manager expected—i. e., placed all those who will be numbered among the big prize winners with so few votes separating them that the race will be close and exciting from now on. The next four days will be the time to make subscriptions count.

What are you going to do? If some one were to tell you that a few subscriptions more or less would determine the winning of the grand prize minded candidate would strain every effort to get all the subscriptions in his power from now until Oct. 28.

Get busy to-day. Don't wait until

This is the time it tests a candidate's grit. It is not so easy to get subscriptions as it was a few weeks ago when the campaign was new, but there are subscriptions to be procured and the people that get them these last four days are the ones that are going to reap the rewards during the week ending the campaign.

Anniversary Services Were Continued at St. Andrews

Banquet and Social Re-union Held There, Reminiscences of the Past Being Given By Old Members of the Parish—Church Has a Worthy Honor Roll.

The commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of St. Andrews' Presbyterian Church, was continued last night by a sumptuous supper followed by a splendid entertainment. The proceedings throughout, although principally of a reminiscent nature, were also patriotic and this phase of the celebration was evidenced in the tastefully decorated tables and the room in which the dainty repast was served by the ladies of the church as a fitting preliminary to the unexcelled concert which followed. While the religious services which were held on Sunday, served to tighten the spiritual bonds which bind the congregation to the church in its intercourse, which prevailed last night was more of the nature of a friendly church re-union.

Shortly after six o'clock the many guests were welcomed to the supper tables which were amply supplied by the generous ladies of the church. Justice having been done to this portion of the programme, the happy throng ascended to the main body of the church, where the latter part of the evening's proceedings was held.

Rev. J. W. Gordon
The chair was ably occupied by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Gordon, who officiated most acceptably in that capacity. In a brief opening address, the chairman extended a hearty welcome to all who were in attendance at such an auspicious occasion in the history of the church, to assist in celebrating the quarter of a century mark, which had been attained by the people of St. Andrews' church. Mr. Gordon thought that while there were several reasons to which might be accounted the success of the church and while there were also many organizations who had contributed to its welfare, none stood out more prominently than the older members, who had been connected with the church at its inception, and who had rendered faithful service since that time. He thought it to be especially appropriate then to call upon Mr. T. Henderson, as the oldest member of the session, to speak a few words.

Mr. T. Henderson, as a representative of the session and the other organizations of the church, expressed the appreciation which was felt, not only by these societies, but by the entire church at the evidence of friendly feeling which existed in the city toward their church. Many changes had taken place since first St. Andrews' church was founded, but no more fitting culmination of twenty-five years' work could have been attained, than the communion service which had been held there the previous day. He called to mind two faithful members, who had been associated with him on the session in past years, but who had passed away, and to others whose presence was missed by their removal from the city. Mr. Henderson concluded by expressing a hearty wish for continued prosperity.

Mrs. Revell, of Chatham, a former soloist of the church, who was in the city for the purpose of being present at the occasion, rendered a delightful solo.
Rev. D. T. McClintock
Rev. D. T. McClintock, of Alexandria Presbyterian church, acknowledged the contributions toward the success of the evening, which had been made by the ladies of the church. He declared that since he had been a member of the Presbytery of Paris, no more cordial reception had been tendered that body when they convened, than that which was extended by St. Andrews' church. In recalling the past, one of the elements which had been primarily instrumental in the success which the congregation had experienced, was the splendid class of ministers who had occupied the pulpit. He thought that the people of St. Andrews' church were to be congratulated on this fact, and particularly for possessing such a capable and sympathetic pastor as the Rev. J. W. Gordon. He had enjoyed the sincere friendship of Mr. Gordon for many years, and would always look back with kindly memories to the close friendship which had existed between them. In the past the loyalty of the people had been an important factor in the success of the church, and as the years pass on, the inspiration and outlook of the church would be enlarged by a continuance of this spirit of co-operation, combined with strenuous efforts to carry on the work of the Master. Mr. McClintock concluded by extending on behalf of the people and session of Alexandria church, the best wishes for continued prosperity.

By special request, Mr. John Howarth contributed an excellent rendition of Kipling's "Recessional," which was greatly appreciated.

The chairman then called upon Dr. Wm. Nichol, who had been one of the original workers of the church, and who had conducted the services for seven years after its erection, to speak.

Dr. Nichol recalled many early occurrences which had taken place in the church, particularly its erection and dedication, the latter having been conducted by Rev. Dr. Cochrane, the 27th of December, 1892.

Unanimity had prevailed among the members of the early church in common with those of all the churches of that time, due no doubt to the fundamentals, and essentials of religion, which were then adhered to. He thought that such a condition should always exist to insure the efficient completion of the work. He also presented reports of some of the early organizations of the church, which compared quite favorably with similar societies of to-day.

A patriotic selection was then sung by Mr. John Anderson.

Honor Roll
At this juncture, fitting reference was made to the splendid record of the church in giving up its members and adherents to the cause of the Empire. Over sixty representatives of the church were in khaki, while many more had been rejected. Capt. Finlay Fraser and Pte. Urquhart had made the supreme sacrifice of their lives, while Mr. Robt. Scott is also lying wounded in a French hospital. Led by Mr. Gordon, a solemn prayer for the soldier boys was offered by the congregation.

Rev. G. A. Woodside
Rev. Mr. Woodside of Zion Presbyterian church, stated that a most friendly and sympathetic spirit existed in his church for the welfare of their kindred institution. He emphasized the need of co-operation of the congregation with the minister by regular attendance and in all other possible ways, to assist him in carrying on the work which he was striving to do. He assured the gathering that there was a desire on the part of every minister of the gospel to adequately present a solution for all difficulties that might arise, and that this purpose could be more easily accomplished by the assistance of every member of the church. He congratulated the congregation on possessing such a capable pastor with such an understanding of the requirements of his people.

Looking back over the vantage ground of a quarter of a century of trials and vicissitudes which had

THREATENED MEN
Doc Whiskers says, "I am not joking when saying you must cut out smoking, or cross to t'other shore." I listened to the admonition of that renowned and learned physician, and then I smoked some more. The docs are fond of threats and bluffs; they like to scare you while they're studying their little pills into your craw; they like to raise a little riot about your exercise and diet, while brandishing the saw. Long years ago the doctors told me that graveyard vestments would enfold me, unless I ceased to smoke; I heard their rede then, late and early, I kept on smoking good old burley, and quite forgot to croak. At least a dozen famous surgeons, apothecaries and chirurgeons, have told me of my plight: "Unless you can your old rank briar, the nicotine will knock you higher than Gilroy's famous kite." And still my brain is a fitter; I still consume the Four Flush mixture, and buy it by the pound, while the docs stand round and threaten, reproaching me that I'm forgetting I'll soon be underground.

