CHAPTER XXV.

He was rapidly drawing on his gloves, and Elsie's heart sank. Her white, anxious face and trembling lips did not touch his adamant heart.

"Then when shall I be able to see you, sir?" she asked.

"See here, my dear," looking doubtfully at her maid, "why not—er—join us—my wife and daughter? Take lunch with us, I mean. They will be delighted to make your acquaintance, and we will attend to your little matter when we return to the office."

He paused in sudden confusion, and reddened to the roots of his hair.

"No, no! I forgot; that will never do," he added. "Perhaps you have friends handy—lady friends? If not, you can occupy my private office. I will send out for some refreshments."

"No, thank you, Mr. Grant."

Elsie spoke haughtily. She could not tell why, but his manner was changed toward her. She felt that it was almost offensive. Why did he invite her to meet his wife and daughter, and then suddenly regret having done so?

"I will remain here, if you will permit me, until your return," she said. "My maid has some purchases to make, and can do her shopping at once."

Mr. Grant seemed relieved, and showed Miss Strone into his private office. He placed before her two or three newspapers, and promised to be back in an hour. The next moment he hustled away, and Elsie gave permission to Annette to enjoy herself in any way she chose until half-past two o'clock.

Mr. Grant came back sooner than he had anticipated, and a flutter of feminine garments in the outer office announced that he was not alone.

He hurried in, hardly troubling to notice Miss Sterne, unlocked a cabinet, from the inner recesses of which he produced his checkbook and rapidly filled in one of the slips.

He handed this to a tall, stony lady, who stepped forward languidly, eyeing the while a little curiously. Behind her was a fashionably-attired young lady, with an exquisite figure, coral lips, and glowing black eyes.

"How rude you are, papa," she said, "not to introduce us to Miss Sterne! Lam sure that it must be Miss Sterne!"

The lawyer frowned, but replied: "Really, I forgot; you ladies drive all thoughts from a man's head except money! Pardon me, Miss Sterne, this is Mrs. Grant, and—er—this is my daughter—my stepdaughter, I should say, Miss Adeline Cleveland!"

My dears, Miss Sterne, Sir John Somerton's only daughter."

Elsie never knew how she acknowledged the introduction, but she never forgot Mr. Grant's reluctance in making it, or the wicked light in Miss Cleveland's eyes.

Miss Adeline Cleveland! How quickly poor Elsie remembered the name! Had it not been branded in vivid characters into her heart by the cruel words of Lord Somerton?

So this was the lady to whom he had referred—the lady to whom Colin Ernescliffe was betrothed! To whom he was indebted for his very success even as an artist.

Elsie took in her bold, brilliant beauty at a glance, her exquisite figure, and Juno-like presence. She was richly attired, but in perfect taste, and, though at first sight she appeared to be almost girlish, her age must have been at least twenty-eight years.

A mutual dislike flashed into the hearts of both, and Elsie never forgot the smile of disdainful, half-veiled contempt with which Miss Cleveland favored her.

"Now, my dears, I have business—important business—with Miss Sterne," Mr. Grant said. "Go and buy your foie-gras, and bring the carriage back for me at four o'clock."

The ladies bowed distantly toward Miss Sterne, and Mr. Grant walked with them into the outer office, talking briskly the while.

Elsie's heart beat into her throat in a way that half-suffocated her. Her hands trembled, and the tramping of busy feet in the court below seemed to be growing less and less distinct.

By a great effort she pulled herself together, murmuring:

"I must not give way. I would not faint here for worlds! I must be brave! Enemies appear to be springing up at every turn! A few weeks since a petted child of fortune; now I am like a hunted animal!"

Despaired of Life at 50 Strong and Well at 70

Mr. Jacob H. Macksey, 336 Midland Ave., Midland, Ont. writes—

"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for over 20 years and I feel that I owe my life to them. I suffered severely from rheumatism and heart failure. One doctor just gave me one year to live, and even told me I might be found dead at any time. A neighbor advised Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and I have been using them as needed ever since. I am now 70 years of age, weigh 247 pounds and can work as well as any young man."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills
One pill a dose, 25c a box, all dealers or Edmondson, Boston, U.S.A.

Mr. Grant came back, and, flashing one of his odd, keen glances at her, sat down at his table.

"Well, Miss Sterne," he said, quickly. "Now to business. What is it that I can do for you, please?"

CHAPTER XXVI.

The keen eyes of Lawyer Grant had noticed Elsie Sterne's start of surprise when the name of Miss Adeline Cleveland had been spoken, and, partly to relieve the awkwardness of the situation, he made an attempt at explanation.

Though reputedly gift-tongued and ever ready with biting sarcasms or well-turned phrases, sparkling with legal acumen, as the case might warrant, when opposed by the most scathing counsel in the courts of justice, the clever lawyer felt considerable difficulty in facing this sad-faced, lovely girl and obeying the behests of Lord George Somerton.

His conscience was not altogether easy upon the matter, but lawyers are seldom troubled by such obstacles.

