FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES, THE CHAMPION ASSASSIN, EXECUTION OF THE PERPETRATOR OF THIRTY-TWO MURDERS.

The notorious Bill Longley, the murderer of thirty-two persons, was executed in Giddings, Texas, Oct. 11. He was convicted for shooting Wilson Anderson, a field hand on the 31st of March, 1875.

Further opportunity for pistol practice did not occur till 1867. A detachment of the Sixth Ohio Cavalry pursued Longley in Gonzales, under the impression that he was one Taylor, wanted for adultery.

His next crime was characterized by a road, fourteen miles from Houston, Anglin country, he overtook a white man and a negro who were fighting.

SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 2.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is said that Cardinal Cullen leaves a large fortune.

"Gloom everywhere, distress and despondency."—Freeman.

Boyle O'Reilly is to write an original story for the Boston Pilot.

Father Maguire recently conducted a very successful mission in Brooklyn, New York.

The Protective Bill was carried by a majority of two to one in Fredericton on Thursday.

Bishop Rosecrans, of Columbus, Ohio, brother of General Rosecrans, and a convert to Catholicism, died on the 21st ult.

A Chicago paper classes the local candidates under three heads, "The Best Offered," "Bad to Worse," and "Utterly Damnable."

The rumor that Lord Beaconsfield had an epileptic attack is denied. He is suffering from gout, but otherwise is well. Beaconsfield's death at the present time would be very disastrous to England.

Ferry matters is at present receiving some attention from our citizens and the press. It is to be hoped that nothing will be sprung upon the people without giving them an opportunity of expressing their views on the matter.

One of the last acts of Cardinal Cullen was to issue a pastoral in his clerical order, praying for forgiveness for the long continuation of fine weather, and for a good and abundant harvest. His Eminence also invited the clergy to warn their flocks against drunkenness.

During the coming week our subscribers in the City and Portland, who have not yet paid their subscription for the Herald for 1878, will be visited by our business agent, who expects that they will be prepared for him. Mail subscribers who owe this year's subscription for the Herald will oblige by forwarding the amount of their indebtedness.

The Freeman authoritatively denies that there was any foundation in the rumor which was being freely circulated that an old and esteemed merchant had, while in a fit of temporary insanity, attempted to commit suicide. It would be advisable for our citizens to not be too ready to believe the many rumors which are being freely circulated, many of them, perhaps, without any foundation in fact.

The Pilot says the other night, in New York city, an unknown man stopped at a dwelling-house and asked for something to eat. He was refused. The unfortunate wretch had been repeating his petition for assistance all that other days and without success. Upon being refused in this last instance, he staggered away crying, and had gone but a short distance when he fell dead—actually dying of starvation, and in a city loaded down with plenty.

Nearly all the bishops of Ireland, about 600 priests, and an immense gathering of all classes attended the obsequies for Cardinal Cullen, held in Dublin on the 29th ult. Ten thousand people took part in the procession and ceremonies, which were witnessed by 60,000. The Catholic citizens of Dublin will wear mourning till the month of March when a panegyric will be preached by Father Tom Burke. It is thought that Dr. McCabe, Coadjutor, Bishop of the diocese will probably succeed the Cardinal.

King Alfonso, while driving through the street of Madrid known as Calle Mayor, on Friday evening, was fired upon with a pistol by a man in a blouse. The King was not hit, and continued on his way to the palace, amid the acclamations of the crowd. The assassin was immediately seized by soldiers, and taken to prison. He was with difficulty rescued from some women, who wished to lynch him. The would-be-assassin proved to be Juan Moncasi, 23 years old, a cooper and a native of Tarragona. He states that he is a member of the international society, and that his crime was premeditated.

It is not generally known, perhaps that during the stay of our esteemed Governor-General in Canada, he has given to the various Societies, Religious Institutions and Educational Establishments of the country upwards of five hundred beautiful medals in gold, silver and bronze. We have much pleasure in announcing that Mr. George Stewart, Jr., at work "Canada under the Admin.," of Lord Dufferin, will contain a complete list of these medals with the names of the parties who have received them, and the various dates of issue, from 1841 to the present time.

The Boston Pilot is severe on the Directors of the Glasgow bank. It says: "Wholesale villainy in fine broadcloth finds an apt illustration among the great Glasgow bank swindlers. They all come to the fruit in garments of the most unimpeachable respectability. Lewis Foster, a director for twenty-one years, held a leading position among Free Churchmen, and energetically promoted charitable and philanthropic objects. He was a strong Sabatarians, refusing to take or read papers printed on the Sabbath, but assiduously intrusted his travelling companions for news in the train on Monday morning on his way to Glasgow." Mr. Peter built the Bursk free school, and got money from the bank to pay for them. John Innes Wright, another director, "took an active interest in church matters and charitable associations, and carried his generosity to such an extent that he now owes the bank half a million dollars."

