the schools overseas, who by joining our ranks, practically demonstrate their appreciation of the benefits derived from the training of the Christian Brothers, and at the same time ensuring that the Society will be ever in a position to continue the good work of education.

In the various departments the Society's activities have been marked with continued success. The statement of our Treasurer gives our financial position as most satisfactory.

The School Committee gave particular attention to the building in a matter of repairs. The Net Department under their supervision had the customary amount of twine distributed, thus affording employment to many persons, who, with the existing conditions, availed of it gladly.

We are pleased to be in a position to announce that, during the year arrangements were made for renewal of the lease of the Theatre flat to the present tenant for an extended period, at a substantial increase in rental. In this connection it is also a matter of satisfaction to state that as a result of the work of the School Committee in interesting the Board of Fire Underwriters, a reduction in the rate of premiums paid for insurance on the Society's property was secured. This is but a preliminary step in what is hoped to be a still further advance in the way of bringing our insurance cost to a satisfactory basis.

From the quarterly reports submitted by the Superior of the Christian Brothers, it will be seen that success attends the progress of the Brothers' activities, to the same degree as has ever distinguished their labors in Newfoundland. The attendance at the Schools is the largest in the history of the Society, with a constant daily demand for accommodation. Present day conditions have not been as conducive to warrant the usual demand for boys as former years, but still there is a steady passing out of boys from the schools, to take responsible and trustworthy positions in our commercial life. This is a fine tribute to the faithful services of this splendid body of teachers, who seek no other reward than the success of their pupils. We desire again to congratulate the Brothers upon the successful development of the boys' musical and dramatic training. The production of the Opera "Chimes of Normandy" formed, we feel safe in saying, a standard that would be difficult for any school to equal. The crowded houses testified to the general appreciation of the wonderfully clever work of the boys, and the Society takes a pardonable pride in every new success attained by the pupils of our schools.

To the Literary and Amusement Committee must be attributed a great measure of our financial success. As a result of their efforts, the club-rooms have been kept in excellent condition and at the same time, the Committee has been enabled to meet all its liabilities, which, after considerable alterations and improvements in the rooms, is a feature, which could only be brought about by the united efforts of these gentlemen of the Committee who so assiduously applied themselves to the duties which had been assigned to them.

The Dramatic section of the Committee has in no little way contributed to this financial success by the production of "My Irish Rose" on St. Patrick's Day. We again bear tribute to the kind assistance so generously given by those who were not members of the Society, particularly to the ladies and gentlemen who have befriended us in the past years and to whom we are again indebted in connection with the recent performance.

The Grand Drawing, which after many necessary delays, was finally closed on the last of January, was a large factor also in contributing to the funds of the Committee. The thanks of the Society are due to the gentlemen of the Committee, who were responsible for the successful result of this drawing, as the enormous amount of work necessary in such undertakings, could only be satisfactorily carried through by strict attention to detail.

We also desire to sincerely thank the gentlemen who so kindly acted as Judges on the night of the drawing, viz., his Honor Mayor Cook, Hon. John Anderson, Andrew Carnell, W. R. Neal, Joseph Long, and George Hunt, also the kind Brothers of Mt. Cashel and their boys for the very great assistance given in getting the tickets ready.

A very large measure of success which attended the work of the Literary and Amusement Committee during the past year must be attributed to the Ladies' Auxiliary. The many entertainments promoted by the ladies have always stood out as being most successful, and it is all the more pleasing to find that in addition to the social success, the ladies have so managed these various events, as to be able to hand over to the Literary and Amusement Committee a most substantial sum for this year's work.

We are glad to be able to again compliment the Society upon the success which has followed its Athletic representatives. Our Football team for the third season in succession has won the Championship of the Newfoundland Football League, thus securing permanently the Football Cup to decorate the Society's Club Rooms. Our Baseball team carried off the trophy at Mount Cashel. Both these teams, together with our other athletes and the representatives of the competing teams, were as usual given a dinner in the rooms, where a very pleasant evening was spent by all who attended.

During the year, affairs in the land of our fathers have developed rapidly. The legislative creation of the Irish Free State has marked the success of the efforts of those, who for years, have toiled on behalf of the cause of Ireland, and whilst at the moment, there are apparent temporary difficulties to be overcome, we can all look forward with confidence to the hope, that in the course of a very short while the Old Land will be united throughout its length and breadth in the common object of working out its own destiny in accordance with the wishes of the people. That such an object may be quickly realized, is naturally the earnest prayer of all sons of Ireland, and none the less the descendants of those emigrants who assembled in Newfoundland and founded this Institution, one hundred and seventeen years ago to-night.

Respectfully submitted,
W. J. HIGGINS,
President.
ALAN DOYLE,
Secretary.

Height of Ocean Waves.