He believed that Elsie Sterne was a willful girl, rushing blindly in the face of her friends, and against her best interests. He had been assured of this by the two letters of Lady Helena Freeman, by the sorrowful admissions of the dead rector, and by the actions of Lord Somerton. Sir John had vested too much power in the hands of his daughter; but even when he was hardly responsible for his actions, he had taken the precaution to appoint two guardians—Lawyer Grant and Mr. Vallance—whose concerted authority would check any folly to which Miss Sterne might desire to commit herself.

Instead of equal amounts of ordinary milk or cream, as the canned soap labels read, you use only one-half cup of Libby's Milk and water. That's a saving of practically 33 1/3% over the cost of common milk—a cost only one-seventh that of the cream.

Yet your soup, you'll find, is wonderfully rich and creamy, with a delightful body and flavor.

Within a few days of Sir John's departure, this irresponsible girl had committed the unpardonable sin of entertaining a young gentleman at the Park, and falling in love with him. He was a gentleman, and a man of distinction in the world of art. He was a man with a very promising future, and in every way worthy of even the heiress of Blairwood Park, but Colin Ernescliffe was already betrothed to Mr. Grant's handsome stepdaughter, and Mr. Grant found himself entangled very much in the meshes of a web which had been weaving about others.

The lawyer was an ambitious man. He had originally commenced business in an attic in Grace Church street, and for three or four years subsisted upon what would have starved the life and purpose out of any ordinary man. By working upon the speculation plan known as "half-shares," he gradually made a doubtful practice. But one influential client introduced others; until finally he married the widow of a wealthy stockbroker, and he came one of the most successful lawyers of the day, although some of his schemes were described as "shady."

He it was who had furnished funds to Colin Ernescliffe in the days of his early struggles, when the only mistress of his dreams was fame! He it was who had long been in secret correspondence, through one of his many secret channels, with the man who called himself James Castlemon, and who had stirred up within the heart of Noel Campbell that natural desire to see the man who had murdered his father should be punished. To him Sir John was pictured as the most heartless of men; but the astute and scheming lawyer kept back his ulterior motives. He even threw dust into the eyes of Lord Somerton, and listened with pretended horror to so much as my lord deemed it advisable to tell him concerning Sir John's early life.

It was now his policy to propitiate Somerton in every way. A man who had lately succeeded to an earldom was not to be carelessly played with. It was possible—just possible—that his daughter Adeline might eventually make a conquest of the earl, if she could tear from her heart this mad infatuation which she felt for Colin Ernescliffe. And yet, knowing as much as the lawyer did, the artist would one day be quite as good a match, and all that brought honor and power and wealth to Miss Cleveland, redounded to the credit of her stepfather, Mr. James Grant.

"Can it be, Miss Sterne," he said, looking at a roll of papers tied together with a pink string—"can it be possible that my daughter's name was not unfamiliar to you?"

WIVES OF THE MATRIMONIAL AGENT.

"I was introduced to my husband by a matrimonial agent," said a woman in the Divorce Court recently, "and," she added, "I have regretted it with scalding tears."

The speaker, who was the petitioner in a suit for divorce, met the matrimonial agent at a fashionable hotel in the North of England. The man was perfectly frank about his business, and said that, for a certain consideration, he would introduce a man of excellent position who wanted to meet a suitable partner for life.

Intrigue and Trickery.

The consideration was forthcoming, the introduction arranged, and marriage followed. Within six months the wife filed a petition for divorce and won her case. Her views on the subject of matrimonial agents are emphatic.

Libby's MILK

The milk that good cooks use

7 1/2 teaspoons of butter fat in every can

Libby's Milk gives greater richness to cooking for the same reason that cream and butter do: it is rich in butter fat. There are, in fact, 7 1/2 teaspoons of this enriching substance in every 16 oz. can of Libby's Milk!

"From famous pasture lands"

For, unlike ordinary milk, Libby's Milk comes only from selected herds in the finest dairy sections of the country—those favored localities where nature has made of shady hills and green, well watered meadows ideal pasture lands, and where men specialize in raising cows that give exceptionally rich milk.

Not only that. At our condenseries in the heart of these famous dairy sections, we remove more than half the moisture from this fine milk, making it double rich.

Why you have Rheumatism

RHEUMATISM is largely due to weakened and deranged kidneys. The kidneys fail to properly filter the blood, and the poisonous impurities in the blood stream, uric acid, accumulate and cause rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica and other serious ailments.

It is not from headaches, pains in the joints, or spots floating before the eyes, that you should be alarmed. The kidneys, supporting the right, and restoring the blood to its normal condition, are the glory of good health. A few boxes will make you healthy again.

It costs a box, at your druggist's.

