The Italians of Philadelphia propose to erect a statue of Christopher Columbus in Fairmount Park as a reward to that ancient mariner for having discovered this Western World. It is no more than eight. Christopher has been rather neglected, considering what he did for this continent. There is hardly a decent statue of him to be found. And now that the Norwegians of Wisconsin have raised a monument to a maa who in all probability did not discover America, it is no more than right that the Italians should rumment the man who did. People saw the air-y nature of the party lines that had seemed so substantial—saw through the false glamour that had shrouded the party lesignations—and felt that nothing was left but the division of by-road money and other local matters to make election day interesting. The dignity and poetry had departed from politics. The manner in which the Government has been sustained since that time has made opposition going into the Government at every crisis and becoming responsible.

The month of the facts, he wilfully and the false house of the facts, he wilfully and that they fancied they were all computed the party of the facts, he wilfully and maliciously let the falsehood go to the public. So much by way of reiteration—now for my confession.

The News styles my denial as "impertinent and untruthful." I acknowledge the corn. The five last words of my communication were marked in italics, and were intended to convey an emphatic and unmistakable insult.

The untruthfulness, which I acknowledge, consisted in the use of the prefix Hon.—an error quite excusable from the fact that I am a constant reader and admired (?) of the News, and inadvertently wrote the title which so frequently meets at every crisis and becoming responsible.

While appreciating all the weighty objections against a political fight over a scholastic and semi-religious question we would like to see the question put fairly and squarely to the people of a county like King's. We would like to get a decisive verdict, and were in hopes that two candidates would be brought out squarely on that issue. The arguments for and against could be given at length and carefully weighed in the balance. The News could describe in its graphic semi-ecclesiastical style the horrors of the "Sectarian Yoke"; the Freeman could utter its most plaintive appeal on behalf of the crushed consciappeal on behalf of the crushed consciences of Catholics; the Globe could show how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in harmony; and the Telegraph—well, the Telegraph would ride the horse that won the Westmoreland Derby, or some other horse, just as seemed most likely to promote Mr. Elder's political ambition. The issue would go fairly and squarely to the people, and the result, if favorable to soparate schools, would have the effect of relieving many politicians of much of their belief in the sacredness of non-sectarianism.

In restoring persons suffering from emaciation and the debility following diphtheris, it has done wonders. I constantly recommend its use in all affections of the throat and lungs. In several cases considered hopeless it has given relief, and the patients are fast recovering. Among these are consumptive and old bronchial subjects, whose diseases have resisted the other modes of treatment. For impaired indigestion, and in fact for debility from any cause, I know of nothing equal to it. Its direct effect in strengthening the nervous system renders it suitable for the majority of diseases.

A Pen Picture of the French Assem-

There is something melo-dramatic in the French Assembly, which is heightened by theatrical surroundings, for the Capitol is a theatre of Louis the Fourteenth's construction. The parquette and first tier of boxes are devoted exclusively to the use of deputies, and constitute the floor of the chamber. The stage is closed behind the first wings by a painting which serves as a background to the lofty seat of the President of the Assembly. Before him rises up, out of the place of the ancient orchestra, the tribune or pulpit where France delivers Dominion Stove Polish, all her legislative speeches, whether they THE BEST IN USE. 20 Gross in Store.

20 Valson stree and the appearance of some of the deputies in this box recalls the home souvening Stoves and Stovepipes. of a boy speaking his piece at a schoo exhibition. The tribune is in front and below the President of the Assembly, in a position corresponding to that of the clerk's desk in the House of Representatives at Washington. In the tribune the speaker's back is urned to the President of the Assembly, whom he practically ignores. He speaks directly to the deputies, addressing them as Messieurs; and this way of speaking straight to the hearers, in a mercurial cople like the French, incites to disturb ance. It is a wise rule in the English and American legislatures for the speaker to address himself to the presiding officer to address himself to the presiding officer only, and to refer to adversaries in the third person, and without calling the individual name, thus diminishing the chances of offensive personality. In the heat of angry discussion the Frenchman sometimes singles out his man and talks to him face to face, in a manner not far removed from that of a fish-woman of the hell

All the new patterns in Switches and Hair nediato vicinity hear him. Again, so desires. This lull is followed burst of feeling which has been dammed up in the few minutes of order—in loud laughter, groans, or shouts. Little restraint is exercised, and the Assembly is in its manifestations, the gregarious in its manifestations, the ing, systematically, or vice ver.a. The most frequent words of interruption are most frequent words of interruption are "tres bin tres bin," or "as.ez, asez." mingled with laughs of derision and partisan plaudits. In the Bridsh Parliament and the American Congress it is ruderstood that the adversary is to have some sort of fair play—that is, he is allowed to make his argument, and if reply is to be made, it is when he is done; here the resort of fair play—that is, he is allowed to make his argument, and if reply is to be made, it is when he is done; here the reply is frequently a running accompaniment in addition to what follows. Much of the Assembly is like the New York Gold Room, the voice swelling into a steadily sustained roar.

In America, committees, and especially their chairmen, are selected by the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate, and with some regard to fitness; in France the committees are drawn by lot, and are called bureaus. Thus, a Deputy who has spent his life in the construction of railways may be appointed to look after the interests of public education; and another, whose life has been devoted to the latter, may be called to superintend the working of the former. The drawing by lot in the making up of these bureaus is conducted by the President of the Assembly, aided by the tip-staffs and and other subordinates. When a vote is taken in the Chamber, green urns of classic shape are carried around by the tip-staffs, in which cach Deputy deposits his card, for or against as the case may be.

There is a ministerial bench immediately in front of the tribune, where some of the members of the Cabinet are always to be found when the Assembly is in session. Each one, as in the British Parliament, advocates and defends the measures emanating from the branch of Government over which he has charge. Furnishing nuts for the ministers to crack is called interpellation. The defence of the general policy of the Government is usually confided to the ablest speaker of the Cabinet; under Thiers it was Dufaure, rader McMahon, it does not yet appear to have been definitely settled. In the American Congress there are usually two divisions, although at the present time there are three, consisting of Republicans, Democrats, and Liberals; in France there are no less thr nive—the Right, Right Centre, Left Centre, Left, and Extreme Left, or Radical, often derisively called by its adversaries La Nouvelle Couche Sociale. One or two black

The deportment of some of the Deputies appears rather light and trivial to American eyes. They bring opera-glasses with them, and whife the body is in session they stand up with their back to the presiding officer and take a cool and leng hy survey of the galleries, as spectators do in the orchestra stalls of the French theatres.—Condensed from Albert Rhodes in October Scribner.
