Where the Public Comes

Recognizing the criticism which its action in the matter of increasing railway freight rates has met, the Canadian Railway Board has announced that it will inaugurate an investigation to show that its rate of profit is all that is in proportion to the legitimate increase in raw materials due to the war. The manufacturers it recalled, protested vehemently against any increase in the freight rates.

First Line of Defense.

Pure blood is the baby's first line of defense against disease. Strong, healthy blood neutralizes the poisons invading germs or destroy them themselves. That is why the baby's exposed to disease do not contract it. The whole blood system and watery and therefore unable to defend power are most liable to infection. Everybody may have that healthy, red-blooded blood that is so essential to the life of the body. The people who live in the cities, who have poor ventilation, and who wake up in the morning as tired as when they went to bed. While women and girls chiefly suffer from bloodlessness the trouble also affects both boys and men. It simply affects girls and women to a greater extent because there is a greater demand upon their blood supply.

The Change.

Through the haze of years I look back at a figure which impresses me heavily in my calow days, the village big man of the old home town, usually admitted the Old Codger. I recall the absolute faculty of his bombastic verbosity, the overpowering superabundance of his stately stride, the imposing impressiveness of his mastodontic pomposity, and the ease with which his majestic presence filled me, because then I had gained so little experience with men that I had no standard to judge by. To me he was the embodiment of human wisdom set on the pinnacle of earthly importance. But I am pleased to say that I know now that he did not represent any more than a 43 cent present — Lunas City Star.

Early Use of Machine Guns

The Matabili campaign was carried out in the autumn of 1893 and the early part of 1894 by the British South Africa company. Its force used the Maxim machine gun—probably the first time that the modern machine gun was used by the British in war. It could fire at the rate of 550 shots a minute. The Chitral campaign was carried out in 1895. Machine guns similar to those used in Matabili were employed. By modern machine guns is not meant guns such as the Gatling used in the American Civil war, which is said to have been the earliest weapon of this sort.

Women on the Land.

The women on the land at present number hundreds of thousands, with not counting farmettes. The farmers' wives and the farmers' daughters have been hard at work all year; their day is never ended, milking, feeding poultry and pigs, butter making, handling eggs for market, etc. Their shores are unnumbered and in addition to that they have their own kitchen, their own households and their own family tasks, cares and responsibilities. At harvest time they have the additional burden of feeding the harvest hands. There is plenty of room for war service on the part of town girls who want to help in the war in volunteering to help farmers' wives on the neighboring farms during the harvest rush. This would release the farmer's wife from her household duties and add her effective labor for outside work in aid of her husband who will be hard put to it to get in his crops this season. Helping the farmer's wife this year is just as important as any other war work that women can take up.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Miss Kelly Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Never, N. J. For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work.

The Fattening of Chickens.

The profits obtained from marketing lean, poorly fished, unfished chickens are so small as to be frequently discouraging. Many of the packing houses and larger produce dealers find it necessary to go to considerable expense to provide the necessary premises and equipment to properly fatten such poultry. The best place to feed poultry is on the farm, and if it pays the packing houses to take the trouble, it obviously would be good business to do the work on the farm.

Guard Against Peace Talk.

Peace talk from Germany immediately preceding the latest drive of the German forces failed to receive any consideration among Germany's enemies, and the drive proceeded. That drive has been met by a vigor and dash of which the attacking Germans did not dream. We shall now hear again from Germany, as soon as the present stage of the great battle is ended, a renewal of the wheedling, whining peace suggestion.

My Limbs Would Twitch

And Waken Me—Unable to Rest or Sleep, I Walked the Floor in Nervous State—When Specialists Failed I Found a Cure.

This is the kind of cure that has set Windsor people thinking and talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The action of this food cure is really different to the usual treatment for the nerves that everybody wants to try. It drains out and actually it nourishes the nerves back to health and vigor and the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

The French Spirit.

As illustrating the spirit displayed by the people of Paris even in the midst of war, a story is told by an American just returned of a French woman who gave a dinner to some American officers. After the dinner they were told in their business of the excellence and liberality of the service. They felt that if such a meal could be served in the fourth year of the war, France could not be in such a bad state. They did not learn until later, through some mutual friends, that the French woman had given up her guests on that one night her full supply for a week.

