As Hiram Sees It

The expression on Mr. Hiram Henson's face when the Times reporter met him this morning was not that of a man in a cheerful mood. Rather was it the expression of one who had been through a bad time.

"You are not looking well," said the reporter. "Had a bad turn?"

"No," said Hiram. "I'm as smart as a cricket. I was just worried over some thing."

"Anything I can do for you?" asked the reporter. "Say, Hiram—did you ever give any wedding presents?"

"Most of my friends," said the reporter, "nearly all my good wishes go to you."

"That's just the trouble," said Hiram. "I never know what to get. The old woman once gave a gal a soft cushion and the room he had to go buy a soft cushion and she was as mad as a wet hen."

"The settlement about to lose one of its pretty girls?" asked the reporter. "I'm sure well, they are all in some's hands. Then the boys home from the war are 'wants to get married to the best girl in town' and they are to be taught some of your gal how to live in the country so's the farmers kin give them a hand."

"I'm glad to hear that," said the reporter. "I call that a good thing. It's a good thing for the boys and the girls. It's a good thing for the country. It's a good thing for the world."

"No, sir," said Hiram. "Not out our way. A wedding out there ain't a match to see who kin spend the most money. We put it the other way round. When a man and a woman get married, they dig down, but when they're gettin' married we just give 'em a little reminder of what life is like. Then they'll be glad to see each other."

Sit Ashes of their Own Folly

Minister of Labor's Comment on Promoters of General Strike in Winnipeg — Situation in Various Places

Winnipeg, June 2.—Hon. Gideon Robertson, dominion minister of labor, in a statement made to the press before leaving for Ottawa to confer with federal authorities, said that the promoters of the general strike in Winnipeg "now sit in the ashes of their folly," that "sympathetic strikes must always fail" and that the Winnipeg strike is "the first rehearsal of the play written at Calgary," where the one big union movement was launched last month.

Want the Longer Week. Hamilton, Ont., June 2.—Little favor with the 48 hour week is found among members of the civic employes union. They applied to the board of control for permission to work 48 hours a week, six days a week, with the first day of eight hours and four on Saturday, ending at noon. Before the labor trouble started, they were working 48 hours a week, but the board refused their request.

At Fort William. Fort William, Ont., June 2.—The probability of a general strike here seemed more remote last night. Strike votes among the unions individually have shown considerable opposition. The post office employes voted against a strike by a large majority. At the same time the leaders who are waiting for the interval of a week in sympathy with Winnipeg hope that the total vote in favor of the strike will be sufficient to carry all unions out.

Graters on Workington. Says Algoma M. P. Chaplain, Ont., June 2.—That "the men who are responsible for the Winnipeg situation are graters on the working men and not the working men themselves" was the opinion expressed by George B. Nicholson, M. P. for East Algoma, in addressing his constituents on Wednesday. A large audience of members of labor unions connected with railway service, listened to his speech.

Arrests in Toronto. Toronto, June 1.—Calling itself "the central committee of the communist party" and professing as its object "to organize and prepare the working class in Canada for social revolution and to establish a dictatorship of the proletariat," a body of men, four Americans, one Scotchman, two Austrians, one Pole and one Russian and one Italian, were arrested here today. They were charged with having objectionable literature in their possession.

Conditions in Moncton Told Of. Moncton, June 2.—Complaints about the inadequacy of pensions paid to men employed here by the Canadian Government Railways and a statement that some of the pensioners had to go to the poor house or take odd jobs featured the evidence submitted to the industrial relations commission here this morning. This evidence was given by A. E. MacLeod, of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes.

In Honor of Soldiers. A surprise party was held recently at the home of Mrs. M. J. Flewelling, Bellview Avenue, in honor of her two sons, Pte. Edward Morrell, of the original 26th battalion, and Ont. Herman Flewelling, of the 9th Siege battery, who arrived from overseas. Both boys were made recipients of gold cuff links. The presentation was made by John McMenammon. Music and games were enjoyed and refreshments served.

The Traps Shooters. The weekly shoot of the St. John Traps Shooting Association was held on Saturday afternoon at Glen Falls. Although a very strong wind prevailed some really good scores were made. For the convenience of those who find it difficult to attend the Saturday shoot, it has been decided to hold a shoot every Wednesday evening at 6:30, daylight time, weather permitting. The following are Saturday's scores:

County Court. In the county court this morning His Honor Judge Armstrong presiding, the case of the King vs. Tait was taken up with a jury. The defendant is charged with stealing several hundred dollars from a retired soldier named Colwell. The defendant is a farmer who resides at Apolquo and Colwell also comes from the same county. C. H. Ferguson and L. P. D. Tilley are appearing for the prosecution and William M. Ryan for the defendant.

On Honeymoon. Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Marsalis arrived in the city on the Boston train this morning from Newburyport, Mass., to spend their honeymoon here. The bride was formerly Miss Burke of North End. They are receiving best wishes for the future from many friends.

MOVEMENT FOR A WAR INQUIRY

Resolution at Washington to Investigate Expenditure by War Department

Party Leaders Approve it—Republicans May Extend Inquiry to President's War Fund and War Risk Bureau

Washington, June 2—Republicans have made their first move in congress towards their proposed investigation of war expenditures. A resolution, approved by the party leaders, was introduced by Representative Graham of Illinois, calling for the appointment by Speaker Gillett of a special committee of fifteen members "to investigate fully all contracts and expenditures made by the war department or under its direction during the present war."

Although calling for the appointment of a special committee, party leaders said the resolution merely contemplated enlargement of the standing house committee on war department expenditures, consisting of four Republicans and two Democrats, and headed by Mr. Graham. Provision for the larger committee, Floor Leader Mondell said, was made "because there are a number of branches in the department which it may be deemed wise to examine separately" through sub-committees.

The purpose of the investigation, as in the case of all the committees that will undertake work of that character, added Mr. Mondell, "is accurately stated in the legislative programme promulgated by the Republican conference at the beginning of this congress, as to such investigations as to inform the people of war expenditures, and serve the public interest."

The resolution was referred to the rules committee, headed by Representative Campbell of Kansas, who said he anticipated that the resolution would be called to the attention of his committee next week.

Party leaders intimated that the investigations might assume wider scope than inquiry, merely, into the war department. It was said that the committee might later investigate expenditures of the $100,000,000 war fund given to the president for discretionary disposal, and also for an investigation of the war risk insurance bureau.

Addresses were delivered by Jas. L. Sugrue, Peter C. Shanley, John O'Brien and Fred Campbell yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the teamsters, chauffeurs, stablemen and helpers. The teamsters' union, which is only seven months old has a membership of more than 300.

BEWARE OF TENDER, INFLAMED GUMS

Poor teeth, with a premature loss of teeth, is almost inevitable if you do not properly care for your gums. Here is the explanation: As you age, the body tissues naturally relax. You see this tissue loosening in the neck. It goes on in your gums, too. As you grow older, your gums shrink below the normal gum line. Through lack of care they become spongy and inflamed. Then you have Pyorrhoea (Riggs' Disease). Four out of five people over forty have Pyorrhoea. And many under forty, also.

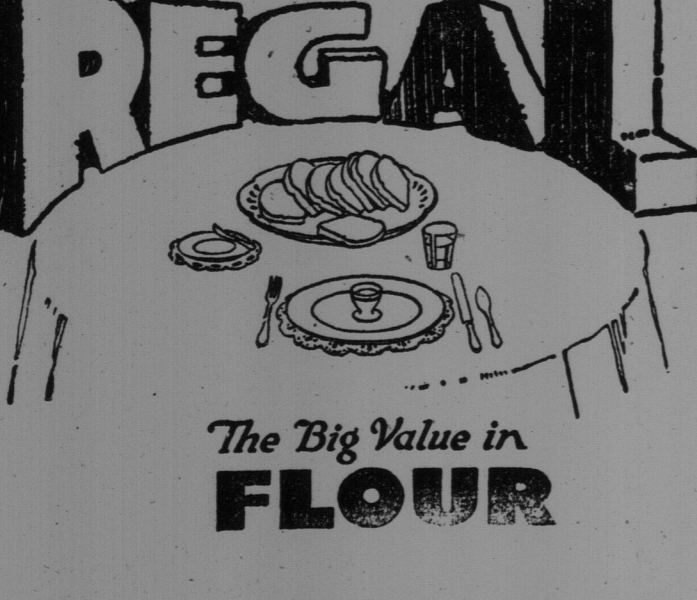

Don't let a tender gum spot develop. These tender spots breed decay, germ which enter the system through tiny openings—infected the joints or tonsils—causing other ailments. Immediately get Forhan's, which positively prevents Pyorrhoea if used in time and used consistently. Forhan's tones the gums and hardens them. They in turn keep the teeth healthy. Brush your teeth with Forhan's. It cleans them scientifically—keeps them white and clean.

If gum-shrinkage has already set in, start using Forhan's and a good dentist immediately for special treatment. It is clean, scientific, and painless. Forhan's, Ltd., 307 St. James St., Montreal.

EARLY CHINESE POETRY

(Specially for the Boston Christian Science Monitor)

The morning glory climbs above my head, Pale flowers of white and purple, blue and red. I am disquieted.

