Pen-and-Ink Portrait of a Remarkable Man.

The Clerk of Forestry and His Versatility.

The ADVERTISER a few days ago gave a pen and ink sketch of the deputy head of the Department of Agriculture. That department is in some respects more in the public eye than any other division of our Provincial Government, and this perhaps not less owing to the fact that its relations are with the chief industry of Ontario than that it is well and ably manned. The Board of Health is part and parcel of the Department of Agriculture, closely identified with the agricultural industry, for it has to do with the health of the brute as well as of the human creation, and its secretary is one of the best-known men in the Province. There are few public officers who have done better work than Dr. Bryce, and his numerous investigations and reports on sanitary affairs have kept his name prominently before the country during the past six or seven years. The Doctor finds in his sphere the scope to create a solid reputation, and he is making it 1,000.

But then there is a third man in the same department, the Clerk of Forestry, a widely-known and unique character. Robert W. Phipps has capacity to do anything well, unless it be to study geography, and he cannot understand what geography has to do with things which a man ought to know. If he was set down blind-folded in the wilderness beyond the Laurentian Hills, on the Hudson Bay slope, he could find his way out to civilization again. But this faculty is wood-craft, or instinct, call it what you will—anything but geography.

He is a many-sided man, as those who know him well will cheerfully bear testimony, and there are not many who know him well, for Mr. Phipps is something of a recluse; he has a great store of knowledge in many lines of subjects; and whatever work he lays his hands upon to do he masters it before it is turned out. It has been said of the late Charles Reade that before beginning to write a story he got together and read every book and report and letter and paper which treated of it, however remote or obscure the treatment might be, and then he wrote with a mind soaked in the subject-matter. There is enough learning in the Cloister and the Hearth to make the reputation of two or three college professors of the first class; yet there is not a chapter in the book, and hardly a page, but bears the stamp of the mint of genius. Now the way of Charles Reade may be like the way of a bird in the air or a serpent on the rock, which none else may follow; but Mr. Phipps is also thorough. He has been known to read 100 volumes to get together the material for one report of little more than 100 pages, besides getting information by travel, correspondence and other ways. And his work is well beaten and hammered.

Every sentence is finished and rounded before the printer is given a chance to put it in type. No urgency can force the man faster than his own gait, and if a page take a day or a week he alone must be the judge of its quality. Goldwin Smith has said that his reports are literature, and that is what we should look for where so much time and labor are bestowed to finish the article. But they are more than literature, for in an eminent degree they are instructive and practical also. The style is varied, being suited to the purpose in the writer's mind; but it is always clear, and sometimes it is strong, sparkling and eloquent; occasionally it breaks out into humor of a mellow quality; and where facts have to be stated they are put concisely and in exact terms.

Mr. Phipps was born in the city of Toronto something more than half a century ago, but early in life he crossed the Oak Ridge and settled down on a bush farm somewhere up in the county of Grey. It was there he gained a practical knowledge of forestry, but he has been adding to the store ever since. He has been a printer also, and he set up many a column of type for the Globe newspaper a quarter of a century ago.

He has also been something of a politician, and in 1878 he wrote up the N. P. for John A. and the Tory party. This was one of his bad acts, and he has been trying ever since to do penance for the deed by walking in better company and seeking to serve the country in a more reasonable way. But Mr. Phipps has always said that John A. never did understand the N. P. of the Phippsian pamphlet, and that had we got the genuine child in place of the foundling picked up on the country's door-step by Sir Leonard Tilley Canada to-day would be many millions ahead. As it is, she is disinherited, and honest industry pays toll to the gentlemen of the Red Parlor.

The Wilkesbarre Cyclone.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Aug. 23.—Jacob Bergond and Frank Olean, who were injured during the cyclone here, died yesterday, making twelve deaths so far.

Frost in the Northwest.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 23.—Killing frosts are reported in Kittson, Marshall, Norman and Polk counties, Minn., in all the border counties of North Dakato and in Manitoba westward to Minnedosa, where the temperature reached 28 degrees. In Northern Minnesota around St. Vincent the mercury indicated 30 degrees, and all unmatured crops are said to be killed. Whether wheat in Northern Minnesota which has not yet been cut is injured is a question which it will take two or three days to decide. The frost was so severe that it is froze grain that was still soft. The frost line extends southward over Moorehead in this district and thence westward to Huron, S. D., but was light or what is known as white frost, and not fatal to vegetation. There was no frost from St. Paul southward, the temperature averaging 46 degrees. A warm wave is now reported in Montana.

The Chancellor at St. Petersburg.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 23.—Chancellor Von Caprivi yesterday inspected the fortress of St. Peter, and then with the German Ambassador afterward called upon M. De Giers, with whom he had a long conference. Later he called upon the English and Austrian Ambassadors. Last night a banquet in honor of the Chancellor was given at the German Embassy. The leading diplomatic representatives were present.

European Peace Secure.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—M. Maddington, French Ambassador to England, in an address to the Aisne Council said France had secured certain advantages in Africa in exchange for small concessions. The Balkans, he said, were inflammable, but European peace had not been for a long time so secure as now. Still, France ought to keep her army at the present fine level, the power of France being one of the most important guarantees of peace.

Trouble with Hayti.

CITY OF SANTO DOMINGO (via Havana), Aug. 22.—Information has reached here that on the night of Aug. 20 Haytian troops stationed near the frontier of the Dominican Republic invaded the territory of this country. The Dominican Government at once dispatched an armed force to drive out the intruders. The Dominican troops were successful and repulsed the enemy, killing 23 men and wounding a number of others. The Dominicans had but 4 soldiers injured. Great indignation is felt here at Hayti's action in this invasion of Dominican soil, and the Dominican Cabinet has been called together by President Huerreaux to consider the advisability of declaring war against Hayti.

Wrecking Railway Trains.

HAVANA, Aug. 23.—Manuel Garcia, the brigand chief who is called "King of the Fields," and who has under him several gangs ready to do his bidding, tired of robbing by retail, has conceived the plan of wrecking railway trains and plundering them and afterwards demanding from the railway companies large sums to prevent repetition of the outrages. It is reported that the Villanueva Railway Company has made a shameful contract with the bandit by sending him $10,000. This it did after two of their trains were ditched and partially demolished by the bands, some of the employes having been killed. So far freight trains only are attacked but passenger trains are threatened. Garcia has gained in power and he controls communication with the interior wherever he chooses to apply force.

Poor Prospects of Peace.

LA LIBERTAD, San Salvador, Aug. 23.—Advices from the frontier say the Irungay revolutionists in Guatemala who were defeated by the Government forces have pulled themselves together and are ready for another battle. President Barrilas has sent 5,000 against them, and a bloody battle will follow as the insurgents are determined to overthrow the Government of Guatemala if possible. General Ezeta, who has sent a commissioner to Guatemala to look after the peace question is not disposed to accept the terms of the diplomatic corps which calls for his deposition as President of Salvador in favor of Ayala, or someone connected with the Supreme Bench, until elections can be held. Ezeta and his army, and, in fact, the people of Salvador, will not accept these terms, considering them an imposition upon their rights of citizenship, amounting, in fact, to defeat by Guatemala. If Ezeta should at once order an advance upon Guatemala it would cause no great surprise, as the present outlook for peace is indeed poor.

STILL STRIKING.

No Prospect of Settlement of the Central Difficulty.

Engineers at Chicago Go Out—Sympathy Expressed with the Officials of the Road.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—At 11:30 o'clock to-day Arbitration Commissioner Donovan had a short interview with Mr. Webb, but no conclusion was reached. Mr. Donovan will call upon Mr. Powderly this afternoon. In case no settlement can be reached here the commissioner will return to Albany, where a full meeting of the State Board will be held. Mr. Powderly has expressed willingness to arbitrate, but Mr. Webb refuses.

MR. WEBB'S DAILY TALK.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Mr. Webb tonight gave out a statement declaring that the company had not discharged any men because they belonged to a labor organization. The discharge of the 50 or 60 men mentioned in Mr. Powderly's appeal was due to drunkenness, incapacity, breach of duty and insubordination on the part of the men, and to lack of sufficient work to employ them. The officials of the company do not intend to transfer their duties, including the employment and discharge of employes, to any one except their duly appointed successors. The remark is made that it would probably be criminal neglect of duty not to discharge a switch tower man for drunkenness when the safety of many passengers depended on the man's sobriety. No business could be carried on, says Mr. Webb, when men are allowed to be absent without leave, and no employer could tolerate insolence and insubordination based upon the belief that the offender will be supported therein by a secret organization, by the agency of which the employers' business can be damaged or stopped. Mr. Webb considers it a monstrous absurdity for Powderly and his associates to ask that anybody except the railroad authorities should be satisfied that causes existed for discharging the men.

Nothing is going on in strike matters on the surface, and no new developments are expected.

EXAGGERATION AT ALBANY.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The report current to-day that twenty yardmen in the Green Island yards of the D. and H., who are Knights of Labor, had gone out on strike because the D. and H. road persisted in receiving Central freight, was more than a trifle exaggerated.

A deputation called upon Supt. Hammond, and requested him to refuse freight from the Central, and Supt. Hammond said he would let the men know to-morrow what the road would do. One of the officials of the road, in speaking on this question, said it was difficult to see what right the men had to make such a demand, the effect of which, if granted, would be practically to tie up the D. and H. almost as bad as the Central road, as a large part of that road's own freight traffic depended on its connection with the Central.

At the West Albany and Karner yards to-day great progress was made in clearing up these yards. Over 200 men are now at work there, and 100 more from Chicago and other points west are expected to-night.

SHOTS FIRED.

About 5 o'clock this afternoon, as James Gray, a plumber, was making his way over the railroad crossing at East Albany end of the upper bridge, George Wahl, a C., B. and Q. conductor, who was on a freight train at that end of the bridge, fired three shots at him from a revolver without any provocation. None of the shots took effect, except to excite the anger of a crowd of 150 strikers who were standing on the other side of the track viewing the operations of the green hands. When they heard the shots they made a rush for the conductor, who jumped from the train and ran over the footpath on the bridge to the Albany side, where he was taken in charge by the Albany police and held for assault in the first degree.

About 250 men were at work in the West Albany shops to-day. A few Knights of Labor who went out at first have returned to work. These men attend to the daily repairs required by the road. The usual number of men daily employed in these shops is 1,500.

SIDING WITH THE COMPANY.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Aug. 22.—A large number of manufacturers of this city have signed a letter which has been sent to the acting president of the Central Hudson Railroad, congratulating him on "the manly stand he has taken against the strikers." They managers say they trust that he will not recede from his position, and they predict that he will come off victorious if he remains firm.

ENGINES IDLE AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, Ill., Aug. 20.—All firemen and engineers employed by the Union Stock Yards' Switching Association struck for higher wages this morning. At noon 40 engines, each having two men, were lying idle at Forty-seventh street yard. In consequence of the strike 100 switchmen are also idle. The switching or transfer system is the largest in the country. As the association does all the work for the packing houses at the yards, consequently all work at the packing houses is at a standstill. The tracks are filled with immense trains of fresh meat which was destined for outside points.

EMPLOYING NEW MEN.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 23.—C. Miller is employing large numbers of railroad men. He guarantees the men steady work at good wages. The men are not to know where they are to be put to work or for what road. It is presumed, however, they are being hired to fill the places of the New York Central strikers. A carload of 50 were sent Thursday, another Friday and two will be sent to-day. The employed are brakemen, switchmen, conductors and firemen.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.—The wholesale dry-goods men are beginning to feel the pressure caused by the difficulty in moving freight over the New York Central Railroad.

TALKING FROM BOTH SIDES.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—This morning Secretary Hayes, of the General Executive Board of the K. of L., made the following statement to the reporters: "It is a very strange thing that Mr. Webb should only now say that the Knights discharged from the employ of the road were discharged for drunkenness, incapacity and insubordination. If this was a fact, it is a case for arbitration, and one that the State Board should take hold of. Our Executive Board, however, has gone thoroughly into that matter and know that there is not one word of truth in what Mr. Webb says."

Mr. Webb denies the report that Mr. Depew will sail to-day for home. He says he does not expect him until the latter part of September, the time he arranged to return.

Gen. Supt. Voorhees made the following announcement this forenoon: "We have notified all connecting lines that on and after Monday next we will receive and deliver all freight handed to us for transportation."

Labor Notes.

In Melbourne the shipping strike has caused a general paralysis of business. It is expected the Victoria and New South Wales Iron Works and factories will close down owing to the lack of coal. Nine Wollongong colleries have stopped work owing to the cessation of the steamship demand and lack of means of transportation. A joint conference of Melbourne and Sydney ship owners has been arranged. The great labor employers have renewed their pledge to stand fast against the strikers' demands.

The strike in the Borinage district of Belgium is spreading. Yesterday 3,500 miners quit work, making a total of 11,500 on strike.

DOWN TO DEATH.

Fearful Descent of a Car at Reading—Four People Killed Outright.

READING, Pa., Aug. 22.—A horrible accident occurred this forenoon shortly before 11 o'clock on the Mount Penn Gravity Railway, a mountain slope encircling Mount Penn, 800 feet above the city of Reading. The cars were taken from a point on the outskirts of the city to the top of the mountains, a distance of five miles. On returning the cars were allowed to go down the mountain by gravity by way of another route to the point of starting. This forenoon at 10:30 a car containing about eighteen passengers was taken from the station to the top of the mountain. This consumed about 30 minutes. On top of the mountain there is a high stone tower, where the passengers were allowed to alight to enjoy the scenery for 30 minutes. There are different stories as to the cause of the accident, but it appears that when the tower was reached, the point where the gravity portion of the road commences, the engine was detached and the car ran away while the passengers were still on board. The distance to the point of starting is five miles, and it is estimated that this was covered by the runaway car in three minutes, the car attaining a fearful speed, estimated at 80 miles an hour. It remained on the track to the foot of the plane, going around all the curves, while the passengers shrieked in their fright, and several jumped off. When the car reached the station at the foot of the plane it jumped off the track and rolled down a 50-foot embankment, where it landed upside down with the passengers imprisoned inside. Doctors and the ambulance were sent for and the dead and injured removed. Four were taken out dead. They included Charles Rettow, conductor of the car, and E. M. Lavan, a lawyer of this city. A number of the injured may die.

READING, Aug. 23.—The entire number killed by yesterday's accident, it is now ascertained, was four, viz.:

Charles Rettew, conductor, aged 35; Edward M. Levan, lawyer, aged 40; Miss Rosa Hiefler, aged 32, all of Reading; Miss Harriet Hinkle, aged 82, of Philadelphia.

The correct list of the wounded is as follows:

Mrs. Emma Scheimel, badly cut and suffering with concussion of the brain—her death is momentarily expected; Wm. Schmeht, both legs badly fractured, will probably die; Mrs. Schitler, terribly mangled and unconscious; Miss Katie Homan, seriously hurt about the head, not expected to live; Miss Bessie and Katie Kelly, nieces of Miss Homan, both badly injured; Cornelius Hanlon, of Allentown, suffering with concussion of the brain; Mrs. Cornelius Hanlon, of Allentown, badly cut and bruised; Miss Sallie Bay, of Wilmington, Del., very badly injured and unconscious; Miss Mary Guthrie, of Wilmington, head cut but not dangerously; Mrs. Arnold T. Lewis, of Allentown, left wrist broken; Miss Weiler, of Allentown, daughter of a prominent merchant of that place, badly hurt about the head and chest; Mrs. Smith, of Allentown, skull fractured and will die, now at St. Joseph's Hospital; Mrs. Cooper, of Allentown, cut in temple and about the eye; her baby was also severely injured.

Mrs. Schitler and Mrs. Cooper with her baby in her arms jumped from the car during its descent and were found by Harry Brown, of Philadelphia, who had leaped from the car soon after it started on its wild run, but escaped without injury.

THE STRUGGLE FOR SUNDAY REST.

In the Lyceum there is an interesting survey of the revolt against the burden of seven days' continuous labor. In Germany a Government bill now before the Reichstag forbids work on Sundays in mines, salt pits, quarries, collieries, foundries, workshops, timber-yards, tile-yards, and factories of all kinds. Commercial clerks shall not work on Sundays for more than four hours at most. In breweries and in inns every third Sunday must be granted as a free day to those employed. The Socialists have brought forward an opposition bill forbidding all industrial occupations on Sundays and holidays. Until lately, in the majority of German cities, there were two postal deliveries on Sunday mornings. The second, or 10 o'clock, has lately been suppressed throughout the whole empire.

In Austria the "Gewerbe-Ordnung" of 8th March, 1885, and ordinances completing it, have gone a long way to secure to the majority of laborers a free Sunday. This law does not extend to public works, such as railways, postal and telegraph offices, but there are indications that its provisions will soon be extended to them. Newspapers are included in the law; they cannot, therefore, be issued on Sunday evenings or Monday mornings, so printers at Vienna are free on Sundays. In Hungary a bill is now before the Legislature compelling all printing establishments to give a whole free day on Sundays, so that no paper can appear on Monday mornings.

In Denmark two deliveries on Sundays have been forbidden. In Holland the prospect of Sunday observance is more cheerful. One of the most influential Dutch papers has closed its offices on Sundays, asserting that it will not work in opposition to a movement that is so fast gaining ground. The Sunday rest from labor is, moreover, generally observed, although not ordained by law. The goods trains do not run on Sundays, and there is no delivery of goods except during a very limited time in the morning. In Russia, from all quarters of the empire, petitions have been sent to the Holy Synod demanding that all shops and factories be closed on Sunday. In Switzerland the Federal Parliament has taken up the question, and will give effect to a measure introduced last December by the Senate. This law doubles the number of free days granted to the workmen—36 instead of 18, of which seventeen must be Sundays; the wages are not lowered. Moreover, it limits to a very small number the goods trains—in fact, almost entirely puts a stop to them.

Baby Whooped.

