

PREMIER'S SEPTEMBER TOUR
FOR RURAL DISTRICTS ONLY

Sir Wilfrid Will Not Visit the Cities, But It Is Expected That He Will Address an Audience at Strathroy—Open Air Meetings the Rule.

Toronto, Aug. 15.—In the itinerary arranged for Sir Wilfrid Laurier for Ontario during September, Toronto is not included, neither is Hamilton, London, nor any of the other cities.

"We could pack Massey Hall or a ten-acre field by bringing Sir Wilfrid to Toronto," stated F. G. Inwood, the Liberal general secretary. "But what's the use?"

For Rural Districts.

The tour will be for the rural districts solely. Such is the idea at present, and there is not much hope that it will be changed. It will start in the southern peninsula, probably at Niagara Falls, and continue westward and then north. There is a probability that Sir Wilfrid will not touch any points east of Toronto.

On the tour the Premier will be accompanied by Hon. George Graham, minister of railways and canals. No other minister will accompany him, but the members and candidates in the various ridings in which he will appear will speak.

Open Air Meetings.

It is the intention to hold all open air meetings and in the afternoon. This will give the farmers a better chance to attend, and as halls could not be secured sufficient to hold the members who will turn out to honor and hear the eloquent French-Canadian, the open air idea was decided upon.

As yet the route of the tour has not been decided upon.

"We are at work upon the itinerary," said Mr. Inwood, "but until we decide upon what places Sir Wilfrid will speak at, it is better to mention no names."

It is almost certain, however, that Niagara Falls, Strathroy, and North Bay will be among the lucky places.

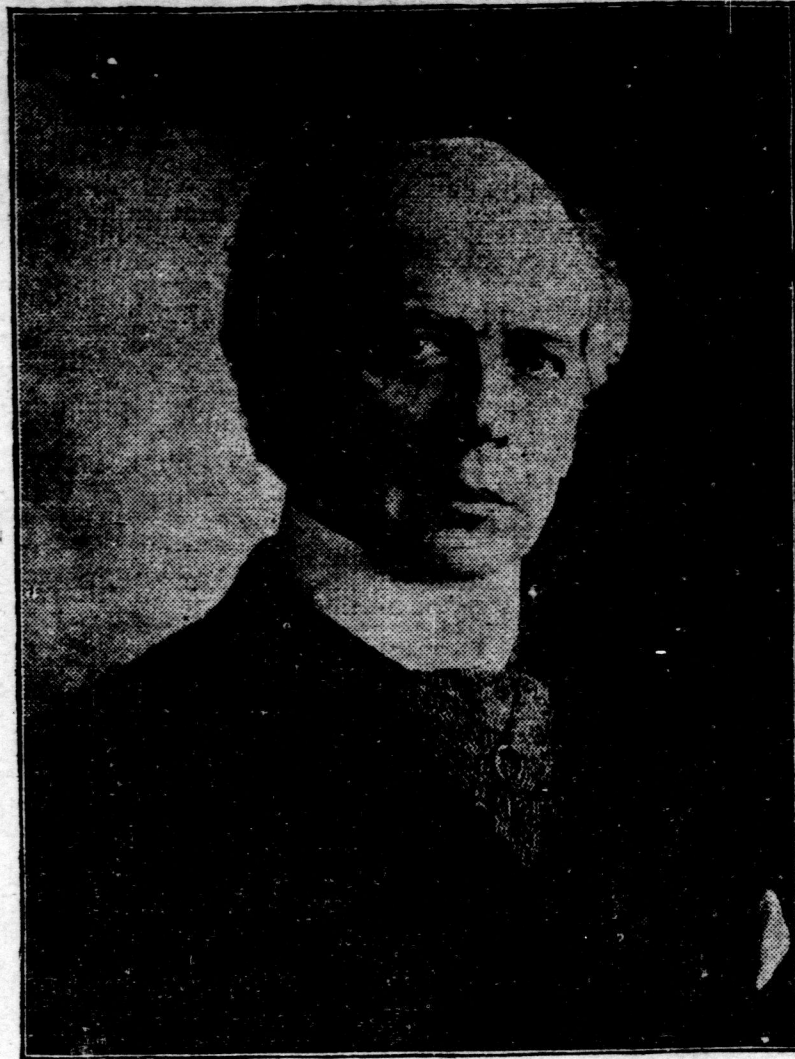

"That the visit of the Premier will rouse the utmost enthusiasm is a certainty. All he has to do is to appear in Ontario, and immense turnouts are assured. However, this is not to be a spectacular, but a tour meant to produce results."

His Former Tour Recalled.

It is two years ago since Sir Wilfrid appeared in this city, and the magnificent welcome extended to him at Massey Hall will be easily recalled. Burdened as he is by a thousand duties, he has very little time to go a-visiting but on the eve of a general election a tour of Ontario was deemed a necessity. The Liberal Parliamentary Committee suggested the idea and the Ontario Reform Committee are carrying out the details.

The tour will last about three weeks, after which, it is said, Sir Wilfrid will travel west across the continent. A few meetings in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia will follow, and the campaign before the general elections will be closed by a series of demonstrations in Quebec.

Sir Wilfrid, though far from being a young man, is in splendid health, and is well able to stand such a tour. Some time during the month of September, also, another tour will be made of Ontario. This time all the cities and Conservative strongholds will be visited. The speakers will be the eloquent members of the Federal Cabinet, and they will do their utmost, without the presence of their leader, to stir up enthusiasm in the breast of every citizen who looks forward to another term of good government.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER.

Beginning about the middle of September, the Premier will make a tour of Ontario, lasting several weeks, and visiting the rural districts only.

NIGHT OF RIOT AND SLAUGHTER
AT SPRINGFIELD, ILLINOIS

Mob of Citizens, Failed in Attempt to Lynch Negro, Put Colored District to Torch and Hang Innocent Man—Troops in Control After Desperate Fighting.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15.—Two white men were killed, an unknown negro was lynched, more than half a hundred persons were injured, and two score of houses, mostly occupied by negroes, were burned last night as the result of an attempt by a mob to lynch a negro, who had assaulted a white woman. After a night of riot, arson and slaughter, the state troops, called out by the governor, succeeded early today in restoring a semblance of order and stopping the fire. One thousand militiamen, including three companies from this city, and companies from Bloomington, Decatur, Peoria, Pekin and Pontiac, are patrolling the streets, and it is believed that the further disorder will be prevented.

Negro Assaulted Woman.

The rioting was precipitated by an assault committed early yesterday morning by a negro upon Mrs. Mabel Hallam, wife of a street railway conductor. While the woman slept alone in her home on a populous residence street, awaiting the return of her husband, the man broke into the house, dragged her into the rear yard and assaulted her. Before noon, George Richardson, a young negro, was arrested by the sheriff's force charged with the assault.

THE PREMIER OF SASKATCHEWAN

Hon. Walter Scott is an old Middlesex boy. He is the son of George Scott and Isabella Telfer, of London Township. He was educated in the public schools of the county.

He learned printing and went west in the eighties. He went into the newspaper business in Regina, and established the Leader in that city, which he managed for some years.

He is also president of the company owning the Moosejaw Times.

In 1899 he was elected president of the Western Canada Press Association.

In 1900 he was elected member in the Dominion House for the constituency of West Assiniboia. He was returned again in 1904.

When the Province of Saskatchewan was formed he was chosen to lead the Liberal party in that province.

Lieutenant-Governor Forget called upon him to form a cabinet, and in December, 1905, the first election was held. His ministry was sustained by a good majority.

The election of yesterday shows a continuation of the confidence of the people of Saskatchewan in his Government.

Hon. Mr. Scott was married in 1890 to Miss Jessie Florence Read, of Regina.

Grand Trunk Will Pass Dividends

Montreal, Aug. 15.—Cable advices which, with the small balance from December, makes 187,200 pounds, which will admit of no dividends out of the profits except those on the four per cent guaranteed stock, which will take 185,000 pounds. Last year dividends of 5 per cent on the first and second, and of 3 per cent on the third preferred stock were declared.

No Cattle Stealing in Middlesex

Although the records could not be obtained on short notice, it can be stated that the number of cases that have been heard in the county courts this year have so far exceeded those of last year by over a hundred.

It reflects greatly to the credit of the county authorities that no cases of cattle stealing have been reported in the past three years. Cases of that nature have always been given the severe treatment they deserved, and in consequence cattle thieves give Middlesex County a wide berth.

In Kent, however, the farmers are up in arms over what they claim to have reason to believe may prove another cattle-thieving epidemic.

CHURCHILL TO WED

Engagement to Daughter of Late Sir Henry Hozier Announced.

London, Aug. 15.—It is announced that Winston Spencer Churchill, president of the Board of Trade, will marry Clementine, daughter of the late Sir Henry Montague Hozier, who for 32 years was secretary of Lloyd's.

DEADLY SARDINES

Five Persons at Guelph Dead from Potomarine Poisoning.

Guelph, Aug. 14.—Through eating sardines from a tin last night, five people in the home of Robert Brandon, on Victoria street, to the south of the city, were so seriously poisoned that when a doctor arrived in answer to a midnight summons they were in such a condition that their recovery was doubted.

The five people who were thus afflicted with potomarine poison were Mrs. Brandon and her two children, Mrs. Donald, a visitor from Toronto, and her child. Others in the house had taken fish, but from another tin, and they were not affected.

It was not until a couple of hours after the fish had been eaten that the effects were felt, and then all were in such miserable condition that it was with difficulty that they were able to summon help and get a physician. For some hours all were in danger of their lives, but were finally brought round, and today, although very ill, they are practically out of danger.

NO APPOINTMENT
ON MONDAY NIGHT

City Treasurership Will Not Be Set for Some Time.

The matter of appointing a successor to the late City Treasurer Pope will not be discussed at the meeting of the council on Monday evening. The bylaw will not be ready, and as a result the question will be deferred.

The aldermen are reticent as to their intentions on the matter, and it is not known who will get the position.

The names of Ald. Greenlees and Assistant Treasurer Bell are mentioned most prominently for the place.

There is a disposition among the city hall officials to declare that in all probability a third man who has not yet been mentioned for the position will come along and obtain it.

BIG INCREASE IN CRIME IN LONDON

Police Court Figures Show London Is Getting Worse.

It may be unjust to state that London is growing weaker, but not wiser, but the fact remains that over 400 more cases have been tried this year up to date than were tried last year in the same period in the police court.

The cases include juvenile misdemeanors.

Clark Moule has recently opened another police court record book.

The old one was completely filled, and contained in round numbers six thousand names.

NEW G. T. P. OFFICIALS.

Montreal, Aug. 15.—A circular has been issued by the Grand Trunk Pacific, announcing that Mr. W. E. Davis will be passenger traffic manager for the G. T. P., Mr. G. T. Bell will be general passenger agent, and Mr. J. G. These are dual positions with those now held by these same gentlemen in the G. T. R.

FRANCE MAY PROTEST.

Montreal, Aug. 15.—Representations from their way to the French Government to the Premier, Mr. W. E. Davis, and the state department at Washington, setting forth the indignities to which a citizen of France, Pierre Ychauraga, of name, was submitted by the United States immigration authorities in this city. Ychauraga is a traveller for a French Cognac House, and has been visiting Canada for years, returning via New York.

Owing to the strictness of the United States laws he was advised to arrange with the authorities before proceeding, as the result of which he was compelled to go through all the formalities of being herded up with a lot of immigrants, and put through all the tests and examinations, despite the fact that he was merely passing through the country.

SASKATCHEWAN IS FOR SCOTT
GIVES HIM FINE MAJORITY

When Returns Are All in It Is Expected the Liberals Will Have Twenty-five Seats With a Majority of at Least Ten Seats.

Regina, Aug. 14.—So far as can be gathered at present Premier Scott's return to power, with a splendid majority behind him in the Legislature, is assured. When the returns are finally in it is anticipated that the Liberals will be found to have won at least 25 seats, leaving 15 for their opponents. The endorsement of Premier Scott's policy by giving him a majority of ten in the Legislature is regarded as a sweeping victory. Liberals throughout Saskatchewan are delighted with the result of the election, coming, as it does, after a campaign in which the Premier's opponents used every means to discredit the policy which he has been responsible for.

Scott Was Liked.

Premier Scott, in granting to the province a measure of redistribution which was in every way eminently fair, has undoubtedly gained the approbation, not only of his Liberal supporters, but of many who have been numbered among his opponents.

His fearless appeal to the country has been justified, and the opinion of the people exemplified at the polls in a striking manner.

He has himself been returned as member for Swift Current by a majority which can only be gratifying to the Liberal leader.

Polling commenced at 9 o'clock, and in the cities the vote was heavy during the first hour. Both parties were thoroughly organized, and the most strenuous efforts were made to insure that the poll should be as complete as possible.

Jury Exonerates the Train Crew
But Blames Overcrowding of Cars

Finding in the Inquest Into the Death of Wm. Mullen of Dorchester.

"That the said William Mullen came to his death at Victoria Hospital, city of London, on the evening of the 6th inst., from injuries received by falling off the steps of a car on the Pere Marquette Railway just south of the Port Stanley bridge."

"From the evidence submitted we cannot lay any blame on any of the railway officials in charge of the train. We, therefore, feel that the attention of the Dominion railway commission should be urgent to call to the violation of the laws of the land by railroad companies in allowing passenger trains to be overloaded much beyond their capacity."

Conductor B. W. Bennett, who had charge of the train which killed Mullen, first testified. The train had left Port Stanley at 6:45 the evening of the fatality. It was full.

Mr. Bennett stated that he had no written instructions in reference to handling crowds, but that he had verbal instructions to keep people off the steps and platforms, and make them sit down inside.

AMERICAN AUTOISTS ARRESTED
AN ACCIDENT AT LEAMINGTON

Horse Became Frightened and Running Away Threw the Driver Out—Two People Knocked Down by Animal—Chief of Police Wired London to Detain the Party.

A party of American autoists had, rather a sensational experience here last night.

There were twenty-five persons from Vincennes, Ind., in the party, with five autos. Yesterday afternoon they came through Leamington.

While going through the town a farmer's horse became frightened and ran away. It ran into two people on the side of the road, and then into a building, throwing the farmer out.

All three, it is said, were painfully injured, although not seriously.

Farmer Injured.

The party continued on its way with the exception of Mr. C. W. Burhaus, also of Vincennes, Ind. He picked the farmer up and drove him to a physician.

Burhaus was arrested on a charge of speeding, but the injured man declared that it was not Burhaus' auto that caused the damage and he was allowed to go.

In the meantime, the Leamington chief of police obtained the names and the numbers of the autos and wired to Chief Williams to arrest them here.

Placed Under Arrest.

Detectives Nickle and Egelton went to the Tecumseh House last evening and arrested Mr. S. August Pillemer.

POWER LINE AND THE FARMERS;
HOW IT WILL AFFECT THEM

Correspondent Argues That There Will Be a Danger to Life and Property From the Unprotected Wires and Towers.

