FOUR RIVAL INSURANCE AGENTS.

A short time ago, on the train between Windsor and Chatham, an agent for a leading Canadian company said to me, "Well, German, you have a magnificent company to work for." Within three hours, at the dinner table in Chatham, agents of two other good Canadian companies volunteered the remark. "German, if you can't get business, nobody can, for you have a splendid company." Their testimony is worth something.

People Who Ignore Doctors Held for Manslaughter-Serious Nature of Irving's Illness-Gen. Kitchener the Hero of the Hour.

[Special Cable Letter to The Advertiser.1 London, Oct. 29.-Influenza has made its appearance here early this season. Fifteen deaths in London are officially attributed to influenza and there are some apprehensions that it will assume epidemic form.

THE RACING FEVER. The racing at Newmarket was again the occasion for big society gatherings. There was a record attendance at the Cambridgeshire, where lots of money was dropped on the Prince of Wales' Nunsuch, which was left at the post with Tod Sloan in the saddle. racing fever of the last few weeks called forth protests from various quarters. Mr. Henry Labouchere, in Truth, referring to Tod Sloan, denounces "the nauseous jockey worship, which was such a discreditable and idiotic fever of the turf 20 years ago." Lord Russell, of Killowen, the lord Chief Justice of England, in a speech, also decried this mania, saying: "They worship this god to such an extent that if Tod Sloan, supposing his nationality did not stand in the way, were to become a candidate for Epsom, it is doubtful if the present mem-

The Vatican authorities have decided to invest the Peter's Pence fund in a large sugar manufactory, and it is added that there are some misgivings in Catholic circles as to the wisdom of the Vatican again investing in a speculative undertaking, seeing that their last venture resulted in the loss of

Odontine

To the readers of The Advertiser this dentifrice is widely known, for its popularity has increased since it was first introduced, some twelve years ago. It contains no injurious properties, and is not only most useful in strengthening the gums and beautifying the teeth, but it purifies the breath and is very pleasing to the taste. In many London families Odontine is a standard article, and once used it enjoys increasing popularity, as its merits are appreciated.

pelled him to return to Dinan, and cut short his career in the French army. ROYAL GOSSIP.

According to advices received from the court of Copenhagen, where King George of Greece is staying, after attending the funeral of the Queen of Denmark, it is believe there that he will abdicate next spring in favor of of Crown Prince Constantine, Duke of Sparta, and will return to Denmark and settle there permanently. The birth of a son to Prince Emanuel, Duke of Aosta, eldest nephew of the King of Italy, was a very important event for the house of Savoy, as, unless a change of circumstances occurs. he will sit on the throne of Italy.

SEVENTEEN OFFICERS PUNISHED The talk of military circles, next to discussing the prospects of war with France, has been an extraordinary affair at the Hythe School of Musketry, resulting in the severe punishment of 17 of the 86 officers there. It appears that one of the officers incurred detes-tation by offensive boasting at the expense of a certain lady. A number of the other officers at first played a trick upon him as warning, and he com-plained to the commandant, who reprimanded the culprits The brother officers of the objectionable officer thereupon determined to give him severe chastisement. They went to his room, destroyed all his uniforms, and then after having stripped him, inflicted corporal punishment. Several of the officers who took part in the affair have been dismissed from the school, and others have been punished in various manners. WILLIAM'S EXTRAORDINARY UT-

TERANCE. The French papers declare that Emperor William made the following utterance during his visit to Constantinople: "The French are an extraordinle. When you see them separ ately, they are charming, but in a mass they are unbearable. They refuse to understand ue. If we two were allies we should rule the world. Barrie, Oct. 29.-Chief Justice Meredith had his patience exercised with a jury whom he had to send to their room three times before they brought in a verdict that his lordship could receive. The case on which they were deliberating was an action brought by John Woodrow, of Oro, against his cousin, Daniel Woodrow, to obtain $600 damages. It was shown in evidence that several young men congregated on a certain dark night to serenade a newly-married couple, but on the way a quarrel started in the company, the result of which was that the plain-tiff's leg was broken by the defendant, though accidentally, the jury said. They awarded the plaintiff $1 damages because of blows he received after his leg was broken. The judge in ruling that each side pay his own costs remarked that he thought that the fair way, and after they had paid their lawyers they will have learned

In Sympathy With the Men

Rousing Mass Meeting of the Citizens of London.

Into Princess Rink.

The Strikers Given an Ova tion as They Entered.

Grievances of the Men Placed in a Strong Light.

Promised by the Meeting.

Stirring Addresses by the Mayor, Col. F. B. Leys, M. P. P., T. D. Hodgens. M P. P., Ex-Mayor Little, Ex-Mayor Essery, Ex-Mayor George Taylor, and Others-

It was a remarkable outburst of pubbut a few hours, it caused an outpouring of all classes, eager to stimulate and support the cause of the men who have stood up for their rights. The white ribbon fluttered everywhere. The white ribbon fluttered everywhere. The with treatment like that. Every citizen spacious rink, holding 5,000 people, was should come forward and back the jammed, and hundreds of ladies vied in enthusiasm with the men. The atmosphere was cold, but the general feeling was warm. So were the speechspeakers commended the street railway employes and denounced the company. THE KEYNOTE OF THE OBJEC-

TIONS RAISED was that the request for a hearing of the employes had been refused; and, that nothing fairer than the demands made by the men could have been asked, was the general comment.

The street railway motormen and conductors congregated, before the meeting, at Labor Hall on Dufferin avenue. Shortly before 8 o'clock, they formed in double file, fellow-conductors and motormen in pairs, and were es-corted to the rink by a volunteer band of about 20 pieces. The line of march was south on Maitland to Dundas street, west to Richmond street, north to Queen's avenue, thence to Princess Rink. All along the route the streets were crowded, and the strikers were cheered vigorously and often. procession stretched out to consideralength. 84 men in uniform being in line, besides many without uniforms. Following the band at the head was a carriage containing Mesers. R. Orr, of Detroit, secretary of the International Association; Joseph T. Marks, president of the Trades and Labor Council; H. T. Smith, ex-superintendent of the ondon Street Railway Company, and Mr. R. Westby. Several of the strikers were on duty at the meeting as ushers, and were unable to be in line.

THE STRIKERS GET AN OVATION. When the men reached the rink they were greeted with cheer after cheer. The majority of the audience rose to their feet, and the ovation was kept up all the time the men were taking their seats in the center of the hall.

ON THE PLATFORM.

The platform was built at the center of the east side, and among those on it were: Mayor Wilson, Col. Leys, ex-Mayor Little, T. D. Hodgens, M.P.P. for East Middlesex, Rev. J. W. Pedley, Rev. George Gilmore, Rev. W. J. Ford, ex-Mayors George Taylor and E. T. Essery, Dr. Roome, ex-M.P., Ald. Graham, Cooper, Wilkey, Dreaney, and Douglass, Messrs. H. T. J. T. Marks, F. Plant, W. Hunter, W. Burleigh, R. Westby, S. Grigg, W. H. Bartram, ex-Ald. J. Fitzgerald, H. B. Ashplant, and W. D. Mahone and R. Orr, of Detroit, president and secretary of the International Street Railway Employes' Association

The Speeches MAYOR WILSON.

Mayor Wilson was given a rousing ovation when he assumed the duties of chairman at 8:15 o'clock. The meeting had been called, he said, at the request of a large number of citizens, who wished that an opportunity be given to discuss the grievances of the street car employes. He would endeavor to place before his hearers, the two sides

Fully 5,000 Persons Crowd | car company first. The company had received from the city, five years ago, and electric franchise. They promised many things, some of which they had not carried out. They had done much, he admitted, by which the citizens were benefited. But some things they had done were not a credit to the manager at the present time. The speaker was sorry to say anything against the manager. He was but the servant of the company, and there was something behind his action to be con-sidered. That the company had tried Moral and Financial Support to give London a good service was all that could be said in their favor. They and, looking towards the phalanx of uniformed men in the center of the audience, he said, "and they are as fine-looking a lot of street railway men as we need have in London." (Great applause.) "Every citizen should be proud of the action of the men," he continued. "They have tried in every Rev. W. J. Ford, Rev. J. W. Pedley way, peaceably, to have the dispute settled. They organized a committee and tried to see Mr. Carr. But what was the reply? 'We don't receive committees. We will receive you individually. Then they sent a representative to request Mr. Carr to arbitrate. meeting on behalf of the striking tration? Their representative said to street railway employes was announced Mr. Carr, 'All we want is that you of clothes every year. A Voice—Every six months.

Another Voice—No.

"Well, we'll say each year. The company has enough sins to answer for. (Laughter.) He went on to say that an overcoat and cap made the cost to the men for a complete uniform $25. As to the wages paid the mayor said sixteen men got $150 per day; ten men A great many of these poor employes have families, and $2 55 per week is not much divided between half a dozen people." This was greeted with cries of "How much does Carr get?" The mayor dwelt upon the modera-tion and forbearance of the men in their dispute. They had tried every way possible, and failing to get redress themselves, they had applied to the council, and every member of the council had stood by them. The speaker had not throughout the year, he said, been more proud of the council than he was that night, when they said they would see "fair play." "Every citizen should give them his support," he said. There's a monopoly crushing these men. Let us come forward and say they can't do it." (Prolonged cheering and cries of "More.")

REV. W. J. FORD.

Rev. W. J. Ford, pastor of the Centennial Methodist Church, showed a keen interest in the strikers. He was in sympathy with the workingmen, he said, and was not ashamed to wear one of their badges. A stranger had accosted the speaker on the street during the day, on seeing the badge, and contemptuously told him that if he was one of that crowd he ought to sell his clothes and give the proceeds to poor men."You want no second-hand clothes," the speaker went on; "you want a fair wage for a fair day's work. (Hear, hear.) Your rights have not been respected. Every man has a right to be heard. If I had had a single spark of sympathy for the company it would have been blotted out when they refused to hear the men. Under British law the greatest criminal has that

The speaker had no quarrel with rich men as such, but he found fault with them crushing poor men. The members of this corporation had no right to large dividends for themselves, and to grind the men as they did. It was like smoking out a lot of bees to get at the honey. He did not believe in it. The men were unable to properly support their families upon the wages quoted. The street railway company was making money, and they should distribute it. The men were not asking for too much. He was on the side of the of the question—the side of the street workingmen every time, and in this city were with them. Mr. Ford eloquently described the trend of the struggle between labor and capital, and said that if it went on it would end in a revolution, In the French revolution the very degrathe French revolution the very degradation the people had been crowded down to made them the more fierce. The speaker was proud of the street railway employes. They had acted in moderation, and deserved credit for doing no injury to property. There was legal redress. British law was a good thing when one got it, but a bad thing when it got the one. He advised them to stand by the thought that ed them to stand by the thought that there was a God above who would stand by them. (Applause.) REV. MR. PEDLEY. Mr. Pedley said he was glad to be on the platform to express his sympathy in the present trouble. He was always on the side of the workingmen when they were in the right, and this was a case of that kind. He had thought the day of strikes had passed, and that better methods would prevail, by reasoning and arbitration. Arbitration was the enlightened method of settling such matters. "I am fully convinced that there was no other course open for the men-our brethren the one they have taken. think I am in my proper place standing on this platform defending these men." He hoped that the men would be suc-cessful in the strike. He never knew the men were working under such "When we ride on the street cars again—if we ever do"—(Applause)—said the speaker, "I hope we won't have to ask ourselves if the motorman or conductor is being paid $2, $3 or $5 a week." It was a splendid tribute to the men to have the sympathy of the citizens with them. He believed every citizen outside of those interested in the company, was in hearty sympathy with the men. He was glad to be able to express his opinion against a great wrong. Any influence he could give would be cheerfully rendered for justice to the oppressed.

