The New Evaporator Commenced Work This week

A New Industry Which Will Be Very Beneficial to Farmers

The firm of R. H. Graham & Co., of Belleville, Ontario, commenced work this week at the new Evaporator recently erected for them by the firm of John Lowe & Son, of Aylesford.

The Evaporator is situated on the south side of the M. W. Graves & Co's Vinegar plant, this enterprising firm owning stock in the new enterprise, which is now fully equipped for the purpose of manufacturing the waste apples of the farmers into a useful and nutritious article of food.

The Evaporator will give employment to twelve women and five men. The women pare the apples and trim them, after which they are taken by the men, who put them through a process of bleaching, with brimstone, this keeping the apples their natural color. After this process they are taken to the slicing machine, and from there to the drying rooms which are constructed in a novel manner. The second floor of the dryer is made of strips V shaped. The sliced apples are placed on this floor, the heat being supplied by four hard coal furnaces from below.

After the apples are thoroughly dried they are put in bags and shipped to Kentville, which on account of its central location and facilities for shipping has been chosen as the Company's head-quarters. At Kentville they are packed in a special wooden package and shipped to England.

The firm of R. H. Graham Co. have about 100 of these Evaporators now in operation in Ontario, and get a ready market for their whole output. They are paying from five to ten cents a barrel more for apples in the Valley than in Ontario, a fact which the farmers ought to appreciate. They are now paying fifty cents a barrel for apples two inches in diameter and upwards, and all apples too small for peeling find a ready market at the vinegar factory of the M. W. Graves Company.

The manager of the Evaporator is Mr. A. J. Jinks, who will be very much pleased to make the acquaintance of the farmers and give them any information they require.

To check a cold quickly, get from your druggist some little Candy Co. Tablets called Preventics. Druggists everywhere are now dispensing Preventics, for they are not only safe, but decidedly certain and prompt. Preventics contain no Quinine, no laxative, nothing harsh nor sickening. Taken at the "onset stage" Preventics will prevent Pneumonia, Bronchitis, La Grippe, etc. Hence the name, Preventics. Good for feverish children. 48 Preventics, 25 cents. Trial—Sold by Royal Pharmacy.

The Annapolis Valley Vinegar Co. Increases Its Facilities

Forms An Alliance with an English Firm

A visit to the plant of the Annapolis Valley Vinegar Company will repay those who wish to spend some time profitably.

It is certainly wonderful to see the despatch with which the apples are handled from the time they leave the car on the siding, which very conveniently runs by the very door of the mill, until the pure juice of the apples is carried off to the huge tanks, some of which are twenty-two feet in diameter.

The presses are of the latest pattern and were installed by Mr. Avard L. Beeler. They have been pronounced by an expert to be the smoothest and easiest running presses to be found in Canada. The firm have also recently imported, at great expense, a Lumley roller from Germany, this enabling the firm to put on the market a class of goods which cannot be excelled.

In order to make room for the vast quantity of stock they manufacture and to facilitate shipping, the firm have purchased a piece of land from Captain J. W. Salter, and have erected a frost proof building, 35 feet by 65 feet, over a large and roomy cellar. This building will be equipped with a chain derrick, so that a car can be loaded in a very short time direct from the shipping room.

Mr. D. G. Harlow, the business manager of the Company, who went to England this summer, has succeeded in placing their whole output with the firm of H. Whiteway, London.

Mr. R. H. C. Whiteway, secretary and treasurer of the firm, is now here in the interests of the firm. Mr. Whiteway, who has a thorough technical knowledge of the manufacturing of vinegar, very courteously gave us the details of the work.

Regular fall sitting of the County Court was held in Annapolis last week. Some excitement was occasioned by the result of an election case, Davidson vs. Chan, in which the defendant was cleared, but a certain justice of the peace was implicated and severely censured by the Judge.

On Sunday morning about five o'clock fire was discovered in the dry-goods store occupied by Mr. Meigs Laughlin, known as the "Bargain Store," destroying a considerable quantity of the contents. The fire was confined to the interior of the building, and is supposed to have originated from some defective stove pipes connected with a grate in the office where fire had been kept during the day. There was a partial insurance on the stock.

