For Her Sake;
The Murder in Furness Wood.

CHAPTER XL

Lady Cameron had purchased a very beautiful pearl brooch; it lay among the other presents until the night before the wedding, and then her ladyship found it on her dressing-table, with the one word "Declined" written in Diana's firm clear hand-writing. Lady Cameron said nothing; she understood the girl's intention of not taking into her new life anything that could remind her of her step-mother.

On the night before the wedding there was the most sumptuous dinner ever given at Furness. Sir Royal was there, and after the feast he asked Diana to find a few minutes for him. She led the way to the terrace.

"Come here, Royal," she said, "where we have spent so many happy hours together."

He stood by her side for some few minutes in silence. The "child Diana" had long been dead to him; the beautiful willful young girl, so charming and graceful, had died also. By his side stood a proud cold woman, on whose fair moonlit face there was not the shadow of a smile.

"Diana," he began, "I want to explain about my present to you."

"I hope," she said, interrupting him hurriedly, "that you have not sent one."

"No—not as other people have. I could not and would not send anything to lie on those tables there, labeled as coming from me. I have brought you a present; but it is not a wedding-present—it is a gift from me to you. Look, Diana, I am sure you will like it. Let me fasten it round your neck, dear."

He showed her a diamond heart, consisting of stones of the first water—a gift worthy of a prince, but in his eyes not good enough for her.

"The shadow of parting lies heavily on me," said Sir Royal. "After to-night I shall see the 'child Diana' and the slim young maiden no more. Lady Clararond will return; but I shall never gaze upon the child I have loved so dearly. Let me fasten this diamond heart round your neck, Diana."

She bent her fair head toward him, and he tied his gift, which was attached to a band of black velvet, round Diana's white throat; and, as he did so, a deep sigh escaped from his lips.

"Wear it for my sake, Diana," he said, "and think of my heart, which is all yours, whenever you see it. My love for you is clear and bright as these jewels. When you look upon it, remember also that, whatever befalls, I am your staunch friend."

She felt the warm tears from his eyes on her hands, and she knew not how to comfort him.

"My child, my love," he said, "is it all too late?"

"Yes, too late," she sighed. "Royal, do not grieve; I am not worthy of your generous, devoted love. I am a proud, wicked girl."

"Always remember, Dian, that my life is yours, and that, if ever you need it, I will give it gladly."

"You will be with me to-morrow?" she said, anxiously. "Oh, Royal, let me have one true heart near me!"

"I will be with you, Diana," he promised; and to himself he added that it would be better for her if he were going to her funeral than to her wedding.

CHAPTER XL

When Sir Royal left her, Diana wandered away. She was to leave the beloved home on the morrow, and she wished to visit some of her favorite haunts once more. She wished to stand beside the fountain in the conservatory, where Sir Lisle had kissed her and the happiest hour of her life had passed. She wished to dream for one short half hour of the dark, handsome face as she had seen it then, to forget the terrible present, with its load of misery and remorse.

There could have been no more beautiful picture than that of the tall slender girl with her fair face and head bent over the rippling water, the light falling softly on her pale rose velvet and sparkling diamonds. Once more she dipped her white hand in the sparkling fountain. How well she remembered the night Sir Lisle had found it there—how tenderly he had drawn it from the water! Where was he now? Whither had her pride and vengeance driven him? She must not think of him; to-morrow was her wedding-day! But in this brief retrospect her pride gave way. She fell upon her knees by the pretty fountain, and her tears mingled with the rippling water.

"Oh, my love, my love," she cried, "what have I done—what have I done?"

To her excited, despairing fancy it seemed as though he were there, that he raised her in his arms, that he kissed her and held her to his heart, that he cried out to her that it was all a wretched dream, that it had passed, and he was there to love her—love her always.

A few minutes later Lord Clararond stood beside her, looking into her face, his own inflamed with wine. With a gasping sigh she came back to the stern reality.

"Diana," said the thick voice of her future lord, "I have been looking everywhere for you. Why did you steal off here alone? You wanted me to follow you, I am sure!"

Of what use to raise her fair head with queenly dignity and deny it? He only laughed a coarse, loud laugh.

"What a grand evening!" he continued. "But this is the best part of it. Why did you not tell me you were coming here? I should have been here before you."

Diana looked at him, her brows knit, her eyes cold and clear.

"Do you really believe," she said, "that I came here hoping you would follow me?"

"Certainly—and very natural too," he replied, with another laugh. "We are going to be married to-morrow; we ought therefore to have a few loving words to say to each other. Diana," he cried suddenly, "give me a kiss!"

There, on the very spot where Sir Lisle had stood when he gave her the kiss she had looked upon as a betrothal—there, where the one happy hour of her life had passed!

"A man has a right to kiss his future wife," said Lord Clararond.

"Not unless the future wife chooses; and I do not choose," replied Diana, proudly.

"You ought to kiss me, considering that we are to be married to-morrow," said his lordship.

He had taken just a little too much champagne; otherwise he would not have had the courage to speak as he did to the one he loved yet feared.

"I decline," said Diana, haughtily, "to do anything of the kind."

Lord Clararond looked at her with something like wonder.

"If you cannot kiss me you do not love me," he said. "If you do not love me, why are you going to marry me? I flatter myself that I have put that very neatly, Diana."

She saw that it would be useless to argue or contend with him. She was going to marry him on the morrow, and he would be the arbiter of her destiny. She crushed down the rebellious feeling that rose in her heart against him, and held out her slim, cool hand for him to kiss.

"There," she said—"now we are friends."

"I shall have what I want," he told her, sullenly, "or nothing at all;" and he bent down and kissed the half-averted face. "I do not understand this coldness," he added. "I hope you love me, or the future will not be very pleasant for either of us."

She saw on his face the sullen expression that occasionally appeared there, she heard him mutter some angry words, and that was the memory she had to take with her on her wedding-day.

They were all asleep now—father, lover, friends, and foes—all dreaming, most likely, of the grand pasport of the morrow. But no rest came to Diana.

It was a bright, moonlight night, and, as she opened her window, the gentle breeze brought in the sweet perfume of the hawthorn and clover. She could see in the distance the sea breaking gently upon the shore. How calm and peaceful the face of nature looked, bathed in the silvery moonbeams! What a contrast between it and the tumult in her own breast, between the bright moonlight and the darkness that they lay over her own soul! If she could but see Sir Lisle now for a moment; if she could but ask him to forgive her; if she could only tell him that she loved him, but that she had been wicked, revengeful, proud; if she could only lie at rest in his arms and die!

An hour later Diana knelt by her bedside, trying to repeat the prayers she had said when a little child. But the words refused to come; her lips were feverish, and she trembled violently. She had much to suffer, but never was her agony greater than on that night; and, when she thought of her vengeance, it had lost all its sweetness.

She wept bitter tears, half tempted even now to run away from the fate that she had prepared for herself, and end her days in solitude. The shades of night were passing, the first faint gleam of dawn was in the sky. In a few hours more she would be Diana Cameron no longer; the old life would have passed away forever. Farewell to the roses and sunshine of youth! Oh, if Heaven, in mercy, would but send back to her the happy time when she had sung of them and known no care! As the red dawn crept into the sky, she realized the magnitude of her sin, and the severity of her punishment. Then, worn out with weeping and pain, she lay down to rest.

The day had arrived which was to see Diana's revenge crowned—that was to see the consummation of all her plans to checkmate and injure the Scaredales. It was her wedding day! Every one was astir early at Furness. All the servants were busy; the bride-

Pains About the Heart

ANY derangement of the heart's action is alarming. Frequently pains about the heart are caused by the formation of gas arising from indigestion.

Relief from this condition is obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Chronic indigestion results from sluggish liver action, constipation of the bowels and inactive kidneys.

Because Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills arouse these organs to activity they thoroughly cure indigestion and overcome the many annoying symptoms.

maids had the onerous duties of the toilet before them; Lady Cameron, with the great mansion filled with guests had not one moment to spare. Every one was busily engaged except the bride herself; and she, even while the May sun shone into her room and the May birds filled the air with their tuneful songs—ever then she slept on. Susanna did not like to wake her, she looked so pale and tired; and the maid had some shrewd ideas connected with her young mistress' marriage.

