KATIE'S LOVERS.

CHAPTER IV.—(Continued.) And how is my young friend, Miss Katie? Sir Ralph broke the pane, 'By the way, I heard my family lamenting over some cruelty of yours in connection with her. I hope, for your sake, her stay in London is not to be long one. It is a selfish world, you see, Mrs. Sherwood.

CHAPTER V. Mrs. Sherwood did not know how great had been the strain of this long day of excitement until she reached home and found her strength failing. She dropped herself wearily up to her own door.

"Where is she?" he questioned, bitterly. "When you sent her into the very arms of a rich man, away from me?" "Most of all kind things," she answered, humbly.

"It is all over, mamma," she said, in a weary, slow tone; "he has gone away forever. And now you and I are left to each other." And her pretty face was so pale and so sad as she spoke.

"I will deal frankly with you, Mr. Sherwood," she answered, quietly. "I will deal frankly with you, Mr. Sherwood."

"What a demure little maid she has grown!" Miss Vere confided to Mrs. Hamilton. "I always believed she liked Walter. But her mother ruined her."

"There is disparity of circumstances—your father—" "My father is almost as much in love with Katie as I am," he will receive her with open arms. I will bring him to tell you so, and he took up his hat.

"Katie and I are old enough to judge for ourselves," he said, decisively. "Mrs. Sherwood, if she only tells me she loves me, and my father must do as he chooses. I shall go to her now, at once, and hear my father from her own lips."

"I have no objection," she answered, quietly; "my daughter is very young, and she is not the heir to a family name." He was answered instantly by the little flash of sarcasm, and seeing that she had risen, he handed her out with elaborate ceremony to the hall-door, and as he bowed over her hand in farewell, he said, simply, "I thank you, madam."

"Not yours!" he repeated, scornfully. "It was not you, then, who closed my eyes and held me back, and kept me in check while that scented puppy had the field to himself? It was not you who deluded me with false promises and fair words, and gave to him the chance which was to have mine—who took my faith and held it whiff while you broke your own and scattered it to the winds? I have heard of scheming mistresses—we have all heard of them—I did not know how close home my experience was to come."

"It was my right," she recognized it. His earnest look, slighted and thwarted as it had been, demanded his hearing. She gave the address meekly through her tears, and he took it without touching the hand she held out to him.

"I think so," she answered, quietly. "I think so," she answered, quietly. "I think so," she answered, quietly.

"Mistake! But you are not a woman of the world, my dear." "Hush!" interrupted Mrs. Sherwood, with kindling cheeks. "Here is Katie."

"There is disparity of circumstances—your father—" "My father is almost as much in love with Katie as I am," he will receive her with open arms. I will bring him to tell you so, and he took up his hat.

Albion lodge, I.O.G.T., last night passed the following resolutions:—Resolved, that the thanks of this lodge are due and are hereby tendered to those members of the house of commons who so nobly stood up for temperance legislation, and by their votes defeated Mr. Bonhill's motion. Resolved, that the lodge duly express its indignation as citizens of Toronto at the action of two of its members, G. W. Best and Platt, in supporting Mr. Bonhill's bill, and more especially Mr. Healy, the professional friend of temperance, whom they expected more consistent action.

Ramsay of Hamilton; John Pope and H. E. Nelles of London; Chas. Robertson, Alex. Gemmill and Hugh Scott were appointed trustees, and Wm. Foley and J. G. Fitzgibbon auditors.

WORKS COMMITTEE. The committee on works met yesterday afternoon. Ald. Baxter is in the chair. The claims of Messrs. Godson & West for payment on account of extra bricks and lumber in the Dundas street sewer, was left for the next meeting in order that figures in connection therewith might be forthcoming. The question of alleged charges against the contractor and inspector of the Portland street sewer was before the committee. Mr. Jolying said he was prepared to meet any charges which might be brought against him. Mr. Way appeared, praying that the committee would compel him to remove a row of houses on Queen street, which were two feet out on the street. The matter was left in the hands of the commissioners and engineer. Mr. Caiger's offer to erect public urinals was referred to the engineer. The application of residents on St. Patrick street, to change the name to Goldwin avenue, was granted. The chairman stated that Prof. Goldwin Smith had most generously dedicated 800 feet to the city to extend the street to, and connect with, McCall street. It was resolved to construct a sewer on Sackville street, between Carlton and Winchester streets, and one on Borden street, between Godson & West's for the delivery of 500 tons in the western part of the city at $10 per ton was accepted, and also the tender of Goodham & Votta for a similar amount at $8 75 per ton.