To the Editor of The Advertiser.

Mr. P. W. Sothmann, chief engineer of the hydro-electric commission, has been interviewed by the Toronto Daily Star on the subject of lightning, and how he proposes to avoid interruptions upon the Government electrical transmission line.

Mr. Sothmann's explanation is so brilliant that it is worthy of reproduction; his language as given in The Star, July 14, 1908, in quotation marks was as follows:

"The greatest enemy transmission lines have is lightning. We are like doctors fighting against the disease all the time, and devising a cure. I think that you will find that when the Government line is built there will be practically no trouble from our very lively enemy."

"In the first place, a good doctor makes a careful diagnosis, and that is what we have been engaged upon during this last 14 months. In locating our line we have gone very carefully into the question of the liability of certain areas to thunderstorms. In order to steer as much as possible clear of them, we have got reports from over 2,000 farmers on the subject."

Rube Fax Has Played Last Role
Curtain Rung Down on Great Career

"Posty" of "Bonnie Briar Bush" Follows Stoddart and Ian MacLaren.

A dispatch from New York announces the death in that city of Mr. Reuben Fax, the well-known Canadian actor.

Mr. Fax had been ill for some months with internal trouble. Some months ago he was operated on, and for a time was benefited. However, the disease again seized him, and he passed away this week.

He was one of the best-known character actors on the American stage. While his work never reached the point of genius, nevertheless, he was a capable actor of character roles, and made a distinct success. This is particularly true of the role of Posty in "The Bonnie Briar Bush." This part he created for the late J. H. Stoddart, and in it his greatest success was found.

After the death of Stoddart, Fax

Woman Breaks the Climbing Record

Lima, Peru, Aug. 15.—Miss Annie S. Peck, of Providence, R. I., the mountain climber, signalled at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon her arrival at an altitude of 25,000 feet on Mountain Huascarán, the summit of which is covered with perpetual snow. She is accompanied by two trained Alpine climbers.

Mountain Huascarán is believed to be the highest peak in the western hemisphere. By reaching an altitude of 25,000 feet, Miss Peck has ascended higher than any man or woman in the world. The previous record was held by W. W. Graham, who reached a height of 23,800 feet in the Himalayas.

An Ultimatum to C. P. R. Strikers

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Toronto, Aug. 15.—An order has been issued by the C. P. R. stating that all men who went out on strike must apply for their positions before Tuesday at noon, and that their service with the company will start from that date.

regardless of the time they have served with the company. Seniority will be the order of position for promotion according to application. This will sadly effect some of the men who have served for years with the company and will spoil their chances of any pensions.

Youth With a Pistol at the Lakeside

A young man with a revolver had a gay time in Port Stanley the other evening.

He was camping with a party of young chaps, and it is said, looked upon the wine until it took unto itself all the hues of the rainbow.

Then he pulled a revolver, and started a wild west parade that would have made Alkali Ike, the Cactus Gulch Rascal, look like a Sunday school boy with curls.

Insane Patients in the County Jail

The county jail authorities are highly indignant because insane people are brought to the jail and sometimes allowed to remain there for several weeks before being removed.

The latest cause for complaint is in the case of John Finnegan, aged 57, who has been sent to the London Asylum on numerous occasions, partially recovered, and is then again arrested and sent to the jail while the red tape is unwound to get him back to the asylum.

Finnegan is a particularly noisy prisoner, and his constant blasphemous talk is exceedingly annoying to the other prisoners, who are unable to sleep at night. He has been in the county jail for three weeks now, and there is no telling how much longer he will be left there.

Intelligent Farming The Ideal Occupation

Years ago anyone could "farm," but today a man must be intelligent, industrious and thrifty in order to be a successful farmer. Modern methods of agriculture have shown the immense possibilities of the soil. While many farmers, for instance, raise from one hundred to two hundred bushels of potatoes on an acre of land, scientific methods have enabled others to raise on the same kind and amount of soil more than one thousand bushels of potatoes.

The small farm in Ontario, when properly tilled, will yield its owner the greatest return in health, pleasure and profit. Buy a farm in Ontario, and engage in the most fascinating occupation in the world. We have farms in Ontario to sell ranging in size from five to two hundred acres, and in price from five hundred dollars to twenty thousand dollars. These farms are owned by men who have good reasons for selling. Some, having made a competence, are retiring from farming; some wish to sell in order to buy more or less land, or to buy in another locality. Call, telephone or write for our Ontario Real Estate Monthly, containing descriptions of farms in every county of Ontario west and north of Toronto.

The following are short descriptions of a few of the farms we have for sale:

Black Dress Goods

New Arrivals--For Early Fall Wear

Dame Fashion has long since dictated the styles for fall season, 1908, and many worthy black representatives have already arrived. Some have already made selection and the material is now in the hands of dressmaker or ladies' tailor. Many of our early orders are nearing completion. Make your selection now and be in with the first set. It's easier choosing now.

For Ladies' Tailored Suits

Black Broadcloth

Black Venetian

Better value in French Broadcloth than we have shown for some seasons, in glove and Amazon finish, very firm cloths that tailor well and hold in shape. There is no cloth richer in appearance for ladies' tailor-made suits than broadcloth, and none more fashionable. See these new cloths at, yard, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2

Next to the broadcloth in finish, and preferred by some, having a little smoother surface. These are not the worsted venetians, hard finish, but like broadcloth in finish and texture, giving a finished appearance of a fine cloth, that it is, for ladies' fine tailored suits; special qualities, yard, $1, $1.25, $1.50

These are French Suitings and particularly suited for fall and winter wear, being made from heavier wools and are very firmly woven—the best wear-resisting material. If you want a suit that will give you constant wear and in all weather, and stylish too, they are classed with the fashionable cloths, this season; 48 to 52 inches

Tailored Suit, medium-length coat, to order from above materials, complete $26.00

These qualities are also shown in chevrons and fancy striped suitings, in different weights, very stylish, at, yard, $1, $1.25

Black Panama

Black Voile

British All-Wool Panama Dress Goods are in popular favor for the coming fall season. They are made in weights that are suitable for almost any style of garment you might wish for, from the chiffon dress weight to the heavier weaves used for tailored suits. Panama has proved a satisfactory material and these qualities we recommend highly. Yard

75c, 85c, and $1

Exclusive Black Dresses

Some handsome styles in single dress patterns have arrived, beautifully bordered and striped effects on voile and silk poplin foundations. These are much admired. Make your choice early. For dress pattern, $14, $16, $17.50, $18.50, $22

Cooke's Annual Garden Party

Gave 2,000 Enjoyable Time

Large Gathering at Mt. Brydges Hear Addresses by Speaker.

The annual garden party of Cooke's Presbyterian Church, Caradoc, held last evening in the grove just west of Mount Brydges, was one of the most successful of the many held by this congregation. There was a large crowd in attendance, fully 2,000 people being on the ground. As usual, everybody had a most enjoyable time.

Hon. R. F. Sutherland, Windsor, speaker of the House of Commons, occupied the chair. The programme was an excellent one, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

A special train was run from London, about 200 taking the trip from the city, and a hundred more were taken from Mount Brydges and other points.

The Thirteenth Regiment band from Hamilton arrived on the same train and escorted Hon. Mr. Sutherland to the park, where a very fine musical programme was rendered.

Rev. Mr. Leitch, of Delaware, a former pastor, introduced Mr. Sutherland to the audience. He was a very pleasant duty, he declared, to introduce so distinguished a gentleman to congregation and friends of Cooke's Church. Mr. Sutherland had rendered splendid service to his country, and was now honored by one of the most important positions in the Parliament of Canada. He was sure all appreciated the compliment in having Mr. Sutherland present. Mr. Leitch spoke of the delight he experienced in meeting so many of his old friends, and hoped that they would all be spared to enjoy many such pleasant evenings.

Speaker Sutherland.

Hon. Mr. Sutherland was given a hearty welcome. His first duty was, he said, to express his appreciation of the high honor done him in inviting him to be chairman. The fame of Cooke's had gone abroad in the land, and he felt it no little honor to be connected with it in such a manner. He jokingly referred to his position as speaker, which compelled him to listen to many speeches without the opportunity of making a reply. If he spoke too long, he hoped they would call him to order.

Mr. Sutherland spoke of Canada, of its resources and its brilliant future. Lord Dufferin, some thirty years ago, spoke of the great resources and splendid possibilities of Canada, and this future was being realized more largely than even he had dreamed. It was a great privilege to be living in this country at such a time, and its population and importance would be world-wide.

"In a few years no country will exceed Canada in population or in the abundance of her riches," said Mr. Sutherland.

He then introduced the programme, which was a very long one, although most enjoyable.

The Imperial Quartet of London rendered several selections in a very best style. This quartet, which is known most favorably throughout Western Ontario, was never in better voice than last evening, and they were compelled to respond to repeated encores. Mr. Charles Pink, of the quartet, also sang a couple of songs in good style.

The recital of the evening was Miss Irene M. Sheehan, of Toronto, who made a distinctly good impression. She is an artist of much ability, with a fine voice and a keen sense of humor. Last evening she recited several selections cleverly, and was most cordially received by the audience. She was at her best in her imitations, although she showed she could handle difficult readings with judgment and strength.

Bert Harvey, the well-known comedian, of Toronto, was no stranger to the audience, and added to his already long list of successes.

The band rendered many selections during the evening.

Among those present were W. S. Caldwell, M. P. E. Strathroy, Dundas; C. Ross, M. P. P. Strathroy; J. C. Elliott, M. P. P. Glenora; ex-J. A. Stevenson, London, and many others.

The committee in charge made their arrangements with great judgment, and there was not a hitch during the evening.

The programme committee is worthy of special mention in securing such a splendid array of talent.

The special train returned to London at half past eleven, arriving in the city at half past twelve.

Rochette Given a Life Sentence

Thanks To Royal Intercession

Montreal, Aug. 14.—An interesting story comes from Quebec regarding the commuting of the death sentence of Omer Rochette to imprisonment for life. This man, a member of a prominent French-Canadian family residing at Quebec, poisoned his wife and fled the country with another woman. He was finally captured at Chicago, brought back to Quebec, where he was convicted and sentenced to death.

Every possible appeal was made to the Government to commute the death sentence, but in vain, and had the law had its way he would have been hanged today.

His Royal Highness, Prince George of Wales, is the cause of saving Rochette's life. During the Prince's visit at St. Joachim here, he dined with the priests, among them being some of the faculty of Laval University.

It so happens that upon the Laval faculty is a man who married Rochette's sister, and it was whispered to the Prince during the course of the entertainment that they would deem it a great favor if he would intercede for Rochette. This, it appears, he did, calling his faith the King, and the sentence of death was commuted to one of imprisonment for life.

Rochette was yesterday brought up from Quebec, and is now safely housed in St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, where he must pass the remainder of his days.

THE GOV'T. TAKES PROGRAMME FOR HAND IN STRIKE

Ottawa Likely to Settle Trouble in the C. P. R. Shops.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 14.—It was said tonight that the Dominion Government, through the railway commission, will intervene in the strike now on in all the mechanical trades on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The prospects are fair for an amicable settlement of all differences between the company and the men within the next 48 hours, it is said.

J. H. McVey, who is in charge of the local strike, left for Ottawa tonight, following a report made by J. Clark, inspector for the railway commission. McVey will consult with Government officers interested in railway affairs, it is reported.

Dispatches from Toronto say the Locomotive and Firemen Brotherhoods of the C. P. R. have applied to the Government for an arbitration board. Their complaint is that a member was unjustly discharged.

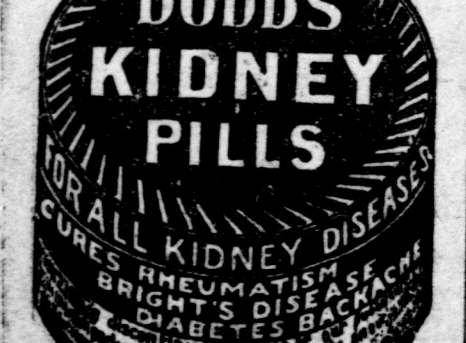

Work Goes On

The work in the shops goes on undisturbed, although the strikers contend that those who have been engaged are of an inferior class.

No indication of violence on the part of the men to force a settlement is apparent, and they seem as men making a personal sacrifice to a cause that is dear to them.

Just how many men are at work in the shops is not known, but some of the strikers' picks concede that there are two hundred.

It is understood that the strikers will send a strong protest to Ottawa, against the alleged use of alien labor by the C. P. R.

PROGRAMME FOR WESTERN FAIR

An Attractive Booklet Containing Information of This Year's Attractions.

There has just been issued by the Western Fair Association their official days thousands of them will be circulated throughout Western Ontario. It is a very neat and attractive booklet, containing the special attractions for this year's exhibition. The management have been extremely successful in moving when they engaged the Kemp Sisters' Wild West Show and Hippodrome performance as one of the main features of the programme. This will be a large company of people, who act as a free attraction before the grandstand. They are the real western people, and have a large number of Indians, cowboy band, stage coach performance, hippodrome races, and interesting and thrilling performance.

There will be many other strong features, including Samoyas, Central America's great aerial wonder, "The King of the Air," the Kroneman Bros. and White and LeMart who will amuse the large crowds daily. The Bickert sensations; the Rice Family, in their wonderful break-away ladder act; the Delke Sisters, equestrians; in their appearance before a Canadian audience; the three sisters, Hedric, Elli and Irma, the wonderful wire performers; the Panatius Sisters, the most wonderful acrobats of the present day, and others. In addition to this, plenty of music will be provided by the Seventh Fusiliers Band, and others.

After each evening's performance there will be put on the best display of fireworks ever seen in London. The management have contracted with Hand & Co. of Hamilton, to put on a programme each evening of 50 separate and distinct pieces, including the description of an electric storm, a railway disaster, and many other beautiful scenes, concluding with "The Eruption of Mount Pelée."

The above will certainly be the strongest programme ever presented to a Western Fair audience. Monday will be athletic day, and there will be two packed speed events each day, commencing Tuesday Programme and all other information given on application to the secretary.

ROSEBERRY BELLES AT PORT STANLEY

Unique Night Parade of Young People From St. Thomas — A "Lockout."

[Special to The Advertiser.]

Port Stanley, Aug. 14.—College day recollections were brought back last night, when a jolly bunch of girls from St. Thomas, who are known as the Roseberry Belles, promenaded the beaches in their dainty night-robes.

Two or three young gentlemen were in the party to act as a guard of honor. The night was made vocal by the shouts and screams of the merry masqueraders.

Miss Ella Smith, of St. Thomas, and Mr. George Morley, of Chicago, are spending the day at Orchard Beach.

Mrs. McDougall and the Misses Wright, of London, are the guests of Miss Campbell, at Broadview Orchard Beach.

Mr. Joe Smith, of Sparta, is staying at Shady Nook, Orchard Beach.