COL. LEYS, M.P.P. The genial colonel, in opening his remarks, said he was sure that success for the men was at hand. When the ladies were interested—as they were in the present instance-success was certain. (Laughter.) The previous speakers and left very little for him to say, but he would state with emphasis—"If Manager Carr is the man he is reputed to be, he should get a notice, giving han so many hours to leave our city." (Tremendous applause.) I don't think the citizens of London want that kind of timber. Any man who wants to put the iron heel of tyranny on good and honest men should be given the cold shoulder. In no city on this continent that I have passed through in my extensive travels, have the street railway companies had a more respectable, ef-of men than we have on our cars. The colonel said he hoped that every citizen, man or woman, boy or girl, would stand by the men, and until they got justice WALK. "Even go further than that," he said, "keep within the laws, but don't allow a car to be brought out." Manager Carr is a tool in the hands of a combine. That combine is not going to run our city, and tread down the honest citizens. hope the company's franchise will be taken away. The stockholders should be ashamed to face the public. They are the machines that run Mr. Carr. The citizens should stand by the men until they get a fair day's pay for a fair day's work. "If necessary, I will go out on strike with the men," he said. "Let every citizen put his hand sixteen men got $150 per day; ten and got $142 per day; 41 men averaged $558 per week—(hisses and cries of "Shame!")—"and twelve of the men," the mayor went on, "averaged $255 per week. (More hisses and uproar.)

ficient, courteous and honorable class

taking his seat. EX-MAYOR LITTLE. Ex-Mayor Little was greeted with great cheering. "When the committee representing the employes called on me," he began, "the thought flashed through my mind-'Have we a right, as citizens, to interfere in this matter-to meddle in other people's business?' But it did not take me a second to make up my mind that we have a right. The company is enjoying a franchise conferred by the city, and they are expected to make returns for the city's expenditure on the streets." He referred to the return in the way of cheap tickets, and said he believed there was not a citizen but would be willing to pay more for street car tickets, or more taxes, if there were no other way of getting better wages for the men. He believed they would be willing to pay 10 cents for their tickets sooner than the men should go on with the wages hey had been receiving.

If the statement of the men were correct, there was not a single man or woman with a heart in them who ployes. If it were not correct, why did eind see such wages as $2 58 a week under the circumstances, to assume its men. correctness, and stand by the men in men of capital were capable of doing every way possible. (Cheers.)

As one who used the street cars a mony of the previous speakers in favor of the men. Without going out of his way to compliment the company, he would say that he did not think they could get together a better class of men. They were obliging and attentive. The position of motorman was of more importance than some people thought. He had tried it, and would not take $2 58 a day. (A voice-A week.) -Laughter.-No, nor a day, Mr. Little went on. A motorman was always in hot water because of the constant danger of running into someone or something. As to the conductors, he said, it was not right to ask men to handle money and work for $2 58 a week. He believed they were honest, straightforward men, but the company put in the way of those men a temptation they had no right to do.

Mr. Little said he had tried in a quiet way to bring about a settlement of the strike. He had been in communication with Mr. Orr and with the street railway company. Mr. Everett, he believed, would be ready to meet the men in a fair way, and as he was to be here today, there was a strong probability of a settlement in a very short time. But, if the company persisted in being unreasonable, there were provisions in the bylaw to make them come to time. (Cheers.) Harsh words would only make a settlement more difficult, and he would say no more on this line. Speaking of the men, Mr. Little said: manage, and give them pecuniary assistance if necessary." (Great cheering.) The strike was an unpleasant thing for all parties, but it would no doubt soon be all over. (Applause.)

with the hearty support of all the cit-case the strength and wealth of the izens present. It would be seconded by ex-Ald. F. J. Fitzgerald. Mr. Essery then proceeded to read the resolution,

Whereas, the London Street Railway Company's employes are engaged in a struggle for their just and honest rights, therefore be it resolved that we, the citizens of London in mass meeting assembled, indorse the position they have taken, and pledge to them our moral assistance and support to the end."

The resolution was received with storm of applause.

Two reasons why the resolution should be supported by the citizens, the speaker said, were that the men might be able to support their families properly; and, secondly, that the men have acted like diplomats in the present trouble. He would not call Mr. Carr any bad names. He was a representative of a syndicate, "and in the name of God," said Mr. Essery, "I ask you, what does he expect when he refuses to listen to the men of the labor syndicate? Mr. Carr is a servant of an association, and the men belong to an association just as honorable. If Mr. Carr wanted to meet the men individually, he should throw up his job, and meet the men on any street corner, as any private citizen would do. The railway company did not come in and build up with the city, but came in when London was a great city. They saw a chance for a good grab, and got the best streets of London for nothing. Citizens would well remember the trouble of 1893, when the tracks were ripped up. The company said they would get an injunction, but the council started at the other end, and the company had to foot all costs. It was going to be the same in this case. The men were starting at the other end, and the company was again losing money. We want the company to understand that if they want honest and upright men to work for them, they must pay a fair wage. We, as patrons of the road, should demand this. They must learn to treat men as men, and not as slaves. If they don't the citizens will refuse to ride until the men's demands are fairly met." He would like to ask the directors of the company what they would say of a man who would ask

Mr. Essery, in closing, said the resolution spoke for itself, and he called upon everyone to stand by the men as long as necessity required.

The resolution was carried with enthusiasm and by a hearty handclapping. MR. T. D. HODGENS, M.P.P.

Mr. T. D. Hodgens, M.P.P., member for East Middlesex, regretted very much to have to be called upon to address an assemblage of this nature. It was no doubt one of the greatest blots on the city that had ever been witnessed. He was satisfied that the large assemblage present was in sympathy with the employes. All companies were not far-seeing. They entrusted a certain man to run the business. If that man is not on friendly relations with his fellow-employes he is not working in the interests company. This he had found out by personal experience. When the men. were refused arbitration methods, it was very unfair. On receiving an invitation to attend this meeting the speaker's mind was somewhat in doubt; but as he had given some of the men letters of introduction to Manager Carr, he felt it his duty to come forward to show his sympathy. He was very glad, indeed, that none of the men on strike took part in the disorders of the day. This is a matter of rights-the company have their rights, and the men want theirs. If called upon the men should not give in one iota until they have received would fall to sympathize with the em- their rights. Men would not stand by not the company deny it? It would be better for the strikers, citizens and company to have the matter amicably settled. ly in sympathy with the men, and a wage under $1 25 a day was not The men had right on their side, and he had no doubt they would be successful in carrying the day. EX-MAYOR TAYLOR. Ex-Mayor Geo. Taylor said he was right at home on the platform he stood on just now—the workingman's platform-as he had always been one of their number. There was no written provision in the company's franchise as regarded wages, but it was understood that a fair wage would be paid. "Why shouldn't they be just as well paid as the police, school teachers and city officials," said the speaker. Their positions were responsible. They have to be efficient men, or valuable lives will be lost through accidents. We should expect a company that has received a franchise to pay their men a respectable wage—one that would give them unsuccessful, and action was taken by the men in consequence. The speaker did not intend to heap abuse upon the street railway company. He was the representative of an organization which was just as much a business organization as the street railway company, and he invited discussion with them as such. Let them come on the platform. Failing in their efforts to secure arbitration, the men had referred the matter to the highest tribunal in the country-the people. (Applause.) They should be the arbitrators in this case The mass meeting, he continued, had done good. The people should know that those who had in their hands day by day the citizens' lives, worked for $2 58 a week. Mr. Mahone then told of his personal experiences as a street railway employe, and some amusing stories to illustrate the long hours they put in and the nature of the work. The speaker went on to say that he was informed that one of the chief things which stood in the way of a settlement was that the company objected to re-recognize this association. He thought it strange that the company should make such objection. Mr. Everett had recognized the union in Detroit, where the men got 21 cents an hour and nine hours a day. Surely the men of London were worth 161% cents an hour. Mr. Mahone spoke of the charges made against the employes for break-ages. If a trolley jumped the wire and was broken, he had been told the charge was $4. The cost, he said, was much less.

A Voice—There was one jumped today. (Laughter.)

For a broken headlight the employes were charged $5, also very much more than cost, he said. London was the first place the speaker heard of men being required to lay off to look up accident reports-to lay off at their own expense and save the company from damage suits. Then, speaking of arbitration, he said: "How much better it would have been for the people if arbitration had been brought about. It is one of the things we are asking of railways all over the continent."

About organization, he said everyone knows that to a corporation an individual amounts to no more than a grain of sand. The only hope for labor is through organization. (Applause.) The men have asked for arbitration, not for their own protection only, but for the company's. If the company feel that the union is wrong in any matter, they can then refer to a just and final tribunal. These were the demands of the men, and the people were asked to decide. They were en-gaged in an industrial war—a battle for the toilers. Strikers were sometimes denounced, but this was a "strike" age, he said. Merchants, when "strike" price. They held out for a certain figure. "Labor is the only commodity on which the buyer, not the seller, sets the price. (Applause.) And when we refuse to agree to the price they call us 'strikers.' " The business situation which confronted the workers was that corporations employing labor were cold business concerns, prepared to buy labor as cheap as they could get it. And the only way for it to the highest bidder." The speaker wittily referred to Moses as the leader of a brickmakers' strike in Egypt. Pharaoh, he said, was not as wise as modern capitalists, or he would not | have been drowned. The capitalists would have called out the militia or got an injunction. (Laughter.) He drew a graphic picture of the army of men in the large cities ground down by the corporations, and touching upon the growth of trusts and monopolies, the speaker said they were crushing the individual business men and swallowing them up, so that their condition was fast becoming no better than the toil-

After thanking the ladies for their presence, the speaker quoted astonishing figures to show the prices paid, in the large cities, to women workers, and referred to the conditions which consequently followed. It was organized labor, he said, which was doing more than anything else to protect the virtue of the women wage-earners. In conclusion, Mr. Mahone strongly praised Mayor Wilson. It was the first time, he said, that he had met a mayor courageous enough to come forward and preside over a meeting of the strikers. (Prolonged applause.)