The beach is not all taken up by the bathers. It's a promenade for hundreds who don't bathe—for nurses, for sight-seers, for everybody who wants a sniff of unadulterated salt air. One day when the tide was on the ebb and the surf hilarious enough to satisfy the strongest swimmers, a nurse came pushing a carriage along to where a lot of us were looking at a dead stingaree which had been cast ashore. In her anxiety to see everything she let go of the carriage, and it started down the smooth incline like a runaway sled. In the carriage was a very wide-awake baby about a year old, and when the alarm was sounded it was too late to overhaul him. The carriage entered the water just in time to catch a "return," and before any man could make three jumps it was riding out to sea. A hundred feet away it met a big green billow driving in, and now it was picked up, cradled in a smother of foam whiter than any snow, and baby came sailing in with a woosh and a roar to be caught by a dozen outstretched hands. And was he terror-stricken? Not much! He clapped his hands and whooped, and when the nurse carried him off he kicked the blankets out of the carriage and got red in the face.—[Detroit Free Press.

TO AID THE WESTERN FAIR.

The Art Annex Recommended to the Council—Tenders Let for Blank Books.

When No. 1 Committee began its session last evening Ald. Moule (chairman), Anderson, Glass and Luney, Mayor Taylor and Chamberlain Pope were the only members that had put in an appearance. The first business taken up was the awarding of the contract for supplying the committee with the blank books necessary for municipal purposes. Three tenders were received, the figures being: C. Chapman, $119 05; Reid Bros. & Co., $130 50, and E. H. Kordes, $217. The first tender being the lowest was accepted.

A communication was read from the Municipal Council of Kingston, asking that the London City Council co-operate with them in their fight with the insurance companies regarding their assessment. The matter was laid over pending the advice of the solicitor with regard to the local companies.

School Trustee Dewar hereupon broke into the charmed circle with a question for the committee to answer. He wanted to know how the estimates for the Askin street school would be affected by the change from the Smead, Dowd & Co. to the Stevely system of ventilating. The committee thought that the estimate could remain unchanged, and that the items would not appear in it.

The communication was read from the Western Art League, asking for a grant of $500 towards the erection of the art annex to the main exhibition building. Mr. S. K. Davidson, president of the Art League, addressed the Board in support of the grant, and impressed the committee with the need of the annex on the ground that there was not proper light, especially for oil paintings.

Col. Lewis also spoke in behalf of the art grant. He was convinced that if the artists did not exhibit it would be a great drawback to the fair. The Western Fair Board would be willing to pay the full amount if they had the money available, but such was not their position. The members of the Art League were going down into their pockets to aid in the work and the Western Fair Board had also agreed to contribute part of the cost. As the building would be owned eventually by the city the speaker thought that there should be no objection to the grant.

Chamberlain Pope—Perhaps I can give you a little light on the question. There was a supplimentary debenture issued for $10,000 for exhibition purposes some time ago and of that amount $386 23 is still in the treasury.

Mayor Taylor then moved that the committee recommend to the City Council that the balance mentioned, together with an amount sufficient to make up the sum of $500, be handed to the league for the erection of the annex. The motion was seconded by Ald. Anderson and passed. The delegation from the Art League bowed their thanks and retired, Col. Lewis firing as a feu de joie, a "Thank you for the enlightenment, Chamberlain," as he disappeared through the door.

A. R. Baker's communication, re-income tax, was referred to the Inspector.

Inspector Johnson reported that the work of copying documents occasioned by the amalgamation of South London was completed with the exception of the general registry.

Secretary Nelles, of the Board of Trade, presented an account of $90 as the cost of the band on the recent excursion. The committee recommended the payment of $45 of the amount.

Secretary Pope reported that the London Mutual had refused the terms of the committee for the insurance of the Exhibition buildings. The Gore and Waterloo companies had each agreed to give $9,000 insurance for three years for $150. The Perth Company also agreed to insure for the same terms. One other company was needed to complete the full amount desired, but as the Agricultural Insurance Company had not refused the committee's terms, the matter was left in abeyance.

Wm. Flood's petition for financial aid to assist in bringing his sick son home was filed.

W. P. Barrons' petition against income tax was granted.

Mrs. Rollin's taxes were remitted, and a similar request from Jane Adams was referred to the Inspector.

A communication from J. B. Small, of the Agricultural Department, requesting that the city advertise its merits at the Jamaica Exhibition was filed.

WHY WERE THE JEWS THE CHOSEN PEOPLE.

Mr. Gladstone's third paper in Good Words deals with "The Office and Work of the Old Testament in Outline." He thinks that the purport of the Old Testament can be best summed up in the words that it is a history of sin and redemption. After explaining that the narrative of the Fall is in accordance with the laws of a grand and comprehensive philosophy, and that the objections taken to it are the product of narrower and shallower modes of thought, he proceeds, passing by the story of the deluge and the dispersion, to consider the selection of Abraham. "Why," he asks, "where the Jews selected as the chosen people of God?" Not, he thinks, because of their moral superiority. He contrasts the Jewish ethics and those of the Greeks, considerably to the detriment of the former, and then sums up the matter as follows:

Enough has perhaps been said to show that we cannot claim as a thing demonstrable a great moral superiority for the Hebrew line generally over the whole of the historically known contemporary races. I nevertheless cannot but believe that there was an interior circle, known to us by its fruits in the Psalter and the prophetic books, morality and sanctity altogether superior to what was to be found elsewhere, and due rather to the pre-Mosaic than to the Mosaic religion of the race. But it remains to answer with reverence the question. Why, if not for a distinctly superior morality, nor as a full religious provision for the whole wants of man, why was the race chosen as a race to receive the promises, to guard the oracles, and to fulfill the hopes, of the great Redemption?

The answer may, I believe, be conveyed in moderate compass. The design of the Almighty, as we everywhere find, was to prepare the human race, by a varied and a prolonged education, for the arrival of the great Redemption. The immediate purposes of the Abrahamic selection may have been to appoint, for the task of preserving in the world the fundamental bases of religion, a race which possessed qualifications for that end decisively surpassing those of all other races. We may easily indicate two of these fundamental bases. The first was the belief in one God. The second was the knowledge that the race had departed from his laws: without which knowledge how should they welcome a Deliverer whose object it was to bring them back? It may be stated with confidence that among the dominant races of the world the belief in one God was speedily destroyed by polytheism, and the idea of sin faded gradually but utterly away. It is audacious to say that what was wanted was a race so endowed with the qualities of masculine tenacity and persistency, as to hold over these all-important truths until that fullness of time when, by and with them, the complete design of the Almighty would be revealed to the world? A long experience of trials beyond all example has proved since the Advent how the Jews, in this one essential quality, have surpassed every other people upon earth. A marvelous and glorious experience has shown how among their ancestors before the Advent were kept alive and in full vigor the doctrine of belief in one God, and the true idea of sin. These our Lord found ready to his hand, essential preconditions of his teaching. And in the exhibition of this great and unparalleled result of a most elaborate and peculiar discipline we may perhaps recognize, sufficiently for the present purpose, the office and work of the Old Testament.

Jews in Russia.

The arbitrariness of the legislation affecting, not only native, but all Jews in Russia, is strikingly brought home to Englishmen by the warning issued from the Foreign Office at the instance of the British Consul at Warsaw. That official—evidently having knowledge of the annoyances experienced by English travelers in Russia suspected of being Jews—has issued a warning that an English passport, though it be vise by the Russian Consul, and otherwise in regular form, is not sufficient to secure immunities from vexatious annoyances. The traveler must also be prepared with a baptismal or other certificate to prove that he is not a Jew.

It is well known that many Russian laws have the postcript appended, "except the Jews," and at the instance of the Emperor Nicholas the legislative principle was enacted that wherever the Jews are not expressly mentioned they are to be presumed to be excluded. If any Englishman venture to visit Russia he had better arm himself with sufficient evidence (besides the usual bribe) to prove that he is not an accursed Jew. Truly, the degradation of the Jew could scarcely be carried further to prove that in Russia he is an outlaw, a civil leper, out of whom the Government is determined to crush every aspiration and feeling that ennobles a man and renders him a good citizen.—[Jewish Chronicle.

TEN DAYS OF DELIGHT.

Greatest Exposition in the World This Year.

The Detroit International Fair and Exposition—A Grand Enterprise that Everybody Is Now Talking About—What Will Be Shown and the Pleasures Prepared for Visitors.

One of the largest and most important public enterprises that the old, rich and beautiful city of Detroit has ever engaged in, is the Detroit International Fair and Exposition, whose second annual exhibition will be open Aug. 26 and close Sept. 5. Its grounds are the finest and its buildings the largest and handsomest of any fair or exhibition now existing in the world. This great fair is continental in its scope, and embraces exhibits from all over the United States and Canada. It was the largest and most successful exposition on the American continent last year, and will be far greater this year. The attendance last year numbered representing every State of the Union and all the Provinces of Canada. This year it will be still larger, and will include an important contingent of business visitors from Mexico.

A QUARTER OF A MILLION PEOPLE,

The stock show will be the largest ever seen in America. It will embrace an immense number of the costliest and best horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry from the best breeders of the United States and Canada, of all breeds and varieties. There will probably be no less than a thousand of the finest horses on the continent, and equal numbers of cattle, swine and sheep. The largest and smallest horses and cattle in the world will be there, and the spectacle of the grand parades of animals will be a superb exhibition.

The stables for animals are the best ever constructed in any country for similar purposes. They consist of five huge buildings, 280 feet square, each built around and enclosing an open court or arena 170x200 feet, in which animals are exercised and inspected. Double rows of stalls, with a broad walk between, run around the buildings. These buildings are each connected with a great sewer, are lighted by electricity, so that animals can be cared for by night as well as by day, and are provided, every 30 feet, with ever flowing pure water. There is also the broadest and finest half-mile track in the West, running around the banks of a beautiful artificial lake, of which there are two. The grounds are also provided with spacious and beautiful green lawns and broad graveled walks and drives. In front of all is bearing upon its bosom the largest commerce, both in number of vessels and tonnage, to be found anywhere in the world. More shipping passes the Exposition every day than London and Liverpool both combined can show. There is also the Rouge River, which here joins the Detroit, alive with great ferry steamers, plying to and from the Exposition.

The Dog Show will exhibit not less than 700 to 1,000 dogs of all varieties, including the smallest, which weighs less than an ordinary rat, and lies down, stands or sits upon the palm of its mistress' hand; and the largest, which weighs sixteen pounds more than one of the small horses, and is a majestic animal, with the courage and strength of a lion.

The Pigeon and Bird Show will be the greatest beyond all comparison ever collected in America. The most famous homing pigeons on the continent will be shown in hundreds, and there will be a series of grand races between these glossy, beautiful and intelligent at distances of from 50 to 500 miles. Besides, the methods of rearing, handling and training these beautiful pets will be fully exhibited and explained.

Art Hall, the largest building of its sort in America, will contain 300 of the best paintings of the best American artists, selected by the American Artists' Union expressly for this great exhibition. It will also exhibit the finest and most costly painting of modern times, by the great Russian artist, Constantin Makoffsky, called "the king of colorists" by the European art critics. This picture is a ravishing dream of beauty. It costs $300 per day to exhibit it, under the best effects of electric lights. There are also three famous and costly paintings from the private collection of Hon. Potter Palmer, the noted Chicago millionaire, besides marble and bronze statuary, and all sorts of works of art.

"THE JUDGMENT OF PARIS,"

The show of agricultural implements and machines, and of all sorts of machinery and tools, from the huge road locomotive down to the latest patent gimlet; of all sorts of utensils for the house, the farm, the shop and the factory, from the $1,000 art tile stove down to the best corkscrew; of all rich goods, wares, fabrics, food products, gems, jewelry, watches, clocks, clothing, embroideries, laces, silks, velvets, carpets, paper; of all musical goods, from a piano to a jewsharp; of magnificently fine furniture, costly carriages—in short, of everything that makes the grandeur, the comfort and luxury of modern civilization, including from electric inventions through all the rest will be exhibited in enormous profusion.

The exhibition of fruits, flowers and vegetables will be prodigious. Not only will the fruits, flowers, grains, plants and vegetables of the Northern States and Canada be shown in vast profusion, but the South will contribute an immense and rich variety of tropical and sub-tropical fruits and products, larger than has ever before been exhibited at any Northern fair. Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Virginia, Tennessee, Texas, Mexico and California will send car loads of their best products, including bananas, oranges, lemons, figs and many other fruits, growing upon trees in full bearing. And the show of rich and rare flowers will be almost by the acre, making the vast building a palace of loveliness and fragrance, and ornamenting the lawns of the grounds with masses of beautiful colors.

Nor are the useful and beautiful alone provided for. A series of amusements and pleasures to and every evening with music and splendor, are engaged. Cappa's famous Seventh Regiment New York band will give free indoor and open-air grand concerts every day and evening. This celebrated band comprises forty star soloists upon different instruments, and is the finest band in this country.

There will be wild Indian games and contests; marvelous displays of rifle and pistol shooting on foot and on horseback; balloon ascensions and startling parachute drops from a mile high by male and female performers, daily; processions, parades, spectacles, exercises on the track by famous horses, and a long list of other pleasures all free. The great Palace of Illusions will display the most mysterious, beautiful and sensational marvels of modern scientific necromancy and magic, to awe and puzzle, please and amaze the multitude. There will also be grand military display by the United States regular army and militia.

Every evening there will be a free exhibition of the most magnificent and thrilling pyrotechnic drama ever produced—by the eruption of the volcano Vesuvius, pronounced in London and New York the most marvelous, awful and fascinating spectacular play ever shown. This great scenic drama has required the creation of an artificial lake and seaport, of an artificial mountain, of temples, palaces, fortifications and a whole ancient city, with its great Roman amphitheater, in which are shown the gladiatorial combats, Christians thrown to the wild beasts, and processions of soldiers, priests and senators, at the moment when the city is overwhelmed by the outburst of ashes and lava from the mountain. In this play, and in a series of grand and wonderful fireworks that follow it, about $2,000 worth of fireworks are consumed every evening. This magnificent and costly exhibition is also free.

The season is the loveliest of the year to visit and enjoy the beautiful city of Detroit. There will be excursions in every direction, and at the lowest prices in the world, on magnificent steamers, by lake and river, and by steam and electric cars to many places of resort about the city. Within the city will be operas and theaters, and all the delights of the gala watering and exposition season. Hotel rates will not be raised, and there will be ample accommodations for all visitors. Excursions will run over all roads that enter or are in Michigan, at cheap rates. Nobody can afford to miss seeing this greatest of all the expositions of 1890.

LONDONERS, UNITE!

London enjoys many natural and acquired advantages not possessed by other centers of population. The city is situated in the heart of as fine a section of country as is to be found in any part of the new world. The soil for many miles around is remarkably fertile, and is cultivated by agriculturists who know how to make the most of their opportunities. Through the city run the three great lines of railway that serve the Canadian public, connecting with the east and west seaboards and the inland soils and waters of every portion of the North American continent. We have a magnificent spring water supply for domestic and fire purposes, for which we are envied by the people of those Canadian cities that have to be contented with an unpalatable fluid from rivers and lakes poisoned with sewage. Taking it altogether, too, our population is progressive and exemplary in its everyday life.

What, then, do we desire London to become?

We want the Forest City to be not only a good commercial and industrial headquarters, but an educational, artistic and literary center. The city has already made some progress in the direction indicated, but it is within our reach to attain much more satisfactory results. What, with all its drawbacks, has done so much to add to the growth of Toronto in recent years? A careful investigation of the subject has led us to the conclusion that a large number of accessions to the later population of Toronto is made up of men with families who have amassed money elsewhere, and who have acquired homes for themselves in that city with the object of enjoying the educational, artistic and other advantages there to be found. London should be able to offer equally as strong inducements to people of this description as are provided by Toronto, with the added recommendations of possessing a more healthful water supply and being a cheaper place in which to live. The cost of housekeeping in Toronto, indeed, is becoming altogether too great for the purses of people of average means, and it will not be any less as the population increases.

London has a fair showing of manufactures, though it has got none of the tall chimneys which the high tax advocates promised us prior to the increase of the tariff, and it will doubtless add to its industrial establishments as the railway and other advantages are better known and the population increases. The trouble at present is the lack of market for the Canadian manufactures now produced. That by the way. The establishment of new factories may, under the circumstances, not be very rapid. But we can all co-operate to advancet he interests of London in the other respects, and add to the prestige of the city and enhance its advantages.

It is not simply an æsthetic and sentimental idea to make the city beautiful. There is a dollars and cents value in beauty, cleanliness and general attractiveness, though we have laggards among us who by their actions teach differently. We are improving some of our streets by extending the boulevarding, narrowing the roadway and block-paving. There should be no cessation to the good work. The taxpayers will be money in pocket through all such improvements. We need more sewers and some effective means for turning the sewage to good account, instead of polluting our beautiful river with it. We need more parks—not necessarily large spaces, but breathing spots that shall be the people's own—and we should have laid out at as early a period as possible the particularly superb possibility of a park and public recreation grounds at the Waterworks.

There need be no doubt that a city so well situated and possessing so many natural advantages can be made to progress steadily if it has the right people and the right spirit. London has the right people, and we must all see to it that we have the right spirit. We have referred to Toronto's progress. There is one marked characteristic of the citizens of that aggressive corporation: they all pull together when anything is brought forward to promote the general interest. The example is worthy of emulation by the citizens of London. Whether we be Liberals or Conservatives, Protestants or Roman Catholics, let us be Londoners first in every movement calculated to advance the common welfare. The continuous cultivation of this spirit will do a world of good. It is the true line on which to proceed.

A SENSELESS OUTCRY.

Our city contemporary alleges that the Ontario Government is very desirous of assuming the management of the jails. The Free Press does not show how this additional work could be of any advantage to the Government, but it cannot be denied that the evidence of a large number of witnesses who went before the Prison Commission in this city and elsewhere was in favor of Government management of the county jails. It is no new idea. The penitentiaries are at present managed by the Dominion Government and the Central Prison by the Provincial authorities. There has been a great outcry for a better system of classification of prisoners and for other reforms in county jail management, and the pretty general opinion appears to be that these changes can be easiest and most economically brought about through the prisons being directly controlled by the Government.

While the subject is under discussion, it is well to remember that a similar outcry was raised against Government control of the liquor licensing business. When the system was taken out of the hands of the ward politicians all kinds of disaster to the public was prophesied, yet it is a notorious fact that while the Government has managed the licensing system with no advantage to itself politically, the change has brought enormous benefits to the community.

POSTPONE THE SALE.

The London Trust has, on the recommendation of the City Council, resolved to offer the baseball grounds for sale as building lots, and the auction has been fixed for Sept. 15 next.