Andrew Bonar Law rests amid Great Britain's honored dead in Westminster Abbey, the shrine of the nation, contained in a beautiful urn, were deposited to-day in the south of the great edifice in the presence of a distinguished company of three thousand persons, including members of the Royal family, Dominion Premiers, Foreign Diplomats, Parliamentarians, and representatives of the Army and Navy, and the business and financial world. The ceremony was of the simplest and briefest character. Stalwart soldiers carried the coffin containing the urn through the great west door to the catafalque before the altar. After the dean had read a brief lesson and the choir and congregation had sung one of Mr. Bonar Law's favorite hymns "The Strife is Over, The Battle Won" the coffin was again shouldered and taken to the graveside. Only the mourners followed, the rest of the congregation remained in their places. While the family gathered close to the grave for the solemn moment when the urn was lowered into its small resting place beneath the pavement, the congregation joined in singing Kipling's recessional, after which the organ boomed Chopin's Funeral March, and the clergy, pallbearers, cabinet members, Dominion Premiers, and others filed past the grave.

GERMANY'S STATE.

BERLIN, Nov. 5. Armistice week finds the five year old German Republic in the throes of a nation wide political, economic and social crisis, the outcome of which may be determined through such minor factors as the rising or falling of the price of bread, potatoes and coal. It may also terminate in a sudden proclamation of national dictatorship, the demand for which is gaining perceptible momentum among all classes of people, who are apparently willing to barter their present political liberty for even hazier prospects of amelioration of their social condition. Germany suggests outwardly a loosely federated pseudo Republic without such elementary prerequisites as a national currency of a safely anchored constitutional government, supported by representative parliament. The bake shops of greater Berlin are shut down, market stalls are blocked up, and long rows of shops in the eastern section of the city are disfigured by broken windows with shelves and counters looted. Berlin is virtually in the grip of a hunger blockade as the agrarian producers within the radius of one hundred and fifty miles continue their refusal to deliver their products in exchange for paper money.

KINDNESS REPAID.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 5. Gratitude for the sympathy and kindness extended to a number of Canadian soldiers while prisoners in a German prison camp by Sergeant-Major Willie Hatzmann, Prussian cavalryman, has resulted in the German soldier being brought to Canada by those he saved from starvation. Trooper Harry Deacon, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, has been the central figure in post-war drama. On receipt of a letter from Hatzmann last spring, in which he told of his straitened circumstances, Mr. Deacon and others forwarded money to enable the German cavalryman to come to Canada. "This chap is one of the cleanest, whitest men I ever met, and so say all others who were in the prison camp with me," said Trooper Deacon.

THE PASSING OF BEAUTY. Trees are turning red and gold. November's year is growing old. But the leaves are fluttering down to the gutters of the town: And the beauty of it all Tells us plainly it is fall. It is fall and summer's gone. Winter's swiftly coming on.

Roses pink and roses white Make a very lovely sight. But I cannot stay the test. When I see them on a bier. Tinged with sadness every bloom Lighting up the silent room. For the petals, one by one, Whisper this: Your friend has gone.

Distant purple, flaming red, Well I know that summer's dead; Woods of beauty, hills aglow, Livered heads of the snow. Though unrepented, I behold Still your wealth of shining gold. Still beyond your calm I hear Winds of winter howling near.

TAKING IT OUT OF YOURSELF.

How much more it does tire anyone to do a given amount of work in a hurry than it would to do the same amount when he did not feel pushed for time.

Nothing in the world is any more exhausting than the sense of being pinched for time. Go to town with 30 errands to do and plenty of time to do them in, and you will come home far less tired than if you had had half a dozen errands and such a limited amount of time that you were harassed by a sense of hurry and anxiety.

Every Delay Irritates you. When you are in this state of mind every delay is an irritation that sets your nerves to quivering.

When you wait for an elevator you watch the shaft for the heralding appearance of the cables as intently as if something vital depended upon it. What is it stopping so long at that floor for, you ask yourself? Good graces it has started down and then stopped again. You cast glances to ward the stairs. No, you've waited so long already that you won't gain any time that way. Finally it drops into view and you crowd eagerly in and glare at the elevator man when he reopens the door for a late comer.

When you find a clerk busy with another customer you fairly fill the atmosphere with your impatience as you wait. I should think clerks would be tired out by this emanation of nervousness which the customer in a hurry always gives off.

You Feel Like Weeping. When you don't find the shade of darning wool you are looking for at the accessible shop and have to walk three unexpected blocks you feel as if you should weep. If the streets are crowded you dodge in and out in a way that tenses every muscle in your body and when someone going at a leisurely pace blocks your way you feel ready to scream if he doesn't move to one side and let you get by. And when you arrive home utterly worn out you wonder why it is, when you weren't to town but an hour or two, and probably blame it on the weather or the house cleaning you did yesterday. Whereas the blame really belongs on your attempt to do more than you could comfortably in a given space of time. "I can't hurry the way I used to," a woman in the late thirties told me. "I find it takes it out of me so." That "takes it out of me" is a good phrase. It describes exactly what driving yourself that way does. Be Kinder To Yourself. I know a man who finds motoring very tiring. A run which would not bother many men leaves him tired and irritable. Drive with him and you see why. Because he is tense all the time, because he drives at a pace which demands constant concentration, because he never lets a car pass him and is constantly passing other cars and straining like a dog held in leash when he is held back from passing by the nature of the road.