A few minutes later, a solitary tree beneath which he was sitting was struck by another shell, which killed two and wounded three men. Paget, who had been in a dozen campaigne, took it all as a matter of course, and assisted one of the wounded men out of the range of the bullets from the side of a steep and high hill. "Several years ago I was taken ill with a severe pain in the small of my back. Following this I suffered very much with urinary trouble, sleeplessness, etc., and had to quit work. Medical aid proved of little avail, and I was in a most distressing condition. To add to this an almost unbearable pain ran down the back of my neck.

"I went from bad to worse until I was obliged to take to my bed, where I remained a helpless invalid for some time. At this juncture I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and sent my boy to the drug store for a box of them, and began using them. They seemed to act directly on the weakened organs, and I was at once convinced that they were the only remedy to remove all kidney troubles. I continued taking them and day by day grew better. I gained in strength; the pain left me; I began to sleep soundly, and felt brighter and more energetic all the time. I am now better than I have been for years, and consider Doan's Kidney Pills the most excellent remedy for kidney weakness, for to them I owe my present good health and happiness.

"She Carries Her Heart on Her Sleeve"

What a boon to many a man or woman if this were literally so—How many spirits are broken because this particular organ is shackled by disease—and yet how many times has Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart brushed against the grim reaper and robbed him of his victim. Diseases of the heart are by far the most treacherous of ailments which afflict humanity-ruthless to old and young alike-not insidious but violent, for when the heart fails the whole system suffers violence. Discussing causes here will not console the suffering one. The one great yearn of the heart-sickened patient is how to get relief and a cure. Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart stands preeminently to-day as the star of hope to sufferers from heart trouble, and so far past the experimental period that thousands to-day proclaim, in no uncertain sound, the belief that were it not for this great remedy they world have long ago passed into the great beyond.

Most eminent doctors, whom heart cases have baffled, have tested Dr. Agnew's claims, and to-day they prescribe it in their practice as the quickest and safest heart remedy known to medical science. What are the symptoms? Palpitation, fluttering, shortness of breath, weak and irregular pulse, swelling of feet and ankles, pain in the left side, chilly sensations, fainting spells, uneasiness in sleeping, dropsical tendency and as many more indications that the heart is deranged. Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is a heart specific; and no case too acute to find relief from it inside of thirty minutes—a powerful cure.

MRS. JNO. FITZPATRICK, of Gananoque, Ont., after having been treated by eminent physicians for heart disease of five years' standing, was discharged from the hospital as a hopeless incurable. She suffered from acute pain and paipitation, her feet and ankles swollen, and there was every tendency to the dropsical form of heart disease, but the lady procured Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart as she declared, as a last hope. One dose relieved her of a very acute spasm in less than thirty minutes, and three bottles cured her—not a symptom of the trouble remaining

London, Saturday, Oct. 29, 1898.

Canada Stands by Britain.

A recent number of La Minerve (Montreal), the leading Conservative newspaper printed in the French language in Canada, says:

"Only one thing in our opinion can the English in changing the government at the moment when the Fashoda war. Already the difficulties into which the French Government have been drawn have led the English to comcould not tolerate. Lord Salisbury has attempted intimidation towards France and the English press supports him with effrontery. The English will admit neither discussion or arbitration. They simply order the recall of the Marchand mission, failing which they are ready to make war. This recalls the course of the United States in reference to Spain. Right is nothing for the Anglo-Saxon at the moment he believes himself the strongest. In the present case right is evidently on the side of France.

Then La Minerve proceeds to argue to the extent of half a column that France is in the right . nd Great Britain in the wrong.

La Minerve will find that the course which it has adopted is not good policy in Canada. This is a British Dominion. Many years ago, France attempted in the Valley of the Ohio what she has attempted in the Valley of the Niger, and is now attempting in the Valley of the Nile. She undertook to take all the rear country belonging to the British colonies. Under the pretense that she had discovered the Ohio River, which could no more give her a right to the country between the Mississippi and the summit of the Allegheny Mountains than if one of her fur traders had traveled through a country in which no river flows, she claimed this "hinterland." The result of this French effort to grasp parts of the country behind the British provinces was that she lost all her territories upon the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence, Today she is trying precisely the same thing in Fashoda, and there is little room to doubt that if she does not withdraw, what befell her during the last century in North America, will, at the close of this century, happen in Africa.

Great Britain is in the possession of Egypt. Her interests in Egypt were paramount, and to prevent the re-establishment of barbarism and the destruction of British subjects, Great Britain intervened. She asked France to join her, but the republic refused. mandism conquered the southern portion of Egyptian territory by the conquests of the Mahdi. Egypt lost the provinces of Khordofan, Darfur and Bahr-el-Ghazal. The British and the Egyptian Government, at great expense, began more than two years ago the war for the reconquest of the territories which had been lost. Until the battle of Omdurman, Fachoda was in the possession of the Khalifa. The marching into that country of Major Marchand with eight French explorers accompanying him, could neither acquire for him or for France any interest in the territory over which neither at the time had the sovereignty, and against which France was engaged in no war. Major Marchand and his eight compatriots might as well claim the sovereignty over Cairo, should they march through it, in consequence of having done so, as to claim any jurisdiction on behalf of France in Fashoda, because they had succeeded in reaching that point without losing their lives. It is unquestionably true that had it not been for the defeat of the Khalifa, at Omdurman, and the marching of the Sirder up the White Nile, Marchand and his few followers would have been exterminated by the dervishes. The sovereignty of the Khalifa prevailed over that region until the battle of Omdurman, and on his defeat there succeeded the sovereignty of Britain and of Egypt.

La Minerve will discover that the people of Canada, on the eve of a great crisis, are in no mood to look with indifference upon a newspaper spouting treason. If our contemporary wishes to cast in its fortunes with the republic, It had better transfer itself to some ection of the globe in which the authority of the French Republic exists. This is a portion of the British Empire, and the people of Canada intend that whatever its political vicissitudes, it shall remain indissolubly associated with that Empire whose authority was established here 140 years ago: whose people continue to flow into the country, and whose capital is being invested here for the development of

When a people are oppressed and misgoverned, they may be justified in fighting against oppression and in talking treason, but when those who are unsuccessful in arms are put on a footing of equality with those who were victorious, when, under the liberal regime of the victors, they are made joint rulers in the government of the country, they had better abstain from preaching treason.

The Mail and Empire extracts comfort from the East Wellington election because the Conservative vote was lifted by 300. As the Liberal vote was lifted by 600, the ratio of comfort is two to one in the Liberals' favor.

A Grand Old Man.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has been delivering a series of charges dealing with controverted points in the doctrine and practice of the Church of England, which show remarkable vigor in a man of his years. That was a difficult thing to do in these critical times, when Sir William Harcourt is warned by Lord Hallfax lest the fate of Titus Oates overtake him. The archbishop has not pleased all parties, and much that he has said will have save the ministry; that is the well caused pain to many earnest memfounded fear of becoming the sport of bers of his own communion. This, however, is not our business. We are not directly concerned with theological critical stage, and may even lead to or ecclasiastical controversy, but we cannot withhold our tribute of aimiration to an old man who rises to a great occasion and shows that he is mit insolences which a government, great occasion and shows that he is strong and conscious of its dignity, by no means dead. The skill displayed in these addresses is great and their temper is admirable. In his early days he gave evidence of thoughtfulness and courage, and these have not forsaken him in riper years and in the midst of great responsibilities. Without entering into the merits of the controversy we must say that "His Grace of Canterbury" defended in a dignified way the action of the bishops and appealed to the English sense of justice, so that the law of the church might be loyally observed and a large measure of liberty procured. It is not likely that these "charges" will at once banish the "crisis," but it will be well if they do something to elevate the tone of the discussion.

Tesla's Colossal Scheme.

If Nikola Tesla's latest theory works out in practice, the achievement will astonish a world which has almost ceased to be surprised by any scientific marvel, so fast have wonders crowded upon it in these days. Yet the last generation would have ridiculed the possibility of things which are now commonplace. Tesla, whose inventions have already won him fame, vouches for the practicability of his latest scheme, which he outlines in the last number of the Electrical Review. His work, he says, has already passed the stage of mere laboratory experiment, and is ready for a test on an industrial Briefly, Tesla holds that unlimited electrical power can be conveyed hearty sympathy with the members without wires to any distance of this congregation. They have exhibited an admirable spirit in the face of provocation, and as far as an Tesla's invention is based on the fact that rarefied air is a true conductor of electricity. He conceived the idea of points of the published on the published ed facts, they have been abundantly justified. The late pastor himself freely acknowledged this much when taken to a great altitude, where it to several matters. would be discharged into the rarefied air. At the receiving point, which might be any distance away, this current would be captured, as it were, by an apparatus at a like altitude, which would bring down the power to earth for general use. "This latest advance of the electrician in the possibilities of his science," says the Electrical Review, "will, if successful on a large scale, open up unlimited sources of practically costless power. The success of his efforts means that power from such sources as Niagara will become available in any part of the world, regardless of distance."

Tesla may be only indulging in a daring flight of scientific fancy, but if the problem of transmitting great electrical energy to great distances is solved, whether by Tesla's plan or any other, it means much for inland cities like London, which are far removed from natural water power.

Public sentiment is strong enough without stale eggs.

Boycott is an ugly word. Still there is nothing to prevent people walking if they choose.

The street railway employes of London have always been regarded as good, law-abiding citizens, and they are living up to their reputation.

Col. Waring, the American sanitary engineer, reports that it will cost $22,-000,000 to cleanse Havana and its harbor. As Spain has left Uncle Sam such a legacy of filth, it is not surprising that he refused the additional bequest of the Cuban debt.

J. J. Foy, Q.C., is credited with writing the letter signed "Lex," which pointed out the necessity of proroguing the Legislature. If this surmise is correct, the discovery was an afterthought on Mr. Foy's part, or he surely would have announced it before the end of the session.

Hon. J.C. Patterson, now Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, formerly a member of the late Conservative Government, pays a deserved compliment to Lord Aberdeen and gives a stinging rebuke to his Excellency's asailants. Reputable Conservatives have refused to join the campaign of slander against the Governor-General.

The meeting last night will hasten the end of the street car trouble. The directors of the company are shrewd business men, but they did not calculate sufficiently on public sentiment as a factor of the situation. Now that they have been enabled to measure the force and effect of that sentiment, we believe they will admit their mistake and will sack to repair it. The

ENGLAND'S GREATEST HERO

A Generous Tribute From an Americas Paper-Nelson's Inspiring Career.