Down in the withered grass something stirred; I thought it was my footfall that I heard. Then a grasshopper chirped.

I climbed the hill just as the new moon showed, I saw him coming on the southern road. My heart lays down its load.

It is difficult to realize that such words as these, rich with the wisdom of Browning and the sweetness of Shelley, lovely with the song of nature in each line, and seeming to sing as modern a lyric as Miss Lowell, were written in the tenth century before the Christian era. But the poet is an ageless man—the poet of the world, and the poet of the world's poetry. He endures, remains unproductive. He endures, remains unproductive.

There are two sorts of literature—and so many more that there are few boundaries—active and contemplative. And I have found in reading early Chinese poets that, while writing of active moments of dramatic conditions, and because they were a contemplative people, they were always able to present these moments with an honesty that poets often evade. Of course this fact of contemplation is true of many Orientalists, but the Chinese contribution to oriental literature is unlike that of Persia or Japan or India. It is too unswerving to resemble the poetry of Persia, too universal to be like the Japanese, and too direct to counter-part Indian writing.

The beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptones and glycerophosphates contained in Vinol were just what this little boy needed to restore him to health. We strongly recommend the sky, or no light in the stars coming down. And this Chinese poem:

White clouds are in the sky. Great shadows on the hills. Between us two must lie. The road is rough and far. Deep folds between us are. I pray you not to die.

The two forms used to hold the translated thoughts are quite different; and Helen Waddell in the Chinese poem has accomplished the difficult task which rhyming of a translation with entire poetry sound, but I feel a certain lovely likeness between the Irish and the Chinese poets. Each is a realist, each tells us that poetry is not an exotic luxury, and each shyly plays on a flute a theme which might have been sounded in another land on a penny whist. And it is a fact for conjecture that a certain number of modern poets have taken the early Chinese lyrics for model and consciously attained themselves to the nature that the celestial possessed by a fine and fructuous contemplation.

ROAMER'S RECORD DUE FOR ATTACK BY SIR BARTON

New York, June 1—The improvement which will add to the comforts of the patrons of the Empire City Racing Association are well under way for the opening on July 1, when the summer meeting of the Empire City Handicap, a mile and a furlong, the outstanding feature of the opening day, and which is being entered for a good race, has every high-class horse in training engaged. Should the weather be propitious the race, which is inaugurated with a program by Andrew Miller's champion Roamer and S. C. Hildreth's Delamater, in 1918 and 1919, respectively, should be surpassed as the track is lightning fast. Everybody knows all about Roamer's performance in the Empire City Handicap, with 128 pounds up, was among his very best efforts. As he stands today he was undoubtedly a first-class three-year-old, and carried 118 pounds when he achieved his victory over a good deal of Delamater was, in the opinion of the experts that the Empire City Handicap and the Empire City Derby in 1919 will see a better sport of the same grade under silk in Commander J. K. L. Ross' Sir Barton.

I. W. W. To Spread Their Propaganda

Convention Takes Steps to Carry on Fight for Industrial as Against Craft Organization

Chicago, June 2—Much was done at the recent general convention of the Industrial Workers of the World here to further the organization's propaganda. During the latter part of the war period thrown on a defense basis, the I. W. W. has been returning to a militant attitude since the armistice. Its tone today was characterized by the managing committee of the official weekly organ, The New Solidarity, in his report to the convention, when he said that he had purposefully refrained from giving greater space to I. W. W. in prison in order to make the paper "expressive more of the hope of the militant and aggressive workers within the organization."

Decisions of the general convention affecting the I. W. W. propaganda may be summed up as follows:

- 1.—To push literature on industrial unionism vigorously.
- 2.—To extend the I. W. W. foreign language press.
- 3.—To centralize control of all I. W. W. publications.
- 4.—To compose fresh literature and bring the old down to date.
- 5.—To give the editorial staff at headquarters more men.
- 6.—To push the circulation among the membership.
- 7.—To consider new ways of extending the propaganda.
- 8.—To publish literature regarding the management of industry.
- 9.—To safeguard the circulation of periodicals in case of interference.

THE KING'S BIRTHDAY.

Wherever the British national anthem is sung tomorrow it will be sung with special fervor, in honor of the birthday of a king beloved of his people. No other living monarch possesses in so large degree the universal good-will of the people. We no longer speak of them as his subjects, since the British Empire is a great democracy, and the King is but a life-long president, peculiarly well-fitted for his task. The Canadian people have a hearty dislike for titles, but they honor the king, and have no quarrel with portions of the Empire where a titled aristocracy still persists. So far as King George is concerned, they revered his father and his grandfather, for the same high qualities he possesses, and as the years pass they find in his conduct and that of Queen Mary constant evidence of a high conception of duty and an unselfish regard for the welfare of all the people. This was made especially apparent during the war, when king and queen were constantly absorbed in the duties, and in giving expression to heartfelt sympathy for all who suffered. The Canadian soldiers not only saw them in England, but they saw King George at the front, while the Prince of Wales was attached to the Canadian headquarters staff and endeavored himself to all by his courage, his manly and manly manner, and his willingness to share the dangers of the field. The British royal family has no autocratic tendencies, and that is the secret of its strength when other thrones have been shaken and their occupants overthrown. Social and industrial disputes in England do not involve the person of the King. He is recognized as the official head of a governmental system under which the real rulers rest with the people, and no resentment toward him is manifested, even when bitter passions are aroused. And so when there is public clamor for a change of government or for an approach to an industrial revolution the surging crowds can still heartily sing the national anthem. Tomorrow throughout the Empire the King's Birthday will be celebrated with an added fervor because of the closer sympathy of the various states one with another, born of their united struggle for the triumph of the principles of democracy.

THE ALL-NEW BRUNSWICK LEAGUE

St. John will welcome this evening and tomorrow visitors from all parts of the province, who come to take counsel together concerning ways and means of advancing the material welfare of New Brunswick. This is a province rich in resources of a wonderfully varied nature, but its population does not increase as it should, nor are its resources being developed to the extent that is desirable. The conference of the next two days should have one important result, and that is a fuller and more general realization of all portions of the province in a forward movement. The citizens of St. John are not conscious of any desire to profit at the expense of other communities, although there are sometimes hints of a suspicion in the minds of the people of other sections that such is the case. It would be extremely foolish for St. John to pursue a dog-in-the-manger policy, since whatever tends to develop the province as a whole or in any section must also confer a benefit on the chief commercial centre. Naturally St. John people want the city to grow and flourish, and labor to that end; but in that they are not peculiar. Every live community does the same, and if ever there appears to be a conflict of interests there is still no reason that the rivalry should not be friendly and that in all other matters there should not be the most hearty co-operation. And so St. John welcomes its visitors, as its own representatives will be welcomed at some other centre in the province a year hence; for let us hope a permanent organization will be effected and a general policy adopted that will make the All-New Brunswick League a source of inspiration and a promoter of plans for development that will become more and more potent for all-round service as the years pass. It was a happy thought to have presented on the screen such a series of views of the province as will make every visitor and every citizen who sees them realize more fully what New Brunswick possesses that is of interest to the tourist, the sportsman and the investor, and at the same time indicate what our own people have as assets when they form a promotion league and set out to challenge the attention of the possible investor from abroad. St. John expects to enjoy a large development as a railway terminus and ocean port. That ought to be assisted by its geographical position, and will be good for the whole province. There is every reason for a close and hearty co-operation between all sections in order that development may reach out to all of them, and all progress together along the road that leads to growth and prosperity. In welcoming the visitors the city will show them the evidences of recent growth and of good prospects. They will see much room for improvement in many ways, and will realize some of the problems with which our people are confronted.

them a kindly remembrance of their reception, a feeling that the interests of each section of New Brunswick are the interests of all, and that only united effort is needed to put the province more obtrusively upon the map as a land of opportunity and achievement.

A PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

The conference now being held in Paris differs from all others in the whole course of history. There are no emperors or kings in the background pulling the strings this way or that. Britain and Italy have kings, but they have no desires apart from the will of their people. The autocrat is gone. He has made his final exit from the stage and the sovereign people settle the destinies of nations. Their representatives are not for a moment out of touch with popular sentiment, and if one must yield here and another there it is because the interests of the whole, in the opinion of the majority, render such a course necessary. The war thrust the dictator into the background, and if he has poor imitators in Lenin and Trotsky their reign is drawing to a close. The people must be supreme and democracy is an empty word. There is still and always must be leadership, but no leader can retain power who does not represent the feelings and the aspirations of the majority of those who give him place and honor. The great men who are today assembled in Paris represent what is best in democracy and the people trust them. Upon them lies a heavy burden of responsibility, for they hold the keys of the future of the nations. Foremost among them are the men who speak for the Anglo-Saxon race, the great leader in true democracy.

An interesting side-light on the strike situation is thrown by a Toronto despatch which tells of the arrest of four Americans, one Scotchman, two Austrians, one Pole, three Russians and the Italian who call themselves the central committee of the Communist Party, which aims at "social revolution and to establish a dictatorship of the proletariat." Canadian labor will not accept that kind of leadership. Senator Robertson describes the promoters of a general strike in Winnipeg as sitting now in "the seats of their folly." The news appears to bear out his description of the situation.