SOME ATTAIN TO NINETY FEET.
Much division of opinion exists on the subject of the height to which ocean waves attain in hurricane weather, and we have known experienced mariners to differ violently on this subject. We were interested therefore to read a statement made by an officer of the White Star liner Majestic in regard to the remarkably high seas which that vessel encountered on December 22 while west-bound. Several of his colleagues, he says endeavored to estimate the height of the waves from the bridge, this being the only position possible owing to the great length of the vessel. The bridge is 90 feet above the water-line, and the crow's nest on the foremast about 20 or 30 feet higher. The waves appeared to rise level with the crow's nest, and assuming that the forepart of the ship dipped as much as 30 feet on the back of a wave—which would probably bring the propellers out of the water—an incident which did not occur—a modest estimate of the height of the waves would be between 80 and 90 feet. Such rollers would undoubtedly be entitled to rank among the "mountain high" variety, but with all respect to the observers on the great liner, we are constrained to point out that scientific testimony discourages the theory that such monsters exist. Very rarely, as a matter of fact, does an ocean wave exceed 40 feet in height, and even this altitude is confined to the waters of the South Pacific and the South Atlantic. Nevertheless, it is worthy of note as evidence of the magnificent behaviour of our giant liners in bad weather, that during the worst of the storm passengers were dancing in the lounge unaware that any weather out of the ordinary was being experienced.—Syren and Shipping.

He Got His Rise.

A good story against himself was told recently by Mr. Henry Ford, the millionaire motor-car manufacturer. It concerned his early days when he first acquired the business which was destined eventually to become one of the biggest of its kind in the world.

One day there came to him a very young mechanic, and asked for a rise.

How much are you getting now? asked Ford.

Forty dollars a week," replied the applicant.

"Forty dollars!" ejaculated Mr. Ford. "Why, my boy, I worked for three years for twenty dollars a week right here in this establishment, and now I'm owner of it."

Well, see what happened to your boss. No man who treats his employees that way can hang on to his business, replied the unabashed youth.

HOW TO SLEEP ON A BARE FLOOR

It is more a matter of SLEEP, than of bed or board.

Some people can sleep sitting up, standing up, even while walking.

Many people can't sleep in the softest of downy beds, and all of us suffer occasionally from nervousness, wearing, tiring wakefulness at night.

There is always a reason for sleeplessness. Usually, it's a "sour stomach," a liver that has "let down" on the job, congested bowels, or biliousness.

Then, just before retiring, take Bosch's Pills. They soothe an uneasy stomach, encourage the organs of digestion and elimination to natural activity, and assure restful sleep no matter what!

Not At Home.

Professor Moonshine was a very learned man, but he was even more absent-minded than he was learned. One evening, after telling his housekeeper that he was going to a meeting of the Society Promoted for the Discovery of New Oligies, he forgot where he was going, went into a confabulator to get his hair cut, and asked the price of umbrellas.

After that, he decided to give it up, and went home.

He reached home late, and found the place in darkness.

"How annoying," he thought, for he had forgotten that he had forgotten his hatkey. He rang the bell, and at last a sleepy head was thrust out of an upper window.

"The professor isn't in," declared the head.

"That's very unfortunate," replied the professor. "Tell him I'm missed him. I'll call again tomorrow."

Confronting Ireland.

(Associated Press.)—Two questions arising under the Anglo-Irish Treaty have yet to be dealt with by the Finance Department. The clauses on finance and the boundary. Internal troubles prevented these questions from being settled for some time. The State government is planning to deal with them both in the near future. It will be remembered that Ireland pay its share of the national debt and of war pensions, and that the amount payable was to be fixed by agreement as to how much Ireland was to pay, allowance being made for the amount of over-taxation in the past. The payment of £100,000,000 to 50,000,000 pounds in compensation to the victors will involve the Irish Government in a deficit, and the amount of the deficit, and the amount of the loan to be raised to meet it, are the two questions that are to be dealt with. It is accepted that the Irish Free State will take a loan and start paying interest on it. The amount of the loan is to be fixed in the British budget, and the interest is to be paid by the Irish Government. The Irish Government is to be allowed to take over the money of the old State. But this year will see the end of the old State, and the new State will be imposed and collected by the new State.

FINANCIAL PROSPECTS.
The subject of finance the government is optimistic. It is attempting to settle the final settlement of the question, which may involve as much as 70,000,000 pounds. The British Government has transferred from the landlords the greater part of the land in Ireland, but the job was not finished, and all over Ireland, the farmers who own the land are paying for them in instalments less than the value of the land. Some thousands of farmers are being driven from the land. The Government proposes to make land ownership complete and compulsory. The Government must sell and every farmer must buy. As regards the Ulster question, preparations are being made for the appointment of the commission to fix the boundaries of the Northern Province. The Government is in accordance with the wishes of the inhabitants, but does not believe how the Government are determined. The decision will be taken for Ireland, but the Government are for counties, both in the North and in the South. The Government would not vote themselves into a position. With similar areas as in the past, parts would stay with the old parts with Dublin.

BOUNDARY QUESTION.
The Government brought some differences between the British and the Irish as to what it meant, and the Government is in accordance with the wishes of the inhabitants, but does not believe how the Government are determined. The decision will be taken for Ireland, but the Government are for counties, both in the North and in the South. The Government would not vote themselves into a position. With similar areas as in the past, parts would stay with the old parts with Dublin.

Lighter Side.
Sweet says borrowing money makes them lose interest. The Government is in accordance with the wishes of the inhabitants, but does not believe how the Government are determined. The decision will be taken for Ireland, but the Government are for counties, both in the North and in the South. The Government would not vote themselves into a position. With similar areas as in the past, parts would stay with the old parts with Dublin.

Rest.
The Government is in accordance with the wishes of the inhabitants, but does not believe how the Government are determined. The decision will be taken for Ireland, but the Government are for counties, both in the North and in the South. The Government would not vote themselves into a position. With similar areas as in the past, parts would stay with the old parts with Dublin.
