BRITISH GENEROSITY

British generosity toward our allies in the late war is a marvellous demonstration of the desire of the British Empire for adjustments making for peace. It would not be surprising if the taxpayers of England objected upon the ground that they will be compelled to make enormous payments that properly should be met by those nations to which Britain loaned large sums during the war. When the generous treatment which Britain offers to France is contrasted with the hard bargain that the United States drove with the British, and is now trying to drive with the French, Uncle Samuel does not appear to advantage. All that Great Britain is asking in the way of repayment of debts owing to her is enough to pay what she owes to the United States. Substantially that means that Great Britain is making a gift to her late allies of the vast sums that were loaned to them to carry on the war. All she is trying to collect is what she borrowed from the United States to re-loan to France and the others to enable them to carry on until they could win the war. Indeed, if all the payments which Britain is now asking from her allies are made over a period of five years it will not be sufficient to meet the thirty-two million pounds a year which it has been agreed to pay to the United States. There has never been such an exhibition of generosity on the part of one nation to others as our great Mother Country is now presenting to the world. It is so far beyond any precedent that it must make a deep impression upon the statesmen in every community in the world.

"THE FUTURE OF CENTRAL EUROPE"

The last of the series of University Extension lectures was given by Prof. A. K. Griffin, of King's College, last Friday evening, his subject being "The Future of Central Europe." The countries of Central Europe had many problems to solve, the speaker stated. They would, however, probably work out their own salvation if given time. Germany and Russia would possibly absorb some of the smaller nations which they now to some extent dominate. Austria was in a helpless condition and would likely either be annexed by Germany or fall into the hands of other way. Prof. Griffin spoke of the excellent government of Poland, Yugoslavia, and Rumania, and of the small nations. There were, however, many troubles between them due to religious and social differences. The closing, the speaker presented an optimistic outlook of the whole situation. A vote of thanks was tendered by the chairman.

AT HOME—Mrs. Fred P. Harnish will be "At Home" to her friends on Wednesday, April 1st from 4 to 6 p.m.

MEDITATE BEFORE YOU MAIL IT

Consider these things—before you mail your orders out of town. The dollar that you spend out of town is gone forever.

The dollar that you spend at home—stays here and works. Whether it goes into civic improvements, via taxes, better schools, churches, streets—or whether it simply goes into more merchandise for your next needs—it circulates at home.

Remember that your neighbor will take better care of you than a stranger. It is in his interest to do so. His future depends on his winning and holding your confidence and friendship—and he's right here to make good any mistakes.

When you help the home merchant, the home industry—they in turn help build up your town—thus making greater and better opportunities for you and your children.

Spending money at home is putting a mortgage on it to you—spending it away from home is bidding it goodbye.

And your home purchase is better, for you can see and measure its value—before you part with your money. Not so "the cat in the bag" you buy from the distant point.

Don't mail your order until you have considered these things—and you won't mail it at all.

Spend your money at home and help make better times.

Ladies desiring extra help during the house-cleaning season would do well to get in touch with help by advertising for same in the Classified Columns of The Outlook. People desiring work carefully peruse this part of the paper. Here is a common meeting or "get-acquainted" ground.

Work has commenced on the new Morrison Block. Men are busy these days excavating for the basement. When this building is completed we understand, it will be one of the best appearing and most substantial in the Valley. Mr. Morrison is certainly showing his faith in the little old town.

Make our town like one big family by cutting out this "class" stuff. It is one of the greatest drawbacks that any community has to deal with. Of course, there will likely always be snobs, but let us have as few as possible. Be friendly, be kind, be generous, speak well of your neighbors, laud your town and community. It is only just as you make it.

Luck doesn't float around in the air and light on Tom or Dick or Harry just anyhow and anywhere. The will to know the thing you want. The will to work. The faith to fight. The strength to use but tempered tools and only weapons honor-right; the heart to hope, the grit to bear, and when disaster falls the pluck to grin and start again—that's luck.

Correspondence are again reminded to try and get their budgets of news into this office by Monday, and not later than Tuesday noon, in order to ensure publication in the current issue. Contributions received on Wednesday are invariably held over until the next issue. Many of our contributors are very regular and save their copy reach us Mondays, and some are good enough to get it in Saturdays. However, do your best, as we set first what is received at the office first.

We carry Pussfoot Shoes for babies. You are invited to look over our lines and see the values we are offering.—SHAFNER'S SHOE STORE.

The people of Middleton and the surrounding community are very modern in their methods of reaching buyers and sellers. This fact is ably backed by The Outlook's Classified Columns. The little sign board just outside the farm or on the building is almost a thing of the past. This old method only reaches the few passers by; while an Outlook Classified reaches approximately 7,000 readers at the minimum outlay. If you want to buy or sell anything, or want anything, let a little Classified in The Outlook work for you. Just think it over. These ads. have helped others and the chances for you are just as great.

One often hears the saying that a boy cannot stick with a job. Well, there may be considerable truth in it, but we have in mind one lad, who has been facing a large pile of wood steadily for the past week. He has kept the axe quite busy during his spare time, until the split pile is the largest. Though none too large for the axe, the boy has been steady and has labored unfatigably each day—and we venture to say that by the time another week rolls by the wood will be all split. While it is not always good policy to praise too much, the efforts of young folks, we believe that well merited work is worthy of a word or two; so accordingly we do not hesitate to mention the young fellow's name, because he is our neighbor and friend, Donald Doucet.