Happy Without Knowing It
"The rays of happiness, like those of light, are colorless when unbroken."
"Isn't it beautiful," said the Author-Man to the Newly-Wed-Lady, "to be happy and to know it, like you?"
"Can one be happy without knowing it?" asked the Newly-Wed-Lady.
"Well, rather," said the Author-Man. "Didn't you ever know anyone who was happy and didn't know it until afterward?"
The Newly-Wed-Lady thought a little and decided she had.
"Have you ever known such people?"
"I have, lots of them."
One Woman Who Doesn't Know How Happy She Is.

Her husband is in an excellent business which brings in an excellent comfortable enough so that she does not have to worry about money. She keeps two maids and

EDLA
There were a great, great many dark-haired dolls at the doll convention. Jane, the little mortal girl who came each night with her doll, began to look about her for a doll with flaxen hair. She found one almost at once, the doll from Sweden, who said her name was Edla. Dear me, she was the prettiest doll, with the bluest of eyes, the pinkiest of cheeks and the blondest of hair. Her costume was most becoming. It was a white waist, a red and black striped vest trimmed with gold buttons, a green, hand-embroidered jacket, a black cloth skirt and a red satin cap. Think of that! Jane, who didn't always want to sew, wondered how many hours had been spent on Edla's beautiful embroidery.
Now Edla herself must have liked to sew for every night there she was at the doll convention, sewing and stitching and bothering her head about nothing at all but her work.
There came a night when Edla gave every doll at the doll convention a Swedish fairy candy so they could understand her. And then she got up and made a speech. It was all about a doll bride. You didn't know there were any? Oh, my, my!
"It is the custom in my country," said Edla, "for the bride's friends each to embroider on a quilt-square her Christian name. All of you know Greta. She was here last year. And I have brought some quilt-squares with me." With that it

MILITARY CROSS FOR BILL O'HARA
Former Toronto Outfielder Wins Distinction at the Front.
New York, Oct. 24.—The Associated Press sends out the following under a Boston date:—"Bill O'Hara, once a star left-fielder of the Toronto International League team, has been recommended for the military cross in recognition of his bravery and skill in hurling bombs for the British army on the Somme front, according to advices received here to-day."
"When O'Hara played in the International League he was noted for his strong and accurate throwing. Baseball men here say it was a common occurrence for him to head off a foe daring base runner at the plate by a long quick throw from the outfield. O'Hara, a lieutenant in a Canadian regiment at the front, is now hurling deadly bombs instead of baseballs. According to word from Toronto the practice he had in baseball has stood him in good stead while heading a bombing party."
In the big "show," as the Lieutenant himself calls it, of September 15, he charged across No Man's Land in command of a bombing section of his battalion and stormed the German trenches. In a deep dugout he captured a Hun officer and a private. The officer resisted O'Hara and the latter killed him with a shot from his automatic revolver. The Toronto man describes the army issue revolver as "some gun." The shot fired at close quarters, carried away most of the German officer's head.

THE SITUATION

There can be no doubt that the Teuton occupation of the Roumanian port of Constanza, on the Black Sea, constitutes a direct set back to the Russo-Roumanian forces. The move also gives to the enemy important railway communications. The next move of the foe is expected to be against Tchernavoda. Here is located the only bridge across the Danube between Belgrade and the sea, and possession of that would open a direct way to the Roumanian capital of Bucharest.

On the Transylvania frontier, the outlook is better. The Roumanians are holding their positions, and Falkenhayn's troops have been severely handled.

On the Somme front, the British and French troops have still further advanced their lines, both north and south of the Somme.

On the Macedonian front, the Serbians administered a heavy defeat to the Bulgarians. German troops are going to the help of the latter, with men taken from the Verdun and Russian fronts.

VISCOUNT GREY SPEAKS OUT.

Britain's Foreign Secretary made a very important speech yesterday at a luncheon given by the Foreign Press Associations. He made it very plain that any efforts of neutral countries with regard to peace terms would not be tolerated, but said that their efforts would be welcomed with regard to the prevention of future wars.

The speaker showed in detail how the Kaiserites had been the aggressors, and demonstrated that the war lords in Berlin had refused to listen to any proposal for the amicable settlement of all difficulties.

"When Britain proposed a conference, Russia, France, and Italy accepted the conference. And one power refused it, is it the powers which offer the conference who are forcing war or the power that refuses it?"

Germany had proposed that the British Government should remain neutral under certain conditions. The latter involved the condemnation of the violators of the neutrality of Belgium and a free hand for the Teutons to take whatever French colonies she liked.

There was a prompt refusal. Had Britain accepted she would have incurred the contempt of the whole world, and there would have been no morale, no spirit, no motives. Happily tactics so gross did not succeed.

"I take it on the word of the Prime Minister that we shall fight until we have established the supremacy and right of free development under equal conditions, each in accordance with its genius, of all States, great and small, as a family of civilized mankind."

And it is on behalf of this determination that Premier Borden has just issued his further appeal to the men and the women of Canada.

FORCING AN ELECTION.

The announcement is made—by Liberal politicians and by Liberal newspapers—that there is to be a general election before the end of the war. They have set it for the early part of next year, while the war is likely to be still a year from its conclusion.

It is significant that all the talk of an election emanates from Opposition sources. From no Conservative source has there come any suggestion, probably for the sufficient reason that the Government is far too occupied in carrying on the war to give any thought to the question of an election.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, who a year ago declared in Montreal that a war-time election would be a crime, now goes to Montreal—with Laurier—and his message is that an election will come like a thief in the night. And nobody has ever heard about this thief until his coming was announced by Mr. Lemieux—in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's company.

Following Mr. Lemieux's work as advance agent for the thief in the night, comes the publication in those Liberal newspapers which enjoy the Laurier confidence, that "the Government is planning an election."

The odd thing about it is that the Government should be planning an election and that Laurier, Lemieux, and a group of Liberal newspapers should be the first to know of it. The first information as to these plans of the Government reached the Government from the Laurier-Lemieux-Globe trio of prognosticators.

The Liberal leaders are now talking of the election for which they have long been more or less secretly preparing. So far as the Opposition is concerned, there is no party truce and never has been. There has been much fair promise and much blackguardly performance. Liberals are talking election now because they believe that their campaign carried on without interruption, month by month, against a Government pre-occupied with the war, may bear them some fruit.

They are in a position to bring about an election. The life of the present parliament would have, under normal conditions, expired this month. It was extended for a year. Unless the Liberals agree to a further extension from next October, a war-time election is inevitable; the Government must go to the country, must temporarily divert its energies to an election campaign and leave the Canadian troops to look after themselves. This is what the Liberals are now proposing. Hon. George P. Graham, a Liberal of more or less prominence, is quoted as saying that the Opposition will not consent to a further extension of the Parliamentary term.

If that is the Liberal intention, then the question is settled, but in the face of Mr. Graham's announcement, it is rather foolish of Mr. Lemieux to appear in Montreal with his whispered warning that an election will come like a thief in the night. The real point about all this talk of elections is to be found in the Graham statement. Maybe he has spilled the beans and Mr. Lemieux, with the Globe's help, is endeavoring to gather them up.