The men who piloted the American seaplanes from Newfoundland to the Azores and thence to Portugal and on to Plymouth received a hearty greeting in London. The announcement that the British Admiralty has taken over a giant ship, and that an attempt to cross the Atlantic from England will be made within a fortnight adds new interest to the whole subject of long-distance flying.

The German reply to the Allies is not as truculent as was suggested by previous cables. It is not a refusal to sign, but a plea that Germany cannot carry out the terms because of their severity. A reply of that sort is to be expected. The Germans desire to be let down as easily as possible, but they will not refuse to sign.

The general strike situation in Canada is much improved. The sympathetic strike is not making the headway its promoters expected.

QUEEN SQUARE SPORT

The West End Improvement League is making sport go in fine style. On the Queen Square diamond on Saturday there were two ball games, one by older and the other by junior boys.

Tomorrow there will be two great games, one at 10.30 in the morning, daylight time, between Fairville and St. Peter's, and the other at 7.15 p. m. daylight time, between St. Peter's and Y. M. C. I. In the afternoon there will be games by the committee of the league, of which W. L. Harding is chairman, says that plans are being perfected to provide a running track and for push ball, football and, if possible, a tennis court.

LIGHTER VEIN.

"Every one gets nervous the first time he is under fire, just exactly as most hunters get buck fever and forget to shoot the first time they see big game," said Gen. Harrold recently, and added: "During the war there were thousands of cases like that of the young rookie, who, on the eve of his first engagement was shaking like a leaf in a gale. He wasn't frightened; it was just a case of nerves, but the sergeant thought he was in a funk. 'Jenkins,' he said, 'is it trembling you are for your skin?' 'No, no, sergeant,' stammered the rookie, making a brave attempt to control his shaking limbs; 'I'm trembling for the Germans—they don't know I'm here!'"

During the recent debate on the farm tenantry resolution in the House of Representatives, one eloquent orator sought to enlist all farm members on his side.

"Every member of this House who was raised on a farm please hold up his right hand," he cried.

Most of the members raised their hands.

"How many of you still live on the farm?" he next asked.

About half the members still did.

"How many of you who left the farm want to go back?"

This time not a hand went up.

"The farms are in great luck," gasped the orator.

COMPLAIN OF BLASTING.

There are complaints from residents in the neighborhood of Riverside concerning blasting operations being carried on near there. Mrs. A. G. Ewing, who lives between Riverside and Renforth, said this morning that on last Friday afternoon considerable damage was done to the house occupied by her, some panes of glass being broken and the roof pierced by flying stones, while she and her daughter narrowly escaped injury or death. She said a portion of the roof and ceiling had been carried away by a large stone which came through to an iron door, while other houses had also suffered damage.

"ILL LUCK" STORY OF HOPE DIAMOND

History of Jewel Recalled by Accident Which Brought Death to Richest Boy

Is There Anything in the Superstition That the Hope Diamond Brings Bad Luck to Its Owner?

The Jewellers' Circular Weekly says that there is not. This belief has been cherished by many people acquainted with the sinister history of the diamond for several hundred years and a few days ago, a tragedy occurred that strengthened this conviction. Nine-year-old Victor Waldman was run over by a motor in Washington and died a few hours afterward.

The Grand Monarch's Gem.

One day soon after he had been born his father bought the Hope diamond as a present for his wife. When reference was made to the price paid was $200,000, which followed it he said that his luck had been too good to be impaired by a stone. His wife said that anything but a husband gave her could not be un lucky. And now, as a sob sister would put it, their little son lies dead.

How the Jewel Fell into the Hands of Andre Tavernier, who Brought it to Europe and Sold it to the Emperor of France, Will Never be Known.

He had a story about its being the eye of an Indian idol, but since it was uncut when Louis XIV. bought it, this is probably a fabrication. Originally the diamond weighed 112 carats, but when cut and polished was reduced to 67 carats. The great beauty was in its wonderful blue tint, like a piece of ice crystal seen in the sunlight.

Stations of Trade.

In the village of Versailles the diamond, then known as the French Blue, vanished, and its whereabouts remained a mystery until about 1880, when it turned up in the possession of Daniel Ellin, a London jeweler. By this time it had been still further reduced in size, for it weighed 44 carats, and it is supposed that it had been cut in order that it might more easily be disposed of. It was bought by Henry Thomas Hope, a London banker for $65,000, with the result that he soon found himself in financial difficulties. His daughter, to whom he presented it, was married to the Sixth Duke of Devonshire, who left it to her brother, Lord Francis Hope. Under the influence of the diamond or something equally sparkling he married Miss May Yobe, a vaudeville actress, and had nothing but trouble. The pair lived most unhappily, until she eloped with Captain Putham Bradley Strong, son of a former mayor of New York. She figured in a second divorce and loudly blamed the Hope diamond for all her woes.

Another Throne Falls.

After he had gone insane and committed suicide the gem fell into the hands of Prince Ivan Kanitovsky. He gave it to Mile Lada, but this did not prevent him from being assassinated by Nihilists. Mile Lada, was slain by a lover. The next victim was Simon Monchalsides, a Greek, who perished soon after becoming the owner of the diamond. In a runaway accident that also destroyed his family, Selim Habib, a Persian, was the next victim. On his way to Constantinople with the diamond his ship was rammed, but both Habib and the jewel escaped, probably because he was not the real owner, but merely the agent of the Sultan of Turkey, who is said to have paid $400,000 for it. The sultan handed over the gem to the royal jeweler for repolishing, and soon after the job the jeweler was put to death. Abdul then lavished the diamond upon Salma Zubayda, a favorite of the harem, a short time before he murdered her. Then came the Turkish revolution, and once more the jewel disappeared only to turn up in the trusty keeping of Habib, who had also a story of how it got into his possession. He sold it in Paris for $80,000 and soon afterward it was purchased by the man who sold it to Mr. McLean.

BARON RIBBLESDALE AND MRS. JOHN ASTOR WED

London, June 2.—(By the Associated Press)—Among paid marriage notices in the Times this morning is one saying that Mrs. John Astor was married to Lord Ribblesdale on Saturday in St. Mary's church, Bryanston square, London.

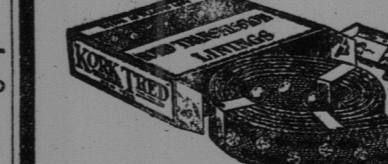

The Daily Express, the only newspaper announcing the marriage in its news column, identifies Mrs. Astor as the first wife of the late John Jacob Astor of New York.

Baron Ribblesdale owns a large estate and is a keen sportsman.

MISSION OPENED.

In the Church of the Assumption, West St. John, last night a mission was successfully opened by Redemptorist fathers. A special sermon was preached by Rev. John P. Coghlan, S. J., formerly of St. Peter's, but now stationed in Toronto, while he and Rev. Joseph McLaughlin, C. S. S. R., a son of the late Wm. McLaughlin of this city, conducted the services. The attendance was very large.

"KORK-TRED" TRANSMISSION LINING For FORDS

"IT STOPS THE SLIP"
Unreliable brakes are a menace to your safety. When the unexpected happens, can you count on your brakes? At the moment they are needed most will they act quickly, surely and safely.

If your Ford brakes need relining, do not buy "just ordinary" brake lining that is neither dependable in emergency or economical in use. Your safety is too important for that. Ask for "Kork-Tred," the original cork transmission lining for Fords, and the only cork insert lining containing the Lubrication Oil Cup feature. "Kork-Tred" gives a velvet grip and a bulldog hold—permits your car to glide to a quick, smooth stop without that annoying clatter and "squeal" that jars your nerves and other people's, too; besides "Kork-Tred" saves you money, because one set will outwear four sets of ordinary lining.

COMPETITION FOR POTASH MARKETS IS PROBABLE

As an outcome of the war there will be real world competition in potash, according to a despatch in the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry. Alsace shortly will be a large producer. The Spanish deposits have been developed to a point where they will be factors in the situation. An even more formidable potential competitor will be the African deposits, the full possibilities of which were not recognized before the war. It is probable that these deposits will come under Italian suzerainty. Thus four powerful nations will be interested in marketing potash. That prices will reflect the keen competition which will develop, is a foregone conclusion. It is predicted, therefore, by competent authorities here that as soon as the shipping situation eases up, potash will be laid down at our ports at a surprisingly low price. While it is admitted that many American potash operations will be forced to close, it is not believed that this will apply to all of them. If a market can be developed for products other than potash, which is regarded as probable, it is thought the Serriter-Lake operations can continue. There also is the greatest faith in the production of potash as a blast furnace and cement mill by-product.

Modart Corsets

A Laced in Front Corset That is Setting New Standards

JUST to look at these Corsets one can see style in the very lines. To feel them, to bend them back and forth, then one is sure of the ease and comfort embodied.

The light, flexible clock-spring steels not only allow perfect freedom of motion, but they always come back to their proper places, which means no ugly bend in the waist-line of these Corsets, and the boning in Modart Corsets does not rust—a point in their favor the year round.

We have found the Modart Corset so satisfactory in every way that an unusually large number of models are to be found here. Styles to fit the needs of every figure and to fit the individual needs of each woman. In fact, many of our patrons are fitted each time to three corsets—the athletic, the dress and the evening models.