[Chicago Times-Herald, Oct. 21.] While the air resounds with the naval victories of Dewey, of Sampson and of Schley, and comparisons are being, made, not unjustly, between the feats of our admirals and those of England's greatest sea warrior, Horatio Nelson, it might be well to remember that today is the 93rd anniversary of the greatest sea fight in history, the battle of Trafalgar, in which Nelson destroyed the combined fleets of France and Spain, and established England's supremacy on the sea. Nelson's career is one of the romances of history. A midshipman at 12, a post-captain at 21, a commodore at 37, and an admiral at 39, his genius for war and his undaunted valor have made his name the most renowned in the annals of naval warfare. He is the ideal sea commander, an examplar not only for English but for American

It is pleasing to record that his best and most appreciative biography has been written by our own Capt. Mahan, the most authoritative writer on sea warfare of modern times.

With Nelson's great battles, St. Vincent, the Nile, Copenhagen and Trafalgar, the world is familiar. They are twice-told tales, and yet, like all feats of courage and skill and daring, the world never tires of their recital.

From March, 1805, until Nelson watched and waited for Villeneuve, the admiral in command of the French and Spanish fleets. He chased him to the West Indies and back again, but the French admiral eluded him. and finally sought shelter in Cadiz. In the last days of September Nelson was off Cadiz with a fleet of 33 or 34 sail of the line, while Villeneuve had a deet of about the same force. But Nelson, knowing that the Frenchman would not venture to fight on equal terms, actually sent away several of Minard's Liniment, lumberman's friend his own ships in order to induce Villeneuve to come out and bring on an engagement.

On the 20th of October Villeneuve put to sea, in obedience to a peremptory command of Napoleon, who stigmatized him as a coward for fearing to meet the English admiral. He had 33 ships of the line, and Nelson had by 27. At daybreak on the 21st, Villeneuve appeared off Cape Trafalgar, and soon thereafter the English fleet, in two columns, made the attack that Nelson long had planned. "England expects every man to do his duty," was the signal that flew from Nelson's flagship as the vessels moved into action, and the responsive cheers from the British fleet carried with them the doom of Villeneuve. In the battle that ensued only a few French and Spanish ships escaped destruction, but the splendid victory was dearly bought with the death of Nelson himself. He died the hero he had lived, and now, after almost a century, his memory is still revered wherever the English language is spoken, as the greatest of naval heroes.

The French Commander Reaches Khartoum.

Press Comment on the Fashoda Situation.

Balfour Speaks of Britain's Egyptian Policy-The "Protectorate" Report Denied.

Cairo, Oct. 29. - A boat, recently dispatched to Fashoda, has reached Khartoum on its return journey, and with Major Marchand on board. The major deemed it necessary to personally bring to Cairo the unfinished portion of his report of his explorations. Capt. Germain was left in command of the French mission at Fashoda. Major Marchand left Fashoda on Sunday, and arrived at Khartoum yesterday morning. He will start for Cairo today. As the other Frenchmen remain at Fashoda, Major Marchand's departure from there is not regarded as a settlement of the question as to the possession of that place, which is in dispute between Great Britain and France.

The French foreign office has received a dispatch from its diplomatic agency at Cairo, confirming the reported arrival of Major Marchand at Khar-

Marchand would be recalled from Fashoda, but on neither side of the serious attention paid to the rumor that England will declare a protectorate over Egypt.

The Paris correspondent of the London Standard says: I have excellent authority for the assertion that Major Marchand left Fashoda on his own initiative, but that he will demand permission to withdraw the mission, since his men are dying of hunger and disease. The special correspondent of the Daily News at Omdurman tele-"I have reason to believe that Major Marchand is waiting for instruction to withdraw the French mission from Fashoda."

Today the preliminary investigation will be held in the police magistrat's office, at 2 o'clock.

According to the evidence a bitter feeling seems to have been entertained by Beattie against his father-in-law Cox, and the other members of his family, with the exception of the unmarried daughter. Like between unmarried daughter, Lily, between whom and the deceased there is every reason to believe that a strong attachment existed. On several occasions Beattie had been known to vent threats against Cox, at times going Warlike Preparations in Progress in midnight, the son-in-law called at Cox's house, and got his sister-in-law leave the house with him and go to his residence, some three miles away. This action had the effect of entirely upsetting Mrs. Cox, the girl's mother, who became ill from the worry incident to the event, and the girl was coaxed to return, which she did on Monday morning. Beattie on Monday came over and endeavored to have the girl go back with him, but by this time she had come to a sense the wrongfulness of her action on Saturday night, and refused to go with him. When she returned she omitted to bring a portion of her wearing apparel with her, and on Wednesday the father started for Beattie's farm with the avowed object of obtaining the clothing. The result was the fracas between the two men, and the shooting of Beattle. Mrs. Beattle heard her husband threaten her father that he would have the latter's heart's blood, and saw him raise his hand and spring at her father. Shortly after she heard a shot fired and Proceedings of the Court Void of Sensation-Pathetic Letter From Dreyfus.

Paris, Oct. 29.-Yesterday's proceedings at the court of cassation were void of sensation. The only emotion caused ensued upon the reading of a pathetic letter from Dreyfus. A significant point was the revelation of the fact that Gen. De Boisdeffre gave orders, after the Dreyfus case was supposed to be closed, for the dossier, containing the bordereau, to be burned, and expressed surprise afterwards that his orders had not been executed. Thus far the war office has not been represented in the present proceedings, and there is still but little hope of the secret dossier being produced, especi-

In moderate circles, where a serious effort is being made to discover the truth in the Dreyfus affair, the impression lent by the report of M. Bard, official reporter of the court of cassation, and by the requisitoire (petition) of M. Manau, the procurator-general, is profound, painful and discouraging. The thought which weighs like a pall on the country seems to be a reluctance to believe in the complete innocence of Dreyfus, because such a belief would involve such terrible censure of those responsible, knowingly or unknowingly, for his

THE DEATH

Describe His Condition.

London, Oct. 29 .- The coroner's inquest into the death of Mr. Harold Frederic, the newspaper correspondent and novelist, who died at Henley, Surrey, on last Wednesday, was resumed on Wednesday. Mrs. Mills, the leader of the Christian Scientists, who treated Mr. Frederic according to the peculiar methods of that sect, was called as a witness. She is a robust, swarthy, middle-aged American. She testified concerning the treatment which she applied to Mr. Frederic. She said she did not allow patients to take drugs or a doctor's orders, because they could not swing between matter and mind. The patient could not describe the physical condition of Mr. Frederic. She had not diagnosed his material sickness. Mrs. Mills told the coroner that his God was finite, and her God infinite. If she should fall down and break her leg, God would take care of the fractured limb.

Lawyer Mathew, on behalf of Mr.

Frederic's executors, cross-examined the witness, and got answers similar to the foregoing. He warned her that she was in a serious position.

Mrs. Mills said she charged her patients a guinea a week if they could afford to pay that sum. She had no idea that taking Mr. Frederic for a drive a few days before his death was the worst thing that could have been done at the time.

The taking of testimony has not yet been finished. The inquest was adjourned for a week. The coroner read Mr. Frederic's will, which is dated Aug. 17. One of the witnesses of the will testified that Mr. Frederic was perfectly sane at the time the will was witnessed.

GETTING ALONG

The U. S. Peace Commissioners at Paris Making Some Progress.

Washington, Oct. 28.-The president was enabled to lay before the cabinet today very encouraging reports from Paris regarding to the progress of the peace negotiations. The administration now fully believes that the negotiations in be concluded much sooner than was expected from the outlook a few days ago. It can be stated authoritatively that the commissioners have not yet actually begun the discussion of the Philippines question, and that it will not be taken up until next week. Since the Spaniards have found that the American commissioners mean exactly what they say, and that their presentation of the side of the United States is really an ultimatum, the use-less, prolonged debate, it is said, has become apparent to the Spanish, and it is now believed that the Philippines discussion will be less protracted than expected some days ago.

The recent action of the United States Government in intimating that the negotiations were proceeding much too slowly, has had its effect upon the Spanish commissioners, and they are not likely to debate the remaining propositions to the length they did the settlement of the Cuban debt. The United States has not assumed or guaranteed the so-called municipal debt of Cuba or Cuban municipalities but it is expected that such debts will be paid by the municipalities incurring them, for by no reasoning could they be charged upon Spain.

The United States Government, it is said in official circles, would look upon any attempt at evading the payment of such debts as dishonest, and whatever government is established in Cuba will be expected to see that these obigations are carried out in good faith. Moreover, some of the bonds of Cuban municipalities are held by citizens of the United States, and States might insist that the investments of her citizens in such securities are made good. The state department has no information as to the amount of these municipal liabilities.

DOCTOR SENT DOWN

A Jury at Barrie Found Him Guilty of Wronging a Girl.

Barrie, Oct. 29 .- D. B. Johnston, a traveling spectacle vendor and eye doctor, from Toronto, was given three years in the penitentiary Justice Meredith for criminal assault on a young girl about 15 years of age. The prisoner took the girl away from her home, near Thornton, on Aug. 21, telling her mother that he would take her to Toronto and get her a place. Instead of doing this he drove north towards Hillsdale, and it was on the road that he is alleged to have committed the offense.

The prisoner denied the story point-He was defended by T. Robinette. and William Lount, Q.C. conducted the prosecution. The judge. in his charge, indicated that he did not think the assault had been committed, but the jury decided otherwise, and after being out over two hours, brought in a verdict of guilty shortly after midnight. ## A NOVEL RAILWAY

A German Electric Road Which Suspends the Cars in Air.

The Road Is Built Over a River-Passengers Between Elberfeld and Barmen Will Ride Above the Waters of the Wupper at the Rate of 25 Miles an Hour.

The off proposed scheme of an electric aerial railway, by which the passengers could be shot through the air at a high rate of speed in a car suspended on an elevated framework, is at last to be realized in a German road between Elberfeld and Barmen. Of all electric roads yet built or building this is certainly the most unique, surpassing the impractical 'amphibious' line at Brighton and the Boynton monorail system at Longport, Elevated electric lines have become quite common during the past three years, but the idea of suspending the car from an overhead framework instead of allowing it to run upon it is startlingly radical and a construction not calculated to inspire courage in the hearts of timid trav-plers, despite the fact that it is claimed to be quite as safe as the ordinary method of running cars on elevated systems.

Were it not for the fact that this system is now being constructed by a well-known German firm and that the road is already well under way toward compleion, one might look askance at so revolutionizing a method of rapid transit, which is only once removed from flying.

Local circumstances are such, however, that the only available route for the road was over the bed of the River Wupper, a connecting link between the two towns. At first it was suggested that single pillars be erected in the centre of the stream and an elevated platform be erected thereon upon which to lay tracks. This, however, would have resulted in obstructing the river channel, and was not feasible, owing to tides and heights of bridges, etc. Finally the suspended aerial system shown in the illustration was adopted.