R. H. Babcock, of the Franklin House, has returned to the village, after spending the past three months abroad.

Fish-Hook in His Mouth.

Master Cecil Bruce, of St. Thomas, who is summering at Unadunest Cottage, Orchard Beach, yesterday had the misfortune to run a fish-hook into the roof of his mouth. Dr. Mothersill was called and soon extracted the hook. The little chap has a very sore mouth as a result, but no serious injury is feared.

Mrs. R. H. McConnell, of St. Thomas, is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Torry, at Idle Hours, Orchard Beach.

Miss Farley, of St. Thomas, is the guest of Mrs. John Hobbes, at Dew-Drop-In Cottage, Hill Crest.

Mr. and Mrs. Eckert, sen., of London, arrived today to occupy Mr. Richard Eckert's cottage on New Orchard Beach.

Rev. O. D. Fournier left today for West Lorne.

Miss Grace Lutton and Miss Pearl Shipley, of St. Thomas, are visiting Mrs. (Dr.) McKillop at Westport Villa, Invererie Heights.

A Real "Lockout"

The other evening the mistress of a lodging house down near Stanley Beach closed the doors of her abode at 11 p.m., and refused admittance to several of the lady boarders, who were entertaining friends on the verandah. Consequently the fair ones were forced to climb through the pantry window in order to find their places of rest for the night.

Mrs. John Brown, of Bradford, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. L. Scott, at Victoria Cottage, Erie Rest, has returned home.

Miss Belle Smith has returned to Shady Nook Cottage, Orchard Beach, after spending the past week with her friend, Miss Ruth Titus, St. Thomas.

At a special service at St. Leonard's Church, Leicester, Richard Tuck, aged fourteen, played the organ. By the way he was moving up and down it was evident that he could not just reach the pedals, yet the way he manipulated the three-manual organ was remarkable.

An old man named Edward Welch, who was fined $6 at the last London police court for being intoxicated, said his age was 101.

Slightly over a mile and a fifth per minute was the rate of speed attained by a homing pigeon in a race of 9 1/4 miles.

Races.

[Associated Press.]

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 14.—After having been postponed three times because of rain, the Grand Circuit meeting opened today at Kenilworth Park. The weather was favorable, but the track was heavy and slow. The attendance was very small. The three races on the card were stake events.

The feature was the Dominion of Canada 2:11 pace for $5,000. Seven horses started, and Eel, the Canadian favorite, took the event in straight heats. He paced the second heat in 2:06 1/2. Spanish Queen, the winner of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' stake at Detroit, won the 2:24 trot in straight heats. Copa d'Oro, the California horse, won the 2:06 pace. The first two heats he took handily. Ducky Hal took the third heat. Major Mallow won the last heat, Copa d'Oro finishing third, after getting away last.

Tigers Open in the East
By Defeating Boston 5 to 3Champions Take Pretty Contest at Debut of Final Eastern Invasion.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 14.—Flushed with the triumph of a most successful western trip, the locals opened at home for the last series with the Wolverines this afternoon, and went down to defeat, 5 to 3, in a splendid game before 4,592 people, the depressing weather doubtless keeping more away. The locals could not nunch their hits to the same advantage as their opponents and the local misplays were extremely disastrous.

Detroit played a superb game in the field, Cobb making two catches that were hummers and took the crowd by storm, both in the seventh inning. Gessler also did himself proud by a great capture off Schaefer in the eighth with the bases filled. Cobb twice went out on the bases by taking chances, once at third and again at home.

Cicotte Put In.
Morgan was supplanted by Cicotte in the eighth inning, while Willett worked his game through and was secured on only in the eighth inning, when Boston bunched its hits for the first time in the game. The Boston infield did some very fine work, Lord and Laporte shining by the way they grabbed and threw. The crowd went wild when Morgan retired the Detroiters on strikes in the third inning, both Crawford and Cobb going out that way with the bases filled and but one hand out. Cobb was again disposed of on strikes in the seventh inning.

How well Boston is drawing is shown in the turnout at 15 days of the last western invasion, 123,000.

It was the first appearance of Evans here in a championship game this season and he did very creditable work.

Rossman's one-handed capture of O'Leary's bum throw to first in the fourth was one of the fine things in the game.

Thoney made no attempt to throw the ball to the rubber when he was posed of O'Leary in the eighth. He has absolutely no throwing arm.

The Cy Young testimonial netted the big chap some $6,600. It is expected that Cy will work Saturday, and an overflow turnout is assured.

McConnell is laying off owing to a bad foot. He burst into the game in the seventh and dealt the ball a splendid crack and only Cobb's fine catch kept him off the bases.

McIntyre made his base four times, twice on hits and twice on passes. Morgan and Cicotte each favored him once. "Matty" did not have a fielding chance in the game.

Cobb Overran.
Gessler secured two bases in Boston's half owing to the fact that Cobb overran his hit in trying to catch the ball. Stahl singled to right and in his eagerness to catch Gessler at the rubber, Cobb let the ball go by him. Laporte's out and a single by Sullivan brought Stahl over the rubber. Wagner then hit into a double play.

In the last, with one down, Cobb singled and took second on Gessler's error. He tried to score on Rossman's out, Wagner to Stahl, but the latter threw accurately to the rubber and got his man. Cravath was sent to hit for Cicotte in the ninth and singled, but Thoney and Lord gave easy chances, ending the game. The score:

CURRENT SPORTING GOSSIP

BY SOUTHPAW

NOW THAT it has been handed its annual beating the F. P. will crawl back in its hole and pull the hole in after it.

YESTERDAY was a good one for champions. The Tigers and the Advertiser teams both won.

BILL DAVIS, the Caledonia Indian professional, made a muck of handling the great Longboat, as did Rosenthal and Ashby (of Toronto) before him, and it remained for Tom Flanagan to get something out of the aborigine. Longboat is not a dead one by any means, despite the fact that he failed to annex the Marathon, and he should be protected from the grafting element.

CANADIAN HORSES gave a rare exhibition of class yesterday when they went over in handy style at Buffalo and Grand Rapids.

THE WORK OF OTHELLO, the Chathamough, is perhaps the most wonderful of any of the Canadian horses, for it was only two years ago that he was picked up in a lively stable and developed for track work.

APPARENTLY it is getting to be a regular habit among sportsmen to attempt to professionalize Longboat. The latest entry in the list, according to reports, is Sol Mintz, who hangs his hat in Hamilton and does his betting in Toronto.

ONE BOYD, of Montreal, will have his hands-and-perchance his face—full explaining the ins and outs of that role and the sport of the day.

MONTREAL ENTRIES LARGE
SEVENTY MORE OUT

Each Event for the Canadian Meet Averages 40 Starters.

Montreal, Que., Aug. 15.—The entries for the stakes to be run at the coming meeting of the Montreal Jockey Club will average over 40 for each event, which is a record for this part of Canada.

The Laurier cup, named in honor of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, has a big list of fast sprinters.

The Earl Grey cup, at 1 1/4 miles, has 48 entries.

The Hochelaga and Huron, for 2-year-olds, have each attracted a large number of youngsters, while the Champlain and the St. Denis have 45 and 49 entries, respectively. The steeplechase stakes, the MacDonald and the Strathcona, also have filled wonderfully.

There are already nearly 200 horses at the track.

Free beer was again distributed, as rather offered, by the proprietor of the Angus saloon. He also had a large sign out offering free soup from 11 to 1.

Albert Milward, a young fireman at one of the engines which carries the workmen to the shops, died suddenly on his engine this morning. He had been suffering from acute indigestion.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 15.—Freddie Welch, the English lightweight champion, was awarded the decision over Johnny Murphy, of San Francisco, at the end of 25 rounds in the Jeffries' Athletic Club at Vernon, last night.

The fight afforded the greatest exhibition of gameness ever seen in a local ring. Murphy reeling through 15 rounds in a groggy condition, under a rain of blows that cut his lips and nose to ribbons and closed both eyes.

Bert Heaman Won the Association

Berlin, Aug. 15.—Chapman, of Guelph yesterday won the Seagram trophy in the Twin City bowling tournament over Agnew, of Clinton, by a score of 18 to 16. The final of the association match went to Bert Heaman, of London, over Present, of Guelph.

The consolation match was won by McCurdy, of Stratford, the loser being Scott, of Berlin. The score was 17 to 12.

This ends a most successful tournament, and it is expected that another year will see the number of rinks present almost doubled.

HAPPENINGS OF A DAY IN BUSY EAST LONDON

Short Weights on London Market

The question of short weights and measures on the London market is causing no little discussion among East End businessmen these days. Several of the merchants being prominent among those who prosecuted hucksters a few weeks ago.

One gentleman is of the opinion that the market produce should all be sold by weight.

POSTPONED GAMES— ARE ALL OFF NOW

East End League Decides Not To Play Any of Them.

A meeting of the East End League executive was held at the Duke of York Hotel last night, and much of the final business of the season was dealt with.

As today finishes the regular schedule, the matter of playing off postponed games came up, it being finally decided not to play any of them.

The Ramblers and the Stars will play off next Saturday, and it will likely be the last game of the season.

Mr. Fred Simmons and Mr. Brooks were present to back the claim of the Ramblers, who said that a game scheduled to be played between them and the Stars on July 25 should go to them by default, as the latter team did not show up on the day in question.

The Stars had asked permission of the Ald. Moorhead, who was acting president, to go to Port Stanley to play the McCall team at the picnic.

The request was granted by Mr. Moorhead, subject to the approval of the executive.

After the claim had been discussed at some length, the game was thrown out.

Those present were President Fitzgerald, Secretary Mitchell, Treasurer Gray, Ald. Moorhead and F. McLean.

The coaches were all filled although there was no crowding. The train made excellent time to Windsor.

The Board of Health Means Business

The board of health yesterday inspected Carling's Creek. It was found to be in very bad shape, and at the next meeting of the board a motion calling the attention of the council to the conditions prevailing will be carried.

It is very hard for the Grocers' Association to watch such persons, as the members have generally business to attend to while on the market.

It is very likely that a move will be made to have the council enact a by-law to compel all dealers to sell by weight or measure while on the market, as it is literally impossible to insure straight business methods in any other manner.

off the platform upon which he was standing, a long meat hook running into his arm.

The hook ran in several inches, but luckily Mr. Flannagan was able to reach the floor, and succeeding in getting back to the platform and pulled the iron out.

The wound was dressed by Dr. Spence. Unless blood-poisoning sets in he will be all right in a short time.

A STRIKE OF OIL IN THE EAST END

Old Vat Buried for Years is Now Disgorging.

An old tank containing crude oil, presumably left there since the time of the old refineries is causing a little trouble at the Grand Trunk round-house.

A few days ago a thick black mass was noticed oozing from the bottom of one of the engine pits.

The hole gradually became larger as the matter forced its way up. Already about two carloads have been taken from the pit and it is still coming.

Some of the older men say that there is a huge tank buried right beneath the pit measuring about thirty feet by fifty feet. If such is the case the company will probably have a problem to solve, as the pit cannot be used now, and it is judged that about three hundred cars of oil is in the vat.

Immediately upon reaching the surface the oil becomes quite hard. It is not known whether the oil is combustible or not, as none of the men care to take a chance of lighting it.

The international convention of the Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis will meet in Washington September 15 and 16. Dr. R. D. Hutchinson, of the board of health, has invitations, but it is not likely that either will attend. "There are no appropriations for that purpose," said Dr. Niven.

Laid at Rest.
The funeral of Mrs. Catharine McIntyre took place yesterday from the family residence, 102 Astin street. Services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Birks, at the home of Mr. Peter McEneaney, a brother of the deceased, lot 2, concession 6, Lobo Township. Interment was made in Carleton Place cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. Duncan Lamont, Hugh Lamont, John Lamont, Douglas McMurphy, Duncan McColm and Douglas Keir.

No Advance Here.
The price of milk is advancing in some cities around London, owing to the fact that the recent drought has made the pasture very short. It is not likely that such an advance will take place here. "We have heard nothing of an advance," said Mr. William Phoenix, who has improved the pasture a great deal, so that now it is very good. We do not look for any advance in the price at present, at least."

HATES HER CHILD
Drives Daughter From Home, Though Famed for Generosity and Diamonds.

Babylon, L. I., Aug. 14. — The wealthy and aristocratic residents today stand amazed at the baring of a skeleton in the closet of Mrs. Egbert W. Strong.

Mrs. Strong, who for 20 years has been consoled with as childless, has a daughter, whom she has refused to care for since its birth. The strange part of the story is that not even her husband has ever been able to solve the secret of her abhorrence of the child, who for 14 years has lived in the home of R. H. Hunt, of Trumansburg, N. Y.

Mrs. Strong is Babylon's wealthiest resident, and is famed for her generosity and her diamonds. Her husband has in recent years brought his daughter Marion in contact with her mother, hoping that natural affection for the winsome girl would be aroused, but each time the woman has driven her child away.

LATEST STOCK MARKET REPORTS
[Special from Harris, Winthrop & Co., to H. C. Beecher.]

Montreal and Toronto stock exchanges are closed Saturdays during July and August.

New York, Aug. 15.—The unsettled condition of the market caused by yesterday's decline again prevailed during today's session. There was some short covering at the opening, which steadied prices for a time, but the shorts found they were getting their stock easily, and decided to wait.

Among the favorable reports of the day was the placing of a large order in steel pipe by the Standard Oil Company with the Steel Corporation, and the announcement that bids were being received by the Harriman roads on $-900 cars. We do not see any change in general conditions which would warrant a much further decline, and while the market during the earlier part of the week may be somewhat unsettled, we believe that these reactions should be taken advantage of to make conservative purchases.

British Bar Honors Premier Asquith

THE FIRST PRACTICING LAWYER TO BECOME BRITISH PREMIER IN 100 YEARS—POLITICS AND THE LAW.

There was a notable gathering of members of the English bar recently in the Inner Temple Hall at a complimentary dinner to Mr. Asquith on his appointment as prime minister. The occasion was entirely non-political. The attorney-general, Sir W. S. Robson, K. C., M. P., was in the chair. After the toast of the King, the attorney-general said that the promotion of Mr. Asquith to the position of prime minister indicated the position which the bar held in the public life of the country. Both at the bar and in Parliament no man had provoked less personal resentment than the prime minister. (Cheers.) He could not say that he would always boast of immunity from resentment. He was by no means certain that they were not giving that dinner just in time, for such eminence as he had achieved attracted the lightning. (Laughter.) Already they had begun to break his windows. For once the gentle sex had been the first to find out that he was cold and even callous on occasions. (Laughter.) They felt themselves to themselves to his railings (laughter); yet he went on working, brutally working, in a back room all the time. (Laughter.) He hoped Mr. Asquith would never have anything worse to endure than that, and whatever fortune might be in store for him, he would always have the personal goodwill of his old friends and colleagues of the English bar. (Cheers.)

