Desperate Scheme to Destroy Port Arthur Ships-Bravery of Japanese Sailors.

Desperate Hand-to-Hand Fight at Mo-Tien-Lien Pass-Bloody Bayonet Encounter.

St. Petersburg, July 6, 1.30 p. m .-A few nights ago Admiral Togo attempted to repeat the Japanese exploit with torpedo boats at Wei Hui Wei during the China-Japanese war by sending torpedo boat destroyers into the harbor of Port Arthur for the purpose of sinking ships at their anchor again, but the attempt ended anchor again, but the attempt ended in disastrous failure. Four torpedo boat destroyers succeeded in creeping into the harbor, which was not protected by booms, but only one escaped; two were sunk by the shore batteries, and one was crippled. The reckless bravery of the Japanese in going to almost certain destruction excites. nothing but admiration here., The channel at Port Arthur is so tortuous and strewn with wrecks without that and strewn with wrecks without that evidently it was regarded as unnecessary to have a boom. On account of the difficulty of getting into the harbor, the feat is considered in naval circles to be fully as daring as that of the Japanese at WeiHai Wei, where Japanese torpedo boats in a storm, and covered with ice, were jumped over booms protecting that harbor and destroyed Chinese warships. So far as known the Japanese torpedo boat destroyer did not even succeed in launching torpedoes. Another lot of naval reserves numbering two thousand will be called out shortly. The exact date of the attack is not ascertainable, but it is said to have occurred Saturday. No further details are obtainable. Though it is believed other destroyers participated in the attack only four, however, succeeded in greatler in the method.

HAND TO HAND FIGHT. HAND TO HAND FIGHT.
Tokio, July 6, 11 a. m.—Supplemental despatches indicate that the fight at Mo-Tien-Lien Pass, in July 4, was a desperate hand-to-hand affair. A majority of the Japanese injured were wounded by bayonets. The Russians surrounded the outposts of the Japanese, who fought until relief came. The Russians teft 53 dead and 40 wounded on the field. The Japanese left 19 killed and 38 wounded. It is believed that the Russians sustained greater losses during the pursuit than in action.

General Kuroki's headquarters in the field, via Fusan, July 6.—On July 4 two battalions of Russians attempted to break through the Japanese outposts at the northern entrance of Mo-Tien Pass. Before daylight they surrounded an outpost of forty men at the foot of a hill, and charged the trench above. A bloody enconter trench above. A bloody enconter with bayonets, lasting a quarter of an hour, ensued. Pete was standing on the street corner with a crowd of fellows telling a little yarn—that is, a mild one for Pete—when along strolled the barber. The conversation switched to ice boats and Tom had the boards.

"Did I ever tell you about the ride I had in an ice boat?" asked he. Some one who hadn't really heard the story but who evidently knew Tom, said, "Yes," but the speaker didn't notice the interruption and continued.

"I was over to Pelee Island with my friends, "Punch" Pellette, and Bob Scratch and had to take a boat load of wine to Kingsville in am ice boat. It was an awfully cold day but the people in Kingsville were waiting for the wine. Our iceboat was 76 feet wide, and 106 feet long and we had on board 130 barrels of wine. It was the fastest ride I ever had in an ice boat. There was a good stiff wind blowing and we went the distance 16 1-2 miles in exactly 12 minutes."

Some one gave a sigh but Pete was looking at the speaker green with envy.

"While we were on the trip we were going so fast that when we came to a crack in the ice 38 feet wide, we jumped right over it before we noticed it."

Here followed a long pause for effect. No one spoke except Pete, who murmured out, "Gee whizz, what a dandy?"

"Well we were going so fast," continued Tom, "that when we were get-Punch Pel-lette got so scared going that he walked back and Bob Scratch and I walked back and Bob Scratch and I had to take the boat back all alone."

Another pause for effect and Pete broke in with "Did-D-Did you say it was wine you had.—" when a boy stepped into the circle, touched Tom on the arm and informed him that there was a customer waiting at the shop to be shaved.

Premier Tells Secretary of State He Has Been too Previous-Another Cabinet Row.

Ottawa, July 6.—Hon. R. W. Scott, Secretary of State, was flatly turned down by the Prime Minister in the House to-day.

Sir willfrid Laurier said that the intimation to Judge Britton that he needn times in the gold Concession, seeing that the concession had been abandoned by the company and cancelled by order-incouncil, had been sent by Mr. Scott, without consulting his colleagues of the Cabinet. When this action by Mr. Scott was considered in council it was disapproved of by the Cabinet, and a letter was sent to Judge Britton, asking him to consider Mr. Scott's letter as unwritten and instructing him to proceed with his report.

The incident has led to a report current in the corridors to-day that Mr. Scott will resign from the Cabinet.

MULLAH ATTACKS SQMALIS

London, July 7.-The Daily Mail's correspondent, under date of July 6, "Chat," a tiny Shetland pony only one month old, was missing when the circus train was ready to pull out of St. Paul last night. The pony could be found nowhere, though a systematic search was made of the wagons and cars which had remained during the day in the railroad yards at the foot of Eagle street.

The police were notified, but no trace of the missing pony was discovered last night. It is thought that some time during the day or last night the pony was taken from its car. No one had been seen carrying the animal away, but it is thought that some of the numerous boys who visited the train yesterday stole it.

St. Louis, Mo., July 6.—The Democratic National Convention met to day and listered to an extended speech from Representative John Sharp Williams, its temporary Chairman, appointed the committees necessary to perfect a permanent organization, and adjourned. In a session lasting itwo hours and fifty, minutes one striking incident overshadowed all other proceedings. That was the enthusiastic and prolonged obsering which greeted the name of Grover Cleveland. While the outburst which greeted the name of the former Democratic President hearing of a breach of promise action here.

Mr. Moloney, opening the case for the plaintiff, Margaret Delany, described how love for the ancient Irish tongue led to her engagement to Frank Burke, the defendant, who is an inland revenue officer, formerly stationed at Kilkenny.

Burke spent his spare time in promoting the spread of Gaelic and in supporting the Gaelic league, the local branch of which Miss Delaney joined. The pair were thrown much in each other's company, defendant becoming her instructor in the beauties of the old language. Finally he proposed and was accepted.

Twenty-five letters passed between them endearing Gaelicisms being in most of them. In 1903 he asked for his letters back "to get a reference from them." Then he married somebody else.

A FOREIGN OPINION.

The Scotsman, one of the leading "foreign" journals published north of the Tweed, after reciting the facts of the Dundonald incident now so familiar to readers of the Citizen, makes this comment:

The first remark which occurs to one on reading what has taken place is that Lord Dundonald has presumably taken every means of verifying his facts. He had to be absolutely sure of his ground before opening his mouth on such a subject. Even when this has been done, the wise course in at least three cases out of four of suspected political interference is to keep silence; or at least not to address the ear of the public before that of one's official superiors. Lord so far has shown that the Slocum was Dundonald did not follow the rule of to minaged as to invite disaster. There discretion. Presumably he was perfectly well aware that his words at Montreal would bring him into col- his life in danger violates the first lision with the political powers, and law of nature, which is self-preservawould probably lead to his being himself "scratched out" of the command in which he has shown so much in- no excuse in the eyee of nature, terest and done so much good work.

