PLAYING FARM.

What a grand time this little boy and girl are having! They have a set of toys called "The Farm," and many are the happy hours they spend playing with it. They take the little fences and divide off the fields. In one they put the trees and call that the orchard. In another they place the sheep and cows and call it a pasture field. In another place they gather the pigs, with a little trough and a pig-pen near by. Of course they have a barn-yard, too, with chickens running about. Then there is the drive-house, with stalls in it for the horses. If any of my little readers go to the country this summer they must look about the farm to see how many interesting things there are. So that if they ever get a toy farm they will understand all about it.

23. What is the subject of twelfth lesson?
The feeding of five thousand.
24. What is the lesson for me?
"Our souls must every day be fed, With the true and living bread."

When the evening shadows fall,
 And the Shepherd calls us home,
 We shall hear his gentle voice,
 Know the fold, and gladly come.

What wonderful things happen all round us! The dear little, chubby baby will soon be a big, strong man. The caterpillar spins his cocoon, and after awhile comes out, a big, beautiful butterfly. The little chick has come out of the hard shell, and after the winter's snow has melted, the blue and yellow flowers and green grass will come springing up from the brown earth. Open your eyes and learn about them all.

THE PET LAMB.

This little maid has finished her breakfast and has come out into the fields to play with a pet lamb that has been given her. The animal does not seem to be in the least afraid of her as she comes up to it with outstretched hands, and when she begins to run about and play the lamb stops eating the grass and gets ready to play too. What a nice pet to have, so gentle and harmless. We are sure they will have a good romp together in the fresh morning air and enjoy it thoroughly.

ALL THE MOMENTS FOR JESUS.

A servant would hardly do so queer a thing as to try to serve two masters. If he loved his master, and he was very good to him, he would be sure not to be servant too to one who hated him. And yet sometimes Jesus' own little servants who love him, and to whom he is very good, steal little bits out of the days to be cross and disobedient and idle in; and these things do not please Jesus, but Satan, who hates him. Little child, one is your Master, even Christ. When the Queen of Sheba saw the great King Solomon in his beautiful white robes, and heard the wise words which fell from his lips, she said. "Happy are . . . thy servants." Jesus' little servants are very happy, very safe.