To do yourself and figure justice, you should buy your model and have it fitted in our Corset Department on third floor, where you will find complete fitting service, a competent trained corsetiere and suitable fitting-room.

A FINE VESSEL.
A three master schooner, Ononette, recently built at Hibiscus, N. S., for J. Willard Smith, has completed loading for Preston, England. She is a splendid looking craft of 488 tons register and will in all probability get away on her maiden voyage today. The new vessel has very attractive lines, is motor only equipped and from all indications will be a fine sea boat. She is to be commanded by E. R. Longmuir, mate by Arthur M. Gibson and G. G. G. The Ononette is one of the best looking vessels that has ever been built in these parts and her construction and fittings are heard about her from shipping men along the harbor front.

FAREWELL DINNER.
Heartily wishes of happiness for himself and his bride-to-be were extended to Capt. Reg. A. Major, M. C., formerly of the 26th Battalion, at a farewell bachelor dinner tendered him at the grand hotel, Pleasant Point, on Saturday evening. Major H. H. Donnelly presided and Major P. D. McAivry in the vice chair. Over were laid for fourteen, those present being all returned officers of various units, the majority, however, former associates of the prospective groom in the New Brunswick battalion. There were several speeches and all present were hearty in their good wishes. Captain Major went overseas with the 55th N. B. Battalion and saw much active service in France where he won the esteem and confidence of all ranks. He has of late been in command of the dispersal station in the local army.

PORT FIGURES.
Figures recently compiled show that 188 steamers, twenty-eight schooners and one bark arrived here during the winter port season of 1918-19. This is considered a large number, despite the fact that the figures are behind those of the previous port season when 214 steamers, forty-three schooners and two barks called here. The slight falling off was attributed to the trouble securing tonnage during January and February, which are usually the best months of the season. In January only thirty-two steamers arrived and in February the number fell to twenty-four. In March fifty-one steamers arrived, establishing a record. The sailings in April were large for the closing month, thirty-three steamers loading at St. John.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING IS TALKED OVER.
The vocational training board, Mr. Belding said, consisted of seven persons, four of them members of the public school board. It was his idea that a representative of local manufacturers and one representative versed in domestic science should be added to the board. He said that the public school building could be used and in the case of motor mechanics a garage could be secured. These classes were being held during the winter months in nearly all the towns in Nova Scotia.

It was hoped that the movement would so develop that a vocational high school would be possible so that students ready to enter high school could be given a business course if they so desired. Com. Jones asked if this vocational training could not be included under the public school system. Mr. Belding said that the proposed plan would not cost any more and would leave the vocational training in the hands of an independent board. In answer to Com. Bullock, Mr. Belding said that the present domestic science and manual training course would cope under the new vocational training board. The vocational board, Mr. Belding said that Woodstock, N. B., had already started a vocational training school. In support of vocational training, he read a comparison made with groups in the United States. Boys leaving school at fourteen years started work at an average of $200 a year, and at twenty-six years of age were earning $888. The boys remaining in school until eighteen, started in at a salary of $300 and at twenty-six years averaged $1,550. It was decided that the matter be held over until Wednesday's meeting, the commissioners in the meantime desiring to make themselves more familiar with the details of the act.

STORY OF SEARCH FOR LIQUOR IS TOLD
Inspectors' Visit to a Brook Street House and What One Says Transpired

Wallace Stevens was in the police court today charged with having liquor in his possession illegally and with obstructing the liquor inspectors in doing their duty. He pleaded not guilty.

Inspector Merryfield said that on Saturday afternoon with inspectors Daley, Linton and McKee he went to the house of Mrs. Mary Ramsey, 28 Brook street, with a search warrant. While going down Brook street, he said, he saw the defendant in Sheriff street with a crowd of men. The inspectors, he said, were going upstairs in Mrs. Ramsey's house when they noticed the defendant in the yard at the rear of the house. Inspectors Merryfield and Linton and the witness went upstairs followed by the defendant. They produced the search warrant, Mrs. Ramsey told the inspector to read it, but he said he was pushed aside by the defendant, who went into the house. The search followed, but the defendant went into one room and shut the door and through another room and also shut the door there. The inspector finally succeeded in getting the doors open and said he saw the defendant break a bottle over the banister. The inspector said he rushed downstairs and scooped some of the contents of the bottle, tasted it and found it was whiskey. He said that the defendant then said, "That is all right boys, that is all I have." The defendant started to leave the room but the inspector stopped him, but during the search of the house he managed to escape. The defendant appeared in court, this morning voluntarily and the charges were laid against him. E. S. Ritchie appeared for him and asked that he be remanded and Friday at 10.30 was agreed on.

Seven men were charged with drunkenness. All pleaded guilty and were remanded.

Larion Mags, an Austrian, was charged with not reporting to the police station as required by the militia and police act. Police Constable asked for a remand, which was granted. The accused pleaded not guilty. He said he was working on the St. John & Quebec Railway and did not have chance to get to St. John to report.

Harry Brown was charged with breaking a window in the residence of some of his brother accused him of something which he was not guilty. The magistrate asked him what it was, but the defendant did not tell. It was explained that no matter how much he was offered he would not be justified in breaking a window. He was remanded.

NEW UNION FORMED
The blacksmiths and blacksmiths' helpers of the city have laid the foundation for the formation of a local branch of the blacksmiths' union. On Friday evening the first meeting was held and the majority of the men employed in this occupation have signed the roll. The election of officers was deferred until the next meeting.

The project is cloaked in much secrecy, but Mr. Dinwiddie, in his article on "Air Travel Possibilities" in the June Century, reveals some of the details of the design of the huge plane, which, because it has no parasite resistance from struts and wires, could probably cross the Atlantic in twelve hours.

SPAGNUM MOSS DRESSINGS MAY CONTINUE IN USE

The complete report of the war work in sphagnum moss for the Red Cross Society in the province of New Brunswick has recently been compiled by William McIntosh of the Natural History Museum and is in part as follows: "In the summer of 1916 Dr. John B. Porter of McGill University sent samples of the mosses found in Eastern Canada to Britain for approval and as it was late in the season before definite reports were obtained from the samples comparatively little work was done that year before the bogs were frozen over. In the spring and summer of 1917 the work was continued by the Canadian Red Cross under the direction of Dr. Porter and although no very large number of dressings were made bogs containing suitable moss were located and the organization was perfected. On May 7, 1918, Dr. Porter, accompanied by Prof. R. B. Thomson of the University of Toronto, visited St. John for the purpose of investigating bogs in the vicinity and most of excellent quality was found in considerable quantity. "On the following day a meeting of the Red Cross Society was held at which Dr. Porter said that the British Military authorities had asked the Canadian Red Cross to supply sphagnum moss dressings for the use of the British Army, and a committee was formed for the purpose of carrying on the work through the Red Cross Society in New Brunswick, the following being named as members: Lady Tilley, Mrs. John A. McAvity, Mrs. Fred Harding, Miss Elsie Clements, Mrs. Harold Lawrence, Miss Dorothy Jones, Miss Hazel Dunlop and William McIntosh. The committee, organized on May 8, 1918, at once prepared for active work. "Canada was asked to provide 20,000,000 of the moss dressings but only 1,000,000 was promised and New Brunswick was asked to supply one third of these. A call for assistance in gathering the moss was sent out widely and Mr. Peacock, director of the home efficiency clubs, had his staff of teachers acted as agents. "While the publicity and educational campaign did not accomplish as much as had been desired, it brought the committee in touch with many who rendered valuable assistance. Actual collecting was begun in May and continued throughout the summer. "Immediately upon the formation of the committee, the Junior association of the Natural History Society offered the services of its members; in May, they spent two days at Smith's Pond, and when fifty-six bags of excellent moss were procured. In August, forty-three members of this organization spent nearly two weeks at Ludgate Lake; a carload of very high grade moss was gathered here. Later, thirty-one bags were obtained at Nepesic. "Miss Elizabeth McKinnon and Miss Anne Orr, organized parties at their summer homes, and gathered about forty bags of moss. Collected 673 Bags. "The total amount obtained by this organization was six hundred and seventy-three (673) bags. "The second largest contributor, the St. Stephen branch, collected over sixty bags, and their moss was the best received from any branch. Mrs. Veery, who was in charge of the work, and James Vroom, who gave the workers the benefit of his botanical knowledge are to be congratulated upon their success. "About fifty bags of moss were received from Grand Manan. These were the largest contributors. "In addition to the above, forty-one bags were sent in by various organizations and individuals making a total of 836 bags of moss received from all sources. Immediately upon receiving a supply of moss the work of drying and grading commenced. "The regulations of the Board of Health closing all public meetings during the Spanish influenza epidemic virtually stopped the moss work for five weeks. This was a serious setback, but immediately upon the recommencement of operations the splendid band of workers carried on this branch of Red Cross endeavor and would not permit the output to decrease. When orders came to cease grading the work had become established on a systematic basis and could have been carried on indefinitely. On March 26, the last working day, sixty-two ladies graded moss in the Natural History Museum and the week's output was well up to the maximum. "On March 27 came the word from headquarters that no more dressings were needed for overseas and the work stopped immediately. "Over 100 bags of graded moss were on hand ready for making into dressings and only about sixty bags remained to be graded. "Although the use of sphagnum for surgical dressings has been largely a result of the great war, a makeshift to meet a necessity that had arisen, yet there is every reason to believe that it is not going to be discarded now that the war is over. The inexpensiveness of the moss and its high absorbency; its abundance in certain parts of the country and its superiority over the gauze and absorbent cotton clearly indicate that it is a very important hospital appliance.

