IT IS ON HIGH GROUND AND OTHERWISE

WHILE ONLY 1409 YARDS FROM THE BRITISH RIDGES THERE IS A WIDE FIRESWEPT ZONE BETWEEN-AN ARTILLERY DUEL IN PROGRESS.

London, Jan. 24.-The following despatch from General Buller, dated at Spearman's Camp, Jan, 23, 6.30 p. m., was posted by the War Office at 2.30

Gen. Buller Hopes to Carry the Boers'

Main Position.

IMPREGNABLE

Warren holds the position he gained two days ago. In front of him, at about 1,400 yards, is the enemy's position, west of Spion's Kop. It is on higher ground 'han Warren's position, so it is impossible to see it properly. It can only be approached over bare, open clopes, and the ridges held by Warren are so steep that guns can not be placed, but they were shelling the enemy's position with field pieces and artillery placed on the lower ground, behind infantry. The enemy is reported with Creusot and other artillery. In this duel the advantage rests with us, as we appear to be searching his trenches, and his artillery fire is not much loss to us. An attempt will be made to-night to seize Spion's Kop, the salient of which form the left of the enemy's position facing Trechard's Drift, and which divides it from the position facing Pot gieter's Drift. It has considerable command over all the enemy's entrenc hments. of the besieged in Ladysmith may be imagined. Gen. Warren is moving with commendable, indeed, imperative caution. But it must not be forgotten that delay, however caused, must tell in many respects, in favor of the enemy. The Boers have, it is true, fallen back when hard pressed, but they have gained time to bring up men, guns, ammunition and supplies to the position they have selected for their principal stand, and to entrench it in thorough fashionthe fashion they understand so well. Until that position has been taken, and its defenders routed, and badly cut up, the relief of Ladysmith cannot be considered sure.

THE SITUATION. London, Wednesday, Jan. 24, 4.40 a. m .- Gen. Buller's turning movement, of which so much had been expected, has come to a standstill. His carefully worded message to the War Office telling this, after a silence of two days, reads like an apology and an explanation. Gen. Warren holds the ridges, but the enemy's positions are higher. The British artillery are playing on the Boer positions and the Boers are replying. The British infantry is separated by only 1,400 yards from the enemy, but an approach to the steep slopes across the bare oper will expose them to a fatal rifle fire. Gen. Buller's plans have reached their development. He declines to send his infantry across this zone against formidable positions by daylight, and discloses his purpose to assault the Spion Kop heights during the night. This appears to be the key to the Boer defence. If he takes it, and thus commands the adjacent country, an important and possibly decisive step will be accomplished. It seems that Gen. Buller's despatch reached the War Office rather carlier in the night, and was the subject of a pro-longed conference between Lord longed conference between Lord Lansdowne, Mr. Balfour and several staff officials. A determination seems staff officials. A determination seems to have been reached not to give out the message during the night, but toward 2 a. m. copies of the despatch were made for distribution among the newspapers. They arrived too late for extended comment. The Morning Post and the Standard touch lightly upon the unpleasant features of the despatch, and take hope from the projected night attack, but all things considered, the despatch looks like preparation for worse news.

A DECISIVE MOVE. The Times, commenting editorially upon Gen. Buller's despatch, says:—
It can but tend to increase the severe strain from which the nation is suffering. We must await the result of ering. We must await the result of Boer position, with courage and cool-ness. His success may be decisive, but the danger of the attempt is evidently great. The intense excitement

From the British Fire Acco. dng to Their Own Accounts.

Despatches From the Enemy's Head Lasger Give Their Version of the Fighting.