This is a very serious matter. The place is really the only available recreation grounds in the city. Many taxpayers think it would be a great mistake to have them cut up. So does the ADVERTISER. The money obtainable from the sale would be a mere bagatelle compared with the advantages of retaining the grounds for the use of the rising generation.

We beg the Trust to postpone the sale for a time, and thus enable public opinion to be heard.

The grounds should not be sold. Let the means whereby they may be held intact be discussed and a basis reached for their preservation.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

The world moves. Even in Great Britain, where the Established Church so long strove to keep aloof from the Nonconformists, there seems to be a tendency to make the best of the opportunities to mutually advance Christian principles, and to co-operate in good works. Sir H. A. Isaacs, the Lord Mayor of London, is a Jew, but he does not permit that fact to come between him and his duty to forward the public interests. A few days since, he entertained the archbishops and bishops of the Episcopal Church and the heads of the various other Churches of the Christian body. The Bishop of London proposed "The health of the ministers of all denominations." He prayed for unity, and added that he was more pleased to have been asked to propose the toast, because he had also been asked to couple with it the name of the President of the Wesleyan Conference the chief minister of a body for which he had the highest admiration, and this year a minister whom he had long held in great personal esteem. Rev. Charles H. Kelly, in reply, said he did not think that in England there was a probability of immediate union of the several Churches; but it was their duty to cultivate a kind spirit toward each other and co-operate in every good work. While there was so much to do, they would not be warranted in wasting their strength and time in conflict one with another.

Another illustration of how things have changed since Nonconformists were ostracized and persecuted by the State-supported Church was given the other day, when the Episcopal Bishop of Ripon (Dr. Boyd Carpenter) invited the Leeds Nonconformist Ministers' Association to take tea with him at his palace, and explained to them the many sights in and around the grand cathedral. It was, a ministerial chronicler says, a true Eirenicon.

The British exponents of the Gospel may not be moving in a direct route towards organic union, but they are doing the next best thing: they cultivate the spirit that leads to brotherly sympathy and co-operation.

In Canada, the dividing lines are still less tightly drawn. Let Protestants here lead in the grand movement for organic union of the Protestant Churches, and aim to establish the new order of things by the beginning of the twentieth century. That accomplished they may expect to see British Protestantism follow our example within the following couple of decades.

Canada led and Britain followed in public school reform. The chance for setting another good example to the motherland is before the Protestants of Canada.

PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

—The cable informs us that Emperor William, of Russia, has just sent a 36 page letter to his royal neighbor, the Emperor of Austria. The German nabob must be in love.

—The French are becoming more and more afflicted with Anglomania. They have just coined a new word to denote the women who go shopping. "Shoppeuses" is the title given to them. Why not simply shoppers?

—John Brown, son of the hero of Harper's Ferry, who has been immortalized in song, belongs to the class of men who have greatness thrust upon them, but he will have none of it. He is very much annoyed because tourists hunt him up on his quiet fruit farm at Put-in-Bay, O., and insist upon talking over the war with him. He is old John Brown himself, now.

—It is a good thing that the frost wave reached the Northwest at so late a date as Thursday night. The extent of the damage had not been ascertained at the hour of telegraphing; but a great portion of the big crop from this year must have been harvested before the frost came, and only the uncut grain would be endangered. These frost troubles will be minimized as the country is settled up and tree growth becomes general. Meanwhile it is in order to continue the experiments looking to the obtaining of a wheat that shall be as impervious to the influences of frost as is possible, or any early ripening variety.

—In their visit to the Detroit House of Correction on Friday the Ontario Prison Commission found a self-sustaining jail. The prisoners are employed in chair making. The products of their labor are sold at ordinary market prices, and the profits are used to pay the cost of keep and expenses of management. Superintendent Nicholson advised the Ontario authorities to follow the example of Ohio and keep youths inside the reformatory till honest employment can be found for them. He further recommended the adoption of the system of sentencing prisoners for an undetermined period, to be shortened according to their good behavior, with the Ohio parole method as its accompaniment.

—The Vote has to be Got Out, let us say. By whom? Either (1) by those who are public spirited enough to take this work voluntarily on their shoulders, or (2) by those sometimes stigmatized as politicians for revenue and personal objects. As to the first class, it is unfair to lay upon them the work of seeing that the electors do their self-evident duty. As to the class of self-seekers, how undesirable that the work of government—for that is what it amounts to—should be in their hands! Would it not be well for the State to rescue the practical control of the franchise from the one class named and remove a burden from the other by laying upon each elector the legal task of Getting Out His Own Vote? Why not make the experiment during the Ontario and Dominion bye-elections of the next two or three years?

—Mr. W. Thomson, of East Saginaw, Mich., contributes an interesting letter to the Toronto Globe, in which he dwells on the remarkable size which the maskinonge fish has often attained, especially in Canadian rivers and lakes. He says that in 1851 a monster fish of this school was landed above the great dam at Dunnville, which when weighed knocked the beam at 80 pounds. He also chronicles the fact, especially interesting to Londoners, that in the spring of 1835 a now deceased uncle of his, the late Dr. Hiram Lee, speared a maskinonge of 73 pounds on the flooded flats of the Thames, near this city. There are no maskinonge in the Thames to-day, and it is pertinent to inquire what has become of all the food fish with which this fine river and other Western streams teemed in the days of the early settlers? The clearing up of the country and the decrease in the volume of the streams has no doubt had some effect on the fish, but that is not all. The streams have been polluted and the fishermen have not always given the piscatorial breed a fair chance to multiply and replenish the waters, especially during the season of spawning. A very large addition to our food supply would be possible if effectual remedies were applied to these shortcomings. The edict should at once go forth, "Keep the streams clean."

PERTINENT QUERIES.

Toronto Telegram.

The address puts the Government on its defense. Was it because the General did not fill the houses of Ministers of the Crown with loot that they left him to his fate? Restriction of trade means in reality restriction of manufacture, the protection granted some kinds of manufacturing which is increased, acting as a restriction to other kinds of manufacturing, as well as to trade in general. If the people are allowed to buy and sell wherever and with whomsoever they choose, the most profitable as well as the greatest amount of trading and also of manufacturing will be done. Perfect freedom to benefit oneself, while at the same time benefiting our neighbor, is the best principle of trade. Theory and fact agree; truth and righteousness kiss one another.

The Great Blood Purifier.

A Word to the People. | "Truth is Mighty, and will prevail."

THE remarkable effects and most satisfactory results, in every variety of disease arising from IMPURITIES OF THE BLOOD, which are experienced and made manifest from day to day, by those who have taken NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY, for complaints which were pronounced incurable, are surprising to all. In many of these cases, the persons say their pain and sufferings cannot be expressed, as in cases of Scrofula, where apparently the whole body was one mass of corruption.

This celebrated medicine will relieve pain, cleanse and purify the blood, and cure such diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying many remedies, and having suffered for years. Is it not conclusive proof that if you are a sufferer you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the BLOOD, the Circulating Fluid. It can truly be called the

GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER.

The great source of disease originates in the BLOOD, and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention. When the blood becomes lifeless and stagnant, either from change of weather or of climate, want of exercise, irregular diet, or from any other cause, NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY will renew the Blood, carry off the putrid humors, cleanse the stomach, regulate the bowels, and impart a tone of vigor to the whole body.

The conviction is, in the public mind as well as the medical profession, that the remedies supplied by the VEGETABLE KINGDOM are more safe and more effectual in the cure of disease than mineral medicines. The Vegetable Discovery is composed of the juice of most remarkable roots, barks and herbs. It is pleasant to take, and is perfectly safe to give an infant. Allow us to ask you a candid question:—Do you need it? Do not hesitate to try it. You will never regret it. All druggists have it for sale.

MR. JOHN C. FOX, Olinda, writes:—"Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery is giving good satisfaction. Those who have used it say it has done them more good than anything they have ever taken."

IN ITS WORST FORM.—MISS JULIA A. PILSWORTH, Toronto, writes:—"I had Dyspepsia in its worst form for over a year, but after taking three bottles of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, a perfect cure followed. I take great pleasure in recommending it to anyone suffering from Dyspepsia."

MR. W. THAYER, Wright, P.Q., had DYSPEPSIA FOR TWENTY YEARS. Tried many remedies and doctors, but got no relief. His appetite was very poor, had a distressing pain in his side and stomach, and gradual wasting away of flesh, when he heard of and immediately commenced taking Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. The pains have left, and he rejoices in the enjoyment of excellent health; in fact he is quite a new man.

Sold by all Medicine Dealers at $1.00 per Bottle.

THE TURF.

LONDON HUNT OPENING MEET.

The members of the London Hunt opened the sport yesterday afternoon by the first run of the season, and once more the music of the hounds will be heard ringing over the fields. From fifteen to twenty rode "cross country" to the club house, Glenmore, where some time was spent in social conversation and mutual congratulations at the prospect of another season's good sport. The kennels presented a very lively scene, the twenty or more hounds seeming to share in the general pleasure of the occasion. The throw-off took place from Geary's on Adelaide street, from where the course laid three and a half miles east, thence about a mile north and return. Everything went off with a dash, the hounds being in splendid trim, "tongueing" it in fine style, and giving good music all the way. The country through which the course lay was excellent, and while the jumps were rather numerous they were cleared very prettily, some of them being five feet in height. Of course there were a few "headers" owing to that fact, and by way of variety, but then nothing serious resulted beyond a refreshing shaking up and a little chaffing of the victim by the more fortunate ones. A very gratifying feature of the run was the large number of people who followed in carriages. Huntsman Fulcher had so arranged matters that nearly the whole course was visible from the sixth concession, and the concourse of spectators there enjoyed the running and jumping immensely. Among those not the least interested were the land owners, through whose property the course lay and several of them were actually mounted and waiting for the riders to come up, when they joined in the race with great good humor and went a considerable distance. After a splendid run of about seven miles, the meet wound up at the starting point. All the members are enthusiastic over the success of the first run of the season, and are looking forward to the coming meets. William Lawrence, Mr. Fulcher's protegee, filled the position of whipper-in most satisfactorily and called forth many favorable comments on the way he attended to his duty.

The only accident was to Dr. Niven, master, whose horse gave a sudden lurch and threw him heavily. He was taken home and it was there found that a fracture of the collar bone and a couple of ribs had resulted.

THE SECOND DAY AT BARRIE.

BARRIE, Aug. 22.—The second day's races of the Turf Club, which were postponed from yesterday on account of rain, were run to-day. The weather was threatening and the attendance at the park was about 500. The track was in fair condition considering the amount of rain that has fallen within the last couple of days, but it was too heavy for fast time. The programme for to-day was changed slightly owing to the 4-year-old class not filling, and a match trot was substituted. It was between Allie F., owned by W. S. Fletcher, of St. Catharines, and Maud B., owned by J. Broderick, of Phelpston. Maud B. won easily in three straight heats. Time, 2:59½, 2:59, 2:59½.

Three-minute class—Purse $300, divided; $150 to first, $75 to second and $25 to third.

| Butcher Boy, b.g., A. Fisher, Collingwood | 3 | 3 | 3 |

Time—2:36, 2:36½, 2:36½.

The event of the day was the running race, one mile and repeat, for a purse of $150, divided; 75 per cent. to first, 25 per cent. to second. More interest was taken in this race on account of the same horses competing as in the first day's running race over which there was so much kicking. The entries were Minnie Maritana, b. m., J. Harkley, Toronto; Colonist, b. g., Northgrave & McWilliam, Oshawa; Duchess, b. m., R. R. Rogers, Stayner. Colonist won easily in both heats, but it was a hard struggle between Minnie Maritana and Duchess for second money. Minnie Maritana took second in the first heat by a neck. In the repeat the owner of Duchess rode himself and succeeded in capturing second money by a length. The race was very exciting. Time, 1:52½, 1:54½. The only mishap of the day occured to Secretary Ferguson, who was thrown from his rig while driving in the park. The horse took fright at some children and bolted, almost turning the rig upside down. He hung on to the lines like a brick till the horse was caught. No damage was done to the horse or rig, and with the exception of a couple of bruises on the knee and a bad shaking up, Mr. Ferguson rose out of the sand serenely.

ROSEWOOD DEFEATS LIZZIE M.

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 22.—A trotting match for $100 a side took place this afternoon on the St. Thomas Driving Club's track between Dr. Evely's Lizzie M., of this city, and W. J. Thompson's Rosewood, of London. The latter won.

BASEBALL.

ST. MARYS AND THE GRAND TRUNK.

The Grand Trunk team visited St. Marys yesterday afternoon and played a game with the team of that place, defeating them easily by the score of 15 to 6. Ford's erratic pitching was the main cause of the railroaders running their total up so high, seven men being sent to first on balls and one hit by pitched ball. The Grand Trunk were unable to secure an earned run, owing to the poor fielding of their opponents, although they hit hard at times. The following is the score:

AMATEUR LEAGUE MEETING.

Last evening a meeting of the Amateur Baseball League was held at the City Hotel, at which all the clubs were represented with the exception of the G. T. R. who were out of the city. The object of the meeting was to consider the advisability of dropping out of the league, two or three of those clubs, whose record has not been satisfactory to the majority of the teams. After some discussion, however, the representatives of these clubs promised to see that matters would be conducted in future in a better shape, and the discussion was allowed to drop. The question whether a man shall be allowed to play with half a dozen different teams, as has been frequently the case this season, was also taken up, but no definite action was taken, it being decided to hold a meeting next Tuesday evening for the purpose of further considering and laying down some regulations on the matter.

FLYS.

The Wolverines claim to have acquired the services of Pete and Fred Wood.

The Stars are anxious to give the Grand Trunk club a hustle. Thursday next has been proposed as the day.

E. Morkin and T. Webb, late of the Riversides, will play the balance of the season with the London West Stars. The former will play second and the latter short.

The Stars and Wolverines were to have tried conclusions yesterday, but owing to the hasty arrangement of the match very few of the players materialized. The game will be played next Tuesday.

THE TRIGGER.

RODNEY VS. LONDON.

The Rodney Gun Club, an association made up of all the crack shots along the M.C.R. line, tried conclusions with a team of ten men from the London Gun Club on the home grounds yesterday. The local men thought that they would have an easy thing to do in worsting their opponents, and for this reason were not careful to pick out all their good shots; but before the first squad had finished firing the majority of them had greatly changed their minds, as the boys from the "quail grounds" demonstrated clearly that they knew how to handle their guns. At the finish of the first squad the visitors lead with 90 dead birds to their credit, against 76 for London. The home team's second squad, however, included some of their best shots, such as Redpath, Evans and Jaynes, who began their work with a determination to make 100 out of a possible 150, and the score shows that they succeeded, Redpath making the highest score of the day by securing 25 birds out of the possible 30. Messrs. James, Evans and McDougall did some excellent shooting. Owing to the presence of some newspaper men from St. Thomas who annexed the duplicate score it was impossible to secure a copy in time for earlier publication. The following is the score:

THE COMING TOURNAMENT.

Arrangements are fast being completed by the Executive Committee of the London Gun Club for the holding of a grand tournament in this city under the auspices of the club. Although the exact day has not been set it has been decided to hold it during the second week of October. Mr. H. A. Penrose, of Corry, Pa., has been engaged to superintend the affairs of the meeting, and will no doubt add much to its success by his long experience in sporting matters. The committee intend to profit by the experience of the recent Toronto tournament, and have decided that the tournament shall be open to none but Canadian sportsmen, as in the Toronto meeting, about seventeen Americans carried off fully two-thirds of the prizes, and by their entrance kept out many Canadians who refused to shoot with them.

The committee expect to have a prize list amounting to $1,500 and have already received intimation from several of the more prominent shooters of Western Ontario that they will be present. The programme will be varied somewhat from ordinary trap shooting by a few hundred shots at live birds. Keystone targets and the rapid-firing system will be the order for trap shooting. Subscriptions will be placed before the citizens in a few days and the committee expect that as the sportsmen have been characterized for their liberality that the merchants and others will not be backward in evincing sufficient interest in the tournament to insure its success. Team shooting will constitute a feature of the affair.

THE STICK.

A large crowd of sports gathered at Queen's Park last evening to witness the 100-yards dash between J. D. McCrimmon and J. C. Markle. The race was for $20. Mr. Alex. Davis acted as started and Mr. Thomas Gillean filled the capacity of judge. McCrimmon proved too fast for his rival competitor and won easily in 12 seconds. A handicap race was then run for a sweepstake of $2 a head. Messrs. Davis, McCrimmon, Meek, Ross, Lashbrook and Tracy started in this event. Davis started at the scratch, McCrimmon and Ross having 13 yards, Meek 12, Lashbrook 15 and Tracy 23. ## WHOLESALE PILFERING.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnston and George Johnston Committed for Trial in the Guthrie Home Case.

The charges of larceny against the Johnston family were heard before Squire Jarvis in the Interim Sessions room yesterday afternoon. The family, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnston and Peter, Alexander, William, John and George, five sons, lived a short distance from the Guthrie Home, which was closed up in July. Manager H. Gibbens was left in charge of the building, and shortly after it had been closed he missed a couple of hams and two sides of bacon. On the evening of Aug. 12 the manager remained on the watch until about 12 o'clock, when he left and went home. Some time during his absence and the following day another lot of goods was carried off. These depredations continued until the house was almost depleted, and the manager communicated with the Board of Managers, who secured the services of Detectives Graham and Ward to work up the case. While on watch the detectives had reason to suspect that the Johnstons were implicated in the stealing, and took out a search warrant for the purpose of examining their premises. Their search was rewarded by the finding of eleven blankets, four tablecloths, eight towels, two large pieces of oilcloth, 30 tin cups, seven granite cups, a dozen silver spoons, cherry stoner, meat chopper, two bed-ticks, two mirrors, a granite pail, two lamps, and several other articles belonging to the Home. About three cords of wood had been taken from the Home, and the detectives laid this at the Johnstons' door.

When the case was called the charge against Peter, Alexander, William and John, the four older boys, was dropped. Charles Johnston, the father, and George, a son about 14 years old, were charged with stealing wood. Mr. Francis Love appeared for the accused. The charge was dismissed. The boy was then charged with larceny of the articles found in the house, and his mother and father were charged with receiving and harboring stolen goods. The youth admitted his guilt, but Mr. and Mrs. Johnston denied all knowledge of the affair. The Magistrate decided to send all three for trial, the boy being committed to jail, while Mr. and Mrs. Johnston were admitted to bail in two sureties of $100 and themselves for $200.