Sometimes, of course, we all have to hurry. But not half so often as we think we do. If there were some way we could actually see the nerve energy we are taking out of ourselves, I feel sure we would do without something, let something go, manage somehow to be kinder to ourselves.

Lest We Forget.

The official Report which we published yesterday of the losses sustained by the Empire during the Great War indicate but in part the price that was paid for victory. It records that 908,371 made the Great Sacrifice, and that 2,090,212 wounds were inflicted, but it is impossible to ascertain with certainty what proportion of the latter proved fatal after the cessation of hostilities, or incapacitated the recipients to such an extent as to make it impossible for them to resume their former occupations. That the number was by no means small is evident judging from our experiences in this country.

There is another long casualty list of which we never hear, and the particulars concerning which are known only to those most closely concerned—the list containing the names of the soldiers' relatives, who, worn out by anxiety and weakened by the privations which they underwent, quietly and uncomplainingly entered their long rest. The list is further lengthened by the numerous non-combatants who met a watery grave when passenger boats were sent to the bottom by the piratical crews of the German submarines. The addition to the list of the infants whose deaths can be directly attributed to the war does not by any means complete it, and in the face of it all we are constantly searching for the cause of unrest, the depression which exists, and the length of time it takes for conditions to become normal!

It is not on the contrary remarkable, and a striking testimony to the sterling worth of the British character that so much progress towards recovery has been made? Nil desperandum is still the motto of the British peoples, and the conference of the Empire statesmen in London is proof of it. They are planning not only "come back," but to make the Empire stronger and more self-reliant than it ever was before.

In many fields of activities, the effect of the tremendous loss of the very best of its manhood that each country gave, is but too clearly in evidence, and for many years to come must be a handicap to achievement. That is but the price, however, that every nation must pay to maintain its honourable traditions and to protect its rights. Some day perhaps some other means may be found, but until it comes it is our duty to be prepared to make such sacrifices.

Forgetfulness of injuries received is a characteristic of our race; when the fight is over, we are willing to be friends with our late opponents, and we put our troubles behind us. That is to our credit, but we are apt to forget as well the causes of the distress which invariably follows a quarrel. We bitterly complain of the lack of employment which exists; we are impatient because British shipbuilding, manufacturers, and other industries are not in full swing, and we are annoyed because her prowess in the athletic field is not as notable as it was in pre-war days. We forget that the pick of her young manhood was destroyed, that the best brain and muscle of the country were sacrificed in order to win out, and that until their places can be filled the prosperity of former days cannot be restored.

It takes time, and already there is ample evidence of progress. Britain is repaying her enormous debt to America, British shipbuilding, it is true, is below the normal output of former years, but she still leads the world; British trade returns show continual improvement, and in the athletic field we were able to secure a great victory over the American runners in the Inter-Varsity sports last summer.

What applies to Britain applies in corresponding measure to our own circumstances. We shall feel for years, the effect of the war, and if we display the same uncomplaining attitude in struggling with our present problems as we showed during that time, we too shall "come back" and take on a new lease of life.

Warrant and Non-Commissioned Officers Mess

Having successfully launched the Officers' Mess Padre Nangle has now turned his attention to reforming the old Sergeants' Mess. On several occasions re-unions have been held by the Sergeants, but the work of organizing always fell on the shoulders of a faithful few and not infrequently a large proportion of the expenses. This showed lack of proper organization and support, but under the guidance of the Padre with his experience in such matters, his ability to organize and the driving power so often exemplified, the new Mess should be a success, and he in full reliance order when Field-Marshal Earl Haig arrives this coming summer. A meeting is called for to-night in the G.W.V.A. building when rules and regulations governing the Mess will be discussed, officers elected and arrangements made for a re-union at an early date. If the Padre's call meets with the same response from the Warrant and Non-Commissioned Officers as it did from the Officers the new Mess is assured of success.

Judge Morris Reserves Judgment

IN CUSTOMS REVENUE ACT CASE. In the Magistrate's Court yesterday afternoon the case of the Customs vs. husband and wife, residents of Flatrock, for a breach of the Customs Act, was continued before Judge Morris. From the evidence submitted by the Crown witnesses, the defendants in this case received five shipments of second hand clothing from the United States since 1922. The last shipment was dated Oct. 20, this year. The goods, which consisted of Ladies', Children's and Gents' wearing apparel, was shipped in second hand trunks by a sister-in-law of the defendants. Mr. Chafe, the examining officer, stated that the articles in question were used goods, and all shipments examined by him were passed as such. A nominal value was charged in each case. The defendants would pass entries and pay duty, after each valuation had been made. Upon being cross-examined by Mr. Higgins, K.C., witness stated that there was cause for suspicion as to whether the goods were disposed of by sale. Since June last three shipments had arrived close together. Customs officer Tobin, who was sworn and examined, stated that he received information of second hand clothing being sold at Flatrock by defendants. He visited defendants' home on Oct. 27th. Mrs.—informed him that she had been receiving second hand clothing from the States, and admitted selling the goods. Witness took possession of the remaining goods left over, which consisted of 9 blouses, 8 sweaters, and 1 Ladies' skirt. He also obtained from the woman a list of names of those to whom she had sold the goods. Mrs. Martin, a next door neighbour of the defendants, stated in her evidence that she bought a ladies' suit, which defendant claimed was too small for her. Witness offered $3.50 for the garment, the price in question being agreed upon by both parties. This completed the case for the Crown. The defendants in their evidence, stated that the said clothing was gathered together and sent by a sister-in-law from Boston. She paid a visit to the defendants' home in Flatrock about two years ago and promised, that after she returned to the States she would send some second hand clothing. No invoices were received for any of the shipments. Defendants paid the duty and freight on all shipments as they came in. Other shipments were expected to follow.