Mrs. Nalder, who has been interesting the public in the mission work of that country, addressed a meeting in St. Luke's school-house on Sunday evening, after the regular services in the churches. The school-house was packed and a liberal collection was taken up to aid in the work.

The tern schooner, "W. H. Baxter," Captain Melville, proceeded down the river Monday with lumber for Los Palmas, shipped by A. D. Mills and Sons.

A fairly representative board of trade meeting was held in the Engine House Hall on Monday night. A resolution was passed endorsing the suggestion of Middleton board of trade that the Owl train service should be extended till after the Christmas holidays.

Dr. Robinson was present and entertained the board and citizens present with an interesting talk on his experience in the West. There is "no place like home" for the doctor.

THE WORK OF POTATO IMPROVEMENT AS CARRIED ON THROUGHOUT CANADA UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE CANADIAN SEED GROWERS' ASSOCIATION.

(Extract from the last Annual Report of the Secretary.)

During the past year very material progress has been made by way of perfecting our methods of potato improvement and in instituting their application throughout the country. At the last meeting of the Association a very excellent paper on potato improvement was read by Mr. W. T. Macoun, Horticulturist at the Central Experimental Farm. Upon the work which Mr. Macoun and many other authorities on the potato plant both at home and abroad, have done, a system of potato improvement suitable for use among Canadian growers was drafted and is being applied by several this year. The system adopted is simple and practical yet is founded on scientific principles, the individual plant being taken as the basis for improvement. The tubers produced by each plant are, morphologically considered, simply swollen portions of the vegetative and not of the reproductive system. The question has therefore been raised as to whether or not the principles of sexual reproduction through the seed, obtain in a sexual reproduction or perpetuation through parts of the vegetative system. Bad variation is, as a rule, more narrow than is seed variation, and some investigators claim that a part of any plant cannot possess qualities which differ materially from those of another part of the same plant. The best obtainable evidence at the present time does not support this view and the "individuality" of different parts is more generally recognized. Since the tubers produced by any single plant are all distinct parts of that plant the possibility of variation in the productive capacity and in other qualities is recognized.

The system drafted for use by this Association enables the grower to plant the seed tubers taken from the different hills which were especially chosen for seed purposes the year previous, so that any promising variation which may result may be kept and used in endeavoring to build up a strong, healthy and productive type. Furthermore, in almost all parts of Canada, no matter how suitable may be the conditions, there are many adverse conditions with which the potato has to contend. Unfortunately man himself is often the worst enemy of the potato and unconsciously, though very materially, assists in its downfall. The using of small potatoes from degenerate hills is perhaps one of the most glaring examples of this as far as the seed is concerned. The practicing of improper cultural methods is another common error. Against these things the plant is continually struggling year after year and while there is a continual survival of the fittest, wherein a few plants succeed in fighting above the prevailing difficulties in an endeavor to maintain the standard of the race yet unfortunately these are quickly gathered in and hurried off to market leaving the smaller, less desirable and often degenerate tubers remaining to be used for seed purposes. With such a system is there any wonder why many of our best varieties have suffered a rapid decline until they are now practically worthless? What is needed among potato growers is today is some practical system whereby it may be possible to select for seed purposes those hills which have shown themselves superior to others enjoying equal opportunities. In this way seed tubers which rank above the average would be chosen while those falling short would be ignored, hence making

File wood neatly.
Keep the barn clean and neat.
Keep walks and porch swept clean.
Clean up or fill up small dirty ponds.
Burn as much of the garbage as possible.
See that fences are mended and painted.
Keep the grass around the house in good condition.
Cover the old rain barrel with a piece of cheese cloth to keep insects out.
Rake off all the rubbish, pick up the papers and dispose of all waste matter.
Put screens in neatly, and see that the screen doors have locks that are in order.
Keep the house in good condition. See that the roof is mended, and the house painted.
Don't keep garbage or wet material in wooden barrels, because the wood becomes soaked and can't be cleaned.
Don't empty fish water right outside the kitchen door. It makes a wet, slimy place, which is often the source of disease.
Dig a deep pit and put all the old tin cans, broken bottles, broken china and rusty pans and kettles in it. Cover with earth.
Prune the trees and don't leave the branches lying under them. Either take them away or use them as a hedge for sweet peas.
Don't keep empty tin cans lying around the house. When it rains they fill with water and breed mosquitoes and are a constant danger to the family.
If there is an unsightly building, plant vines that will form a screen.

for an upward instead of a downward tendency. The need of just such an arrangement has been met by the Association in its system of potato improvement already referred to.