"It is not like waking a happy bride for a happy wedding-day," she thought to herself. "I will let her sleep as long as possible."

When Diana woke, with a heavy head and a heavy heart, Susanna was standing by her side. In her first momentary confusion she looked questioningly at the pretty smiling maid.

"What is it, Susanna?" she asked.

"It is your wedding-day, miss," she answered.

O blessed sleep that had enabled her to forget! O bitter waking that brought her misery back with redoubled force! With a low moan she turned on her pillow. Her wedding-day? Would that she were dead!

"It is such a bright beautiful day, miss," said Susanna, trying to cheer her young mistress.

Russian Bolsheviks Plan General Strike -- English Press Criticises Lloyd George -- Another Marine Tragedy--Holland May Not Surrender Ex-Kaiser.

BOLSHEVISM IN AMERICA.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10. Plans of the Union of Russian Workers to bring an overthrow of the Government through a general strike is revealed in documents seized in nation wide raids of Federal authorities Friday and Saturday nights and made public to-night by Assistant Attorney General Carvan. With the Government overthrown and everything wiped from the earth that is a reminder of the right of private ownership of property, the Russian Workers, according to their manifesto, looked forward to "the magnificent, beautiful form of man without God, without a master and free of authority." Documents and publications obtained in raids, officials said to-day, are of the most inflammatory nature and make no effort to conceal the Union's programme of destruction and the manner to achieve its ends. Much of the material made public to-night is of such a nature as to cause ordinarily any newspaper reprinting it to be barred from the mails.

THE PRESS GENERALLY DISAGREES.

LONDON, Nov. 10. Hint of an attempt to negotiate peace with the Bolsheviks in Russia in a speech from Premier Lloyd George, delivered at Guild Hall Saturday night, has created a stir here. Anti-Bolshevik press is indignant over the suggestion. The Daily Mail scolds the idea as shaking hands with a murderer and generally denounces the suggestion. Which it says caused great indignation in political circles. The Telegraph and the Morning Post are also hostile to the proposal. Referring to the passage of the speech dealing with the possibility of peace with Russia. The Chronicle, a special champion of the Premier, declares it is not free from obscurity.

A MARINE TRAGEDY.

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 11. Fifty-one members of the crew of the United States Shipping Board steamer Polarland, who took to their boats when their vessel, which had become disabled in a gale sank before any of the rescue ships summoned by S. O. S. messages had arrived, have not yet been picked up. The steamer Kanawha which had been in communication with the ill-starred Polarland before she foundered reached the scene of disaster late yesterday afternoon. An extended but futile search of the ocean in that vicinity was made but no trace of the lost crew could be discovered and at eleven o'clock last night the Kanawha proceeded on her voyage to England. To-day search for Polarland's boats is being continued by the steamer Strathlian and which is due to reach the spot shortly after noon. Ralph Penny of Trinity, Newfoundland is listed as being among the Polarland's crew.

BEYOND EXTRADITION.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 9. Former Emperor William came to Holland a year ago next Monday. During this time there has been no demand officially or unofficially for his extradition or delivery to the Allies nor has Holland at all changed its viewpoint toward him. The Dutch Government has made up its mind as to its conduct in event of the surrender of Emperor William is asked for. No official statement has been made in this connection but it is learned that Holland considers the former Emperor beyond extradition as there is no possible way to hold him legally as a criminal.

THE SHOE MEN.

Captain Turner Disobeyed Orders And the Huns Got the Lusitania— Inside Story of the Sinking of the Big Cunarder.

London, Nov. 4.—A parliamentary paper, made public to-day, containing secret evidence in the inquiry into the sinking of the Cunard liner Lusitania, shows that Captain W. T. Turner, of the Lusitania, admitted that he disobeyed the instructions of the Admiralty in steaming at the rate of 18 knots an hour.

The captain testified, however, that had he gone faster the Lusitania would have reached the bar at Liverpool before the vessel could cross it, owing to tidal conditions. Captain Turner also testified that he had not steered a zig-zag course at full speed as the Admiralty had ordered, because he thought this order applied only when a submarine had been sighted.

Had to Disobey. It was contended by Captain Turner that although he had been warned by the Admiralty to avoid the headlands he was justified in coming within 10 miles of Old Head, off Kinsale, near where the Lusitania was torpedoed, in order to fix his position. If he had remained longer out of sight of land, he declared, the weather might have become foggy and he would have been worse off.

Far Enough Away. Captain Turner claimed that the course he steered was far enough from land, if he was not exactly in mid-channel. He was trying his best, he said, to follow the Admiralty's instructions, but his aim was land. Had he run into a fog without doing this, he asserted, he might have run ashore. A despatch from London, on July 17th, 1915, said the court of inquiry into the sinking of the Lusitania found that the liner had been lost as a result of an act of a German submarine, which not only intended to destroy the ship, but planned to blot out the lives of its passengers.

The decision exonerated Captain Turner and the Cunard Line from all blame and commended the discipline of the crew.

Secret Evidence. The only secret evidence known to have been taken by the Board of Inquiry, when the proceedings were interrupted in order to permit the court to inquire regarding certain instructions sent by wireless by the Admiralty to Captain Turner. The preliminary paper, made public in London, probably has reference to this secret evidence.

The evidence shows that the Admiralty instructed Captain Turner to keep in mid-channel and avoid the headlands, because submarines appeared to be operating chiefly off the prominent headlands. Captain Turner said he thought 10 miles was giving the headlands a sufficiently wide berth. He admitted that he kept a long distance off Fastnet light in order to avoid submarines. Later, Captain Turner, pressed by cross-examination, said he was steering a course that would have taken him close to the Conninberg Lightship and was not in mid-channel, because he understood there were submarines in mid-channel. Asked why he had not said this before the captain replied: "I forgot it."

Private Company Takes Charge of Halifax Housing.

HALIFAX.—After the city council of Halifax has turned down the proposal to establish a housing scheme under the grant of funds at five per cent. from the Federal Government, it appears that a company of capitalists in Halifax, with substantial assistance from Montreal, is ready to undertake the enterprise. The city, by a narrow majority, rejected the housing plan as a municipal work, chiefly on the ground that it was financially unsound and would eventually mean a loss, more or less large, to the ratepayers. It was the subject of a great deal of controversy and the rejection of the proposal left some heartburnings.

The company that now proposes to undertake the enterprise, has a capital subscribed of $150,000, of which the land at the disposal of the company, and which was controlled by Montreal parties, represents $50,000. The possession of this land gave the company a great advantage, but it would also have been available for the city at a price had they gone ahead. It is proposed by this Halifax Housing Company to erect as a beginning 100 residences, and if in the future there is a demand for more they will build a yet larger number. With a capital of $150,000 the company has approached the Provincial Government, and has obtained their approval and the promise of $400,000 of the federal grant at 5 per cent. interest. The total amount which the city of Halifax could claim from the Federal grant is about $750,000, so that there is still $350,000 remaining for this or some other company to claim as an aid should they feel like a further embarkation in the house-building enterprise.

Confident of Success. The company proposes to build houses to sell at three prices: $3,500, $4,000 and $4,500. It is understood that A. H. Minshull, at present manager of the real estate department of the Eastern Trust Company, will be manager of the new concern. They are confident, notwithstanding the action of the city council, that it can be made a financial success. It is freely admitted at the same time, that while they may be able to accomplish this result the city, acting as a building company, might have failed. Private efficiency is so much superior to what we have seen of municipal management that people are ready to allow for a great deal of latitude as between the chances for success under a corporation, with a good board of directors, and a capable manager and a proposition run directly by the city fathers, no matter how well meaning they may be.