The tone adopted by the Premier and his colleagues at once raised the trusts his life on board a boat like affair to the position of an important question of politics, constitutional against danger, in a sense violates the usage, and military discipline. It will laws of nature, as much as does the be felt by many that this also was unnecessary. The indiscretion of the knowing it to be poisonous. Both Canadian Premier will seem to them not less conspicuous than that of the commander-in-chief of militia. Canada, it was said, would not submit to be "dragooned;" Lord Dundonald was referred to first as a "foreigner," although the phrase was afterwards altered by Sir Wilfrid Laurier to a change of method. If a child puts "stranger." There was no occasion or need to use any such inflamatory words. The dispute was between the Canadian Government and an officer subject to its orders who had taken it upon him to criticize and censure. But even if the appointment or dismissal of the commander of militia lay with the Imperial Government, the reference would not have been a happy and gracious one; and one cannot help thinking that the Canadian to task, had an eye fixed upon the electors of the eastern province, and and of the principles of constitutional Slocum, and they are of such magnigovernment might have been conducted in another way. The retirement of the officer who has so ably organized and raised the efficiency of the militia of the Dominion was probably inevitable; but it might very well have been possible to keep the bitter spirit of party from manifesting itself so openly.

Whether Mr. Fisher's action was wrong or ot, Lord Dundonald's course was not justifiable. The general impression will be that he did the right thing although in the wrong way; and he may likely feel that the personal sacrifice it has entailed is more than balanced by the national good it gives some promise of securing. The Dominion has had its attention powerfully directed to the evil of allowing "political wiles and political schemes" to interfere with military efficiency; and the Government profession that "a mon-partisan militia service" is an end to be worked for.

THE ORIGIN OF EVIL.

In a communication to the New York Sun, which the editor honors by placing it at the head of the editorial page, Goldwin Smith writes as follows of "The Origin of Evil."

"The General Slocum disaster, fall-ing like the Tower of Siloam on a number of innocent victims, has turned the thoughts of many of your correspondents to the origin of evil. | much recent political excitement. The origin of evil is a part of the To those who knew anything of the mystery of the universe, as to which atmosphere of Ottawa with its petty all that can be said is that it is a intrigues, and tinsel social sham, the mystery still. But all things, good or evil, of a sensitive, Scottish nobleman are alike parts of the constitution of accustomed to move in the dignified the universe. The same thing may atmosphere of integrity and honor, be good in one aspect or in one relation, evil in another. The evil is in a certain sense the condition of the good. Human virtue is the fruit of effort, which implies an opposing of virtue without effort, the result is seraphic insipidity, from which Milton's angels are redeemed only by the antagonism of Satan.

"The General Slocum disaster reminds us, by the way, that the law of nature-that is, physical sequenc will hardly serve in place of dethroned Deity. It lacks the indispensable complement of a judiciary. The hundreds who perished had broken no saw, whatever the man whose action caused the fire may have done Invariable sequence there may be, and we may be vitally concerned in observing it. But there can be law, in the proper sense, without judicial discrimination. What breach of her law did nature visit by the earthquake of Lisbon or the eruption of Mount Pelee ?"

Those who insist that evil and suffering come as the result of the violation of some law of nature, might probably answer that the victims of the Slocum disaster were punished for trusting their lives on a boat that was a death-trap. The investigation was practically no provision against fire. The man who del berately places tion. The fact that the man exposes his life in ignorance of the danger, is which punishes ignorance as severely as wilful disobedience. The man wh the Slocum, practically unprotected man who eats a poisonous fruit not suffer for their ignorance. If it be said in reply that it is unjust to punish the innocent for ignorance which perhaps is unavoldable, the answer is that that is nature's way, and we must accomodate ourselves to nature rather than attempt to aroue her into its hand on a hot stove, we are not startled at the consequences, nor do we start moralizing about the laws of nature, their justice or unjustice. We are familiar with the fact, though the child was not, that a hot stove will burn, and will burn, whether the child be innocent or not. We are familiar with such incidents, and therefore they do not shock. Yet it is quite as natural that a ship which is a death-trap should bring suffering Premier, in bringing Lord Dundonald and death to its innocent passengers as it is that a hot stove should burn an innocent child. But we are not fathat the defence of his colleagues miliar with disasters like that of the tude that they appall us. When a child is injured by an exploding firecracker, we do not begin to moralize. We are familiar with such incidents. We know that the cracker is liable to explode, and injure the child, whether the child is innocent or not. Th law of nature governing the explo sion of the fire-cracker takes no cog nizance of the child's innocence, ar we are not shocked because it do not. When a similiar law of natur operates to produce a Lisbon earth- Baltimore.. quake or an eruption of Mt. Pelee. resulting in a great calamity, then we are shocked, and we immediately proceed to discuss the origin of evil. We are shocked because the phenomenon and its results are unusual.

Of course, all this sheds no light on the origin of evil in a world supposed to be governed by a Divine Providence intimately concerned in its affairs. How to reconcile the operatio of what are called the laws of nature with this Divine Providence-that is the great problem. As Goldwin Smith puts it, all that can be said is that it is a mystery still.

"I care nothing about etiquette, gentlemen. I've been two years at Ottawa." This was a sentence used by Lord Dundonald in his Montreal speech. which has been the occasion of so son for assiming that the evidence of our physical senses, however, aided by science, is a implete account of the universe, or most crustworthy than the instincts of moral nature which speak of something beyond.

MAHOGANY FURNITURE.

An experienced housewife gives the following directions for polishing maweak vinegar and water to remove all stains and dust, dry carefully and rub well with a mixture prepared in this way: Put into a pan two ounces of yellow wax, half a pint of boiled linseed oil and one ounce of alkanet root, beiled; stand this in another pan full of boiling water till the wax is all melted and the whole well colored with the alkanet; strain it, and when cool add one gill each of spirits of turpentine and vinegar, mix well together and use. Apply this very thin-ly with a bit of flannel, rubbing it sharply all the way of the grain till rubbed in; then rub again with another clean flannel, and, lastly, with an old silk handkerchief. The great secret in polishing furniture is to apply a very little polish, with a large am of rubbing; it is to this the "eggshell gloss," so much admired on antique furniture, is due. Another excellent polish is made in putting into a bottle half a pint each of turps and oil, and one gill each of methylated

They Are Eastly Made and Produce a Charming Effect.

Two pretty candlesticks and shades are here shown. These beautiful shades are made at home out of beads strung and hung over a wire frame They may be strung in a pattern, a design, or they may be strung from on color. The effect is candy-like. The shade at the left is of red and green beads. The one at the right is of white beads with a green fringe. After one string is made, the second string is threaded into the beads of the pre ceding row, the third into the second, and so on, each bead thereby being caught by two threads, one connecting it with a neighbor on one side and one

If desirable the beads may be sewed on a silk or cotton shade, the color of the shade to match, or in contrast to the color of the beads.

Made of Bamboo.

In a house where I visited recently I saw all sorts of useful things made from bamboo-supports for small tables, footstools, bookcases and curtain poles. Sometimes the bamboo was split. Then it made a neat finish to cretonne covered boxes or where a bit of colored matting had been transformed into a durable splasher or backing to a corner seat. The mistress of the pretty little house, who is an adept with hammer and nails, told me that every bit of bamboo came from the handle of a discarded broom. handle of a discarded broom. "A bam-boo handled broom," she explained, "is so light and easy to use; besides, it costs no more than a heavier one. Then when the broom is worn out I have always a handle I can make into something or other."-Good Housekeeping.