Is Laurier, after all forgetting that in May of last year he told the Ontario Federation of Liberal Clubs that, "I do not care for my part, so long as the war lasts, to open the portals of office with that bloody key?"

Has the Globe forgotten what it said with suchunction on September 28, 1915, that "Canada does not want an election while the war is being waged, and while citizens, irrespective of politics, are bending all their energies to assist the Government in work of national importance."

Does Mr. Graham, when he declares that there will be no further extension, forget what he said in his newspaper, the Brockville Recorder, on April 21, 1915—"Let the election be held at the close of the war, but do not let Canada make herself ridiculous in the eyes of the world by holding an election while the Empire of which she forms a part is taking part in the most tremendous conflict in the history of the world."

These holy protestations are all forgotten. To remember them and give effect to them, would be consistency. In the record of politics found in the record of Liberalism, consistency has ever stepped aside to make way for expediency. It will do so now if Sir Wilfrid Laurier arrives at the conclusion that there is a partizan end to be served. Once again he has addressed a Confederation of Ontario Liberal Clubs. He does not seem to have alluded to any reluctance to opening the portals of office with a bloody key.

He seems, however, to have overlooked something, the temper of the Canadian people.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

The Expositor says that "It is, of course, not desirable, on general principles, that there should be a war-time election," and then goes on to plead that present circumstances warrant one. The favorite diversion of our cotem. is to swallow itself holus bolus and it has become an expert on the job.

The Grit papers hailed it as a master phrase when Sir Wilfrid said he would refuse to open the door of office with "that bloody key"—meaning a war-time election. To most people it sounded more like a dime-novel remark, and now he is proposing to use "a bloody crow bar," or anything else to get at the sweets of office.

Contrast Premier Borden's patriotic message to the Canadian people, with the attitude of Sir Wilfrid in refusing to even serve on a parliamentary national service committee, and you get just the difference between the two men.

Vancouver is experimenting with illuminated street names for the better convenience of the people at night. Good idea. This climbing up a storey to find the title of some thoroughfare, isn't what it is cracked up to be.

ENQUIRIES

As to the Battle of the Somme

Enquiries, which with passing time increase daily in number as the announcement of The Brantford Courier's intention to show "The Battle of the Somme" pictures at the Theatre for three days, opening Thursday, Nov. 2, gains in publicity, prove that large crowds will feature the presentations of this greatest of all films.

Information concerning the pictures is sought of The Courier through the mails, by telephone and in person. The larger number of the queries regard the reservation of seats. As has been announced, popular prices will prevail.

That the films, five thousand feet in all, divided into five reels, requiring an hour and a quarter for exhibition, will have a most successful run in Brantford, is practically assured, and its sponsors in this city are entirely satisfied with the indications.

Finest Films Yet. "The Battle of the Somme" pictures are the greatest films ever produced, and continued reiteration of this fact is intended only to show to what extent the films are the greatest.

In their own way they are as remarkable as the British offensive itself. Both represent masterpieces in strategy, courage and heroism.

The Somme offensive has continued for more than three months, engaging hundreds of thousands of men on each side. Thousands of shells and cartridges expended. Thousands of heavy guns have been concentrated in the front where the drive began, and where the German line was broken and pushed back. It is a battle on modern scale, the biggest offensive known to history, where armies number by scores and soldiers by millions, where instead of a few professional soldiers the entire available manhood of nations is involved.

"The Battle of the Somme" THE GREATEST MOVING PICTURE IN THE WORLD

THE WORCESTERS GOING INTO ACTION

The Battle of The Somme on July 1st, when the first smash was made by the infantry into the German line, had been preceded by a week or so of the heaviest artillery fire ever known in this war or any other; millions of shells have been expended and the surface of the ground in the neighborhood of the German trenches has been broken like a plowed field and literally packed with mine pits and shell holes.

Some of the monstrous guns used in this battle are of a size possible heretofore only on stationary fortifications and the heaviest armed war vessels.

THE BRANTFORD DAILY COURIER will show what modern artillery fire is like on November 2, 3 and 4, at the Colonial Theatre, when the wonderful film of "The Battle of the Somme," under the direction of the War Office, on instructions of the Imperial Government, will be shown here for the first time.

These wonderful films were actually taken under fire. They show shell explosions "close up"; in one part the film shows a German trench under "concentrated fire"; shells exploding on the field with the frequency of rain-drops splashing in a puddle. But each of those shells carried potentiality to obliterate a score of men from the face of the earth, of burying a section of trench in debris, of blowing a machine gun position out of existence. These shells actually passed over the camera before they exploded a couple of hundred yards ahead, across "No Man's Land." The camera men took chances of life and death with the soldiers, in fact, on many occasions they exposed themselves to get a good picture where soldiers remained under cover.

The "Battle of The Somme," says The Glasgow Citizen, "is the biggest thing ever done in photography; it is worth going a hundred miles to see." You will see it right here in Brantford next week, 3,000 miles from the sound of those terrible guns.

The film will be shown in The Colonial Theatre, November 2, 3 and 4, with daily matinee. Popular Price, 25 cents.

INFORMAL GATHERING

A pleasant informal gathering of the ladies of Brant Avenue Church was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. S. Brewster, 55 Chestnut Avenue, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid of the church. During the course of the afternoon, arrangements were made to assist in the coming campaign for funds on behalf of the British Red Cross Society. Christmas socks for the soldiers were also distributed to about sixty-five ladies who were present.

CALVARY CHURCH

Calvary Church enjoyed a profitable Sunday. Rev. W. E. Bowyer, the pastor, preached at both services. The morning theme was "Strength and Beauty in the Sanctuary," in which was presented the idea that strength is not merely of muscles and sinews, nor beauty, or that of outward appearance, but these are to be found in the cultivation of a Christian character. The evening subject was "Chaining and Taming the Wild Beast." Reference was made to the Ontario Temperance act, and how it had checked drunkenness. There are uncontrollable passions that rage in the natures of men, and wreck their lives. These are subdued and conquered by the power of God through Jesus Christ. During the day the choir, Miss Bertha Sayles and Mrs. R. H. Martin rendered appropriate and appreciated selections of music.

GERMAN SEA-PLANE

Is Destroyed Off the Belgian Coast.

London, Oct. 24—A British naval aeroplane on October 23 attacked four German seaplanes over the Belgian coast and succeeded in destroying one of the machines and chasing the others away, according to an announcement made by the British admiralty to-day.

The text of the statement says: "On the afternoon of October 23, a naval aeroplane attacked four enemy seaplanes off Ostend. Our machine was under fire from all four seaplanes but succeeded in bringing down one which was completely destroyed and in driving off the others."

Guess we've got the goods, Eh, men and money, too. One thing the boys do like is to get lots of mail; it's surprising how little some of them get and they get quite disappointed over it. Remember, anything you hear of the 125th in future will not be Brantford boys. When we go (A and B companies) our places will be filled by strangers. The next draft will be from C and D companies. Then strangers will take their places and the Battalion will thus retain its identity, the only Brantford men in it being officers and some Sergeants.