In undertaking systematic work according to this system it is recommended in the first place that a good standard variety be chosen and that the best possible seed of that variety with which to start be secured. The new beginner is advised to test two or three leading varieties—the first year in small plots side by side, to keep the hills separate when digging and, after having decided which variety has given the best results, to select and keep separate twenty-five of the best hills of this variety for planting in the breeding plot of the following year in accordance with the regulations as drafted. While the minimum size of the seed plot recognized by the Association is 1/2 acre, yet in the case of potatoes it was thought advisable to depart somewhat from this rule and to reduce the size of the plot to one consisting of 25 rows with 8 hills in each row, both rows and hills to be at least 24 inches apart. A plot of this size, if was thought, should not require more work than the average grower can well afford to expend and more care should be encouraged. From each of the 25 chosen hills 8 of the most uniform, smooth, and sound tubers are then chosen, and each set of 8 tubers so selected is used to plant one of the eight-hilled rows, a single whole tuber being used to plant each hill, within the rows are likewise kept separate for examination. This arrangement permits the grower to determine first the best rows and ascertain the best hills in these rows, and the best number of specially desirable hills can then be laid away for planting on the plot the following spring as above indicated. Special blank forms are sent each grower in duplicate in order that he may record certain information regarding the performance of each row referring especially to yield, quality and freedom from disease. While it is urged that the crop on the improved plot be sprayed for blight, yet the spraying of the breeding plot is left to the discretion of the individual grower. The district where disease is troublesome the desirability of developing strains capable of withstanding these maladies is such that spraying is ignored and those plants which have shown the greatest power in resisting disease varieties in their attitude toward blight and other diseases as observed at the different experiment stations is so noticeable that the development of disease-resistant strains seems to offer great possibilities.

Notes: Potato growers looking for maximum crops are recommended to try the above system. While anyone may carry on the work independent of the above Association yet there are certain advantages which come through organized effort. We advise all, therefore, who desire to know more of this work to communicate at once with the Secretary, Canadian Seed Growers' Association, Canadian Building, Ottawa Ont., as the best time for selecting for next year's crop is not far distant.

A STUDY-TABLE FOR THE CHILDREN.

Have the carpenter make a table three feet square of any hard wood with good, substantial legs, have two drawers—one on each side and above them heavy leaves to pull out after the fashion of typewriter-rests on business men's desks. These leaves rest on the open drawers and make hand desks for the children, as they are sloping and not so high as the ordinary table. The table should be about thirty inches high. It should be built with a lower deck or shelf, which may be stocked with simple books of reference, while the drawers hold pencils, paper, erasers and everything else the small students need. In the evening have a good lamp with a shade, and turn the table over to the children. It will pay for itself a thousand times in time and temper saved, and is an incentive to study to the little ones, who get tired of hunting up dozens of books before beginning study.

MORE THAN ENOUGH IS TOO MUCH.

To maintain health, a mature man or woman needs just enough food to repair the waste and supply energy and body heat. The habitual consumption of more food than is necessary for these purposes is the prime cause of stomach troubles, rheumatism and disorders of the kidneys. If troubled with indigestion, revise your diet, let reason and not appetite control, and take a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets and you will be benefited.

The world has always canonized her martial heroes. They love the war horse with its rider who bears an unbeaten sword. But some of us believe that the pen in the hand of some is mightier than any here on a battlefield that turns the tide of destiny.