A Famous Beauty's Cosmetic. One of the most famous beauties was Ninon de l'Enclos, whose complexion was the envy of the ladies of the French court. Many were the compounds they tried to produce a fairness of skin and a rosy blush to hers, but in vain. The secret of Ninon de l'Enclos was one which neither she nor her chemist—in those days great ladies kept their chemists-would part with. It was only after her death, at the age of ninety, that Maitre d'Ouard told what had kept his mistress' complexion fresh and beautiful. It was rain water, pure and simple

A SIGN OF THE TIMES. Workingmen's Paper Wants Civie Beauty

At great expense the civic corporation and private citizens have done much in recent years to beautify the city, and the result has been most gratifying and favorably commented upon, both by residents and visitors. Still, more might be done in the line already adopted, with but little expense on the part of the city or individuals; but in a direction involving absolutely no expense no move has been made.

who with an eye for beauty or an abhorrence of outrageous ugliness can have failed to notice the rag-tewn appearance the city presents for weeks preceding the advent of the annually-looked-for circus? Great flaming streamers are tacked all ov-er buildings, even on the main streets, windows are disfigured with faring pictures of impossible per-formances, and the billboards made to look so loud that they can be heard blocks away.

The result is unmitigated ugliness,

In that city the owners refused to remove their abominations in accordance with the city's orders, so Mayor Tom Johnston had them chopped down and carted away, and the result was less ugliness and more beauty.

Another feature offensive to good taste is the glaring advertisements of the patent medicine fakirs on the blank walls and buildings of business

FIRE-FIGHTING HISTORY.

How Canadians and Their Fire E gint That Canadian methods of fighting

That Canadian methods of lighting fire were in the van as far back as 1855 may not be known to many who have followed with admiration the record of our gallant Toronto brigade during the recent disaster, says a correspondent of The Toronto Globe. At the time of the disastrous fire in Paris, on the Quai de Billey, which occurred on November the 18th, 1855, there was at the Universal Exhibition then being held a sal Exhibition then being held a Canadian fire engine, named the "Castor." At the commencement of the fire the appearance was so alarming and gave such indications of extension that the Canadian commissioners were induced to place at the discontinuous of the local authoris missioners were induced to place at the disposition of the local authori-ties the prize fire engine. It was put in the charge of Mr. Perry, an officer of the Canaddan Fire Depart-ment, who was in Paris at the time, who rushed it to the Quai in a re-markably short time, and, drawing the water direct from the Seine, least received for the local fire engines the water direct from the Seine, kept several of the local fire engines supplied with a constant stream. At the height of the fire, when the flames attacked the military bakehouse, Mr. Perry directed that the whole jet be directed on the flames. The stream—was so strong and effective that it cut off the fire at this point, and undoubtedly saved the locatement granging and their im-coint, and undoubtedly saved the Government granaries and their immense supplies of corn and flour. Some idea of what this meant to the French people may be gleaned from the fact that stores were always kept in the building to supply forty thousand men for three months.

By a strange coincidence, the Canasand men for three months.
By a strange coincidence, the Canadian Commissioner had been shown over this building only two days previous, and had taken great interest in the machinery and the new appliances just installed. One of this party, whose name is unfortunately not known, performed a most heroic act at the fire. At the height of the configuration, hearing the alarm the conflagration, hearing the alarm whistle of the boilers (an indication that they were overheated, and that they were overheaten, and would explode unless the steam were tot off), though every passage appeared blocked by the smoke and same, he forced his way into the engine room, guided by the sound of the alerm, opened the valves and saved the building from being blown

Interesting War Relics.

Interesting War Relics.

Some interesting war relics were on exhibition at the recent meeting in Toronto of the Army and Navy Veterans on May 10th, Mr. John Munn, chaplain of the order, obtained on loan from Lieut. Turner, formerly of the 20th Devonshire Regiment, whose father, Col. Turner, served with the 11th North Devonshire Regiment through the Peninsula campaign, a number of interesting mementoes.

One relic was a tattered silk flag, which was carried by Colonel (then Ensign) Turner at the Battle of Witerloo, and which was presented to him by the officers of the regiment after the campaign. Several medals, presented to Col. Turner, also form part of the collection. Another honorary member of the Veterans lent a Court suit, worn by Chas. Paing Destoe, one of the secretaries to Charles I., whom he followed all through the Civil War. Various other relics were also on exhibition.

No doubt, then, some Tit Bits readers will be surprised that under certain conditions the postoffice will undertake to safely deliver weights many times in excess of that stated in the regulations. Fam ous Delineator of Children. Hilda Cowham has been famous a humorous delineator of children a humorous delineator of children for a long time now. She possesses the unique distinction of being the only lady artist whose work has ever figured in "Punch." In this year's "Almanack" there is a full-page picture by Mr. G. P. Armour of The Punch contributors' meet, to "draw the covers" of 1904. There "draw the covers" of 1904. There is only one lady among that famous "hunt"; and she is Hilda Cowham, on a fiery black charger. In private life Miss Cowham is Mrs. Edgar Lander. Her husband is also a black-and-white artist of repute, having contributed pictorially to Punch, besides scores of other well-known journals. Mr. and Mrs. Lander met at the Lambeth Art School, where they both served their apprenticeship to illustration work. Hilda Cowham is a slim young lady, with a clever face, big dark eyes, and an unusual wealth of dark hair. She is a rapid worker. "I prefer flat-color "draw the covers" of 1904. a rapid worker. A Peerage Romance.

The Daily Mirror says: The strange complications of the Grader peerage, which has been dormant since the death of the third baron without male issue, will shortly once more come before the House of Lords. Let the early part of the lost more come before the House of Lords. In the early part of the last century, Stewart William Gardner, a grandson of Rear-Admiral Lord Gardner, lived in the southwest pre-vinces of India, and contracted a marriage with a native woman, and begat numerous descendants. In 1884, soon after the third barca died, the eldest of these colored descendants sought to take his seat in the House of Lords, but the Lord Chancellor decided an enquiry must be held into his claims. On death of his father, in 1901, Hyde Gardner, who also claims title through a collateral branch, proceeded to India to obtain evidence as to the validity, of the marriage on which the title of the Indian claimant depends. He is advised that the result of his enquiries clears the way to the suchis own claim to the peerage.

Sir George Turner,
When Sir George Turner, the Treasurer of the Australian Commenwealth, attended the conference of colonial Premiers in London in 1897, he took a great interest in the thieves' haunts in the capital of the Empire. Under the guidance of dotectives he visited them, and had a pretty good insight into the methods of the cockney pickpocket. The knowledge then gained had apparently no application to the ways of Australia, for on Easter Monday Sir George was robbed, while standing on the platform of a St. Kilda cable tramcar, of his gold watch and chain, sovereign purse, railway pass and other contents of his waistcoat. It was the very irony of fate that Sir George Turner. It was the very irony of fate that the man who is responsible to the people of Australia for the disposal of nearly £13,000,000 a year should fail to look after £60 worth of personal trinkets on a bank holiday.

Church Sold to Hotelkeeper.