HIGH TRIBUTE TO LT. WADSWORTH

Toronto Officer of 84th Who Laid Down His Life at the Front.

The following extract from a Toronto newspaper has reference to Lieut. D'Arcy Wadsworth, who was yesterday reported by the Courier dead of wounds:

Lieut. D'Arcy R. Wadsworth, who died of wounds, was born in Toronto in 1893, and was a son of Mr. W. R. Wadsworth, for many years manager of the main office of the Bank of Toronto. He was four years at Ridley, four years at Upper Canada College, and more than five years with the Bank of Montreal in Toronto. He was an active member of the Toronto Cricket Club and the R. C. Y. C. He was attached as a lieutenant to the 84th Battalion, and trained with that corps at Niagara-on-the-Lake. He served as Scout Officer with the 84th at Brantford during the winter of 1915-16. He accompanied his unit to England in June, 1916, and on arrival 800 men and six officers of whom he was one, were drafted to France.

Music and Drama

In the play "The Metaphysical eating the three characters of the characters is considered very pleasing.

The idea of the authoress in delineating the three characters of the "Princess," is that they are on three different planes of development.

The eldest, Adolphus, is on the material plane, like luxury, ease, good food, and enjoys the glitter of "The City of the Brazen Temples." He is not able to discern "wisdom" when he meets her at the "Traveler's Inn," except as "an old man with a cap and goggles." He does not accept her invitation to enter the beautiful Crystal Chamber, and drink of the fountain in the silence there, and "the shawl, and "other things," such as Wisdom and Understanding," that his mother asked him to seek.

Claudius, in his adventures, meets Wisdom as a "Veiled Lady," who shows him how to ascend a high cliff and succor a lost and wounded fawn, returning it safely to its mother, and he drinks of the bubbling spring by the wayside, that she guides him to, it being "the water of life."

The Brant. Safe it is to say that all who yesterday attended the Brant theatre were unanimous in pronouncing as probably the finest performance ever witnessed in this city, that presented there by Galetti's Trained Monkeys, which clever little animals appear to have reached a point of intelligence scarcely inferior to that of the human race. From racing to trapeze performances, and from playing wire to tonorial performances, the simian displayed throughout, exceptional skill in its predecessors, and from all, the song and dance revue presented by Clare and Flo Gould aroused applause.

The motion picture bill included an episode of the problem play "Who's Guilty?" which probably surpassed in interest and tenseness its predecessors, and the rightly celebrated Pauline Frederick, who enjoys great popularity among Brantford audiences in her latest feature production "The Woman in the Case," a drama of the present war, and one of the most forceful witnessed here for some time.

Dr. Hunt hypnotized Miss Vera learned to talk, returned to the Colonial for a three night's stay, and presented a sensation psychic show that amazed the large audience for ninety minutes with thrills and laughter produced by his scientific experiments in suggestion, hypnosis and telepathy.

Dr. Hunt hypnotized Miss Vera Wolfe, and her body in a view today in the "Tip-Top" tailor's window. Her body will be carried to the Colonial stage and awakened from the long hypnotic trance to-night as the first incident of a long program of furious fun and convincing tests.

DEATH OF OLD PARIS RESIDENT

Mr. Robert Peel Passes Away There, Aged 79 Years.

Paris, Oct. 23.—(From our own correspondent)—A well known resident of Paris passed away on Saturday in the person of Robert Peel. He was born in Paris in 1837 and spent many years in the milling and lumbering business in the County of Essex, going there as a pioneer. Returning to Paris, he has made this his home since 1885. In politics, Mr. Peel was a Reformer, and always took a lively interest in the affairs of his country. He is survived by his wife (daughter of the late James Havill) one daughter, Bertha, residing at home, and two sons, Mr. L. J. of Toronto, (formerly of Brantford) and E. R. Peel of Enderby, B. C.

Rev. Mr. Adamson, of the Anglican Church, conducted the services this afternoon from his late residence, St. Andrew Street, to St. James cemetery. The pall-bearers were Messrs. John Inkster, J. R. Inkster, P. Buckley, Thos. Evans, A. Koe and W. W. Telfer. Mr. Peel was one of the officers of the 100th Regiment, organized in Brantford, and stationed at the Rock of Gibraltar during the Indian mutiny. Mr. Peel will be missed by many, especially of the older residents. Always kind and unassuming in his relationship with those he knew.

Anniversary Services

The anniversary services in connection with the Presbyterian Church were held yesterday and both services were largely attended, and proved interesting and inspiring throughout. Mr. Hamilton, soloist of New St. Andrew's Church, Toronto, assisted throughout the day with the musical portion of the service. Rev. Mr. Sedgwick of Hamilton, preached on both occasions, and gave Wilson, Manager of the Imperial Bank, Wilkie, Sask. The marriage will take place quietly late in December.

Laid to Rest

All that was mortal of the late Charles Featherstone was laid to rest in Greenwood cemetery, on Sunday. Deceased was born in the county of Kent, England, and was the youngest son of Capt. Geo. Featherstone. In his younger days he was employed at the naval construction office in the Ordnance yard, and was in building the first iron ship for the Australian navy, as also the first two ironclads for the British navy. He came to this country with his family some 22 years ago, and settled in Owen Sound, where his wife a few years later passed away. Since that period he has made his home with his son, Geo. W. of the "Star Transcript." Paris, and was familiarly known around town as "Grandpa." The service at Owen Sound was conducted by Rev. F. Ryan, B.D., who some 49 years ago received his first appointment after ordination to St. James' church, Paris, to supply during the illness of the late Dr. Lornley.

Activities of the Second Brant Battalion Quartered Here.

MUSKETRY WORK.

Ranges Are Being Prepared For Shooting Practice.

Fatigue parties of the 215th battalion are now preparing the two ranges for use. The Workman brick-yard is to be used as an outdoor range, while the indoor range will be situated in the old pottery building on Dalhousie street. Two revolving targets for each of the ranges were in the process of construction at the pioneer quarters this morning and will be installed within a few days. As yet it is not definitely known whether the Moltovk ranges will be requisitioned, but that will depend on the decision of headquarters. Capt. Sweet, assisted by Capt. Joyce and Mutter, have been placed in complete charge of the musketry department of the work. It is expected that by the end of the week arrangements will have been concluded to have all the physical drill of the men in the Y.M.C.A. in gymnasium suits.

A non-commissioned officers' class of twenty-four men has been detailed to commence classes under the direction of Capt. Tyrwhitt.

In the orders issued recently the shaving of the upper lip was again forbidden.

SERGEANT PATTE

Tells How He Got His Wounds. Interesting Description of Seized Enemy Positions.