Be Ready For Emergencies

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Licorice and Eucalyptus in the house ready for emergencies. Th when a cold, cough, or sore throat, they can be promptly cared for and they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in a family 2 1/2 oz. bottle which contains nearly three times as much as the 25 cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.

Editorial Brevities.

Mark well the names of the men in the nation's roll of honor. To each man of them you owe more than you can hope to repay.

The foregoing is from the Boston Post. It is worth the careful consideration of every citizen of Canada, as well as those of the United States, for whom the message is intended.

Band Master Replies.

DEAR SIR,—When the subject started by the bandmaster and the kindly editor first appeared in your paper, I was not then aware—nor am I yet—that any particular place on the map, special engagement, or kind of treat was even suggested.

Since the bandmaster has been training boys for only about twelve years, he would not of course be expected to understand what is best for boys and how boys should be treated, and of course could not reasonably know as much about boys as your recent correspondents. Since he has been a boy himself and has passed through all a boy's experience, as an experience which your correspondents gain only in theory.

Your correspondent says that when a Comm. waits upon the bandmaster and agrees with him that the Scout band for the sum of $10.00 and transportation both ways shall furnish music for the evening, and that after supper has been partaken of in their own homes I cannot see why it should be thought necessary to receive extra ice cream and strawberries.

I have played out with bands for over seventeen years and this summer is the first time that I have failed to see proper refreshments given to the band. Your correspondents have failed to properly appreciate the actual situation, and as a result have been 'sho boxing'.

In closing, I am not advocating a tipping system for the boys, nor yet a tipping system for the boys themselves would resent it if I were. I am only advocating what common sense and courtesy demand and if the public are not prepared to provide suitable refreshments for the band in addition to the pay money, which means one per hour per boy, then, when they want a band, please do not apply to the Field Comforts.

Dear Madam,—I am sorry that my letter to you last month was delayed long after it was written, as there proved to be such a difficulty in obtaining paper. We have now arranged for a supply each month.

We are always delighted to receive the beautiful hand-knitted socks which come to us in almost every box from Canada. If the individual knitters could wash the socks before sending them they would be giving doubly, as the washed socks are much more comfortable for the men and wear very much better.

It was a happy surprise this month to receive the gift of $12.20.00. for comforts from Mexico City, the proceeds of a very successful fiesta arranged by Mrs. F. W. Green, of Halifax, and her splendid committee. When Mrs. Green was in Falkstone she was a regular voluntary worker, and we are very pleased that she has kept her interest in the Field Comforts.

Another gift that we know will be much appreciated was the gift of 140 footballs and a supply of extra blades from the Ontario Government, who have also promised a generous contribution of baseball equipment for the men at the Front.

During the last six months (January to June) 2,375 cases of supplies from Canada, and have sent out the following to the Canadian Forces:—

Rail-Shipments—B.x.s., bales, crates.....6544 Delivery.....1838 Postal Parcels.....5074 These numbers show a considerable increase of comforts received and distributed since 1917.

We are making a very urgent appeal this month for money to carry on our work. There are so many welcome supplies that we could add to our list of comforts for general distribution if we had the money to purchase them regularly. Books, magazines, writing materials, cards, games, soap, shaving-cream, tooth-paste, tooth-brushes, towels, insect powder, toilet paper, metal polish, candles, matches, pipes, Player's cigarettes, Canadian tobacco, trench cookers, soap tablets, cocoa, catsup, malted milk tablets, chocolate wafers, chickens, curry powder, handkerchiefs, boot laces, bachelor buttons, are all asked for and much appreciated. We shall be very glad indeed if it is possible to send you whole cases of any of these supplies, as a rule, if used for general distribution they have to be purchased by us in large quantities to supplement what we receive from Canada.

It would be a very great help if the societies forwarded through the Commission or contributing supplies only could devote a sum of money monthly to send us for the necessary purchase of comforts here. We are very grateful to those who do send money regularly and generously. Will you ask your members if they will contribute to our funds? Perhaps some of the individual members will please themselves to send something regularly. Please say how very important it is to us to be assured of enough money to carry on with and that we earnestly ask them to do their best to help us.