Ald. Boswell addressed the committee on the by-law introduced by him to repeal the by-law on local improvements. He said he had not introduced this measure without having given it a good deal of consideration, but he thought it right to bring it forward for several reasons. The first he thought the most important one, and that was that the people last year, in every ward in the city, by their votes, protested against the system of making streets either by the frontage or local improvement law, and he could not understand how it was the council of last year could have adopted such a law after so pronounced an opinion of the ratepayers. But besides this, the law passed by the local legislature, and now introduced into this city, is not the one he was in favor of. He wanted to see a law established here similar to what they had in Detroit and other American cities. The mode of assessment, too, was, in his opinion, not the correct one. Each piece of property in front of which improvement was made should be charged for such improvement, and not assessed as the mode now was, according to the value of the land. If this system were carried out, the property on the corner of King and Yonge streets would have to pay about five times as much for the improvement as property on the corner of Bloor and Yonge streets, and he certainly could not see the sense of any such assessment as that.

Ald. Carlyle said that contracts had been signed for some of the work already. Ald. Boswell said that he had heard that such was a fact, and he could not understand how this could have been done, for the special by-laws authorizing the work have not yet been passed, and he thought it would have been impossible to let the contracts when the by-laws were passed. He understood, too, that these contracts were let provisionally on the by-laws being passed. He also mentioned the fact that there were tenants on Yonge street who consented in their leases to have their work made for local improvements, and he did not think that tenants were generally aware of this.

After some conversation on the subject of the by-law the consideration of the proposed bill next meeting and the committee adjourned.

The Toronto correspondent of the Voice of Masonry, who has been visiting our city lodges during his tour, says "Toronto lodges are nearly all well officered," and adds: "It is a matter of regret that some of the masters are more particular about displaying their elocutionary abilities than of correctly adhering to the ritual."

A dispensation has been issued to open a new court at Owen Sound, while the district officers will visit for that purpose on Monday night next, joining the opening court at Meaford on the way north. The Foresters of the city do not feel thankful to the Telegram for its article about the order the other day. The order is anything but a standstill, as initiations take place in each court almost every meeting night, and the finances are in a healthy condition.

SUDDEN DEATHS. Two sudden deaths are reported in the city this morning. Christopher Mitchell of the firm of Mitchell & Ryan, King street, died unexpectedly at 3:45 p.m. to-day after a very short sickness. He leaves a wife and three children. The news startled the friends of the deceased, with whom the event was quite unexpected.

The second one was that of a stranger from Orangeville, Dr. Tuck and a gentleman named Allen, from Orangeville, registered yesterday at the American hotel, and slept there last night. Dr. Tuck died at eight this morning. Dr. Tuck, who had just got up and dressed, visited the room of his friend, and while in the latter's presence fell dead to the floor. The cause is apoplexy or heart disease, but which, the reporter could not learn, as Dr. Tuck was unable to give a self-investigation at the hotel and thus made himself unapproachable to reporters.

From Mr. Allen it was learned that Dr. Tuck was a man of about forty years of age and a highly respectable citizen of Orangeville, who had been in the city on a brother-in-law in this city named Hewitt. The corpse will be sent to Orangeville at 9 p.m. to-day. Dr. Tuck leaves a wife and several children.

WARBLING TITMOS. The concert given under the auspices of Toronto typographical union No. 91, (in aid of the fund to receive the delegates to the International typographical convention, which meets in this city in June next), in Albert hall last night was an unequalled success in every respect. A choice and varied program was presented, and the vocalists, songsters, musicians and elocutionists acquitted themselves in a manner creditable to themselves and to the audience. Several well-known local performers were on the programme, and the names of the Misses Perry and Green, Mrs. Green, Mrs. Hurst, Master Willie O'Neill, and Messrs. R. Davidson, J. K. Cameron, and J. P. Macdonald, were among those worthy of mention. This is but one of a series of entertainments to be given in aid of the fund of the T. U. B. named. It may be here mentioned that Toronto was never before honored with the international convention of the T. U. B., when the time arrives ample funds will have been accumulated to make the reception commensurate with the national strength of the craft in this city.