Two inclined girders of structural steel, placed as shown and supported on specially prepared foundations are located in the river banks. These are spaced along the banks from 60 to 65 feet apart, and held in position by means of a series of beams and trusses to which the rails are attached. This construction is followed throughout nearly the entire eight miles of the road. The height is considerably greater than that of the ordinary elevated road, as the bottoms of the cars are 16 feet above the bridges to be crossed. Each car seats from 50 to 60 people, and is reached by means of iron stairways leading up to a platform. These cars, as before stated, are hung from two rails, the axles of the wheels being supported on movable trunnions, which permits of rapid propulsion and yet ease in taking

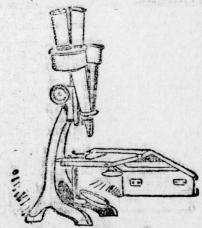

The se'ection of electricity as the motive power is a foregone conclusion, as no other form of power is so well adapted to the peculiar requirements imposed of operation, ease of control and absence of flying dirt all being of importance to the successful operation of the system. Twenty-five miles an hour is the contemplated speed. Every possible precaution has been taken to provide automatic devices so that, should the car become disabled, no serious accidents would fol-

Double-tracked throughout its length. the cost will run well up into the millions, and the unfamiliarity of the work renders progress very slow, so that it will be some menths before anything definite concerning the practicability of the scheme is known.

AN IMPROVED MICROSCOPE.

Lenses Which Permit the Inspection of Uneven Surfaces.

The microscope, as constructed heretofore, only allowed the inspection of even surfaces, and its focus was so limited that objects of any thickness had to be first prepared between glass plates or upon a flat surface to become visible at all, This quality makes it a most difficult matter to observe objects through a microscope of great enlarging power. In order to obviate this difficulty and to enable the enlarging of small bodies as well as of flat surfaces, Mr. Greenough, who is living in Paris, constructed a microscope with greater depth of focus. which has since been further improved by the optician Czapski of Jena, Ger many. Its lenses are so arranged that they will permit the inspection of uneven surfaces, and in order to make the vision more perfect two systems of lenses are provided, giving the image a strongly stereoscopic effect. As built by Greenough the i.naze was inverted, but the present form of finstrument shows the correct image, the inverted picture being turned around by prisms placed between the lenses, as in the Zeiss field glasses.

THE HUMBLE BOY.

He Bided His Time and Got Even With His Tormentors.

One midsummer term an unfledged, weak kneed youngstor presented himself at a well known public school and was immediately pounced upon by the boys and hauled off to be broken in. They practiced all the usual tricks upon him, and he bore them meekly—so meekly, in fact, that the boys were contemptuous and made scathing remarks about his effeminacy and lack of spirit.

After this he was taken to the lumber room and sternly commanded to black all the boots for the following day. The boys were supposed to attend to their own footgear, but the task generally fell to the lot of the weakest among them, and it was a favorite plan to order newcomers to do the work unaided. This particular new boy received the order resignedly and said, "Thank you, sir," quite humbly, when one of the monitors kicked him and told him to hurry along. He seemed almost overwhelmed with gratitude for the honor done to him and promised to discharge his duty manfully if he were only given sufficient time. He was therefore left to himself, and the boys went away in high feather, thanking their stars that a happy chance had sent such a willing slave to pander to their needs. An hour passed, and then it occurred to the monitor before mentioned to go and see how the new boy was getting on. He threw open the door of the lumber room, and a sight met his eyes which almost choked him.

The new boy had a white buckskin cricket boot in his hand and was busily covering it with blacking.

"You big idict, whatever are you doing?" screamed the monitor. "You're rubbing white boots instead of black ones." Yes, sir, I am," answered the new boy with studied innocence. "That's what you wished me to do, isn't it? The others are black enough, so I thought I'd get through the white ones first. I've polished 15 pairs, but they don't look very nice some-

The monitor stormed and raved, but he could not renew the color of the cricket and tennis boots, and their owners had to make the best of a bad job. They've given up trying to score off guileless new boys now .- Chums.

Miss Mabel Jenness, whose wonderful system for the correct physical training of women and girls is so well known all over the North American continent, is a firm believer in the virtues of Paine's Coery Compound. When overworked by her multitudin-ous duties, she always recuperates and strengthens her system by using Paine's Celery Compound. In a letter to Wells & Richardson Co., proprietors of Paine's Celery Compound, she preparation. "I have not been able to take one day's rest since I returned from my long, hard western trip. I am sure were it not for Paine's Celery Compound, which has a tonic effect, I should not be able to keep up and work hard. "I recommended Paine's Celery Compound to a friend who dined with us yesterday and on leaving here she went and bought a bottle. I shall do all I can for it, for I believe in it."

The Country Has a Little Monroe Doctrine of Its Own.

A Very Intelligent and Progressive Man Who Rules Over a Very Progressive Republic That Is But Little Known to Many-How the President Is Paid-Government by Party.

The President of Chile is one of the progressive men of a progressive people. He is the head of the liberal or progres. sive party, and is at the front of every movement to make Chile prosperous. He comes of one of the oldest families of Chile, his father having been one of the most popular presidents of the past. He is a very rich man and his personal interests in the advancement of Chile are great. He is now in the second year of his presidential term, and he has three years more to serve.

The Moneda is the White House of Chile. It is a vast three story building. situated in the heart of Santiago. The building covers more than four acres, but it is constructed after the Spanish style, with its rooms running about paties er courts, so that there is much waste space. These courts, however, are filled with flowers, in some of them fountains play, and they form the only gardens of the President's house.

The Moneda contains not only the offices and private apartments of the President but also the offices of several of the departments of the Government. He has his principal Cabinet secretaries in the same house with him, and a large part of the building is given up to clerical work. The President of Chile has a military guard of 200 cavalry, which accompanies his carriage on all state occasions. His carriage is drawn by four magnificent horses, and the coachmen and footmen are dressed in gorgeous liv-build, but very straight. He has a rather dark but handsome face, and his manner is quite dignified. In a recent interview, President Erraz-uriz said: 'The international policy of Chile has always tended toward the maintenance of peace and the strengthening of her political and commercial relations with the nations of the American continent, and I believe that this policy does not depart from one of the phases, perhaps the most important one, of the Monroe doctrine. "I am confident that the matters now pending between the Argentine and Chile will be peaceably arranged, and I believe that both governments are anxious that they should be." Chi'e is a Republic. The Chilean president is elected for five years and he is not eligible for a second term. The presidential election day is June 25 of the fifth year of each presidency and inauguration day Is Sept. 18 of the same year. Both of these dates are in the winter months, and the 18th of September is also the Chilean day of its national life corresponding to our First of July. The President of Chile gets a salary of $18,000, and he has in addition an allowance of $12,000 for expenses. President Errazuriz probably spends several times this sum every year. The President has the veto power, but his veto can be overridden by a twothirds majority of the members of Congress present at the time the measure is brought back, and the political situation is such that when a presidential measure fails it is usually the custom of the Cabinet to resign, so that Chile has a new Cabinet on the average of once a month. In addition the Chilean President has a council of state consisting of five mem bers appointed by himself and six chosen by Congress.

Chileans cannot vote until they are 25 years of age if they are unmarried, but married men can vote at the age of 21. Members of the House of Deputies, which corresponds to the United States House of Representatives, must have an income of £100 a year, and Senators must each have an income of £400, or $2,000 a year. Congress sits in regular session from June 1 until Sept. 1 every year, but the President can call an extra session whenever he chooses.

There are two great political parties, the Conservatives and the Liberals, each of which has a number of subdivisions. The onservatives are the more compact, Liberals are much more numerand they are represented by the party now in power. They are the progressive party and they advocate popular education, the elevation of the masses and everything modern. The Conservatives are more what their name implies, and they include also the clerical or church element, which here in Chile has enormous influence.

RELIGIOUS IDEAS

While Christianity is not rationalistic, it is reasonable. The distinction is a valid and valuable one. Christianity appeals to reason, but not as to a Caesar. Reason is its servant, not its sovereign. "Come, let us reason to-gether," salth the Lord. But reason as to what? Concerning truths and relations which, while they do not traverse the rational power, transcend it. God never asks one to believe the unreasonable, but he bids us bear in mind the limitations of our finite reason, and not to discredit facts and faiths that are incompressible into a theorem or a syllogism. If we are rationalists, we are of all men intellectually most miserable; if we attempt the construction of a rationalistic Christianity, we are of all men most foolish. If a pure atheism which disregards all axioms and laws of the mind would be, as the late President Noah Porter was wont to remark to his classes intellectual suicide, sheer, straight rationalism is religious stultification. Where reason arbitrarily rules out a faith in miracle, supernaturalism and revelation it impeaches itself as well, and life becomes reduced to the dimensions of a narrow prisonhouse of sense, and to the quality of a course clod of the field .- New York Observer (Presbyterian.)

Simultaneously with the dissolution of country churches, as might have been expected, there has come about a change in the popular habits of church attendance. The existing churches do not command the attention of the rural population as they once did. A certain Methodist minister, having lately returned to a charge which he served sixteen years ago, notes the change within this brief interval; he probably has more country parishioners than any other pastor in the same village, yet he says that his church sheds—the fair measure of rural attendance-which once were hardly sufficient for the people, are now three times as commodious as they need be. There are entire districts where it is difficult to find a single family with regular church-going habits, I, myself, have spent a Saturday afternoon, passing along a main country thoroughfare, and calling at every Protestant home for a distance of more than two miles and not finding one family with any church relations, and yet all living within sound of church bells from two to five miles distant.— New York Evangelist (Presbyterian.)

Almost every conceivable device is being resorted to to commend the church of Christ to the world. Some of them degrade the very thought of the Gospel and the service of God, but the plan of seeking to make a Christian church fulfill within itself the ideal of a Christian society is in line with the divine method. Strange that we read our New Testaments over and over and do not see it, until some day the thought flashes on us and it transforms the book. There are multitudes of isolated believers who are trying to lead a Christian life. There are very few churches that are seeking to incarnate the Christian social ideal. A church that was even partially successful in this attempt would be a magnet to draw men and women into its fellowship. There is so little of this spirit in the world that such a church would be like a bright room with a cheerful fire on a dark, freezing night. -Watchman (Baptist), Boston.

Nothing is sadder, and few things more common, than the carnalism which marks the warfare of many a modern church. When a church seeks a minister because of his ability to draw a crowd, and estimates his success by the size of his collection; when a Christ-like character, rich experience of God's goodness, clear insight into God's Word, profound sympathy, with man's need, and genuine enthusiasm for man's good, are all outweighed by the accidents of vocal organism or the niceties of literary style; when, as is sometimes the case, the church is made an entertainment hall with a lecture platform at one end, and a concert gallery at the other, and the art of the singing-master and of the elocution teacher is more appreciated than the vision of truth and the inspiration of the Spirit, that church has ceased to be a spiritual force, and the weapons of its warfare are after the forging of the flesh. This is indeed the peril of the churches today. The flesh and the things of the flesh are so pressing, and to the carnal mind so pleasing, that it is hard to make men appreciate the vanity, indeed the disaster, of enlisting the unsanctified weapons in the service of God .- The Independent.