We doubt if any town of its size in the province can boast of as many small industries as Bridgetown. We have a herring factory, a foundry, two vinegar factories, an apple evaporating factory, a wood-working factory, an iron foundry, where numerous articles and implements are manufactured, a barrel factory, marble works, and a shipyard, all employing a number of men and all enjoying a certain amount of prosperity. With the rich agricultural resources which supply her sure and staple foundation, Bridgetown has undoubtedly a prosperous and broad outlook. Two industries which have made a healthy growth during the few years of their existence are featured on our front page today. They are a direct benefit both to our town and to the large agricultural population surrounding us.

The value of the work done on our roads this summer is now apparent. No evidence could be more conclusive than the present condition of our streets that the funds expended with the idea of improvement have been absolutely thrown away. The edges of the road have been scraped off and heaped in the middle. Over these sods a coating of some two or three inches of gravel have been spread. The result is that with the beginning of October the early fall rains have softened this mixture into a boggy surface which all teams passing over the road carefully avoid, though the sides of the road make far from agreeable travelling. This method of improvement (?) appears to have been thoroughly tested. It is time now to hear of the results of the split-drag treatment.

Trial Catarrh treatments are being mailed out free, on request, by Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. These tests are proving to the people—without a penny's cost—the great value of this scientific prescription known to druggists everywhere as Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. Sold by Royal Pharmacy.

The death occurred at Clementsport on Saturday night last of Mrs. L. C. Berry, of tuberculosis. Mrs. Berry was a resident of this town from the time of her marriage until about a year ago, when she returned to Clementsport. She leaves besides her husband one child two years of age. Obituary.

MRS. H. F. WILLIAMS.

The community of Clarence was shocked and saddened on Sunday last to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. H. F. Williams. Mrs. Williams had been visiting her mother, Mrs. George Peveril, of Halifax, and only returned home on Wednesday. She had not been in full health for some time but nothing serious was apprehended. On Friday morning she was suddenly stricken with an illness which resulted fatally within forty-eight hours.

Mrs. Williams was highly esteemed by all who had the pleasure of her acquaintance and the community deeply feels the loss it has sustained. Besides her husband, she leaves two sons and three daughters, all but the eldest son residing at home.

BELLEISLE.

(Oct. 2nd.)

Mrs. Lyle is spending a few days with relatives at Halifax.

Mrs. Frank Cole and children, accompanied by Miss Dora Cole, of Amherst, are guests of Mrs. Frank Hogan.

Mrs. George R. Gesner is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Fred F. Covert, at Sempronville.

George Clements, of Yarmouth, is at his uncle's, Charles B. Wade's, for a few days.

Mrs. Watson C. Jones, of Clementsport, spent a few days last week with her brother, L. D. Gesner, Esq.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Gesner—a girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Lingley, of Amherst, were guests last week of Captain A. H. and Mrs. Munro.

Mr. Alexander Fraser has a 4 1/2 months old colt—a Blenheim—and we doubt if its superior can be found in the County. It is hailed one of the finest specimens of horse-flesh for its age we ever saw. Mr. Fraser informs of your correspondent it had been purchased by Mr. Charles Withers, of Granville Centre.

Business seems to be brisk at present at the Granville Centre station. William Fraser loaded a car week here for a list and is loading two more with Cravenstein for the English market. Nothing about the station at Belleisle.

We learn with regret that our courteous and most obliging mail carrier, Mr. Charles H. Fook, has ceased to deliver mail on this route. We cannot shake hands and say "Good-bye" to our friend without regret. He will leave many friends along the line he has so often travelled.

JUST HOW MUCH?

"I would just do anything to get an education!" said Joe savagely thumping the down sofa-pillow till a fine, duffy dust flew from seams and corners.

"Just how much would you do Joe?" said practical Uncle Phil, interestedly. "As much as Elihu Burritt?"

"How much did he do?" inquired Joe. "Was he a boy without any chance?"

"No, indeed!" said Uncle Phil, who never sympathized with whining Joe's way of looking at things. "As many chances as you have, or any other boy with brains and ten fingers. Had to work at a forge ten or twelve hours a day but that didn't hinder him from working in his mind while his hands were busy. Used to do hard sums in arithmetic while he was blowing the bellows."