It is safer to employ sculpture than heroes. That seems to be the moral of a curious incident recorded in the latest news from New Zea-land. The Scots Church in Wellington, the metropolis of that colony, has just been sold to an Irish hotel-keeper, who intends converting it in-to a public hall. It was erected by public subscription as a memoral to the Scottish members of the New Zealand contingents who fell in South Africa. The inaugural core-mony was performed by Mr. Seddon, and the company included the late Gen. Sir Hector McDonald. IF YOU DON'T SEE

BOWLING

The finals in the bowling tournament were played off yesterday on the local bowling green. These games were to have been played on the first of July but the rain prevented the playing.

R dgetown won out from Chatham in the finals for the Sutherland trophy. J. W. Webb's r.ms were the runners up but failed to win the final game.

The Chatham rink skipped by A. H VonGunten were successful against Ridgetown in the final game for the Banner-News trophy. It looked for a time as if Chatham would be beat n as at one period of the game the opposing rink was 10 shots ahead o ends. At the conclusion of the game, however, Mr. VonGunten was one shot up, and won out.

There was a good attendance of spectators and much interest was taken in the result.

A very pretty home wedding wa olemnized dast evening at seven o'clock 'at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Blight, Wellington street, when Miss Flo, their daughter, was united in marriage to Willis T. Parsons, M. D., of Cleveland.

The bride was one of Chatham's prettiest and most popular young ladies, although for some time past she has been a trained nurse in Cleveland.

The bride looked beautiful indeed n crepe de chene. Mrs. Geo. Merritt her sister, was matron of honor, and a little neice, Miss Gladys Merritt vas a very pretty flower girl. Mrs. John Cooper sang, in good voice, "Faithful and True," from Lohengrin, while Mrs. A. T. Mc-Donald, of New York, played the wed-

JAPANESE FOLKLORE.

Lafcadlo Hearn Gives Another Glance Inte

Mr. Lafcadio Hearn has given us another glance into the mystic beauties of Japanese folklore, in a small volume of twenty tales, as weird as those of Edgar Allan Poe. With poetic sympathy he has translated these strange legends which form part of the more or less ancient literature of Japan. Mr. Hearn's work is that of an interpreter, and is art of the highest class. It is simple and graceful in style, and the narration is of one who, understanding both the East and the West, transmits fine intuition from one to the ration is of one who, understanding both the East and the West, transmits fine intuition from one to the other, with, as it were, the clasp of the hand. The "Kwaidan" are pretty tales, and take a lasting hold on the imagination. Among them is the story of Aoyagi, a beautiful peasant girl living with her parents in a lonely hut on the top of a mountain. She was wooed and won by Tomotada, a valiant young samural in the service of the Prince of Noto. But her parents refused to consent to the marriage of their daughter to one so much above her in position, and so presented the girl to the mobile young samural "for an humble handmaid." Before the deeply smitten Tomotada ceuld obtain his prince's permission to marry Aoyagi other trials occurred, which were, however, all overcome and the lovers were happily united. After living together in great happiness for five years, the story goes on to relate how one day the young wife was filled with great pain, and begged her husband quickly to repeat the Nembutsu prayer, as she was dying. Tomotada tried to allay her fears, but without result:

"No, no!" she responded; "I do rried to allay her lears, but without result:

"No, no!" she responded; "I do not imagine it; I know! . . And it were needless now, my dear husband, to hide the truth from you any longer; I am not a human being. The soul of a tree is my soul; the heart of a tree is my heart; the sap of the willow is my life. And some one at this cruel moment is cutting down my tree; that is why I must die!" With another cry of pain she turned aside her beautiful head, and tried to hide her face behind her sleeve. But almost in the same moment her form appeared to collapse in the strangest way, and to sink down, down, down—level with the floor. Tomotada had sprung to supin the strangest way, and to shik down, down, down—level with the floor. Tomotada had sprung to sup-port her—but there was nothing to support! There lay on the matting only the empty robes of the fair creature, and the ornaments she had worn in her hair; the body had ceas-ed to exist ed to exist. Tomotada shaved his head and be-Tomotada shaved his head and became a Buddhist priest, and one day in his travels he reached the spot where first he had met Aoyagi. There was nothing to mark the place except the stumps of three willows, two old trees and one young tree, that had been cut down some time before. Beside the stump he erected a memorial tomb inscribed with hely texts, and there he performed many Isuddhist services on behalf of the spirits of Aoyagi and her parents,

Can You Improve This?

It is not very well known that in the hall of one of the great colleges the hall of one of the great colleges of England there hangs a frame inclosing a few sentences of which Abraham Lincoln is the author. They are considered the best English that was ever written. We might read them over and call them very simple indeed. And they are so simple that any child who reads at all can read and understand them. That is one thing that makes them great. It was his being simple and plain that made thing that makes them great. It was his being simple and plain that made Lincoln himself great.

Now, here is a little paragraph by Lincoln which he made a rule of his conduct. Suppose you try to write it over and see how much you can improve it. See if each word is the right one and try to find a better word for the place. Notice how simple this is. All but two are words of a single syllable:

of a single syllable:
"I am not bound to win, but I am where a sumptuous wedding dinner bound to be true. I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to the light I have. I must stand with anybody that stands right, stand with him while he is right and part with him when he goes wrong."

When the curtain fell on "The Bride and the Bridegroom," by Arthur Law, at the New Theatre, London, on a recent Thursday night, a band of rufflans in the gallery tried to start a riot or a panic. It was the most disgraceful scene witnessed the most disgraceful scene witnessed in a London theatre in many years. Mr. Wyndham tried to quell the row, but he was hissed, "booed" and insulted until finally he had to summon the police. After the ruffians were ejected he told his audience that in future he would take means to protect them from organized disturbance. The row lasted twenty minutes and was said to be due to dissatisfaction over the exclusion of Mabel Terry Lewis from the curtain call. What London managers need on a first night are just about one dozen New York policemen, with just two "high balls" apiece under their belts. The rioters would last then about thirty seconds.—New York Paper. Paper.

Foot-Binding in China

Women are certainly the inferior sex in China. A man does not leave his father and mother to cleave to his wife, but he demands that his wife shall become the absolute slave of his parents while they live. The bride is chosen by the parents and a man seldom knows anything of her

For a long time the women of China have submitted to the torture of foot-binding, and have toddled about on nothing more than a peg in the slowest and most painful manner. It has always been considuant of the state of the world advanced to the world advanced for the world advanced to the world advanced for the world and the world advanced for ered a beauty, this wee deformed foot for a woman, and a man chooses his wife for her small feet rather than her beauty.

Imagine a woman tottering through life on a two and a half inch foot. In a certain sense it makes women captives, yet not altogether, for one sees them on the streets and even working in the fields almost minus the pedal extremity. There is now an "anti-foot-binding society," which is also supported by many of the more progressive Chinese. This foot-binding begins when the girl is three years old. The girl must suffer torture, but she bears all, for she thinks her chances of getting a hus thinks her chances of getting a hus-band are thus pretty well assured. The bound feet are poetically spoken of as "the golden lilies." Until very recently a natural sized foot on a woman was regarded as a sign of a menial, a coolie boat woman, a slave girl, a woman lacking virtue.

Tongue-Tied Officers.

They do a thing in England that we ought to find some way of doing here. They let officers of the army and navy go into Parliament and speak their minds there like free citiens. How they manage it, we don't know-perhaps they give the Parliamentarian officers leave of absence-but in some way they do manage it.