OUT FISHIN'

A feller isn't thinkin' mean-out fishin'. His thoughts are mostly good and clean—out fishin'. He doesn't knock his fellow men, Or harbor any grudges then; A feller's at his finest when—out fishin'.

The rich are comrades to the poor—out fishin'. All brothers of a common lure—out fishin'. The urchin with the pin and string Can chum with millionaire and king Vain pride is a forgotten thing—out fishin'.

A feller gets a chance to dream—out fishin'. He learns the beauties of a stream—out fishin'. An' he can wash his soul in air That isn't foul with selfish care—out fishin'. An' rellish plain and simple fare—out fishin'.

A feller has no time for hate—out fishin'. He isn't eager to be great—out fishin'. He isn't thinking thoughts of self, Or goods stacked high on a shelf, But he is always just himself—out fishin'.

A feller's glad to be a friend—out fishin'. A helppin' hand he'll always lend—out fishin'. The brotherhood of rod and line An' sky an' stream is always fine; Men come real close to God's design—out fishin'.

A feller isn't plotting schemes—out fishin'. He ain't foul with dreams—out fishin'. He's only busy with his dreams—out fishin'. His livery is a coat of tan, An' he's crept to do the best he can, A feller's always mostly man—out fishin'.

The friends of this paper will please hand us in news items while they are fresh. We prefer not to publish a birth after the baby is weaned, a marriage after the honeymoon is over, or the death of a man after the widow is married again.

Some foregone conclusions turn out to be fargone ones.

GOOD RECIPES

Toast Sandwiches

Toast the bread for the sandwich and put between the slices of toast slices of hot roast beef, lamb or other meat. Cover the meat with brown gravy, and season well.
Toasted bread, with fried egg and thin-sliced onion for the filling.
Toasted bread with bacon.
Toasted bread with hot apple sauce.
Toasted bread with creamed fish, meat or vegetables.
Toasted bread spread with grated cheese, put in the oven until melted, cover with a top slice of toast.
Toasted bread with a thick slice of tomato and hot sardines.
Toasted bread spread with grated cheese and chipped dried beef.

Maple Bread Pudding

One thick slice bread, two tablespoons butter, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one cup maple syrup, two eggs, one-half cup milk. Cut bread in small pieces, put into the milk which has been warmed, and to which the beaten eggs, the syrup and the melted butter have been added. Put in a buttered baking dish and bake about forty minutes in a slow oven. It is wise to put this pudding, or any pudding containing milk and eggs in a pan of water. This method of cooking is called poaching. It keeps the temperature of the pudding lower and prevents over-cooking of custard. An over-cooked custard is always watery.

Finnan Haddie, Macaroni and Cheese

Soak fish in equal parts of milk and water for one hour (enough to cover). Drain, rinse thoroughly, and separate into flakes to make two cups. Cook one-quarter cup butter and one tablespoon onion or five minutes, stirring constantly; add one-quarter cup flour and one-half cup milk, one teaspoon salt, one-third teaspoon paprika. When the mixture thickens add flaked fish. Cover a shallow baking dish or platter with cooked macaroni. Pour the fish over it, sprinkle with grated cheese and brown in oven fifteen minutes. This serves eight people.

Cheese and Rice

Boil one cup of rice and put in buttered baking dish. Make a thin white sauce of two tablespoons of butter, one tablespoon of flour and one cup of milk. Add one cup of grated cheese and one-half teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce. Pour over rice, cover with bread crumbs, dot with bits of butter and brown in hot oven.

MOSHER'S CORNER

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Lewis on the arrival of a young daughter.

Mrs. John Bent who has been ill with the flu is improving.

Dr. M. W. Brown preached in the Baptist Church here on Sunday afternoon.

Spring is certainly coming if plenty of robins is any sign.

Mrs. Geo. Bent is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. L. Lewis, for a few days.

Never make the mistake of thinking that you have to use dollar signs in order to spell Success.

A Reliable Tonic for Springtime

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Give New Health and Vigor

Not sick—but not feeling quite well. That is the way most people feel in the spring. Easily tired, appetite flicks, sometimes headaches and a feeling of depression. Pimples or eruptions may appear on the skin, or there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of tune—that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble.

Do not dose yourself with purgatives, as many people do, in the hope that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system and weaken instead of giving strength. Any doctor will tell you that this is true. What you need in the spring is a tonic that will enrich the blood and build up the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do this speedily, safely and surely. Every dose of this medicine helps to enrich the blood, which clears the skin, strengthens the appetite and makes tired depressed men, women and children bright, active and strong.

Proof of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills when the system is run down is shown by the case of Mrs. Lillian Lewis, South Ohio, N. S., who says:—"About a year ago I was badly run down. My appetite was poor, I did not sleep well and my nerves were all unstrung. I could not get up stairs without stopping to rest. As I was a long way from a doctor I decided to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and in the course of a few weeks I felt like a new person. As an all around restorative I can heartily recommend this medicine."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Victoria Will Say it With Flowers

When Victoria, the evergreen city of the West bids you welcome, which it will whenever you choose to visit the capital city of British Columbia, it will "say it with flowers," and at most unexpected times and places will present bouquets for your appreciation throughout your stay, whatever the season may be.