Mr. Higgins, K.C., who represented the defendant, claimed that a breach of the law could only be committed if the goods were imported for sale. He claimed that this had not been done in this case. His client was not an importer in the first place, nor had he received the goods with the intention of selling them. Several important points of law were raised in moving for a dismissal of the case. Mr. F. A. News for the Crown, replied that his claim was that there was no doubt as to the goods having been imported for sale. Five shipments were received in less than two years, and if some from all shipments had been sold, there could be no doubt as to the fact that it was intended to sell a part of the last shipment received. His Honor Judge Morris reserved judgment until he would have an opportunity to enquire into the points of law raised. In the meantime Mr. News informed the Court that it was not the intention of the Customs to press for the full penalty in this case, but that they would like to have the law clearly interpreted for future guidance.

Others are pleased, why not you? with Sam Eddy, The Taxi Man. 'Phone 1551J.—nov5,t

A Wedding in Far-Off Alaska

On Sunday, October 21st, there was solemnized in Hyder, Alaska, a wedding in which the happy couple were Miss Irene Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Hall, and Mr. Edwin Duder Haddon, son of Mr. John Haddon, late of the Customs Department of St. John's. The many friends of Mr. Haddon will be glad to hear of him and we are certain will join with the Telegram in wishing him and his bride bon voyage. Invitations have come all the way to Newfoundland, to the "At Home" which will be held on Nov. 15th at Britannia Beach, British Columbia, the future home of Mr. and Mrs. Haddon.

A Five Million Dollar Company

TO DEVELOP ST. GEORGE'S COAL FIELDS. The commercial working of the coal areas of St. George's District so often advocated by the late Jas. P. Howley, is within measurable distance, and it is possible that when next winter rolls round many will be sitting by the side of a fire of Newfoundland coal. At the present moment a corporation known as the Nfld. Coal Mining Company, with a capital of $5,000,000 is in process of organization. The officers of this corporation number amongst their personnel wealthy Americans, amongst whom are the presidents of several banks and prominent manufacturers. This corporation will operate the property of the St. George's Coal Fields, Ltd., and within the past couple of weeks representatives, accompanied by Mr. T. J. Freeman, the President of the St. George's Coal Fields Co., have been looking over the property.

On Saturday Mr. Freeman, accompanied by Mr. Arthur J. Selridge, Attorney and Corporation lawyer, returned to the city. The latter is now engaged making an examination into the titles and will remain for some time to determine any legal questions that may arise in connection with the transfer of the property. The Telegram called on Mr. Selridge, who is staying at the Cochrane, and learned that a party consisting of Mr. Carl E. Milliken, who is an ex-Governor of Maine and represents a number of wealthy capitalists of that State, an English engineer, Sir Stoppford Brunton, and himself had been for some time looking over the coal areas in question. After landing at Robinson's the party was met by Mr. T. J. Freeman and together they walked eight miles to the coal measures. The examination of the coal seams was begun without delay. They were particularly struck with the Juke's Seam. On this are two tunnels at the end of which they saw a vein of coal 6 feet wide of apparently very high grade.

ENGINEER REPORTS VERY VALUABLE PROPERTY. After the seams uncovered had been traced and a careful study of the geological conditions had been summed up, the conclusion reached by Sir Stoppford Brunton, the engineer, was that the property is so valuable that it should be further developed to determine the extent of the trough. This is shown from the dip of the seams as shown on the surface, indicate that it is not down to a great depth, and is of great extent.

TRANSPORTATION PRESENTS NO DIFFICULTY.

The serious question of transportation was next given consideration. The party made a thorough examination of the 8 miles of road to the railway and also the harbor at St. George's. The practicability of establishing a shipping station at a convenient point in the harbor was decided upon. It was found that a total length of little more than ten miles of rail which would include all the necessary sidings, etc., was all that is required and this can be built through a practically level country, and at a minimum in regard to cost. Development work will begin as soon as possible following the receipt of the formal report of the engineer. In this report it will be indicated where drill holes should be sunk and if as expected the tonnage of the area is as great as is believed the sinking of shafts and the equipment of the property with machinery for work on a larger scale will be prosecuted with vigor. From Mr. Selridge the Telegram learns that the results of the examination of the property substantiates the claims made by the late Mr. Howley, and the reports he made to the government as director of geological survey. The mining geologist Sir James Stoppford Brunton, several years ago spent six months in Bay St. George region studying the geological formations so that on the present visit he was familiar with the section.