Our soldiers and sailormen ought to have a chance to run for Congress, to have a chance to run for Congress, and, if they are elected, to speak their minds like other men who have minds. As it is, they never have any turn at free speech. Even when they go on the retired list, they must exercise a prudent reticence, and if they say anything that the President, or their department heads, object to, they are in trouble at once. Discipling domands this rule, so far Discipline demands this rule, so fa Discipline demands this rule, so late as active officers are concerned, but there ought to be some possibility of a let-up in it. To be hopelessly tongue-tied for a lifetime, without possibility of even temporary relief Seems a hard case for a free-born American voter to be in.—N. Y. Life.

Good Balcony Plants. For the balcony, Cobaea scandeu a very rapid creeper, is excellent. Good pot plants from seed sown last autumn will make a much quicker growth than spring sown seedlings. The fine bell-shaped blossoms of this plant are pale green when they first appear, changing to a deep numble in plant are pale green when they first appear, changing to a deep purple in a few days, and the long sprays of foliage which it throws on all sides are very decorative in themselves. One good plant will cover several square yards of ironwork, and the bright yellow flowers of Tropacolum canariense harmonize delightfully with the sombre purple of the co-baea.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE.

The noble woman of whom Long-fellow wrote the lines that follow has just passed her eighty-fourth birthday, having outlived almost all her contemporaries. It is half a cen-tury since her work in the hospital of the Crimea made her famous throughout the English-speaking world.

Longfellow, in a note, says: At Pisa the Church of San Francisco contains a chapel dedicated lately to Santa Filomena; over the altar is a picture by Sabatelli, representing the saint as a beautiful nymph-like figure floating down from heaven, attended by two angels bearing the lily, palm and javelin, and beneath, in the foreground, the sick and maimed who are healed by her intercession.—Mrs. Jameson, Sacred and Legendary, lib. II., 298.

Whene'er a noble deed is wrought, Whene'er is spoken a noble thought, Our hearts in glad surprise To higher levels rise.

The tidal waves of deeper souls into our inmost being rolls, And lifts us unawares Out of all meaner cares,

Honor to those whose words or deeds
Thus help us in our daily needs,
And by their overflow
Raise us from what is low!

Thus thought I as by night I read Of the great army of the dead, The trenches cold and damp, The starved and frozen camp

The wounded from the battle-plain in dreary hospitals of pain, The cheerless corridors, The cold and stony floors. Lot in that house of misery

A lady with a lamp I see

Pass through the glimmering gloom,
And flit from room to room.

And slow, as in a dream of bliss,
The speechless sufferer turns to kiss
Her shadow as it falls
Upon the darkening walls.

As if a door in heaven should be Opened and then closed suddenly, The vision came and went, The light shone and was spent.

On England's annals, through the long Hereafter of her speech and song, That light its rays shall cast From portals of the past. A Lady with a Lamp shall stand In the great history of the lund, A noble type of good Heroic womanhood.

Not even shall be wanting here
The palm, the illy and the spear,
The symbols that of yore, Saint Filomena bore.

RISE AND FALL OF CONSOLS.

something About a Favorite Form of English Investment.

Consols form a very accurate baro-Consols form a very accurate barometer of our national life, says The London Daily News. When trade is good, and the general outlook hopeful, the price rises; when the future seems unsettled, either commercially or politically, it falls.

for thirty-eight years.

Like many other terms used on the Stock Exchange, where time and words are precious, "Consols" is a handy abbreviation. Just as the War Loan is known as "Khakis," and Central London Railway shares are called "Tubes," so "Consols" is a colloquialism for Consolidated Annuities—a fund which dates from 1751. By a statute passed in that year a variety of Government stocks were thrown into one fund, consisting to-day of £590,000,000, or nearthree-quarters of our entire na tional debt.

A large proportion of this vast amount is, however, "locked up"—that is to say, purchased and held as a permanent investment, bringing in a regular income, and only a comparatively small amount is usually available for negotiation. As in the case of other stocks, the price per case of other stocks, the price per £100 varies, according to supply and

For the lowest price on record we have to go back to 1797, when the Spanish war sent it down to £47 10s. The other extreme was reached 6d.

The entire management of Consols, in common with the rest of the national debt, is vested in the Bank of England, which acts in this respect as the agent of the Govern-ment. The bank keeps all the ac-counts and pays the dividends; and it is a peculiarity of this fund that a seller must attend at the bank, either in person or by attorney, to sign the transfer book. The amount of work thus caused is amazing; but some idea of its vastness may be derived from the fact that many thousands of the quarterly dividends are for sums like 1s. or 1s. 6d. These, as well as the larger amounts, are paid by post in the form of money order or cheque, unless the proprietor of the stock gives notice that he intends to make personal ap-that he intends to make personal application.

Many years ago Consols paid eight per cent. interest. This rate gradually decreased, and in 1888 Mr. Goschen reduced it to 21, and arranged for a further reduction to 21-3 in 1903. That is why Consols to the second of the 'Goschens,'

Could, Not Would. Could, Not Would.

Referring to the ninetieth birthday of the Baroness Burdett-Coutts it is recalled that at one time it was currently reported that the great Duke of Wellington wanted her for a wife. When the report reached the Waterloo hero he made this comment: "I said Miss Angela Burdett-Coutts deserved to be a duchess, not that I would make her one." On hearing what the famous soldier said Miss Burdett-Coutts remarked quietly, "I think His Grace should have said could instead of would."

When I was a guileies young marine.

While the Transportation Commission is traveling about the country gathering information on this important question, many opportunities occur for reminiscences of carlier days of transportation in Canada, and few are better qualified to speak of these than Mr. Robert Reford of Montreal, says The Globe. On one of these occasions Mr. Reford gave a most interesting account of his experiences as a merchant in Toronto, where he conducted business in the Market nearly fifty years ago. At that time a line of four schooners of about 450 tons ran for three years between Liverpool and Toronto, continuing on to Chicago. Mr. Reford recalled the names of two of them, the Wirralight and the Jack de Mole. Among Mr. Reford's passessions of that time was the schooner Sea Gull, of about 300 tons. In 1862 his friend Capt. Frank Jackman of Toronto suggested fitting this vessel out with a cargo for Port Natal, now Durban. South Africa, where the captain had a friend, through whom he felt confident a very profitable sale of the cargo could be made. "Well, but," said Mr. Reford to the captain, "what will we load her with?" and at the captain's suggestion lumber was the cargo, but 200 barrels of whiskey, at that time selling for about 25 cents a gailon, and a quantity of general merchandles were added. A seafaring commander was secured at Quebec and the voyage begun. After a long delay in the doldrums at the equator the Sea Gull reached Cape Town, where she had the misfortune of losing her anchors in a storm. A similar experience was also met at Port Elizabeth. The schooner finally arrived off Port Natal in a storm, which carried her 200 miles away. Returning she was agrain driven past the port. While the Transportation Commis Port Natal in a storm, which carried her 200 miles away. Returning she was again driven past the port, but made it on the third attempt, running straight into a little stream, which left her high and dry when the tide went out.

when left her high and dry when the tide went out.

Now was Captain Jackman's chance to make a fortune by the sale of his cargo, but, also, the population of Natal had little use for lumber or whiskey. The natives had risen, and the white population were in terror for their lives, their greatest desire being to be taken away. The lumber seemed useless for anything but comms. It was unloaded, and su-gar, rum, estrich feathers and ba-boons shipped in its place, besides 50 boons shipped in its place, besides 50 passengers anxious to be taken anywhere else. With this cargo and the whiskey still on board the return voyage was made to Boston. Whether from the presence of the ripening whiskey on board or etherwise Mr. Reford did not explain, but the monkeys behaved so badly that only two reached America alive. And after discharging her cargo at Boston the Sea Gull returned to Toronto, where the baboons were turned over to dethe baboons were turned over to de-light the juvenile portion of the population.