Boer Head Laager, Ladysmith, Monday, Jan. 22 .- battle has been raging along the Oliver's Hoeck road since Saturday between the Boers since Saturday between the Boers, under Pretorius, and 6,000 British. The fighting is in full swing at Spion's Kop. The Boers, under Botha and Oronje, have been sent thither. The British, elsewhere, are only making reconnoissances of the Boer positions. President Steyn was under fire at the foremost position of the Free Staters. The three British positions are the old Chieveley camp marest Colenso; the central position of Swartz Kop Drift, where they hold both banks of the river, and a point higher up, in the direction of Zunckles, where they have bridged the river and established an immense commissariat. On the have bridged the river and established an immense commissariat. On the summit of the terraces at Swartz Kop they have placed five naval guns, and have brought the field artillery across the river to a small kopje on the northern bank, whence they keep up an incessant and terrific cannonade on the Boer trenches. Since the beginning of the week communication with the different positions has been kept up under the ordeal of this cannonade, the casualties resulting from this being heavier than those that occurred at Colenso. One of the shells from the naval guns killed a father and son, Free Staters, who were chatting at the time. Strangely, neither had any wounds.

A despatch from Colenso, on Thursday, Jan. 18, says a patrol of 200 men, under Field Cornet Opperman, while scouting, was surrounded by the British, but succeeded in fighting its way back. It is reported that four men were killed, and that thirty were wounded and made prisoners.

The quarters of Generals White and Hunter were smashed by a shot from Hunter were smashed by a shot from "Long Tom." It is not known whether any of the occupants of the building were killed.

BOERS ADMIT DAMAGE.

BOERS ADMIT DAMAGE.

Boer Camp, Upper Tugela River, Sunday, Jan. 21.—When Commandant. Botha checked the British advance yeterday morning it was expected that there would be no further action until to-morrow. This afternoon, however, signs were discerned of an expected movement in the British northeast camp. When the heat, which was more frightful than yet experienced, had worn off, the British cannon started in full force, and their infantry advanced in extended order. Generals Botha and Cronje held the high hills over which the road to Ladysmith passes. When the Mauser fire opened a pandemonium of sound filled the air. The vindictive crash of lyddite shells, the sharp volleys of Lee-Metfords and the whip-like crack of Mausers were interspersed with the boom of the Boer Maxims. The battle ended with darkness, but not without evidences of execution among the British, that were manifest at sunrise. Field Cornet Ernst Emilo was killed; nor did the generals escape unscathed. At the centre position, Swartz Kop, where the other road to Ladysmith crosses the hills, the British advanced from low kopjes on the hanks of the Tugela unmolested. Then they entered the zone of Mauser fire, and although their naval guns kept up the terrible racket, the advance was stopped, and the British had to count their dead and wounded. Commandant Viljoen and two burghers were knock ed senseless by an explosion of lyd-dite. Commandant Viljoen recovered Field Cornet Heilbron was injured, and on refusing to surrender, was shot The British loss was probably insig-nificant. They complain that sport-ing Mausers were found on the field and soft-nosed bullets, with Lee Metand soft-nosed bullets, with Lee Metfords. The Boers admit that sporting Mamers were found only, but they deny the charge respecting expansion bullets. Not a shot was fired by the Boers with rifle or cannon at the Swart Kop position this side of river. Heavy cannonading proceeded at a range of 2,000 yards, but the Federals maintained the silence of death. This must have staggered the British This must have staggered the British as the advance was stopped, and this morning they had retired to their old

A REMARKABLE PROPHECY.

Not long ago M. Bloch, the eminen Polish author, wrote a book on the Future of War, in which he drew some conclusions from the development of destructive weapons and military tactics which make interesting reading. M. Bloch laid down the follow ing propositions in his book:

That the moral superiority of at tack would be more than counterbal anced by the tremendous accession of strength to the defenders which results from improved small arms. 2. That battles would seldom be de-

3. That the victors would not be in a position to pursue, and that the retreating force would fall back on new positions a few miles to the rear, and intrench themselves.

4. That infantry would be pros trated after battle and not in a position to carry successes home.

6. That frontal attacks would be impossible without great superiority of numbers.

6. That night marches and night attacks would have to be resorted to. 7. That intrenchments properly adapted to modern fire would be in-

8. That troops on the defensive would be more likely to surprise than to be surprised.

9. That the future war will be war of sieges and intrenched posi-10. That invisible sharpshooters would mow down hundreds. 11. That an abortive attack would lead to the attacker intrenching himself, and the exchange of roles. 12. That ambulance work would be carried on under almost impossible conditions, owing to long-range fire, which would lead to accusations of violation of the Red Cross. 13. That satisfactory reconnais sance would be much more difficult than formerly. . (M. Bloch declared that only infantry could reconnoitre successfully.) 14. That the loss in officers would be disproportionate.