William Taylor, also a director, "was a member of the Town Council, Precursor of the Hutchison Hospital, member of the Young Men's Christian Association, and was frequently sent by the General Assembly as representative Elder from St. Enoch Church." Henry Inglis was very prominent in Masonic circles, and succeeded Taylor as Substitute Grand Master.

Mr. Taylor, as Substitute Grand Master, on the list had an excellent conclusion, for had they the advice of their Canadian allies they would suffer the humiliations of another disastrous defeat.

In last week's issue we charged the contractors who are building the new Post Office with not carrying on the work according to the specifications and censured the Superintendent for allowing such dishonesty to be practiced. The gentlemen from whom we received the information upon which the above charge was based are in whose honesty and experience we had every confidence. During the week the Superintendent and one of the contractors called on us and denied the truthfulness of the statements referred to, and asserted that they were performing the work as the specification required. To satisfy ourselves on the matter, and for the purpose of doing justice to all parties concerned, we had some of the leading mechanics and builders interviewed, all of whom had tendered for this work, and asked them if the work was being performed as they had specified in their contracts, and they emphatically asserted that it was not. They point out several requisites of the specifications that are entirely omitted, and others that are but partially carried out. They state that the mortar is of the most inferior character, and contains very little, if any, cement; that the workmanship is not at all equal to that on the original building, although required to be so by the specification; that excessive filling is used though positively forbidden, and that the stone is not of uniform color, nor free from iron spots, as called for by the specifications. If these statements are correct, which we believe them to be, we consider them a sufficient justification for the charge made in these columns on Saturday last, and also proves the Superintendent's inability to fill the position, or else gross negligence in the discharge of his duty.

Our plea is based to learn from the Boston Herald that there are indications that prosperity is near at hand in the United States. It says "that many lines of business are already active, and with great crops and a favorable foreign trade, there is reason to believe that another year all labor will be employed at remunerative rates. The burden of debt and expense, which the great war has left us, has already been much reduced. At the end of the war the funded national debt amounted to $2,757,000,000, and the annual interest burden to $151,000,000. The debt bearing interest now is about $1,800,000,000, and the interest burden has been reduced to $60,000,000. Our debt, and that of carrying it is much less than that of England or France. The year after the war the national expenditure was $20,000,000,000. The third year after the war it was $377,000,000. Last year it was $236,000,000. This is a change unprecedented in the history of the world. Having passed through the worst, let us go on and secure that prosperity that awaits us in this favored land."

The Chief of Police has recently been on a visit to the United States, and since his return has displayed more energy than he has for some time past. Out of the many liquor dealers who violate the law on Sunday, he succeeded in having one convicted, and he preferred charges against a number of others for violating the law in regard to selling provisions and liquors under the one roof, but the Police Magistrate gave these people an opportunity to arrange their stores to meet the requirements of the law. He also sent circulars to the keepers of Lager Beer saloons, warning them that "certain scientific tests" having disclosed the fact that lager beer contained four per cent. of alcohol, he would be compelled to report them for selling liquor without license unless they complied with the law. So far so good, Mr. Chief, or Mr. Superintendent, which ever title you prefer.

There are a number of other matters, however, which the Herald has time and again called your attention to, that we would like very much to see you display a little activity in. Read Dr. Talmadge's sermon on what he says on a recent visit to the slums of New York, published in last Saturday's Telegraph, and some plan of action may suggest itself to you, the successful carrying out of which would render you famous, and in as measure atone for your many incapable acts in the past.

and yet they all wound up in at last. It really looks as if we should soon know where to look for the "dangerous class."

and yet they all wound up in at last. It really looks as if we should soon know where to look for the "dangerous class."

In last week's issue we charged the contractors who are building the new Post Office with not carrying on the work according to the specifications and censured the Superintendent for allowing such dishonesty to be practiced. The gentlemen from whom we received the information upon which the above charge was based are in whose honesty and experience we had every confidence.

During the week the Superintendent and one of the contractors called on us and denied the truthfulness of the statements referred to, and asserted that they were performing the work as the specification required. To satisfy ourselves on the matter, and for the purpose of doing justice to all parties concerned, we had some of the leading mechanics and builders interviewed, all of whom had tendered for this work, and asked them if the work was being performed as they had specified in their contracts, and they emphatically asserted that it was not.