Mr. Reford added that the loss or the venture was not more than $3.

CANADIAN LAW AND ORDER.

Element Not in Sympathy With Canadian Ideas Taught a Lesson.

A private letter from Fernie gives some interesting particulars of one aspect of the recent fire which destroyed a large portion of the town. Looting began while the fire was in progress, the town containing an element not in sympathy with Canadian ideas of law and wards and as a law and wards. element not in sympathy with Canadian ideas of law and order, and an unlimited supply of liquor being obtainable. Special constables were sworn in and the jail was soon filled. The situation still was serious. One of the higher employes of the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company is Major J. G. Langton, late of Toronto, the commanding officer of No. 2 Army Service Corps, Toronto, formerly adjutant of the 20th Halton Rifles, and prior to that an active non-com. in the Queen's Own. Major Langton volunteered his services. He was given a number of men and took the fire.

"The people out here never realized before what a little display such as we made could do in the way of awing the lawless element," writes an eye-witness. It is expected that the events of the two nights will give a stimulus to the projected organization of an independent militia company.

non-com. in the Queen's Own. Major Langton volunteered his services. He was given a number of men and took charge of the fire district, which contained much valuable salvage.

Major Langton converted the Police Court into a guard-room, procured distinguishing badges for his special constables, and persons authorized to be inside the fire lines, and then cleared the district of all others. That done, he established a cordon of armed sentries around the fire area. Going back to his non-com days, he posted the sentries and took out the reliefs himself. This process began in the afternoon, and by night the place was very quiet, the moral effect on the foreigners being unexpectedly great. The Chief of Police then used the remainder of the special constables for patrolling the town outside of the burned district, and there was not the slightest trouble.

trouble. On the ensifing day there was some talk of mobbing the guardians of property. The precautions were renewed, and at 10 p.m. Major Langton doubled his sentries and placed a larger reserve in the guard-room; while the police kept the crowd moving. The night passed quietly, the only alarm being a fresh outbreak of the fire in some debris. The guard turned out and for two hours fought the fire.

Using Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.
How many people are simply "troubled with their stomachs." They hardly recognize their complaint under the pretentious title of Dyspepsia, but they do know beyond a doubt that they have hours of discomfort and that the stomach is the cause. To 'those the experience of Mrs. B. S. Rombough, Cockburn Island, Ont. She says:
"I was troubled terribly with my stomach. I got some of Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and they did me good. I think they are a good Tablet, and I would recommend them to all who are troubled with their stomach."

Now that is a simple statement regarding 'a simple remedy for a simple 'trouble. It simply tells all who have stomach troubles that they can find relief in Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.

A PIONEER'S EXPERIENCE. Alex. McIntyre, of Sgrement Township Tells of His Early Life Cutting

Alex. McIntyre of Egremont Township, came to Canada in 1851. Mr. McIntyre stayed a short time in Cheltesham, then he came to Egremont, took up the farm which he still owns, built a leg shanty in the heart of the bush, moved in when there was only a canvas hung up for a door and the wolves would be howling around at night, like to tear it down, but he always kept the ax, "the sword of defence," near at hand. Alex. McIntyre of Egremont Town-hand.

There was then no neighbors, no There was then no neighbors, ne roads; one did not know where the roads would be, as the land was not yet surveyed; the only way of traveling was by marking the trees with the ax, so that one could return the same way.

The nearest place where the new-comer; could sharpen his ax was at a Mr. McDougall's, who lived where Mr. Dan Murphy lives now, three or four miles away, who had a grindstone.

The nearest place to get groceries was up the Owen Sound road; one Cochrane kept a little store there. It goes by that name yet. There is a small burying ground there. Heard Wolves Barking.

The first winter he started off one day to get his ax sharpened, and also get some groceries. Striking across the bush, the crust on the snow would carry him. As he was about two miles from home, he heard a pack of wolves on his trail as he supposed. His first thought was that he would be killed, so he removed parts of his clothing and was that he would be killed, so he removed parts of his clothing and hung them up in a tree, his bonnet along with the rest. Ferhaps some-body might come along and find them. Then he set his back against a tree, the ax in hand ready to fight to the last. To his great relief they took another route, being after a deer instead of a man. In going through the bush one could often see deer carcases where they had been killed by the wolves and partly eaten.

The next spring he bought two The next spring he bought two hundred of figur and fifteen bushels of potatoes from a person in Arthur Township. The next job was to get his purchase home, as the river was flooded and there was as bridge, only a tree chopped down across the water, which was very high in the spring, and the tree would be floating on the water. Still he had to first the first the former property the the spring, and the water. Still he had to face it. The farmer brought the stuff as far as Mr. Samuel Wallace's on the other side of the river, the farm now owned by Mr. Cantlon, about two miles away by the road, he had to take it, but there was nothing else for it, and to carry it all on his back. He had to make several trips across the river, expecting every trip would be the last, as the log was swinging se, but he got it all over. The next thing was to carry it all home, and he persevered until he got it all home, but he used himself up so that he had to take a rest on the broad of his back on the bed.

on the bed. Left Family in the Woods.

In the summer time he used to go

In the summer time he used te ge down the country to work, leaving his wife and two little children in the bush. He worked in one place for eleven dollars a month, and now men have the cheek to ask thirty dollars a month.

In the winter time he used to cut down as much of the bush as the dull ax would allow him, until he had cleared a little patch, enough to sow a little wheat and plant some potatoes. It happened one bright moonlight night, when the grass was full grown, that he was aroused out of his sleep by hearing tramping about the house. Thinking it was a black steer that he had which has broken into the grain, he got up, partly dressed and went out. As he looked around he saw what he thought was the steer down amongst the grain. He picked up a stick, thought was the steer down and use the grain. He picked up a stick, wanting to give him a good "whack" before he got out, there being only a slash fence in those days to protect the crop, and he hurried after him through the grain, the stick raised in the air ready to hurried after him through the grain, the stick raised in the air ready to give him the full weight of it, but as they both got over the fence in quick succession the supposed steer stood up on his hind legs with his back against a tree, and his pursuer directly saw that it was Mr. Bruin he was chasing. So he called te his neighbor, he had one then, to come out with a gun, as he had a bear standing up against a tree, and there was a fine chance to put a ball through him. But the neighbor, thinking he was safest where he was said, "Well, Sandy if you knew Mr. Bruin as well as I de you would leave him alone." He also made the excuse that he could not find the powder or balls for the gun. After trying both coaxing and soolding the neighbor till he was tired he had to give it up. He backed to the fence, keeping his eye on the bear all the time. When he got near enough he threw himself ever. Mr. Bruin at the same time letting himself down on all fours, disappeared in the bush.

His First Grist.

His first Grist.