"Whew!" said Joe, as if he, too, saw a pair of bellows at hand. "How old was he? Older than I am, wasn't he?" "About sixteen, when his father died. By and by he began to study other things. Before he died he knew eighteen languages, and nearly twice that number of dialects. All this time he kept hard at work blacksmithing."

"I don't have to work as hard as that," said Joe, after a while, with a shamefaced look that rejoiced his uncle's heart.

Joe was a farmer's son, and in busy times there was a good deal for a boy of his age to do. So far he had not been spared to go away to any preparatory school to fit for college. So he had faint-heartedly and sulkily given up the thought of going there. Somehow, Uncle Phil's words had put things in a new light.—Christain Uplook.

Joker's Column

ANXIOUS.

One evening a few months ago a college student took his best girl to a theatre. During the evening she complained of not being well and they left before the show was over. He took her home, and when he said good night the girl was pretty sick. Next day it turned out that she had diphtheria.

Then the young man began to wonder whether he was booked for a seige with the disease, too. He called on a physician he knew to ask about it. The physician heard the young man's tale.

"Well," said he, at the conclusion of it, "I think your chances to catch the disease depend on how you said good night to the young lady." The young man was quiet a moment. Then he said: "Doctor, I'm much obliged. If that's the case, I'm not in danger." The young man went out.

A minute later he stuck his head in at the door. "Say, Doc," he said "diphtheria don't go very hard with strong, healthy young men, does it?"

HIS LIMIT.

(St. Louis Star).

In a western Kentucky town Ben Watson had saved the life of Myra Underhill. Miss Underhill had been overturned in a creek with a swift current, and the act of young Watson was a very heroic one. He had saved the life of the girl after she was sinking for the third time, and had barely strength to pull himself and the young woman to shallow water.

The news soon spread, and Ben Watson was hailed as the real, live hero of the village.

Aunt Tabby Wilson, the eldest woman in the village, the mother of the little colony, was loud in praise of the heroism of the young man, and at once declared that Ben and Myra must get married. "Ben saved Myra's life," she said, "and now they must marry and be happy ever afterward, just as they do it in the storybooks."

But Ben demurred; the arrangement did not suit him.

"Why not marry Myra, Ben?" said the old lady. "She is young, and we must have a wedding."

"She is a nice girl, all right," replied Ben, "but I don't think we oughter marry. Seem to me," he went on, "I have done enough for Myra."

An Irishman was recently travelling in a train, accompanied by a minister, when two very stout ladies entered the compartment. They placed themselves one on each side Pat, who was, of course, much crushed. The minister, on seeing him so placed, said:

"Are you sure you are comfortable, Pat?"

To this question Pat quickly replied: "Sure, your honor, I haven't much room to grumble."

BOVRIL

ON TRAINING A LITTLE CHILD.

She who hath taught a little child, To tread the path our Saviour trod Hath done a nobler work by far Than who hath conquered by the sword.

When on this earth our Saviour dwelt— Our Saviour, gentle, meek and mild He took upon His knee and blessed, So tenderly, a little child.

Then can we count the thine as lost, In which we teach a child to pray, To know and love that Saviour's name, Revere and serve him day by day?

Oh mothers, train those little ones Which God, all-wise, to thee hath given, And early start those infant feet Upon the path that leads to Heaven.

For who hath taught a little child To know and love the gracious Lord, Hath done a great, a noble work, And hence shall reap a rich reward.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 11, 1907. MINARD'S LINIMENT CO., Limited. Sirs,—I came across a bottle of your MINARD'S LINIMENT in the hands of one of the students at the University of Maryland, and he being so kind as to let me use it for a very bad sprain, which I obtained in training for foot races, and to say that it helped me would be putting it very calmly, and I therefore ask if you would let me know of one of your agents that is closest to Baltimore so that I may obtain some of it. WILL KISSING BE PROHIBITED

The Oculatory Process Denounced by Scientists as Extremely Dangerous—How the Danger Can be Removed.