Sir Edward Clarke, K. C., then proposed "Our Guest." That was, he said, an unparalleled gathering in point of numbers to celebrate an occasion of exceptional interest. (Cheers.) They congratulated Mr. Asquith on a promotion which reflected honor upon their profession. (Cheers.) In the ordinary and unquestioned right of succession he had come to the highest place (cheers), and they rejoiced in his success. (Cheers.)

THE PREMIER'S REPLY.

The prime minister, who was received with cheers, in reply, said: "You do not need to be assured that no compliment could be more grateful to me, or to any man who, like myself, has been for more than thirty years a member of the English bar, than such a welcome as has been given to me tonight by the great and good profession, among whom the laborious days of my life have been so largely spent. (Cheers.) It enhances to me the value of that compliment that you should have selected as your mouthpiece Sir Edward Clarke. (Cheers.) It has been my misfortune, both in political and professional life, to be more often against them with Sir Edward Clarke, but whether with him or against him I have always felt that there is not one among our contemporaries whom I should more readily advise young men entering the professional arena to look to as a model, whether of temper, of method, of style, or of the whole art of advocacy. (Cheers.)

OBLIGATIONS TO OLD FRIENDS.

I am among old friends and brethren. I may perhaps be allowed for a moment to be egotistic and autobiographic. I am glad to recall the names and memories of two illustrious lawyers to whom I feel myself always under special obligation. The first is my old master, Charles Bowen (cheers), afterwards one of the brightest ornaments of the bench, in whose chambers I served my pupillage. I learned, I hope, many lessons there, and one which every man who aspires to practice with success at the bar in these days has to learn sooner or later, and that was the multifarious and manifold dangers of an encounter with Danckwerts. (Laughter.) Later on, after some pretty lean years, in which one used to welcome as an unexpected and grateful phenomenon a county court brief marked "one guinea," and coming from a client whose time and method of payment were both nebulous and problematical (laughter), I had the great good fortune to secure the favor and help of a great man, my dear and revered friend, Lord James of Hereford. (Cheers.) I owe to him a debt which he has never thought of exchanging, and which I could never repay. May I add a third name, the name of one whom I think all the older amongst us at any rate will agree with me in thinking was in the very first and highest ranks of advocates either of our own or of any other time—Charles Russell. (Cheers.) I was privileged to be associated with him as his junior in the greatest state trial of the Victorian era (hear hear), and we had as colleagues my noble friend the great lord chancellor, and a man of infinite humor and unique loveliness, whose untimely death was to me and to all of his friends an irreparable loss—the late Frank Lockwood. (Cheers.) Those are memories which time can never efface. (Hear, hear.)

POLITICS AND THE LAW.

Sir Edward Clarke has referred to the fact that it is just about 100 years since a practicing member of the bar was prime minister of England. He was kind enough not to remind me that my eminent predecessor came to a sudden and untimely end. (Laughter.) Absit omen. But every age has its own peculiar dangers. (Laughter.) And, again, it is suggested to me by what Sir Edward Clarke has said that in our school days we all read of a certain legendary character who seems to have tried to deal with the feminist movement somewhere in Thrace by euphonious generalities, and who, as the result, was torn to pieces by wild women. (Laughter.) History happily does not always or even often repeat itself. (More laughter.) It is natural, perhaps, that on an occasion like this one should be tempted to reflect upon the relations in our history between politics and the law. The gentlemen of the long robe of nisi prius mind have provided from time to time ample material for the cheap cynicism of un instructed politicians. Once, at any rate, and I think only once, in our history they were able to put those criticisms into practice, and the disastrous experiment was tried of a House of Commons from which lawyers were excluded. The result was that the whole of its legislation was declared not to be worth twopence. (Hear, hear.) I boldly make this claim, that there is no class or profession in our community which has done more, I will go further, and say there is none that has done so much to define and develop and to defend the liberties of England. (Cheers.) Sir Thomas More, Lord Coke, Selden, Somers, Camden, Romilly—these are but a few names selected at random from a long and illustrious roll, and they were all bred in the common law of England.

THE SAFEGUARD OF JUSTICE AND FREEDOM.

I will venture to add that the common law of England, which is not a compendium of mechanical rules, but a living organism, which has grown and moved in response to the time and fuller development of the nation—the common law of England has been, still is, and will continue to be, both here and wherever English communities are found, at once the safeguard of English justice and English freedom. (Cheers.) But there is another aspect of our meeting tonight, a domestic

BALLOONING NOW THE FASHION

HAS ALMOST SUPERSEDED MOTORING AMONG BRITISH NOVELTY SEEKERS.

Ballooning as a sport has almost superseded motoring in the affections of the fickle searchers for novelty in Great Britain. Only a comparatively few months ago motoring reigned supreme as the twentieth century excitement for men and women. To have a racing car, to run it oneself, to understand its intricate workings, and armed with goggles and other motor trimmings to brave wind, weather, policemen, fines, injury to life and limb and damage to the pedestrian by tearing along country roads at a prohibited speed—this was the acme of sport.

Now the motor and the chauffeur have long holidays while people are trying the delights of aerial navigation. Courageous guests at house parties start off for daily balloon rides when the weather allows and sometimes when it is not favorable, and the less courageous spirits find themselves deserted by even host and hostess for hours at a time.

Wonders find the erstwhile motor garb useless for ballooning, so there is the added zest of planning new headgear and costumes for the new sport, while shopkeepers advertise special lunch baskets, "compact yet roomy," which are the only suitable things to provide for the appetites of hungry balloonists.

Hurlingham, the fashionable country club near London, run on the same lines as Ardsley, has thrown itself into the sport of ballooning with the enthusiasm it always devotes to every new fad.

Balloon races have been arranged at the club frequently, and almost every Saturday afternoon ascents are made. Sometimes as many as 25 or 30 balloons ascend at the same time. A pilot balloon goes up first and registers the velocity of the wind, and then if the report is favorable the others are detached from their fastenings and away they start for a long distance race which may land them 50 miles away.

Sometimes the wind is too strong and the race must be abandoned, but even then there are always some courageous persons willing to ascend so that the crowd which gathers every Saturday afternoon may have a show of some sort to compensate them for their disappointment at not seeing a race.

TEACHING BY MOVING PICTURES

One of the new uses to which moving pictures are put is teaching, and at least one house dealing in films publishes a list of some hundreds intended for classroom use.

Most peculiar of all are the pictures of operations intended for display in hospitals and medical colleges. In fact it is explicitly stated that medical and surgical films are restricted to exhibition before such institutions and cannot be leased except under strict guarantees that their use will be so limited.

Perhaps, however, the general public would not care to sit through a vaudeville show and at the end as the house was darkened read in letters of light upon the screen: "Removal of a myxomatous tumor of the thigh," or "Extirpation of a bilateral exophthalmic goitre."

The catalogue, which describes these films and which promises many more than are contained in the issue for this year, describes them in great detail. One series consists of half a dozen operations all of the same general nature, the "Extirpation of encapsulated tumors" in all more than one-fifth of a mile of film is needed.

Surgery is not alone in being thus illustrated. Medicine has its pictures, more particularly to illustrate the diseases in which there is a characteristic walk. Various forms of paralysis where the diagnosis is dependent on the gait are shown in detail. The pictures of such a disease as paralysis agitans show the characteristic rigidity of the body when the sufferer is walking and of the face muscles when talking.

An unusual series illustrates the effect of beri-beri on the natives of Borneo. Moving pictures also have their use rather than a public aspect, upon which you will allow me for a moment to dwell. This is, I think, in many respects a unique gathering—(hear, hear)—but I am not vain enough to interpret it merely as a compliment to myself. I think it has a much wider significance. As the attorney-general has said, our life, by the very necessities of our profession, is spent in constant and unceasing conflict. We breathe every day an atmosphere of eager, strenuous, inspiring controversy, and your gathering tonight is surely characteristic of the temper and of the traditions of the English bar. Here we sit round these tables in friendly and in brotherly unity, in doing honor to a member of our common profession to whom fortune has been kind. Why is that? The reason, for those of us who know the real spirit of the bar, is plain, and it is this—the arduous struggle, the slow given and received, the exultation of victory, the sting of defeat which are our daily experiences, so far from breeding divisions and ill-will only bind us more closely together by the ties of a comradeship for which you would look in vain in any other arena of the emotions and the rivalries of men.—(Cheers.) I thank you with all my heart for one of the great honors of my life.—(Cheers.)

In solving problems of agriculture and public health. The dealers in films announce that by a process which they describe as micro-kinematography they can show the typhoid bacilli magnified 850 diameters in all stages of growth and movement. Similarly the circulation of blood in the web of a frog's foot is shown, and the movement of the chlorophyll or green coloring bodies in the leaf.

The possibility of teaching geography in this way is easily understood, and the motion picture camera has invaded most parts of the civilized world. Even the religious field is not neglected and the attention of Sunday schools and missionary societies is called to such subjects as "Open-air Bible classes in India," conducted by native evangelists, or "Outcasts of India: Procession of men, women and children who have embraced the Christian religion."

Zoology offers a list of subjects that ought to charm any child into forgetting that he is learning. The subjects range from polar bear fishing to camels crossing the desert. Very many of these pictures have been made in the famous wild animal park of Carl Hagenbeck near Hamburg.

Of the microscopic picture some 600 feet devoted to the one subject of "Life in a water bubble," with a cheerful collection of views of such creatures as megatherium bacilli and paramacium, or a swarm of water fleas.

HOW FOREST FIRES START

RESPONSIBILITY OF TIMBERMEN—STRANGE FREAKS OF THE FLAMES.

"These forest fires are more often started by some one throwing down a match carelessly or spilling out the live ashes from his pipe," said D. Whittaker. "When we were building the extension from Champion to L'Anse-au-Loup some of the boys thought they would go down to Champion for a time. Coming back one of them lit his pipe and threw the match into the dry grass.

Before that fire burned itself out it had traversed a strip of territory 60 miles long and five miles wide. We lost hundreds of thousands of trees by the fire, to say nothing of the timber that was burned over—all because a man was not careful where he threw a lighted match. When such fires once get started they look after themselves; you can't stop them.

"And they play some queer freaks. I have seen great pine trees, standing out alone in a little clearing 100 yards or more from anything, and suddenly the fire would jump over the top of the tree like a shell, enveloping it in fire. It burned as though it had been kiln dried.

"Somehow the fire seems to take all the sap out of the tree. That tree was completely destroyed in a short time, the fire sweeping on and leaving it a grotesque and blackened trunk where before was a beautiful picture.

"In the old days the Indians were very careful of fire. When they broke camp in the morning after going a short distance one of the band would go back to see that there was no spark unextinguished. If there was he would be sure to put it out. If he did not return to the waiting band soon two or three others would go back and if there was any fire they would help him extinguish it.

"In that way forest fires were prevented. Nowadays with white campers and picnickers going into the woods and leaving without care whether they leave sparks which may cause a blaze or not, it is hard to preserve the forests. I presume it was something of that kind which started the fire in that country up in British Columbia. I know the country; it is densely timbered and a fire there will mean the loss of hundreds of thousands of dollars in standing timber, to say nothing of the lives said to have been lost."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

FORTUNES ON WESTERN TREES

ORCHARDS IN THE NORTHWEST WHICH YIELD PROFITS OF $1,000 AN ACRE.

In the Rogue River valley in Southern Oregon, F. H. Hopkins in 1907 made a profit of $10,000 off sixteen acres of winter Nells pears—$1,187 50 an acre, says the Technical World. In the same valley G. H. Hoyer bought ten acres of pear orchard at $500 an acre. Fifteen months later the crop brought him $3,600.

Eight years ago J. L. Dumass set out 50 acres of apples near Dayton in the Walla Walla district of Southern Washington. In the summer of 1907 he bought 50 acres of apple orchard adjoining the property at an investment of $18,000. The apples he picked from these 50 acres that season sold for $16,000, and the total crop from the hundred acres realized $52,000—a return to the owner of $40,000.

A climate and soil that are capable of rearing such monsters as the redwood trees and the sequoias, which render measurements of vegetable growth in other regions of this country puny and scant, account in part for these bewildering figures. But there are obscure valleys, narrow and diminutive, mere pockets, between huge mountains, where in the past no plant worthy of cultivation has found so much as a foothold. And it is in many just such spots as these that the returns are the hugest. Irrigation, in such cases, is the remaining factor that explains the mystery.

The same magazine tells a remarkable story of the success of two women who tried farming in England. They began with five acres in Berkshire, but found they had too much land, so they cut down their holdings to less than half that amount. The teachers of the women were a French gardener and his family, who with an acre of land in France, sold $2,500 worth of produce in a year.

"In a bare plowed field stands a square palisade of zinc plates enclosing about three-quarters of an acre," writes a visitor to the farm. "The ground is all covered with inverted bell glasses of the kind known in Europe as clochers. Under each bell at the time this writer visited the farm were five lettuce. Lettuces were growing around the bells and other vegetables sown broadcast were coming up everywhere. Every inch of the soil bears at least three crops a year, each of them anticipating the season and therefore producing fancy prices."

THE COLD WATER BAG

MAKES A GOOD PILLOW ON HOT NIGHTS, SAYS THE FAT MAN WHO KEEPS COOL.

"You hear a lot of talk these hot days about the troubles folks have in getting to sleep," said the fat man, who stays in town all summer. "The trouble with them is that they don't know how to keep cool."

His remarks aroused the chronic kicker.

"Sounds fine to me," he remarked. "You talk as if you really knew something. Perhaps you've got a cold air current piped down from Greenland on to your bed or have your pillows stuffed with cracked ice. I don't suppose you pillow ever gets all sticky on these humid nights, when there isn't a breath of air stirring; mine does, and I'll tell you you can't beat it. If you can, loosen up. We're listening. What's the answer?"

"Hot water bag," replied the fat man. "A chorus of jeers greeted this remark, so he went on to explain. 'I don't suppose it ever penetrated your thick skulls, did it,' he asked, 'that there are more than a few uses for a hot water bag? Never took one to bed with you in the winter, did you, when your room was so cold that the sheets seemed freezing together, and put it at your feet?'

"Never did enough thinking with that idea factory of yours, did you, to realize that a hot water bag can be a cold water bag just as well? Fact, you, when your room was so cold that the sheets seemed freezing together, and put it at your feet?'

"Never did enough thinking with that idea factory of yours, did you, to realize that a hot water bag can be a cold water bag just as well? Fact, you, when your room was so cold that the sheets seemed freezing together, and put it at your feet?'

"When I want to spend a comfortable night and dodge the discomfort of a hot feather pillow that seems hotter than the sun-soaked asphalt, I get out my three-quart hot water bag. I fill it with ice water, not too full, but just so it's a little soft. Then wrap a

THE GRAVE OF THE AFRICAN COLOSSUS IN THE MATOPOS HILLS—HE LIES IN A GLACIAL GARDEN AND IS WATCHED BY NATIVE BLACKS—RHODES' GREAT RHODESIAN FARM NEAR BULAWAYO—HIS THATCHED HOME—A RIDE OVER THE ESTATE IN AN AUTOMOBILE.