. 15. That troops could only advance along railway lines. 16. That with equal resolution wars would last longer that in the past. 17. That turning movements with immense numerical superiority would be the only means of gaining decisive

Anyone who has been following the South African war will notice M. Bloch's predictions have been realized to a remarkable extent.

The boys at Belmont are grumbling at having to slug railway ties. It shade-if there is any-but they'll find it safer in the long run than slugging

Of course Lord Roberts and General Buller must naturally feel elated at being made honorary directors of the Woodbridge fall fair, but they will never realize what great eminence really means until they find themselves elected life members of Canada's greatest debating society, the Chatham Macaulay Club.

Another Tory briber and two more bribed Tories fined $200 apiece.—Hamilton Herald.

It is easy to understand some dub of a party editor talking this way, but the Herald usually displays more common sense. Isn't it patent that as the briber was a Tory there would be no necessity for him bribing voters of his own stripe?

The better the pavements on King street and the streets leading to King the more business will be done on the city's main thoroughfare. And the more business done there the more valuable and more saleable the property along it. Under such circumstances it is to be hoped there will be no unseemly kicking over the putting down of a roadbed that will be a credit to Chatham.

At Vancouver, B. C., the commission engaged in the revision of the civic charter approved a peculiar provision. This amendment permits a man to vote in aldermanic and mayoral elections on property of which his wife is the registered owner. The existing regulations prevent women from voting in such cases and it is claimed that much property is thus unrepresented on the voters' list. A man may thus vote twice, once on his own property and again on account of the property qualifications of his wife. Would it not be better to give the women votes out and out than to humbug around the matter in this way?

A Detroit justice has fixed the cost of calling a man a "sheeny" at $2 and costs. He explained that the same penalty would be imposed for using the terms Mick, Dutchman, Dago or Dogan. If this does not stop the use of these pet names he proposes to send the offender to the house of correction without the option of a fine. This decision does not, however, interfere with the Chicago justice's ruling that a citizen was within his rights in calling a policeman a "lobster," though the term is looked upon as grossly insulting in baseball circles.

When the Bonner writes interviews with itself it should really be more choice in its language. Now, what can be expected of the growing generation when they pick up the Banner-that is, any of them who do pick it up-and read such slang as this: "We could have licked the stuffing out of you." And yet the Police Gazette, Sunday Sun and other American journals which make the Banner style of interview their stock in trade, are excluded from the country.

Of the small-pox cases in Essex, Dr. Bryce, of the Provincial board of health, says that the history and the details furnished by Dr. Bryan, who attended all the cases in West Tilbury, illustrate the true nature of the disease, insomuch that it has been shown that adults practically escape chickenpox. In Tilbury unvaccinated adults took the disease with the same readiness as children, and suffered more severely. Persons with good vaccination marks of years ago did not take the disease, while those with marks about worn out had the disease very lightly. On the other hand, to show that the disease was not small pox we have the fact that out of 250 cases there was not one death, while a child in Comber, after its recovery from the disease, proved readily susceptible to vaccination.

The London News' ideas of party tactics are very crude. It is worrying itself because the Conservatives have put no candidate in the field in Winnipeg. The Liberal machine turned E. D. Martin out of office and practically expelled him from the party. His reply to this was an announcement of his candidature. He is out in opposition to the Laurier Government and it was the height of good party generalship on the part of the Conservatives to leave him a clear field. Had they put up a nominee it would have only divided the opposition and even if successful one member more or less would have made little difference to the strength of the parties at Ottawa. We imagine Mr. Martin can make more trouble for the Laurierites just at this juncture than any out and out Conservative.

The war expert of the Leader writes: It is unnecessary to make any remark on the composition of the staff of the English division (the latest division organized), save that another guardsman is pushed up two steps by the vicious old system. He has, in spite of all that has happened, got a brigade on account of the absurd rule that guardsmen must be commanded by a guardsman, and there are two battalions of guards in this brigade. This rule commends itself to a secretary of state for war most of whose relatives are in the household troops. Lord Methuen got his command because he is a guardsman. If the "vicious old system" the Leader refers to stands the exposures of this war in a good many other ways than that mentioned the "push" behind it will prove stronger than the people at the

BRITAIN'S RESERVE STRENGTH London Times.