We are not having a leaflet printed for the present because of the expense, and I regret that you will not see any of our recent letters from the Front. We have had more from individual soldiers this year than ever before, and are especially pleased with such spontaneous and unolicited appreciation of the work of the Field Comforts Commission. The following is a charming note received last week from someone quite unknown to us which therefore pleased very much. I do not give the writer's full name, as he may not care for such publicity, but if any one wishes to send to him direct I shall be very glad to supply it:—

France. June 15-1918 This is just a word of thanks from one in the ranks for the great work which you and your staff are doing for us out here. I have been continually in receipt of comforts through your unit since coming to France. I have never known anything about the organization which sends them until I read an article about your work in a Canadian paper and then I thought I would like to send this note of personal thanks.

The fact that impresses me most is, that we out here really do get these comforts very regularly, due undoubtedly to your efforts, also the things we get are so very useful, such as towels, soap, and socks, and the socks are very nice and soft. We had just received some socks one day last year when in Belgium (we needed them there), when a young boy officer of the Imperial Army told me he had no kit and he was wet through to the knees. I got him a pair of socks and he was delighted. He said they were the best he had seen, and offered me ten francs for them, but I told him that it was a souvenir of Canada for him. He said, 'you Canadians are lucky,' and we are.

Saved from the Flood.

"We'll save him, we'll save him!" they cried.

"It's certain death," said the engineer.

"Think of your wives and children," exclaimed the men, "you've no right to risk your lives like that."

But their voices were unheeded. The three brave men were already in the elevator descending the shaft.

The water at the bottom was knee-deep and they could not walk upright, for the live wires of the electric light overhead were constant source of danger. Their one hope of rescue lay in a heavy beam which they carefully carried, and with which they meant to attack the door in the bulkhead which shut in Jacob.

As they neared it they could hear his cries, as he beat on the door and tried to make it known that he was still living.

"They peered through the small bull's eye only to see his horrid, stricken face and the water gradually rising around him.

With all their might they assailed the door with their weapon, but it would not yield an inch. Still the water rose around them.

"I can't hear him now," said one of the rescuers. "Look through the bull's eye and see if he's all right."

"Well, might poor Jacob be silent, for the water had risen to his mouth and he could only breathe by holding his head as far back as possible.

They smashed the five inches of glass and a rush of water came through, till it sank inside the chamber to the level of the bull's eye. Once more the prisoner could breathe freely.

"Give him some whiskey," said one of the firemen.

A bottle was passed through to Jacob, whose teeth were chattering as he stood there enveloped in the flood.

"No, no water," I never touch that stuff," was the faint reply as the kind firemen begged him to take it.

Again and again they urged their plea: "Just a drop now would perhaps save your life."

"Nothing would make me touch it," was the grim answer of the drowning man.

They dare not press him more for everyone knew that when Jacob Flyter said "no" he meant it.

On and on the firemen worked, but with no result. Still the moans of the prisoner reminded them how urgent was his need.

"If we only had a jack-screw behind the beam, it would bring a slow pressure of tons," said one of the party.

"Then we must fetch it in quick time, for the water is gaining ground on here."

"One try more, mates, before we go. I don't like to leave the poor chap alone even for that."

With every bit of energy left they made one final effort.

At last the door swung back. They dragged the half-fainting man from the chamber, and rushing to the foot of the shaft sprang into the elevator.

Jacob Flyter was saved from the flood.

Strong hands bore him to the shore.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the whole system, and snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should enrich your blood with the oil food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building tonic, free from any harmful drugs. Try it—YOU!

Beecher Street

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

If Ethel Drayton had done some real reasoning instead of leaping at conclusions and acting on impulse, it is likely that her bark of romance, with Cliff Edridge in command, would have sailed serenely down the river of matrimony without encountering a storm. On the other hand, that kind of journey would not have been real romance—it would have lacked zest—so perhaps it is just as well that Herman Harrell came over to Ethel's desk that dreary, rainy afternoon in April and unfolded the secret.