A keen discussion is being carried on by some of the best scientists as to the danger and "crime" of kissing, led by Dr. Somers, Health Officer of Atlantic City, and Dr. Nalpasso, of the Medical Faculty of Paris. They charge the kiss with spreading grippe, scarlet fever, measles, mumps, whooping cough, typhoid fever, diphtheria, erysipelas, meningitis, tuberculosis, and many infectious skin diseases. They suggest legislation on the subject, and the posting of notices in railway stations, street cars and other public places, but they say it would be useless to post them on verandas, in cosy corners, porches, shady nooks, or moonlit lawns. They also propose compulsory legislation for methods of disinfection of the mouth and purifying the breath, especially with a view to the protection of the innocent ladies who are particularly subject to infection. The greatest and most effective purifier and germ destroyer known to medical science for the mouth, throat and breath, as well as for the blood, stomach and lungs, is Psychine, that triumph of the medical world that is attracting almost universal attention because of the wonderful results attending its use. One of its recent triumphs is told as a matter of experience in the following brief statement: Dr. Slocum Co.

I am sending you photo and testimonial here-with for your great remedy PSYCHINE. Your remedy did wonders for me. I had about 10 or 12 years of age when I took PSYCHINE. The doctor had given me an incredible amount of medicine and every organ of the body were inflamed. My lungs have never bothered me since, and Psychine is a permanent cure.

MRS. LEZZIE GARDNER, 31 Station St., London, Ont. Psychine, pronounced Si-keen, is admitted to be the most wonderful of all disease and germ-destroying agencies. For building up the run-down system and curing all forms of stomach troubles and diseases of the chest, throat and lungs or head, it is simply unapproachable. It is a reliable home treatment. For sale at all drugists, 50c and $1.00, or Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, 179 King Street West, Toronto.

One Hundred Dollars

When Saturday was over and Mr. and Mrs. Vrankin were alone by themselves in the clean kitchen, sitting beside the stove, Mrs. Vrankin arose, went into her bedroom and brought out a bundle of clothes. "I want you to look at these things, Jeremiah," she said mildly.

"What are they?" he said.

"These are my best dress," she said. "That is my best dress." She held up the only bonnet I've got in the world but my calico sunbonnet, and that is my Sunday shawl."

She uttered the words quietly and waited.

"Well?" said Mr. Vrankin, still smoking.

"Well?" she answered.

He said nothing. She gathered up the garments with a look of disdain and piled them on a chair.

"You're a rich man," she said. "Rich for a farmer. You are sixty and I fifty years old. Our boys are married. I haven't had any money to spend for years. I'm a right to behold if I were a servant I should get wages and not have to beg. No, I don't beg, Jeremiah. Since you don't offer it yourself, I'm going to tell you that I want money. I want a hundred dollars to buy me some new clothes to feel decent and comfortable in. I'm destitute. I am really destitute. Why, I'm out of flannel! My calico gowns are patched at the elbow. My shoe heels are twisted. I can't go to church any more, for I've turned my black silk twice and the back breaths upside down. I've washed my bonnet ribbons. Well, I've done all I could rather than ask for what you didn't offer, and there's no need. You're well-to-do. I want to be decent and take a little comfort while I can. I must. There, now! It's my right."

She had spoken her mind, and Mr. Vrankin had felt that a climax had arrived. He shut "said by" a large sum. He was growing old and had so need to push, but the need of a hundred dollars all in a hand for a hundred dollars all in a hand was too much for him.

He had become used to Eva Maria's quiet way of mending her old clothes and asking for no money, and it would never occurred to him that she had come down upon him like this at some time.

He stared silently and pulled across the stove the smoke of the cheap tobacco he burnt in a common corncob pipe. The old chair was mended with tape. It was all tidy, but nothing was new. Nothing pretty but the scarlet geraniums in their big pots on the window sill. He had given his wife very little in their thirty years of married life, for all the furniture was his mother's, and she had helped him make his fortune, selling butter and eggs, and pot cheese and flower roots, feeding the hands cheaply and well, weeding vegetable and even riding the mowing machine, now and then though not very lately. Conscience told him that he ought to pull from his vest pocket the crisp hundred-dollar note he had received that morning for some hay. But when good takes possession of the heart of man, it holds on like a leech. All he said, after the silence had remained unbroken for some minutes, was:

"Well, Eva Maria, I'll think it over."