How immense is the reserve strength on which England in a just cause can draw is strikingly revealed in Lord Strathcona's munificent offer. practical Grimes.

Mynheer Joe notices that another paris embarking near by-the baron. He has secured a boat, and with his two followers, heads for the steamer Then Sandy's plan has been a dead failure! Mr. Grimes turns a look that borders on the sarcastic upon the cordent, and is immediately knock ed all in a heap by the twinkle he sees in Sandy's eyes. It seeems to say to him; "Wait, and you may yet see some fun, my fine fellow."

Surprised, Mr. Grimes notices that Sandy keeps one eye turned in the di-rection of the boat in which the baron is seated, as though he finds deep interest there. He, too, turns his eyes, in that direction.

At first he sees nothing out of the way. The man rows along after the indolent fashion of these lazy Alexandria boatmen, paying no attention to the signals from the steamer that indicate a lack of time.

Looking beyond, Mr. Grimes picks up his ears, so to speak for a glimmer of the truth flashes into his brain wherhe sees a boat propelled by a couple of British soldiers, and containing three others, one of them an officer, following the baron's craft, and not far behind.

They come up rapidly. The Russian turns in his seat in the stern and takes one look at the other boat, but does not seem to bother his head over it a bit. In the course of two minutes the boat containing the soldiers is alongside the other, and the officer lays his hand on the gunwale.
"What does this mean?" demanded the baron in a loud, offensive voice. Our friends motion to the men to stop rowing, so that they may hear what passes near by. "I beg your pardon, sir, but I am looking for Baron Popoff," says the officer. "That is my name, sir," replies the He does not look alarmed, only annoyed, as though some impecunious creditor is about to make a descent upon him at the last moment. "I have just found you in time, baron," with a significant glance toward the waiting steamer, from whose fun-returns the Russian. "Pardon me, baron, I know nothing of the matter beyond the fact that I have instructions to bring you before the general."

"What?" and with a weird Russian curse bubbling form his lips, the baron springs to his feet. "My language was plain, baron. I am sorry to break into any of your plans, but my orders allow no latitude." thunders the baron, excited, "I am booked to leave on that steamer!" "I am sorry for that, baron."

"You will not stop me now. What-ever this may be, it could easily be ex plained, but if I return with you to the citadel I lose the steamer!" The officer looks his regret, but he

"I would take you, baron, if I had to call upon yonder iron-clads for help, pointing to the great British war-ves sels Vesuvius and Thunderer, which lie about where the fleet opened the awful bombardment on Alexandria some half dozen years before. The baron seems to be weighing the chances. He hates everything English and is peculiarly fitted for the mission to India in the interests of the White Czar. It grates upon his aerves to be thus ignominiously brought back by a British officer and compelled to give up his contemplated embarkation; but he can see no other possible outlet.

The gates seem closed around him. He looks like a baffled tiger, with its prey in full sight at the time the trap Even Molly sees his face, and never forgets the look there is stamped upon it. Men glare at a fellow-human that way just before they do murdet. "There is no way out of this mess are invited to consult Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., by letter, without fee or charge of any kind. Dr. Pierce is a specialist in the diseases of women. He has treated over half-a-million women for diseases of the womanly organs and ninety-eight out of every hundred women he has treated have been absolutely and perfectly cured. Every letter received by Dr. Pierce, is treated as a purely personal and private communication and its contents guarded as a sacred confidence. All answers to these letters are sent in scaled envelopes bearing upon them no printing or advertising whatever.