What an extraordinary city this is. Though very young compared with many other cities on the Continent it has, no doubt through the agency of its temperate climate, drawn about itself such a mellowed atmosphere as is usually associated with more ancient places. Whatever is effectively new is given covering or a background of foliage and flowers and it soon fits into the general scheme of things Victorian. Even down in the business and shopping districts where there is much coming and going you will find your flowers, suspended, of all places, from brackets on the street light stands.

And yet it must not be thought that this is a city of gardeners alone although one does wonder in looking over the city and its suburbs that its citizens can find time for anything other than gardening. Those who do business do it in much the same way as it is done in other up-to-date cities of its size and, unless one happens to know them, the stores of Victoria are quite a surprise. As most of the merchandise sold comes over the cheaper water routes, tourists have found it most advantageous to shop there, to the benefit of the merchants and the city generally. On this account, as much as to take care of local requirements, large stores have evolved which may be fallen back upon if ever the sights and scenery pail.

But, apart from its own immediate glories and attractions, Victoria is the gateway to a land of enchantment. Hundreds of miles of good motor roads thread Vancouver Island, through the virgin forest in which the biggest firs on the continent grow, winding round mountain peaks and turning out again here and there to the shore line.

With its chief city, Vancouver Island is coming into its own as a Mecca for the pleasure and health seekers. For the convenience of the increasing number of tourists who visit the Island the Canadian Pacific Railway has built two of the most magnificently appointed vessels on the West coast, to ply between Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle, and for their recreation and pleasure a huge Crystal Garden is being built, to be completed early in spring and to feature the largest salt-water swimming pool on the continent. However, Victorians pride themselves on the fact that their chief attractions are not of an artificial nature which in these days of publicity bureaus and advertising campaigns is much more than to be said of many other fashionable resorts.

TERRORS OF THE GOODWINS.

Grim Tales Are Told of Disaster on These Dreaded Sands.

About five miles from Deal, off the coast of Kent, England, lies the most dangerous sandbank in the world.
Ten miles long by three miles wide, this ocean death-trap is remarkable not only for the long roll of marine tragedies associated with its name, but for the fierce controversies that have arisen from time to time as to its origin.

Many learned men, including geologists, marine authorities and historians, have engaged in debate, written and verbal, in an effort to determine the genesis of the Goodwin Sands. At least seven centuries have passed since the subject first received attention, and in all this time no satisfactory solution has been forthcoming.

To-day the bulk of opinion supports the tradition that the Goodwins cover the site of an island known as Lomea, given to Earl Godwine by Edward the Confessor. The island was never reclaimed from the inroads of the sea, and in time it became submerged, the sand washed down from the mouth of the Thames piling itself up on the site, ultimately to constitute the greatest menace of its kind ever known.

You cannot be long in the company of a Deal lifeboatman before finding yourself fascinated by the grim tales he has to tell of disaster on these dreaded sands. The complete disappearance of a ship within the space of a few minutes is not unknown, as for example, the big barque that was seen to go aground one morning some years ago. The Kingsdown lifeboat put out, but although it cruised about for six hours, no trace of the ship could be found.
At two o'clock one winter morning a mail vessel from Ostend struck the sandbank. An hour later no one was left on board to answer the signals of the lifeboat that had gone to her rescue, while by seven o'clock there was nothing to be seen of the vessel, her crew, or passengers, except a lifebuoy with three bodies attached to it.

In another instance a vessel in distress was sucked under in less than two hours after running aground, her three hundred passengers and crew perishing before aid could reach them.

But the Goodwins are on occasion the scene of proceedings strangely out of keeping with the forbidding record of the locality. Ship cricket matches, for example, have been played on them at low tide, the first taking place only five days ago, when two teams from Ramsgate caused a sensation by choosing this unorthodox site for the game. A few years later another match nearly ended in tragedy, the players being cut off by the rapidly rising tide, a processant from which they were re-cued only in the nick of time.

An idea of the stiffness of the sand at low tide may be gained from the fact that three London cyclists accomplished a mile run on one part of the sandbank, a track which they declared to be ideal for the purpose, although in returning each got an unexpected ducking. Barely a month after this a German ship was lost with several hands on the exact spot where the cyclists had started their novel race.

Many people wonder why ships approach the Goodwins, since the spot is such a well-known death-trap. The explanation is that the roadstead between the Goodwins and the Kentish coast, known as the Dover Straits, is a natural refuge for vessels in rough weather. At such times scores of ships may be seen making for this harbour, and it is in doing so that many run aground.

To-day the risks are minimised by the use of lightships and beacons, but even so the Goodwins have not ceased taking their toll of ships and lives.