Sergt. George Patte writes details of the manner in which he was wounded, in a letter to his father, Mr. J. Patte. He says in part: "Well they finally got to me. I got in the way of one of his 5-point shells. Nice little jagged bit, about one inch long and about half an inch wide. It came a bat on the side of the left leg, about four or five inches below the hip in the groin. Pretty lucky to escape. My wounds are doing fine, and will be all right in a couple of weeks if complications of any kind don't set in.

You should see the position from which the enemy has been forced to retire—ridge after ridge of natural defensive positions—and then you would realize what an immense task it has been. Forty foot dugouts—that is 40 feet underground—and with as much room in them as a large two-story house. He must have sat down there, played cards and laughed at our fellows last winter. Anyway he is out of there now and on the run. If you could see the prisoners coming in with hands up and hollering "Kamerade," you would realize that they have had their belly full of fighting and in fact have had to stand more than we have.

Pte. V. Postill.

Word received yesterday by Mrs. Louise Postill, of Paris, informed her that her son, Sapper Bern Postill, had been wounded on Oct. 13, last. Pte. Postill enlisted in the 84th battalion, but was drafted some three months ago to the 37th, with which unit he has since been at the front.

The day I was wounded, we arrived at what is known as the "Sunkon Road," near Courcouette. We arrived there about 3 a.m. Tumbled into bunk holes and got what little rest was possible. At 7 o'clock we moved off, going up a ditch in the centre of two ridges about 300 yards apart. Our job was to find out if a certain trench in front was occupied or not. We carried two rifles from them we extended in open order from ridge to ridge. They turned everything on us, so we started to dig ourselves in. We were within striking distance and an attack could be put on from our positions.

While standing near the entrance to the trench, a shell hit about 20 feet away and I got a piece of it. I'll never forget being carried off that field, shells lighting all around, and a mile to go to the first aid station. Fixed up there, and then another carry of two miles to the ambulance. The land is nothing but shell holes, so you see it was rather a rocky ride. However, all well that ends well, so here I am a little the worse for wear but still all to the good. My wounds are healing up all right and if it wasn't for my old left foot being so darn sore and full of needles I would feel good enough to get up.

Sergeant George Patte's address is No. 55679, 19th Canadian, Wilson War Hospital, No. 3 Wilson Road, Reading, Eng.

Railway Line in Hands of the Foe. Serbians Make New Gains Before Monastir.

By Courier Leased Wire. London, Oct. 24.—Virtually the entire Constantinza-Tchernovoda railway line in Dobruja is now in the hands of Field Marshal Von Mackensen's forces, it appears from a Russian official statement to-day admitting the evacuation of Medjidie by the Russians and Roumanians in Macedonia, stopping a German trench was reported.

London reports that the British have fully consolidated the ground gained by them yesterday in the neighborhood of Guedecourt and Les Bouefs, where the capture of 1,000 yards of German trenches was reported. There was no infantry action along the French lines in the Somme region, the most important happening being the development of a spirited artillery duel south of the river in the area between Biaches and Ablancourt.

The Serbians have made new gains in their campaign for Monastir, according to to-day's Paris report on operations in Macedonia, stopping a German-Bulgarian counter-attack in the Cerna valley and then taking the offensive themselves and capturing several trenches.

A GOOD SEASON IN BASEBALL

Race Was Particularly Close in American League; Minors Did Well.

(Associated Press)
 New York, Oct. 24.—The close of the baseball season of 1916 found the American League pre-eminent, due to its victories in the World's series and the two city series which composed the post-season schedule of the baseball year. Of the six teams which figured in these contests the junior league trio won twelve of the fourteen games played.

The Boston Americans defeated the Brooklyn Nationals four-out of five games; the St. Louis Americans won in a similar manner from their National rivals and the Chicago Americans took four straight from the Chicago Nationals. This playing form was a sharp reversal from the result of the spring series when the National League clubs won twenty-four games out of the thirty-nine inter-league contests played just previous to the opening of the two major league pennant races.

In the minor leagues the majority of the flag struggles were reasonably close and there were less financial difficulties and disruption of leagues than was the case a year ago. Among the circuits that confined their schedules to one season the winning club of the Eastern League showed the highest percentage when New London finished with 86 games won and 34 lost for a total of .717.

More leagues than usual divided their seasons into two parts and in some cases the winner of the first portion of the season met the victor of the second half in a play-off for the championship of the league. This system found considerable favor with the fans and is likely to be adopted more generally next summer.

The following letter was sent yesterday to Chief of Police Slemin by Mr. J. L. Axford, secretary of the local Children's Aid Society, requesting the co-operation of the authorities with the society:
 Mr. Chas. Slemin,
 Chief of Police:
 Dear Sir.—At a largely attended meeting of the Children's Aid Society, it was resolved that an earnest effort should be made to enforce the law relating to children being on the streets and in public places after nine o'clock at night, unattended.

I was instructed by the Society to call your attention to the matter, and to ask you to join them in their efforts to abate this evil, which so adversely affects the morals and welfare of the young people of this community.

Matty Signs a Cyclone

Manager Mathewson of Cincinnati has picked up a pitching marvel who is only seventeen years old. This lad simply had to break into a major league at this tender age because it is said, he could not get any catcher in the amateur or semi-pro ranks who could hold his delivery. His name is Febris, and he hails from Ripley, Ohio. In his last amateur game Febris struck out nineteen batters.

Since no one could hold Febris' delivery when he got those nineteen strikeouts, the catcher merely knocked down the pitched balls and got nineteen assists, a world's record by throwing out the runner at first base.

BEST LIVER AND BOWELS LAXATIVE FOR FAMILY USE

Instead of nasty, harsh pills, salts, castor oil or dangerous calomel, why don't you keep Cascarets handy in your home? Cascarets act on the liver and thirty feet of bowels so gently you don't realize you have taken a cathartic, but they act thoroughly and can be depended upon when a good liver and bowel cleansing is necessary—they move the bile and poison from the bowels without gripping and sweeten the stomach. You eat one or two at night like candy and you wake up feeling fine, the headache, biliousness, bad breath, coated tongue, sour stomach, constipation, or bad cold disappears. Mothers should give cross, sick, feverish or bilious children a whole Cascaret any time—they are harmless and safe for the little folks.

WOULD ABOLISH CONFUCIANISM

Republican Chinese Would Depart from Religion of Monarchy.

Peking, Oct. 24.—(Correspondent of The Associated Press)—Because of the late Yuan Shi-kai's espousal of Confucianism and the important part that religion, or philosophy, played in the effort to restore the monarch, ultra-republican members of parliament recently made an attempt to have Confucianism abolished by legislation on the theory that such action would grant greater freedom of conscience and insure the perpetuity of the Republic.

This step aroused great indignation among the modern admirers of Confucius and called forth a shower of protests. Kang Yu-wei, the distinguished scholar, who is among the prominent publicists who oppose the eradication of Confucianism, telegraphed to the central government declaring that the Confucian religion is distinctly the religion of China, and that if it be rejected China would become like brutes. "What would be the use of the knees," he asked, "if they be not employed for the worship of Confucius?"