Write to the doctor. It is no use for sick women to write to a man unless he is a doctor. It is no use to "write to a woman" unless the woman is a doctor. Write to a woman about cookery or any branch of housekeeping, because she is a woman and knows. But it is of no use to write to a woman about disease unless she has a doctor's training and diploma. A Chatham barrister writes. Those who are closest in touch with public opinion state that the county clerkship is now narrowed down to the choice of either Walter Mills or John Coutts. It is stated that the bar throughout the county would willingly compromise on Mr. Mills' appointment, not only because he would make a most capable officer, but on account of his kind, genial, courteous disposition, a most valuable acquisition to this particular position." CATARRH OF INE STOMACH.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing, headaches, fickle appetite, nervousness and a general played out, languid feeling. There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucus surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy diesent in the one necessary thing to

To secure a prompt and healthy di-gestion is the one necessary thing to do and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanson the safeest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspensia Tablets, and not being a patent medicine can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion wilf follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. N. J. Booker, of 2710 Dearborn St., Chicago, I'l., writes: "Catarrh is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes

I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use.

"I want the generous co-operation of everyone in this enterprise," said Major Rankin when interviewed by Major Rankin when interviewed by The Planet concerning the coming concert for the benefit of the South African volunteers. "We want it to be the very best concert ever held in Chatham. I am going to request a joint meeting of all the musicians and vocalists in the eity, as well as in the surrounding towns and townships, and I do not think I am taking too much for granted when I bespeak their cordial, courteous and generous assistance. Until these ladies and gentlemen have been consulted it would be impossible, of course, to select any date, but the concert will doubtless be but on as early as prepartion for the program can be completed.

"I am confident that we will not want for willing workers and assistants," added Maj Rankin. "Only yesants," added Maj. Rankin. "Only yesterday morning one enthusiastic and energetic lady called to ask me if there was any way in which she could assist our representatives in the Transvaal. "To be sure there is,' I replied instantly, 'in about a week's time I will have a thousand tickets for you to sell." }+0+0+0+0+0+0+0+0+0+0+0+ ANOTHER MAN IN THE HOUSE.

He Was Mistaken For a Lover, but Confessed That He Was a

Donaghue knelt at the door and put practiced ear at the keyhole. There was a faint sound of breathing, so faint that Donaghue pressed his rough ear still closer to the brassy aperture in the door and listened even more intently. His small eyes glistened in the dark hallway like the eyes of a cat (he had been nicknamed "The Cat" for this very peculiarity), but there was no one in the house to see those glistening eyes save the servants, fast asleep two stories above, and the occupants of this one room. He had watched that house three preceding days and nights. He knew that it was occupied by a young man and his wife - evidently newly married and beyond doubt rich. He knew that the servants were a cook, two maids and a butler, and he had almost worked out in his mind just where the pretty wife placed her jewelry when she went to bed in the second floor room and just what means the husband took to secure his probably well filled purse.

When one is in the habit of making social calls of the description that Don, aghue was making, it is much better to find husbands away from home, the servants and occupants of the house all asleep and the policeman on the beat quite out of hearing.

The fact was Donaghue shrank from notoriety. He preferred a quiet entrance by the window wholly unobserved if possible and, departing, left not his card nor anything else that was of value and at the same time portable. Indeed Donaghue was not the tall, handsome fellow that most heroes are. On the contrary, he was of medium height, spare, slouchy and had a general appearance that was anything but prepossessing. He was not a member of polite society. "Dead easy," said Donaghue to himself. "A young married couple, as I thought, and husband's away on the loose. She's calling his name in her sleep. But I needn't expect him until morning, and when he does come home he'll probably be drunk. That's what I call dead easy."

He turned the knob of the door and opened it the fraction of an inch. His small eyes glistened in the dark as he found that the door was not locked, and that in all probability it would not squeak.

Slowly and with infinite care he opened the door and entered the room. Four feet from him, as he stood almost breathless, with his hand still clasping the knob of the door, lay the sleeping form of a woman. A flood of moonlight from the window fell upon her and melted the pink of her cheek, the cream of her throat, the lace of the nightdress and the white sheet that wrapped her into one semigoiden hue: The undulation caused by her breathing made her look like a drooping tily swayed by the gentlest of breezes. "Great heavens!" thought Donaghue. "what a beauty!" He could hear her faintly mutter the name "Paul-Paul" at intervals, and he had a vague con sciousness of a certain disrespect for Paul, whoever he might be. A man must be a brute to leave such a woman alone at night. He lingered but a moment, though. Beauty was a thing of little value to Donaghue. His own Maggie was hardly cursed with the fatal gift of beauty, and she was quite as jealous as other wives. He stepped soffly and quickly to the dressing case at the other end of the room. He picked up a perfumed lace handkerchief and threw it away impatiently, although in his more youthful days a lace handkerchief he would have considered a prize of no mean value. Below it he found what he wanted and expected-a locket and chain, a jeweled watch, a heavy bracelet, a pin and what seemed to him a handful of rings. He held them all up in the moonlight and not ced how they sparkled in his trembling hand, and he smiled with