SEATS FOR THE SCHOLARS

Makes Business for Number Two Committee of the Board of Education—Tenders Called for Seats, Coal and Heating and Ventilation in Askin Street School.

No. 2 Committee of the Board of Education met last evening. There were present: Trustees Turner (chairman), Dewar, Brady, Childs, Craig, Cook, Woodward, Durdin, Inspector Boyle, Secretary Abbott and Overseer Dodds.

A communication was received from Chairman Jeffery regarding the necessity of procuring seats for the schools and also for the kalsomining of the same. Filed.

Trustee Craig moved that new seats be provided for two rooms in each school, and the remaining be furnished with those on hand from the Central School building.

Trustee Childs moved in amendment that all the available seats on hand be put into the new schools, and that the others required be purchased new. Carried.

On motion of Trustee Craig it was decided to advertise for tenders (and samples) for 250 seats with red oak tops, the same to be in by 7 p.m. on Aug. 27.

Trustee Durdin's motion that tenders be called for repairing the seats now on hand was also carried.

Tenders will also be called for about 1,600 feet of slate blackboard and for kalsomining four schools.

A committee was appointed consisting of Messrs. Turner, Childs and Boyle, to examine the seats in stock and with power to place them where they saw fit.

The Secretary was instructed to advertise for the coal supply, the specifications to be the same as last year.

Trustee Dewar reported having had an interview with No. 1 Committe of the City Council regarding the estimates of the Board, and more particularly about the improvements necessary at the Askin street school. The committee were opposed to picking out any specific amount in the estimates, and it was their intention to recommend the whole estimate of the Board to the City Council for adoption.

Trustee Dewar then moved, seconded by Trustee Cook, that the necessary work required for the introduction of the system of heating and ventilation, as ordered by the Board, in Askin street school be proceeded with as soon as possible, on the understanding that the City Council pass the estimates for such work as may be specified in the report of No. 1 Committee of the City Council. Carried.

Mr. Durdin moved that tenders be called for gas fixtures in the basements of the public schools, and also for the chemical and other rooms in the Collegiate Institute. Carried.

Adjourned.

Photographer—Please look a little pleasant, Miss. I know it's hard, but it's only for a moment.

The increase in sales of these two brands is enormous proof that a superior article will force itself to the front.

Buz-z-z-z-zip.

There is more fun in a sheet of sticky fly paper than in the average negro minstrel. Watch the kitten playing with it on the new carpet; the latter is ruined for ever; the kitten goes into a fit and all the women and children rush out of the house in terror. If you want to rid your house of flies, buy Wilson's Fly Poison Pads, and use as directed. Nothing else will clear them out thoroughly. Sold at 10c. by all druggists.

Live Stock Markets.

MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—There were about 84 milch cows and strippers offered on this market to-day. A good many milkmen came round, but were not caring to buy except at a bargain, for most of them have about all the milk they can handle at present. Only a few sales were made before 11 o'clock, and it is probable that a considerable number will have to be held over for a future market. There were no extra cows offered to-day. Two of the best cows were sold for $82 50, and two others for $70, with several other sales of pretty good cows at from $30 to $35 each.

Leave to plaintiff to apply at expiration of four months. Further directions and costs reserved.

Several new members were admitted to the association after which the business of the session was proceeded with. A communication was read calling attention of the members to the need of having a prisoners' aid association to help reformed prisoners to secure honest employment and to otherwise look after them. A committee was appointed to consider the matter and report at next meeting. The question of securing the services of the Temperance Evangelist Burdick was also laid over until Monday evening, when a representative temperance audience will deal with the matter.

Committed for Insanity.

The attention of the Police Court was occupied for half an hour this morning in deciding whether Thomas Kennedy, charged with insanity and assault by Mrs. Davis, was a fit subject to be at large. Kennedy's counsel, Mr. Love, submitted that his client had been in the same condition for over 30 years, and he was no more dangerous now than he was then. The boys in the neighborhood were in the habit of teasing him and sometimes he became angry and chased them. Dr. Smith was sworn, and stated that Kennedy, in his opinion, was entirely demented; and although in general harmless, was subject to violent fits of temper, in which he might be dangerous. Mrs. Davis said that another boy had teased him, and he had entered her house and struck her in his passion. The Magistrate thought that as he was irresponsible for his actions he might do some harm, and committed him to be tried before Judge Elliot.

Outcome of a Midnight Debauch.

A large crowd of spectators were present when Squire Peters called the case of assault preferred by Henry Stewart against William Donahoe and James Webb. Stewart, who has had a somewhat checkered career, told a fanciful story of the assault. In company with two companions and a disreputable woman, he said, he had spent Sunday night and Sunday morning in a debauch near Masonville, and that at daybreak he was met by the accused and beaten over the head until he made his escape. Two witnesses were called by the prosecution to substantiate his evidence, but instead of corroborating it they contradicted the complainant in every particular. One of them said that the complainant struck the woman with his belt and otherwise abused her, and that he wanted to fight with them before the defendants came upon the scene. Donahoe and Webb, they stated, wanted to take the woman home in order to save her from Stewart's brutality, and that Stewart resented by attacking them. The Magistrate dismissed the case with costs on the complainant. A counter-charge was afterwards entered against Stewart.

DIANA WENTWORTH,

Or, The Professor's Daughter.

"That was what he meant," she whispered to herself; "that is how it came to an end." He had known all—who she was, and all about her. What had he thought of all the things she had said about old lineage being a prop to support a weak man or woman? How ridiculous such things seemed now—haw small and paltry before the actual reality! He had scorned them; he had been a man and she a woman—that was all he had thought. They had been separated by an immense gulf, not of class alone; or rather he had been separated from her by a gulf, and she from him by a ditch. He had cleared the gulf at a bound, while she stood shivering and shaking, on the brink of her ditch. The color rose to her cheeks, and she hid her face in her hands. How unworthy she was of him! Knowing what she knew now, could she ever look him in the face again? Her hands sank into her lap, and again she looked out. She saw the gray walls of the abbey and the gray sky through the arched windows—she heard the sound of the rippling water. A gray look settled down on her face, as she whispered, "I know now, I know now."

That same evening Reuben Garthwaite was slowly and painfully composing a letter to his brother. When it was finished, a translation of it into ordinary English would have run as follows:

"To JOHN GARTHWAITE:

"I can keep going no longer, and land must be sold. I promised not to let it go without telling you, so I send you word; but I tell you at the same time that the Merediths will bid for it, and it shall go to the highest bidder, pride or no pride—so now you know.

REUBEN GARTHWAITE.

This letter was addressed to

JOHN GARTHWAITE,
Hotel Belle Vue,
Dresden,
Saxony.

CHAPTER XXIII.

COMING HOME.

John Garthwaite returned to Jacewo the day after Diana had left it. For a little time he refrained from going to the Camphausens', hoping to meet Diana out of doors it would have been painful to both of them to meet in an ordinary way, with his half-finished declaration in their minds. The days went on, and he did not meet her; a week passed and he had not so much as caught a glimpse of her. He was surprised at first, and then surprise changed into uneasiness. Was she ill? He bore the suspense and anxiety for a few days, and then he made up his mind to go to the Camphausens', and at least get tidings of her. He called early in the afternoon, when he thought it was not very likely that he would see Diana, and found Frau Camphausen lounging over her fashion-paper and her cup of coffee. He was scarcely seated before she launched out into a lengthy and elaborate account of Miss Wentworth's sudden departure for England. He listened in silence, with a feeling at his heart that this boded no good to him. When she had finished he said a few words of regret that he had not been able to say good-by to Miss Wentworth and then the subject dropped. He had a little talk with Herr Camphausen, then went away—nor did he mention Diana's name again during the rest of his sojourn at Jacewo.

He thought of her often. Abstracting himself from his surroundings, he called up in his mind Garshill, with its ruined castle and abbey, its swelling moors, its winding river. Woods and hills grew out of the plain surrounding him, the great lake shrank into the dimensions of a mountain tarn, the corn and potato fields changed into seas of heather, the ruined Polish church became a crumbling castle, its broken tower in a stately keep. The church bell tinkling sounded to his ears like the curfew ringing from the quaint old church in Garshill market-place, with which he had been familiar since childhood. The stuccoed etages vanished, and were replaced by old stone dwellings of Yorkshire squires, and oldest and most beautiful of was Garshill Abbey. In the gardens he saw a beautiful girl wandering, to whom all his heart went out; and when he said "Diana," she turned and looked at him with eyes half gay, half sad so that he could not read their meaning, and felt restless and unhappy.

But this was only a dream which stole upon him unawares in his lone hours, sometimes when he passed the very spot where he had found Diana's handkerchief caught on a bush. Sometimes he thought of that scene in the wood, and he asked himself what it meant. Was her loveliness really only of face and figure? Had she in truth no deeper charm than that of airily light manner of speech? Many and many a time he had recoiled from facing these questions, feeling that whatever revelations might disappoint and vex his soul, he would still love her.

These thoughts came only occasionally. His general reflections were of a more practical nature. He knew that whatever hidden capacity for love and endurance Diana might have, she had a very open and declared love of elegance and refinement, and so far the life at Garshill would suit her perfectly. He thought of the people among whom she lived, and said, half aloud:

"If she gets among that set, she runs a very fair chance of being ruined. I hope she may have the strength to resist their influence but I dare not say more than I hope it!"

"No," he began again, after a pause, "I won't believe wrong of her. There is the making of a fine and noble woman in her, if she only gets into the right hands. I could have made her into one—I know it; I had that influence over her. If her nature had not been wrapped by prejudice and a ridiculous education, she would have consented to what I was going to ask her. We are separated now, and for good, I fear; or if we ever meet at Garshill, and she knows who I am, she will not speak to me. I can see her turn her long neck, and lift her lip and her eyebrows at the sight of me among my people when she is among hers."

Then a sudden look illuminated his face, and for the moment lent is absolute beauty. He was thinking.

"It is just possible that among those very people she may find her true self and work out her own salvation. If she does that, she will be the noblest woman in the world."

In the autumn his work was finished, and he left Jacewo and went for a brief holiday to Dresden before returning to England. He did not know what he would do when he got to England; he was strongly tempted to go to Garshill, and while he was debating should he go or not, he got his brother's note, which was equivalent to a summons home. He traveled with all speed, and, having reached Garshill by the last train, took his portmanteau in his hand and set off to walk the five miles to Becktop farm. It was dark and he met no one; and as he strode along, in spite of his efforts to concentrate his thoughts on the matter which had so suddenly brought him back to a place which he had not visited for thirteen years, they would wander to Diana. With this sale impending, she must have heard his name. Which side had she espoused? He could not help thinking of her as he trod quickly and with certainty the path which he had not seen for so many years; but he never took a wrong turn, or made a false step, and about 9 o'clock he reached the farm.

In spite of his long absence there was no greeting for him. Reuben, sitting brooding over the fire almost lost in a cloud of tobacco smoke, just looked up and grunted; his mother, who had always resented the fate which had bestowed both brains and looks on her youngest son, begged that he would shut the door, and not "mucky" her clean floor with his boots, clogged with the mud of country roads, saturated with autumn rain.

He complied with her request, and took off his boots without moving from the spot on which he stood; then he came forward and wished them a collective "good-evening."

The words were echoed from a corner of the kitchen, and then one saw that there was a second woman in the room. She was 30 years of age, but looked ten years older. Her figure was spoiled with rough work; her face was old and careworn. There was neither beauty or grace about her—she looked commonplace and uninteresting, until she raised her eyes to those of her cousin John, and then anyone watching her knew at once that there was a romance in her life—a hidden love in her heart.

John turned quickly to her as soon as he heard her voice, and, crossing the floor, shook hands with her, his whole face relaxing with a smile of pleasure and affection as he did so.

"Ah, Susan," he said, "you are as usual the only one to give me a word of welcome, and no doubt I have to thank you for this."

He nodded towards the table which was laid for supper; and Susan turned her face aside and got up saying hastily:

"You must want something to eat; you have come far to-day."

"It is like your kind self to think of me. I could do with a mouthful of bread and cheese and a glass of ale."

"I have something better for you than that," she said with a smile, going to the oven and taking a brown stewpot therefrom; after which she busied herself with setting a hot supper before him.

He accepted her service passively. He felt grateful to her; but the clearest thought in his mind, as he watched he undergrown figure moving about, was the recollection of something Diana had once said. He had told her that he had a cousin at home, and soon afterwards had taken her shawl to wrap it round her. Watching her, and not thinking of what he was doing, he had held it too low, and had been roused from his dream by hearing her say:

"I realize one thing about your cousin—that she is not as tall as I am."

He had forgotten the little incident; now it came back to him, and he smiled at the words—they were so like Diana. The thought of her nearness to him sent a glow through his heart; and when Susan had put the dish before him and turned to resume her sewing, he caught her hand and stopped her saying:

"If you do not share it, I shall eat nothing; it will not taste good alone."

She smiled rather sadly, but did his bidding; and they sat and talked without interruption or attention from the others. John inquired after her health, asked what she had been doing with herself all these long years, hoped she was not working too hard; he knew his mother and brother were exacting. Now that he had come home, he said, she should have some rest; he would help her with the heavy work. He was as kind and considerate as he had ever been; and Susan heard him with an aching heart, and a wild senseless desire to snatch up his hand, press it to her lips, and, having bathed it with her tears, to rush from the room, and be seen no more.

For hot weather the "Montserrat" Lime-Fruit Juice, diluted and sweetened to the taste, is a delightful and healthful drink.

The lazy become industrious in the evening

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband; but if she is weak and nervous and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they will make her "feel like a different person," at least so they all say, and their husbands say so, too.

Riches either serve or govern the possessor.

Carter's Little Liver Pills must not be confounded with common Cathartic or Purgative Pills, as they are entirely unlike them in every respect. One trial will prove their superiority

Great sins make great sufferers.

A Dinner Pill.—Many persons suffer excruciating agony after partaking of a hearty dinner. The food partaken of is like a ball of lead upon the stomach, and instead of being a healthy nutriment it becomes a poison to the sytem. Dr. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are wonderful correctives of such troubles. They correct acidity, open the secretions and conver the food partaken of into healthy nutriment. They are just the medicine to take if troubled with Indigestion or Dyspepsia.

Drop the Old and Hard Way. Try this.

Dip the pieces one by one in lukewarm water and rub the soap on lightly, taking care to soap each piece all over.

—Five coal dealers put in exactly the same figures at last night's meeting of No. 1 Committee for supplying city coal. Some people think there is a combine.

—Mrs. and Miss Neeve, who have been visiting in London, have returned to Niagara Falls, accompanied by Miss Helbourne, of Sansome House.

—Mr. McNully, of Napier, was taken home a few days from the London Hospital. The doctors have very slight hopes of his recovery. Dr. Nixon, of Arva, accompanied him.

—The other evening the home of Mr. Flannery on Paul street, London West, was entered while he was away from home and some articles carried off. Then the house was set on fire, but was noticed by some passersby in time to extinguish the flames before much damage was done. Later some of the articles were found in an adjoining field.

—Mr. McCready, assistant agent of the G. T. R., of this city, and his family arrived in Hamilton yesterday morning on a visit to Mr. J. H. Butler, West avenue south. His little boy, Roddie, went playing on the fence soon after reaching the house and fell, catching his foot in one of the pickets. The force of the fall broke the poor little fellow's leg in three places—at the ankle and at two places between it and the knee.

—A prominent local artist stated this morning that the much-talked of art annex to the Western Fair would be built immediately. Although the recommendation of the Finance Committee would have to be sanctioned by the Council, the artists, he said, were satisfied that the money would be forthcoming. If the work was delayed until the Council's action was decided it would be too late to complete the building.

—Three young men from London drove to the McLean property, one and a half miles east of Dorchester Station, on Saturday, accompanied with a white bird dog, on the pretense of shooting woodcock, which commenced on Friday. Instead of that they played havoc with three bevies of partridges. These young men will answer before a J. P. on two charges of shooting game out of season and trespassing.—[Aylmer Sun.

Miss Lyons and Miss Park, of Brantford, Mrs. Dr. Nellis, of Dayton, Ohio, and Miss Hunt, of London, are visiting Mrs. E. N. Hunt, at Idlewild.

The weather has been a little on the cool side lately.

Tenders Let for Supplies.

A meeting of the Hospital Trust was held in the City Hall yesterday afternoon, the members present being Col. Lewis (chairman), Mayor Taylor, and Trustees Complin, Gilmour and Purdom. The auditor's statement was received and filed. Mr. Wm. Gartshore's communication respecting the support of Mr. Barbon in the hospital was referred to Mayor Taylor with power. The following contracts for hospital supplies were awarded: Messrs. John Lawson, groceries at 13 cents off the schedule rate; John Scandrett, liquors; David Carroll, milk, 3¼ and 3⅜ cents per quart; J. Ranahan, bread, 2¼ cents per pound; J. J. Smith, fish; Stanton & Co., ice, $63; A. E. H. Jolliffe, beef and meats; M. Baldwin, coal, at $5 30, $5, $4 35 for grate and egg, soft and steam lump; T. A. Rowat & Co, tea. It was decided to call for new tenders for butter and eggs, the one received being high. The Board then adjourned.

Toronto Opinion of London's Fair.

London is fortunate in being situated in the midst of a great agricultural country, and the directors of the Western Fair Association have ever been cognizant of this fact and have been steadily working for a number of years to bring their exhibition up to a standard equal to the best fairs in America. This year they claim to have about reached their zenith. It is a pleasure to be able to bring before the notice of the public such enterprise and good management which has in the face of great difficulties placed their exhibition on so satisfactory a basis. It is expected by the management to receive a much larger exhibit of stock this year than formerly, not only through the west but also in the eastern section of Ontario, and it is particularly significant to note that already quite a number of entries have been received from exhibitors throughout the eastern section. We wish the London people every success in their enterprise, and hope the attendance will be such as will repay them and secure in the future a continuance of the public patronage which their great fair justly merits.—[Toronto Globe.

There are few, if any, in the great army of smokers who have not been, by experience, placed in a position to judge as to the merits of the "Norma" 10-cent cigar manufactured by H. McKay & Co., of London. In almost every cigar store and hotel in Canada this pet of all lovers of 10-cent goods has found its way, and is finding rapid and constantly increased sale. Unlike other similar goods, its fame is not of a transient nature. The "Norma" contains all the merits of the imported cigar, and has in many cases supplanted its more expensive rivals, and each successive season but adds to its host of admiring consumers. The large establishment of H. McKay & Co. is kept continually engaged in supplying the demands made upon them for the "Norma."