The manager of a loan company informs The Financial Post that in 1918 there has been advanced in Halifax, by the leading companies, no less than three millions of dollars for the purpose of house-building, and this in addition to what private citizens have loaned on ordinary mortgages, for a good deal of this is still done in Halifax. The money is advanced, too, on the best of security, the average being that the owner puts up 50 per cent. of the cost. He said that there is no difficulty to dispose of all available funds on this margin and, as showing the amount of business to be done, that his company had advanced as much money in six months this year as in the whole twelve of last.—Financial Post.

GARLAND'S. "Hurdy's Whistle" (Anne Archbold Miller)—This book is an excellent story of a rough-and-tumble boy who is at first a trial to his people but who in their joy when they come to understand him after he has been "made over" by Hurdy's joyful and very philosophical view of the trials of a small boy. Whistle is a small boy and Hurdy is the Willise's hired girl. Whistle's problems are the everyday problems of a small boy and will be recognized by anybody who knows small boys. How Whistle came to master himself by following Hurdy's advice in putting 'glory into good' is the great point in this truly delightful story. The book is one for all, old as well as young. "We just got to learn to rejoice in tribulation," says Hurdy.

"The Hand of the Potter" (Theodore Dreiser)—This play is a true tragedy, so tragic, indeed, that one seems to become part of the play. If you want to read a true tragedy read this powerful four act play by the author of "Sister Carrie."

"The Swallow" (Mary Dunbar)—A story founded on the actual experiences of a member of that famous Franco-American flying squadron, "The Lafayette Escadrille." This story is an actual account of how a young Texan got into the war and how he got out of it. His experiences are of a truly wonderful kind and show his eagerness to get into the "great scrap." The delightful romance that is entwined in it will prove to be very popular. The publishers are Boni & Liveright of New York.

DICKS & CO. "The Glory of the Coming" (Grin S. Cobb)—at the beginning of the war the author wrote from within the enemy lines—being the involuntary guest of the German Army. Under great difficulties he told the world the stature of the enemy arrayed against it. Now he has explained just exactly what the 'Yanks' did on the Western Front. The book is very interesting and is written in a racy, American style.

"Canada's Sons and Great Britain in the World War" (Col. George E. Nasmith) with an introduction by Gen. Sir Arthur Currie. This book is a perfect record of the part played by Canada, and as a matter of fact, all of the British Empire in the Great War. The book is profusely illustrated with official British and Canadian Government photographs.

Rod and Gun.

The November issue of Rod and Gun, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, at Woodstock, Ont., keeps big game hunting stories well to the fore. "A Caribou Hunt in Restigouche county," by Henry Duncan Chisholm, "Days of Real Sport in Algoma," F. W. Williams, thrilling story, with cover cut to illustrate, of "The Gun That Would Shoot a Mile," "A Nova Scotia Moose Hunt About 1840 and Another in 1918," by T. S. Scott, will all be found equally interesting to hunters—whether on vacation now, or returning. The first part of an interesting story of Alaska entitled "The Humming Bird" by Mrs. Jean Stevenson is the opening story of this issue, while Bonnycastle Dale will be found as interesting as ever in his "Two Ancient Beach Combers." Duncan Campbell Scott's address on "Relation of Indians to Wild Life Conservation," and "Opening Day at Lake Scugog" by John Downson are timely and interesting articles. "Fishing Notes" conducted by Robert Page Lincoln containing "Dusk and Ember Papers," "Along The Trap Line" by R. C. Landis, "Rod and Gun Mechanics," "The Kennel" and "Trap" departments will all be found up to the usual standard with much to interest their various followers.

PEPSODENT
REG. IN CANADA

The New-Day Dentifrice
A scientific film combant, based on pepsin, now advised by leading dentists everywhere.

Your teeth are not clean. You can feel a slimy film. Probably the film has dimmed them—some tartar may have formed.

Your present methods of brushing do not end film, and that is the teeth' great enemy. Now we ask you to try a new method—try it at our cost—and compare results.

Film Can Be Ended Now

Most tooth troubles are due to that film. It is film that discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

The film clings to the teeth, enters crevices and stays. Brushing does not end it. No ordinary tooth paste can dissolve it. Night and day it may do a ceaseless damage. And millions find, as a result, that ordinary brushing does not save the teeth.

Now dental science, after many years, has found a film combant. The facts have been proved by convincing clinical and laboratory tests. The method is today approved by leading dentists everywhere.

For home use this method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent. And we are mailing 10-Day Tubes to all who ask, to let everyone see its effects.

The Pepsin Method

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to dry by day combat it.

Science has found a harmless method of activating pepsin. The usual method is an acid harmful to the teeth. So pepsin long seemed barred.

Now pepsin can be constantly applied—can be left to linger between the teeth. Now you can every day combat this film in a simple, dainty way.

Millions of teeth are being cleaned in this new way. You can see them everywhere—white, glistening teeth. Send this coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how the teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears. Learn what clean teeth mean—see how they look. Then decide for yourself between the old methods and the new. Cut out the coupon now.

Safe in the Sea.

We read of gold to the value of millions of pounds having been recovered from the Laurentic after being submerged for thirty months, and of such tales of loss and recovery there are scores.

But there are many minor examples of the fact that the sea is one of the safest of places to "lose" anything. The other day, for instance, a bather at a seaside resort lost his false teeth while bathing. He happened to be swimming near a hulking, and took the precaution to count the upright banks of timber seaward. Returning to low tide, he picked up his lost property within a few feet of the spot where he dropped it.

A young lady, paddling in the incoming tide near Blackpool, dropped a valuable diamond brooch from her blouse. She gave it up for lost, but a small boy who was with her instructed her to stand still until he brought one by one a dozen large-sized pebbles, with which he made a small cairn to mark the spot.

When the tide retired it was dark, but the next morning the girl's young cavalier was down on the beach bright and early. The little cairn on the white sand was easily found, and a ten minutes' search among the stranded crabs and jellyfish disclosed the brooch.

But the most remarkable case of this kind occurred some years ago at a well-known resort where pier-head fishing is popular. A honeymoon couple were fishing together, and the lady inadvertently dropped her engagement-ring into the sea. As the tide never retired beyond this point, she gave it up for lost at once, and tried not to worry about it, especially as she had now got a less valuable but much more precious ring.

Two years later the couple returned to their honeymoon spot, and went to fish at the end of the pier. The tide was very low, and they were bottom fishing. The young husband, thinking he had a bite, twitched in his line, and caught upon his hook among a little tangle of seaweed, was the engagement-ring little the worse for its two years' submersion.

AND YOU FIND SOMETHING
Any person who wants to look after his health and try to find someone who has an easier or in some way pleasanter lot in life than he can usually find what he is looking for. Also something more, I will leave you to guess what that is after I tell you of a neighbor of mine. This neighbor had a "serious" illness of the chest. She was at a beautiful hospital, she had the best of care, her husband came in every day and spent practically all his spare time with her. Her room bloomed with flowers and fruit from kind friends, as soon as she was able to receive them, the friends themselves came, and she often had two or three callers in an afternoon. At home two competent maids carried on the regular routine of the household and a trained nurse took charge of the children's health.

She Grew Plump and Rosy.
When she came out of the hospital she still retained this nurse to fill her own place in the household and take all possible care from her. As soon as she was able she went to a lovely country place. She had the best of food, she lay on the beach half the morning and took long naps every afternoon, she grew plump and rosy.

Everyone who saw her spoke of how well she looked.

And this is what she said to me and to several other people in answer to our felicitations.

What She Called "Real Rest."
"Yes, it is lovely here," she sighed, "but the children do make so much noise. I do envy Mrs. G. You know she had the flu last Spring, too, and when she got out of the hospital she sent her two children away to summer camps and just went and boarded all summer. That's what I call real rest."

Thus she turns her back on a path ninety-nine women out of a hundred would call blessedly smooth, and

A Smug Selfishness About This.
I hate the look-at-those-who-have-misfortunes-and-be-happy-that-you-haven't doctrine. There is smug selfishness about it that sets me on edge.
But it certainly is exasperating to see people deliberately turning their backs and looking the other way when happiness is calling them.
Of course, you have guessed the something more that you are sure to find when you go looking for someone with a pleasanter lot than yours.