Premier Tuan Chi-jui replied that the public has great reverence for Confucius, but that this reverence is in the hearts of the public and that it is no longer necessary for them to prostrate their body on the ground to show their respect for China's great sage.

In spite of the efforts of politicians to keep religion out of the political turmoil in China, various religious agitators have been able to intensify the internal troubles of the Chinese republic. China has no state religion, even Yuan Shi-kai did not show preference for any particular religion. Confucian teachers, Buddhist, Taoist and Lama priests all enjoyed his patronage. Representatives of many religions participated in his funeral.

Since the death of Yuan Shi-kai, Confucianism has continued to be in great favor in Peking and its adherents deny firmly that the revival has anything to do with the monarchical movement. President Li Yuan-hung, who is a Christian, recently delegated one of his undersecretaries to represent him officially at a Confucian ceremony in the temple where Yuan Shi-kai, formerly worshipped.

IF HAIR IS TURNING GREY, USE SAGE TEA

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application of two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for use. It is called Wreth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair. Everybody uses "Wreth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darsens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Don't forget to get the bottle. The Manor Estates, Limited, Toronto, $50,000; Universal Button Fastening and Button Co. of Canada, Limited, Walkerville, $20,000; Canada Gelatine Co., Limited, Brantford, $250,000.

BILLY JORDAN HAS PASSED

Famous Old Boxing Announcer Dies in California.

With the passing of Billy Jordan of San Francisco and Boston, one of the most picturesque characters of the boxing game is removed.

Billy Jordan was the Joe Humphries of the west. His stentorian voice announced many battles where championships were decided. The last important fight where Jordan officiated was the Jefferies-Johnson fight, at Reno, Nevada. It was the voice of Jordan who hailed Jefferies as the undefeated heavyweight champion of the world for the last time.

Jordan used to invent his own titles for boxers on the spur of the moment. It was he who characterized Battling Nelson as "the hardest nut in the profession to crack." Jimmie Britt he used to hail with a new low of eloquence as "the Pride of California." Sam Langford he dubbed "the Boston Bone Breaker."

The voice of Jordan heralded more ring battles, and more important ones, than the average boxing fan can recall. It was heard in the rings from Boston to San Francisco.

Billy Jordan passed away quietly at the Old Soldiers' Home at Yonkville, California. When the boxing game was abolished in the Golden State, Jordan suddenly realized that he was an old man. He decided to spend the rest of his days with his cronies of the army of the Potomac.

cite clause 17 of the Children's Protection Act:
 (1) No child shall loiter in any public place after 9 o'clock in the evening, or be there, unless accompanied by the parent or guardian, or an adult appointed by the parent or guardian to accompany such child.
 (2) A child found in a public place after the hour named in subsection 1, unless so accompanied, may be warned to go home by any constable or probation officer or officer of a children's aid society, and if after such warning the child is found loitering in a public place, such child may be taken by the constable or officer to his home or to the Children's Shelter.
 (3) A parent who permits his child to violate this section shall for the first offense incur a penalty of $1.00 without costs, and for the second offense $2.00 and for a third or any subsequent offence $5.

It was the general opinion of the Society that a commencement of an aggressive campaign to abate this evil might well be made at the various moving picture theatres of the city.

In order that the parents who thus neglect their children may have their duty brought home to them, it is respectfully submitted to you by this society, that if you would be a salutary lesson to them for you to assist us in our efforts by putting article three above mentioned into operation, and to have them answer in court for their neglect.

I am instructed by the society to send copies of this letter to the daily press of the city, that parents of these children who are allowed to run the streets at night, may be warned that they will be held accountable.

Thanking you for your co-operation which the Children's Aid Society takes for granted,
 Yours respectfully,
 J. LESLIE AXFORD.

SISTERS THREE

Chapter XXVII

Every one at Sunset Crag was delighted with Gipsy's new acquisition—even Mrs. Gosling, who first sight had held up her hands in dismay of anything so big and strong. As for "Halfpenny" and "Farthing," whom Keeper knocked down half a dozen times a day, they simply loved him.

To train him was a pure joy to Gipsy, and with her other occupations pretty well absorbed her time. The clever, sedate setter also took an interest in the education of his large and youthful companion, and showed scarcely a trace of jealousy. Excitement reigned at Sunset Crag for their first visitor was about to arrive. Miss Willoughby was coming, and Allardyce's big, sunny room was made ready for her, decked with flowers, and beautified with sundry pleasures from the upstairs attic that the girl had not desired for herself. Although Audrey had not heard the whole of the story from her sister, yet she knew that great issues might hang upon this visit. The tragedy of the Kildares might in some strange way be lessened, and the shadow lifted which hung over Sunrise Reef.

Allardyce drove to meet Miss Willoughby, and Gipsy remained with Audrey to welcome their guest on her arrival.

"Do you know what it all means?" asked Gipsy of her sister. "Little Ciss has some sort of secret in that dreary head of hers, and Miss Willoughby and General Kildare are all mixed up with it. He is a dear old man, and it's simply tragic about that son of his—as tragic almost for Gaston Lebreton as for the Kildares themselves. It has shadowed his life fearfully. Audrey, can it be possible that something is going to happen that will bring Jim Kildare back?"

"I don't know, Gipsy, dear; I only hope it may be so."

"And if it is that, what would happen about the Lebretons? Would the neighborhood take its ban off them? It seems such a shame. It is hard how sons have to suffer for the sins of their fathers."

"Audrey would not smile, but she was very well satisfied. Gipsy was quite unconsciously holding a brief for Gaston of the Keep; and his gift, the dog Keeper, was her shadow and most devoted companion and friend."

Miss Willoughby came—a tall and dignified presence. Her warm welcome by the sisters to their home, where the glow and the glamour of the sunset lay so bright, seemed to touch and please her. She was charmed with her room; she stood for a long while looking across the bay towards that black jutting reef, which in the glow of the west beamed at it at this hour looked more black and frowning than at any other time. Then she turned to Allardyce, who stood silently within the room.

"Is that where General Kildare lives?"

"Yes, watching for the help that will come to him at last—out of the flush of the dawn, day. He is waiting and watching still."

When Miss Willoughby went down to dinner that evening she had a velvet bag suspended at her side, and in the bag were papers. As they sat out in the garden after dinner, in the soft glow of the warm June evening, Miss Willoughby addressed herself to the sisters—to Audrey and Gipsy in particular.

"Do you girls know why I am here? How much has Allardyce told you of the tale?"

"We know very little about it."

answered Audrey quietly, "only that you know something which may perhaps help General Kildare, whom we are all sorry for."

"Yes, that is true. Whether I shall bitterly repent later what I have come to-day to do I cannot tell."

"I can," said Allardyce softly. "You will never repent; you will always be glad. We are never sorry for the right things we do."