Before Watches Were Common.
Pocket sundials were quite commonly carried during the time of Queen Elizabeth. Public sundials were also quite common and were to be found in many suitable public places. One of the oldest, erected about the time of Edward the Confessor, is still to be seen over the south door of Kildale Church, in Yorkshire, England. It bears the inscription: "This is the sun's marker at every hour, and Hayward made me and brand the priest." The fashion for dials began to spread until the whole countryside, particularly in the North and the Southwest, was dotted with them. They are to be seen in interesting forms at St. Andrews, Melville House, Holyrood Palace, Dundee Castle, and many other places which are popular resorts of sightseers. The legends engraved on some of these old dials are very quaint. One humble in its opinion of itself and mankind, announces:
"Shadows we are, like shadows we depart." In China and Japan small dials made of boxwood are still carried and consulted by their owners.

Venus' Basket.
Venus' basket is a glass-silk sponge which grows in the tropical coast of the Pacific, from the Piliyama region to the Indian Ocean. By the Japanese it is called the mineral silk sponge, and is used for its fibre, which is woven into chemical fibre cloths, into fireproof candlesticks and into delicate fireproof curtains. In its natural state the glass sponge is covered with these long silky fibres which are used in the fire referred to. A small tuft of these fibres covers the base.

The specimens are raked up from the ocean bed, and the framework, which can not be separated into fibre for weaving, is employed in the covering of steam pipes and in cold storage insulation, where it has been found equal to asbestos.

Violence vs. Old Age.

There were nearly as many deaths by violence as from old age in London in 1882.

OUTLAWS OF THE WILD.

Animals Who Wage War With Man In Lonely Places of Earth.

There are animals that have not a friend in the world; there are some, indeed, which are so harmful that prices are set upon their heads, and it is considered the duty of all to kill them.

Such a creature is the diablo, or wild dog of Australia, which is the worst foe of the sheep farmer. It is a courageous beast, yet cunning beyond belief.

Another terrible foe of sheep is commonly known as the Tasmanian Devil. This creature will kill a score of sheep in a night. It is being steady-ly destroyed by poison and other means, and is now rare.

The timber wolf of North America is also quite without friends. It is a muscular brute, with terrific jaw power. One of these wolves has been known to snap off a man's hand at a single bite.

It is a foe to all domestic animals, and is equally hated by the stock-raiser and the trapper. One of its pleasant tricks is to trail the trapper and devour the fur-bearing creatures which he takes in his traps. There is a price on his head.

The small wolf, the sneaking little coyote, is another foe to sheep. Last year over 27,000 were killed in North America, but some thousands destroyed by poison.

Another pest is the fox, which likes nothing better than lamb. Its falling is a loss for the stock-raiser, and by means of this lure it is trapped in large numbers in the States and in Canada. A curious-looking creature, it has pricked ears, large, round eyes, and huge paws out of all proportion to its size.

The mountain lion, or panther of the Rockies, takes heavy toll of cattle, and is therefore hunted down by stockmen, who kill about two hundred every year.

One other American wild animal which is remorselessly hunted is the wolverine, a sort of giant weasel, enormously strong, intensely sun-drying, and extremely savage. The prospector and trapper have a perfect horror of the wolverine, and with good reason, for if it finds a shack empty it will dig its way in through the roof, and ruin or destroy the whole of the stores. Many a trapper has died of starvation owing to this habit of the wolverine.

In South Africa the animal most hated by the white man is the lion.
In a district they drive every head of cattle and sheep into a trap. They also kill both sheep and cattle.

Other animals are destroyed, not because they are directly foes of man, but because they eat up food which is intended for him or for his stock.
The notorious case is the rabbit, imported into Australia, and which now infests the whole continent.

The jack rabbit of America is almost equally destructive. In many of the Western States it eats more grass than the stock. In Idaho alone they kill 7,000 jack rabbits yearly. In California nearly as many.

The method employed is to drive them into corrals of wire netting, as many as 15,000 being rounded up at one time.

Of Old Country animals the most mischievous is the rat, which is said to destroy $40,000,000 worth of man's property yearly. Certainly it would be better dead. The mouse is almost equally destructive in its own way, and should be kept under by every means in our power.

Prison in the Open Air.

Prison in the open air seems a contradiction in itself, for the very word "prison" calls up the idea of incarceration in locked and walled-up buildings.

However, there is such a thing, and it is in Holland that very successful experiments have been made with outdoor prisons early in 1924.

Sixty persons were drafted to the town of Ypenhulst, to serve their term there. Their task was to convert moorland into cultivated field, and they showed themselves very industrious in the undertaking. They are divided into gangs, each consisting of a few persons, but are not superintended or watched by any sort of warder or official; there prisoners may live in common and advance their social sense, unsubjected to superstition.

The foreman of each gang is, however, not a prisoner, but a workman who joins voluntarily. It would not be difficult to escape under such conditions, but no one has hitherto attempted to do so. The environment is much more favorable than in an ordinary prison, and the Dutch Government is about to set up several centres of this sort.

The Blackcap.
The blackcap is a most surprising mimic. He will reproduce, with singular fidelity, not only the song of the nightingale and the garden-warbler, but also those of many other birds, as different as the sedge-warbler, the starling and the thrush.