"I have something to say that is very disagreeable to me," began Harrell as he brushed a hand carelessly over his miniature moustache and looked down at Ethel's curly brown hair coiled on the back of her head in a business-like knot that served as a pencil holder. "Nevertheless," he went on, "I feel in duty bound to say it."

"I feel in duty bound to say it," Ethel jerked a sheet of paper from her typewriter and turned her black eyes up at the head shipping clerk. The tiny, writhing ring of hair on Harrell's upper lip forced a smile to his eyes.

Harrell's expression.

"It's about Clifford. You see, last night—"

While this conversation was taking place, the subject of the remarks sat on a high stool at the other side of the Lewis Wholesale Paper company's shipping office and poured over a file of orders. Out of a corner of his eye he saw the head shipping clerk approach the stenographer's desk, and he frowned.

Harrell leaned over Ethel's chair as he revealed the secret, and Cliff ruffed his sixen hair with one hand and thrummed on his desk with the other.

Half an hour later Cliff slipped from his stool and into his light overcoat. Carrying his hat, he approached Ethel, who was still busy at the typewriter. He passed and smiled pleasantly, but she continued rattling the keys.

"You needn't trouble yourself to wait for me," she informed him in icy tones without pausing in her work or looking up. "I'll be a little late, and Mr. Harrell has promised to see me home."

Cliff's smile vanished. Before he had a chance to reply, she had slipped a ring from a finger of her left hand and extended it toward him. She looked into his eyes with a stare vacuated with ice.

"I can't wear this any longer," she said, "after the way you have acted lately. I have heard that all men must sow wild oats, but I assure you that my man won't. If you must gamble and carouse, you can't do so because my husband. I have learned all about your going to a saloon or gambling den on Beecher street almost every night, and that's enough for me. Good-night."

Cliff stumbled down the steps to the street and walked three blocks, heedless of the pouring rain, before he came to himself and three lines of flame in his hand. Then he stopped dead still in the middle of a street crossing, undecided whether to leap in the river or go back and throw lines of flame in his hand. He decided to do neither; instead, he headed for Beecher street.

Ethel completed her work and was escorted to her rooming place by Harrell. At the door she took his hand and said earnestly:

"You don't know how I appreciate the revelation you have made to me. I know it must have been hard for you to come and tell me about seeing Clifford go into that terrible place so many times; and I am grateful."

"Don't mention it, please," protested Harrell, striving unsuccessfully to reach his moustache with his tongue. "I couldn't bear to see you throw yourself away on a worthless fellow. I save a good many blocks by cutting through Beecher street on the way home and that's how I happened to notice him there."

The next day Ethel failed to appear at the office, telephoning that she was suffering from a headache. The succeeding day was Sunday. The rain had ceased but the weather had turned chilly and the sun hid behind clouds.

Ethel listened in vain for the doorbell or the telephone, hoping Cliff would appear as he had done each Sunday for more than a year. True, she had told him it was all over; nevertheless, she had expected him to come and make some kind of a protest and attempt an explanation. The morning passed very gloomily for her.

Early in the afternoon the landlady summoned her to the telephone, and Ethel tripped over a chair in her haste to answer the call.

"This is Mr. Harrell," said the voice on the wire. "Could I call on you this afternoon?"

"I'm sorry," she replied, "but I'm too ill to entertain." And she went back to her room to gaze thoughtfully at a picture of a fawn-haired, smiling youth.

About five o'clock a delegation of three girls from her Sunday school class called on her.

"We were anxious to learn if you were ill," said one, "and if not we wanted you to go with us to visit a poor family that the class has decided to help."

Ethel took decided interest in the proposition.

Record In Concrete Bridge-Building

A Royal Flying Corps Bomber Squadron—A pilot examining a 25 lb. bomb.