GLAD TIDINGS.

"Enrollment Plan." "The Enrollment Plan" is a movement among the Episcopalians of this country to raise $1,000,000 for missions, domestic and foreign, from 200,000 contributors of $5 each. It was the project of Mr. W. A. M. Fuller, deceased, and The Churchman, of New York, is now pressing it. Under the original impulse the fund was carried up to $125,000.

Anti-Christian. There is just now a special anti-Christian movement in China, originating in the city of Tsang-sha, capital of the Province of Hu-nan. It is the work of the litterati of that city, backed by official and financial help. Direct complaint to the Viceroy of the Kwo-Hu Provinces from resident missionaries, through the foreign consuls, appears to have checked it, temporarily at least.

North Sea Missions. Twenty thousand pounds were contributed in England last year to sustain missionary operations on the North Sea among English deep-sea fishermen. Ten fully-equipped evangelizing vessels, three of which are hospital ships, are employed in the work. "One of the fishermen, greatly moved by the earnestness of a woman missionary, expressed his surprise and gratitude that she 'had come out to do us North Sea dogs good.'"

A Noble Epitaph. In a pretty church on Anieteum, one of the Loyalty Islands, or New Hebrides, is a tablet erected by grateful natives to their missionary, John Geddie, who died in 1872. On this tablet is inscribed in their language the following:

When he landed in 1843
there were no Christians here, and when he left
there were no heathen.

New York Mission and Tract Society. Seven hundred and fifty dollars has been pledged to the treasury of the New York City Mission and Tract Society for the purpose of scattering broadcast in the lower part of the city, and especially among the mechanic classes, 50,000 copies of a valuable pamphlet on the inspiration of the Bible, which has been of great service among the same people in London, England. In New York the pamphlet will be printed in English, German, French, Italian, Bohemian and Spanish. The distribution will be made during the coming fall.

Missionaries' Conference at Shanghai. About 300 delegates were at the General Conference of Protestant Missionaries at Shanghai, China, held for a fortnight in May last. A volume of a thousand pages will be issued containing the papers and discussions. "And," says the Congregationalist, "one of the practical and important outcomes of the Conference is an importunate appeal sent out by representatives of that great interdenominational gathering to all the Protestant Churches of Christian lands for a re-enforcement of 1,000 men to enter China within five years and labor in behalf of the 300,000,000 of unevangelized heathen. Not ministers only are besought, but unordained men—evangelists, teachers and physicians—are called for."

A Chance for a Congregation. Bishop Thoburn, at Northfield, in speaking of the unequal distribution of ministers for the conversion of the world, said: "I enter American villages with a population of 1,400 people. There are three churches and three ministers. Neither church is ever comfortably filled, and to put all the people who attend church on the Sabbath in one edifice would make only an ordinary congregation in size. It is not too much to say that either one of those three stationed ministers could easily preach to and pastor that whole people. If those two superfluous ministers in that town will come to India for a place to labor, I will give them their choice of 1,500 villages of large population in which the name of Jesus Christ has never been heard."

A Brahmin's Last Words. Lord Northbrook said at a recent meeting: "I was once speaking to a young man who had passed the highest examinations of the Calcutta University with the greatest honor. He told me this story, and a very remarkable story it was. He said: 'When my father was lying upon his deathbed'—his father was, like himself, a Brahmin of high caste, a well-educated man—'and we his children gathered around weeping, he said to us: "If ever you forsake the religion of your fathers'"—Stop! what a change is this—that a Brahmin of high caste, as he lies on his deathbed and sees his children gathered around him and prepares to give them his last solemn words, is thinking of their forsaking the religion of their fathers! "'If ever you forsake the religion of your fathers, you had better become Christians, for I know not," said the dying man—and this is inexpressibly sad—"whether any religion is true, but if any religion is true, it is Christianity."'"

Why Do the Heathen Rage? Not long ago the British Ambassador at the Persian Court publicly presented a copy of the Bible to the Shah. At once there was an outburst of rage among the Mohammedan population, and the guard of the British Legation was doubled! What is the matter with the Mohammedans? Suppose the Persian Ambassador should bring a magnificent copy of the Koran to the Queen of England or the President of the United States; and suppose the Chinese Ambassador should follow with the writings of Confucius; suppose someone else should present a copy of the Book of Mormom, and others should bring volumes containing the writings of Zoroaster and Buddha, would there be a riot or an earthquake? All these gifts would probably be received with thanks, and perhaps deposited in some great library and left to slumber there in peace till disturbed by the research of the curious. Christianity can afford to hear what men say and to read what men write. It can tolerate free speech and free discussion. Its foundations are too broad for panics, but when the Bible appears on the scene it seems to just set the devil crazy to do something to oppose it.—[Armory.

WITH THE POETS.

THE HEART.

My heart hath chambers twain;
Within there dwell,
Each in her cell,
Blithe Joy and sobbing Pain.

When Joy awakes in glee,
Pain ceases to weep,
Her eyes close in sleep,
And Joy exults with me.

Laugh lightly, softly, happy Joy,
Lest mirth too loud should break
The fitful rest of weary Pain,
And she again should wake.

—From the German of Neumann. Translated by Lilian Gold.

UNCLE SIDNEY'S VIEWS.

I hold that the true age of wisdom is when
We are boys and girls, and not women and men;
When, as credulous children, we know things because
We believe them—however averse to the laws.
It is faith, then, not science and reason, I say,
That is genuine wisdom—and would that, to-day,
We, as then, were as wise, and ineffably blest,
As to live, love and die, and trust God for the rest!

So I simply deny the old notion, you know,
That the wiser we get the older we grow,
For in youth, all we know we are certain of; Now
The greater our knowledge the more we allow
For skeptical margin; and hence I regret
That the world isn't flat, and the sun doesn't set,
And we may not go creeping up home, when we die,
Through the moon, like a round, yellow hole in the sky.

—James Whitcomb Riley in Indianapolis News.

TO ANNETTE.

O'er what wild abyss of trackless starry spaces,
Far beyond the farthest orbs of night,
Where the soul of man in visions wandering
Finds no home, no resting-place, no haven,
Whither, darling, hast thou taken flight?

Oh, our own one! oh, our loved one! oh, our lost one!
One poor moment from this bitter "Now,"
Hand to hand, and heart to heart we held thee;
One brief moment more, and hands and hearts are empty;
Where art thou?

From the darkness, from the silence, the remoteness,
Of the life of earth and sense and sight,
Lo! we call upon thee through the fast-closed portals,—
Call upon thee with old words of longing!
Child of Light!

Hear us! though the veil be thick with shadowy blackness;
Though to span the awful gulf the wings of Thought should faint;
Heaven and hell, and life and death are all too weak to sunder
Soul from soul when love would bridge the distance,—
Hear, sweet saint!

Mothers, sisters, brothers, friends, we call thee!
Earthward once more turn thy footsteps on the starry stair;
Whisper peace in midnight dreams and daylight visions,
Tell us that though life be fleeting. Love is deathless.
Here, or there!

—Bryan Charles Waller.

January, 1890. —Temple Bar.

A MARRIAGE SONG.

Two have joined their hands, and said
Words forever binding.
Cynic sneers at wedded bliss
Bring no fears; the treasure is
Hidden past their finding.

What though other loves have proved
Hollow and deceiving?
Angels fell, yet angels stand;
Love as well may still command
Uttermost believing.

What if in a world of care,
Many griefs await them?
Sorrows borne with will resigned,
Hearts that mourn more closely bind
If love consecrate them.

Two have joined their hands, and said
Words forever binding.
Depth nor height of wedded bliss,
If aright they seek it, is
Hidden past their finding.

—Katherine B. Coutts.

THOUGHTS THAT BREATHE.

Some people live looking within at their failures. Some people live looking around at their hindrances. Some people live looking up at their Saviour—they face the sunny south.—[Mark Guy Pearse.

Almighty God! grant me thy grace to be faithful in action, and not anxious about success. My only concern is to do thy will, and to lose myself in thee, whenever engaged in duty. It is for thee to give to my weak efforts such fruits as thou seest fit; none, if such be thy pleasure.—[Fenelon.

Christians entirely miss the point of the Lord's command when they refer the taking up of the cross only to the crosses or trials of life. It means much more. The cross means death. Taking up the cross means going out to die. It is just in the time of prosperity that we most need to bear the cross. Taking up the cross and following him is nothing less than living every day with our own life and will given up to death.—[Rev. Andrew Murray.

In the morning when thou risest unwillingly, let these thoughts be present: "I am rising to the work of a human being. Why, then, am I dissatisfied if I am going to do the things for which I exist, and for which I was brought into the world? Or have I been made for this, to lie in the bedclothes and keep myself warm? But this is more pleasant." Dost thou not exist, then, to take thy pleasure, and not for action or exertion? Dost thou not see the little plants, the little birds, the ants, the spiders, the bees, working together to put in order their several parts of the universe? And art thou unwilling to do the work of a human being, and dost thou not make haste to do that which is according to thy nature?—[Marcus Aurelius.

Out of the region of cloud of rain,
Out of the cares that oppress the brain,
Out of the body of sin and pain,
"I move into the light!"

Beyond the noise of creation's jars,
Higher than all the worlds and stars,
Higher than limits of reason's bars
"I come into the light!"

We follow after to those high spheres;
Notes of rapture fall on our ears;
Out of our darkness, our sins and fears,
"We move into the light!"

SUNDAY AFTERNOON.

PREVAILING PRAYER.

By the Rev. Lyman Abbott, in Christian Union.

The Cretans made their statue of Jove without ears, for, they said, it is derogatory to Jove to imagine that he can pay any attention to the cries of mortals. There are still not a few in this Christian land of ours who worship the Cretan Jove; who believe that God is deaf and blind to the wants of humanity. All conceptions of God which are derived from nature, which suppose that natural phenomena are the glass through which we see God darkly, are Cretan. Very different was the portraiture of our Father which is in heaven which Christ gave to his disciples; very different is the portraiture which the Bible gives from its alpha to its omega. In its opening chapter it declares that God made, not nature, but man in his own image; throughout its history it sets in antagonism to the pagan deifications of nature pictures of God drawn from human experience. It represents God in his communications with men as coming to them in human form to give emphasis to the fact that the human heart interprets him. It entitles him a King, a Shepherd, a Father, a Mother; and finally it reaches its climax in the human life of Jesus of Nazareth, in whom we see the brightness of God's glory and the express image of his person.

This fundamental truth, that God's nature is mobile, receptive, responsive, that it feels the touch of human want and answers with divine sympathy, is strikingly set forth in the parable of the unjust judge. Judges in the East are, with rare exceptions, the incarnation of hard-hearted and irresponsible tyranny. They are almost universally corrupt; they are politicians who have obtained their offices for the sake of perquisites; they sell justice in the open market to the highest bidder; all that conscience even requires of them, so degenerate is the conscience of the Oriental judge, is that they deliver the goods which they have contracted to deliver. A poor woman without the means of appealing to the cupidity of such a judge suffers under grievous wrong. She appeals to the judge for help and for the punishment of the wrong-doer. At first he refuses to listen to her. He fears neither God nor man; but he says, "Because this widow troubleth me I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me." If, says Christ in effect, the most indifferent and irresponsible of men, one most unsympathetic, most conscienceless, can nevertheless be moved by the cries of a hapless widow, how much more shall the infinite Father, out of his tenderness, his compassion and his sense of justice, answer to the cry of human need, and visit with punishment human wrong! His silence is not the silence or indifference or unconcern It is not the silence of a blind or deaf God. He is not an eternal Law, incapable of feeling; nor a beatific Brahm living in an eternal and serene sleep; he is a Father, and there is not a single injustice or hardship or suffering which his eye does not behold, his mind make note of, his heart feel, and of which he will not in the ripeness of his own time make full account. Howsoever discouraged, then, thou art in prayer; however hard it may sometimes be to carry the same petition day after day and week after week, and seem to get no response, yet weary not; God hears even when he does not make haste to answer. You are not praying to the brazen heavens, to the unanswering rock, to a Cretan Jove, to an unjust judge, but to One who treasures up your prayers, who lets not a tear fall to the ground without his notice, and who, in his own good time and way, will fulfill a better purpose than your most exalted imagination has ever conceived.

One might, perhaps, from this story be led into imagining that God was a Baal, sleeping, hunting, pursuing, and to be called back to human concerns only by reiterated repetitions and loud outcries. Christ therefore followed the story of the unjust judge with another to illustrate the simplicity of true prayer. The importunity which he commends is not that of vain repetitions; it is that of the earnestness which utters itself ofttimes in a single sentence like the publican's, "God be merciful to me a sinner," or like the Master's, "If it be possible, let this cup pass from me." In reading this story of the Pharisee and the publican we must remember that Pharisee was in Christ's time a term of honor, publican a term of reproach, and both seemingly well deserved. Let us translate this parable into the experience of the nineteenth century. It may then read something as follows:

Two men went one Sunday to church; the one an orthodox member of an evangelical church, in good and regular standing, the other a ward politician of poor repute, whose life had been corrupt and corrupting. The church member took his seat in his pew in the center aisle, and, kneeling on the hassock and bowing his head upon the pew before him, soliloquized thus with himself: I thank God that I am not an extortioner, nor an unjust man, nor a licentious libertine, nor an intemperate roue. I go to church twice every Sunday, and to the prayer meeting every week. I give liberally, not only in pew rents to the church, but in contributions to home and foreign missions, and every church cause. But the ward politician, standing in the vestibule, with downcast eyes, overwhelmed with a sense of the shame of his past life, hardly daring to seek for a seat in the church to which he was so unaccustomed, whispers in his heart, God be merciful to me a sinner.† The latter went back to his home justified in God's sight rather than the former.

How little do any of us appreciate the simplicity of prayer as inculcated by the teachings of Jesus Christ! Compare the Lord's prayer, or the Master's prayer in Gethsemane, or his intercessory prayer recorded in the seventeenth chapter of John, or the publican's prayer in the eighteenth of Luke, with the prayers that are ordinarily to be heard in our pulpits and our prayer-meetings. Is it too much to say that we have not yet succeeded in abolishing paganism from our conception of God, and from our thought of the true method of approach to and communion with him?

How, too, have we covered up and confused the doctrine of justification by faith, as we call it, and how all the refinements of the theological schools are swept away, and the true method of justification before God is made clear to our heart, if not to our understanding, by the devout and humble reading of this simple story of the Pharisee and the publican!

There is really no tangible objection to violent plaid trousers, except they keep one constantly wondering whose move it is. —[Washington Post.

Mrs. Bronson—Well Johnny, how do you like Switzerland?

Johnny—Very much, mamma; but I though from my map it was pinker.

Mother (to Johnny, who is in the next room)—Johnny, what makes the baby so quiet? Is he in any mischief? Johnny—No, marm; he's just playing with the fly paper, that's all.

Papa (who used a bad word when he tore his trousers)—I forgot myself then, Sammy. It was wrong of me to say such a word.

Sammy—O, you needn't apologize, papa! I often use it myself.

Here is the latest version of a good old Browning joke. It comes from America:

At a Seance.—Auditor—I would like to speak with Robert Browning.

Auditor—Then it must be he.

A few days ago, says a Scotch paper, an elderly female made her appearance at Helmsdale railway station to take her first trip by train. Unluckily for her, the train had just moved off as she reached the platform, and, as it gathered speed, a loud warning whistle was given. The old woman instantly set off along the line to catch it, and on being seized by a couple of porters, indignantly exclaimed: "Let me go! Do ye no' hear't whustlin' for me?"

Customer—"That was splendid insect powder you sold me the other day, Mr. Oilman." Mr. Oilman (with justifiable pride)—"Yes, I think it's pretty good—the best in the trade." Customer—"I'll take another couple of pounds of it, please." Mr. Oilman—"Two pounds?" Customer—"Yes, please, I gave the quarter of a pound that I bought before to a black beetle, and it made him so ill that I think if I keep up the treatment for about a week I may manage to kill him."

"I want something," said a farmer as he entered a Michigan avenue drug store the other day. "Well, what is it?" "I didn't tie a string around my finger, but I guess I can get around to it all the same. What's the name of the lake below us?" "Lake Erie." "Exactly. What's the name of the bay which the boats run to?" "Put-in-bay." "Correct. Now, then, who put in there?" "Perry." "Straight as a string. I want 10 cents worth of perygoric. My old woman said I'd be sure to forget it, but here's the proof that I didn't."—[Detroit Free Press.

It seems as if text-books for children were now made so simple as to leave hardly any chance for misunderstanding; but the little folks still continue to commit to memory the words without much thought of their meaning.

"How do we know that the earth is round?" asked a teacher of one of her boys.

The pupil rose promptly, and with a perfectly stolid expression answered glibly, "We learn that the earth is round from the following facts," and immediately sat down again, evidently feeling that he had given a full and most satisfactory reply!

A drummer who travels for a Boston grocery concern says that he sees in Maine some of the sharpest tricks that are practiced anywhere on his route. He gives the following specimen:

A farmer's wife bustled into a store in Washington county and went for the proprietor with:

"Mr. B——, I bought six pounds of sugar here last week, and when I got home I found a stone weighing two pounds in the package.'

"Yes, ma'am."

"Can you explain the swindle, sir?"

"I think I can," was the proprietor's placid reply. "When I weighed your eight pounds of butter, week before last, I found a two-pound pebble in the jar, and when I weighed your sugar the stone must have slipped into the scales somehow. We are both growing old, ma'am, and I'm sorry to say our eyesight isn't to be trusted. What can I do for you to-day, ma'am?"

For a moment the woman gazed at the tradesman over her brass-bound spectacles. Then she recollected herself, and remarked that she had a dozen eggs which she wished to exchange for hooks and eyes.—[Exchange.

Among the pains and aches cured with marvelous rapidity with Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, is ear-ache. The young are especially subject to it, and the desirability of this Oil as a family remedy is enhanced by the fact that it is admirably adapted not only to the above ailment, but also to the hurts, disorders of the bowels, and affections of the throat, to which the young are specially subject.