Wooded banks, coppices, gardens where there is plenty of undergrowth, are the favorite haunts, provided that there are sufficient trees in the neighborhood overgrown with the common climbing ivy, for it is on the berries of this plant that the blackcap depends for food on its first arrival. As the spring advances it becomes insectivorous and the true friend of the gardener. In August it may enter the garden to seek a few raspberries, but later turns to elderberries and blackberries.

The general coloration of the male is of an ashy grey, with an olive tinge, save the top of the head, which is black—hence its name. The female differs from her mate in having the crown of a dull amber.

New Use for Vacuum Cleaners.
Vacuum cleaners are being used by the French police to extract dust from prisoners' clothing, so that it can be examined under the microscope.

DON'T TELL.

Every schoolgirl, every schoolboy loathes to tell tales. There is no great crime on the Statute book of school morals than tale-bearing. But as years pass, we seem to discard our schoolroom morality; we lose our honor, our shame of tale-telling. Especially is this noticeable in many married women—to their great loss and sometimes to their misery!

Too frequently, after a trifling disagreement with her man, the wife rushes off to pour her tale of injury into a girl friend's sympathetic ears.
Or it may be she unburdens herself to a male acquaintance, frequently with disastrous results.

There are some women who seem to make a hobby of grumbling about their husbands; their husbands topic of their conversation. It is all very petty, undignified and humiliating.

And the evil does not always stop here. These foolish wives will even let it afterwards!

One case will serve to point the moral. A young wife suffered a bitter disillusionment in the man she married. Under the influence of the shock she spread the story among her friends, until everyone looked askance at him. Later, reconciliation was effected between husband and wife; she desired her man to be reinstated in the good opinion of her world, but she was unable to undo the mischief she had wrought.

Yes, it is a relief, when your heart is breaking, to confide your troubles to sympathetic ears. It takes a sore heart and more than a pinch of heroism to keep it all to yourself.
But beware! the suffer martyrdom rather than tell tales about your husband. If you must confide in someone or so mad, select that someone carefully; be sure it is only "one," and choose as your confidant a friend, tried and proved safe.

There are many things in childhood which if kept alive in after life, would sweeten the world. Decidedly the score of tale-telling is one of them.

Juvenile Sympathy

With tears on her baby cheeks, little Winnie ran up to the policeman.

"Please, sir," she sobbed, "will you come and lock a nasty man up?"

"What's he been doing?" asked the man in blue kindly.

"Oh," wailed the child, "he has broken up my hoop with his nasty bicycle."

"Has he?" said the constable, preparing to go to the scene of the crime.
"Well, where is he?"

"Oh, you'll easily catch him," explained Winnie triumphantly, "they have just carried him into that drug store on a shutter."

A SHEAF OF RAGE SENTENCES

There are all sorts of ladders by which to rise in the world, but so far as we have observed there is none of them that does not require to be scaled one rung at a time.

ROD AND GUN

Facts and Fiction for the sportsman, interesting and of a wide variety are offered in the April issue of Rod and Gun in Canada. The initial story, The Shanty Lip by the Gende-Terre, by Alden Griffin Meredith, is a tale of silver prospecting warranted to hold the attention of all who read it. In The Motoring Legions Are Coming, Wm. G. Irwin heralds the influx of summer tourists into Canada. Bonny-castle Dale and J.
W. Winson again discourse interestingly on wild bird life and P. V. Williams and Martin Hunter add their quota of good reading. The Gun and Ammunition is up to its usual standard of excellence and includes articles on the Varmint and the Early Remington rifles. In Fishing Notes, Robert Page Lincoln takes up the question of different lures to be used for fishing and other departments, stories and sketches, all deal with some reasonable subject, interesting to the sportsman. Published monthly by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Wood-

"I Suffered Terribly With Sore, Aching Back"

Mrs. Roland Ferguson, 194 Lake St., Peterboro, Ont.

writes:

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills
35 cts. a box of 35 pills, Edmondson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto

"For over two years I suffered terribly with sore back. I was almost mad with the pain, and had doctored with it until I was discouraged. Then my father, who is a firm believer in Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I followed his advice, and am glad to say I was completely relieved of that torturing pain in my back. It is over a year since I used these pills, and I have had no return of the trouble, but always keep them in the house."

A tale of youth and summer time and the Baxter family, especially William.
By BOOTH TAKINGTON.

with what he meant to do as soon as the music paused, he was somewhat hazy, but when he perceived that he was being led in the direction of a girl sitting solitary under one of the maple trees the sudden shock of fear aroused his faculties.

"What—where?" he stammered, halting and seeking to detach himself from his hostess.

"What is it?" she asked.

"I got—I got to"—William began easily.

His purpose was to excuse himself on the ground that he had to find a man and tell him something important before the next dance, for in the confusion of the moment his powers refused him greater originality. But the vital part of his intended excuse remained unspoken, being disregarded and cut short, as millions of other masculine diplomacies have been through the centuries by the decisive action of ladies.

Miss Boke had been sitting under the maple tree for a long time—so long, indeed, that she was acquiring a profound distaste for forestry and even for maple syrup. In fact, her state of mind was as desperate in its way as William's. And when a hostess leads a youth in almost perfectly fitting conventional black toward a girl who has been sitting alone through dance after dance that girl knows what that youth is going to have to do.