THE MOUNTED POLICE. The annual ball at Cyprus Hall—An Old but a Dainty Affair. The annual ball at Cyprus Hall, which was held last night, was a very successful one. The music was good, and the orchestra was composed of claret, cornet, guitar, and bass instrument. The programme consisted of forty dances, and were mostly all performed in the American style. The number in attendance was nearly three hundred, and soldiers for ten miles flocked to enjoy themselves. It was indeed a strange melody court that graced the ball-room, and half-bred, square and white intermingled as socially as if distinction were an unknown thing in this world. To an uninitiated onlooker the scene was conducive to the greatest hilarity, and there were some present who gave vent to their feelings at the risk of paining their sides. In one place a tall corporal would be dancing with a half-bred maid of twelve summers, and small of stature, while their vis-à-vis would be a laughing, dusky galleon and a by no means fair Indian maiden. Again an officer in full dress and in the dress in a very unbecoming way would be wilfully swinging a half-bred young woman, and a citizen in full dress would be following suit. In possible, a more vigorous manner. The costumes of those assembled ranged from a limp cotton gown to a silk dress, and a suit of store clothes to a claw hammer and white kids. Nine white ladies were present, some of them dressed richly, while others more plainly and tastefully attired. The supper was a great event in the evening's pleasure, and although a great number came uninvited, yet there was enough for one and all. Ham, beef, pies, cakes, bread, tea and coffee were eaten in a manner only attained by those living in an uncivilized country, and knowing such food rarely met in their dreams.

BOARD OF TRADE. Retiring President John L. Morrison delivered a long address at the annual meeting of the board of trade yesterday afternoon. He reviewed the state of trade and the business of the board, and dealt at considerable length on the position of Ontario with the Canada Pacific railway.

The election of officers was then proceeded with and resulted as follows: President, W. B. Hamilton; vice-president, G. M. Ross; treasurer, John Gillespie. Board of arbitrators: R. Carrie, P. D. Conger, T. D. Craig, H. W. Darling, J. H. G. Haggerty, W. Ince, R. Jeffrey, D. McLean, W. D. Matthews, J. E. A. Smith, G. B. Smith, J. G. Worts. Council: H. W. Darling, J. Worts, W. F. McMaster, R. W. Elliot, James Patterson, John Morrison, W. Ince, G. R. Smith, B. Cumberland, A. M. Smith, Arthur B. Lee, W. D. Matthews, F. Harcourt, R. W. Elliot, James Ross.

AMUSEMENTS. Grand Opera House. The appearance of Chas. L. Davis at this theatre last night in the character of Alvin Joslin was the occasion of a very full house. The old New England farmer's contact with New York life created great laughter, although there was nothing clever in his part. The support is fairly good, and the pieces are well mounted. The play runs for the rest of the week.

The Hamilton printers are to get up a handsome cup for competition among typographical base ball clubs next season. In the second day of the Ottawa ice races the three-minute trot was the first event. Four heats were trotted, but no conclusion was reached. Beldwin's Kate Douglas won the first heat, Sallock's George Kemp the second, Adams' Elizabeth the third, and the fourth was a dead heat between Kate Douglas and Elizabeth. In the 2:37 trot Wagner's Lila Monte won the best three out of four heats. Brown's Straight Edge won the first heat.

PERSONAL. Either Mr. Trutch or Mr. Dewdney will represent the British Columbia Colonist, as their next lieutenant-governor. It is reported in Montreal that Attorney-General Longueur will shortly be elevated to the bench of the Province of Quebec.

At the first meeting of the C.P.R. syndicate Gen. Stephen was elected president and Duncan McIntyre vice-president. The building of the Consolidated bank, Montreal, will be the headquarters of the company. "Is love a dream?" asks a poetical contributor. Give it up. We think not, though. There's too much expensive reality about it.

TRINITY COLLEGE CONVERSATION. Last night the annual conversation of Trinity college literary society took place, and at least 500 people, representing the "club," youth, and beauty of Toronto responded to their invitations. The guests were received in the main hall by Provost and Mrs. Whitaker, and the O. O. R. band was stationed in the outside hall and at intervals rendered the heated inmates of the convocation apartment, where the bulk of the entertainment took place. The solo singers were Mrs. Atkinson, Miss Maud Reed, Miss Nellie Hillary and Mr. Arnold. Miss Reed won a cordial encore for her fine rendering of "That Traitor Love," responding with "Twicknam Farewell." Miss Hillary's song, "Golden Days," was also accorded, and "Robin Adair" was the result. Mr. Arnold's fine tenor voice was heard to great advantage in "Pretty Polly Oliver." Mrs. Morrison gave a reading and the balance of the entertainment comprised a violin solo by Mr. Bayly, a cornet solo by Master McNabb, and a flute solo by Mr. Hirschfelder. A most enjoyable evening was spent, and the president, members and council of the institute may congratulate themselves upon the fact. The rooms were a little overcrowded, but that was unavoidable, as the invitations issued to the friends of the institute also asked the attendance of "pretties" at unknown quantities of "pretties" at ten o'clock the remnants of the guests, mostly students, had a dance in convocation hall, the first that has been indulged in in that classic chamber.