Father—James, you know I disapprove very much of your fighting, but I cannot help feeling proud of you for whipping such a big boy as that. What did you whip him for? Son (indignantly)—Why, he said I looked like you.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN.

French and English Marriages—Bring Up a Child to Obey—A Word for Women from Great Men and Women—Table and Town Talk. Etc.

Lord Fauntleroy.

I met Dr. Burnett the other day, and asked him about the true condition of his son Lionel, the prototype of Little Lord Fauntleroy. He spoke very despondently of his son, and said he feared he would never look upon his living face again. The boy has a lung difficulty, an outcome of the grippe. Mrs. Burnett has taken her boy to Gubersdorf, Germany, hoping against hope that the waters there may benefit him. How well I remember the two boys when little fellows, their mother's darlings, with their big eyes, fair skins and long, silky curls falling over their pretty deep-lace collars and velvet jackets. How innocent those children looked, and full of roguery they were! Rosy faced, plump little Lionel has grown into a slender, sensitive, book-loving youth of 18, whose love for his mother has kept pace with his years. The "dearest" and "sweetheart," which so frequently fell from the lips of the little lord when speaking to or of his mother, are the words used by Lionel to his mother, in whose company he finds the greatest comfort. It is hoped that this sweet young life may be spared to his family and to his friends.—[Table Talk.

Love After Marriage.

Why are the bulk of French marriages far happier than the bulk of English ones? In my opinion, it is simply because, according to the French system, a man has to win the affection of his wife after the wedding. The French married couple begin at the first act, whereas the English one has generally got through all but the fifth by the time the wedding bells have stopped ringing. Then in come the prosaic cares of life and cover everything up. Out go the lights, and, presto! the glamour is gone too, and nothing remains of it all but a sleepy numbness and a sort of wonder that the comedy should enjoy such a world-wide reputation. Yes, in matrimony there is a way of eating your cake, and yet having it; but you must not take your bits too large in the beginning.

As a clever wit says: "When you are dead, it is for a long time; but when you are married, it is forever."—[Max O'Rell.

Implicit Obedience.

I spoke to a lady the other day of her sister-in-law, who is one of my esteemed neighbors. "How well she is managing her four children without any nurse!" I exclaimed. "She looks calm and untroubled, and yet I know she is delicate."

"She is a woman of great decision of character," was the answer. "She has a system about the children. She never allows them to question what she says, and you know that saves a great deal of fret and worry."

The next morning I made a short call on the subject of our remarks. The lady came into the parlor, and, after shaking hands with me, turned to take a chair, and found that the 2-year-old baby had followed her. "Why, baby, I did not know you were here. Run out to brother." "No, me don't want to!" "Oh, yes," was the smiling answer. "Brother will play school with you."

The baby retreated slowly, till she reached the middle of the room, and there she stood with her finger in her mouth, eying her mother closely. The mother had turned in her chair away from me, and was watching the baby smilingly. It was evident that the caller was entirely forgotten for the moment; it was of the first importance that the baby should mind. I made a little note of the fact, too, that there was no "prunes and persimmons" expression on the mother's pretty face. She had simply spoken, and now expected the baby to do as she said.

"No," burst from the baby.

"Oh, yes," smiled mamma. "Brother is all ready to play with you."

The baby stood a moment longer, finger in her mouth, studying her mother's face, and then ran out of the room. Then, and not until then, did the mother give me her attention.

The incident made such an impression on me that I want to write it for young mothers. I began with the theory that the best way to bring up a child was to reason with him, and in that way to teach him obedience. I abandoned that theory long ago, and wish now that I had never held it for a day. When "implicit obedience" was brought to my mind, I rejected it, largely because, under my new responsibility, I was newly conscious of my own fallibility.

"How can I," I would say to myself, "always know the right to command to enforce?" Now I say to myself, "Be as nearly right as you can, but go ahead." Implicit obedience lovingly enforced is the only way to bring up a child, and "eternal vigilance" is its price.—[Christian Union.

Table Talk.

Jelly Toast.—Cut stale bread into neat rounds or squares; fry each slice in boiling deep fat; spread it thickly with some fruit jelly, and serve very hot.

The following recipes, sweet and otherwise, are given by Christian Terhune Herrick in Harper's Bazar. They are good either for family lunches or for tea:

Hot Cake.—One cup buttermilk, 2 eggs, 3 tablespoonfuls butter, 1½ cups sugar, half teaspoonful soda, flour for a good batter (about two heaping cupfuls). Bake in a loaf, and eat warm.

Sliced Potatoes.—Cut six boiled potatoes into neat slices, warm them in a steamer, transfer to a dish, and put on them a tablespoonful of butter and a teaspoonful of chopped parsley. Let them stand five minutes before serving.

Corn Croquettes.—To two cupfuls of green corn, chopped, add one well-beaten egg, a teaspoonful of butter, one of sugar, salt to taste, and just enough flour to hold the ingredients together. Form into croquettes with floured hands, and fry in deep fat.

Cornmeal Griddle Cakes.—Two cups cornmeal, 1 cup flour, 1 cup boiling water, 1 tablespoonful lard, 1 tablespoonful molasses, 2 cups sour milk, 1 teaspoonful soda, saltspoonful salt. Scald the cornmeal; add the shortening, the milk and soda, the molasses, and the salted flour. Beat hard.

Canned Peach Short-Cake.—Make a short-cake according to previous directions; cover canned peaches with sugar, and stew them gently for half an hour in the syrup thus made; lay the sliced peaches between the layers of short-cake, and pour the syrup over each piece after it is split and buttered.

Cerealine Fritters.—One and a half cups cerealine, 2 cups milk, saltspoonful salt. Cook the cerealine in the milk, beat it up light, and set it aside to cool in a shallow pan; cut it into squares or rounds when cold, and fry in deep fat; sprinkle with powdered sugar, and put a spoonful of jelly on top of each just before sending to table.

Raised Cornmeal Muffins.—Two cups milk, 2 cups cornmeal, 1 tablespoonful white sugar, 1 tablespoonful lard, quarter yeast cake. Heat the milk to boiling, and pour it upon the meal. While this is warm, beat in all the other ingredients except the lard. Let it rise six hours. Add the lard. Fill muffin tins, and let the batter rise twenty minutes before baking.

Potatoes au Gratin.—Two cupfuls of raw potatoes cut into dice, half cup fine bread-crumbs, two tablespoonfuls butter. Let the potato dice lie in cold water several hours, drain them, season with salt and pepper, and put them in a well-greased pan; dot them thickly with bits of butter, sprinkle them with the crumbs, and add more butter. Bake, covered, for half an hour; uncover and brown.

Stewed Kidneys.—Soak two kidneys in salt and water half an hour; take out the core, and cut the remainder into small pieces. Brown a tablespoonful of butter and one of flour, together with a quarter of an onion sliced; lay the pieces of kidney in this, and let them cook five minutes. Add a cup of good gravy; or if this is lacking, half a cup of boiling water. Let the kidneys simmer in this ten minutes; take out, and serve on slices of toast, pouring the gravy over and around them.

Jellied Tongue.—One cup of the liquor in which the tongue was cooked, 2 cups good stock or gravy of any meat except mutton, half box of gelatine, 1 gill cold water, 1 cup boiling water, 2 tablespoonfuls vinegar, 1 glass sherry, a cold boiled tongue, sliced. Soak the gelatine in the cold water for two hours. Pour over it the boiling water, the stock or gravy, and the tongue liquor, heated. Unless the gravy is highly seasoned, it is a good plan to boil a bay leaf, a sprig of parsley, a slice of onion, and a few sweet herbs in a cup of water, and then to strain this, and pour it over the gelatine instead of using the plain boiling water. Flavor the jelly with the vinegar, the sherry, pepper, and salt, if the last is needed. Strain all through a cloth. When the jelly begins to harden pour a little into a brick-shaped mould or tin pan with straight sides, first wetting the mould with cold water. Arrange slices of tongue on this. Pour in more jelly, then place another layer of tongue, and continue this until the supply of both is exhausted, making jelly the last layer. Set the mould on ice until the jelly is hard; turn it out and slice on the table. This sounds like a fussy dish, but is less trouble than it appears at first.

Words from Patriotic Lips.

James A. Garfield—"Laugh as we may, put it aside as a jest if we will, keep it out of Congress and political campaigns, still the woman question is rising in our political horizon larger than the size of a man's hand; and some solution, ere long, that question must find."

Abraham Lincoln—In 1834, "I go for all sharing the privileges of the government who assist in bearing its burdens, by no means excluding women." In 1864, "After this great struggle for the Union, women will vote."

Salmon P. Chase, who maintained the national credit during the war—"I see no end to the good that will come from woman suffrage to the elections, to the elected, and to women themselves."

Louisa M. Alcott—"Every year gives me greater faith in woman suffrage, greater hopes of its success . . . . and a more earnest wish to use what influence I possess for its advancement."

Charles Sumner—"In the progress of civilization, woman suffrage is sure to come."

Mrs. Livermore says: "The war, and my experience and insight of military and political matters when in the army and at the front, swept away all my conservatism, and compelled me to the advocacy of woman suffrage."

Mary L. Booth—"I am in favor of woman suffrage, and would vote if the right were extended to me, for many reasons, based upon the advantages to be derived therefrom by both sexes. One of my weightiest reasons for it is that I think it would be the surest means of securing for women the simple justice of equal pay for equal work. Facts show that voters alone have their interests properly guarded."

Furniture in Vogue.

Decorative screens are giving place to screens of utility. The demands of the modern women are more exacting than those of her sister of 500 years ago, who only thought of screens when the heat of the mammoth hearth made red her face; for then as now woman was ever thoughtful of her complexion. But of late years screens have been diverted from their old-time hearthstone utilitarian purpose to occupy a decorative field. To be sure, they have occasionally concealed a clothes-basket or a shabby corner, but now they are certainly useful in any room. Those newly evolved screens come in three variations for parlor, study and sewing-room. For parlor, one side is decorated, but the other is all business—crossed and recrossed with bands of silk serving to hold an endless number of photographs, visiting cards, dance orders, the favors of winter germans, or any other graceful or pretty souvenirs. For the study the same ribboned or taped rack holds correspondence, with a place for pipe and a hook for tobacco pouch. For sewing-rooms pockets are sewed on to hold knitting, slips are arranged for the scissors, a huge cushion is suspended on one panel and a rag-bag on another—in short, all the appurtenances of a thrifty housewife are hung up ready at hand—"a place for everything, and everything in its place." Frequently these screens are furnished with candelabra tops. Frequently aperatures six inches wide and a foot high are cut completely through a panel like the letter U upside down and a shelf fitted across the bottom of it; upon this a bit of bric-a-brac rests and gives a novel appearance to the structure.

Barbarism in America.

The Woman's Alliance of Chicago has undertaken to investigate and expose the police system and courts of that city, and lately held a conference with the judges of the Superior and Circuit Courts. The women were much in earnest in their account of what they had seen of the administration of justice in the police courts, and in their denunciation of the treatment of unfortunate women.

Since the investigations made by the Woman's Alliance have become public, there has been a strong demand in the Chicago newspapers for a reform of the abuses committed by the police and the police courts, and the number of illegal arrests has decreased.

The barbarities to which women in Chicago have been subjected in the name of the law are equaled by one lately committed in New York in strict accordance with law. The following statement of facts is taken from the New York World of June 11:

"Mrs. Bassman, of this city, was the administratrix of Bartholomew O'Connell, who died on Jan. 10 last. Ex-Assemblyman Charles P. Blake, an undertaker, presented her a bill of $120 30 for funeral expenses. In this was an item of $10 for ice. As Mr. O'Connell had died in January and the weather was cool, Mrs. Bassett thought that the charge for ice was unnecessary. She refused to pay the original bill, but said she would settle for $115. Mr. Blake would take no compromise, but rushed his bill through the Surrogate's Court, and upon her refusal to pay obtained an order demanding that she appear before the court. Mrs. Bassman gave birth to a child at this time and was unable to appear in court. Blake then obtained an order of arrest to punish her for contempt, and she was locked up in Ludlow street jail. Her little baby, deprived of a mother's care, sickened and died, and her other children and her home were neglected. Mrs. Bassman had good cause for not complying with the orders, and had not intended any disrespect to the court. The first order was served while she was in bed, just after giving birth to a child. The second was served through the partly open door of her room while she was still suffering and her baby sick. The man who served the papers was informed that she could not attend court at that time. While in this weak condition Mrs. Bassman was taken to jail. Blake followed her almost to the prison, in order to make sure that she was locked up."

The "land of the free" can vie with Russia at times in downright barbarism towards disfranchised women.—F. M. A., in Woman's Journal.

Town Talk.

Canon Wilberforce, during his tour in India, has been speaking with more than his usual eloquence. He says that there is no sex in citizenship, and that India should develop the intelligence of her women. "No nation can possibly attain strength that is afraid to educate its women."

Mrs. Gladstone has the reputation of being the most devoted wife and mother in Parliament. There is seldom a week during the session that this beautiful young-old lady is not seen in the ladies' gallery. When her husband or son delivers a speech of any importance she was always present. During the prolonged sitting of the Parnell Commission she was a daily attendant.

The Woman's Journal says the question is no longer, "Will the educated woman marry?" but "Whom shall she marry?" and gives the record of some of the applications for the Cambridge, Eng., high local examinations. At Birmingham there are 41 women and 3 men; at Bradford 24 women and 1 man; at Leeds 35 women and 2 men; at Manchester, 43 women and 1 man, and at Liverpool 56 women and 1 man.

A New Haven medical examiner makes the somewhat startling statement that, on the average, he has ten cases a year of babies starved to death. He had one last week of a child dying suddenly, and investigation showed that it had been fed on some patent food, but had starved to death. It is the ignorance of the parents which is at the bottom of the trouble, he says, and, strangely enough, this particular kind of ignorance prevails more among the well-to-do than the poorer classes.

School teachers perform in very many essentials the most important duty known to the human race, and it taxes not only their minds, but their bodies, and, if they have any womanliness about them, their sympathetic nature as well. It is impossible for them, after spending a day in school, with its close air, its odorous atmosphere, its thousand and one vexations, its mental strain, its physical fatigue, to separate one's self from the duty which was yesterday, is to day and will come again to-morrow.

The Princess of Wales is responsible for the right and left positions in the saddle now obligatory to every equestrienne. Owing to a chronic lameness in her right limb she is forced to use a left-side saddle. To make the fact less conspicuous the princesses have been trained to ride in both right and left saddle seats. A few horsewomen in New York while abroad caught the idea last summer and have since introduced the fashion of two saddles. There is in consequence great rejoicing among the saddlers and riding teachers.

Society at Newport has developed a Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters. Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt and other fashionable women belong to it, and it is supposed that the terms of their league are found in the injunction, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them." The members fine themselves when they break any of their self-made vows, and go about privately "slumming," like an exclusive and very elegant Salvation Army. They have devotional reunions among themselves, and are said to do a great deal of good.

It has been estimated by an employe of the United States Bureau of Labor that there are 27,000 married men in the city of New York who are supported by their wives, less than 7,000 of whom are in menial service. The modistes are in the majority. This includes dressmakers and milliners, many of whom own shops, some being very wealthy and all well-to-do. The boarding-house keepers rank next in number, the professional women, who embrace doctors, lawyers, dentists, artists, writers, teachers, musicians, lecturers, designers, painters and embroiderers, come third. Then there are the shopkeepers, who, it is said, make the best providers.

Mrs. Oscar Wilde has the reputation of being the most picturesque woman in London. A couple of years ago she adopted the Liberty silk gown, and fashion went mad and miles to see her. Now she wears black and white, black and gold, and black and cress green, and the cut of her gown is quite as remarkable as the seamless clinging robe designed by Burne-Jones ten years ago. The gold or yellow frocks, toned down with black feathers, gauze or lace, are reserved for landscape effects, the black and green for daylight interiors and the white and black for gaslight. This evening dress is all of black bengaline, made Greek fashion, with Grecian embroidery of gold, and worn with white shoes and a white boa. Her bouquet is always the same—stephanotis smothered in fern leaves.

Nothing impure or injurious contaminates the popular antidote to pain, throat and lung remedy, and general corrective, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. ## SOCIETY NOTES.

A Boston girl has two pairs of plaster hands molded of the size and shape of her own hands. If her riding gloves or her wash-leather walking gloves get rained on by any chance, she stretches them over the little plaster hands, dries them in shape, and finds them good as new. She freshens up her shopping gloves, too, once in a while, and has a way of cleansing them so that they do not forever afterward smell of the cleansing fluid. Of course, they are violet glove sachets cheaply made to keep any one from that annoyance.—[San Francisco Argonaut.

There are tenement houses within a quarter of a mile's radius of the city hall—in Water, Cherry, Front and adjacent streets—whose every room accommodates from one to three families, where men and women die and children are born; where beds are huddled, meals are cooked, clothes are washed, dried and ironed. There the sick toss upon their cots, the young drink and smoke, and the whole panorama of existence, from the first breath of puny babyhood to the final gurgle of dying old age, is unveiled in the presence of indifferent spectators of different ages, nationalties and sexes.—[New York Press.

Perhaps the choicest of modern entertainments is the dinner party. The smooth, rich napery, the costly china, the noiseless service, the well-dressed guests, the well-cooked viands, combine to make up a most attractive scene; yet all these are subservient to another element, and if this be not present the dinner is a failure. These guests are gathered not to look at fine linen, nor silver pitchers, nor to contemplate each other's clothes, nor even to feast upon tempting food. The prime object of their coming together is the interchange and stimulus of thought. There must be talk at the table. The more refined and elevated and sparkling the talk, the more successful the dinner. If the talk lags, if prosy dullness monopolizes the time, if unfortunate topics are brought forward, the whole entertainment comes to naught. The faculty of fresh, stimulating, discreet conversation is the most desirable of society accomplishments.—[Harper's Bazar.

About this time of the year a saunterer on the Battery will see every day lying off and on several private steam yachts. Some of these will lie at anchor over at the anchorage of Liberty Island, and others steam down in the morning among the other yachts off Bay Ridge. From 3 to 5 o'clock these yachts drop in one by one near the barge office and send a little boat ashore manned by two sailors. The yachts are private carriages, so to speak, of wealthy stock brokers and others having down-town offices, and the boats will presently take off the owner and perhaps a friend or two and go steaming away again up the Hudson or down the lower bay. Some of these are very expensive boats, and cost at least $1,000 a month to maintain. They are very natty and trim built, and the brasses on deckshine like gold. Gleaming cannon of brass, beautifully mounted, can be seen forward and aft, and under the awnings are comfortable chairs and refreshment tables.—[Pittsburg Dispatch.