THREE KILLED IN MOTOR RACE

Indianapolis, May 31—Wilcox won the 500 mile automobile race. His time was 5:44:21.75, an average of 87.12 miles per hour. Hoarne was second. Hoarne's time was 5:46:15.05. Before 275 miles of the 500 mile automobile race had been run at the speedway here today three participants had been killed, one injured seriously and two less seriously hurt. Leonician, both of Los Angeles (Cal.), were burned to death on the ninety-sixth lap, when their car caught fire and it made the southeast curve, turned over and they were covered with flaming gasoline. They burned for five minutes before the guards and spectators could put out the blaze. The flaming gasoline covered the track and while the blaze was being fought other racing cars dashed through the fire. Arthur Thurman, of Newark (N. J.), in his first race on a city track was killed when his machine turned over on the north turn soon after he had driven 100 miles. His mechanism was injured seriously. J. Chassagne, relief driver for Bablot, and his mechanism were injured but not seriously when their machine went over on the north turn. The speed increased up to the 275 mile point was the greatest in the history of the speedway. It averaged 91.34 miles an hour. Dr. Palmieri, who had maintained a lead in the first half of the race lost 250 miles when he had to go to the pits for a change of tires. The crowd attending the races was estimated by the speedway management at 120,000.

PUGWASH LAUNCHING

Schooner Wm. McL. Borden - Settlement in Amherst Strike Amherst, N. S., May 31—There was a very successful launching today at Pugwash of a three-masted schooner named after a noble son of that village, William McL. Borden, who gave his life in the great war. The vessel, which has a tonnage of about four hundred tons, was built by the Cumberland Shipbuilding Co., which is comprised of Fred B. Dakin, of Pugwash; H. J. Logan, K.C., of Amherst; and R. M. Betts, of Wallace. She was sold to a firm in St. John's, Newfoundland, last autumn and through the winter and spring the splendidly situated shipyard has been a busy place. The members of the company and the men and the citizens generally are proud of this vessel, which is the first vessel of an industry which thrived years ago around this beautiful harbor. The Robb Engineering Works, Limited, and the employees of that concern have arrived at an amicable agreement concerning hours of work and the rates of pay. A committee of the men held a number of meetings with D. W. Robb, vice-president and general manager of the firm, and the following was eventually reached. By this step the Robb Engineering Works Limited is one of the first concerns in the Dominion of Canada to adopt an eight-hour day. Men and management met half way, both sides gave concessions and without any difficulty a satisfactory solution was presented. A memorandum of the agreement reads as follows: Memorandum of agreement made this thirty-five day of May, 1919, between the Robb Engineering Works Limited and the employees, represented by the undersigned committee. First, after August 30, and beginning September 2, 1919, forty-eight hours will constitute a week's work, the hours per day to be arranged by mutual agreement of the employees and management of the works. Second—Rates of pay to be not less than ninety per cent of the rates per hour for the same work of mechanics and laborers in force at the Dominion Bridge Works, Montreal, at the time of change of hours, depending on the time of service, the class of work and ability of the man. All of which is agreed upon as stated above and signed: D. W. Robb, vice-president and general manager of the Robb Engineering Works Limited, and six of the employees signed the same for the men.

FARM LOANS for SOLDIERS Agricultural Training For Soldier Settlers. A SOLDIER is entitled to the benefits of the Soldier Settlement Act if he can satisfy the Agricultural Qualification Committee in his district that— (a) He has performed the required military service; (b) He is sincere in his intention to make farming his permanent occupation; (c) He is physically capable and is fitted in general to make a success of the farming business. If he is otherwise qualified, but has not had sufficient practical agricultural experience, the Committee may recommend that he be given agricultural training. A generous scale of allowances for soldiers in training has been adopted. Training Centres For Soldier Settlers. The applicant who is recommended for instruction in agriculture may first be sent to a Training Centre, specially operated for the purpose, where he will learn, by practical experience, how to handle and feed horses and other live stock; milking; the operation of farm machinery, ploughing, etc.; general farm building work; farm blacksmithing; the different kinds of soil and rotation of crops; the selection and judging of live stock and the marketing of farm products. Short lectures on the business management of a farm will be given. With A Selected Farmer. After the course at the Training Centre, the length of which depends on the progress of the individual but will not exceed three months, the man is placed with a carefully selected farmer in the district in which he intends to settle, to complete his training. During this period (not exceeding one year), the soldier is visited from time to time by representatives of the Soldier Settlement Board, who check his progress and recommend when he is considered qualified to take up a farm of his own. It will be evident that by this system of preliminary training the soldier settler will gain a thorough practical knowledge of farming without expense; will learn to appreciate the responsibility involved in the venture, and at the same time gain a clear conception of just what farm life means. On His Own Farm. When a settler is deemed qualified by the Agricultural Qualification Committee, the Board will assist him to become established on a farm of his own, and will, through its Agricultural Advisers, continue to co-operate with him in his work, thereby ensuring his success and consequent ability to discharge his obligations and become permanently established. Fair To Both. The procedure outlined not only gives the soldier an opportunity of first becoming familiar with his environment and of acquiring the experience requisite to success, but ensures adding to the nation's fundamental industry only competent and satisfied producers. Detailed information regarding the provisions of the Soldier Settlement Act and further particulars regarding agricultural training may be obtained from the Provincial Superintendent, P. O. Building, St. John, N. B. Main 578. W. J. BLACK, Chairman, Union Bank Building, OTTAWA. The Soldier Settlement Board

West Still Pressing For Real
Tariff Relief—Position of Liberal Ministers—Borden and White—The Fisheries.

Ottawa, May 31.—At last the date for the bringing down of the budget has been announced, after many postponements—Thursday, June 5, will be the fateful day. Since this has been decided, a load has apparently been removed from the mind of the Minister of Finance. While the budget was in process of incubation, and he was exposed to the attacks, frontal, flank and rear, of the hundred worried interests anxious to have the claims and disabilities of their particular business impressed on him, he did not have a life of a Belgian dog, and he showed it. Latterly, he has been geniality itself, and in the House one night this week he crossed over and sat for an hour with "the boys" of the opposition, for a friendly chat. In this and other ways it looks as though, since the return of the premier, he had washed his hands and relieved his mind of a lot of little things he was carrying on his own shoulders before.

One of the striking developments of this extraordinary session of parliament has been the development of Sir Thomas Borden. For some time after coming to Ottawa, there is no doubt that he was considerably impressed with his own importance as a member of the Government, and took no particular pains to make himself popular. He took political life and himself as a part of it, much too seriously. But latterly, and particularly since he has been leading the Government, he has made a very decided impression on the House as a whole. He has led the House skillfully, and has made friends both among the Government and Opposition forces. There is no doubt that absence did not make the hearts of the premier's confidants in the Government grow fonder. It is rumored that they found Sir Thomas White's manner more agreeable, and that he was, like the whip, they realized that he had received a cable that morning, Sir Robert Borden is completely lacking, unfortunately, in that personal magnetism which binds men to some leaders. Conservatives will privately admit that his dignity is so intense as to be repelling; and while they do not blame him for something which nature left out of his make-up, they naturally do not love him the more for the lack of it.

To be frank, both members of the cabinet and of the House found Sir Thomas White's leadership more to their liking; and, assuming that the Government would properly accept one of the numerous high offices with which rumor was busy connecting, it is probable that he would have been a pretty solid ally behind Sir Thomas as his early successor. There came the premier's announcement that he was stepping back to the premier in fact as well as in name; and it was couched in language which did not make the least pleasant reading for his understudy to give to the House. It was almost equivalent to a hint to all applicants to get off the job. The boss was coming back.

Immediately after came the announcement (which may or may not have been authorized) that Sir Thomas White was about to resign from the Government to accept a highly paid position in the financial world. It was generally taken as a hint to all concerned that, while they might possibly find a successor to the premiership without looking very far, they would have to look elsewhere for a new finance minister. However, it may be, it is not likely that the Finance Minister will stay in the cabinet long, unless he becomes head of the Government.

The return of the premier to Ottawa was either very poorly stage-managed, or he has almost dropped from public recollection. There was scarcely a corollary guard from the House to meet him; and had it not been that he was accompanied by General Morrison, a citizen of Ottawa and popular favorite who has made an exceptional war record, his reception by the populace would have been even more unceremonial than it was. It was rumored that General Morrison has decided that when next he doubles up in the "spot-light," he will pick his team-mate more carefully.

Columbia, Pa.—"I was very weak and run down and had dragging-down pains in my back. I could not get around to do my work and had to sit down and rest often during the day. I was very nervous and had headaches. After using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new woman. I am now strong and healthy. I can now do my work and feel like a new woman."—Mrs. ELIZABETH MAY, R.F.D. No. 1, Columbia, Pa.