To some women there is no agony like asking a husband for money. While some are always crying, "Give! give!" never content, never reasonable, others will go with ragged cheeks until the masculine eyes discover the fact.

They want a love-gift, not aims. Generally they have to ask at last. The happy wife feels no such tribulations. "All that is wanted is time, and time is not so hard to come by, but where doubt of love lies the heart grows proud, as Eva Maria had never herself, at least in the misery of her shabbiness, to make the speech above recorded, but it seemed a fearful thing to do. She little guessed that she had frightened Jeremiah almost out of his senses.

"A hundred dollars," he said to himself. "She must know what I've got about me. She must mean to have it. Fifty now, I'd give. But a hundred! I'll get the money changed and give her fifty."

He opened the door of the passage, crossed it and went into the parlor. It was a cold, neat place, kept sacred for great occasions. It had a grate fire, but it was doubtful if a fire would be lighted there that winter. It had been inconvenient to take it down that summer, so fringed pink paper had been arranged between the polished bars and the rug drawn across the hearth. Photographs of several members of the family hung by red cords from the wall, dotted muslin curtains with neatly fluted ruffles covered the green paper blinds. A dish of wax fruit, covered by a glass shade, ornamented the centre-table, and the horse-hair furniture had been to little used of two generations that it looked almost new. The vase on the mantel were old-fashioned blue ware for which a china shopkeeper would have paid a great price. They had been brought from Canton, by a sailor grand-mother, long since dead, though he lived to see ninety-nine years. Between the windows was a "column" looking glass in which Mr. Vrankin's grandmother had seen her girlish face in an immense white silk poke-bonnet, still preserved in a "bushy" up garret.

A little moonlight stole through the lower panes of the room and made all things quite plain to the owner's accustomed eyes. He tried to think in a hurry, and being a slow man, grew very much confused.

Eva Maria should have fifty dollars but she had said she had a right to a hundred if he gave her the bill in his pocket she would spend it. It was Saturday evening, he could not get it changed that night—no, not until Monday. If he looked it up, she would know and take it out, perhaps, and do as she pleased with it. She had declared her "right" to it. Eva Maria, humbler of the humble, meekest of the meek, had spoken so. Could it be?

"This comes of these here strong-minded meetings," said Mr. Vrankin. This was not beyond, for Mrs. Vrankin had not attended one.

"Women must be biddable. They are kicking over the traces now. Nobody," said Mr. Vrankin growing more and more ungrammatical, with his wrath "nobody a'n't goin' to ride over me, specially a wife of mine. I must hide the money until I can change it. She might look into my pockets. So said she had a right to it and she looked determined."

At this moment he heard a movement in the kitchen. He believed it to be his wife about to come in search of him, and tried to think faster.

The vase! Should he hide the note there? No; these were still some as ters in the garden, and Eva Maria might all the vases with bouquets, as she sometimes did on Sunday afternoons, setting them for the nonce on the kitchen mantel. No, the vase would not do. The ingrain carpet was tucked down tight, the Surely there was a step in the passage. The grate! There under the fringed paper it might lie safely all night.

He drew his pocket-book from his bosom and stuffed it between two loose bricks at the back of the grate. The pink fringes of the paper concealed it. All was safe. He creaked across the passage into the kitchen with a consciousness of great meanness in his heart. Mrs. Vrankin had taken flight to her bedroom, where she sat in the cold with a little shawl over her shoulders, trembling. He said something about about spring-jones about those pigs, and died the house, and the two held no more conversation until breakfast time next morning. Then Mr. Vrankin with usual piety went to church, while his wife stayed home to cook dinner, no one else being at hand to do it.