The West Indies Bill

A preliminary meeting of the select committee in connection with the West India Service was held in the Colonial Secretary's office yesterday. Those present were Hon. W. F. Coaker, Hon. W. H. Cave, Capt. Rendell, W. J. Higgins, K.C., Mr. Peter Cashin. After a discussion it was decided to take the views of representatives of the trade as regards the value of such service to the country. Accordingly a number of gentlemen engaged in the export business of the colony will be asked to appear before the committee to express their views. The first meeting for this purpose is being held this evening.

C. Y. M. L. A. Debate

RESOLVED: That Newfoundland would thrive best as a Crown Colony was debated by the association last evening. The affirmative was led by H. Ford and seconded by H. Mitchell. It was contended that Responsible Government, begun in 1856, had done very little in the way of local development. That if had, on the other hand, greatly increased taxation, and that at the present method of procedure it was tending more to personal and private interests than to the uplift of the masses. The negative side was upheld by E. Best as leader and H. Hooke as seconder, who boldly contended that the country had greatly progressed under the present system of Government, and was a very different place to-day from that of fifty years ago. They also emphasized the utter impossibility of intellectual government except by those on the spot and vitally interested in the social and industrial life of the country. The negative won by a large majority.

Moon Lure

John Anderson, my Jo John,
Your work's not yet half done;
Men want to change the moon, John,
As you have changed the sun.
The wise men all agree sir,
True calendars are not;
Because the moon like man, sir,
Is sometimes but "half shot."
"Would seem on Lunas Orb, sir,
Some Pussycat has set;
His foot to start a dry time
By leaving it "still" wet.
Don't trust the moon to guide, sir,
No pilot safe is she;
I trusted her myself, man,
But she misguided me.
But I don't blame her solely, John,
As other folks might do;
But which of us was full, John,
I'll leave that guess to you.
Now don't disturb the moon, sir,
Tho' wife like waters teem;
For men will still be full, sir,
Just as the moons have been.
But if you would be led, sir,
By "moonshine" hear me say
It is no Igloo Estab.—
I think I hear you sayin';
"This rhyme is sure begotten
Of water on the brain!"

the market will assuredly advance as a result. Packers of the goods cannot very well cope with orders assigned to them and the local market, which is by no means overstocked with meat remains strong with the possibility of sharp advances over present-day figures shortly.

It is desirable that all persons claiming exemption from service on juries or persons qualified to serve on a panel different from that on which they are entered should attend the court of revision now being held at the Central District Court. MILDRED HARRIS SCORES IN "THE FIRST WOMAN."

"The First Woman," a thrilling play dealing with life behind the scenes in theatre life on Broadway, where a young girl with certain ambitions to become a great star and is refused her opportunity by her manager, but who afterwards reaches the goal of her dreams and startles everybody with her marvellous performance. This production gives Mildred Harris the finest role of her great career on the silver sheet and thoroughly pleased last night's audience at the Crescent Theatre. Another very interesting subject was a Sherlock Holmes story which patrons claim was even greater than the preceding tales of this series.

Mr. Robert Shields' rich Baritone voice was at it's best in last night's selections, which were well rendered and were warmly applauded by the audience.

Already quite a large number of names for this week's big Amateur Contest have been sent in at the box office, and the popular Dan Delmar who will be in charge, promises patrons on Friday night the big treat of all contests to be held at the Crescent this week. Further particulars will be announced later in the week.

Good Stories From a Novelist's Notebook

At one certain London theatres kept open house in order to allure the economical. You could find complimentary tickets on the counter of any tobacconist's and on the shelves of all the saloon bars. Once inside, however, you were charged for everything. To the Imperial Theatre, one of the open houses, a patron went, sternly resolved to resist these fees. "Leave your overcoat," directed the official of the cloak-room. "I haven't an overcoat," answered the patron. "Leave your hat." "I haven't a hat!" "I haven't a walking-stick." "I haven't a walking-stick!" "Then," said the official heatedly, "you dashed well go out and buy one."

Every Girl is Judged

by the toilet requisites she uses. It means a lot to pour the latex up on his own body, and so carry it to camp, where he pulls it off in strips! Small wonder that the "naive" rubber requires a considerable amount of washing and softening when it reaches a factory! It was one of the old-time bus conductors who said to his driver on a stormy, rainy night: "Pon me word, it makes me feel I was in heaven." The driver remarked that his part, would rather be in a comfortable, well-warmed public house than in a private box. "Yes," said the conductor, "you always want the best of everything!"

When Booth, the American, played "King Lear" in London, Ridge, then a comparatively young man, went to see it. When the play was over, he went to the box between the lamented King and his daughter, General, as he called her, only lady in a private box. "You are a very nice young lady," said the private box: "Rather," she said, in tones which could be heard all over the theatre. "rather an unpleasant family, the Leairs!"

"Milking" a Rubber Tree

There is a Big Difference Between Native and Plantation Rubber.

