SEEDS, SEEDS.
Garden and Field Seeds.
The Subscriber, in returning thanks to the public for their patronage the past five years, wishes to inform them that he has just received his stock of Seeds from the most reliable Seed Merchants in the country. Also 100 in former years. There are no potatoes at all; we have all our seed to buy this year, and we don't know where to get any. The crop of straw was poor, and the cattle are almost dying for want,
and there is but little prospect of the weather getting any better yet; the snow is about three feet and a half in depth at present, and the roads are all blocked up with the last storms. It would be a good job if the snow would rapidly disappear, and if the cattle in the country were not in such a state of starvation. Oats are 60c. per bushel, and hay is $24 per ton, and rising in price every day; we are all feeding out against here. You have no idea, Mr.
Editor, how poorly off the farmers are in this part of Wellington, and what has made the matter worse was that there was nothing where-with to fatten cattle in this district, and as to lean cattle we could not sell them at any price, the buyers would not take them neither for the price of their hides or even for nothing.
For my own part I have had to buy over 100 bushels of oats to keep my horses and cattle alive, and many a lot besides me has to do the same or let their cattle die.

600 Tons Fresh Ground Plaster!
Particulars also a large quantity of "Laid Salt and" seed train.
For orders at the Montreal Warehouse, below
the Railway Crossing,

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

THE regular monthly social in connection with the Wesleyan Methodist Church will take place this evening, in the basement.

MAIL CONTRACT.—Mr. John Daw, of Cotswold, has been awarded the contract for carrying the mail from Harrison to Elort and back, daily, supplying the offices on the gravel road. The contract is $790.

MANITOBA.—A dispatch from Fort Garry of the 9th inst., says: "Some persons have commenced plunging, but not many, as the ground is not yet thawed. So great is the scarcity of hay, that cows have been sold for three loads of hay. A number of cattle have died from starvation."

FAREWELL LECTURE.—Mr. S. Capper, the well known temperance lecturer, will deliver his farewell lecture this evening in Thorp's Old Hall, now the Good Templar's Hall, on "Clever men." It is an excellent subject and will be well handled. We hope to see a large audience.

FOUND DEAD.—On Tuesday morning, the 9th inst., a man named John Thornton was found dead at Southampton. The coroner's jury returned the following verdict: "That John Thornton, of the village of Southampton, deceased, came to his death while alone, having fallen from some cause unknown to this jury, in such a position as might cause suffocation, and so remained until found."

ACCIDENT ON THE GREAT WESTERN.—As one of the freight trains on the Great Western was creeping up the grade near Copetown, on Tuesday night, a portion of the train became detached and commenced to run down the incline. It had not proceeded far on its backward travels when it came in contact with the pilot engine, then on its way to pilot the heavy train of the grade. Several cars were wrecked by the concussion, but fortunately no one was hurt.

DEATH OF MRS. JOHN FRASER.—A reference to our obituary notice of to-day reveals the sad announcement of the death of Mrs. Fraser, the widow of the late Mr. John Fraser, builder, long and favourably known in Guelph in former years. Mrs. Fraser leaves behind her 6 orphaned children, one of whom is at present in England with Dr. Clark's family; another is deaf and dumb; and a third is one of the leading and most popular of our local vocalists, and the other three (one of whom is a lad of 12 years) comprise the younger members of the family. We are satisfied the orphan family will receive the sincerest sympathy of the entire community.

HARD TIMES IN LETTER.—A correspondent from this Township writes as follows: "The times this year are the hardest I ever saw, the crops were very poor in this part of the country last year, indeed what with frost and drought the crops might be said to be almost a total failure, there not being 1 bushel for every 100 in former years. There are no potatoes at all; we have all our seed to buy this year, and we don't know where to get any. The crop of straw was poor, and the cattle are almost dying for want, and there is but little prospect of the weather getting any better yet; the snow is about three feet and a half in depth at present, and the roads are all blocked up with the last storms. Accompanying the presentation was the following address.

Mr. H. L. Walker.
DEAR SIR,—We, the employees under your charge, wish to testify in some manner to your gentlemanly conduct and our appreciation of it. In doing so, we have been prompted by a pure desire to show the esteem in which you are held by us. In you we find one that is ever frank, honourable and straightforward in your dealings; as a foreman, courteous, considerate and forbearing. Although displaying a certain amount of dignity while here, you are ever ready to meet us on an equal outside. And whatever proficiency we may have attained at our daily labour is due to your careful training; and, in return, we would ask you to accept this pin, not for its intrinsic value, but as a token of respect from the givers. In conclusion, we sincerely hope that you may be long spared to direct the affairs of this shop, and may you and your family enjoy peace and prosperity.