INTERESTING TO HUNTERS.

The deer hunting season opens on Nov. 1, and lasts only fifteen days. In the Muskoka Lake district, north of Toronto, prospects are for a successful season, as game abounds in great numbers. Bear, fox and other animals are to be found in goodly numbers, while to the anglers, the trout, bass and maskinonge are the delight of all who tempt its waters with rod and line. The autumn is also a good season of the year to visit that country, when the beautiful coloring of the foliage lining the banks of the lakes and covering the pincushiony islands which dot the waters of Lakes Muskoka, Rosseau and Joseph, Huntsville and Lake of Bays, are resplendent with the variegated tints of nature's splendor and are reflected with astonishing vividness in the waters, with the sky as a background, forming one of the grandest sights imaginable. She had stepped out of the shadow and it was bright enough for them to see every detail of her white muslin dress, flounced to the waist, and to catch the gleam of her uncovered neck and arms. Dick Manners even imagined he could distinguish the curve of her dark head outlined against the scarlet bow and see the starlike shinning of her eyes. He sighed as he away. It was so hard to leave her only for a few hours, and the heavy, clinging scent of the champak blossom oppressed him and seemed to lie as a weight upon his heart.

It was in May, 1887, when a party of English men and women rode through the streets of the native city of Lucknow. They were going to visit the shops of the famous gold and silver workers and were accompanied and bought some curious ornaments by an escort of native police for their guidance, and, though the ladies of the party scoffed at the idea, for their protection as well. The bazaar at Lucknow has too bad a name for any Englishman to care to take his womankind there without a show of force. The streets are very narrow and the houses have, in many cases, overhanging balconies to the upper stories, creating a feeling of oppres-sion even in riders, who are raised above the masses of many shaded humanity with which the countless lanes and alleys are filled.

Edith Villars was typically English in appearance, having soft, fair hair and gray blue eyes, and with the latter she now gazed as if fascinated at the shrouded figures which passed her in her attention on the road. Instinc-

With a deep drawn sight Col. Manners passed out and looked up, half unconsciously, to the dark blue sky

"Those hovels are stifling; the charcoal fumes makes them unbearable, fancy living in one. No one but a native could!"

But, even as he spoke, he threw off the depression caused by the char-coal fumes or that uncomfortable looking old woman in the corner and turned to look proudly at the tall, beautiful, fair haired girl who was already, surely, his own.

Miss Villars had not answered him. She stood hesitating on the threshold, shading her eyes from the dazzling glare before her, thinking of the blackness, the wretchedness, behind her. She felt it would be long before she forgot that face; those eyes, which to her excited imagination, seemed to be following her still. Was there not some appeal in them? She half turned as if to go back, but Colonel Manners said, "This way, Miss Villars," and she stopped ashamed of her aimand she stopped, ashamed of her aimless impulse.

Inside the dark and stifling shop, which Col. Manners had been so glad to leave, the woman still crouched upon the floor. She had thrown back her vell as if she needed air, and the masses of her dark, fine waving hair were revealed. Not native hair. The very way it grew showed that. When the shade of the sari was gone her features were visible, and every curve of lips, nostrils, eyelids and throat out her English blood. Within her breast a torment of misery was unsealed. It was years since she had thought, consciously thought, as she was thinking now. But for 30 years she had not heard the voice she had heard today, had not seen the face upon which her eyes had hungrily rested only a few mo-ments before, had not dared, for shame and agony, to admit the thought of him into her heart, and now—All that she had borne of humiliation, illusage and daily, grinding tyranny throughout those weary years was as nothing to the burning torment of those few seconds when dick had looked down upon her without a spark of recognition in his eyes, with only a horror, which was perhaps the mere reflection of that within her own.

She closed her eyes. It was a sum-She stood in a starlit garden. The scent of champak blossom was heavy on the air, and a voice speaking from very far away, "It will be years before I see you

But before the memory of the past could drive her tortured soul to madness she was recalled suddenly to the present by another voice:

"Am I to keep thee in idleness all thy days? Rise. Get thee to the preparation of the meal. Thou hast looked too long upon these white folk. Perhaps they have bewitched thee, but remember I will have no lazy white memsahibs here." It was the voice of her master, and while the sneer cut her to the heart, as it had never failed to do through all the long years, the flash died out of her eyes, and, drawing the cari closely around her once more, she passed obediently to the back of the house with the slow, gliding step of a native woman.-Temple Bar.

An Old Woman's Solution of How to Make a Will.

The Young Lawyer's Story of the Unique Proceedings Which Produced an Avalanche of Feminine Fury Among the Bellicose Legatees.

"Legal practice in the country," said the young attorney who had taken a run down to the city to freshen up a bit, "is not cracked up to be anything which is right, but if I continue to have experiences similar to that which I had last week my life will not be devoid of interest.

"I was sent out by my father, whose junior partner I am, to Billerton a little while ago to draw up a will for an old woman who had about $20,000 worth of property to devise and about a dozen legatees. When I reached the devisor's house, I found that she was prepared for hereafters and emergencies of all kinds.

"She had heard of broken wills-had heard that no lawyer could draw up a will that some other lawyer couldn't breakbut being a strong minded person she had her own ideas about things. She had put off making a will as long as she dared, but one day a happy thought struck her, and she concluded that she could beat the lawyers at their own game. She said to herself that wills were broken because some one didn't get something that he or she thought she ought to have or some one else had got something that he or she ought not to have. The old woman's solution of that difficulty was a stroke of

"I found the devisor sitting prim and stiff in her prim and stiff little parlor, and ranged around the room were a lot of other women, all primmer and stiffer than the devisor. They were the legatees, and they were there to tell the devisor what they wanted without reserve and as freely as they would fight after the devisor's death for the same thing if it had not been be queathed. There were two men there, but they didn't count. I didn't notice them when I went in, and every time they said a word they were promptly squelched.

"The women were of the spinster type, the kind that one likes to characterize as females, spare, acidulated and grim. I believe two of them were married, but that must have been so long before that they had forgotten it. Here were pretty ma-terials for an argument, and if I hadn's been so young and fresh I would have collapsed at the unprecedented plan. As it was I enjoyed the situation until I was fairly in for it, and then, of course, I could not get out.

"Lest her presence should trammel a free discussion, the devisor, after introducing us all around and making the necessary explanations, left the room, and in less than five minutes the air was full of flying fur and feminine fury.

"'Well, if I can't have the white house with the cupalow I won't take anything,' said Hannah Maria, and she swished out of the room in tears, only to come back a few minutes later, having thought better

"'Now, you can have the swamp lot, Susan. You know your husband allers said he'd drain it if it was his'n.' This

"'Indeed! And have me nursin him for fever an ague all the rest of his life, caught workin down in that mire. I guess not. No, ma'am. I want the hill farm. It's little, but it's healthy, an you ain't so smart as you think, Jane Pearce.'

'Really, I can't make anything out of this if you won't be a little more amicable. I am afraid that the testator's wise plan will be frustrated if you can't come to a better agreement.

"A scornful sniff, punctuated by such remarks as 'Brute!' 'Wretch!' and the like, which ran around the room, was all I got for my pains. I had interfered in a family quarrel, and it was none of my affair if the family chose to decide things in a bellicose way.

"And then the row started again after a few minutes of sullen silence. It was, You take the medder lot and I'll take the wood lot.' or 'I think Elizabeth ought to have the cows; her husband bein so shiftless, she could sell the milk and do better.' Now they bandied about the 'phaeton' and the 'cherry bounce,' which no one seemed to care for and seemed likely to go to one of the unobtrusive males present. "Then the fight settled thickly over the little apple orchard, and I was reduced to despair. Finally I threw myself into the breach once more with a new proposition. I would take the inventory of property and let them ballot on the proposition articled there, each piece of property going to the one having the plurality of votes, and I went to work at once to put my scheme in operation without waiting for the lega-tees' consent. "The upshot of it was that the plan fell flat on the first round, when a very desirable bequest was put up, each legatee casting one emphatic ballot for himself or herself. Then there was a scene and tears and more tears, with suspicious glances at the two men whom no one thought would have dared to prefer themselves. "I don't know how I ever came to a conclusion, but in the end I got a fair idea of what would be acceptable, and after consultation with the testator and getting her approval I drew up the will. "But that isn't all of the story. When I came to present my bill, the devisor asked me how much I wanted. I drew a deep breath and boldly said, 'Five Ellars.' She almost fainted away, and, mind you, the will bequeathed property to the amount of $20,000. When she came to, I asked her if she thought I demanded too much.

"'I'll never give it in the world-never, never, never!' was her determined reply. "'Well, would $2.50 be too much?' She only frowned at this without fainting.
"'Well, what do you think is right?" I finally asked in despair.

"'I'll pay you $1.50 and not a cent more,' she answered, jumping at the chance to name her own figures, and Iwell, you can call me a fool if you will-I took it. There'll be a dozen partition suits in that will, and I stand a good chance of getting into them.

"Yes, country practice is meager, but it is stimulating," concluded the young attorney thoughtfully as he ordered a 5 cent cigar and went out, leaving his hearer to pay for the drinks.—New York Sun.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills Cured Her of Fainting Spells, Partial Paralysis and Heart Trouble, After the Doctors Had Given Her Up to Die.

The beginning of this year very few people in Uxbridge, Ont., thought Mrs. Geo. Adams, a well-known and highly respected lady of that town, would be alive to see the incoming spring.

She was so weak and wasted, her appetite was gone, there were dark circles under her eyes, her heart was bad. these terrible faint spells and smothering sensations came over her so frequently that it seemed to be only a matter of time till she would pass to the great majority.

More than that, there were times when she became partially paralyzed, and the doctors who were in attendance had given up all expectations of her recovery. At this time a friend in Toronto, hearing of Mrs. Adams' serious condition, advised the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. It was the last ray of hope, and Mrs. Adams concluded to try the remedy On February 3rd she got the first box and started taking them. That was a

Thursday; Friday night the first good effects of the medicine were made evident in Mrs. Adams getting sound, refreshing sleep, the first good night's rest she had had in months. From that time on every day found her improving in health and getting stronger. The terrible pains that used to shoot through her head and arms disappeared, the spells of numbness and partial paralysis that came over her at times bothered her no more. she was able to resume her household duties, and in addition, bake her own bread, a thing she had not attempted for the past two years.

Today Mrs. Adams is thankful to Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for sparing her life to her children and their health and strength. husband, and under date of April 4, Milburn's Heart and Ner 1898, wrote as follows: "I had given up all hope of recovering and frequently thought I could not live through the day.