Flying for 60 miles over Matabeleland in an automobile.

Racing at 25 miles an hour over the veldt on roads so muddy that the wheels often spin around without catching.

Dashing through streams where the water splashes high into the air, and crossing ditches where the machine goes up and down with a jump. Now honking by swamps, frightening the great black and white herons which live there; now racing with antelopes over the plains, and now rushing by Matabele kraals where the natives come out and gaze at us in their half-naked wonder.

These are some of the incidents of a ride I took yesterday from here to the Matopos Hills to visit the grave of Cecil Rhodes.

The great African statesman lies buried in low mountains far off from any human settlement. He selected as his tomb, a formation fitted for the grave of a god, and the way to it takes one for 30 miles through the Matopos hills, the most of which is comprised in a great estate which Mr. Rhodes owned and which is still held in his name.

It was up this valley we went on our way to the tomb. The country is but little different now from what it was when David Livingstone, the great African explorer, first announced its existence to white men. It consists of a veldt which stretches on and on as far as the eye can reach. The most of it is covered with grass, as green as that which borders Victoria Nyanya, spotted here and there with a scanty growth of thorny brush. There are many native villages along the road, the tomb, and the way out on the veldt are patches of cultivated lands. These are the farms of the natives. Some are not as big as a bed quilt, and the largest contains only four or five acres. They are planted to millet, Indian corn, and the like. The fences around them, and they stand right in the veldt.

Cecil Rhodes gave directions that the natives should have free use of his unused lands, and they are charged no more now than when the whole country belonged to them.

AMONG THE MATABELES.

I shall write more of the Matabeles in the future. I had a good chance to see them during this ride. Their kraals are scattered over the country and in nearly every corner of the country men were working. The hard labor of these people is done by the women. We saw many girls who were hoeing corn. They were naked to the waist and the white sweat drops stood out like pearls on their brown skins as they bent low and chopped out the weeds. In some of the fields there were men, but they were mostly smoking and watching the women to keep them up to their work. A few of these lords of creation were clad in cast-off European clothing, but some were absolutely nude, save for a little skin apron tied around the waist. The aprons are not much bigger than a ladies' handkerchief. They are made of deer or cat skin, and are quite ornamental. My chauffeur told me that the women were the wives of the watchers, and the latter were out in the fields to see that their ladies did not loaf on the job. Many of the Matabeles have two or three wives, and there are some "trust magnates" who have twenty or so. Women here are a sign of wealth, and the more a man owns the richer he is.

We stopped now and then to visit some of the native villages, many of which are found not far from the road. They are fair types of the thousands which are scattered over this country. Let me describe one. It consists of a dozen or so huts, rounded by a wall made of limbs of trees tied together and looking not unlike one of the stump fences of Northern New York. Inside this wall there is another shutting off a space in which the sheep and goats are kept at night, and outside the wall are the homes of the people. These are circular mud huts, with walls about five feet high, and thatched roofs which slope upward in the form of a cone. Each hut has a door at the front, and this is the only way into the average home. Let us enter. The floor is plastered with mud and is of native mud. It is as smooth as a school-boy's slate, except at the center, where a hole as big as a fist measures has been cut out for the fire. The cooking is all done over that hole, the clay pots resting upon the coals inside it. In a few huts iron kettles are used, but, as in the past, most of the cooking is done in rude jars of native mud. In one hut that I entered I saw green corn boiling, and in another a half-naked woman was roasting locusts, while her family squatted about and smoked their pipes, awaiting the feast. Very few of the huts are more than ten feet in diameter, and some are much less.

One of the villages we visited was that of a famous native chief, who led in the rebellion which broke out in the loss of Matabeleland to the natives. This was Oom Jaahn. He is now an old man, but still has a great respect for the man who conquered him. Indeed, he is so afraid of Cecil Rhodes' ghost that he will not go to his grave for fear his spirit may be hovering about it. Not long ago the manager of the Danagers of the Rhodes' estate here told Oom Jaahn that he would give him a horse and a new saddle and bridle if he would travel over the twenty miles between here and the Matopos hills and look at the Rhodes monument. The man replied that he did not want Cecil Rhodes to haunt him for the rest of his life, and that he believed it was best to let dead men lie. Nevertheless, Oom Jaahn was a famous warrior, and during his prime was much feared. He fought well, but gradually came to respect the English soldiers who conquered him. A short time ago he was asked what he thought of Cecil J. Rhodes and his troops. He replied:

"Those men were men. And," he concluded, "their fathers were men before them."

CECIL RHODES' BIG RHODESIAN FARM.

About seventeen miles from Bulawayo we found ourselves in the heart of a big farm established by Cecil J. Rhodes. He bought up nearly all the land between Bulawayo and the Matopos hills, including a strip twenty or thirty miles long, embracing a number of rich valleys, or, rather, depressions in the hills. He built a dam holding a million gallons of water to irrigate a part of this tract, and so arranged the lands about the dam that they formed one of the paying parts of his estate. There is a ten-acre in charge of them who keeps 700 acres in crops of various kinds, and I understand that he is now raising two crops of corn a year. In addition there are tens of thousands of acres of pasture, and a part of this is now devoted to ostriches, a part to cattle, and other parts to game. There are even wild ostriches on the property, but, by Rhodes' decree, no shooting can be done upon it.

This farm was one of the favorite homes of the great white African king, and during my trip I had a chance to see the palace, which formed his home upon it. The word palace is ironical. Cecil J. Rhodes, although he was worth millions, was more fond of the simple life than Wagner himself. One of his residences was the Government House at Bulawayo, which had every comfort that money could buy, but his favorite home was a native hut. He had such a hut outside the Government house, and often left the latter to sleep under the stars.

Out here on the farm he had three huts, and in these he spent weeks and months at a time. One hut was his bedroom, and another his kitchen, and the third might be called his drawing or living room. They are still standing. His living room is open on all sides, and consists of merely a thatched roof upheld by posts covering a space about forty feet square. Its walls consist of screens of matting which may be rolled up and down to shut out the wind. When Cecil Rhodes was here they were usually up, and as the huts stand upon a hill he could look over the rich valley in one direction, and away off at the other see these mighty hills among which he loved to wander and where he directed his resting place should be. Right under the hill there is an orchard of peaches, pears, apples and apricots, now in bearing, which was set out under Mr. Rhodes' plan, and looking over the valley one now sees the rich fields of corn which his imagination planned.

I am told that Cecil Rhodes liked to be alone. While at the Government House he was overrun with callers. When he came here to the farm those who wished to see him had to drive eighteen miles out and then eighteen miles back before they reached a hotel. If they wanted to stay they had to sleep in the open, for the huts were only large enough for Mr. Rhodes himself. Later on he built a hotel about three miles distant in order that he might have a place to entertain such guests as he chose. This hotel is now used by the visitors as a luncheon place on their way to the tomb. I am told that Mr. Rhodes would go off and spend days by himself in the Matopos hills. He would take books along and camp out. At one time he wandered up to the place and got lost. There he remained for a week. It was some time before a native appeared and showed him the way out. In describing the place to the Matabeles, he was told that the hill on which he was lost was known among them as the "mountain of the friendly spirit."

Leaving the farm we passed through the great park and gardens which Mr. Rhodes left in his will as a resort for the people of Bulawayo. They lie between the farm and the hills and comprise a part of the latter. The park covers 18,000 acres, and there are fifteen miles of roads through it, all planted with avenues of quick-growing trees. More than thirty thousand specimens of plants are cultivated here; and there is also a large nursery devoted to the development of the forest.

The zoological garden is inside a fence four miles long. It includes every kind of animal that will live in Africa, with the exception of the beasts of prey, such as lions and leopards. There are giraffes, antelopes, gazelles and zebras everywhere to be seen. The animals are not afraid, for no shooting is allowed in the vicinity, and they are permitted to live as far as possible in a state of nature.

THE MATOPOS HILLS.

I wish I could describe for you these mighty hills which Cecil Rhodes chose as his last resting place. They are nothing like any range I have seen elsewhere. They rise up out of the African veldt in the shape of great masses of granite, ground smooth by the glaciers of a million old years ago. They are sixty miles long and from ten to twenty miles wide, and they wind their way in and out over the plain, looking as though they might have been thrown up by volcanoes. In some places they remind of the Saxon Switzerland, and in others of the "Garden of the Gods" on the edge of the Rockies in Colorado. Upon many of them are boulders piled one upon another. And such boulders. You will find nothing like them in any other part of the world. You have seen pebbles so worn by the waters that they are as round as marbles and as smooth. On these Matopos hills there are boulders as big as a haystack lying on these granite rocks which are as smooth as the pebbles. The rocks upon which they lie are smooth. In places they made me think that they might be great wens on the bald head of old mother earth, which is here pushing itself towards the sky.

Indeed, the whole range is one mighty glacial garden. The hills, where I visited them, are about eleven miles wide, and all are scarred and worn, with these mighty boulders lying here and there upon them. In some places the rocks are piled up like a fortification, being as evenly laid as though the gods had been the masons and had here worked at their trade. Some of the rocks are beautifully colored, and their hues change as the sun moves over them. Some contain caves, and in these caves the natives of generations ago have painted pictures which are now the wonder of the archeologists.

The hills contain beautiful valleys. Cascades flow down them and springs here and there gush forth, reminding one of the living water which spouted when Moses smote the rock.

We drove the automobile right into the hills and wound our way among the boulders to the foot of the rocky mass which the great African here chose as his last resting place. It is more than a mile in length, and it rises above the valley for hundreds of feet. Like all the hills, it is composed of red granite and is ground as smooth as a floor. With staff in hand I climbed up, bending half double in places and setting my feet flat for fear I might slip. The view broadened at every step, until at last on the top I was far above the Matopos hills, which extended up and down the country so far as my eyes could reach.

GUARDED BY THE MATABELES. On the summit the rock is smooth, forming a level space, which covers perhaps a quarter of an acre. About this space lie a score of the mighty boulders I have described, so placed by nature that they seem to guard it. Right in the centre of this space, on the very summit, is the tomb of Rhodes. It is the rock itself. The grave was gouged out by mallet and chisel, and the granite was so hard that it required the masons ten days to do the work. There was no blasting for fear that it might crack the rock, but the square hole was dug out bit by bit until it was deep enough to hold the coffin. This was then covered with cement and a granite slab placed over it, the whole being hermetically sealed. Upon the top of the slab there is now a bronze plate three feet wide and five feet long, and upon it are engraved the simple words which Mr. Rhodes ordered for the monument. They are:

"Here lie the remains of Cecil John Rhodes."

There is no date of birth or death nor any inscription mentioning the wonderful work that Rhodes did for South Africa and Great Britain. The very simplicity of the grave adds to its grandeur, and the fact that it lies out here in the open, in the wilds of the vast country which he has given to the English crown, seemed to me monument enough. It was impressive, and as I looked at it, I involuntarily took off my hat, for I seemed to be upon holy ground.

As I climbed up the rocks and walked here and there about the grave was followed by two Matabele boys. They made no noise as they slipped in their bare feet around the mighty boulders which guard the tomb, and it was only when I changed my course that I was able to see them. They were, I am told, two of the guards which Oom Jaahn, the chief of whom I have written, keeps always here to guard Rhodes' tomb. They are replaced by others from day to day, so that some are ever present.

These guards say nothing to visitors, but any man who would dare to put his name upon the rocks or mutilate the place would at once be reported to the authorities at Bulawayo and punished. At first Oom Jaahn furnished the boys free of charge as a tribute to the memory of Rhodes, after a custom that the Matabeles have of guarding their noted dead. After a while, however, the Rhodes estate recognized their value as a protection against iconoclasts and since then a certain amount has been regularly paid to the ebony watchers.

T. P. In His Anecdote Lord Ellenboroughs Wit.

(By T. P. O'Connor, M. P., in T. P.'s Weekly.)

Lord Ellenborough was a dignified and courteous judge, but he was capable of correcting counsel with a caustic wit. Many instances of this are recorded, and the following are noted by Townsend in his "Twelve Eminent Judges." When Justice Allan Park had been moved, in some hard-fought case that appealed to his feelings, to retire to his chambers, he called heaven to witness and so forth, while addressing the jury: "Pray, sir," said my lord, "pray, don't swear in that way here in court!" The effect of this interruption, in a grave tone, was irresistible, and Mr. Park heartily joined in laughing at this unexpected practical pleasantry.

When another counsel, too much addicted to self, had been ordered in the course of his address, that such things were enough to drive one from the profession of the law—"Don't threaten the court," said his lordship, "with such a terrible calamity!" The audience, who were in some things read, blurted out in a hopelessly imbecile, are often remembered and quoted with malicious glee, for they possess a character of quality and grave sarcasm peculiar to the man. An eminent conveyancer, who prided himself on having answered 30,000 cases, came express from the court of chancery to the king's bench to argue a question of real property. Taking for granted, rather to his regret, that common lawyers are little more acquainted with the Digest of Cruise than with the laws of China, he commenced his erudite harangue by observing "that an estate in fee simple was the highest estate known to the law of England." "Stay, stay," interrupted the justice with consummate gravity; "let me write that down." He wrote, and read, slowly and deliberately the note which he had taken, and then he said: "An estate in fee simple is the highest estate known to the law of England. The court, sir, is indebted to you for the information."

There was only one person present who did not perceive the irony, and that was the learned counsel who incurred it. But though impervious to irony, it was impossible even for his self-love to avoid understanding the home-thrust lunged by the judge at the conclusion of his harangue. He had exhausted the year books and all the mysteries of real property law, in a sleepy oration which effectually cleared the court; insensible alike to the grim repulse to the bench, and the yawning impatience of the ushers, when, at the close of some parenthetical and apparently interminable sentences, the clock struck four, and the judges started to their feet. He pealed to know he would be their pleasure to hear the remainder of his argument. "Mr. P.," rejoined the chief, "we are bound to hear you, and shall do so on Friday; but pleasure has been long out of the question, and we are sorry so soon as they sat down, had kept it up after the ladies left the table, had walked homewards with him in order to pursue it, flinging a last word after his opponent as they parted at Mr. Pusey's lodgings. In contrast to his morbid love of groping in the spiritual interiors of those with whom he found himself alone. He would ask of strangers questions which, but for his rister was advancing rapidly into the regions of poetry in a grave argument at banc, and observing, "It is written in the large volume of nature," when the judge instantly recalled his wandering imagination by the caustic query, "In what page, pray?"

JOHN BRIGHT.