Signed on behalf of those under your charge,

A short time was afterwards spent in amusements of various kinds, and the party broke up at an early hour, wishing long life and happiness to Mr. Walker and his family.

The Missouri Murder.

How Mrs. Campbell bears herself.

The correspondent of the Telegraph says:—The condition of the condemned Mrs. Campbell is much the same as heretofore. She retains the same passive, almost imperturbable demeanor, and is quite sanguine that her sentence will be commuted. The general impression is, that it will be held over her head as long as possible, with a view to extract a confession from her, and finally, whether successful or not, will be commuted to imprisonment for life. On the other hand many declare that any confession she may make ought not to have any official credence placed in it, her antecedent doings, prevarications and lies being so monstrous as to extinguish all belief in her veracity. Her stories have certainly been so erratic that any confession she may make, and some disclosure from her is anticipated, will be regarded as doubtful, unless substantially corroborated.

A person with whom she had a right to speak with confidence and should give a faithful opinion, conversed with her on Saturday night. She asked if the sentence would not be commuted. He said no, she would surely be hanged. "Then," she returned, "they will hang me innocently." The jail physician thinking she might be suffering from nervous prostration after the fatigue of the week, offered to give her a soothing draft to induce sleep. This she refused, as she said her nerves were quite strong, and her conscience clear enough to sleep without it.

Cole has been offered his liberty on bail of his own residence in $2,400, and two sureties in $1,000 or four in $500 each, to appear at the next Assize; it not being the intention of the authorities to place him on trial at the present sittings.

The London Illustrated, speaking of the trial and sentence, says:—Now that the trial is over, and the verdict of an impartial jury has confirmed the generally formed belief, few, if any, are found to question the correctness of the conclusion arrived at. No doubt there has been a wide-spread hope that for the sake of humanity and the credit of our boasted civilization, time would so far mature the mystery that surrounded the murder as to remove the dreadful suspicion, amounting almost to conviction, which rested upon the accused. The mystery of the murder, notwithstanding the exertions of all interested to penetrate it, still exists, and with it persists a lingering doubt as to the culpability of the condemned—probably due more to the natural sympathy felt for the distressed than from any definite idea that the guilt has by any possibility fallen upon the entirely innocent. The most merciful interpretation offered of the wretched woman's share in the great crime perpetrated is that she was an unwilling witness of the brutal deed, acting under restraint in screening the real murderers, and therefore more justly punishable with the mildersentence allowed to an accessory after the fact. We reluctantly confess we are not of those who hold such an opinion. The chances of the murder and the relationship of the accused to the unfortunate victim, render such a supposition highly improbable, or, if at all probable, offer no sufficient excuse to lessen the guilt of the condemned. The crime was of a nature seldom paralleled, in cold blooded ferocity and brutality, and if a resort to capital punishment was ever necessary to further the ends of justice, it would be in dealing with the perpetrators of just such fiendish atrocities as find a parallel in the Missouri Tragedy.

Railway Meeting at Ospringe.
Our correspondent has sent us a report of the railway meeting at Ospringe on Friday last, which owing to the late hour it was received, we are obliged to condense. The meeting was largely attended. Mr. L. Currie was chosen chairman, and Mr. John Mann Secretary.

Mr. George Martin was the first speaker, and he thought that the railway facilities she required, being surrounded on all sides by such good roads leading to each of them.

Mr. McLaren, of Caledon, spoke in favor of the Credit Valley Railway. He was followed by Messrs. D. McMillan, H. Milroy and A. Wood, of Erin, and Jull, of Orangeville, who argued strongly in favor of the Credit Valley Road.

Mr. Miller thought it strange that the admirers of the T. G. & B. R. did not use that road. He saw scores of farmers from Caledon driving their grain to Norval, Acton and even Rockwood this winter.

Mr. Edward Johnston made an excellent speech in favor of the Guelph and Orangeville road, and he was followed by Messrs. Goldie and McLagan, who ably advocated the same road.

Mr. D. McMillan, seconded by Mr. C. McMillan, moved that in the opinion of this meeting a railway would add greatly to the wealth and prosperity of this Township, and when put it was declared lost.

ANOTHER MEETING.
At a meeting called by the rate payers of School Section No. 10, on the 30th ult., Mr. Thos. Bomet was called to the chair, Mr. George Martin acted as secretary. The meeting was addressed by Messrs. Luchlan Currie, George Martin, James French and others. It was moved and resolved that this meeting pledge themselves to use all

THE SESSION.