"Fainting spells, numbness and partial paralysis came upon me very often, sometimes seven spells in half a day. I was in this helpless and hopeless condition when a friend advised me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. which I secured at Mr. Nicholls' drug store. I had not taken them long when I noticed a great change for the better, and before I had used half a box I was up doing my own housework.
"By the time the first box was completed I was able to walk down town and back quite easily, a distance of half a mile each way. "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, as they saved my life and restored my health." ELIZABETH ADAMS.

The cleanliness of the Dutch is proverbial; in some houses it reaches almost to a mania. #### Aids to Beauty.

American women are not considered graceful. The few exceptions stand out with such startling distinctness as to be made much of. We, as a nation of women, are too brisk, hence our awkwardness. People slow of movement and reposeful of manner rarely lack grace. A habit of walking with stiffness is frequently caused by wearing excessively tight clothing, and often by bad habits contracted in childhood. An easy, undulating gait is what every woman, pretty or plain, ought to strive for, and this is impossible unless the feet and ankles are allowed the utmost liberty of motion. Narrow shoes, high heels and pointed toes are all hindrances, and until they are done away with a graceful carriage of the body is impossible, a good gait as far in the future as ever.

The easiest way to reduce the size of the hips is to exercise self-denial. Eat a great deal of fruit, exercise the musare recklessly risking their lives while they go about their common every-day avoca-tions. They over-work, they do not take sufficient time from business or labor to eat or sleep or rest, or to care for their health. Outraged nature throws out danger signals, to which they pay no heed. They suffer from bilious or nervous disorders, from sick headache, giddiness, drowsiness, cold chills, flushings of heat, shortness of breath, blotches on the skin, loss of appetite, uncomfortable sensations in the stomach after meals, loss of sleep, lassi-tude and trembling sensations. These are the advance symptoms of serious and fatal

All disorders of this nature are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It restores the lost appetite, gives sound and refreshing sleep, makes the digestion perfect, the liver active. It purifies the blood and makes it rich with the life-giving elements of the food. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It makes the body active and the brain keen. It is the best of nerve tonics. Thousands have testified to its merits. No honest dealer will urge upon you a substitute for the little extra

Little folks, a hero is not made in a minute. No, you may depend upon it that it is the thorough doing each day of all the things one ought to do, that grows the strength for the great deed. For weeks you have been hearing generation, writes Mark H. Liddell in

"I take great pleasure in recommending flood's Sarsaparilla to others. It has been the means of restoring my wife to good health. She was stricken down with an attack of nervous prostration. She suffered with headaches and her nerves were under severe strain. She became very low spirited and so weak she could only do a little work without resting. Her appetite was poor, and being so weak she could not get the proper rest at night. #### Open Letter to the Christian Ministers of the City.

Dear Brethren,-At this time, when one of the most flagrant outrages against humanity and our common Christianity is before us, it would be like the great Master, whom we profess to serve, to set ourselves in strong array against all that savors of oppression or high-handed autocracy. The employes of the street railway company have been forced to bear indignities upon their manhood, and their parental and filial affections, that should not be tolerated by the enlightened and merciful people of London. If we are to judge from Holy Writ, there is no sin more beingus in God's sight, after refusing the Redeemer, than oppression. It is that which led to the downfall of Israel, and Judah, and other nations outside and against which the geraphic denunciations of Isaiah were hurled. It is that which drew forth from the Redeemer his few strong or harsh expressions, and which is diametrically opposed to the great truth he came to proclaim-the brotherhood of man.Compared with it. dancing, skating, etc., against which so much is said from many pulpits, are small matters, and, therefore, it should not be allowed to pass, at this favorable juncture, without feeling the force and righteous indignation of the Christian pulpit. Tomorrow evening would be an opportune time to express sympathy with the men, and to put plainly the great truths of Christlanity, viz: The fatherhood of God, and the brotherhood of man. Yours in sincerity,

REV. GEO. GILMORE. London Junction, Oct. 29, 1898.

THE INDIAN TROUBLE. Baker City, Oregon, Oct. 29 .- A telephone message from Canon City states that Columbia Joe and nine warriors came into Prairie City today, and informed the citizens that there would be no further trouble. Settlers are arming themselves, however. Three of the Indians wounded in yesterday's battle will die, making a total of seven killed since the trouble began.

TRAINMEN ASK BETTER TERMS. Ottawa, Oct. 29.-The Canada Atlantic trainmen have concluded their conference with the managers of the road regarding the rules of work. The question of increased wages was dropped. The men accepted the statement of Mr. Booth as true that the road could not afford to pay more money. In future, the trainmen will get regular promotion from braking to conducting, and from freight to passeenger work. The hours of labor shall be twelve and the men will be paid overtime. While accepting Mr. Booth's statement that he cannot afford to pay higher wages, the trainmen hold themselves free to

A Word of Advice.

The Advertiser desires to repeat its earnest advice to the ex-employes of the Street Railway, and to all who sympathize with them, scrupulously to refrain from any acts of violence, or anything whatever calculated to alienate the good opinion of the public. Those who take an opposite course are no friends of the motormen and conduotors. We sincerely trust that this word to the judicious will be heeded.

Scab!" roared the mob, and then a bombardment of the car barns was begun with bricks, stones and eggs. With the first fusillade of rocks every window in the front of the building was smashed to pieces, including the large plate glass window in the downstairs office. Every time a head appeared near one of the broken windows, it was the signal for a volley of bricks and rocks. Eighteen non-union men are said to be on their way to London from Lima,

AT DUNDAS AND RICHMOND.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the crowd began to gather at the corner of Dundas and Richmond streets, and then extended east along Dundas. So great was the crush that progress anywhere near the corner was accomplished only with the greatest difficulty.Dire threats were made by many as to what they would do in case of any attempt to run the cars.

STRIKERS BEHAVE WELL. The street railway motormen and conductors continue on their good behavior at Labor Hall. They put in each day in a most systematic way, the roll being called every morning and afternoon. All the work is done by committees, and none of the men leave the hall without reporting. The managers of the strike are determined so far as is possible to prevent any act of violence.

Mr. H. T. Smith, ex-superintendent of the London Street Railway, gave a capital address full of encouragement to the men at Labor Hall before the mass meeting last night.

The street railway men who are on strike continue to wear the company's uniform. For this reason, any participation by them in mob violence would be detected. And no one saw any of them in the fracas of yesterday.

The question arises: "Are street cars necessary, anyway?" To judge by the crowd that patiently waited hour after hour at the corner of Richmond and Dundas streets this afternoon, waiting for a car, it cannot be doubted that a great many people in the city plenty of time to walk - more time than necessary.

Mr. J. H. Ginge, of the Canadian Packing Company, gave the strikers today orders for goods at the Company's store, Richmond street. The orders numbered 97-one for each man-and were to the value of $1 each, good for a week.

IN SYMPATHY WITH THE EM-PLOYES.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: The Industrial Banner has taken occasion to criticise my action in asking one of my pupils to remove one of the "We Walk" badges that have been distributed throughout the city. Now, while heartily in sympathy with the street car employes, my duty as a teacher is to train the children in habits of self-restraint, and to discourage anything that will tend to excite them, and thereby distract their attention from their school duties. My only aim in asking the boy to remove the badge while in the class-room was to accomplish this end. Respecfully yours, GEORGE KIRK.

THE QUEEN OF

"I can go no further, mademoiselle," her companion whispered. "The cabaret where I hope to purchase some wine and bread for my husband will be closed if I do not hurry thither. The house you seek is at the end of this passage. Knock gently three times, and then ask boldly for Monsieur Aymer. At first they may deny that he is still residing there; but do not believe them. I am assured that he has not departed. This is all I can do for you, and so adien.'

Involuntarily Vivien clutched her sleeve to detain her, but reminding herself that Aymer was within call, and that whatever might be his motives for hiding thus, he would take care of her, she released the impatient woman, who, muttering a hope that the saints would have her in their keeping, flitted away directly. It was horrible to be alone and in such a place; but refusing to let herself dwell upon the difficult question what she should do if Aymer were not here after all, or how she should regain the bridge without her guide, she breath-lessly sped down the narrow court, and gave three sharp taps at the portal before which she found herself.

Twice the summons was repeated before it elicited any reply; but at last a bolt was withdrawn, and the door cautiously opened by a repulsive-looking, elderly man, over whose shoulder there peeped a female, older, uglier, and even more repellant in appearance

As, by the aid of their lamp, this unpleasant - looking couple surveyed our demands must be complied with Vivien, she took courage, and, saying, imperiously, "I am the sister of Monsleur Aymer, who lodges with you; show me the way to his apartment," boldly stepped into the entry.

She was permitted to do this, and it was not till the female had carefully secured the door through which she had passed, that she was assured the person whom she sought had left Paris. Show me his apartment, and let me convince myself of this," said Vivien, remembering how the woman had warned her that she might be put off with some such tale.

"A bold request, truly," exclaimed the man. "What will you give me for my trouble?" Monsieur Aymer will repay you for it," answered Vivien, restraining the impulse to produce her purse. "Lead on, for I am pressed for time." "Who told you that the English mon-surveying her from head to foot. "Does it signify how I learned tt?" was the impatient retort. "Which is the way to his rooms? Have I not told you that I am in haste?" But, disregarding her remonstrances, the man and his wife conferred together in whispers, and Vivien, sickening at the delay, which to her impetuous spirit was intolerable, was again about to produce her purse, when, with a significant nod at her spouse, the woman turned to her.

"Monsieur Aymer owes us money for his rent and for sundry dinners with which we have provided him. Is the little lady who calls herself his sister prepared to pay this sum? We are poor and cannot afford to lose it."

"Monsieur himself shall settle your account, as soon as I have seen him," said Vivien. "Will this promise satisfy

"Apparently, then, you bring him money?"

To this question she returned no answer, but advanced towards the stairs, asking on which storey her brother's apartments were situated.

"One moment," said the man, plac-ing himself directly in her way. "I am tired of promises. I must see the color of English gold before I stir from here. Comprenez vous?"

"Will this content you?" asked Vivien, scornfully, as she dropped a sovereign into his dirty palm, repenting it directly she saw his covetous eyes peering into the elegant little porte-monnaie from which she had extracted the coin.

"As a token that mademoiselle ack nowledges the debt? Ah! yes, yes!" cried the woman, volubly. "But made-moiselle must pledge herself to repay all the enormous expenses to which we have been subjected by monsieur's illness. Ha!" for Vivien uttered an exclamation of distress when she heard this, "did she not know that for these three weeks past he has been extremely ill, often delirious, and costing us no end of anxiety and trouble? It is fever," she added, lowering her voice. There is no doubt of it, though we conceal the fact from our neighbors, lest they avoid us!" Aymer seriously, if not dangerously, ill, and in such a place as this! Vivien wrung her hands in dismay.

"My poor brother! Ah! why did I not know of this sooner? Take me to him at once!"