Miss Willoughby drew from her bag a paper, which she tossed across into Allardyce's lap. "Child, read that aloud, then the die will be cast. There can be no going back. My secret will have passed from me. To-morrow, we will take it to Sunrise Reef. Let me hear once more how it reads before I go. Tell your sisters now the things that I told you, and then read the letter—it is a copy, with a few private matters omitted, of the letter my brother wrote to me on shipboard. The original was attested by witnesses and is with my lawyer."

Breathlessly the sisters listened to the tale as Allardyce told it. Now and again Miss Willoughby interposed, speaking a few crisp words of frank condemnation of her own dealings with her brother, her own love of wealth and irritation at his dissipation of it.

Then, in the waning light, Allardyce unrolled the paper and in the hush of a thrilling expectancy she read aloud the confession of one who was dead.

During the reading of the narrative Gipsy rose softly from her seat, and, sinking down beside Miss Willoughby, took hold of her hand and laid her cheek against it. As eloquently as words could speak it showed the girl's appreciation of the sister's terrible temptation. To clear one name would mean to smirch another—that of a gallant soldier whose life had been given for his country. And Gipsy, with her quick apprehension, well understood that Miss Willoughby would realize then that her brother had so trusted her to do the thing he had asked as his parting request that he went forth unafraid for his friend and only truly shocked to realize how, in a moment of keen distress and temptation he'd fallen. How, then, could she give to the world the truth which would forever stain his reputation and cast a slur upon his name? Oh, it was a fearful dilemma by which she had been faced.

The gentle voice of Allardyce read the letter from end to end, no one interrupting by so much as a sigh.

"My dearest sister—I write on board the troopship to explain the meaning of that last request of mine to you, which I know, that you will by this time have carried out, putting matters right with Kildare and preventing any subsequent trouble. I thank you for the help which I know you have given your troublesome and unworthy brother, and of course when I have pulled my affairs together you shall be repaid. Or if our old uncle should die, as you believe he must and leave me a legacy which is probable, refund yourself out of that—you will certainly be an executor—and keep the balance over for me. Hard campaigning will be the best medicine for my complaint that I can possibly have."

"But now I must make my humiliating confession. I will keep nothing back. I told you when I asked you to send that money to Kildare that it was for the honor of my name. Now I will explain what I mean."

"You know what a terrible fellow I have been, running through my fortunes in a perfectly reckless way. I offer no excuse. I see now my in-

"Fruit-a-lives" Soon Relieved This Dangerous Condition

682 GERRARD ST. EAST, TORONTO.
"For two years, I was a victim of Acute Indigestion and Gas in The Stomach. It afterwards attacked my Heart and I had pains all over my body, so that I could hardly move around. I tried all kinds of Medicines but none of them did me any good. At last, I decided to try 'Fruit-a-lives'. I bought the first box last June, and now I am well, after using only three boxes. I recommend 'Fruit-a-lives' to anyone suffering from Indigestion."

sensate folly. But the mischief is done; and when I came to settle up my affairs before starting for the war I was aghast to find that I had to draw out every penny of my remaining capital to square up my debts and leave the country with a quiet mind and get such equipment as was necessary.

"I thought until almost the last moment that all was paid. I had given a last supper to my friends. We had settled up with each other all our 'debts of honor,' and deals and so forth. We had drunk healths—perhaps not wisely but too well. I went to my quarters somewhat excited, somewhat heady, and there I found awaiting me—

"Well, I won't tell you all that story. I had been more foolish than wicked. At one time, I had thought I was going to put the fellow on his legs again. I stood surety for him. My signature was on a bill just coming due; he had come to remind me of it. It was a case of some hundreds of pounds to clear his burden, and there was no blinking the fact. I had made myself liable, and a sort of horror came over me that if there was any exposure of the transaction I might be forced to throw up my commission—to see the regiment start without me."

"And the money had to be found the next day. I sent the man away. I told him to come again. When he was gone I turned out my pockets, counting up everything I had and trying to see my way through the tangle. One of the cheques paid over to me was by Jim Kildare—a small cheque drawn to him for four pounds. But it had been carelessly drawn. There was no word following the 'four' in the body of the cheque, and instantly I saw how easy it would be to alter the four into four hundred. I knew the drawer of the cheque; I had even met him in town. He was an extremely wealthy man and an old friend of the Kildares. The cheque was not crossed, and Jim had endorsed it all right. The bank was in London. The weather was of a dark and foggy type. I could get the money easily, settle up the claim tell Jim that you would refund the amount at once, and start a free man."

"I did it. I got the money; I freed the claim. I went straight to Jim and told him. I had to join the ship that night, but in his presence I wrote the note to you which I knew would bring him the money by return of post. He said it was all right. I could see he was a bit shocked. I felt like a madman myself. Jim said old Lebreton was a bit of a Tartar, but that it would be all right. Having the money back would soften him, and as he was an old friend there would be no row. Then he put the matter aside and went with me to see me off. Good old Jim! His was the last face I saw on shore as we sheered off. Of course if there had been any chance of a row about it, I should have stopped to face it out, but I knew that you would send the money and that Jim would make some sort of a story that would sound plausible—a bit of a lark with some young officers—a wager—anything of the sort would do; and Mr. Lebreton having got his money all right, would only look a little grim and warn Jim against that sort of skylarking, but as he was to blame for being so careless over his cheque, he couldn't say much."

"So I am quite happy about Jim, but I feel horribly ashamed at my own action. Now I look back at it dispassionately it seems utterly indefensible. I ought to have come straight to you; but you were at Clumbraine and that's a difficult place to get at quickly. And then let me be quite honest with you—I felt that I had made a fool of myself and perhaps you would not see getting me out of the scrape, whereas if I forced your hand—as I know my letter written afterwards must do—you would not fall me."

Valuable Suggestions for the Handy Homemaker—Order Any Pattern Through the Courier.

BOY'S SUIT.

By Anabel Worthington.

This is an excellent design in a suit for kindergarten or for play. It is very easily made—a point that is ever the first inducement to mothers who feel that all the clothes for the children should be made under rigid sanitary conditions and who will not "take a chance" with ready made.

The blouse is finished at the neck with a very broad collar that is trimmed with one inch bands of contrasting goods, cut bias; the sleeve is finished to match and the novel closing outline is similarly favored. A separate belt confines the fullness at a lowered waistline and completes a very attractive blouse.

The trousers, attached to an underwelt, may be in either straight or bloomer style, and in the matter of sleeves there is also choice—the pattern providing for the long sleeve with wrist band cuff if you prefer it.

I wash fabrics are more to your liking for this type of suit, choose linen, galates, Indian head or like material. There are many novelty weaves in splendid colorings to interest and delight the boy and his mother, if a wool mixture is desired. The suit pattern No. 7971 is cut in sizes 2 to 4 and 6 years. To make in the medium size will require 2 1/4 yards 36 inch material with 3/4 yard contrasting goods to trim and 3/4 yard 36 inch lining for the underwelt. To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

YOU can save Belgian lives!
Though you cannot fight and kill Germans, you can give and save some of their helpless Belgian victims, three million of whom must be fed or starve.