It must be confessed for Miss Boke that her eyes had been upon William from the moment Mrs. Parcher addressed him. She sprang to her feet and met Mrs. Parcher more than halfway.

"Oh, Mrs. Parcher," she called, coming forward.

"I got"—the panic stricken William again hastily began.

"Oh, Mrs. Parcher," cried Miss Boke, "I've been so worried! There's a candle in that Japanese lantern just overhead, and I think it is going out."

"I'll run and get a fresh one in a minute," said Mrs. Parcher, smiling benevolently and retaining William's arm with a little difficulty.

"I got to—I got to find a man"—William made a last stricken effort.

"Miss Boke, this is Mr. Baxter," said Mrs. Parcher, and she added, with what seemed to William hideous gurgling: "He and you both came late, dear, and he hasn't any dances engaged either. So run and dance and have a nice time together."

The full horror of his position was revealed to William in the relieved, confident, proprietorial smile of Miss Boke, for William lived by a code from which no previous experience had taught him any means of escape. Mrs. Parcher had made the statement so needless and so ruinous, that he had no engagements, and in his dismay he had been unable to deny this fatal truth. He had been obliged to let it stand.

He had to give form to the fatal invitation. "May this dance 'throu'?" he muttered doggedly.

"Wurry pleased to!" Miss Boke responded, whereupon they walked in silence to the platform, stepped upon its surface and embraced.

They made a false start, then another. They stood swaying to catch the time, then made another. After that they tried again and were saved from a fall only by spasmodic and noticeable contortions.

Miss Boke laughed tolerantly, as if forgiving William for his awkwardness, and his hot heart grew hotter.

than others, a low voice hissed in his ear: "She won't hurt you much, Sittin' Bill. She's only in fun!"

This voice belonged to the dancer with whom he had just been in painful contact, Johnnie Watson.

"I just love dancing," said Miss Boke serenely. "Don't you, Mr. Baxter?"

"What?" he gulped. "Yeh."

"It's lovely," she murmured. "I hope they don't play 'Home, Sweet, Home' very early at parties in this town. I could keep on like this all night!"

CHAPTER XIX.
Marooned.

TO the gasping William it seemed that she already had kept on like this all night, and he expressed himself in one great, agonized moan of relief when the music stopped. "I sh' think mus'cians'd be dead!" he said as he wiped his brow. And, then discovering that May Parcher stood at his elbow, he spoke hastily to her. "May the next 'throu'?"

But Miss Parcher had begun to applaud the musicians for an encore. She shook her head. "Next's the third extra," she said. "And, anyhow, this one's going to be encored now. You can have the twenty-second if there is any."

William threw a wild glance about him, looking for other girls, but the tireless orchestra began to play the encore, and Miss Boke, who had been applauding, instantly cast herself upon his bosom. "Come on!" she cried. "Don't let's miss a second of it. It's just glorious!"

When the encore was finished she seized William's arm and, mentioning that she'd left her fan upon the chair under the maple tree, added: "Come on! Let's go get it quick!"

Under the maple tree she fanned herself and talked of her love for dancing until the music sounded again. "Come on!" she cried then. "Don't let's miss a second of it! It's just glorious!"

And, grasping his arm, she propelled him toward the platform with a merry little rush.

So passed five dances—long, long dances.

Likewise five dances—long dances. After each dance Miss Boke conducted him back to the maple tree, also from the general throng, and William found the intermissions almost equal to his martyrdom upon the platform. But, as there was a barely perceptible balance in their favor, he collected some fragments of his broken spirit and begged to "sit this one out," alleging that he had "kind of turned his ankles or something," he believed.

The cordial girl at once placed him upon the chair and gallantly procured another for herself. In her solitude she sat close to him, her little blond head, while William, though now and then rubbing his ankle for plausibility's sake, gazed at the platform with an expression which Gustave Dore would gratefully have found suggestive. Upon the many colored platform the lovable One drifted to and fro, back and forth, her little blond head, in a golden net, glinting here and there like a bit of tinsel blowing across her forehead.

And when that dance and its encore were over she went to lean against a tree, while Wallace Banks fanned her, but she was so busy with Wallace that she did not notice William, though she passed near enough to waft a breath of violet scent to his wan nose. A fragment of her silver speech tinkled in his ear:

"Oh, Wallace Banks, bid pld s'ant have Bruvva Josie-Joe's dance 'less Joe say so! Lola mus' be fair. Wal'le mus'n't!"

"That's that Miss Pratt," observed Miss Boke, following William's gaze with some interest. "You met her yet?"

"Yeh," said William.

"She's been waiting here all summer," Miss Boke informed him. "I was at a little tea this afternoon, and some of the girls said this Miss Pratt said she'd never dream of getting engaged to any man that didn't have $750,000. I don't know if it's true or not, but I expect so. Anyway, they said they heard her say so."

William lifted his right hand from his ankle and passed it time after time across his damp forehead. He did not believe that Miss Pratt could have expressed herself in so mercenary a manner, but if she had—well, one fact in British history had so impressed him that he remembered it even after examination: William Pitt, the younger, had been prime minister of England at twenty-one. Undoubtedly Miss Boke's bit of gossip added somewhat to the already sufficient anxieties of William's evening.