He turned and looked at her. He felt like adding a stolen kiss to the other jewels he had taken. He almost laughed aloud at the thought of such a man as be kissing such a peerless beauty as the woman who lay on the bed before him. And he was just about to depart as peacefully as a so-cial caller when suddenly he heard the slamming of the front door in the hall

"Her old man," said Donaghue, forgetting that he was probably a young man, "and I'm caught. Caught—burglary—ten years at the least. I'll kill him. But I'll be caught whether I kill him or not, and"—self upbraiding-iy—"I could have got away easily enough if I hadn't stopped to look Again he stepped quickly to the door and listened. He heard footsteps in the hall beneath. The man had stepped into the back parlor, or library. whichever it was. Perhaps the man had been out on business and would stop there for a minute or two at his desk. Perhaps there was, after all, a chance for escape. He was cool and careful. He dropped the jewels on the bed. It would not do to be caught with them about him. And he went out.

The door squeaked this time, and the young wife started in her sleep, awoke and half rose in her bed.

Donaghue at the same time heard the shuffle of feet in the room below. He paused and distened at the top of the stairs.

Even though the man had heard the door squeak, he had not left the back Donaghue tripped down the stairs as softly as a cat. He had been in a tight fix before, and he was never cleverer than when he knew that he vas in danger. But luck was against bim. There was a fur rug at the fact of the stairs. The floor beneath was polished. He slipped and fell, and in spite of himself he uttered an exclamation that was profane enough to be unmistakably masculine. He heard the man rush from the library, and how it all happened he hardly knew, but some way or other he managed to dash into the dark parfor, to throw open the window and jump out

He expected to fall at least eight or ten feet. He did not fall two. He had jumped out on a porch, evidently, for he could see the railing in the moonlight. There was one thing to do-to nide directly beneath the window in the shadow and wait. He knew his pursuer would be there in a moment. He knew there would be a bue and cry Still, there was a chance. True enough, the man came to the window; but, to the infinite surprise of Donaghue, he made no outery. He heard the man utter a half articulate "Heaven! has it come to this?" He heard him walk a few steps and strike a match. He saw the light of the gas knew that he was safe, and he cursed A Recent Discovery at Kimberley &folf for a fool for leaving the lewels behind.

He heard a woman's step in the room. The man at the window turned. "How dare you look me in the face?" he cried. "How dare you come to me after this?"

Calmly the woman raised herself to her feet and, looking at the man, said in a forced whisper:

"What do you mean "What do I mean? You know what I mean," answered the man. "He has been here at last-perhaps not for the first time. But I have found it out. I have found you out." Donaghue heard a little stifled moan and the crash of a body as it fell on the floor. He began to gather a crude idea of what it was all about. He had hand-

The man stood over her with burning cheeks and clinched hands.

"And the cur ran away from you" He didn't even stay to fight me like a man! He's a coward. I knew it when we met him in Baden. He's a villain I knew it when he followed us to Loudon. He can take you now. I don't want you. And some day he'll run away from you, poor, beautiful, mis-erable fool, just as he has run away from me."

There was considerable human no ture in Douaghue, even though he did make his living in a peculiar way. This was a little more than he could stand. He jumped up and leaped back through the window. "Look here!" he shouted, and then was suddenly silent, for a pair of strong hands were clasped about his throat, and the heavy weight of the larger man had borne him to the floor n a moment.

"You, such a being as you, my wife's lover!" roared the man.
"No!" screamed Donaghue, making a esperate effort to free himself. "Well, who are you?" said the man. "Let me sit up and I'll tell you," answered Donaghue.