Rubber arrives in this country in various forms. Plantation rubber is that which has been collected scientifically from cultivated trees; "native" rubber usually comes from the jungle. Plantation rubber is clean, light in colour, and when seen in the creamy semi-transparent form known as "crepe," seems pretty enough to be used as material for a girl's summer frock.

Native rubber is almost black, as hard as iron, and contains a considerable amount of foreign matter. Twenty per cent. of dirt is the average amount extracted in the hot bath to which such rubber is subjected upon reaching this factory. Although native rubber is so dirty, however, the way it is collected is very picturesque.

Having located and tapped his tree, the native puts utensils beneath the cuts (perhaps tin cups, more likely gourds or coconuts), then makes regular rounds with a bucket, emptying into this milk-like substance that has run out from the trees. This is known as latex and contains a certain amount of water.

As it is necessary to evaporate the water, the native builds a fire, then dips a stick into the latex and holds it in the smoke. As it dries, he dips, until the resulting lump of smoked rubber is some eight or twelve pounds in weight. Another rarer method of collection

Jury List Revision

It is desirable that all persons claiming exemption from service on juries or persons qualified to serve on a panel different from that on which they are entered should attend the court of revision now being held at the Central District Court. Last year there was quite a lot of dissatisfaction over the jury lists, as many who claimed exemption on the various disability grounds and others who were placed on the wrong panels were put to the inconvenience of having to answer a summons.

Bumper Feature Show at the Crescent

MILDRED HARRIS SCORES IN "THE FIRST WOMAN."

"The First Woman," a thrilling play dealing with life behind the scenes in theatre life on Broadway, where a young girl with certain ambitions to become a great star and is refused her opportunity by her manager, but who afterwards reaches the goal of her dreams and startles everybody with her marvellous performance. This production gives Mildred Harris the finest role of her great career on the silver sheet and thoroughly pleased last night's audience at the Crescent Theatre. Another very interesting subject was a Sherlock Holmes story which patrons claim was even greater than the preceding tales of this series.

Mr. Robert Shields' rich Baritone voice was at it's best in last night's selections, which were well rendered and were warmly applauded by the audience.

Already quite a large number of names for this week's big Amateur Contest have been sent in at the box office, and the popular Dan Delmar who will be in charge, promises patrons on Friday night the big treat of all contests to be held at the Crescent this week. Further particulars will be announced later in the week.

A somewhat similar situation, it is recalled, developed at Gloucester last year when the Bluenose and Henry Ford got away to a start but went over the course in very light weather. Ford finished first, but it was called no race, and after much wrangling and bitterness the Gloucestermen agreed to accept the committee's ruling. In that case, of course, the race was sailed over again, while in the present instance the boat that won has that victory handed over to her competitor. The belief is that the Bluenose crew will go one better than the Gloucestermen did last year, accept this more drastic ruling without further demur, and be on the line on Saturday.

seconds. This was a real surprise, but the windward work was yet to come and that would tell the tale. The wind had now increased a knot or two—it was hitting 25 in the heaviest puffs—and the schooners had jibed around the buoy with remarkable ease and were running dead before the wind for Sambre Gas Buoy, nine miles away. After covering about half the leg they were with Columbia, which came tearing along with a better full. It was close enough but Canada started ahead and Angus hoped to keep her there.

Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. You can feel it now. Much of it resists the tooth brush, clings and stays.
Soon that film discolors, then turns dingy coats. That is why teeth become cloudy.
Pepsodent also cleans food particles which ferment and form acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in film. They with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. That is why tooth troubles are almost universal with people who do not get film.

You can do it now
Dental science has in late years found ways to fight that film. One acts to disintegrate the film at all stages of formation. The other removes it without harmful scouring. These methods were proved by many careful tests. Then a new type tooth paste was perfected to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.
Now this new method has come into worldwide use. Leading dentists everywhere advise it.

Twenty-five Million Poppies

Poppy Day will be held by the British Legion on November 10. Its aim is to alleviate distress in ex-Service homes and at the same time to keep alive the spirit of comradeship. Twenty-five million Poppies have been made, the bulk of them at the Legion's Factory in the Old Kent Road, where eighty disabled men are kept employed the whole year round. The Poppies will be sold in all parts of the Empire at minimum prices of threepence, sixpence, and a shilling. Eighty ocean liners are co-operating in the movement. In London there will be sellers in the streets, hotels, clubs, and stores. It is hoped, too, that the collections in the churches and chapels, on Armistice Day, will be given to the fund. Temporary Poppy Day Headquarters have been established at 34 Lowndes Square, S.W.

Three Men in a Boat

ADVENTUROUS VOYAGE OF 14,000 MILES.

With a crew of three, a tiny craft called The Shanghai, of 27 tons, has left Cape Town on a 6,000 miles voyage to Europe. This is merely a part of an adventurous voyage of 14,000 miles which the trio set themselves to write a special correspondent from Johannesburg.

At the beginning of this year six Danish officers of the Great Northern Telegraph Company in Shanghai had concluded their contracts and were due for leave. The ordinary steamers were available, but the men preferred to buy this small craft and to spice their voyage home to Copenhagen with a little adventure.