John Bright was master of a rich Anglo-Saxon humor, which told with immense effect on the House of Commons. He once made a most telling retort on a Tory lord who is to say, a lord of courtesy title, the son of a peer. Bright had suffered twice at least, from what appeared to be a threat of softening of the brain. On one occasion he had to go abroad for a long time. He came back quite restored to health, after the first visit, and when he was in the House the young noble lord had the bad taste to attack upon him, suggesting that to punish him for settling his class against class Providence had visited him with a disease of the brain. Bright, speaking later on the same evening, said that the noble lord, "making himself the mouthpiece of Divine Providence, had declared that Providence had visited him (Bright) for his sins with a disease of the brain. Well, Mr. Speaker," Bright went on, "what a visitation with which even Providence itself can never afflict the noble lord."

PUSSEY AT SHORT RANGE.

The Rev. W. Tuckwell, in his extremely interesting and piquant "Comic Portraits of the English," draws a portrait of Mr. Pusey. "Two things impressed me when I first saw Dr. Pusey close—his exceeding slovenliness of person—buttonless boots, beetle-limp, intonsum mentum, unbrushed hair, grey hair, and a ruffled, and the almost artificial sweetness of his smile, contrasting as it did with the sombre gloom of his face when in repose. He lived the life of a hermit, reading no newspapers, and was unacquainted with the commonest names and occurrences, and was looked upon with much alarm in the Berkshire neighborhood, where an old lady, much respected as a deadly one for prophecy, had identified him with one of the three frogs which were to come out of the dragon's mouth. His brother, the renowned agriculturist, would introduce him to visitors with the aphorism that one of them sat in esculent, the other in Hebrew roots; but, like his friend and follower Charles Marriott, he had no small talk, and would sit absolutely silent in strange company. To external society he never went; he was once persuaded by his old friend and neighbor, Sir Robert Throgmorton, to meet at dinner the Roman Catholic antiquary and theologian, Dr. Rock; but he came back bewailing the failure of the party. In contrast to his morbid love of groping in the spiritual interiors of those with whom he found himself alone. He would ask of strangers questions which, but for his

WHISPER-COLORED HAIR.

The poet was favoring a friendly soul with his last verses. The verses were descriptive of a beautiful girl. The poet read:

Her head was massed in flowing curls, The color of a whisper.

This made the listener "sit up." "What's that?" he said. "Read that again."

"If I thought you would say something about that," the poet answered, "I don't want to appear egotistical, but that little phrase gives some scope for the exercise of the mind."

"In what way?"

The poet laughed. He said, "how beautifully that describes the shade of her hair! Every poet speaks of golden hair or raven locks. To be a success one must be original. Well, she did not have golden hair. It was nearly golden, and I convey the impression by means of the one word."

The other still looked puzzled. "You have heard," said the poet, patiently, "that silence is golden?"

"Yes," the other admitted. "Well," resumed the poet, "if silence is golden, what would a whisper be? It would be nearly golden, wouldn't it?"—St. James' Budget.

The Frasers and Conquest of Quebec

THEIR GREAT PART IN THE BRITISH OPERATIONS CULMINATING IN THE BATTLE OF THE PLAINS OF ABRAHAM — HOW SIMON FRASER OUTWITTED THE FRENCH — INTERESTING DOCUMENTS.

The present visit to Canada of Lord Lovat, the chief of the Fraser clan, lends additional interest to this article from the Northern Chronicle, of Inverness:

In no part of the United Kingdom can the accounts of the great military review which took place on Friday last on the Plains of Abraham be read with greater interest than in the Fraser country surrounding Inverness, for that review commemorated the Battle of the Plains of Abraham in 1759, which secured Canada to Great Britain, and in which no clan or name was so widely represented as the Fraser. Two years before, the Fraser Regiment was raised by the Hon. Simon Fraser, eldest son of Lord Lovat of the Forty-fifth. The Regiment, under his command, immediately proceeded to America, and took a leading part in the expedition against Louisbourg in 1758. In September, 1759, the Frasers, together with Wolfe's Light Infantry, led the way in scaling the cliffs which separate the St. Lawrence from the plains above, scrambling up by the aid of shrubs and projecting rocks; and in the great battle which followed they had a glorious share. The officers and men were almost all members of the clan, among the former being the colonel himself, Captain Simon Fraser, of Inverlochty, who was killed in the fight, Captain Thos. Fraser, of Struy, Captain Alexander Fraser, of Culdundrum, Captain Simon Fraser, of Balmain, and six lieutenants, four ensigns, an adjutant and a quartermaster, all bearing the old name. After the battle, the Frasers entered Quebec, where they served during the subsequent long and trying siege by the French, taking part in the second battle of the Plains, under General Murray. It was to the linguistic accomplishments and presence of mind of Simon Fraser, of Balmain, that Wolfe really owed the success of his daring enterprise. As the flat-bottomed boats which carried the British soldiers drifted down the St. Lawrence in the dead of night, the French sentry rang out the challenge, "Qui vive?" Simon, who had served in a Scotch regiment on the continent, and spoke French fluently, replied, "La France." "A quel regiment?" demanded the sentry. "De la Reine," replied Balmain, who knew that men of that regiment were expected by the French as a convoy of provisions. The sentry was satisfied, and the boats were allowed to pass on. A second French man lower down demanded who they were. Fraser was again equal to the occasion, and replied in good French, "Provision boats. Don't make a noise; the English will hear us." Again the sentry was satisfied, and the boats were allowed to reach their destination. These lines are, however, intended not as an account of the doings of the Frasers, but as an introduction to the interesting documents given below, which were brought home by the Fraser Chief (Colonel, afterwards General, Fraser), and remained in his family until they were sold at the Abernethy sale some twenty years ago. The first is the copy delivered to Colonel Fraser of the general orders issued by Wolfe on 6th July, 1759. The second is a copy of the letter from the late Colonel Fraser when the latter was left in temporary command at Quebec. The third are orders by Lord Colville, of Culross, who commanded the British Squadron on the St. Lawrence. It is an interesting circumstance that in the present celebrations at Quebec General Murray is represented by Captain Murray, son of Lord Ellbank, and that Colonel Fraser, who was the chief of his Clan, is represented by Lord Lovat, the present chief.

ORDERS GIVEN BY GEN. WOLFE AT POINT LEVY, JULY 6TH, 1759.

The object of the Campaign is to complete the Conquest of Canada and to finish the War in America.

The army under the Commander in Chief will enter the Colony on the side of Montreal, while the Fleet and Army will attack the Governor-General and his Forces. Great sufficiency of Provisions and a numerous Artillery are provided, and from the known valour of the troops the nation expects success. These Battalions have acquired reputations in the Last Campaign and they will be careful to preserve it. From this confidence the General has answered the Secretary of State in his letters that whatever may be the event of this Campaign His Majesty and the Country will have reason to be satisfied with the behaviour of the army under his command.

The Genl. means to carry on the Business with as Little loss as possible and with the highest regard to the safety and preservation of the Troops, diligently and without the Least untidiness, soldierly manner or complaint; and that his few but necessary orders be strictly obeyed.

The Genl. means to fortify his Camp in such a manner as to put it entirely out of the enemy's power to attempt anything by surprise, that the Troops may rest in Security after their fatigues.

As the Safety of the Army depends in great measure on the Vigilance of the out guards, any officer or soldier who shall neglect his duty in this respect will be severely punished. When any alarms are given, or the Enemy perceived to be in motion and that it is thought necessary to put the Troops under arms, it is to be done without noise or confusion. The Brigades are to be ranged in order of battle. Brigades, Generals at the head of the Camp in readiness to obey the orders they shall receive.

Palce alarms are hurtful in any army, and dishonourable to those that occasion them. The out posts to be sure send their intelligence. Soldiers are not to go beyond the out guards, the advanced sentinels will fire at all who attempt to pass beyond the proper bounds.

It may be proper to apprise the Corps that the Genl. may think it necessary to order some of the Light Troops to retire before the enemy at times, so as to draw them nearer to the army either with a view to engage them to fight at a disadvantage or to cut off their retreat.

The Light Infantry of this Army are to have Bayonets, as the want of ammunition may sometimes be supplied by that weapon, and because no man should leave his post under pretence that all his cartridges are fired—in most attacks of the night it must be remembered that Bayonets are preferable to fire.

That the Service of the Campaign may fall as equally as possible upon the whole, the Corps shall do duty for their full strength; no change shall be made in the first regulation unless any particular Loss should make it necessary.

All Cattle or provisions taken by any detachments of the army is to be delivered into the public magazine for the use and benefit of the Whole. Mr. Ware the Commissary will give receipts for it.

No Churches, Houses, or Buildings of any sort are to be burnt or destroyed without orders; the Peasants that remain in their habitations their Women and Children are to be treated with humanity; if any Violence is offered to a Woman the offender shall be punished with Death. If any persons are detected in robbing the tents of the officers or soldiers they will be, if condemned, certainly Executed.

The Commanders of Regts. are to be answerable that no Rum or Spirits of any kind be Sold in or near their Camp; when the Soldiers are fatigued with work, or wet on duty, the Genl. will order such refreshments as he knows will be of service to them, but is determined to allow no drunkenness or licentiousness in the Army.

If any Soldier has the presumption to bring Rum on Shore in contempt of the General's regulation Such Soldier shall be sent to the Provosts in Irons and his goods Confiscated; the Genl. will make it his business as much as possible to reward such as shall particularly distinguish themselves and on the other hand will punish any misbehaviour in an exemplary manner.

The men to be made acquainted with these orders and it is expected the officers will take proper care to explain them to them.

4 Days Provisions, &c.

INSTRUCTIONS FROM BRIGADIER-GENERAL MURRAY TO COL. SIMON FRASER.

It being necessary for the King's Service, I should proceed up the River with as considerable a Body of Troops as can possibly be spared from this Garrison, to create a Diversion in favour of General Amherst's Operations above. You are to take upon you the command of the Troops that shall be left for the Defence of the Town. As the Enemy in despair, may attempt to give us the Slip in order to try a Coup de Main upon the Place, You will be Vigilant, endeavour to procure the best Intelligence of their Motions, and keep your men encamped at their several Alarm posts.

In case you find the Enemy bending their Course this way, You will apply to Lord Colville for every assistance in your power, as also for the means to convey speedy Intelligence of their designs to me. The Posts which I have established at Lorette and St. Felix to cover the Country, and gain Intelligence of the Enemy's Motions, you will preserve in the same Situation, and with the same Orders as they have at present, but should the Enemy attack them, You will by no means risk any thing to support them. As I cannot think of coming down with an Apparatus of the Siege, I can only pretend to act by Surprise; the preserving strict Discipline among the Troops, will therefore most probably frustrate any Scheme of that sort, and that you may be enabled to do this more effectually. You are to Order General Courts Martial to be held when Occasion will require, whose Sentences are to be laid before you, and put in execution as you shall see convenient.

You will give the greatest attention to providing Fuel for this Garrison against next winter; Experience having taught us how very difficult a point this is, and as we have the greatest reason to think, the farther we are from the Troops was in a good measure owing to the Hardships they endured.

Northumberland, July 18th, 1760. Eight and forty Men in each Ship are to be held in constant readiness to be put ashore at the usual landing place in Quebec, in case of an Alarm or sudden Attack from the Enemy.

These Men to be divided into six Classes, of eight in each, including a good quarter Gunner, so that they may be with the greatest readiness distributed to six great Guns on the Walls. A Lieutenant of each Ship, assisted by a Mate or Midshipman, to command that Ship's Men.

An Officer of the Artillery will be ready when our People land, to direct them to such Quarters as may be most expedient for them to occupy. You will preserve in the same Situation will be the Signal for an Alarm, when this is repeated on board the Northumberland, the Boats are to put ashore as fast as possible, the men repairing to the great Parade, and I encourage his Men to behave like true British Tars, in defence of an Acquisition that is of the utmost consequence to his country.

AWARDS TO SPINSTERS.

A quaint custom has been observed in connection with Holsworthy fair, which closes today, in the awarding of a money prize to the young woman "generally esteemed as the most deserving, most handsome and most noted for her quietness and attendance at church."

Miss Rosa Bassett was selected for the honor of fulfilling all these requirements and became the possessor of £2 10s. in accordance with a singular bequest of a former rector.

Under the same will the sum of five shillings is annually given to the spinster over 60 years of age who is "noted for the like virtues, and is not in receipt of parish pay." This gift was presented to Miss Ching.

It is three years since any award was made of this money, spinsters being very scarce at Holsworthy—London Standard.

OFFICE BOY UP TO DATE.

The day after Otto had got leave of absence to attend the second funeral in his family since the beginning of the baseball season, he found his work unusually irksome.

Finally ceasing to fight against the creeping drowsiness, he slept. In the midst of a record-breaking home run by his favorite batsman he heard the manager's voice:

"What! Asleep again? (Sarcastically) I trust you had pleasant dreams."

"Oh, yes, sir," stammered Otto, hardly awake.

The manager, noting that the rest of the office force were hugely enjoying Otto's discomfort, continued reading:

"May I inquire if you were dreaming of your recent bereavement?"

Otto looked slightly bewildered, then all at once, realizing that he was the butt of the joke, he chirped up:

"I dreamed, sir, that you asked the boss to raise my pay."

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Backache After Doctors Failed Utterly.

"I have received most wonderful benefit from taking 'Fruit-a-tives.' I suffered for years from backaches and pain in the head and I consulted doctors and took every remedy obtainable without any relief. Then I began taking 'Fruit-a-tives' and this was the only medicine that ever did me any real good. I take 'Fruit-a-tives' occasionally still, but I am quite cured of a trouble that was said to be incurable. I give this testimony voluntarily, in order that others who suffer as I suffered may try this wonderful medicine and be cured."

Any thing which may be wanted towards the Accommodation of the Troops, when they shall return into Winter Quarters, or to their being more comfortably provided, than proceeding against the last. You will endeavour to procure, as far as lies in your power, for this purpose Memorandums will be left with you, but should any thing else occur to you, you will not fail to mention the same.

When Lord Bolla arrives with the Troops from Louisbourg, you will deliver my instructions to him, and facilitate as much as in you lies his proceeding upwards as expeditiously as possible, as a speedy junction may greatly contribute towards a speedy decision. Finally I shall endeavour to preserve a communication with you, by Stationing Vessels at proper Dispositions, and you will from time to time give me an account how Matie goes here, as of any material Intelligence you can procure by Shipping or otherwise.

Given under my Hand at Quebec this 9th day of July, 1760. JAMES MURRAY.

By His Excellency's Command, H. T. Cramahé.

LEGAL VIEW OF BROKEN HEARTS

CURIOUS BREACH OF PROMISE LAWS IN OTHER COUNTRIES.

England is the best place—from the plaintiff's point of view—in a breach of promise action. All other countries seem to regard with grave suspicion any attempt to recover monetary compensation for the loss of a prospective husband, and unless the plaintiff has a very strong case indeed it is never worth her while to carry her grievance to the law courts.

In France breach of promise cases are rare for the simple reason that the law requires the plaintiff to prove that she has suffered pecuniary loss. Now this is not an easy thing to do on the part of the lady, especially in a country where a girl without a dot—that is a marriage portion—has a poor chance of finding a husband. Holland and Austria have adopted the French system, and the result has been about the same. Breach actions are rare, the injured damsels or their relatives usually taking the law into their own hands.