To-day the last session of the first Parliament of the Dominion opens at Ottawa. Whether it will be long or a short one remains to be seen, but it is the generally accepted opinion that the Government will rush the business through as fast as they can.

Still, they cannot prevent discussion on several very important questions which will come under notice. First in importance is the Washington Treaty. The official reserve, so long maintained, with regard to the action of the Premier in this matter, must at last be broken.

Other questions of no less importance will also claim attention during the session. Changes in the representation based on the recent census will doubtless be made. New Bismarck's claim for better terms will be presented, and the constitution may be again introduced.

These and other questions of minor importance will come up in due course, and ere long we may expect lively times. The proceedings will be watched with special interest, and we shall do our best to keep our readers fully posted in regard to everything of importance that transpires.

 CHAPTER XXV.
 MANGLES' REVELATIONS.

"If I remember it, it is only with gratitude for my escape. Had I gone on I might have been as bad as you, and been lying there in the state you are at this moment. Eh, Weggie, you know?"

"Well, you no edn't faint me," growled Mangles, a little put out at this. "If I have been fast in my day, ain't I paying for it now? Things are being squared without repentance, I think."

"Wrong, Mangles; altogether wrong," said the Squire earnestly. "The bodily wreck which has overtaken you is but the penalty for the violation of the laws of physical health. There's the moral evil you have done beyond all that, and you cannot but know that nothing you have suffered or will suffer can atone for that. Make the best of your time, I advise you."

"Well, Squire," responded Mangles, "you'll say but you may be about right, and I may think about it by and bye. Hilloa, there's Mother McGoon in her caps."

The last observation was caused by a loud and increasing noise of wild laughter and singing, which sounded first outside, but was every moment drawing nearer.

"You didn't tip her, did you?" asked Mangles, as they all stood to listen.

"Egad, yes," exclaimed the Squire, "I nearly smothered her in the passage; and gave her a half-a-crown to soothe her feelings."

"Then she has melted it, and has got sky high. Ah, she's in the passage, now you'll see her immediately."

"'Tis time we make our exit," said the lawyer, making for the door, followed by the rest, just as Mother McGoon emerged from the passage into the apartment, without her "mantle"—her long hair, mixed with grey, hanging in disorder about her face, a little in one hand, and a looking smile of drunken happiness on her repulsive countenance.

"Och, by the powers, and the gentlemen are here yet," she exclaimed on getting sight of them. Then fastening more particularly on the Squire, she emitted a shrill scream of laughter, and shouted—

"Throth, and it's a brave broth av a love ye are anyow. Here, any party jowed, drink av hilloa, ye divil, in the prime pathreen."

"No, no, no," roared the Squire, backing against the wall, as she staggered towards him, flourishing the bottle in such a way that some of the contents flew out into his face.

"Won't ye, though? And d'ye call that manly, ye drunken spalpeen? It's give me a kiss ye will, anyhow."

"Get away with you," roared the Squire, as she approached in her frightful ugliness, holding his stick in front to keep her off, amid the loud laughter of the others, who were highly tickled by her audaciousness of his position. He had backed into a corner and could not get past her.

"What! ye won't give me a kiss either? Och, but that's illigant manners ye are showin'. Its early shy ye are, though, seem' as how I know ye are mighty fond av me, and don't like to show it afore folk. Niver mind, me darlint, I'll give you one."

And, uttering deep the bottle on the floor, she, in her drunken hilarity, made towards him with outstretched arms and amatory intentions.

"Now, me own dear, lovin' darlint!" she shrieked.

"Get away, you filthy brute!" thundered the Squire.

Then he made a dash to get past; but, with a wild cry, and a terrible spring, she fastened her arms round his neck, and hung there, defying his utmost efforts to shake her off.

The mirth of the others was now uncontrollable. The Squire's horror as, in disgust, he averted his face from the threatened salute, and the woman's determined efforts to kiss him, were laughable in the extreme, and Mangles joined in the peals.

"Get away, I tell you, you dirty stinking hag, he roared. "Pull her off, some of you. Let go, you ugly old Irish wretch."

Too much cannot be said as to their superiority over the ordinary glasses worn—there is no glimmering, wavering of the sight, dizziness, or other unpleasant sensation, but on the contrary, from the peculiar construction of the Lenses, they are soothing and pleasant, causing a feeling of relief to the wearer and producing a clear and distinct vision as in the natural and healthy sight. They are the only spectacles that preserve as well as assist the sight, and are the cheapest because the best, always lasting many years without change being necessary.