The Shanghai is only 47 feet long, with a beam of 18 feet and a draught of 7 1/2 feet. When she reached Durban her crew declined to have her towed in, and under the power of her little 10-h.p. engine, she made her own berth at the wharf. The six men aboard her made light of the 3,000 miles of their journey which they had then accomplished.

First a Revolver at the Steersman. Scarcely out of Shanghai, on February 7, they were forced by bad weather to leave to, and while in this position a Chinese junk with a large crew came out from the island and made as if to board the little craft. The helmsman of the junk fired a revolver at the steersman of the ketch, but missed, and the appearance of the rest of the Shanghai's crew, armed with shotguns, was enough to persuade the "private" that business was meant. The junk drifted away.

At Batavia three of the six decided that they had had enough adventure and left to return by ordinary steamer. There were thus only three left—Høngebund, Ingwersen, and Vauman—and they continued the voyage. Between Mauritius and Durban the weather they encountered was so bad that they made only 20 miles in nine hours. Their 3,000 miles to Durban took a little over six months.

Mount Cachel Band at the Majestic

DISCOURSES BEAUTIFUL PROGRAMME OF SELECTIONS.

The Mount Cachel Band under the direction of their leader Mr. Arthur Bulley were present at the Majestic Theatre last night, and discoursed a programme of classical and popular selections which was greatly enjoyed by the large audience present. During the past year or two this splendid combination of youthful talent, has gone ahead with leaps and bounds, and is to-day a well known musical attraction. Their accompaniments to the screen interpretation of Longfellow's immortal poem, "The Village Blacksmith" were very appropriately delivered.

In the monster production William Fox has provided a thrill that will steel the hardest heart and make gooseflesh appear in profusion. It is a real honest-to-goodness train wreck.

In line with the Fox policy of providing every element of the motion picture in each production, the train wreck was devised. New York critics have acclaimed it as one of the greatest thrill scenes ever seen on the silver screen.

Several flashes are shown of the speedy Sunset Limited, travelling at a rate of sixty miles an hour. The local train which stops at way stations is shown. It is apparent that the crossing is certain to be hit by the express which is travelling with lightning celerity. Attempts are made to flag the express, but—too late. The trains come together with a terrific crash, and when the debris is cleared away the injured body of the eldest of the "Village Blacksmith's" sons is found pinned under the wreckage. Although severely injured, he is given immediate medical attention and soon recovers.

The wreck is one of the most realistic ever shown on the screen. One train of six cars and another of four were used. Both trains were utterly destroyed.

Harold Lloyd's 7-Act Comedy Coming

LOYD GETS IDEA IN A FLASH FOR NEW COMEDY.

Ideas for comedies are rare. For the type of feature comedies that Harold Lloyd makes, they are "rarer than rare."

The happy thought that led to the making of the spectacular comedian's latest and longest feature, "Safety Last," a seven-reel Pathé comedy, came like a flash out of a sky.

One day, about a year ago, Harold Lloyd and his producer, Hal Roach, were walking on a downtown street in Los Angeles. It so happened that at the Roslyn Hotel that day, "Bill" Strother, known the world over as the "human-fly," was pitting his skill against the intricacies of the Roslyn's granite walls.

Immediately the idea hit Harold that it might be a good plan to make a thrill picture, and to fill it with just such daring and hilarious situations as he made in "Never Weaken," and "High and Dizzy," outstanding successes in Lloyd's early achievements.

The idea was not long in the crystallization stage, for it was put into concrete form by Hal Roach, Sam Taylor, Tim Whelan and Harry M. Walker—the last three on the Lloyd scenario staff—and the filming began after the completion of "Dr. Jack" Strother, himself, was engaged to play the part of Lloyd's pal, and to incidentally, climb one building for the benefit of the camera.

"Safety Last," will be seen on Monday next at the Nickel Theatre, and it is declared to be filled to the brim with thrills. The funny situations are there in abundance, and with Mildred Davis, Harold also demonstrates that he can take his place with the foremost Romeo of the screen.

THE SHOE MEN

Household Notes.

Arrange diced pineapple and shredded coconut in alternate layers in sherbet glasses and top with whipped cream.

Garnish the Thanksgiving turkey with baked apples and radish roses.

A fruit sauce is sometimes served with Brown Betty rather than hard sauce.

A little chopped celery is a nice addition to the rice stuffing for roast turkey.

Just before serving, sprinkle sliced oranges and apples with grated coconut.

Serve flakes of crab meat in artichoke hearts with mayonnaise or Russian dressing.

The luncheon soup is more dainty when served in bouillon cups with bouillon spoons.

A silk frock will pack more compactly than almost any other kind in the week-end bag.

If there are any lumps in white sauce strain it as half its charm is in its smoothness.

Flavor rice pudding with chocolate or cocoa and add a few seeded seedless raisins.

Serve rings of brown bread with the salad course. Cut them out with a scalloped cutter.

An ice of rather a tart flavor, such as apricot or lemon, is excellent with a hearty dinner.