A case of abject poverty and helplessness that should appeal to every charitable heart was brought to the attention of, and investigated by, the Times the other day. It is that of a little family of five, who have been brought through sickness and misfortune to suffer actual hunger, and to be thankful for the shelter that two bare rooms in a damp and dingy tenement afford them. The household consists of a gray-haired but energetic little woman of 56, who is now its real head, her daughter and son-in-law and their two children, a boy of 5 years and a girl of 8 months. For five years up to last February the man was a teacher in a district school in the backwoods of Upper Canada, near the little town of Lindsay, and the family got along comfortably enough. But he fell ill with pneumonia then and consumption developed, so that he now weighs but 90 pounds. He lost his teachership and his savings under the stress of five months' illness, and three weeks ago the family treasury was completely exhausted. The rooms in which they now live are so damp that it is like entering a vault to go into them, and the effect upon the consumptive man, the grandmother who is suffering from influenza, and the little boy who inherits his father's weakness, can be easily imagined. There are no beds, there is not even a chair in the place, and they cannot afford a fire to take the chill out of the air.—[New York Times.

ABOUT HAIR

Editor of the ADVERTISER:

Sir,—I have, as you know, for some time advertised in Canada and the States a preparation for the hair called "Dr. Dorenwend's Hair Magic." I have received some thousands of flattering testimonials from those who have used it as to its merits as a restorative of gray or faded hair; also as a promoter of the growth and a certain cure for dandruff.

A great many of my correspondents ask the questions: "Why is my hair turning gray so early? Why is my hair falling out?" As it is impossible for me to answer every one, I take the liberty of encroaching on your valuable space to make a general reply. A great many persons do not seem to be aware that excessive washing and rubbing is injurious to the growth of the hair; such is the case, however. Constant washing and rubbing the scalp and hair causes over irritation and removes the oily substance which gives strength to the hair; undue heat caused by the wearing of heavy headgear is also injurious. Anything that will tend to dry up the sap or life of the hair will cause dandruff, falling out of the hair, gray or faded hair and finally baldness. Of course there are other causes as diseases, hereditary tendencies, etc., but the first mentioned are the main and most common.

Dr. Dorenwend, an eminent German physician, has given to the world after years of toil and experiment his now famous "Hair Magic." The object of this preparation is to assist nature in the production of this oily substance absolutely necessary to the growth of the hair. It is now sold by all reliable druggists at $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5, or will be sent on receipt of price to any address. See that each wrapper bears the seal and signature of the manufacturer.

Messrs. C. Wright & Co., Druggists:

Dear Sirs,—I, J. W. Monkhouse, feel at heart that your invaluable mineral water saved my life. All people here know that three medical men gave me up to die of consumption of the bowels, etc. For three weeks I vomited everything in the shape of food, and got so weak I could not move. My brother was induced and brought me St. Leon Water from your store. After a few draughts vomiting ceased. I continued on St. Leon—it was food and all to me. In seven days I took my place at the table. Six weeks have passed. I am now well and strong as could be, still using the water mixed with milk in place of tea. I recommend all people troubled with inward complaints to try this surprising water. This is neither blow nor puff, but solid facts mildly drawn. # CONVERSAZIONE.

Motto for the Week:

"Too much dispute puts the truth to flight."—[Italian Proverb.

Buried Alive.

It is well known that in France the dread of premature interment is very much more widespread than it is in this country, where little of it is heard, though there are, no doubt, many amongst us who entertain a morbid dread of being buried alive. But in France it is by no means an uncommon thing to insert a clause in wills directing that the heart of the deceased shall be pierced before burial, in the presence of the surviving relatives. But in Belgium this morbid fear must be pretty prevalent, for in that country an ingenious inventor has devised a new kind of coffint the express purpose of which is to preven, the possibility of such a calamity. "The pressure of the earth thrown on the lid of the coffin liberates a sort of stiletto, which is so placed that on being disengaged it pierces the heart of the occupant."—[Christian at Work.

Words of Import.

A good story of Mr. Parnell is told in the Speaker:

Once he was sitting with a colleague in the side gallery of the House of Commons. It was a serious moment, for the Irish had retired in high dudgeon from the House; the Ministry were being hard beset, and required the Irish vote to prevent them from being defeated. Mr. Gladstone had heightened the situation by suggesting that if he were defeated he should have to consider his personal position. All eyes were turned to the small group of Irishmen who at that moment had such momentous issues at their mercy. At that moment Mr. Parnell, looking intently down on the surging, excited and deeply-observant House underneath, uttered a few words to his companion with a look of inscrutable misery; and no one can tell what priceless guerdon would have been given to that friend who would reveal that confidence, and lay bare the great and secret thoughts that had found expression in this supreme hour. What Mr. Parnell had said was, "I wonder why so many men in the House of Commons are bald?"

Reporting a Hundred Years Ago.

For nearly three years Dr. Johnson continued Cave's reporter, and during the whole of this period parliamentary utterances were widely read. Some of the speeches, as reported, were marvels of scholarly dictation, and, when in print, surprised even the members themselves. Reporting was the easiest thing in the world for the doctor. He did not trouble to go to the House. His custom was to "fix upon a speaker's name, then to make an argument for him, and conjure up an answer," and he did all this so well that Voltaire, on reading the debates, exclaimed, "The eloquence of Greece and Rome is revived in the British Senate!" One of the most notable speeches credited to the elder Pitt was written by Dr. Johnson in a garret in Exeter street; and, when asked at a dinner given by Foote, how it was possible for him to write the speech, he retorted, "Sir, I wrote it in Exeter street. I never was in the gallery of the House of Commons but once in my life. Cave had interest with the doorkeepers; he and the persons employed under him got admittance, they brought away the subjects of discussion, the names of the speakers, the side they took, and the order in which they rose, together with notes of various arguments adduced in the course of the debate. The whole was afterward communicated to me, and I composed the speeches in the form they now have in the parliamentary debates."

It was a strange expedient, and would not be tolerated now, especially if the modern reporter, presuming he manufactured the speeches, had a jot of the bias of Dr. Johnson, who made no scruple in confessing that he "took care the Whig dogs should never have the best of the argument."

How Deer Act in a Snow Storm.

From a gentleman recently down from the mountains the Marysville Appeal learns of the strange experiences of various sorts of wild animals during the winter: "Deer, when caught in a blinding snow storm, huddle together and tramp round and round in a circle, beating down the soft snow, so that when a very heavy fall occurs during, say, twelve hours, they find themselves in a snow pen, with walls above them, and if they commence to tramp on top of several feet of snow during a storm, they often find themselves in a corral of snow, with a wall surrounding them to a height of ten or twelve feet when the storm clears off, being virtually imprisoned in a snowy prison pen, from which escape is impossible until the spring thaw of the season.

"There lives an old miner on Canon Creek, in Sierra county, several miles above Brandy City, who was was taking a stroll near his cabin last winter after one of the heavy snows, when he came across one of three deer pens in the snow, and there imprisoned were seventeen deer of various sizes. They were in a circular pen of snow, with walls fifteen feet high. Upon the man's appearance the deer became quite excited, and huddled together and dodged from one side of the pen to the other. However, as hunger came upon them they became more docile, and the frequent visits of the miner, with bows and buds from adjoining trees, which he threw into the pen as food, caused the deer to become regular pets, and to watch for the visits of their protector. After a while the man placed a ladder in the pit, and spent a great deal of time in handling his pets. Occasionally he would take one out for food, as meat became scarce, and in this way used up several of the deer, but he has most of the deer yet in a state of domestication. It is said he has a deer ranch in his mountain home, much after the fashion of a cattle ranch on a small scale."

The Slave Question in a New Light.

From London comes the report by cable that the British East African Company has released 4,000 slaves who had been dragged to the coast from their homes in the interior. The truth is the company have discovered a new way of dealing with the slave-trade problem, which has worked very well, and this is the scory: A year ago the British East African Company, noted above decided to establish friendly relations with the Arab merchants on the coast controlled by the company. These Arabs had about 4,000 slaves, the fruits of former raids, in their establishments. The British company offered to buy these slaves, and in the past fifteen months about 4,000 of them have received their papers of freedom, the company paying $25 apiece for them. Tracts of land where they could support themselves were given them, and many of them are working for wages around Mombasa. Then the company told the Arabs that if they would not seize any more slaves their caravans would be provided with trade goods to trade into the interior, and the company would buy the ivory they brought to the coast. The Arabs accepted the offer, and to-day all the capital needed in trading enterprises that is not supplied by the Arabs themselves is advanced at a small rate of interest by the company, and it buys all the merchandise brought down to the coast. In short, the company has become a partner of the former slave dealers in their trading operations, and Mr. Mackenzie, the company's superintendent, expresses the opinion that the slave trade question is settled as far as the Britis East Coast is concerned. It is true that as relates to the suppression of the entire African slave trade the action of the company as noted is only a drop of water to a bucketful. Still, while such enterprises like this corporation and the African Lakes Company are in a way lessening the slave trade or diminishing the evils of the liquor traffic, it cannot be truthfully asserted as was recently said by an English magazine writer, that all the white trading enterprises in Equatorial Africa are increasing the degradation and misery of the inhabitants.—[Christian at Work.

The Weighing of Thought.

Starting with the idea that the hand varies sensibly in size with the amount of blood present in it at any moment, Professor Mosso, the Italian physiologist, has made some most interesting investigations. In his first experiments the hand was placed in a closed vessel of water, when the change in the circulation produced by the slightest action of the body or brain, the smallest thought or movement, was shown by a rise or fall in the liquid in the narrow neck of the vessel. With a large balance, on which the horizontal human body may be poised, he found that one's thoughts may be literally weighed, and that even dreams, or the effect of a slight sound during slumber, turn the blood to the brain sufficiently to sink the balance at the head. The changing pulse even told him when a professional friend was reading Italian and when Greek, the greater effort for the latter duly effecting the blood-flow.

Getting Started.

One of the great things in life is to get started. The shores are lined in every direction with craft of all sizes, which seem unable to get themselves launched; tney are eager for the water, but they fail to reach it. A host of men and women are in this position; they are bewailing the fact that they are not at work, and are going about in every direction seeking for openings, but they find nothing to their mind. Now, while it is true that there is nothing more difficult, in many cases, than to get a start in life, it very often happens that the inherent difficulty of the undertaking is immensely increased by the lack of practical sense on the part of the man or woman who is making the endeavor. Gaspar Becerra, in Longfellow's poem, waited a tedious time for the wood fit to receive the image which he meant to carve when the proper material came to hand. Despairing at last of securing what he was waiting for, he picked up the thing nearest—a piece of burnt wood—and carved his image out of that. It was a wise decision, but it would have been wiser if it had been reached earlier. Too many men and women wait for "just the thing" they want, not knowing that just the things one wants are difficult to get, and when gotten often turn out to be the very things one does not want. The true way to get a start in life is to take the first chance of getting into the race. It may be a very inferior and unattractive chance but it is a chance nevertheless. It takes one out of his stationary, waiting position, gets him into the field, loosens his limbs, and puts him into training for whatever lies before him; and it often happens that these very unpromising chances are straight roads to fortune. No man ever succeeds who refuses to do anything until he can do it on his own terms; the man who succeeds is the man who is willing to do the thing on any honorable terms. We must begin as servants if we wish to end as masters. We must take what we can get if we hope finally to get what we want. The first opportunity is the best opportunity if it really opens a door into life.—[Christian Union.

An Unknown Hero.

Among the unknown heroes of a later day, the Spectator came across one last week whose modesty was so great that his next door neighbor in a gossipy little village did not know of his deeds, but who had performed an exploit in the late war that probably had no parallel. This man was an orderly in General Hofman's division of the Army of the Potomac, and had served from the beginning of the war up to August, 1864, his time expiring in September of that year. After some sharp skirmishing one afternoon near Weldon River, he saw in a field where the enemy had a stand of colors, which he thought had been abandoned, and, wishing to secure such a momento to take home with him when his time was up, he rode over to get it. The color was further off than he supposed, and he found it necessary to cross a ravine to get to them. Plunging down the declivity, he saw before him a Confederate regiment lying in ambush. For a moment he was undecided whether to turn his horse and take the chances of escaping or to throw up his hands and surrender. Then, remembering how near he was to the Union lines, he suddenly determined to capture the regiment! Riding up to the Colonel, he saluted him and said, "General Hardee orders this regiment to follow me up the ravine." The Colonel, deceived by the similarity of the orderly's uniform to that of his own regiment, and by the unfaltering assurance of the man, at once gave the order, and the regiment fell into line, following the orderly, the Colonel meanwhile conversing carelessly with him, and being assured the battle was going "about right." The solitary Union pilot kept his hand on the trigger of his pistol, determined, if suspicion should be aroused, to make a desperate resistance rather than surrender himself to the death-in-life of a Southern prison pen. In a few minutes, however, the Union artillerymen opened fire on the now exposed regiment, and the greater part stampeded. The orderly, not withstanding, succeeded in bringing into the Union lines the Colonel and 21 of his men, having thus gone into the enemy's lines and captured, single handed, 22 men! "Well, sir," was the Colonel's laconic remark as he saw the Union soldiers closing around him, and discerned the true colors of his captor, "you have the best of me." "I believe I have," was the equally nonchalent reply. For this act of gallantry the young hero received from Congress a medal, which was pinned on his coat by his general in the presence of the entire corps. "And that medal," said Orderly Richard Smith, "couldn't be bought for all the money in this county, poor man though I am!"—[Christian Union.

TEMPERANCE NOTES.

In the bottle, discontent seeks for comfort, cowardice for courage, and bashfulness for confidence and find ruin.

Dr. Guthrie's four reasons for being an abstainer: "My head is clearer, my health is better, my heart is lighter and my purse is heavier."

Deducting abstainers, it is calculated that each family in New South Wales spends £53 17s. a year on drink! There is a public-house for every 75 males in the colony.

The evil wrought by alcoholic drink is now acknowledged and proclaimed by all the organs of public opinion. It undermines health, enfeebles the will, coarsens the mind and inflames animal passions. It separates husbands and wives, divides families, and deprives children of the home influence which nothing else can supply. It lowers the standard of morals, fills prisons and insane asylums with its victims, and feeds the germ of corruption in the body politic. It is, in a word, the cause or the occasion of four-fifths of the crime by which our national life is disgraced.—[Bishop Spalding.

A pleasant story is current of Lincoln signing the pledge. A personal friend of Mr. Lincoln told Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer, President of the Chicago Missionary Training School, that Old Uncle John, as he was called, an itinerant temperance lecturer in Southern Illinois nearly two generations ago, on one occasion, speaking in an isolated country district, probably in the school house, offered the temperance pledge, as was his custom, at the close of the meeting, whereupon a tall, lank awkward youth came forward and affixed his name. Years after, when he had come to great renown, Abraham Lincoln, meeting Uncle John, said to him: "I owe more to you than to almost anyone else of whom I can think, for, if I had not signed the pledge with you in my years of youthful temptation, I might have gone the way that the majority of my old comrades have gone, which ends in a drunkard's life and a drunkard's grave."

The results of high license in Massachusetts show very clearly that something more than high license with diminution of the saloons is needed to reduce drunkenness and crime. While in Chicago, Philadelphia and other cities high license has reduced drunkenness, in Massachusetts it has increased it. For it was under a law limiting the saloons to one in 500 of the population, and placing the license fees at $1,000 and $1,500, that in Boston a single month showed 2,239 arrests for drunkenness as against 1,860 in the corresponding month of the same year. In Fall River there was a like increase of 125 under high license over 90 arrests under low license. In Lowell the increase was 315 over 246 in the same month of the previous year, and other cities show like results. The working of high license has been so unsatisfactory that the people of Lowell have for the first time adopted prohibition by the substantial majority of 700. Worcester has also added itself to the list of cities declaring in favor of prohibition; so that this year twelve cities have declared in favor of it, and the remaining thirteen have retained the license system by largely reduced majorities. This, however, does not lead to the inference that the tendency of high license is not in the direction of diminished drunkenness and crime. The trouble in Massachusetts is with the Legislature, which in reducing the number of saloons and increasing the license fees, took no pains to study up the laws of other States with a view to drawing up an efficient law, nor do they make any change in the character of the bonds given by liquor-dealers, or the old practice of allowing wholesale dealers to become bondsmen for hundreds of their creatures; in short, they did nothing to indicate that they had in any way changed their policy of "more law and less enforcement." Instead, they simply tack on two sections to the old law, which was still open to the old abuse of placing the license power in boards open to political influences. So it was, the large wholesale liquor dealer interested in the establishment of saloons, managed in many places to secure control of excise boards that winked at the establishment of illegal saloons, so that rum flowed even more freely than ever. There is a lesson to be learned in these results, and that is, that to secure the benefits of high license and limited saloons, the license power must be taken out of the hands of politicians and placed with those who will exercise it carefully, judiciously, firmly. This, with the best features of high license in other States, will assuredly lessen intoxication and crime. But when all this is conceded, it still remains to be said that high license is at best only a makeshift. It marks the transition period between low license for the sale of distilled liquor as a beverage and the utter extermination of the abominable traffic.—[Christian at Work.

THEY WERE "NICE PEOPLE."

A Delightful Summer Romance by H. C. Bunner in "Puck."

"They certainly are nice people," I assented to my wife's observation, using the colloquial phrase with a consciousness that it was anything but "nice" English, "and I'll bet that their three children are better brought up than most of—"

"Two children," corrected my wife.

"Three," he told me."

"My dear," she said there were two."

"He said three."

"You've simply forgotten. I'm sure she told me they had only two—a boy and a girl."

"Well, I didn't enter into particulars."

"No, dear, and you couldn't have understood him. Two children."

"All right," I said; but I did not think it was all right. As a near-sighted man learns by enforced observation to recognize persons at a distance when the face is not visible to the normal eye, so the man with a bad memory learns, almost unconsciously, to listen carefully and report accurately. My memory is bad; but I had not time to forget that Brewster Brede had told me that he had three children, at present left in the care of his mother-in-law, while he and Mrs. Brede took their summer vacation.