John, whom he had forgotten to let into the secret, replied, after a slight hesitation:
"Please, sir, is that the half-dozen that came in yesterday?"

CHARITY.
With charity for all I walk the village street; I see a duffer fall, and lift him to his feet. I dry the widow's tears and still the orphan's sighs; and when a bum appears, I feed him pumpkin pies.
With charity on file, my fallings do not count; my soul may harbor guile in fabulous amount; but charity is a cloak that covers all my sins, and so through town I poke, and meet with friendly grins. With and strive not to recall ill tales of yesterday; the rumors foul and dire that smirch a fellow's name, and drag through muck and mire some unsuspected fame. I struggle to forget the libels doubly base which make the victim sweat in anguish and disgrace. With charity I greet the fellows who have failed, and all whose futile feet have to demitron trailed. I'm not so snowy white that I can sit on high, and hand out words that blight, to any erring

Winter Wisdom.
Winter's coming—a very bad time for boots. Rain, snow and mud play havoc with leather and stitches.
If you rasp with a rough file the soles of your new boots, and then apply two coats of oak copal varnish—the second to be put on when the first is quite dry—the soles will be hardened, and, for quite a month, impervious to wet. The treatment should then be repeated.
For the uppers there is nothing better than mutton fat well rubbed in. The leather should be warmed first. In a day or two the boots will shine all right, and be waterproof.
If you are caught unprepared, and your boots are wet, do not attempt to dry them before a fire. That ruins leather. Stuff the boots with pieces of newspaper, made as hot as possible. Then hang the boots as near the ceiling as possible. Hot air ascends! The boots will be dry in the morning, and in perfect shape.
If, against your wishes, your wet boots have been dried in the old bad way before the fire, and are therefore hard, a little paraffin will quickly soften them.
Mud should always be wiped off when wet. That not only because it is easier, but because the mud of today is not pure. So wipe the wet mud off, and then, not too lavishly, wipe the boots over with vaseline.
Finally, all boots are the better for being washed in warm water occasionally, to remove the caked cover of blacking. Then a rub with castor oil—a splendid leather restorative—should follow.

When the other fellow's busy, wave your hand and pass along. Do not ask him; then to listen to your little tale of wrong. Do not talk about the weather or the latest bit of news. Shout a glad good morning to him, but don't stop to air your views.
When the other fellow's busy with the work he has to do, Don't imagine that he's eager to hear idle talk from you. He won't thank you for your visit, but he'll list you with the fools. And he'll wish he'd never met you if you make him drop his tools.

If you want to keep the friendship of the men you meet and know, If you'd have them glad to see and be sorry when you go, There's a certain way to do it, and I'm telling it in rhyme: When the other fellow's busy do not stop and waste his time.

Women and Tobacco.
There is no indication that women will ever become wedded to the weed as our men are, and yet there is no doubt that there are thousands of women smokers more than there were even at the beginning of the 19th century, when old ladies smoked pipes pretty generally. There are many society functions that are not considered complete these days unless Lady Nicotine has a place with the coffee. The users claim that there have never been any maladies that are directly traceable to tobacco. Armistice Day.

To-day is the anniversary of the armistice with Germany, when agreeing to all the terms of the military chiefs of the Allies, the envoys of the enemy signed the most fateful document of all ages, thereby practically admitting defeat. The whole world heaved an immense sigh of relief when the news of a cessation of hostilities was sent flashing over the telegraph wires and cables, and through the boundless ether, for wireless as well was requisitioned to further the spread of the good tidings of great joy, the fore-runners of peace.

For four and a half years the universe had suffered a baptism of blood, and no man knew when the end would come. Armies battered and bruised each other in numerous theatres of war spread over an area hitherto unheard of in history. Millions of men were engaged in the awful work of destroying each other, just because of the ambition and lust of the war lord of Germany for conquest. At his behest the dogs of war were unleashed, and though a year has passed since the final triumph of right, the man responsible for this most colossal orgy of slaughter, has not yet been brought before the bar of human justice and arraigned under the charge of wholesale murder.

Though cities have been desolated and towns ravaged and villages defiled at his instigation and behest, and the blood of countless thousands poured out like water, beside all the outrages committed by his licentious and brutal soldiery, this man has not yet been made to expiate the greatest crime in history in any way. He still enjoys freedom, though perhaps imprisonment for him would not be any more than a lesser restriction of movement than he now possesses. Other despots have been made feel the power of the people, the might of the conqueror, but William Hohenzollern, the maddest monarch of all time, the modern Nero, is permitted in unhampered security, though not a tick of the clock is heard without the voice of the slain millions crying out against him.

But it is not with the ex-Kaiser of Germany that we have to deal to-day. Doubtless he will yet be haled before an international tribunal and fitly and amply punished—if that be possible—for his offences against civilization. To-day we enter upon the beginning of the second year of the initiation of peace, and to-day we bow our heads for a few moments in humble yet hearty thankfulness because of the conclusion of the Great War. What a spectacle was presented by the two minutes' silence, throughout the Empire at 11 o'clock this morning. From the poles to the tropics, from the East to the West, all round the globe, wherever the British flag flies, there was silence for two minutes. The wheels of industry ceased to turn; ships on the ocean stopped their engines: the noise of the market places was hushed; everything, everybody was motionless, and with heads bowed in silent meditation and prayer the peoples who own allegiance to the Imperial throne thanked God that the Pax Britannica had been, by His grace, preserved once more for the liberty and freedom of posterity.

To-Night's Brigade Parade.

To-night will be a red-letter one for the Newfoundland Battalion of the Church Lads' Brigade, for the twenty seventh anniversary of its inception in this country will be celebrated. Leaving the Armoury at seven o'clock sharp the Battalion will parade the city and, returning, enjoy a sumptuous spread prepared by the lady friends of the Brigade. At nine o'clock a concert, in which local talent will star, will take place. The evening will end with dancing, the Band, under Lieut. Morris, supplying the music. This promises to be the most enjoyable anniversary of the Brigade celebrated for many years.

Constabulary Decorations.

LONG SERVICE MEN HONORED

Yesterday afternoon a very pleasing presentation took place when a number of members of the Constabulary were given medals in recognition of their long and faithful service. At three o'clock the police force in dress parade uniform assembled at the Constabulary Headquarters, and a few minutes later His Excellency the Governor, accompanied by Miss Harris and Capt. Hamilton, arrived to make the presentation. After an inspection, and an address of congratulation by His Excellency, the ceremony of presentation and decoration was performed, the recipients being:—

The Minister of Justice, Hon. A. B. Morine, thanked His Excellency for making the presentations, and the force was then dismissed.

His Excellency and party were later shown through the Fire Hall, and were given an exhibition of how well the horses were trained and how quickly everyone was at his post to respond when required. The viceregal party was well pleased with all seen.

It is understood that several of the outpost police are to receive medals when they come to town.

Storm Ravages Portugal Cove.

With one exception every stage in Portugal Cove was carried away by the late storm and mountainous seas. One man, Mat Churchill, lost stage, 2 tons of oil, motor boats and other property amounting to $1,000 in value. Fred Picco lost 20 qts of fish, stage, boats and other property, amounting to $600 in value. W. Hibbs lost two splendid motor boats, and in all about 25 stages were washed away.

$50,000 Loss.

Fifty thousand dollars is the amount lost by the Red Cross Steamship Co. through the tying up of the Resolute by being grounded at Cow Head, Long Island, N.Y., and of the Taunton by the 'Longshoremen's' strike in that Harbor. This is altogether apart from the cost of repairing the stranded steamer.

Eskimo Missionary Lectures.

GARBED IN NATIVE CLOTHING.

Garbed in native fur clothing, Rev. Hy. Gordon, missionary to the Eskimos at Cartwright, lectured to the members of the Cartwright Mission Circle in Canon Wood Hall yesterday afternoon. To state that his story, dealing with life along the coast as it did, was interesting were unnecessary, and his hearers listened with an intensity that was flattering. At the close of the story, and when some recitations and songs had been rendered by some of the members, the sum of $300, collected by the Circle during the past year, was presented to Mr. Gordon for his use in Missionary work.