His first grist was the product of the first wheat he cut. He threshed some of it by spreading sheets and quits on the ground, and by tying two sticks together he made a flail with which he knocked the grain off the straw, then he cleaned it by winnewing it in the wind, the way they used to do in olden times. When dene he had three bushels. This he had to carry on his back all the way through the bush to Martin's Mills, which, as everybody knows, are between three and four miles away. The grist had to be got home again in the same way. When he had his first yoke of steers broken in his neighbor's wife took sick and he was asked to go for a doctor. So he hitched the steers into the jumper, arig that was used instead of a sleigh, made with his own hads, sot a sail in it or iron of any kind about. It and off he started away down to His First Grist.

now with a horse and buggy. On the way he met an acquaintance. When he told his arrapd the other said: "Well, Sandy, if they knew in the old country that you were going after a doctor with a pair of stirks, they would have a good laugh."

Fledding Through the Bush. Pledding Through the Bush.

Another time he and his neighber's boy started off with the steers and the jumper, with two grists, one for each family. In going away they were all right, for it was daylight, but in coming home it was dark in the bush and they had a torch with them made out of cedar bark, but they had not proceeded very far when the torch went out and they were left in the dark. What was to be done but plod along the best way they could? Mr. McIntyre went en ahead feeling for the road, while the boy came behind with the steers and the load, with a rope tied to their horns to guide them. They traveled along that way for quite a while, but when they went back to inspect, the jumper was empty, the bags had dropped off one by one till there were none left. That was another predicament. The only thing he could do was te find his way back and try and gather all the bags together again, so after charging the boy to keep the steers' heads straight ahead and not let them turn around, he started on his search for the lost. When he found them all he had to carry them one by one until he got them all on the jumper again, then make anether start for home. When they got as far as Thomas Gardner's where Mr. Jerry Burk lives now, Mr. Gardner gave them another torch. They were all right thes until they reached Mr. David Wright's hill, when the jumper went to pieces. Then he had to carry all the load with they reached air. Davis wights will, when the jumper went to pieces. Then he had to carry all the lead back again to Mr. Gardner's and leave it till the neighbor came after it next day. It was daylight whos they got home.

Another time he and the neighbor and his wife were coming home

Another time he and the neighbor and his wife were coming home through the bush after dark with the steers and the jumper. The neighbor had a little pig that he was taking home, but the little fellew got out into the bush and the hunt began after the little porker. They left the woman on the jumper minding the steers, while they themselves took after the little rascal. selves took after the little rascal. Every time when they thought they had him he would slip away, and they would get a knock against a tree or tangled in the brush. In the meantime the woman was yelling that she was afraid of the wolves. Still they captured the runaway, declaring there was nothing like persevering to succeed in life.

Sheep Killed by Wolves.

When he had a few sheep one night the wolves killed some of them, and a night or two after, about dawn, the dog made an awful noise barking. His master got up, dressed, took the gun (he had one then) and went out to investigate. The dog wont ahead till, he came near the path (where the road is now, what they call Sandy's hill, and there down on the path was what he supposed was a wolf. He raised the gun and took aim. posed was a wolf. He raised the gun and took aim. When a man stuck his head out from behind a tree, he let down the gun and went forward. Two men had been coming home with a jug of whiskey for a logging beenext day, so the supposed wolf was one of the men stooping over the jug, trying to take the cork out so as to get a little drapple to help them along on their long tramp away up to Proton. Mr. McIntyre put away the gun and never lifted it again, very thankful things turned out as they did.

In closing it might be said that to Mr. McIntyre is due a great deal of credit for making the road on the sixth concession, for when it was not passable for either man or beast, he used to make bees to make a way through the swamp. In those days they did not stand or sit till the whistle blew before starting, but they would begin as soon as possible after daylight and work till dark, sometimes not even coming home for their dinner, but taking it dark, sometimes not even coming home for their dinner, but taking it with them if there were no children to carry it to them.—Mount Forest

Lord and Lady Dundonald.

Lady Dundonald and her children have arrived in London from Canada. Lady Dundonald was Miss Winifred Hesketh, only child and heiress of Mr. Robert Hesketh, of Gwyrch Castle, near Abergale, in North Wales, and her marriage with Lord Dundonald—then Lord Cochrane—took place in 1873. She is a tall, handsome, dark-haired woman, with a pleasant smile and a stately manner. Her time is spent between Gwyrch Castle—now her own property—and a fine residence in Portman Square. Lady Dundonald shows much interest in Welsh industries, and seldom fails to appear at their annual exhibition in London. The marriage of Lady Grizel Hamilton ended, for the moment her duties as a chaperon, but the lovely Lady Jean Cochrane is now seventeen, and will probably make her debut in 1905. Lord Dundonald's distinguished career as a soldier is known to all the world; but everyone may not be aware that, himself a clever inventor, he comes of a family of discoverers and scientists. The present peer has improved gun-carriages, thought out a means of storing water for troops on the march, and invented a useful article for warming the hands called an instra. And his forbears have had the same tastes and talents. Archibald, the ninth Earl, made many chemical discoveries; and the tenth Earl, like his father, was a distinguished scientist, and invented improvements in engines, boilers, and screw-propellers. The Cochranes are one of the oldest Scotch familes, and their gift for mechanics and invention is one rarely to be found among the ancient aristocracy of these islands.—M.A.P. HIS LAST HOPE REALIZED

(From the Sentinel, Gebo, Mont.)
In the first opening of Oklahoma to settlers in 1889, the editor of this paper was among the many seekers after fortung who made the big race one fine day in April. During his traveling about and afterwards his temping upon his claim, he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat gave him a camping upon his cam, he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat, gave him a very severe diarrhoea which it seemed almost impossible to check, and along in June the case became so bad he expected to die. One day one of his neighbors brought him one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a last hope. A big dose was given him while he was rolling about on the ground in great agony, and in a few minutes the dose was repeated. The good effect of the medicine was soon noticed and within an hour the patient was taking his first sound sleep for a fortnight. That one little bottle worked a complete cure and he kannot help but feel grateful. The meason for bowel disorders being at hand suggests this item. For sale by All Druggists. All Druggists.

First G.W.R. Engine.

The Galt Reporter states that the first locomotive engine on the Galt branch of the Great Western Railway arrived upon the line or Monday last with a load of rails for the track. The workmen are now engaged in laying the rails, and there is a prospect that the road will soon be opened. The disastrous accident which took place a few days ago on the Great Western Railroad was occasioned by a cow attempting to run under the third car, which threw it off the track and precipitated it down an embankment of seventy feet, causing the death of seven persons, three fatally wounded and several severely injured. No blame attached to the conductor.—From The Globe, June 8, 1854.

SCHOLES WON HIS HEAT.

Henley, July 6.—In the semi-finals or the Damond Sculls to-day L. F. choles, of the Don Rowing Club, Tor-nito, beat F. S. Kelly the holder. Later.—The main attraction on the onto, beat F. S. Kelly the holder.

Later.—The main attraction on the regatta program to-day was the meeting between L. F. Scholes, of the Don Rowing Club, Toronto, and F. S. Kelly, Oxonian, in the semi-final for the Diamond Sculls, in which the Canadian sculler defeated Kelly, the holder of the trophy, by four lengths, in nine minutes and eleven seconds. Kelly led for a mile, when the Canadian, putting on a splendid spurt, gradually wore out his opponent, and rowed him down. Opposite the grand stand the Oxonian was exhausted, and stopped. The winner met with a great reception. His success was quite unexpected, the experts almost unanimously having foretold a victory for Kelly. Scholes struggled over the line much distressed. Kelly was unable to row his boat off the course, and was drifting fainting into a launeh.