Practical Germany, as might be expected, has perhaps the best method for solving this problem. When a young couple become engaged they have to go through a public betrothal ceremony that ought to knock all the shyness out of them. In the local town hall the pair declare their affection, willingness to marry, etc., and by signing a collection of documents that apparently leave no loophole for escape.

But if either party to the contract wishes to withdraw, the other journey is undertaken to the town hall and another collection of documents signed, witnessed and sealed. Then the authorities determine the question of compensation—should it be claimed. In this connection it may be said that the man can, and often does, claim a solution for his wounded feelings. The usual award is one-fifth of the marriage dowry. It is easy to understand, when all this is remembered, how loathe the young people of Germany are to break their betrothal oaths.

As the law of Italy offers little or no protection whatever to jilted damsels and swains it is not surprising that the stiletto should be the favorite mode of deciding breach of promise cases. The Italian law demands that the persons suing for "breach" shall produce a written promise to marry from the defendant; otherwise the action cannot proceed. But if the action is almost insupportable, and the Italian judges are seldom troubled to adjudicate between one-time lovers.

To bring an action for breach of promise of marriage is an achievement, but it has been done, and by an English lady. It is now fifteen years since Miss Jenny Mighell sued the Sultan of Morocco, and as there was a doubt whether the dusky one was actually a reigning monarch the case was allowed to come into court. But the judge quickly disposed of the action by ruling it inadmissible for the reason referred to and Miss Mighell was dissatisfied.

It is remarkable that one of the two actions which have brought verdicts of £10,000 each to the plaintiffs should have had for its defendant the editor of a matrimonial paper. The second case was between a well known actress and the eldest son of an earl.—From Tit-Bits.

SIDELIGHTS ON NOTABLE PEOPLE BY THE MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

It is a boy of 12 named John who has become the premier baronet of Great Britain through the death of his father, Sir Robert Dashwood, and it is to be hoped that the youngster will escape the species of blight which has fallen to the share of his family ever since Sir Francis Dashwood, of unenviable memory, desecrated Medmenham Abbey through the foundation there of the infamous Hell Fire Club. Sir Robert Dashwood, the late baronet, attracted a considerable amount of American newspaper notoriety three or four years ago by his remarkable performance in the role of Romeo on board ship during his trip across the Atlantic to New York, and later on became involved in a legal proceeding in England with a bookmaker, during the course of which it was brought to light that Sir Robert had for years been carrying on a betting business in Vigo street, London, under the name of Henry Benson. Subsequently he sold out his interest in the concern to his partner, a bookmaker of the name of Godshalk, who, when the baronet subsequently placed bets with him, declined to pay him his winnings on the ground that Sir Robert had been the loser in the purchase of the business. The judges decided that the law did not admit of the recovery of bets through legal process.

The Dashwoods are an old Dorsetshire family which flourished in the reign of Queen Elizabeth and the fortunes of which may be said to have been founded by George Dashwood, a turkey merchant, and an alderman of the City of London in the reign of James I. Sir Francis Dashwood, whom I have mentioned above as the founder of the Hell Fire Club, managed, in spite of his villainies, to secure the office of chancellor of the exchequer, and died at an advanced age as Lord de Despencer, having inherited the barony as such from his uncle, Lord Westmoreland. Leaving no legitimate issue, the peerage fell into abeyance at his death, and still remains in that condition. He left, however, an illegitimate daughter, who, under the name of Fanny Antonia, furnished much material for the chronicles of scandalous at the beginning of the nineteenth century, and who, wonderfully beautiful and clever, has been immortalized by De Quincey in a vivid character sketch under the title of "The Female Tuffel."

It cannot be said that Sir Francis has enjoyed the same repose since his death. For the family mausoleum at West Wycombe Park, in Buckinghamshire, where he lies entombed, has been repeatedly broken into by vandals and subjected to the indignity of this kind having been perpetrated as recently as two years ago. Nor have the perpetrators ever been discovered or brought to justice. In spite of the large rewards offered for their arrest.

Sir Edwin Hare Dashwood, the father of the late baronet, and seventh bearer of the title, died very mysteriously at Paris in 1882. He was a victim of the alcohol habit, which had reduced him to almost complete imbecility and necessitated his being placed under restraint. His family, however, were reluctant to incur the publicity incidental to any commitment to a sanatorium, so he was sent to reside at Paris, in charge of a keeper, with whom he lived in some wretched rooms in the Pantheon quarter of the gay metropolis. It used to be a pitiable sight to see the old man tottering about the streets of the French capital, always accompanied by his keeper, who would follow him to the lowest taverns, where the few cents which he was daily allowed for the purpose would be spent in drink. Sir Edwin died so suddenly that his family became convinced that he had been the victim of foul play and instituted inquiries which led to the arrest of the keeper.

The magisterial investigation, however, did not go far. For before the second hearing came on the keeper committed suicide by hanging himself to the bars of his cell window.

Sir Edwin's demise in Paris found his eldest son and namesake in New Zealand, where he had been living to that time an adventurous sort of hand to make existence as a gun digger, which is about the lowest form of labor in the Antipodes. He married a New Zealand girl of the name of Miss Florence Norton, and, on dying without issue, left everything that he could to her, and away from his younger brother and successor, Sir Robert, with whom he was on bad terms.

Of course, litigation ensued, and among the most interesting features thereof was the suit between the widowed Lady Dashwood and her brother-in-law, Sir Robert, with regard to the possession of the superb Gobelin tapestries which constitute the glory of West Wycombe Park, the ancestral home of the Dashwoods. The widowed Lady Dashwood claimed them under her husband's will; whereas Sir Robert very justly insisted that they were part and parcel of the entailed property, and as such inalienable by his brother. The judge, on his part, the tapestries had been specially given for the rooms, to the walls of which they had been attached by battens for nearly 200 years, decided that they were a fixture to the manor house, therefore part and parcel of the entailed property, and as such not alienable.

Lord Wicklow's half brother, the Hon. Hugh Melville Howard, whose engagement to Miss May Sands, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Aymar Sands, of New York, has just been announced, comes from a family that has furnished no end of drama and romance to the British peerage, and he is second heir to the earldom, the minor dignities, and the entailed estates of the head of his house.

The principal home of the family is Shelton Abbey, situated in that lovely Vale of Avoca, immortalized by Ireland's poet, Tom Moore. The present building is erected on the site and on the foundations of an ancient monastery of the Cistercian order, founded by Theobald Fitzwalter, who lived within its walls, and by whom it is said to be haunted. It was purchased in the seventeenth century from the Duke of Ormonde by Dr. Ralph Howard, president of the College of Physicians in Ireland and founder of the family of which Lord Wicklow is now the chief. The doctor's son was Bishop of Elphin and his grandson, the first Lord Wicklow, is on record as having been the first to introduce the beech and chestnut tree into Ireland. He died as a vicar of Shelton Abbey, and some years later his widow was granted an earldom in her own right as Countess of Wicklow; and whereas her eldest son on his father's demise had become Viscount Wicklow, it was not until the death of his maternal and influential woman and great heiress that he became the Earl of Wicklow.

Among the many interesting features of Shelton Abbey are the antique chairs rescued from those ships wrecked on the coast of Ireland. They retain their original covers of old stamped leather, which in spite of their age still remain beautiful. The Earl of Wicklow has harbored many famous guests, notably King James II, who found a refuge there for a night or two after his defeat at the battle of the Boyne.

Within living memory the Wicklow earldom has been the subject of one of the most remarkable causes celebrated of modern times. In March, 1869, the fourth earl died without male issue, and on his demise Charles Francis Howard, son of his younger brother by the latter's second marriage, was recognized officially as the fifth earl, but soon found his title to the honors and estates contested by a claimant who furnished a certain amount of testimony to prove he was a son of the new earl's elder half-brother, William George Howard, a dissipated and disreputable individual, always in straitened circumstances, who had died in 1864, leaving as widow a woman of the maiden name of Richardson, and to exceedingly questionable antecedents. His marriage to her was always understood to have been childless until her alleged son appeared upon the scene as a claimant to the Wicklow earldom and estates.

After long and costly proceedings the House of Lords eventually decided against the claimant on testimony being furnished of the fact that he had been born in the workhouse as a bastard, and that he had been purchased there from his real mother by Mrs. William George Howard, nee Richardson. The evidence went to show that Mrs. Howard had never in her life given birth to a child. Her husband, on being informed of this, she was asked to satisfy the physicians appointed for the purpose by the House of Lords as to whether or not she had been a mother, but she declined and was committed to prison for contempt. For a long time she remained for a considerable time, the case meanwhile going against her pseudo son. Ultimately she was set at liberty, and to this day it remains a mystery why she and her confederates should have escaped the punishment for the conspiracy and flagrant perjury of which they had undoubtedly been guilty in connection with the affair.

While Admiral Charles Beresford's immediate death the largest ever assembled for services at sea under one command, was lying the other day off the coast of Denmark, in the North Sea, Emperor William suddenly appeared, unheralded, at 7.30 in the morning on board his big steam yacht "Hohenzollern." Of course, steps were at once taken on board the English ships to pay the customary honors, and it was naturally believed that the Kaiser would either come to anchor and summon Lord Charles on board, or else would proceed to visit him on his flagship.

Instead of doing anything of the kind the Emperor passed through the fleet at an extremely rapid pace without either stopping or even diminishing speed, the Hohenzollern whirling its way in and out between the British men-of-war in the most extraordinary fashion and in such a way as to excite the mingled amazement and admiration of all the British officers and the distance of about 100 feet from the stern of Lord Charles' flagship, the Emperor standing alone on the upper bridge and acknowledging the salutes.

The Hohenzollern was accompanied by the swift torpedo destroyer Slesinger, used by the Kaiser on his maritime outings as a dispatch boat, and it kept immediately in the wake of the Hohenzollern, may, even in its wash, never changing its distance from the imperial yacht throughout the latter's zig-zagging and tortuous course. After having thus given a unique display of the rare skill with which the Hohenzollern is handled the Kaiser disappeared into the grove of dahlias as mysteriously as he had arrived upon the scene, the incident naturally creating a good deal of sensation in naval circles and no end of comment.

It has served to recall to mind an episode of somewhat the same kind which occurred a number of years ago, at a moment when the relations between Great Britain and Germany were decidedly strained, and the two countries were even more irritated against one another than they are today. A squadron of British warships was lying at anchor under the command of Admiral Sir John Fisher, when one morning a German fleet of twice the strength of the English force entered the Tagus, with the idea of impressing the Portuguese and drew up in a double line off the city.

Fisher did not remain. He exchanged salutes and then, giving the signal for departure, led his squadron out of the port at full speed between the two German lines, with only a few yards clear on either side. It was a manoeuvre that might have wrecked a dozen ships, and only a man of iron nerve could have carried it out successfully. But he had trained his squadron well. Not a ship was lost, and the German admiral, who was in the wake of the British fleet, which took place under the eyes of a large portion of the population of Lisbon assembled to witness the spectacle, even the officers on board the German warships cheered enthusiastically as the British fleet passed out.

Sir John, whose name is just at present so much in the public eye, both at home and abroad, in connection with the reform which he has introduced in the navy, in his capacity as first sea lord of the admiralty and also by reason of his differences with Lord Charles Beresford, is far less popular than the latter, either with the public or with the sailors, who idolize Lord Charles, but have little good to say of "Jackie" Fisher, complaining that he works them too hard and without any consideration. Fisher knows this and is fond of telling an amusing story in connection therewith against himself.

It seems that while staying in Devonshire he found in a neighboring village an old bo'sun, living in a cottage on his well-earned pension. While talking with him Sir John noticed another old sailor man about the place, who seemed to have nothing to do, and asked the ex-bo'sun what he used him for.

"Well, sir," said the bo'sun, "he has to call me every morning at 5 o'clock, and say, 'The admiral wants to see you, sir.' Then I roll over on the other side of the bed and reply, 'Tell the admiral to go home.' Then he goes to sleep again, feeling good. This happens a dozen times a day and I feel better every time afterward. I waited long enough for it."

It may be added that although Sir John has contributed to the marriage of Potter and Mrs. Clark that the story of his stepsons was told among his friends. The second Mrs. Potter lived up to the wedding, but much younger than the stepfather. Bishop Potter also had several daughters.

"Do you know, I think I'll ask your daughters," Mrs. Potter said one day to her husband, "to call me Elizabeth, by the name of the bishop's daughter."

The bishop was contemptuous for a second. "Perhaps you had better not, after all," he answered, with his invariable calmness. "If you did maybe your sons would be called 'The bishop's daughter's.' It is a spirit of humor, appealed to the wife, and his daughters were not requested to call her Elizabeth. The bishop's family at one time represented the most conventional of New York's social ideas, but that was as far back as the time in which Mrs. James Brown Potter became an actress. It was not, as a matter of fact, an unprecedented thing for a bishop to be a relative of an actress, but the bishop's attitude, in the daughter of a bishop, but until the wife of Bishop Potter's nephew took to the profession of the stage, the bishop's attitude was not a laughing matter. SCHOOL for HOUSEWIVES

OUR SUMMER GIRL

The Summer Girl as Sweet and Winsome as the Winter Girl

DEAR MARION HARLAND: I know that you are fond of young people, so I write to ask you what you think of the young girl of today as she appears at summer resorts. I am a staid matron, but I was once young. Yet it fairly makes my hair rise to note our American girl and her behavior at the various places where I meet her. I am just now, at the seashore, and I have many unpleasant opportunities to study the subject of which I write.

A pretty girl, belonging to a good family, and—if one may judge from her clothes—with plenty of money, is here in the same hotel at which I am stopping. One could not be oblivious to the fact that she is here, no matter how much one wanted to ignore it. She talks at the top of her lungs, hails her friends with a shrill whistle or with a whoop that would do credit to a red Indian, and stamps and tramps about the place, through halls and along verandas in a manner that irritates even steady nerves. And yet she is a college girl who took honors in her class. They tell me that she is a very nice and refined girl, but this can hardly be. Or, perhaps, she does not behave at home as she does here. Have you ever met this class of girl? And do you find her attractive?

A DISGUSTED MATRON (Camden, N. J.)

To your last question, emphatically NOT! To the query preceding it, I am forced to answer, regrettably, in the affirmative.

Do I know her? You may as well ask me if I ever take my walks abroad in the "heated term" at fashionable resorts or in country places. The summer girl is ubiquitous and I often find myself blushing for her. When she is at home, in town, she is attractive to most of us, especially when she is fond of us. To those she does not like, our Girl of Today is inclined to be supercilious and loftily superior. Even when she loves us, she has always the prevailing American independence, and knows a little bit more than other people. That is because she is young and American, and—forgive me if I say it—a college girl. But she is well bred and observes conventionalities. She keeps the respect of the men who know her, dances decorously at balls, talks like an educated person at teas and receptions, and walks the street of her city with perfect propriety and dignity—even if she does swing her arms a little more than is becoming.