Interesting Case.

Judging by the number of witness, an interesting case was to be heard before Judge Morris this morning but owing to other cases taking up the time, had to be postponed till to-morrow. It appears that Mr. Hally the owner of a motor car, some time ago, ran into a horse owned by Mr. Berrihan, causing paralysis from which it is claimed the horse died. The owner of the animal is suing for its value. The city vets were at hand to give evidence.

Airy Topics.

(By the Cub-Editor.)

Like all the efforts of the Cub Editor, this "airy" or aircraft-column will be very spasmodic, and readers may be prepared for disappointment and pleasure, mixed together like a pepper and salt suit. People will surely say that he is now up in the air, but the C.E. is quite indifferent to the opinions of others. It is splendid to be so independent—so airy—as it were. It is only then that one can put forth one's best efforts—so preserve these flights. Someday they may be ranked with the classical lore of 1919.

American Air Mail Service.

Daily air mail service between Chicago and Cleveland was started May 15 when 'planes left both cities simultaneously and made the 250 mile trip without incident.

The first 'plane left Chicago at 9.35 o'clock, piloted by Trent C. Fry. It was a machine of the De Havilland 4 type, carrying a mail bag weighing 145 pounds. It arrived in Cleveland at 12.48 p.m. making the trip from Chicago in three hours and thirteen minutes, including a five-minute stop at Bryan, Ohio.

The 'plane which left Cleveland at 10.30 o'clock, piloted by Edward Gardner, took the air at Woodland Hills Park and followed the New York Central tracks to the west, reaching Bryan, Ohio, at 11.15 and South Bend at 12.40 o'clock. It arrived in Chicago at 1.25 p.m. This trip consumed three hours and fifty minutes.

The De Havilland Machines are also known as Airco Machines, as they are the product of the Aircraft Manufacturing Company, of England, which is the greatest Aircraft Company in the world.

Famous Airman Dead.

Messages from Great Britain state that Lieut.-Col. John Cecil Porte has died of tuberculosis. Porte, known to most people as the inventor of the "Porte Boat," a seaplane, and of the "Felixstowe Fray," was formerly a Wing Commander in the Royal Naval Air Service, since amalgamated with the Royal Air Force. The aviation world loses one of its most useful figures in Porte, for he was one of the few inventor-aviators in the world.

The Regular Monthly Meeting of the Women's Association of Cochrane Street will be held to-morrow (Wednesday) night at 8 o'clock, when Mrs. (Rev.) Ashford will give a talk. Teas will be served for the small sum of 20c. Come and bring a friend.

Wedding Bells.

CHAFE-WEIR.

The Church of Andrew, Petty Harbor, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Thursday, Nov. 6th, when Walter Chafe, son of the late Albert Chafe, led to the altar Ethel, daughter of Robert and Mary Weir. Precisely at 3.30 p.m., the bride entered the church leaning on the arm of her father who gave her away. She was beautifully attired in plum color silk with white Georgette crepe over silk hat and veil to match. She was attended by her sister Miss Charlotte Weir, who was dressed in cream serge with blue silk hat. Mr. Daniel L. Chafe, brother of the groom acted as best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Canon Hewitt. After the ceremony the bridal party returned to their future home where a sumptuous repast was partaken of by only the immediate friends of bride and groom. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold piece. She was also the recipient of many valuable and useful presents including a large amount of money from her friends and relatives. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Chafe many years of wedded happiness.

DEMPESEY AND BECKETT NEXT.

Mobile, Nov. 4.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, signed an agreement in Mobile to-day to fight Joe Beckett, the English heavyweight champion, in New Orleans, next March 17th, according to an announcement here to-day by Dominick Tortorich, New Orleans fight promoter. The bout depends on Beckett winning his forthcoming fight with Georges Carpentier, the French champion. The bout will be for twenty rounds, and Dempsey, Tortorich announced, will receive $125,000 as his share.

The champion affixed his signature to a contract after conference to-day between Jack Kearns, his manager, and Tortorich. The conference it was said was brief, and Dempsey quickly assented to the conditions and purse, following the agreement between Kearns and the promoter.

Beckett will meet Carpentier in December. Tortorich said that should Carpentier win, he would instruct his representative in London to attempt to sign a contract immediately for the French champion to meet Dempsey.

GERMANS PROTEST.

BERLIN, Nov. 10. The German Government has addressed to the Supreme Council at Paris a note protesting against the retention by France of German war prisoners. The note declared that the holding of the men creates a situation which is not only dangerous to Germany's own existence, but it is also a menace outside the German frontier.

THIS SOUNDS FINE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9. Fire, followed by an explosion, destroyed three buildings of the Atlantic Macaroni Company in Long Island City today with damage estimated at half a million. Officials of fire and police departments have begun investigation of the report that the fire was of an incendiary origin. A strike had been in progress at the plant for three weeks.

LONDON, Nov. 10. There is stated to be no truth in the recent report of the matrimonial intentions of the Prince of Wales, which, we are informed, caused trouble and annoyance in the highest quarters.

THIS SOUNDS GOOD, AT ANY RATE.

LONDON, Nov. 10. J. H. Thomas, the railway men's leader, in supporting proposals for public ownership of the liquor trade, said that he would be blind to his knowledge of the working class if he did not say, quite honestly and firmly, that prohibition would not be acceptable to them at this time. Therefore, they fell back on state purchase and control.

LONDON, Nov. 10. Authoritative advice on the Russian military situation shows that the Anti-Bolshevik forces have been compelled nearly everywhere to assume the defensive, owing to the increase in the Bolshevik forces. A Lively Scene.

To-day a lively scene was witnessed near Prescott Street, when a bull, in charge of a couple of drovers took a notion to explore the contents of a number of cases stored at the back of the Royal Stores Showroom. The bovine becoming entangled in the cases the drovers made great efforts to extricate the animal by pulling his tail first. A crowd of spectators enjoyed the performance for some time, when the bull of his own accord, cleared all obstructions and made off up Prescott Street. The rope by which the bull was held broke, and gave the man holding it a toss that made him see stars.

Kept Tab of Submarines

(Admiral Sims in the World's Work.)

The allied secret service was immeasurably superior to that of the Germans—I pay particular tribute to the British Intelligence Department in saying this. We always knew how many submarines the Germans had and where they were; we always knew how many they were building, where they were building them, their architectural characteristics, and the stage of progress which they had reached at a particular time. It was not the simplest thing in the world to get a submarine out of its base. The allies were constantly laying mines at these outlets; and before the U-boat could safely make its exit elaborate sweeping operations were necessary. It took a squadron of mine or ten surface ships, operating for several hours, to get a submarine out of its base and start on its journey.

So we always knew when one came out, and we knew not only that, but we knew which one it was, and often who its commander was, and other valuable details. Moreover, we knew where it went and we kept charts, on which we plotted from day to day the voyage of each particular submarine. At a given time we could thus point to almost the exact spot on the ocean where a particular U-boat was operating.

Tongue Tests.

There is no longer need to consult a palmist or phrenologist if you desire an indication of your disposition. "Glossmancy" is a new "science"—the "science of the tongue." According to the "Glossmancist," who hails from Paris, the owners of short and broad tongues are generally untruthful and given to exaggeration, while short and narrow tongues denote alyness and ill-temper. A woman who possesses a long and broad tongue is inclined to be a gossip and fond of a little scandal.

Character reading by waists is another new "science" which has come into being recently. According to a "waist expert," the girl who is possessed of a short waist has a lively, frank and vivacious disposition, is ambitious, and very thoughtful for others. The long-waisted miss is economical, but, unfortunately, she is not always straight-forward or the owner of the sweetest of tempers. When a long lead goes with a long waist, a designing, secretive, impractical nature is revealed.