The reason Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's life is because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good old-fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. It draws out all impurities from the system, purifies the blood, and restores to the system the vigor and strength which nature intended it to possess. It is a simple, natural, and safe remedy for all the ailments of women, and is the only remedy that will cure them. It is sold by all druggists and by mail.

London Police Strike Off

London, June 1.—London's threatened police strike, for which the members of the force voted by a big majority, has been called off for the present. At the demonstration in Hyde Park which had been arranged for today by the police it was announced that the executive committee of their organization had decided to postpone the strike until after peace was signed, or at least until the return of Premier Lloyd George from Paris.

"It was the premise himself who gave us the understanding that the government would recognize our union," said Mr. Hayes. Through no fault of ours we have not been able to send a deputation to Paris and therefore will await the premier's return to take up the matter of recognition with him. The men's decision on the ballot will be as effective then as now.

Other speakers indicated that the police executive had deferred calling the strike until after the "triple alliance" conference—representing the railway men, miners and transport workers, which is to be held June 24.

DR. CUTTEN SPEAKS

OF MEMORIAL TO BE BUILT BY ACADIA

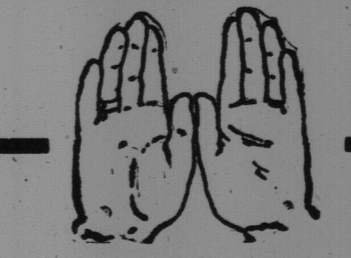

Dr. G. B. Cutten, president of Acadia University, preaching in the Germain Street Baptist church, yesterday morning, delivered a most impressive sermon in the course of which he told of the desire of the university to fittingly commemorate the valor of its 600 students in the great war by erecting a new gymnasium. Dr. Cutten was also heard at the Main Street Baptist church and at the Fairville Baptist church, in the evening, large congregations attending all services. The sermon at the Fairville church used the old time made it possible for Dr. Cutten to preach twice in the evening.

Touching the question of the erection of a memorial at Acadia for the boys who had gone overseas and especially for those who had fallen, he said that a gymnasium had been suggested which memorial, beauty, usefulness and appropriateness. Such a building would be a memorial to the men who had laid down their lives for the cause of their country. It would be a memorial to the men who had worked there and to those who have desired a liberal education.

Dr. Cutten related how the college classes had pledged themselves to give $6,000 for this memorial and a canvas was made throughout the maritime provinces, commencing at St. John. He held of some instances of heroism on the part of Acadia students, among them the act of George Treck who, when he saw his companions burning in the flames from a phosphorus shell, lost his life in attempting to rescue him. He also spoke of the fact that Preston Haley, an Acadia boy from the country districts, was laid to rest with a lion on either hand, and said that all who fought and died for their country in their deaths were worthy of equal honor.

In his building suggested three objects would be achieved: thanks would be given to God for the victory vouchsafed, the boys of the Empire, among them the 600 boys from Acadia, who had enlisted, would be forever commemorated and the heroism and self-sacrifice of the Union Rejected. Perhaps one of the most important questions coming before the convention and around which waged the most spirited debate was that of the inter-church world movement.

Invitations for the 1920 meeting were extended from Birmingham (Ala.), and Richmond (Va.), but a decision was reached in favor of Washington (D. C.), at the First Church whose pastor is Dr. Henry Allen Tupper.

THROUGH THE LAND OF SHAKESPEARE

Writing of Shakespeare, Donald G. Mitchell, in "Lands, Letters and Kings," says:

"His journeyings to and fro, probably on horseback, may have taken him by way of Edgell, and into Banbury (of 'Banbury-Cross' fame); or, more likely, he would have followed the valley of the Stour by Shipston, and thence up the hills to Chipping-Norton, and skirting Woodstock Forest, which still darkens a twelve-mile stretch of land upon the right, and so by Ditchley and the great Woodstock Park, into Oxford. I recall these names, and the succession seems the more distinctly, for the reason that some forty years ago I went over the whole stretch of road from Windsor to Stratford on foot, staying the nights at wayside inns and lurching at little, mossy hostleries, some of which the poet may possibly have known, and looking out wonderingly and reverently for glimpses of wood, or field, or flood, that may have caught the imagination of his verse. It was worth getting up betimes to verify such lines as these:

"Full many a glorious morning have I seen
Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;
or those others, telling how the gentle
"Dapples the drowsy East with spots of gray."
Again, there was delightful outlook for "... a bank whereon the wild shyame blows
Where oxlips and the nodding violet grows;
or, perhaps, it was the "Summer's green, all girdled up in sheaves"
that caught the eye; or, yet again, the picturesque hedgerows, which
"Like prisoners overgrown with hair Put forth disorderly twigs;" and these flanked by some
"... even mead, which erst brought sweetly forth
The freckled cowslip, burnet, and green clover."

"What a wondrous light upon all the landscape, along all the courses of his country journeyings! Nor can I forbear to tell how such illumination once made pay for me all the long foot-tramp from Chipping-Norton to Stratford—past Long Compton, and past Shipston (with lunch at the Royal George)—past Atherstone church, and thence along the lovely Stour banks, and some weary miles of grassy level, till the spire of Trinity rose shimmering in the late sunlight, afterward copes of elms, and willows clearly distinguishable, and throwing afternoon shadows on the silvery stretch of the Avon; then came sight of haycocks, and of Clopton bridge, over which I strolled foot-weary, into streets growing dim in the twilight; coming thus, by a traveler's chance, into the court of the Red Horse Tavern, and into its little back parlor, where after dinner one was served by the gracious hostess with a copy of Irving's "Sketch Book" (its Stratford chapter all tattered and thumb-worn). In short, I had the rare good fortune to stumble upon the very inn where Geoffrey Crayon was quartered

U. S. Senate Acts On Reported Pogroms

United States Upper House Votes Unanimously to Direct State Department to Ask President to Protest to Paris Delegates

Washington, D. C., June 2.—By a unanimous vote, the United States senate yesterday adopted a resolution calling on the state department to communicate to President Wilson reports of pogroms, particularly against the people of the Jewish faith in Poland, Roumania and Galicia, with the request that the president take up the reported massacres with the representatives at the peace conference of the countries where they are alleged to have occurred...

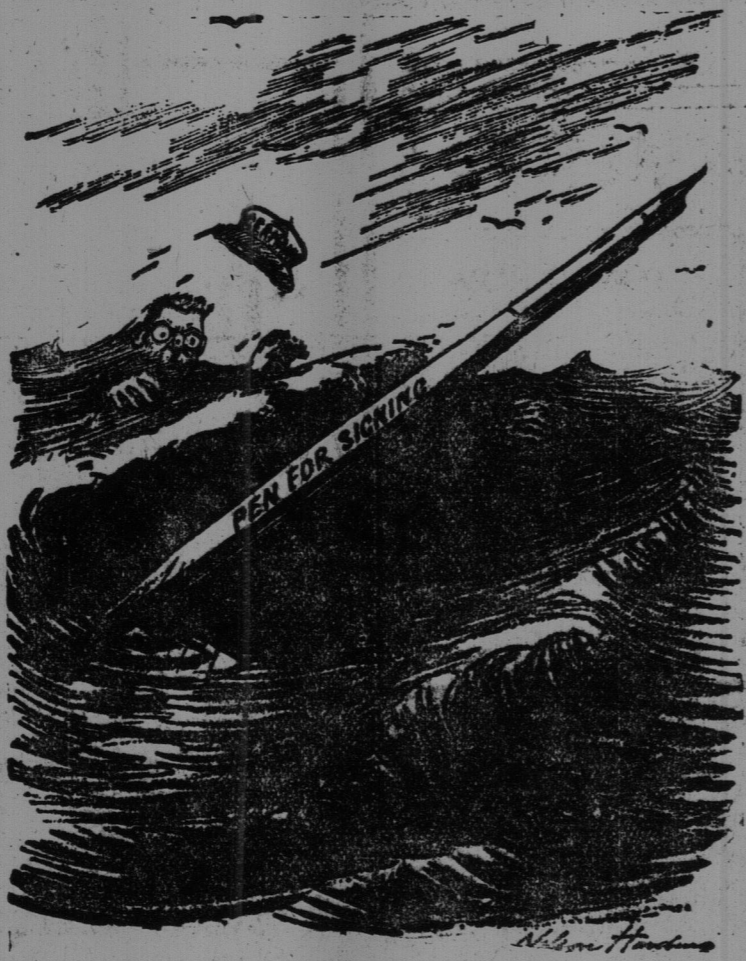

"Whereas, it is reported that innocent men, women and children, particularly of the Jewish faith, are being outraged and massacred in Poland, Roumania and Galicia; and whereas, it is reported that the peace conference of the countries where such outrages and massacres are reported to occur and inform them that this body and the American people generally deeply deplore acts of violence and cruelty committed against men, women and children because of race or religion."

Polish Blames for Massacres. Washington, May 29.—Information regarding numerous Jewish massacres in central and eastern Europe during last March and April, forwarded by special representatives of Jewish relief organizations, was presented to the state department yesterday by Isaac Siegel, congressman from New York. Names of fifty-four Jews who were massacred were given in the reports, which said many hundreds more about whom there was no definite information were killed.

