-		This may be considered a very valuable seam of coal. The quality of the coal is exceedingly good. It may be described as a bituminous coal, but of dense and strong structure. About 45 yards below the main seam we proved (by sinking a small shaft) another seam of about 3 feet thick, of good workable coal, having the same dip and angle as the main seam. At a probable depth of 150 yards there appears to be a third seam of good coal, about 2 feet thick. This has been partially worked, and proved to be very good, considering it was near the baself. An examination of the external character of this coal shows it to be a bituminous coal of a moderately compact texture, and not inclined to fill to pieces, or slack. Four samples were taken for analysis. I, and II, were two averages of the whole box: III was a pieced sample of the best (most compact) coal; and IV was a specimen of the coal showing a shaly texture. The re- sults of proximate analysis in the laboratory were as follows:-	For Men's and Boys's Suits,

The high rate of volatile to fixed combustible matter should render this coal, in common with the Newcastle coals which it resembles, an admirable gas coal, while in the amount of sulphur it falls much below the average of Newcastle coals (which contain about in the amount of one per cent. as determined by the Admiralty steam trials); therefore the gas ob- tained from it should be very easily purified. The coke of this coal appears in every way adapted for iron smelting. (See Gaundian Geological Survey Report, 1870. In forwarding Mr. Hartley's analysis, Sir W. E.