The character can be read from the feet. Women with square feet have practical, strong, honest natures, and make excellent wives and mothers. Long, slim, and dainty feet indicate a sensitive, vain, and proud disposition.

Men with small feet are, as a rule, fond of society, smart clothes, and amusement. They are seldom ambitious, however, and are not always desirable as husbands. The men who make the best husbands are those who possess the knotty type of feet with square toes.

The Master Salesman

A Tribute to the Daily Newspaper

The power of the Press exceeds that of mighty armies in full panoply of war. The Daily Newspaper lights the way for men and nations along the path of progress.

The Newspaper is a greater Educational Institution than all the colleges of Christendom. Its doors are wide open to every man, woman and child who can read.

The Newspaper is the Bulwark of Liberty, the Flaming Sword of Justice.

It brings wrongs, without fear or favor, before the Supreme Court of Public Opinion, from whose verdict there is no appeal.

To an audience more vast than pulpiters command, the Newspaper proclaims its great evangel—The Brotherhood of man.

Modern Civilization could not exist without the Daily Newspaper.

Second only in importance to its mission as a Disseminator of News is its work as a Builder of Business.

Its advertising columns are the Display Windows of Merchandise—eagerly scanned, from day to day, in the twenty million American homes.

Newspaper Advertising is the World's Master Salesman.

Great is the Daily Newspaper!

Lord Bryce on the Peace Pact.

London, Nov. 4.—Lord Bryce, commenting on the work of the Peace Conference, says that the principle of nationality proclaimed in President Wilson's fourteen points was accepted in all belligerent countries and was the basis of the armistice, but that it had not been followed out in the Peace Conference. He declared that although the Conference had been sitting since last January not much had been heard about its proceedings.

The veteran British diplomat remarked they had not yet arrived at that "open diplomacy" of which so much had been said, and declared that if they had not been too much occupied at home, the English people would not have allowed so much to have been kept from them.

Lord Bryce said he thought the Conference had committed some very grave errors and was in grave danger of committing others. Under the treaty signed with the little bit of Austria which remained, he said, 380,000 Tyrolese were taken and handed over to Italy. He said he had searched in vain for the reason for this action, but could find none, although it was totally opposed to the doctrine of nationality. The Italian Government said it wanted the Tyrolese territory for strategic purposes, but Lord Bryce declared they could not want it for that purpose against a practically bankrupt state of only 6,000,000 persons.

Shrub in Good Form. WINNING MANY RACES IN ENGLAND.

The veteran Alfie Shrub, who left for England early this fall to campaign over his old stamping ground, made good. He started out by losing a race against a horse at Hingham, his old home town, but he came right back at Preston park, Brighton, by giving Billy Williams, the Sussex professional champion, 200 yards and a beating at five miles in 27.51 3-5. He won by two laps. He followed this up by beating E. Mitchell, of Brighton, at Crawley. He gave him 200 yards start and did 27.06 for the five miles. At Wotching, September 27 he defeated a three-man relay. Shrub is now coaching Oxford university track team and will not be back until April. He was very much disappointed that he did not get a crack at McKrae, the Scotch wonder. McKrae took sick the last of September, and has retired until the Spring.

Shrub writes that his dicky legs are in excellent shape and says that he can do 25.50 for five miles. That is pretty fair work for a 46-year-old man. In England they call him "The Little Wonder." Alfie Shrub was born at Slinfold, Sussex, on Dec. 12, 1879. His height is 5 feet 6 inches, and his weight about 122 pounds. He has beaten all the most famous men and created records in Canada, New Zealand, Australia, France, United States, England and Scotland. He is the holder of more running records than any other man in the world, alive or dead, to-day is still unbeaten from two to ten miles since he created the world's records at the above distances. The only handicap the world's champion ever received was when he entered his first race at Hingham Blue Star Harriers in 1898, when Fred J. Spencer conceded him 55 yards in a mile race.

Slaves of the Cinema!

Since the Armistice there has been a record rush of girls to get "taken on the pictures." There probably is not a film-producing company in London that has not at the present moment the names of at least three hundred girls aspiring to become picture actresses on their books, and every week brings the companies fresh applications.

Practically every girl who is a "picture" star up to the present moment, or who has any chance of becoming one, has been in the picture business since she was ten or twelve years old. She has played hundreds of different parts, and is a trained and experienced cinema actress.

The Result of Hard Work.

When a big success is achieved, like that of Miss Alma Taylor, though it may appear sudden, it is, in reality, achieved by years of work from the time they were children. Yet, in face of these facts, there are hundreds of girls of ages varying from eighteen to twenty-five, who are wasting their time, and, it is no exaggeration to say, ruining their lives, by touring round the film studios endeavouring to obtain a small part, hoping that, this obtained, they will jump into sudden fame, and become a featured player, with a salary that may run into hundreds of pounds a week. In America they call such girls "slaves of the cinema," and it is a literally true expression.

Once a girl starts hanging round a film studio, picking up stray acquaintances with anyone connected with it, in the hope that she may obtain, sooner or later, an interview with the producer, and secure a part, however small, in a picture play, it is long odds that she will become a cinema slave, and, as such, she is truly to be pitied.

Here is the story of one of these "slaves," whom I knew intimately, and it is typical of the story that might be told of hundreds of other girls.

Four years ago she was a bright, jolly girl of sixteen. She was extremely pretty, her figure was slight and graceful, her features well shaped and finely cut, and she had a pair of large brown and very expressive eyes.

At that time she was a typist in a City office. Someone suggested to her that she ought to try to "get on the pictures," and, most unfortunately for herself, she took the advice. I need not dwell on the time she wasted in writing lengthy letters to the film-producing companies in London, or on the disappointment she suffered at getting no replies.

Half-Starved and Hopeful.

The tragedy of her career began when she took to visiting the picture studios in the hope of getting a personal interview with a producer.

Of course, she lost, or, rather, I believe gave up, her position in the City office where she was employed. She picked up several acquaintances at the studios she visited. As I have said, she was a pretty girl, and her acquaintances—were quite ready to stand her dinners at the restaurant and take her to theatres.

They all told her that they would certainly be able to get her a part, and they kept their promises. She at length obtained an interview with the producer, and he gave her a "part."

She was only in the play for about ten minutes, and half a guinea was her fee for figuring before the camera for that period.

Since then she has earned about thirty guineas in the same way, and she is still hanging about the studio—or others—in the hope that she will sooner or later secure a part that will make her a reputation.

She is rapidly losing her beauty, she is half-starved, her clothes are shabby. She no longer gets invitations to restaurants or theatres, and all I can say is that her plight, bad as it is, is at least better than that of those who do.

The cinema slave finds it next to impossible to return to regular employment. I have known smart girls who have tried to do so, but in every case they drifted back again to their old haunts about the film studios.

I know one quite clever girl, who, after she had spent two years picking up odd small parts at different film studios, went back to her original calling—that of a school teacher—but she only retained a position as teacher for three months, and then went back once again to try her luck at the "pictures." She is trying it still, but with no better success than she met with before.

Not Worth the Candle.

The only chance a girl has of earning a regular livelihood as a cinema actress is by getting into a stock company, where she receives a regular weekly salary, whether she is playing or not. Her services are simply retained by the film company at a regular weekly wage. In the case of an unknown actress, her weekly salary would not amount to more than that of a chorus-girl, but it would at least be regular all the year round.

It is however, next to impossible to get into a stock company. Most of the film-producing companies pick the actresses they require for small parts from the luckless band of cinema slaves, some of whom are always ready to their hand.—Answers.

The student had to face the ordeal of an examination in astronomy.

On emerging from the torture chamber, one of his companions asked him how he got on.

"First-rate," he said. "They only asked me two questions, and I answered them both promptly and correctly."

"What were the questions?"

"The first was: 'What is a paralax?' and I told them I didn't know. And the second was: 'Can you calculate an eclipse?' to which I said 'No.' I'd like to see anybody answer two questions more correctly than that!"

The Insurance Fiend.