BRITISH WILL OPEN TRANS-AFRICA LINE. (Continued from page 9.) Emperor William wrote that he had long admired Killimanjaro, the tallest of African summits, whose snow top keeps winter all the year around in tropical Africa. He said he would consider it a personal favor if England would consent to have the boundary so drawn as to include the whole mountain in the German colony. His request was cheerfully granted, and, incidentally, it placed the highlands at the southern base of the great mountain in Germany's hands, and her white farmers, chiefly Boers, have been plowing and reaping there ever since in the cool, bracing air of that lofty region.

The two colonies always helped one another when they could. At first the British neglected their tropical coast lands, preferring to develop European farming on the more healthful uplands of the far interior; but the Germans, having no railroad, cultivated tropical products on the coast and made a great success of it. Then the English started coast plantations with the German experiments helping them to some extent. The experience of one colony was useful to the other because their climatic and physical conditions are much alike.

There were a few bright spots in Germany's treatment of the 8,000,000 blacks under her flag, though they were the victims also of terrible atrocities. Germany freed all children born of domestic slaves after 1903. She gave every slave the right to buy his freedom at a low price. The tax imposed on each hut was only 98 cents a year. Nine German missionary societies established many schools, trained natives in better methods of tillage, and taught them how to grow new crops, such as cotton, sisal hemp, the potato, and coffee. These societies were the pioneers who really helped the natives. Most of the cotton in German East Africa has been raised by natives, and then sold 5,000 bales in one year.

Nothing Else in Sight.

terrible atrocities inflicted upon the natives. The day has now dawned for the complete release of these millions of blacks from the bullet and the lash of the most unfeeling of white men. The eastern half of the plateau is very dry. Those who think that all tropical Africa abounds with vast forests and high grasses need to see the plateau, for it is a very different picture on the dry part of this plateau. The trees are only spindling and scattered. What is Africa without its monkeys? But the man is lucky who sees a monkey more than once or twice a month on this part of the plateau. Dryness and sand are spread far and wide. Still in many valleys there is grass enough for large herds of cattle. It is, however, the coastal plain, the western half of the plateau, and a broad one along the northern border, that contains the greatest potential wealth of the former German colony, and a vast wealth was theirs. The rubber districts cover more than a fourth of the country, the exports in peace times amounting to $2,000,000 a year; and they are expected largely to increase when plantation rubber, now along the coast, is widely introduced. Along the coastal plain the coconut palm hosiery for 600 miles, and the nut is an important export.

Brought Hemp From Yucatan.

The Germans thought that sisal hemp would thrive in the dry and narrow, northeast belt and for years they have been exporting large quantities of the fiber. They got their seed from Yucatan. The natives are eager to sell the products of their field to the whites. Nearly all the cotton grown by them in the Rufiji valley was bought for export, and 5,000 bales were shipped in the year before the war. The natives used to collect wild honey and throw the wax away. The whites taught them better, and a year before the war the wax from the colony sold for $471,000. The lakes abound with fish, but the natives are poor fishermen and do not yet supply the home demand. The Germans firmly believed that smoking and drying fish could be made an industry, but they never developed it. Much fossil copal is dug out of the ground, and is highly prized in India and China as a varnish.

White stock growers say that the native sheep in the cooler highlands may be crossed with the wool breeds of Europe and that wool may be added to the colony's resources as in British East Africa. Our corn is a great crop all over the colony, wherever rainfall is sufficient, and is the chief vegetable food of the natives. Even a little wheat is grown on some mountain heights. Tobacco is raised by the natives, nearly everywhere for their own consumption. Sesame, whose oil is used in India and also in Germany, thrives in abundance. The fine agricultural station at Dar-es-Salaam, and its widely spread branches, have far advanced the studies needed to place the land industries on practical basis. Rice and the banana are also among the crops whose success is assured.

10,000 Blacks Built Railway.

Some 10,000 blacks graded the railway and laid the rails on the line between Dar-es-Salaam, the seaport, and Lake Tanganyika. The Bantu tribes will be the chief source of labor, and more training will give them a greater efficiency. The native population is very dense in the extreme northwest of the colony. The northern two-thirds of this area is the highest plateau in the country, and no other part of the land compares in striking distance. They were in a position to land troops from their trains at Ujiji and send them north by boats to the Shanda coast. They were preparing for it.

At that moment the European war opened. The Watussi scarcely escaped a bitter fate, and now they are coming under the more patient and tactful regime of another white race and, unless the natives are very foolish, they will greatly benefit by their relations with these Europeans, who are disposed to help them. The British already talk of building a branch railroad from the German trunk line to Ruanda, and a discussion of the project appeared in a recent number of The Geographical Journal.

Hopes Cape to Cairo Line. Some time ago the British built a branch line from their Uganda railroad southwest to tap the rich sources of carbonate of soda in Lake Magadi. They have now only to extend this line about twenty-five miles over a level plain to the southwest to reach the far greater source of soda in Lake Magadi, just across the border in the former German colony. There are also rich prospects of gold and other minerals that are not yet developed.

England will also be free to carry out her earnest desire to make a fundamental change in the route of the Cape-to-Cairo railroad. The road had been completed from the Cape far north into the southern part of the Congo state, where it serves the need of the great copper field of Katanga. It had entered the Congo basin and was advancing slowly northward when the management came face to face with the great problem—how to build and maintain the road through 400 miles of the dense tropical forest, with stretches of boggy soil and masses of giant trees half shutting out the sun and covering the ground with debris when old trees collapse or windstorms break off the higher branches. It was decided not to enter the forest if another route could be obtained, so a plan was submitted to Germany to give her colony also the great advantage of the Cape-to-Cairo railroad.

The British asked permission to extend their line from Broken Hills, in Northern Rhodesia, crossing into German East Africa to the south of Lake Tanganyika, then on to Tabors, the great central station of the German railroad across the colony, then north along the west coast of Victoria Nyansa, placing the whole German colony in close touch by rail with their very productive west coast of the lake then on to the Nile and down its valley to Sommar, where the last spike in the Cape to Cairo railroad would be driven. This plan would circumvent the great forest and the long railroad would serve German as well as British interests. Germany said it was not her policy to have foreign railroads extended into any of her colonies. She vetoed the plan. Under the plan, the German road, now about two-thirds built, will be completed within a few years and the prospective prospects are that it will pass through the former German East Africa and be entirely under the protection of the British flag.

with it in the density and quality of the population. This is Ruanda, where the Germans did nothing except to show that it was the most remarkable part of their colony, both in the variety of its products and in the nature of its ruling class, the Watussi, who are neither negroes nor Bantus, like most of the black peoples of Africa, but are Hamites, related to some of the older peoples of the continent as the Egyptians, Abyssinians and some other dark-skinned peoples.

The Watussi, however, while superior to the Bantus in many respects, have some admixture of Bantu blood in their veins. They are tall and thin, have rough work for their slaves, and engage in no labor except cattle herding, while their work-people provide them with vegetable food. German men of science studied these people and wrote about them; but what would have happened if the German colonial regime had been imposed upon the Watussi in the tactless and brutal fashion that has disgraced the German name in all four of her African colonies? The proud Watussi would likely have been butchered by tens of thousands. The Germans at last were with-

Consumers' Coal Company Service Goes Far Back of the Mere Delivery of the Coal by Team

It starts with the selection of Coal at the mine. The quality from all mines varies, some being good, others indifferent or very poor. At a cost of thousands of dollars and careful investigation, we have learned the best and most reliable sources of supply; and with this knowledge our Service begins. Coal cannot be selected with too much care.

Again, we place at your command, a large stock, comprising all sizes of Coal, at all seasons of the year. True, we can serve you more cheaply in summer than in winter, but think of the convenience of our all-the-year-round Service.

Our facilities for taking the "raw" Coal, as it comes from vessels or cars, and screening out the slack and dust, so detrimental to a good fire, and giving it to you in absolutely the best condition, is another part of our Service.

Our Delivery Service—The above illustration represents the Consumers Coal Company delivery equipment in August, 1917, which has since been enlarged by three new horses and three new motor trucks, bringing up our delivery capacity to the householder to 125 tons per day.

FOCH IS SIMPLICITY AND FORCE COMBINED

History will doubtless accord to Marshal Foch an even higher place in the hall of fame than his contemporaries accord him now. Meeting him inspires G. Ward Price, the well-known correspondent, with the feeling of drawing near a Doric temple. Simplicity is the foundation of his character. He is simple in his surroundings, simple in his person, simple in his thoughts. It is the simplicity of genius, the genius of simplicity. The impression he gives is of great strength combined with an absence of ornament, deliberate in its severity. Foch abhors non-essentials. He thinks in schedules. His talk itself is tabularized. He speaks in short, staccato sentences. "Bon!" he interjects after every clause in his argument—ticking it off as it were. And having finished what he has to say on a subject, he makes a short resume of it, which, if you took it down textually, would read exactly like lecture notes. Men who deal with vast subjects are obliged thus to discipline their thoughts. Otherwise essential outlines would be submerged in a sea of minor detail. Even to France Foch is something of a mystery. He showed himself but little among his troops. His duty did not lie there, and he seeks no popularity. The simplicity of the man gives the public imagination. His fierce modesty cuts him off from all intercourse outside his work.