"But the expenses? Does mademoiselle agree to take them upon herself?"
the woman persisted. "So many francs for oil for the lamp at night; so many for my good friend Nanette for sitting up with the sufferer, for wood for the stove, and for fruit and lemonade to cool his parched mouth, and-"Oh! spare me these items, and tell me the sum total!" exclaimed the an-xious girl; "only be quick about it." But, inexperienced though she was, the sum named was so large that Vivien's suspicions were aroused, and she hesitated.

"Here is an English note for five pounds," she said. "I will give you that, but no more, till I have assured myself that Monsleur Aymer has been properly nursed. And now I insist that you take me to him without any further delay."

"Apparently mademoiselle has no fear of infection?" queried the man, as, after another whisper from his wife, he began to ascend the staircase, closely followed by his visitor. "I have no fears. Pray don't stop me to ask these questions!" "And mademoiselle understands that we shall expect to be paid our just demands before she leaves us? But perhaps it is not in her power to do

"I have the money in my possession. I will pay whatever my brother considers right before I go," she replied, and then, as before, repented the in-cautious admission; for a look passed swiftly across her guide's repulsive features that startled her. What if Aymer were not in this house after all, and she were being entrapped through her own folly

The thought was so alarming that she paused, in doubt whether to proceed or retreat. But the woman was close behind her, watching every movement, and the man was unlocking a door at the head of the tall fight of stairs up which he had led her.

He looked in cautiously shading the light he carried; then held up his finger with a warning gesture.

"Monsieur sleeps. All the long day he has raved wildly. He has insisted on rising and dressing, that he might return to his own country, and now his violence has exhausted him. Will you await below with ma bonne femme until he awakens, or—"

"Chut! Andre, of what are you thinking? She will go to him now now!" cried the woman, impelling their visitor forward. "We have wasted time enough—is it not so? Enter, little lady. You will remember that before you quit this chamber again!" The tone as well as the look that accompanied these words were so threatening, that Vivien haughtily shook off the coarse hand laid on her shoulder. But ere she could resent it, she had been thrust across the threshold, and the key turned in the lock of the door, that was instantly closed behind her. It was an act that might well startle her. She was actually the prisoner of the ill-looking couple who had brought her hither, and, in an agony of wrath and dread, she sprang towards the bed, but paused half way, for the face of the sleeper was turned towards her, and she saw that it was the face of a

CHAPTER IV.

For several minutes Vivien St. Orme leaned against the door of her prison, stunned by the terrible nature of her position. She found herself in a dingy chamber, which, from the sloping roof, she judged to be on the top storey of the house she had unwarily entered. It contained nothing but two or three common rush chairs and a rickety table, on which stood a small lamp, a pitcher of water and a broken cup, but of medicine or fruit for the invalid there was none.

As she noted these things she glanced timidly towards the bed, a thrill of fresh terror creeping through her veins as she recalled the assurance she had received that the inmate of the chamber was delirous. To be shut up with a madman was an idea that appalled her, and she found herself watching him with breathless dread of his stirring and discovering her presence.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Washington, Oct. 29.-President Mc-Kinley has issued a proclamation setting apart Tuesday, Nov. 24, as Thanksgiving Day.

DESPERATE PRISONERS ESCAPE. Kingston, N. Y., Oct. 28 .- Four desperate prisoners escaped from the Ulster county jail at 2 o'clock this morning. They are: Joseph Savage, charged with burglary, who has served three terms at Dannemora; Frank Stafford, charged with highway robbery; John Davitt, charged with criminal assault, and Thomas Munro, charged with burglary. The escape was made by the men climbing a water-pipe and making a hole through the ceiling into the women's department, and then lowering themselves to the ground from a window by means of sheets tied together. There are four other prisoners in the jail who are indicted for murder. They claim that they were asked to join the escaping prisoners, but declined to do

SITUATION WENT DOWN

As Reported by Bradstreet's and Dun & Co.

Weather Conditions Unfavorable, but Canada Makes a Good Showing.

New York, Oct. 29 .- Bradstreet's review savs:

Weather conditions have not favored distribution in Canada this week, and fall and winter goods have been moved less freely than expected. Toronto reports farmers' deliveries of wheat small, notwithstanding ad-vanced prices, and reports from the Northwest are less encouraging. From Winnipeg latest advices are that the yield of wheat will be 10,000,000 bushels in excess of last year, and that de-layed deliveries are beginning to arrive now that better weather is being experienced. Collections, it is expected, will be one month later as a result of untoward weather conditions. At Victoria and Vancouver business shows a good increase over last year, and collections are also good. From the Maritime Provinces advices are that trade is up to the average. The outlook in Prince Edward Island is not encouraging, owing to the fallures of cereal crops. Newfoundland fisheries have turned out better than expected. Business failures in the Dominion this week numbered 23, as against 24 last week, and 29 in this week a year ago. Dun & Co. say: Canadian reports this week are but moderately encouraging. The weather and other conditions have retarded business in many lines, although there is better business in clothes, hardware and provisions, but not so good in shoes at St. John. Orders for spring are fairly encouraging in hardware at Halifax, and the volume of business has increased, with a better demand for groceries. Crops in Prince Edward Island have been satisfactory, with better prices for wheat in Newfoundland. Excepting in shoes trade at Quebec is generally good and collections good. Montreal reports weather not helping, but very fair trade in drygoods, groceries and shoes, with collections generally good. Retail trade at Toronto is good, with a fair sorting-up of business in drygoods notions and holiday stuff. Winnipeg reports a better feeling since close investigation has cleared away fear of damage to grain, though the markets are not slow. At Victoria wholesale business is good and the feeling in trade is more helpful, while at Vancouver business is steady, and collections are good, with a gradual increase in bank clearings. IN THE UNITED STATES.

Bradstreet's report says irregularity in prices and trade movements has been rather more marked this week than for some time past, but measured by all the usual standards of business developments the situation is one of exceptional activity and even strength. The active foreign demand, advancing prices for American cereals and their products appeared to have culminated early in the week in a virtual "war scare" market, in which the highest prices reached since early in August were recorded. The resmall one, testifying to nervousness, both at home and abroad, growing out of the exceptionally small gains in world's supplies, reports to damage of wheat in the fields in the Northwest and in Manitoba, active milling demand for wheat at home, Minneapolis breaking all records of flour production for the week, and a continuance of the talk of rather less than anticipated out-turns of crops abroad not-ed for some time past. Evidence of reaction in prices is not confined to wheat, but extends to lard and coffee In distributive trade reports of bad weather interfering with the regular demand and collections, but of stimulating retail trade in heavy winter goods, come from the west and northwest, whence also come advices of bad roads, crippling farmers' ability to deliver wheat to market. Against this, however, might be cited the fact that primary receipts of wheat are in excess of one year ago, and for the season are fully equal to those of last year. advices as to railroad traffic point to western and southern railroads being taxed to their utmost to handle the business offering, with gross earnings showing gains over 'ast year's exceptionally good results. From the Pa-cific coast the advices are not of active business, heavy grain receipts being absorbed by mills working export orders, and with new trade with our new dependency. Here at the east the tone of business remains rather quiet.

Business failures for the week num-ber 219, as compared with 213 last week, and 218 in this week a year ago. Dun & Co.'s review says: Business has been more affected by foreign affairs than many realize. London's apprehension of war first caused an advance in wheat and fears in monetary pressure here. Then came confidence in London, with a flight of French money across the channel, and stock markets here advanced, while wheat Mobs in Paris did not mean to influence American interests from New York to San Francisco, but electric wires have made the world small. So the wires moved a cargo of wheat from the Pacific coast, started $2,500,000 more gold from Australia to this country on London account, and the selling of American securities one day and buying the next. There has been no domestic changes of much importance, and the rise in prices in western railroad stocks indicates that the supreme court decision against the Trunk Line Assocation is considered helpful to railroads. Wheat rose 3 cents from Friday to Monday, and then fell 41/2 cents to Friday. But such changes do not present actual conditions, and with western receipts for the week 9,558,205 bushels, against 6,996,487 bushels last year, nobody can pretend that holding of stock by western farmers is an important factor. The Atlantic exports, flour included, amount to 3,796,830 bushels, against 3,864,649 bushels last year, and Pacific exports, 825,994 bushels, against 1,326,808 bushels last year, making 16,-607,362 bushels in four weeks, against 19,418,847 bushels last year, when the foreign demand was beyond all precedent. In four weeks the western re-ceipts have been over 40,150,699 bushels, against 30,723,288 bushels last year, and yet prices are 25 cents lower. This clearly indicates much larger supplies and greater readiness to part with them than was seen a year ago, when nobody doubted the magnitude of the but slightly advanced. The iron man-ufacture has still a good demand, late prices by bidding against each other. Failures for the week have been 226 in the United States, against 219 last year, and 24 in Canada, against 25 last year.

Eighteen Men Lost in the Wreck of the L. R. Doty on Lake Michigan.

Chicago, Oct. 26.-The loss of the steamer L. R. Doty, with her entire crew of eighteen during the gale of Tuesday is now conceded. Wreckage brought to the Independent Tug Line was fully identified by Capt. Ellison, of the steamer George Williams, which belongs to the same line, as having come from the Doty.

The Olive Jeanette, which the Doty had in tow, was towed into the harbor early yesterday morning. Her crew confirmed the loss of the steamer.

THE LOST. Following is a list of the members of the steamer's crew: Capt. Christopher Smith, Port Huron; Chief Engineer Thomas Aber-nethie, Port Huron; First Mate Harry Sharpe, Detroit; Steward Doss, West Bay City; W. J. Hossie, second mate; C. W. Odette, second engineer; George Wadkin, oiler; W. J. Scott, cook; Chas. Bornie, watchman: Peter G. Peterson. wheelsman; Albert Nelson, assistant wheelsman; Joseph Fitzsimmons, J. Howe, firemen; F. Parmuth, C. Curtis, Wm. Ebert, Pat Ryan, Frank Burke, deckhands.

The above was the list of men on the boat on Oct. 8, when they were last paid off. It is possible that one or two changes have been made since that

The Doty was a wooden steamer, and was built at West Bay City, Mich., in 1893. Her capacity was 1,700 net tons. She was 291 feet long and 41 feet beam. Her insurance valuation was

I found in Manchester, Liverpool, and also in London, that Canadian eggs were gaining a better reputation in the trade. Those that arrived in cold storage chambers were said to be action shown, however, has been a pleasing very well. The only complaint I heard was that when the cases were opened the eggs became very moist, and were said to be "sweating," or to be covered with drops like dew. As a matter of fact the cause of that was the opening of the cases containing the eggs immediately after they were taken from the cold storage room. That exposed the cold surface of the eggs to the warm moist atmosphere, and the moisture was condensed on their surface just in the same way that it would be condensed on the surface of a pitcher or glass containing ice water. Those importers who left the cases closed for two days in a chamber at the ordinary temperature of the air, and then opened them, found that the eggs had been warmed up gradually and had a fine appear-