The man released him, still keeping him within arms' reach in the corner of the room. Donaghue felt his throat

"Well?" said the man peremptorily. "I'm the man that was in the house," said Donaghue sullenly.
"What do you mean? Why were you here?" asked the man. "Well," answered Donaghue, regain ing some of his customary bravado "I wanted to add some of your jewelry to my collection. See? If you don't believe me, you'll find it where I threw it away, up in your wife's room. The man turned and dropped to his knees by the side of the prostrate woman. He put his ear to her heart, and when he raised his head again Donaghue saw that there were tears in his eyes.

"Thank God, she has only fainted." said the man. "Bring me some water from the library,"

Donaghue brought the water in a solid silver pitcher that made him sigh with a vain wish that he had got away with it and the jewels above. "She will be all right in a moment," said the man, "and you may go." "Thanks." said Donaghue nonchal-antly, going toward the window. "Perhaps it is I who ought to thank you," said the man, "for, after all, you have proved that my wife is true to "Don't mention it." answered Donaghue, as he disappeared-"at least not to the police."—Chicago Herald.

ORIGIN OF DIAMONDS

A New Folution to a I ong Debat ed and Well Worn Problem.

fords Scope for This Reasoning.

The origin of diamonds, which for so long has been a debated question, appears to be explained by a recent discovery near Kimberley.

In both the Indian and the Brazilian diamond fields the gem occurs like a pebble in certain gravelly strata, but has not been traced back to any rock that gives any indication of its genesis. After the discovery of diamonds in the river sand of some South American rivers a peculiar material of a brownish buff color, which turned to a dark bluish tint, was found. It became darker as the miners dug down. The diamonds lay in this material, together with several other materials, such as garnets, iron ores, augite, olivine, etc. Excavations, begun systematically, were eventually carried on on such a large scale that near Kimberley they reach ed a depth of more than 1,400 feet. Here the rock is about, as hard as ordinary limestone. The blue ground is found only in limited areas. The rocks around are of dark shades banded with hard sandstone, in which sheets or dikes of basalt or some material which was once in molten condition are occasionally found. The blue ground fills a sort of shaft of colossal size in these other rocks and is itself cut up by similar dikes. The opinions of geologists dif-fer as to whether the gems are pro-duced where they now lie or have been formed of some volcanic explos ions. Experts now tend to the belief that the blue ground in which diamonds were found is not the true birthplace. The bowlders are often watermarked and may have rested for ages in an ancient gravel at the very bottom ol sedentary rocks of the district. In course of time volcanic explosions shattered the rocky floor in which the diamonds were imbedded, of which the bowlders were only samples, and dispersed it. gether with the overlying materials. It is believed that this is the true explanation of the formation of the dianand bearing blue ground.

Geo. L. Weed, is a particularly attractive book, 400 pages, with 75 full-page half-tone illustrations. It has received the recommendation of representatives of the leading Christian churches, irrespective of denomination. The author, both by training and sentiment, is thoroughly qualified to write such a book, and has personally visited the Holy Land, enabling him to speak from experience of the scenes described. It is bound in handsome cloth with embossed front cover. The publisher's price is $1.00. We especially recommend this book to our readers.

There should be no time lost in closing with a proposition of this nature. The papers start at once and the books are mailed immediately, post paid, to the subscriber.

A story of the late George Augustus Sala and Barnum is told by Tit-Bits. It'was on the occasion of the last visit of the famous showman in England, Mr. Sala presided in the reception room, where all were waiting to wel-come the guest of the evening. Mr. come the guest of the evening. Mr. Barnum came in heaming, and, shaking, hands with the chairman, said, with a marked Yankee accent: "This is, indeed, a surprise to me." "Did you hear that?" THE BEDSTEAD.

A Brief History of Its Evolutions in Great Britain.

An Article Well Worth Reading From a Well-known Writer.