So little is needed to feed a Belgian family, and so economically are contributions handled by the Belgian Relief Commission, that there are very few of us who could not provide for at least one family through this winter, or till the end of the war.

$2.50 a month—less than 10c. a day—will do it! How easily you could save that much from your little indulgences—and how much it would mean to some Belgian mother and her hungry little ones!

Wouldn't a little self-denial now be richly repaid by knowing, when the war is over, that you had done your part, and had saved precious lives for our unfortunate Allies?

and so generally abused as the Eye.

No part of the body is so delicate, so easily injured,

The need of glasses to help the eyes is not a question of age lots of children wear them, and there are many more who should. "Bad marks" at school can often be traced to poor eye sight, and very often the eyes should have the constant aid of glasses.

We have facilities here for testing your eyes, and finding out exactly what they need. We sell only such glasses as we can thoroughly recommend and surround the selling with every possible courtesy.

MANY ANXIOUS TO SEE SOMME FILM

Numerous Inquiries Regarding Reservation of Seats at Colonial.

On July 1, 1916, the offensive was started, and that day the motion picture camera was mounted to take views of activities in the first line trenches. No movement of importance escaped its eyes. Scenes of men dying bravely, of men wounded and standing waiting for their turn for the stretcher, of the British forces, inspected the pictures. Haig's authority is absolute, and only a word or gesture from him would have eliminated any and all parts of the films. But in common with Mr Lloyd George and King George, he realized the importance of having the pictures presented to the people of the whole British Empire. His only modification was a change in one or two sub-titles in the films. He found no other changes necessary, as a result the actual records of what occurred on July 1, when the offensive was begun.

Haig is the youngest commander-in-chief of any armies involved in the conflict. He is about 44 years old, a Scotchman, educated at Oxford and is recognized as one of the foremost military tacticians of the day. He distinguished himself particularly in the retreat from Mons to the Marne, and in the pursuit of the Germans back to the Aisne. He succeeded Viscount French as commander-in-chief when the latter retired about a year ago.

Sir Douglas Haig has the congenial personality of the Scotchman, possesses a social disposition, and has many excellent characteristics. He is also an indefatigable worker, spending most of his time at his office at the front. He is peculiarly fitted to conduct warfare against the Germans, having served in a military capacity in Germany some years ago.

GOVT. TO CONTROL COAL INDUSTRY

Is Latest Project Advanced to Regulate Shipping Activity.

(Associated Press.) London, Oct. 24.—The Government is proposing to take over control of the coal industry of Great Britain in the near future, the main purpose of the scheme of nationalization being to give a certain power of control over the neutral shipping which coals at British ports. Coal owners will be allowed to take their own profits if the scheme goes through, but the Government will control the distribution of coal for home consumption, for export and for shipping. For some time past the government has used its authority over British shipping to direct its courses most beneficial for the nation, but neutral steam shipping, though dependent on Britain for coal, has not recognized a resulting obligation to this country. The plan is that if the government owns the coal it will be in a position to stipulate the use the customer shall make of it and to require him to call for his return cargo at specified ports. In that way it is believed the whole of the shipping in British ports may be organized and directed.

A coroner's jury censured the authorities for not having properly guarded Jos. Montgomery, who ended his life while in custody charged with his brother's murder. At the Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville, a new system of lip-reading is being introduced. This is known as the Muller Wall method, and has been adapted to the English language.

SWEEPING OFFENSIVE LAUNCHED BY FRENCH UPON SOMME FRONT

Forces of General Petain Take Douaumont and Other Positions, and Capture 3,500 German Prisoners

Dreams of Crown Prince Destroyed, and Kaiser Hastens to Spot Where His Troops are Fast Weakening

London, Oct. 25.—Verdun, where the German Crown Prince sacrificed half a million men in vain, is now the scene of a powerful French offensive.

Smashing through a front of four miles, General Petain's troops have captured portions on the right bank of the Meuse for a depth of two miles. The village and fort of Douaumont, which have changed hands many times since the German drive began in February, the Thiaumont work and farm, strongholds of the Teuton advanced line, and the Hautromont quarries, north of Thiaumont, have fallen before the French onslaught.

The Germans captured Douaumont on February 25, and held it until May 22, when the French recaptured part of the fort. The Germans again occupied Fort Douaumont on May 24 after a violent struggle.

Germans Completely Surprised.

More than 3,500 prisoners have already been passed back by the French troops, and the action is still in progress. Large quantities were captured in the charge, for the suddenness

NEWS FROM PARIS

Talk of a Switch for the Lake Erie and Northern.

Paris, Oct. 25.—(From our own correspondent.—We understand that officials of the C.P.R. were in town yesterday interviewing the members of the Council, Board of Trade and the manufacturers in connection with the providing of a switch and goods yard for the Lake Erie and Northern Railway. It would seem that the proposed route will enter Paris along the river road into the town under the Grand Trunk bridge and cross the head gates at the raceway on the flats, in all probability taking along Elm street, would enter the Fair Grounds, a portion of which would be used for their freight sheds. It is also said that the railway people expect the manufacturers to provide the site for switching and other purposes. The Fair Grounds is the only place left in Paris where any games or recreation can be held and it is to be hoped that as little ground as possible of the only breathing space left to the people will be taken by the company.

At a Subway Station in New York.

By Courier Leased Wire.

New York, Oct. 25.—Explosion of a bomb or dynamite at the 110th street station of the Lenox avenue subway line early to-day, did considerable damage to that station, smashed the ticket agent's booth, injured four persons slightly, broke the electric lamps and windows in the kiosks, tore off a portion of the sidewalk overhead and broke the windows in some of the apartment houses nearby. There was no train at the station or near it at the moment. Traffic in the subway was suspended for half an hour or more as the result of the blast.

Young Indian Appears Before Mr. Justice Sutherland, Charged With Causing the Death of James Powless Hearing For the Prosecution Opens This Morning—Subjected to Severe Cross-Examination by Defence

Before Hon. Mr. Justice Sutherland, and in the presence of a large throng of both Indians and whites, Percy Martin, the alleged slayer of James Powless, went on trial for manslaughter this morning in the winter assizes, with Mr. Somerville of Toronto, prosecuting for the Crown, and the defence in the hands of W. S. Brewster, K.C. Interest in the case runs high throughout the city and indeed the whole of the county, and long ere the hour fixed for the opening of the trial this morning, following upon the Grand Jury's return of a true bill, eager spectators had commenced to gather in the court room. All classes were equally represented in the throng—Indians, and whites, men and women.

The Accused.

At the hour of 9.20, Percy Martin, the accused man, entered the court in the custody of County Constable Taylor. Martin, of course the centre of interest in the trial, became at once the cynosure of all eyes. His bearing is characterized still by the same stoic calm and inscrutability peculiar to his race, which he has assumed throughout the course of the case; yet this morning it was apparent to the close observer that his outward calmness was in some