The double tracking of the North York Sub-district of the Canadian Pacific Railway between Lesalle and North Toronto is now nearing completion, and involves the replacement of bridges (known as 02 and 13) which have hitherto been treated as structures of steel. Owing to the high price of steel and the difficulty of procuring it, it was the policy of the Canadian Pacific Railway to construct the new bridges of concrete. The bridge No. 22 is 356 feet long and 60 feet high carrying two tracks and No. 13 is of similar dimensions but a three track structure. The length of the concrete spans and the details of their construction are unimportant in the engineering world. Previous to this no reinforced concrete span with a length of more than about 35 feet had been attempted. The spans of these two bridges are each from 35 to 37 feet long. These spans have been made possible by the employment of unit construction by which each span was designed as two T-shaped structures. The towers themselves are really reinforced concrete structures constructed in the usual manner by means of wooden forms built around a steel reinforcement which was previously assembled and securely wired together. When all was in readiness the concrete was poured by means of long spouts. These two structures are provided with narrow sidewalks and hand-rails, which enable trainmen to move conveniently along at-standing. The hand rails add considerably to the aesthetic appearance of the structures, which are extremely artistic in appearance and at the same time satisfactory from a general and utilitarian point of view. Besides being absolutely permanent, they are designed to carry the heaviest engines in existence with a considerable margin of safety, and are especially adapted to the conditions of the work in the city of bridge engineering.

Airmen Ready For Perilous Work

British and Italian airmen are now very great friends.

The girls found her lying on a rug, not dead, or rather, a hank. She was frail and emaciated, but she carried a pleasant smile of greeting.

Jimmy hovered near, still clinging to the bear. Ethel, a lover of children, picked him up in her arms.

"My, my, what clothes!" she murmured to herself, but Jimmy overheard her.

"You'll have new suits," he announced. "My's gonna bring it."

"Who do you—?" Ethel began, but at that moment Jimmy, hearing familiar sounds on the stairs, scrambled from her arms and dashed toward the door.

"He hears his man," explained the woman on the bed. "Nearly every night he brings us food, and sometimes candy or something to wear. He found Jimmy on the street one night and came home with him. Jimmy told me his man was going to bring him a new suit today."

The door was flung open and a young man entered, placed a bundle on the stool and gathered the little boy in his arms.

"My man," breathed Jimmy, hugging the newcomer, while Ethel started forward in amazement upon recognizing him.

"Cliff" she cried.

Cliff's bridge placed his burden on the floor and stared in astonishment that equaled her own.

So it was decreed that a home of poverty should be the setting for a proud, sensitive, impulsive girl to ask forgiveness—and get it.

Lat Children Pick Clothes.

Everyone remembers when he or she was a child how irritating it was to have our parents pick all our clothes without giving us any choice in the matter. In the Woman's Home Companion a writer says: "Now, what I am asking for the boys is this: Take your sons with you when you buy their clothing. Consult their tastes somewhat. Don't let them select anything ridiculous, but give them a choice of half a dozen sensible coats or hats or whatever it may be. Don't scold them too much if they come home with the straps on their blouses trousers unbuttoned or the trousers legs frayed almost long. No doubt the captain of the baseball team and 'all the other fellows' wear theirs that way. Or if your boy comes up the street with his cap over his right ear, while you are telling him that he looks 'just like a little street tough' remember it was the style that you yourself followed last winter, and that 'what all the fellows do' means just as much to Johnny as Paris notes do to you."

Snafus.

An explanation of this hallucination is offered by the result of French experiments a few years ago. Sixteen alcoholic patients were examined with the ophthalmoscope, and it was found that the minute blood vessels in the retina of the eyes were congested. In this condition they appear black, and are projected into the field of vision, where their movements resemble the squirming of serpents.

Professional Dignities.

"Disagree about bus routes to keep 'em up right important," remarked Mr. Ernest Pinkley. "I speak extra polite but some 'quaint' about my address."

"What's the matter with your job?"

"It's all right, 'cept 'fer the one I don't want to be called a 'mule driver' no mo'. Hereafter I want to be 'labeled to be a pilot'."

"THE SLEEPING FOX CATCHES NO POULTRY"

The merchant who does not advertise catches no trade. He is fortunate if he can retain what he has, because he is never progressive, so his more alert competitors who do advertise, gradually get all the business. Advertising is an evidence of alertness and generally the advertiser gives better value and prompt service. As a consequence he seldom has shell-worn goods to patronise the advertiser.