The late Lawson Tait was a man of many parts, and if he could not wield the pen so skilfully as, the knife, at any rate as a writer he was by no means to be despised. Perhaps the last article contributed by him was on the 'Hygiene of the by him was on the Hygiene of the Bedroom and Bedstead. It traces almost lovingly and in language picturesquely descriptive the evolution of the bedroom and of that now necessary article of furniture in Great Britain, the bedstead itself. It tells us that in the days of the cave-dwellers, and through the the cave-dwellers, and through the various stages of savage and nomad life, the dwelling space was used for all purposes in common, and that it was not until the wandering hunter had, so to speak, settled down that saw the advantage of setting aside a portion of his dwelling for sleeping purposes.

After a brief reference to times of the Briton in Britain, story brings us to the Norman in that country, and shows us that the Norman—albeit his castle might be grim and forbidding outwardlyyet had a very fair notion of what constitutes a comfortable bedroom and bedstead, as well as more than rudimentary ideas on effective hy-giene. The walls of their castles were thick and solid, thus securing a fair uniformity of temperature, while the downfall of cold air was modified by the hangings of tapes-try. For their bedsteads there was no need of hangings. We are told that the Saxon farmer, on the contrary, had perforce to live under very, different conditions. His houses were of wood and as he was no adept at carpentering the doors and windows were ill-fitting and draughts were in consequence the rule rather than the exception. Hence that abomination of abominations, the four-poster bed, or, as Lawson Tait preferred to put it, "A small apartment was constructed inside the bedroom in the shape of a huge four-poster hung around with curtains, into which a whole family must have crowded, possibly with the addition of occasional visitors." It is shown how strenuously the conservative Britisher clung to his time-honored four-poster until the fifties, when, as Tait satirically said, the dawn of domestic sanitation as we know it occurred, and was not fully appreciated till well on in the seventies.

A pathetic picture is drawn of the trials attending the unwary visitor to London even in the seventics, when it was the rule to have vermin in all bedsteads used by the public, and bugs were made the subject of jokes in all humorou writings and pantemimes. The story goes on to tell that the first step in the right direction was the introduction of metallic bedsteads, and Tait related that he remembered very well the furor of indignation with which they were met—for nothing annoys an Englishman so much as any interference with his personal habits or belongings. It is related, however, that finally all scruples were overcome, and that at last metal bedsteads have had their way. Thus is traced in brief the evolution of the bedstead in Great Britain.

Loose clothes and downy cushions Loose clothes and downy cushions bring only a negative sort of comfort to the woman who is suffering with some disease or derangement of the organs distinctly feminine. Some clothes and some positions make the pain and the discomfort seem less. Perhaps the nerves are most affected and this in turn disturbs the digestion. Nothing will ever completely relieve but a radical cure. The start of so-called "female complaints" may be a very slight thing indeed. It may be that in the beginning some small hygienic measures would stop the hygienic measures would stop the trouble. Certainly at this time, a little bit of the right medicine would stop it. When the trouble becomes stop it. When the trouble becomes worse, it is harder to cure, but still it can be cured. The Dublin Fusiliers Rushed One Boer Position at the Point of the Bayone London, Jan. 24. Bennett Burleigh sends the following to the Daily Telegraph, dated Spearman's Camp, Sunday, January 21:—Throughout the day, Warren centinued to advance at a divided by the Boers resisted stubbornly, but Hart's brigade, which with Hildyard's, bad the brunt of the infantry work to do, drove them slewly from hill to hill. The Dublins have been fighting grandly for 24 hours. The turning movement was then attempted by the Boers on lower ground, on our extreme left, but two batteries of artillery and the Devonshire Regiment stopped and repulsed them. The enemy bad two 6-inch Cruesot guns, about four 15-pounders, and two machine guns. Their shell fire did little execution. The fire of our guns, Maxim and rifles, was excellent. Despite the strength and number of their works, the Boers are losing heavily, while our losses have been moderate. This afternoon the Dublins tried to take a stiff position, by the bayonet. Dublins tried to take a stiff position, by the bayonet. Our men are now adepts in advancing, and at taking all available cover when skirmishing. General Warren's guns cannonaded the Boer ranks during the night. The enemy's defences consist of numerous trenches, walls and redoubts, from which our troops successfully dislodged them in dashing style. The Boers endeavored to keep the majority of their men out of range, until they are actually wanted, and so do we. Our wounded, are doing well. doing well.