ATTRACTED BY THOUGHTS OF A BIG COMMISSION, OUR MAN SETS OUT ON A MUCH-TRODDEN BUT VERY THORNY PATH.

Insured my life the other day. The man who inquired me down was a sort of insurance Jimmy Wilde. He backed me on to the ropes and kept on giving me half-arm statistical jolts until I gave in.

"Your expectations of life, sir, let me see—" He referred to a morbid-looking pocket-book, and flipped the pages over. "You said your age was—" he queried.

"Thirty-seven," I said, controlling my wild anxiety.

"Ah! Yes! Thirty-seven." He arrested his moving finger, and I felt as though Fate stood still. "You have quite a long time to live," he said sadly—"quite a long time. What did you say your occupation was?"

"Income-tax collector," I said proudly.

He closed his book with a snap and gave a sigh of restraint.

"Life insurance for you," he said slowly, "is not a luxury, it is not a mere precaution; it is a provision to meet the inevitable, an absolute necessity. Think of your dependants."

He spoke cheerfully, as one would say "Think of a number."

I thought of them and wondered if shrouds were still being worn.

"Yes," I said. "I've thought of them—often." The pathos of the moment brought tears to my eyes.

"Then what about the amount?"

"I am afraid I have not given the matter any thought," I said, in a sort of trance. "What would you suggest?"

"Five thousand," he beamed.

I shook my head, and the insurance man frowned.

"Let us look at this matter in a business-like manner," I said. "What am I worth to my family?"

The insurance man ran his fingers through his hair.

"Heaven knows!" he said. "You can't go on that, you know, because you might improve. Anyway, we don't issue policies for less than a hundred pounds."

I tried to escape, but it was no good, and in the end I signed a proposal for a hundred pounds for my wife not to pick up when I was fifty, and another hundred for the undertaker to pick up at some unknown date.

"There!" I sighed. "That's done!"

"When will you be examined?" asked the man.

"Any time," I said, taken off my guard.

"No time like the present," he said, the light of a satisfied conqueror in his eye. He took me off to a doctor, a calm, cruel fiend who, with the suave of smiles passed me fit.

"Now," said the insurance man to me, with the blood lust in his eye, and running his fingers along the edge of his proposal forms, "if there is any other life you can think of for me to get? One of your private friends, someone to whom you wish to do a good turn?"

I at once thought of my brother-in-law in a flash.

We went to see him. He was out. That chap has the luck of the deuce.

"Never mind," said the insurance man cheerfully. "You'll catch him some time. When you get him, I'll do you a good turn. I'll give you the agency commission."

"How much?" I asked, feeling rather biblical.

"Pound per cent.," he said identically.

I was a bit uncertain. High finance always does for me.

"A pound!" I repeated.

"Yes," he whispered. "A pound!"

I thought what a fool I had been working hard gathering taxes all my life, when I might have been getting pounds per cent. I gritted my teeth.

I ran my wife's brother to the next evening.

Edward is a short, thin, pale man who suffers with indigestion. He is snappy with it when I called on him, an hour and a half of hard talking got him under the influence, and later he signed the proposal for five hundred pounds, in a peaceful sleep.

I was so happy thinking of my certain money in jam, silver, and gold, that I should be fit to start in the morning, that on my way home I stepped into a grocer's and bought a nice bottle of port. So that the should have it that night I took him to him in a taxi. After all, I was getting a pound per cent.

Next morning I took him out, determined to keep him amused for some time to take him before the court. I had already fixed up my appointment by phone.

He was wearing a new suit, had to buy him a cigar; and after an hour (two shillings) we went fishing on the park lake. It was a morning, and I did the rowing. I had put on my straw hat instead of my bowler. But it only into the water once. Unfortunately, did my brother-in-law—as he was landing—new suit and all.

He was annoyed. Said it was fault; wanted to charge me for the suit; thought I did it on purpose if I should! My own brother-in-law. With all those pounds per cent. stake, too!

But he went to the doctor and thoroughly examined—so thoroughly that he was declined. Case for perispa.

MURDER IN MUNICH REVOLUTION DISCLOSED BY CONVICTION OF TWO OF ASSASSINS.

LONDON, Oct. 30. A trial in Munich has just disclosed details of a ghastly episode of the German revolution, according to a despatch to the Daily Telegraph.

On the evening of May 6, when the last sparks of the Bolshevik resistance were being stamped out in the streets of Munich, it was reported to Capt. von Stutterheim of the 1st Company of the Alexander Regiment that an illegal meeting was in progress in a house in the district for which he was responsible. He gave orders that those at the gathering be taken into custody.

A squad of soldiers was sent to the house. With leveled revolvers and shouts of "Hands up!" they burst into a room in which twenty-six young men were assembled. The young men much surprised at the sudden and violent intrusion, explained that they were members of the St. Joseph's Catholic Recreation Club and that only the most innocent forms of amusement had brought them together.

But all their protests were in vain. Stutterheim gave orders that they be delivered into the cellar of St. George's Palace, which had been set apart as a temporary jail.

The sight of a party of civilians under escort through the streets by soldiers attracted much notice, and roused the natural assumption that the prisoners were Spartacists and thus partners in guilt in many treacherous murders which, in the preceding days, had obtained Red rule in the Bavarian city.

A crowd, composed mainly of soldiers of other detachments, closed in round the little convoy, and the prisoners became the target of an ever increasing fire of ill treatment and abuse. As they were led within the courtyard, a large part of the crowd surged through the gates. Shots at once began to pour upon the helpless club members. The escort tried to shield them but their efforts were not successful, for seven of them were left dead in the courtyard when the bulk of the party got down into the cellar.

Among the soldiers who joined the convoy as it passed through the streets were Jacob Muller, a young butcher who belonged to the Bayreuth volunteers, and a non-commissioned officer named Mackowski. They were the two chief defendants at the trial. It appeared that on the evening of the assault Muller was to some extent under the influence of liquor, as his company had received a liberal ration of wine with the evening meal. Mackowski placed himself at the entrance of the vaults and struck right and left at the faces of the prisoners as they passed down the stairs. Then Muller, Mackowski and eight or ten other soldiers followed the prisoners down into the cellar.

Mackowski ordered the nineteen surviving members of the club to lie on the floor face downwards. The wretched men obeyed and the soldiers emptied their revolvers into them. Those of the prisoners who were not killed or incapacitated by the first volley jumped to their feet and screamed for mercy. Their appeals fell on muddled and deafened ears.

Muller in particular behaved with demoniacal fury. He drew his sword bayonet and slashed about blindly at both living and dead. When he had hunted his edge he snatched away the bayonets of one of his comrades and laid about him with that.

As soon as none of the victims could remain longer on his feet the soldiers pranced about on the prostrate bodies, stamping on hands and faces and plunging their bayonets into those who still showed signs of life. Then they executed a wild dance of triumph over the bodies.

Only five prisoners survived the massacre. One was saved by a soldier who recognized him as an acquaintance. The other four were either rendered unconscious by their wounds or had presence of mind to realize their lives depended on their remaining motionless.

Muller and Mackowski were found guilty of manslaughter and were sentenced each to fourteen years of penal servitude. Needless to say, the Independent Socialists will exploit for their party purposes the inadequacy of these sentences as compared with the execution of Spartacist leaders.

St. Lawrence Notes.

Rev. Father Battcock left by Argyll for Lamaline on a sick call to one of his parishioners. He has been called frequently up the coast to the different places since taking up his duties as Parish Priest here. The roads to Lawn, Nancy Barque, Roundabout and several other places within the mission, are not the most comfortable to get over by carriage, but Father Battcock is always ready and faithful to attend to those in need of comfort and consolation, besides his monthly visits.

Much sympathy is felt for Mrs. Leo Pike, who has been dangerously ill for some time. Mrs. Pike was always such a help to others in illness and suffering, her pleasant smile and kindness to every one being felt and appreciated by many.

Mr. Albert Grimes is now home with his family, after an eight months' trip.

Hatton & Co., the movie picture men, have shown some very successful and popular pictures, and also given very amusing vaudeville entertainments.