"Two children," repeated my wife, "and they are staying with his Aunt Jenny."

"He told me with his mother-in-law," I put in. My wife looked at me with a serious expression. Men may not remember much of what they are told about children; but any man knows the difference between an aunt and a mother-in-law.

"But don't you think they are nice people?" asked my wife.

"Oh, certainly," I replied. "Only they seem to be a little mixed up about their children."

"That isn't a very nice thing to say," returned my wife.

I could not deny it.

And yet, the next morning, when the Bredes came down and seated themselves opposite us at table, beaming and smiling in their natural, pleasant, well-bred fashion, I knew to a social certainty that they were "nice" people. He was a fine-looking fellow in his neat tennis flannels, slim, graceful, 28 or 30 years old, with a Frenchy pointed beard. She was "nice" in all her pretty clothes, and she herself was pretty with that type of prettiness which outwears most other types—the prettiness that lies in a rounded figure, a dusky skin, plump, rosy cheeks, white teeth and black eyes. She might have been 25; you guessed that she was prettier than she was at 20, and that she would be prettier still at 40.

I was not surprised when, after breakfast, my wife invited the Bredes to walk with us to "our view." The Hoogencamp-Biggle-Tabb-Halket contingent never stirred off Jacobus' veranda, but we both felt that the Bredes would not profane that sacred scene. We strolled across the fields, passed through the little belt of woods, and as I heard Mrs. Brede's little cry of startled rapture, I motioned to Brede to look up.

"By jove!" he cried, "heavenly."

"And so that is your view?" asked Mrs. Brede after a moment; "you are very generous to make it ours too."

Ah, how much better was this sort of talk than the chatter and gossip of the Tabb and the Hoogencamp—than the major's dissertation upon his everlasting circulars! My wife and I exchanged glances.

"Now, when I went up the Matterhorn," Mr. Brede began."

"Why, dear," interrupted his wife; "I didn't know you ever went up the Matterhorn."

"It—it was five years ago," said Mr. Brede, hurriedly. I—I didn't tell you—when I was on the other side, you know—it was rather dangerous—well, as I was saying—it looked, oh, it didn't look at all like this."

A cloud floated overhead, throwing its great shadow over the field where we lay. The shadow passed over the mountain's brow and reappeared far below, a rapidly decreasing blot, flying eastward over the golden green. My wife and I exchanged glances once more.

Somehow, the shadow lingered over us all. As we went home, the Bredes went side by side along the narrow path, and my wife and I walked together.

"Should you think," she asked me, "that a man would climb the Matterhorn the first year he was married?"

"I don't know, my dear," I answered evasively; "this isn't the first year I have been married, not by a good many, and I wouldn't climb it—for a farm."

"You know what I mean?" she said.

I did.

When we reached the boarding-house, Mr. Jacobus took me aside.

"You know," he began his discourse, "my wife, she used to live in N'York!"

I didn't know; but I said yes.

"She says the numbers on the streets run criss-cross, like. Thirty-four's on one side o' the street and 35 on t'other. How's that?"

"That is the invariable rule, I believe."

"Then—I say—these here new folk that you 'n' your wife seem so mighty taken up with—dy'e know anything about em?"

"I know nothing about the character of your boarders, Mr. Jacobus," I replied, conscious of some irritability. "If I choose to associate with any of them—"

"Jess so—jess so!" broke in Jacobus, "I hain't nothin' to say ag'inst yer sosherbil'ty. "But do ye know them?"

"Why, certainly not," I replied.

"Well—that wuz all I wuz askin' ye. Ye see when he come here to take the rooms—you wasn't here then—he told my wife that he lived at No. 34 in his street. And yistiddy he told her that he lived at No. 35. He said he lived in an apartment house. Now there can't be no apartment-house on two sides of the same street, kin they?"

"What street was it?" I inquired wearily.

"Hundred 'n twenty-first street.

"Maybe," I replied, still more wearily. "That's Harlem. Nobody knows what people will do in Harlem."

I went up to my wife's room.

"Don't you think it's queer?" she asked me.

"I think I'll have a talk with that young man to-night," I said, "and see if he can give some account of himself."

"But, my dear," my wife said gravely, "she doesn't know whether they've had the measles or not."

"Why, great Scott!" I exclaimed, "they must have had them when they were children."

"Please don't be stupid," said my wife, "I meant their children."

"When I went upstairs that evening I found my wife putting her hair to bed—I don't know how I could better describe an operation familiar to every married man. I waited until the last tress was coiled up, and then I spoke.

"I've talked with Brede," I said, "and I didn't have to catechize him. He seemed to feel that some sort of an explanation was looked for, and he was very outspoken. You were right about the children—that is, I must have misunderstood him. There are only two. But the Matterhorn episode was simple enough. He didn't realize how dangerous it was until he had got so far into it that he couldn't back out; and he didn't tell her because he'd left her here, you see, and under the circumstances—"

"Left her here!" cried my wife. "I've been sitting with her the whole afternoon, sewing, and she told me that he left her at Geneva, and came back and took her to Basle—and the baby was born there—now, I'm sure, dear, because I asked her."

"Perhaps I was mistaken when I thought he said she was on this side," I suggested, with bitter, biting irony.

"You poor dear, did I abuse you?" said my wife. "But do you know, Mrs. Tabb said that she didn't know how many lumps of sugar he took in his coffee. Now that seems queer, doesn't it?"

It did. it was a queer thing. But it looked queer. Very queer.

The next morning, it was clear that war was declared against the Bredes. They came down to breakfast somewhat late, and as soon as they arrived the Biggleses swooped up the last fragments that remained on their plates, and made a stately march out of the dining-room. Then Miss Hoogencamp arose and departed, leaving a whole fishball on her plate. Even as Atlanta might have dropped an apple behind her to tempt her pursuer to check his speed, so Miss Hoogencamp left that fishball behind her, and between her maiden self and contamination.

We had finished our breakfast, my wife and I, before the Bredes appeared. We talked it over and agreed that we were glad that we had not been obliged to take sides upon such insufficient testimony.

After breakfast it was the custom of the male half of the Jacobus household to go around the corner of the building to smoke their pipes and cigars, where they would not annoy the ladies. We sat under a trellis covered with a grape-vine that had borne no grapes since the memory of man. This vine, however, bore leaves, and these, on that pleasant summer morning, shielded from us two persons who were in earnest conversation in the straggling, half-dead flower-garden at the side of the house.

"I don't want," we heard Mr. Jacobus say, "to enter into no man's pry-vacy; 'but I do want to know, who it may be, like, that I hev in my house. Now, what I ask of you, and I don't want you to take it in no ways personal, is—hev you your merridge license with you?"

"No," we heard the voice of Mr. Brede reply, "have you yours?"

I think it was a chance shot; but it told all the same The major (he was a widower) and Mr. Biggles and I looked at each other; and Mr. Jacobus, on the other side of the grape trellis, looked at—I don't know what—and was as silent as we were.

Where is your marriage license, married reader? Do you know? Four men, not including Mr. Brede, stood or sat on one side or other of that grape-trellis, and not one of them knew where his marriage license was. Each of us had one—the major had had three. But where were they? Where is yours? Tucked in your best man's pocket; deposited in his desk, or washed to a pulp in his white waistcoat (if white waistcoats be the fashion of the hour) washed out of existence—can you tell where it is? Can you—unless you are one of those people who frame that interesting document and hang it up on their drawing-room walls?

Mr. Brede's voice arose, after an awful stillness of what seemed like five minutes and was probably 30 seconds:

"Mr. Jacobus, will you make out your bill at once and let me pay it? I shall leave by the 6 o'clock train. And will you also send the wagon for my trunks?"

"I hain't said I wanted to have ye leave—" began Mr. Jacobus; but Brede cut him short.

"Bring me your bill."

"But," remonstrated Jacobus, "ef ye ain't—"

"Bring me your bill!" said Mr. Brede.

My wife and I went out for our morning's walk. But it seemed to us, when we looked at "our view," as if we could only see those invisible villages of which Brede had told us—that other side of the ridges and rises of which we can catch no glimpse from lofty hills or from the heights of human self-esteem. We meant to stay out until the Bredes had taken their departure; but we returned just in time to see Pete, the Jacobus darky, the blacker of boots, the brusher of coats, the general handy man of the house, loading the Brede trunks on the Jacobus wagon.

And, as we stepped upon the veranda, down came Mrs. Brede, leaning on Mr. Brede's arm, as though she were ill; and it was clear that she had been crying. There were heavy rings about her pretty black eyes.

My wife took a step toward her.

"Look at that dress, dear," she whispered; "she never thought anything like this was going to happen when she put that on."

It was a pretty, delicate, dainty dress, a graceful, narrow-striped affair. Her hat was trimmed with a narrow-striped silk of the same colors—maroon and white—and in her hand she held a parasol that matched her dress.

"She had a new dress on twice a day," said my wife, "but that's the prettiest yet. Oh, somehow,—I'm awfully sorry they're going."

But going they were. They moved toward the steps. Mrs. Brede looked toward my wife, and my wife moved toward Mrs. Brede. But the ostracized woman, as though she felt the deep humiliation of her position, turned sharply away and opened her parasol to shield her eyes from the sun. A shower of rice—a half-pound shower of rice—fell down over her pretty hat and her pretty dress, and tell in a spattering circle on the floor, outlining her skirts—and there it lay in a broad, uneven band, bright in the morning sun.

Mrs. Brede was in my wife's arms, sobbing as if her young heart would break.

"Oh, you poor, dear, silly children!" my wife cried, as Mrs. Brede sobbed on her shoulder, "why didn't you tell us?"

"W-W-W-We didn't want to be t-t-taken for a b-b-b-bridal couple," sobbed Mrs. Brede; "and we d-d-didn't dream what awful lies we'd have to tell, and the awaw-awful mixed up-ness of it! Oh, dear, dear, dear!"

"Pete!" commanded Mr. Jacobus, "put back them trunks. These folks stay here's long's they wants ter. Mr. Brede—" he held out a large, hard hand—"I'd orter've known better," he said. And my last doubt of Mr. Brede vanished as he shook that grimy hand in manly fashion.

The two women were walking off toward Our View, each with an arm about the other's waist—touched by a sudden sisterhood of sympathy.

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Brede, addressing Jacobus, Biggles, the major and me, "there is a hostelry down the street where they sell honest New Jersey beer. I recognize the obligations of the situation."

We five men filed down the street. The two women went toward the pleasant slope where the sunlight gilded the forehead of the great hill. On Mr. Jacobus' veranda lay a spattered circle of shining grains of rice. Two of Mr. Jacobus' pigeons flew down and picked up the shining grains, making grateful noises far down in their throats.

OUR LETTER BOX.

[Under this heading we will insert letters on any subject from boys and girls. The letters must be brief and written on one side of the paper. The name and address must be given, to appear with the letter. Address: "AUNT PRUDENCE, ADVERTISER Office, London Ont."]

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 13, 1890.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

I am a boy of 11, and hope you will print my letter. We send the ADVERTISER over to Scotland, to my grandmother there, after we are through with it, and if you do, I shall mark it, that she will be sure to notice it. She will be very much surprised, I can assure you. All this summer I have kept rabbits, but twice a dog has managed to break into the hutch and hurt some of them. We generally go away for the summer, but this summer mamma was too sick to leave home, so I and my two little sisters stayed too. But now she is better we often go down to Port Stanley. I suppose you have been there. Isn't it glorious down on the beach by the lake! We all went in bathing. I know how to swim, but it was too rough for that. Well, I musn't go on writing for ever, so good-by. From your loving nephew,

BERT CHAPMAN.

BRANTFORD, Ont., Aug. 4, 1890.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

I am a girl 7 years old and very fond of pets, so as people know it they generally give them to me for presents. Last Christmas when my big brother, who is a sailor, came home from his voyage he brought me a parrot, and my uncle, Jim, gave me a little terrier. This spring mother let me keep two dear little kittens a lady offered to me. As I have no brothers or sisters I suppose I am fonder of them than most little girls. A little girl who lives next door to me has the cutest little birds' cemetery in the back yard, whenever anyone's canary bird dies on our street we have a funeral. It is very interesting digging the little grave, and when they are buried putting up a little stone with its name on it. We get real pieces of tombstones from a stonecutter's around the corner. We have had the cemetery for three weeks. If my parrot dies before we get tired of the cemetery, we shall have him to bury too. Birds are rather scarce just now. I am in the second reader at school, and study arithmetic, writing and spelling. Well, good-bye, dear Aunt Prudence. Your loving niece, MARY HOUSTON.

ROCHESTER, U. S. A., Aug. 10, 1890.

MY DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

We have taken the ADVERTISER as long as I can remember, because father and all of us are Grits. We moved here from Canada two years ago, but do not like the ways of Americans nearly as well as those of Canadians. I think music is the most delightful thing in this world, and have taken four terms. I play most beautifully everyone says, and I think so myself, for I put a great deal of feeling into my playing. I play far better for the time I have taken than any of my cousins, but then I am so much cleverer than the majority of girls my own age. I have no brothers or sisters, and rather like it, for I don't suppose father or mother would think me nearly as precious if they had a lot of other children. Do you? My two uncles live with us because their home is in Chicago, and they have to work here. I am only 12 years old. Good-bye.

LOUISE NELSON.

NORHAM, Aug. 18, 1890.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

My grandmamma has taken the ADVERTISER for some years, so I thought I should like to write to you. I am taking my holidays to grandmamma in the country, and they are nearly over, and I will soon have to return home to Brighton to go to school. I have not any brothers or sisters; my birthday was Aug. 14; I was 13. I had a nice time; I went out driving. My grandmamma has a nice farm.

From your loving niece.

KATHLEEN RYOTT.

UNEXPECTED.

Little Edgar Nelson had never been a day from home without his mother, and when he was sent away to the boys' school, she felt sure he would be overwhelmed with homesickness, and would miss greatly his little sister Dora, who was his devoted slave and admirer.

No boy companion, she knew, could take Dora's place. And then Edgar had been such a "mother-boy!" Altogether she had a miserable day after he had gone off with his father in the early train, and was not at all reassured by her husband's remark when he returned, that he had left Edgar in the best of spirits.

Her feelings can perhaps be imagined when, two days later, she received the following affecting effusion from her son:

"My Dearest Darling Mamma,—My most particular friend is a boy by the name of 'Gummy.' Remember me to papa and Dora. Yours respectfully,

"EDGAR NELSON."

A PLUCKY BABY.

A plucky 4-year-old baby lives in Oskaloosa, Iowa. It is the child of Mrs. Wilson, and while playing about the mouth of a well covered by loose boards, fell in. The well is 30 feet deep and contained ten feet of water at the time. The mother saw the child fall and, frantically seizing a clothes line, lowered it into the well. The child grasped the line, but of course could not hold on tightly enough to be drawn out. The mother tied her end above.

"Will pet hold on tight till mamma runs for papa?" tremblingly cried the mother to the little one.

"Ess," came a brave little sob from below.

The mother hurried away and soon returned with the father and several other men who, after much difficulty, rescued the child from its chilly bath.

The little one was almost unconscious from cold when taken out, but had bravely clung to the clothes line and so kept its head above water. The happy mother hugged it and wept for joy, while the assembled crowd threw up their hats and cheered in acknowledgment of the baby's grit.

A BOY'S COMPOSITION ON THE MOON

"To look at the white moon shinin threw your winder at night, sitting on the edge of the bed, and lissnin to your father and mother's knives rattlin on their plates while they are getting their niced suppers, is the prittist site you ever seed. When it's liver and hunyens there a-having, you can smell it all the way upstairs. It looks very brite and nearly all white. Once when they was a having Fried fish and potaters I crept out of my bedroom to the top of the stares all in the dark, just so as to have a better lissen and a nearer smell. I forgot weather there was a moon that night. I dont think as there was, cose I got to the top of the stares afore I new I was there, and I tumbled right down to the bottom of the stares, a bursting open the door at the bottom, and rolling into the room nearly as far as the supper table. My father thote ot giving me the stick for it, but he let my mother give me a bit of fish on some bread, and told me to skittle off to bed again. I am sure there was not no moon, else I should have seed there wasn't a top stare when I put my foot out slow. I only skratted my left eye and ear a bit with that last bump at the bottom, which was a hard one. Stares are steeper than girls think, speshilly where the corner is.

"Boys who say as the man in the moon was sent there for pickin up sticks on the Sunday, are simpletuns, and dont know nothin about the moon what its like. You should not call them names, but just tell them that what they think is the man's eyes and nose and mouth is only vallys and holes witch you cant say now as the Bible didnt tell you of it. Then if they say to you as the moon is not all them thousends of miles off, else how could the cow jump over it, do not call these poor boys names, else you wood be a cowherd; but just tell them nicedly and gently as you never did beleave about that there cow. Tell them as not even race horses could do it, but only hangils, and they will beleave you, and thank you for making them wiser every day. If these simpletuns say to you as they do not beleave that the moon is round, cose what about its getting smaller and smaller and shapin itself difrent; just tell them as it is all along of spinnin round like, thats all, and they will beleave you, and say thank you for all that you have told them.

"Everything about the moon is true, so mind and stick to it, witch you will be rewarded for, and not be fritened of lying down on your death bed."

Our guidman broke me on the ground.
Where the music grand is pealing,
Bringing to the soul of feeling
Elysian dreams of brightness rare,
Light and grandeur—all things fair—
Love and happiness undying—
Search, for there you'll find me sighing.

39.—SQUARE WORDS.

1. A man's name; solitary; decrease; an adversary; a precious stone.

3. Waxen salve; a number; to send again; the French name of an Italian lake; a ball game; completest.

40.—CHARADE.

My first, when you know, you'll all agree,
Frequently grows to a very high tree;
Second, I've no doubt, is a thing you all bear,
Some badly, some ill—I cannot declare;
My third, now, as you may be wishing to know,
I'll tell you, if correctly put down, a snare it will show.
My whole is a line of old English kings—
Not emperors, or any such nonsensical things.

42.—CHARADE

My first is either false or true:
That it may be the last I pray,
To all that may this riddle view—
The young, the old, the grave, the gay.

My next spreads out its wings so white,
And scuds before the pleasant gale;
When in distress, it is a sight
To make the bravest cheek grow pale.

The whole is sought by everyone
Who cares if first is false or true;
You'll have it true from many a one,
By doing as you'd wish they'd do.