Just as the bed was so far done that she could open the oven door, and opening it she saw upon the perch her cousin Brown, and the minister. Church was out, and Cousin Brown had brought the reverend gentleman to his friend's to dine. Mrs. Vrankin received both hospitably, and hastened to usher them into the parlor. The yellow, artless, home bravely in the big blue vase. Mr. Vrankin had been wise not to hide his money there, but it was cold.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Febrile, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in its true sense, a weak heart. It is a hidden time little nerve that really is all at fault. This disease, however, is not always a simple matter, and must have more power, more strength, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the strength and timor also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative is, in the past, the strength of all this painful, painful, suffering, popular prescription. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this powerful, and acting nerve centers. It builds up, and restores the real genuine heart health. very cold.

"I'll light a fire," said the good woman. "It won't take a minute. It's the first of the season, or I'd have the grate fixed."

She tucked the paper down into the grate, the easiest way to be rid of it, piled on wood and placed the match ready. As she struck the match she gave a little cry, and repressed it instantly. The flames blazed up merrily and roared behind the blowers.

When Mr. Vrankin returned, the blowers was down, and the two men were warming their feet at a compact mass of red coal.

He looked at his Eva Maria. Her cold, composed, New England face, with its high nose and close-shut mouth, betrayed no emotion.

"She don't know what she has done," he said to himself; but he did. The ghost of that hundred dollars stared at him from the embers. He could not talk, he could not compose himself. Cousin Brown opined he was not well. The minister remarked that "in the midst of life we are in death" and seemed to prophesy his funeral. It was not a gay dinner, but then Mrs. Vrankin missed her spouse from his bed. She went to look for him and found him poking in the ashes of the dead fire with the tongs. He looked up with a very red face.

"I don't think these here coals kin be good," he said, confidently.

"Did you get up in the night to look at them?" she asked.

He made no answer and returned to bed.

Next morning his wife again attacked him.

"Have you thought that matter over?" she asked.

He had not, and it had occurred a special judgment for him, in de- to him that Providence had prepared stroying that money. He felt that his wife had spoken the truth. She had a right to decent clothes. When he had served him so well for so many years.

"I've thought it over, Eva Maria," he said, and arose and went to his desk, a queer, old-fashioned one built in the house-wall. When he re- turned he brought with him a blank check.

"Get what you like, my dear," he said, "and get it nice. Fill the check up just as you please."

He had not called her "my dear" for years. She smiled up at him very gently; tears were near her eyes.

However she used the check to dress herself comfortably. It was the first time for many years that she had indulged in the luxury of shopping freely.

At night he met her, at the depot, loaded with parcels, tired but smiling. He had not seen her so bright for many a day.

After tea that night they sat together beside the stove as before, and she looked at him in a peculiar way.

"You didn't seem to feel cheerful Sunday afternoon, Jeremiah," she said. "What ailed you?"

"I don't want to tell you," he answered.

"But I'll tell you," she said. "You thought I buried the pocket-book you hid in the grate, I didn't."

She put her hand into the work- basket and drew it out intact, with the money in it.

"I was just in time," she said. "I saw it sticking between the bricks. If you hadn't given me the check, I should have spent the money. There's a confession for you, Jeremiah!"

He looked at her, half angry, half astonished. She arose and came to him and put her hands on his shoulders.

"But I should never have enjoyed wearing them," she said. "I should have hated them, I think. These that have hated them, I think. These that I bought today with your free gift, I shall love while there's a rag of them left."

The man looked at her with a feeling that a strange revelation of feminine human nature had been made to him, but all he said was:

"Why, Eva Maria, I want to know!" and he drew her down upon his knee and kissed her.

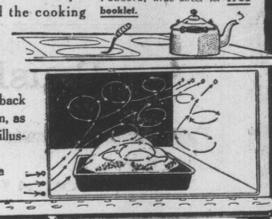

CULTIVATE THE MIND TO MEET EMERGENCIES.

There is no family but has been brought, and may at any time, either in whole or in part, be brought into danger. Accidents are always happening, sometimes owing to circumstances for which no one is to blame, but very often accidents happen as the result of carelessness or ignorance. It is the question arises: Are we cultivating in ourselves a train of mind which will enable us, to meet these accidents with composure. This is what we mean by "cultivating the mind." When a person looks presence of mind, the appearance of danger puts part of their thought to flight. To act with "presence of mind" in danger requires in the first place "courage" because without that