St. Martin's Day.

St. Martin, the son of a Roman military tribune, was born in Pannonia, a small town in Hungary, about A.D. 316. For some time he followed his father's profession. It is related, that at the gate of Amiens he divided his cloak with a poor mendicant, and that on the following night he had a vision in which the Lord appeared to him wrapped in that half of it which he had parted with, and said to his angelic retinue, "Martin has given me this garment." This vision occasioned the saint to leave the army and retire into solitude, from which he was withdrawn by St. Hilary, Bishop of Poitiers. He was elected Bishop of Tours in 374, and the zeal and piety which he displayed in this office were most exemplary. He converted the whole of the diocese to the true faith, levelling the temples of the heathen to the ground, and erecting in their stead churches for the worship of the true God. The Emperor Valentinian, and even the tyrant Maximus, treated him with respect and honour, and he continued in his Bishopric until A.D. 400 when he died, at the advanced age of eighty-four years. St. Martin has been styled "the Apostle of Gaul." The French had formerly such reverence for his memory that they carried his helmet with them in the wars, as incitement to courage. His festive day—November 11th—was instituted in A.D. 650, and is one of the four cross quarter days. It is commemorated in the Anglican Church Calendar, and is also that of his translation on the 4th of July. The former date is still called in law Martinmas from which it has been corrupted to Marthe or Marthemas. "Formerly," says Brady "the feast of this saint was denominated Martinmas, and was held with much festivity, in close resemblance to the Venalia of the Romans, which was instituted in honour of Jupiter and Venus." St. Martin is the patron saint of the London Vintners' Company. St. Martin's little summer is a term for the fine days which sometimes occur about the beginning of November.

A Play With a Record of Success.

It was on December 21st, 1892, that the play of "Charley's Aunt" was produced for the first time at the Royalty Theatre and Mr. W. S. Penly had a hit in it from the very start; it ran there for 4 years with 1,460 performances straight on. Since then it has been running steadily, has been translated into every European language, and has been played all round the world. Frank Thornton took the play on tour in Australia, and while proceeding up-country the train in which he and his company were travelling came to a dead stop in the heart of the Australian Bush. The engine had broken down, and this meant a delay of several hours, making the company despondent at the thoughts of hanging around there for hours doing nothing. All at once some genius was seized with the brilliant idea that the company should

St. John's Woman Gained 14 Pounds on Three Bottles

Was All Run-Down For Twelve Years—Tanlac Proved to be What She Needed to Build Her Up.

"When I began taking Tanlac I only weighed 111 pounds and I now weigh 125 pounds and have just finished my third bottle," said Mrs. Mary Chipman, who resides at 24 Clifford Street, St. John's, Newfoundland, while in Connors' Drug Store, in St. John's. Continuing, she said: "For twelve years I have been in a general run-down condition. My appetite was very poor and was so bad at times that the very sight of food would make me sick. I kept getting worse all the time and gradually grew weaker and weaker. I had no strength or energy and life had become a burden to me. My head would ache all the time as though it would burst open, and I had such sharp cutting pains in the small of my back that I could not stoop over, and would become so dizzy at times I would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. My nerves were so bad that any noise out of the ordinary would nearly drive me wild. Why, even the rustling of a newspaper around me would make me feel like screaming. I do not believe I would sleep two hours a night and many a night I would get up and walk around the house and then go back to bed and try to sleep, but would just roll and toss all night long."

"I had tried many different medicines for my trouble but never got any better. When I read about the good Tanlac was doing I made up my mind to try it. I bought some and began taking it, and it proved to be the very medicine I needed. Why, I can do more work than I ever dreamed of being able to do, and I feel so good all the time now I am a changed person. No matter what happens now I never get nervous and my nerves are steady as a clock. I just sleep fine all night, and get up in the morning feeling refreshed and full of energy. I can eat anything I want and never feel any bad effects from it. I never have the headache now and those dizzy spells are all gone. My friends all notice the improvement in my health and remark on how well I look, for before I began taking Tanlac I was pale but I now have a good healthy color. I hope that people who read this will try Tanlac, for after what it has done for me I know it will help others."

Tanlac is sold in St. John's by M. Connors, under the personal direction of a special Tanlac representative—adv.

give a performance on the spot of "Charley's Aunt." The costumes were brought out of the luggage van and the company creased in the cars while the other passengers hurriedly arranged boxes taken from the cars; the scenery was the natural background of the Australian Bush. The play never "went" better during their whole experience, the audience rocking on their "sets" with delight. Mr. Penley died on November 11th, 1912.

Laugh and Grow Fat.

WHICH WAS IT?

The defendant had tried every way of wriggling out of his dilemma, and at last began to plead his lack of education.

"Your Honour," he concluded, "please bear in mind that I'm a self-made man."

"Do you mean that as a boast or an apology?" demanded the judge.

HAD EARNED A REST.

Every day the same aged motor sported wearily along, and broke down always in the thick of the traffic.

"Look here," said the policeman on point duty, "this blessed thing is always breaking down about here. Let's see; what's your number? Yes, 1599."

"Go it!" came from the youthful driver of the next vehicle in the block. "That ain't its number; that's the year it was made!"

REALLY VACANT.

A would-be M.P. had been trying to capture the interest of his audience in vain for the last hour. At last he made a desperate bid for it.

"What are the so-called patriots at present in the House?" he yelled. "Humbugs, every one of them! Parasites of party! I pledge myself to no party. Rather would I write across my forehead, in letters easily read, the words 'To Let!'"

"And below them," came a cold voice, "Unfurnished!"

READY TO DEAL.

The Scottish groundman at a well-known golf club had a little dog of which he was very fond. Often he would say:

"I wudna tak' twenty shillins' fur ma wee duggie!"

On one occasion, after he had made his usual boast, a youthful wit took him up.

"Here you are, Sandy," he said, counting out twenty shillings on to the table. "I'd like that dog of yours."

But he didn't feel so smart when the old chap pocketed the cash, and replied, as he handed him sixpence:

"The dog's yours. I didna say I wudna tak' nineteen shillins' and sixpence fur him."

WANTED TOO MUCH.

While she waited for her train, the stout old lady slipped a penny in the slot of the automatic weighing machine, and stood expectantly on the tiny platform.

But the indicator on the dial did not budge. She got cross, and began to try to set the thing in motion by bouncing up and down.

In the middle of her energetic fight, along came a small boy, who watched her in silence for a few minutes. Then he called out:

"Put in another penny, ma! It'll take twopenny to weigh you!"

AMPLY FULFILLED.

The men in the smoking carriage talked of all sorts of things, finally reaching ambition.

"Yes, gentlemen," said one, "real ambition starts in childhood. And if we obey its impulse, we not only attain to it, but actually we go far beyond it. Yes, our ambition is gratified beyond our wildest dreams."

"Look at me," he went on. "In my boyhood I was ambitious to become a pirate. To-day—and he looked round the smoker proudly—"to-day I run a successful seaside hotel!"

NOT TO BE DONE.

Boldly he walked into the estate agent's office with a do-or-die expression.

"Good-morning!" he said, firmly. "Have you any houses to let?"

"If you pardon, sir?" asked the agent, thinking he couldn't have heard aright. "Did you say you wanted to know if I had any houses to let?"

"I did!" said the caller.

"Well, you must have made a mistake," murmured the business man. "I am an estate agent, not a conjurer!"

EASILY IDENTIFIED.

The old gentleman from Slowcombe-on-the-Mud was glad to meet an acquaintance in the Strand.

"Old Josiah Loganberry came up to town with me this morning, but we've missed each other somehow," he said, after a few minutes' chat. "If you happen to see him, just tell him I've gone to the City, and will meet him at the station at five o'clock."

"But I do not know him," replied the other man. "How shall I identify him?"

"If you see a red-haired old chap at Trafalgar Square, or Piccadilly Circus, or one of the other busy places, running out into the street to get across and then running back again, and starting and stopping and jumping sideways and hopping round like a frog on a hot brick, that's Josiah!"