"Up at the lake," Miss Boke chattered on, "we got to use the hotel dining room for the hops. It's a floor good deal like this floor is tonight—just about oily enough and as nice a floor as I ever danced on. We have awfully good times up at the lake. 'Course there aren't so many men up there like there were tonight, and I must say I am glad to get a chance to dance with a man again! I told you you'd dance all right once we got started, and look at the way it's turned out! Our steps just suit exactly! I must say it, I could scarcely think of anybody I ever met I'd rather dance with. When anybody's step suits with mine that way, why, I love to dance straight through an evening with one person, the way we're doing."

"Yeh," William reflected, "it had to be me!" With all the crowd to choose from, Mrs. Parcher had to go and pick on him! All the others went about free as air, striding from girl to girl, girls that danced like girls! All, all except William danced with Miss Pratt!

What Miss Pratt had offered him was a choice between the thirty-second dance and the twenty-first extra. That was what he had to look forward to—the thirty-second regular or the twenty-first extra!

Meanwhile, merely through eternity, he was sealed unto Miss Boke.

The tie that bound them oppressed him as if it had been an ill omened matrimony, and he sat beside her like an unwilling old husband. All the while Miss Boke had no appreciation whatever of her companion's real condition, and when little, spasmodic, sinister changes appeared in his face, as they certainly did from time to time, she attributed them to pains in his ankle.

So they danced again and again. When the fourteenth dance came, about half an hour before midnight, they were still dancing together.

It was upon the conclusion of this fourteenth dance that Mr. Parcher mentioned to his wife a change in his feelings toward William. "I've been watching him," said Mr. Parcher, "and I never saw true misery show plainer. He's having a really horrible time. By George, I hate him, but I've begun to feel kind of sorry for him. Can't you trot up somebody else, so he can get away from that fat girl?"

Mrs. Parcher shook her head in a discouraged way. "I've tried, and I've tried, and I've tried," she said. "Well, try again."

"I can't now," she warned her hand toward the rear of the house. Round the corner marched a short procession of negroes, bearing trays, and the dancers were dispersing themselves to chairs upon the lawn for refreshments.

"Well, do something," Mr. Parcher urged. "We don't want to find him in the cistern in the morning."

Mrs. Parcher looked thoughtful, then brightened. "I know!" she said. "I'll make May and Lola and their partners come sit in this little circle of chairs here, and then I'll go and bring William and Miss Boke to sit with them. I'll give William the seat at Lola's left. You keep the chairs."

Straightway she sped upon her kindly errand. It proved successful, so successful, indeed, that without the slightest effort, without even a hint on her part, she brought not only William and his constant friend to sit in the circle with Miss Pratt, Miss Parcher and their escorts, but Mr. Bullitt, Mr. Watson, Mr. Banks and three other young gentlemen as well. Nevertheless, Mrs. Parcher managed to carry out her plan and, after a little display of firmness, saw William satisfactorily established in the chair at Miss Pratt's left.

At last, at last he sat beside the fairy-like creature and filled his lungs with infinitesimal particles of violet scent. She whispered:

"Noty ickle boy Batsater fluttin'! Lola's night, any ickle boy Batsater fluttin'! Flut all night wif dray bid dir!"

William made no reply.

There are occasions, infrequent, of course, when even a bachelor is not flattered by being accused of flirting. William's feelings toward Miss Boke had by this time come to such a pass that he regarded the charge of flirting with her as little less than an implication of grave mental deficiency. And well he remembered how Miss Pratt, beholding his subjugated gymnastics in the dance, had grown pink with laughter. But still the rose leaf lips whispered:

"Lola saw! Lola saw bad boy Batsater under dray bid fluttin' wif dray bid dir. Fluttin' all night wif dray bid, 'bormous dir!"

With that she turned her back upon him and prattled merrily to the gentleman of sixteen upon her right.

Still and cold sat William. Let her talk to the Man at the other side of her as she would, and ever so gaily, William knew that she was conscious every instant of the reproachful presence upon her left and somehow these moments of quiet and melancholy dignity became the most satisfactory he had known that evening, for as he sat, so silent, so austere, and not yet eating, though a plate of chicken salad had been placed upon his lap, he began to feel that there was somewhere about him a mysterious support.

"Oo tross?" whispered Lola.

He spoke not.

"'Twasn't my fault 'bout dancing," she said. "Bad boy! What made oo tross so late?"

He maintained his silence and the accompanying icy dignity, whereupon she made a charming little point.

"Oo be so tross," she said. "Lola talk to nice Man over side of her!"

A negro preacher was reading and Bible which dealt with genealogy.

When he came to the passage "And seven sons did Mites bear," he said:
"Now, brethren and sisters distance at day run out of milk at a n't come up or somethin'—and de boys went out and catch a bear and milked her. Dem boys could milk

WHAT EVENING MAIL SAYS A-BOUT HERBERT DAVIDSON OF MIDDLETON.

Herbert Davidson is a Middletonian and at present is attending Dalhousie College. He was a member of Dal's debating team this year and upheld college in a very creditable manner at the debate. The following paragraph is clipped from the Evening Mail and will be of interest to all Herbert's friends here.