They point out several requisites of the specifications that are entirely omitted, and others that are but partially carried out. They state that the mortar is of the most inferior character, and contains very little, if any, cement; that the workmanship is not at all equal to that on the original building, although required to be so by the specification; that excessive filling is used though positively forbidden, and that the stone is not of uniform color, nor free from iron spots, as called for by the specifications. If these statements are correct, which we believe them to be, we consider them a sufficient justification for the charge made in these columns on Saturday last, and also proves the Superintendent's inability to fill the position, or else gross negligence in the discharge of his duty.

Our plea is based to learn from the Boston Herald that there are indications that prosperity is near at hand in the United States. It says "that many lines of business are already active, and with great crops and a favorable foreign trade, there is reason to believe that another year all labor will be employed at remunerative rates. The burden of debt and expense, which the great war has left us, has already been much reduced. At the end of the war the funded national debt amounted to $2,757,000,000, and the annual interest burden to $151,000,000. The debt bearing interest now is about $1,800,000,000, and the interest burden has been reduced to $60,000,000. Our debt, and that of carrying it is much less than that of England or France. The year after the war the national expenditure was $20,000,000,000. The third year after the war it was $377,000,000. Last year it was $236,000,000. This is a change unprecedented in the history of the world. Having passed through the worst, let us go on and secure that prosperity that awaits us in this favored land."

The Chief of Police has recently been on a visit to the United States, and since his return has displayed more energy than he has for some time past. Out of the many liquor dealers who violate the law on Sunday, he succeeded in having one convicted, and he preferred charges against a number of others for violating the law in regard to selling provisions and liquors under the one roof, but the Police Magistrate gave these people an opportunity to arrange their stores to meet the requirements of the law. He also sent circulars to the keepers of Lager Beer saloons, warning them that "certain scientific tests" having disclosed the fact that lager beer contained four per cent. of alcohol, he would be compelled to report them for selling liquor without license unless they complied with the law. So far so good, Mr. Chief, or Mr. Superintendent, which ever title you prefer.

...I am sure that I assumed it... I am afraid that if Mrs. Wilson knew it, she would discharge me.

...their horses on still... could not lessen the space... usually Quarillo disappeared around the side of a hill.

...his pursuers soon appeared in the defile... but Quarillo was nowhere visible... The crack, crack, of firearms among the men caused them to check their speed.

...Again came those deadly missiles, and from their saddles dropped more than one of the gallant little company. It would be madness to remain in that place, unable to return the fire of an enemy that could not be seen, and to attempt to ascend the hills would probably result in a terrible loss.

...Maddened at the loss they had sustained... the men and women began to ascend the hills at the most successful points. When they arrived on the summit not an enemy could be seen.

CHAPTER IX. Nettie Rollins lay asleep in her room on the night following the day on which Quarillo had visited her.

...She recognized the speaker as one of the members of the Branded Brothers. Slightly she arose from her bed and put on her clothes.

...The village of H— was ablaze with excitement. George Hymler had brought the news that Quarillo and his band were not more than twenty miles away. A company numbering over one hundred men was immediately raised to go in search of the outlaws.

...A dozen men who had enrolled themselves as members of the company, were standing on the corner of the two principal streets in H—.

...Well, boys, said another, in a sharp voice, "I can't go on any further bagging our game. Quarillo is a mighty sharp chap, and if we catch him napping it will be because he's got through with the trouble of this kind of a business."

...I hope, miss, that you are not hurt, said the officer, as he rode up to her. "Not at all," she said.

...I laid him low, that's a fact, added high, with a swagger. "Hope you ain't hurt, Charley. I'm just aching to tend a hanging here."

...The outlaw was found to be wounded in the shoulder. He was helped on to one of the horses, and the party took up their march to H—. As they were riding along, something dropped from the neck of Nettie Rollins and fell to the ground.

...Time to get together, boys, he said. "After nine o'clock," said Tim Willinger, addressing the man who had just spoken, "that if we come across Quarillo he'll be a gunner."

...They then moved away, and in a few minutes had joined the rest at Tom Welch's tavern.

...Mr. Kenton, would you not like to join us? inquired Hymler, of a tall, ministerial-looking gentleman. "Verily, my friend, it is not my nature to engage in war against my fellow-man."

...later was heavily ironed immediately and put into jail. Great was the excitement in H— when it became known that the "old man" was no other than Quarillo, the famed outlaw chief.

...A few weeks afterwards, there was a fierce fight between United States soldiers and the Branded Brothers, in which all of the latter were either killed or taken prisoners.

...Two years afterwards, Charles Henson was the happy recipient of the news that his wife had wholly recovered from her unfortunate malady, and again was the home of the detective made happy.

...The Electric Light. The electric light may now be looked on as settled. Our Michigan genius, Edison, has wrestled with the problem and if accounts of Eastern papers are to be believed, he has won the fight.