But in the summer! That is another story!

Our Girl seems to think that, in laying aside her fur and heavyweight clothing and donning the gay and flimsy fabrics of the warm season, she can lay aside all restraint and adopt manners that are as flimsy as her dresses and as scanty as the fashionable bathing suit she affects. Were one who knew her at home to see her in this last-named garment, one would gasp with astonishment. She walks or struts the length of the beach in long stockings, short trousers, an abbreviated skirt and a jaunty cap, the cynosure of admiring and critical eyes. All the other girls and many other women do the same thing, and why should not she? Do not, however, fancy that our Girl has donned this suit for bathing purposes only. On the contrary, the surf bath is merely an excuse for the costume. Watch her as she patrols the beach with one or more young men, and with other girls clad in like fashion. One and all find a sunny spot in the sand and here they lie and read, sing, laugh and talk for several hours at a time. After this sun bath they take a swim or romp in the surf;

When She is at Home, in Town, She is Attractive

fling while away from her people."

"I know that," was the reply, "but it is a bit wearying to the man who divides women into two classes—the good and the bad. This girl is not a bit bad, and yet—I am glad my sisters are not chummy with her."

A cad? Of course he was. But, from the girl's standpoint, were the "fun" and the "fling" worth such a criticism?

We mothers do not want to draw the lines too taut, and we do want our dear girls to have all the happiness that goes with youth. And just for that reason we cannot bear to have them spoil the lasting happiness by seeming to be a thing they would rather die than become.

be honest, dear girls, and frank and straightforward and friendly with your men friends. But reserve the personal touch and the caresses for the one man in all the world who will have a right to them.

And—please be a little more gentle, a little more quiet! People may not look at you quite so much as you come and compound them for you. After that all is plain and pleasant sailing. I write down all this in detail because I have, year after year, requests for minute instructions for the preparation of a rose jar.

Will readers clip these out now and leave the space for something newer when "roses come again" in 1909?

Mrs. C. S. (Pleasantville, N. J.)

A Rose Jar (Pot Pourri).

Gather the petals in the morning, as soon as the dew has dried off. Pack in a jar in layers two inches deep, sprinkling about two tablespoonfuls of fine, dry table salt over each layer. Gather a fresh supply daily, adding to those already in the jar. In this way you get the flowers in their fragrant prime. As soon as the rose is fully blown, and the petals drop when the stem is rudely jarred, they should be gathered. Half-blown buds are not suitable for pot pourri, being too succulent and in scent too crude.

When the jar is full or all the roses are plucked and packed in the order indicated, with salt between the layers (the jar being kept in a cool, dry place), cover and leave untouched for a week. Then upset the jar upon a broad platter and mix and toss with cool hands and gingerly, to loosen the matted petals and diffuse the salt impartially. Have ready the following ingredients:

Orris root powder, one ounce; violet powder, half an ounce; rose powder, half an ounce; heliotrope powder, half an ounce; one half teaspoonful each of mace and cloves; one quarter of a teaspoonful of cinnamon; four drops of oil of roses, ten of oil of chris, twenty of oil of melisse, and the same of oil of eucalyptus; ten drops of bergamot and, lastly, two drams of alcohol.

Mix the spices into the salted petals first; then the oils, incorporating all thoroughly. Much depends upon the thoroughness at this stage of the work. Turn the mixture into a clean jar; tie cloth paper over the mouth and fit on a tight top.

The pot pourri will be ready for use in a month. It will keep twenty years. I have some in my storehouse that was compounded according to the above formula, eighteen years ago. It is as sweet as within a month after the roses were picked.

If the recipe seem long and intricate it is in seeming alone. The real labor is light. Go, as I do, to a druggist and give him the list of oils and spices as you have them listed here, and let him

Mrs. C. S. (Pleasantville, N. J.)

A Rose Pillow

In close connection with the rose jar comes a request:

Will you tell me how to put up roses for a pillow? Must they be dried, and, if so, how? I want them for a spare bedroom—to shed a sort of delicate fragrance through the chamber.

JESSIE T. (Nashville, Tenn.)

Gather the petals as for a rose jar on a sunny day, but dry in the shade. The hot sun will curl and twist the petals, and draw out the odor. They must be well dried before you stuff the pillow.

Spread upon a broad tray and strew a tablespoonful of powdered orris root among them. If you can afford to buy the true attar of rose, you will secure the "delicate fragrance" you desire by sprinkling ten drops over the petals just before putting them into the case. Make the inner cover of glazed cambric, the outer of silk or satin, embroidered with roses and buds.

A Life-Everlasting Pillow

Four consecutive mails bring requests for directions for filling pillows with as many different materials. At first glance this looks like an odd collection. Second thought shows it to be natural and sensible, and compliance with the petitions of our members at our early convenience eminently expedient.

Gather your rosebuds while you may. For time is still a-dying!

And the winter cometh in which no flowers and herbs may grow in the all-out-of-doors in which we now live and revel. It is a pretty fashion, this of treasuring summer memories by means of what a German writer calls "the memory of the imagination"—to wit, the sense of smell. The associativeness of certain odors is a curious and subtle study. Putting aside the temptation to dwell upon it, come down to a letter from a Pennsylvania member:

Is there real virtue in the life-everlasting pillow my mother used to send to nervous invalids in the days that antedated the trained nurse? I can smell them now, as I carried them again and again "over the hills and far away" to this and that neighbor who could not sleep, or who was "run down" and needed to be "chicked up." Were they curative? And do you know how they were made? I forget whether my mother put in the dried leaves or only the blossoms of the life-everlasting. And whence the name? I used to think it was so called because it made sick people well. Was tea ever made of it?

ELIZABETH D. (Wilkes-Barre, Pa.)

In earlier days than your mother's, this species of the herb "gnaphalium" was known as "cudweed," from a belief that cows who chewed it increased the flow of milk. We name it "everlasting" because, when dried, it suffers little changes in color, form or taste. Tea made from it is, or was once, used as a sudorific. The dried flowers were stuffed into pillows and gave forth a goodly smell, besides possessing sedative properties. Sometimes the flowers were mixed with one-fourth the quantity of hops. Then they were unquestionably soporific in tendency.

Pine Pillows

Will you tell us if the needles of the common pine are good for filling pillows? I am not. My mother says most of these so, but there will be a different expression in the eyes that do look, and that counts for a great deal. For the sake of the women you are to become, try to let the summer girl be as sweet and winsome and lovable as the winter girl.

MARION HARLAND

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

WILL you kindly tell me how to make a rose jar, or where I could find directions for preparing the same? The second flowering of roses will be here by the time you get this. Our perpetuals and choice monthlies often make as brave a show in September as in June.

BEAUTIFUL WAREHOUSES

Heintzman & Co. Invite All to See Their New Premises.

There is no prouder man in London than Mr. John A. Croden at the present time. Well need he be, over such handsome premises as Heintzman & Co. new piano warehouses. In artistic and decorative work the premises will compare with any place in Canada. Many citizens call daily and compliment Mr. Croden on the beautiful warehouses. It is the desire of the Heintzman people to have as many as possible call and inspect the new rooms, which were formerly occupied by Mr. J. W. Jones, and an invitation is extended to all to call.

The work of widening the Euston road, the first step towards the construction of a great boulevard for London on the northern side of the river, will begin in six months.

"It only costs the country one pound a minute," Mr. Justice Eve remarked in the chancery court to a witness who kept the court waiting ten minutes, owing to his late arrival.

England paid per head to the revenue last year £2 12s 9d, Scotland £2 7s 8d, and Ireland £2 3s 11d, Mr. Lloyd-George stated recently.

Londoner Was Robbed in Hamilton

Hamilton Herald: Mr. Arthur L. Garthwaite, of Heintzman & Co., formerly of London, the well-known singer, has been out of town for a few days, and his wife has been visiting at her former home in Port Huron. Last night Mr. Garthwaite returned home, and was advised by the police to look over his house, 118 Hunter street west. When he did so he discovered that all that was left of value was what couldn't be carried expeditiously and quickly through a window during the night. He immediately took an inventory to find out what was gone and then repaired to the city hall with the list. He was able to identify as his property every article that was found on Thomas Taaffe yesterday, at the cells, when that worthy was arrested for being drunk, and disgorged a bunch of stuff that would make any ordinary man tired to carry it a block. Taaffe was wearing two suits of clothes when arrested and one of these proved to be Mr. Garthwaite's. It consisted of a blue coat and trousers and a cardigan jacket. Other than the stuff mentioned Mr. Garthwaite suffered a serious loss that the police would like to recover, but which it is hardly likely they ever will. Mr. Garthwaite left $250 in cash in the house, and when he examined the rest of the goods at the police office and the house he was unable to find his money. A grey check tweed suit and some towels were also among the still missing. Taaffe comes up in a few days and it is not altogether unlikely that some person else will stand beside him to answer to the charge, that is, if the police get a line on the $250, which they do not think he could have got rid of in the short time since the robbery, which is thought to have taken place Wednesday night.

Real Estaters and the Treasurership

At a meeting of the London Real Estate Association held last evening, following a resolution was passed: "Resolved, That this association deems that the present is an opportune time to adopt common sense methods in regard to the treasurership of the city of London. It is a well-known fact that many industrial and financial institutions in this city involving the handling of twice and three times the amount passing through the city treasury do not pay half as much for the service as does the city of London. All our public service costs far too much, and now is the time to apply the pruning knife. Surely competent men with business methods could easily fill the position of treasurer or a city like London. One man does it for the county, where the assessment is nearly double."

A Record Trip on the Grand Trunk

Speaking of the trip of the Port Huron and Sarnia Knights Templar to Toronto, the Sarnia Observer says: The party, which numbered about 100, left here on a special G. T. R. train on Tuesday evening. By special request the engine crew and train crew were chosen from among the railway employees who are members of the Masonic craft, so that every one connected with the pilgrimage was a Masonic brother. Those in charge of the train were as follows:

Conductor, Geo. Cully,
Engineer, Alex. Bond,
Fireman, John Owen,
Brakeman, Robt. Simcock,
Baggageman, Chas. Cooper.
The train left here at 6:35 Tuesday evening, and having a delay of fifty minutes at London an excellent run was made to Toronto, the arrival there being at 11:47. But it was on the return trip that the fast time was made. The special left Toronto at 8:40 p.m., and from the time that the engine wheels made their first revolution Engineer "Tim" Bond, as he is familiarly called, let her out and the knowing ones looked for a fast ride and they were not disappointed. Some idea of the speed attained by the train may be had when it is noted that on different sections of the road the train ran at the rate of over 70 miles an hour. This record-breaking speed was obtained between Toronto and Junction Cut between Woodstock and London, and between London and Sarnia. The special consisted of liner engine 953, a baggage car and two first-class coaches.

On the trip to Toronto Assistant Superintendent A. J. Nixon, of London, was on board, and on the return trip Assistant Trainmaster Trussler accompanied the excursionists. Both of these officials, together with the train crew, were indefatigable in their efforts to provide every comfort for the members of the party. The Grand Trunk Railway Company should feel proud of having such painstaking and courteous gentlemen in their employ.

The return trip from Toronto was one long "celebration," the Sir Knights and ladies vying with each other to provide amusement for the entertainment of all. Refreshments were served on the train both going and returning, and a general good time resulted.

At London the band paraded Richmond street, accompanied by the Sir Knights and the ladies and made the people of that city think that a contingent of the Old Boys and Girls had returned to town. Serenades were also indulged in at Strathroy and Wyndham, and when the train reached Sarnia the Port Huron party assembled on the tunnel depot platform and bade their Sarnia comrades goodbye. As the train started for Port Huron the Sarnia contingent gave three hearty cheers for their Port Huron friends, and this most pleasant pilgrimage was at an end.

BRIEF MEETING OF FINANCIERS

No. 1 Committee of City Council Met on Friday Afternoon.

A short session of No. 1 committee of the city council was held yesterday afternoon at the city hall.

John Hutton's application for the purchase of the old London city on Patrick street was referred to the city engineer, who will report as to the advisability of making the sale.

A petition to change the name of Miles street to Delaware avenue was laid over to and if there is any excitement in connection with the change.

The Salvation Army's request to be allowed to give band concerts was referred to the chairman with power.

A report re the apportionment of the city's insurance will be presented to the council.

The auditors' report for six months ending June 30, and the police clerk's report for July were received, and ordered to be submitted to the council.

City Clerk Baker's request that a new typewriter be purchased, was laid over, with the understanding that the chairman make a report at the next meeting as to the advisability of buying a second-hand typewriter from the defunct Empire Accident Insurance Company.

Those present were Chairman Beattie, Mayor Stevely, Ald. Parsons and Ald. Stevenson.

KNIGHTS STILL AT ROUND TABLE

Another Splendid Spread at the Tecumseh House.

The Knights of the Round Table had another luncheon at the Tecumseh House yesterday, the host on this occasion being Major H. D. Schofield, of Ocean Grove, Cal.

As on the previous occasion, the Knights had a most enjoyable time, the dinner being one of the very best that the Tecumseh House has ever put up.

That it was thoroughly enjoyed goes without saying. After luncheon a programme of toasts was introduced by Mayor Stevely, to which Major Schofield, T. F. Beidler, G. W. Tackaberry, Dr. A. V. Becher, Major Beattie, M. P., E. Rehnitzner, Thos. Gillean made replies.

Mr. W. H. Skinner sang several solos in splendid voice, and they were much appreciated.

Several presentations took place. One of the Knights was presented with a hat of the virtues of '40, and another with a fine ruby ring. The presentation speeches were works of art, and brought down the house.

Several new members were initiated, but one member beat Bobbie Kerr's record for 200 yards when he heard he was to receive the degree. It is understood that the man's name was Dan McIntyre. "Snowball" made a short speech on the subject, "Three Days Overdue, or How I Would Like to Stay."

"This Country is No Place for an Old Man" was a beautiful ballad touching rendered by Major Schofield and Mr. T. F. Beidler.

Those present were Major Schofield, T. F. Beidler, Major Beattie, M. P., G. W. Tackaberry, A. E. Berube, Mayor Stevely, A. W. White, Dr. A. V. Becher, Geo. H. O'Neill, Dan McIntyre, Fred Trebilcock, E. Rehnitzner, W. H. Skinner, Thos. Gillean, Howard T. Beidler, Harry E. Buttrey and others.

"Algonquin Park." The passenger department of the Grand Trunk Railway System have just received the following letter from a prominent medical practitioner in Western Ontario:

"I have just returned from ten days' fishing at Algonquin Park. While there our party of five put up at the 'Highland Inn' and we were all so well pleased at the accommodation that I think it my duty to drop you a line and acquaint you with the unanimous opinion of our party. I have travelled almost all over the world, and I do not think with any exception that I ever received better or more courteous attention than at this delightful spot."