"H. A. Davidson comes from Middleton, Annapolis County, and is a son of A. L. Davidson, ex-M. P. He is the second representative which the Junior Arts class has on this year's team. 'Herbie' as he is known at Dalhousie, holds many offices and has taken a leading part in college affairs ever since he entered the university in 1925. His ability as a cartoonist and a wit secured for him the appointment of staff artist on the Dalhousie Gazette. Davidson received the training for leadership during the two years when he was Grand High Praetor of the Tuxis Boys' Conference and he is now a prominent member of the Pine Hill Philosophical Society and is prominently mentioned for several important offices in the forthcoming elections at Dalhousie. As a speaker, Mr. Davidson is noted for his flow of picturesque and convincing language and he can be depended upon to present a strong case in a debate."

WHITE LILY POTATOES CAP-TURE PRIZES

Moncton, March 26—A prize of ten dollars was received recently by Mr.
J. A. Marven from the New Brunswick Department of Agriculture for potatoes which were submitted for competition with those from all parts of the province last fall. The potatoes were grown on the White Lily Farm, Annapolis and were sent to Fredericton to be judged.

You can stretch your dollar to the limit by knowing the day's buying opportunities; or you can spend it for some object of beauty where the price is no consideration. The advertisements tell you how and where to do both.

Here and There

Moose hunting opened in the Province of Quebec on September 10th.
Indications are that an unusually large number of hunters will invade the woods this fall and the rush for licenses is well under way.

Edward A. Patterson, mining engineer of London, England, visiting Nova Scotia, states that the miners resources of that province are practically lying dormant and that with proper development along scientific lines, mining could be advanced to first place in the province's industries.

Calgary, Alta., is planning an artificial ice rink, because of the prevalence of chinooks in the winter, but the project will not be carried out in time for the coming season.
Calgary had to abandon its scheme for an annual winter carnival because it could not count on weather that was cold enough or on snow.

The members of the band of the famous Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry were among the passengers sailing for England aboard the Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of France" on September 10th. Under the direction of Lieut.
T. W. James, they are to play at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley.

The Duke de Alba, 17th of that name and 10th Duke of Berwick in the British nobility, together with the Duchess of Alba and several other distinguished Spaniards, is touring Canada over Canadian Pacific lines. Their itinerary includes Niagara Falls, Toronto, Banff, Lake Louise, Vancouver and Victoria.

Transformation for the better wrought among the Eskimos in the last 25 years is almost unbelievable, so Bishop I. O. Stringer, of the Anglican diocese of the Yukon, reported on a recent visit to Edmonton, Alta. The Bishop attributes this improvement to the influence of the missionaries and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The "Calgary process," the newest method of oil refining, was examined with interest by the members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science during their recent visit to Calgary, Alta.
This process has become world-famous ever since the experiments conducted at the local Imperial oil refinery proved so successful.

Thousands of Belgians are waiting to cross the Atlantic to Canada as soon as the Dominion can assimilate them, it is reported by authorities in touch with the situation. Belgium's interest in Canada is further evidenced by the visit to the Dominion of Louis Strauss, veteran member of the diplomatic corps and member of the Belgian Parliament for Antwerp, who, as guest of E. W.
Beatty, Chairman and President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, is touring the country studying economic conditions with a view to stimulating Belgian immigration.

BLUENOSE BLOOD

From where Old Fundy's turgid tide roars, boiling up the Bay To where Cape North keeps sentinel o'er the Atlantic, grey, There is a breed of sailormen known to the Seven Seas And Neptune is the ruling lord of their wide destinies. The North Atlantic is no place for pleasure's flannelled guests, Thick fogs and threat'ning, sullen clouds lower o'er its heaving crests

That hold the menace of the berg and stress of grinding ice, 'Twas here the Bluenose waged a war that knew no armistice, 'Twas here the Bluenose learned his trade in fog and freezing sleet;

Small wonder that he dreamed the rest as dross beneath his feet.

There is no sea that has not seen his bulging canvas spread, There is no sea that does not sleep some of his hallowed dead; From Baffin's Bay down to the Horn, from Frisco to Brisbane,

He goes and comes in his day's work and some come not again,

In the dread port of missing ships there lies a ghostly fleet, Sent there by fog or hurricane, by berg or driving sleet. Perchance, thin phantoms pace the decks and glory in their past

For what is Death to Bluenose Blood that it should stand aghast?

Stark Death must come to all alike, small matter where or when,

So that they see their duty through and dying, die like men.

ROMANCE IN C

Charles Crasborn caught Clarence Coldfoot courting Constance Cuddley. Charles coughed clamorously, causing chaotic confusion. Constance's cheeks chalked. Charles called conflict. Clarence cheerlessly consented. Combatants circled cautiously. Charles caught Clarence couple crushing cuffs. Clarence, colliding chair, collapsed convulsively. Cool, collected, Charles cast covantly, cringing Clarence conventional clothes closet. Charles' countenance conveyed crustiness. Constance cried cryly. Confused, convincingly, cause commotion. Capid cunningly captured Charles. Constance's conversation ceased. Consoled, continued Charles' captivation. Charles capitulated. Catastrophe collapsed. Conclusion: Chimney, church, cottage containing contented couple.