When the Germans got through Chat eau-Thierry his only comment was, "That's a bad rip. We shall need a fortnight to mend that." It is on no lack of strength but on abundance of it, that this calm of Foch is founded. He has a bulldog face. Behind the curtain of the heavy drooping iron-grey moustache are two rows of strong teeth and a square jaw. His grey eyes flash when he talks and he clenches his fist, even to emphasize a point in conversation, with grim energy that tells of the reserves of force latent within him. Like all great leaders of men he has a vitality which takes immediate grip of those who come in contact with him. You notice nothing else in his room while he is there, and when he speaks your whole attention is fixed at once upon the lined yet vigorous face and the words that come from those steel-trump laws. There is something about Marshal Foch that reminds one of the hot glow of a smouldering ember—warm and genial, yet capable of being fanned to a flame of fierceness. He always gets to the heart of a question immediately, seizing with unflinching instinct upon the kernel of the matter. "The marshal ripped the inside out of me," said a high artillery officer after an interview of ten minutes, in which he had to report upon the dispositions taking for coming battle. "Such and such is to be the role of the heavy artillery; such and such of the light. Go away and do it."

When did you first know that you had won the final victory? "After General Rawlinson and General Debeney had made their joint attack on August 8," he replied. "Consequently at the end of August. I did not know then when the Germans would give in, but I knew that our advance would not stop until they were finally defeated. Our offensive had become general. It began on July 18 on the Marne. Terrible fighting. The Germans used up their fifty-five of the 180 or 190 divisions that they had. Their reserves were exhausted. That had gone well."

Then came the attack in the Amiens sector on August 8. That went well, too. The moment had arrived. I ordered General Humbert to attack in his turn. "No reserves? No matter. Allez-y! (Get on with it). I tell Marshal Haig to attack, too. He's short of men also. Attack all the same! There we are, advancing everywhere—the whole line! En avant! Hurrah!" The marshal leant forward with his clenched hands moving to and fro like a jockey riding the finish of a race. Strength and Calm. The marshal talked long and emphatically about the Rhine. I wish I could convey the feeling of energy and rugged strength that radiates from him. There is a toughness in his physical fibre that corresponds to the robust straightforwardness of his mind. These qualities, added to a frank simplicity of manner, surround him with an aura of calm and confidence. Involved questions disentangle themselves as he approaches them. Dangers appear less formidable. Strength increases. Hope revives. Officers who served with the marshal through the war have told me how the mere fact of his arrival at the headquarters of a hard-pressed sector would sustain and restore harrassed generals when all seemed going wrong. He would ask a few simple but essential questions, give some short words of counsel, and, by sheer tranquillity of manner and determination of character transform depression into optimism. When the Germans got through Chat eau-Thierry his only comment was, "That's a bad rip. We shall need a fortnight to mend that."

There is a single sentry on duty at the postern, through which one comes to a plain entrance opening upon a gloomy hall within, unpainted and unembellished for a hundred years. Beyond this second door on the left, is the marshal's room. It is an old-fashioned oblong Empire saloon, rather dark. At one end the marshal sits at a fat mahogany desk. Down the rest of the room runs a green covered table littered with "snaps." Marshal Foch is in his plain blue service uniform, with seven metal stars upon the sleeve. He sits down again in his bronze-mounted chair and takes from his pocket an oilskin tobacco pouch covered with red and blue silk—the colors of the Guards, a present from an English general—and a small, straight briar pipe, shiny black with use. "If you don't mind, I will take the opportunity of smoking a pipe while I am not writing," he said.

"When did you first know that you had won the final victory?" "After General Rawlinson and General Debeney had made their joint attack on August 8," he replied. "Consequently at the end of August. I did not know then when the Germans would give in, but I knew that our advance would not stop until they were finally defeated. Our offensive had become general. It began on July 18 on the Marne. Terrible fighting. The Germans used up their fifty-five of the 180 or 190 divisions that they had. Their reserves were exhausted. That had gone well."

A CHURCH AND REAL SOCIAL SERVICE

(Pittsburg Christian Advocate.) "I don't know about his theology, but I do know that he cured my hogs. I'm for him." It was thus that a member of the Lakeville, Ohio, Methodist Episcopal church justified the theory that if the country church would do more for country people the people would respond and do more for the church. About five years ago Charles McConnell reached the place where, fresh from a theological school, when McConnell reached the place a cluster of houses and a railroad station near Woods, he found an enclaved church and an epidemic of hog cholera. He found also that the farmers were worrying little about the church giving up the ghost than they were about their hogs dying. So the young pastor began to preach a rather lively brand of religion. Then he sent to the state university for some hog serum. Both preaching and medicine began to take effect.

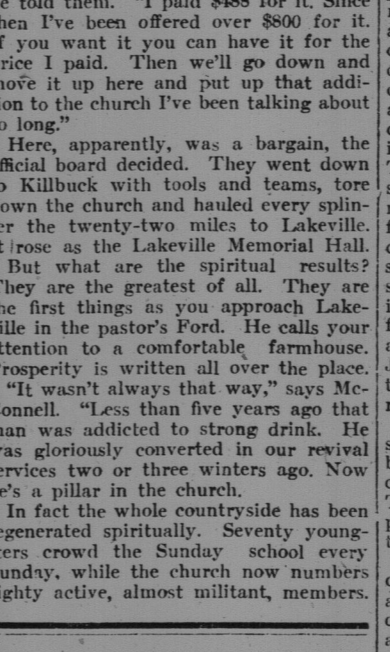

Two of the members met one day. They pulled up hub to hub to chat a bit about the preacher. One of them expressed some doubt as to his theology. It was then that the other made the above observation. Five years now McConnell has worked here. The country is dotted with abandoned churches, but Lakeville Methodist Episcopal church flourishes. It is the social, religious and instructional centre for the entire countryside. It boasts the only moving picture outfit within several miles. It has a community memorial hall, dedicated to the lady from Lakeville section who helped clean up the world in the great war. Hogs were only one of the things the farmers were losing money on from unfamiliarity with modern methods. So McConnell arranged with the state university for a series of farmers' institutes. They are held at the church. Since they were begun the farmers have better orchards, better cattle, better crops and prosperity is reflected in better health, better homes, better homes and barns—and a better church.

The Jews Marching For An Idea

Boston, May 31—Down the straight street as far as eye can see, a dense, regularly moving line of people approaches the square, with the usual mounted police escort leading in orderly array. The Jews of Boston, from every country, of every shade of orthodoxy—of every age and condition and degree of mentality, of every diversity of form and feature, except that upon every countenance is traced, more or less legibly the stamp of their historic lineage. They commemorate their fellows massacred in countries of Europe these latter months; they ask help for those still suffering; they say—and these are American citizens who carry the banner—they say to America: "We look to you." They say—and this banner is carried by Jewish youths in the United States uniform—"We fought for democracy. We ask freedom from persecution for the Jews." They wear sash and badges with the words, "We protest against pogroms."

They float the American flag, and beside it the beautiful blue and white Hebrew flag with the Star of David in the center, with "Zion" for its only legend. These are all the insignia; there is no planned spectacle for the eye. This multitude is marching for an idea. Aged men and women with the marks of oppression upon them; strong men and women whose eyes hold a story of other, less peaceful scenes; young men and women whose faces are touched with deep feeling; still others who are there because they are Jews, and must respond to the call of race and faith. Some of the men bear children in their arms; many a woman carries a baby while a toddler clings to her skirt. Boys and girls of every grade of nurture march heedlessly or gravely. A mingled cry you might say, if your eyes were hidden, a motley crowd. But a crowd with an idea. And over and over the bands play—and they play nothing else—the aged old music of the Day of Atonement, solemn, sweet, and searching; the strain of mourning, of repentance, of consecration, which Hebrews in all lands know. The music expresses an idea. So they throng on, in a seemingly never-ending line; a few to enter the hall of meeting, the rest—20,000, 30,000—to stand for hours in the street or in the Common, where they hear no word

W. S. FISHER'S SPEECH IN HALIFAX

W. S. Fisher of St. John, president of the maritime branch of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, greeted the Halifax gentlemen for their cordial welcome and interesting words. Meetings of the association helped to break down such barriers of provincialism as might exist. He denied the reality of a rivalry between Halifax and St. John, saying that the people of St. John rejected in the evident prosperity of Halifax. The question of exportation affected every manufacturer, and the help and sympathy of the government and the individual were needed. The maritime provinces were handicapped by geographical position. It was necessary to be very vigorous to hold their own. Pressure should be brought to bear on the government of the day to remedy the question of railway transportation in the future. There should be co-operation to obtain fair treatment. As to exportation, Nova Scotia had many advantages, with raw materials, an intelligent population, and a favorable climate.

Mr. Fisher said next that 150 corporations in the maritime provinces were doing business abroad, or elsewhere in Canada. There was just as great a field for any other manufacturing concern. There was a vast opportunity for energetic men with vision. He then spoke of 200 American firms which were reported to be contemplating the establishment of branches in Canada, partly induced by the new policy of imperial preference. Some of them should be brought to the maritime provinces. There need be no fear of competition; it was the best thing in the world, causing greater endeavor and more efficiency.