To-morrow Scholes and Cloutte, of the London Rowing Club, meet in the final, while the Winnipegs will contest in the final for the Steward Cup with Third Trinity, Cambridge. From a social view-point the regatta to-day was a great success, immense throngs of people being present.

GREAT REJOICING AT TORONTO. Toronto, July 6 .- There was great Toronto, July 6.—There was great rejoicing in local rowing circles this morning at the announcement by cable that Lou Scholes, of Toronto, had defeated Kelly, the Australian, in the semi-final at Henley for the Damond Sculls. There seems to be no doubt entertained here now but that Scholes will win the final, as Kelly had been looked on as his strongest opponent.

Devil's Chimney." Awheel.

The coming to Chatham on Saturday, July 9, of the United Adam Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Great Shows recall to mind the fact that they were the first, and are practically still the only ones to make the bicycle a tangible big feature by paying fabulously fat salaries to encourage its popularity and dexterity in its use. All the professional performing cycling celebrities of the past made their debut and won popularity in the ar most this moted aggregation, to be this season surpassed and superseded by the new and phenomenal leaders in their time, including Prodigious Porthes, who makes a bike leap across a chasm fifty feet in width; Diavolo, who loops the loop one a bicycle, and "Cyclone" a recent foreign find, carded as a cycling paradox. Try to walk around the walls of your parlor with your body parallel to its floor and you may get some idea of what he accomplishes at every performance, in riding and rising on an absolutely perpendicular line up the circular inside of "The Devil's Chimney," the dameter of which is less than twelve feet, within which restricted space he is compelled to generate the tremendous force and to acquire sufficient speed for the accomplishment of a feat, which, before his appearance, would have been pronounced a sheer impossibility. At a superficial glance, "The Wild Wheel Whirl" act, introduced by the show in question at Madison Square Garden, New York, might appear almost identical with that of "Cyclone," but when it is considered that its performers were aided by a slanting circular track, while he starts from the ground straight up, it can be seen that the difference in the two achievements is essentially as phenomenal as that represented by a walk up hill and one up a perpendicular precipice.

THE YOUNG VULTURE

HE IS ABLE TO FLY.

Strength of Bill. Is Courageous and Aggressive and Is as Quick Almos as a Flash of Lightning.

In the south there is one bird which everybody knows whether he is a nature student or not, I refer to the turkey vulture, or turkey buzzard, as most people call him. This bird seems to be an ever present feature of the southern landscape, for look upward when you will you may see him sweeping the sky with outspread wings, wheeling in broad circles or soaring in graceful spirals, with seeming never a stroke of the mighty pinions for hours

One day I saw a vulture sailing thus, says Ernest Harold Baynes in the Boston Herald, and I carefully marked his flight until he descended from the white clouds and disappeared near the edge of a distant wood. Supposing that he had come down to feed on some carrion-a dead horse perhaps, which had been dragged just outside of the woods and left—I made the best of my way to the spot where I lost sight of the bird, that I might be a witness to

I arrived at the wood, but neither bird nor carcass could I see. Then I bethought me that this was the month of May, and that perhaps the buzzard had a nest thereabout. I hunted under the bushes, along the side of fallen trees and, in some old stumps which were standing near, but not a feather was to be seen.

Presently I spied a log which lay somewhat apart in the shadow of some shrubs, and as I approached it out from somewhere came a big turkey buzzard, which quickly disappeared behind the trees. On coming up to the log, which was a large one, I found that it was hollow, and in the cavity there were two eggs, which doubtless belonged to the vulture which had just departed. They were considerably larger than the eggs of a domestic hen, and in color they were dirty white, heavily spotted with chocolate brown. I left them that I might have an op-portunity to study the young.

The next time I visited the hollow log the parent birds were not in sight, but in the nest I found two downy fledgelings, which could scarcely be called pretty. They were in every way less attractive than young hawks of the same age. They expressed their disapproval of my presence by a weak growling sound.

I could not visit the spot again for some weeks, and when I did one of them had disappeared. The other was no longer in the hollow log, but stand-ing at a little distance, and I was interested to see the change in his ap-pearance. In the first place, he had grown tremendously; the down which had formerly covered the whole body was now confined chiefly to the head, neck and under parts, and the rest of the bird was clothed with firm black feathers. He looked fat and well fed.

I reached out my hand and caught him by one wing. But here he had a surprise for me, for he seized my finger in his hooked bill and with a turn of his head twisted off a bit of the flesh before I had time even to object After hurriedly cleansing the wound I again advanced on the enemy, who was game enough to satisfy any one and came to the attack with open bill. Of course he was not dangerous in the least, for he was very young and could not even fly, but for a fledgeling the grip he could give with his bill was astonishing.

However, I picked him up, took him home and tethered him in the garden with a strap to one leg. The first night he ate a good meal of liver, and after that he took almost any kind of meat that was given him. I let him have carrion whenever it was convenient out at other times he ate freshly killed frogs, fresh beef, opossum and even

One night soon after I had brought him home I went out to see how he looked when he was asleep. It was so dark that his black plumage was not visible against the grass. All I see of him was a white snot, his head, as it hung near the ground.

I approached very quietly and was within five feet when something happened. Out of the darkness there came a flash of white straight toward me with a speed which caused me to step quickly backward, and at the same instant there was a startling, rustling sound, accompanied by a guttural growl, which for a moment I did not recognize as the voice of the young

Altogether it was a most startling phenomenon, and, although I realized in a moment that the bird was in some way the cause of it, I do not know even yet just what happened. This much I know, however, that the bird rushed at me, growling with all his might, and that the flash of white was might, and that the flash of white was the white down of the body uncovered by the opening of the black wings.

The rushing sound was, I think, caused in some way by the wing feathers or tail feathers, or both, but whether by dragging them along the grounds or otherwise I cannot tell. I tried on several occasions to find this out by approaching the young vulture when there was just light enough for me to see what happened, but he would never act in just the same way unless it was cuite dark act in just the same way unless it was quite dark.

No doubt this is some provision of nature to protect the bird when it is young and helpless, and I can testify that it is a good one, for I am sure that few night prowling animals would care to pursue their investigations after being given so startling a reception.

A Snuff Story. Mrs. Margaret Thompson of London, who died many years ago, by her will directed that in her coffin should be buried all her handkerchiefs and suffi-cient of the best Scotch snuff to cover her body. This she preferred to flowers, as "nothing could be more fragrant and so refreshing to me as that pre-cious powder." Further, the six greatest snuff takers in the parish of St. James, Westminster, were to be her bearers. Six old maids, each bearing in her hand a box filled with the best Scotch snuff to take for their refreshment as they walked, were to carry the pall. Before the corpse the minister was to walk, carrying and partaking of a pound of snuff. At every twenty yards a large handful of snuff was to be delivered to the bystanders, while at the door of the testator's house were to be placed for gratuitous distribution two bushels of the same quality of Earthquakes and Pestilence. From early times pestilence has been regarded as one of the accompaniments of earthquakes. Nor is this perhaps a mere figment of superstition. Many instances of epidemics following upon earthquakes are on record, says the Lancet. Thus in 557-60 A. D., earthquake years, Constantinople was visited by a pestilence, and in 615 A. D., after more than a decade of seismic disturbances which extended from Japan to the Mediterranean, the whole Japan to the Mediterranean, the whole of Italy was visited, according to Sigonius, by a fearful epidemic, of which the nature is not recorded. Old writers, such as Von Pienciz, an authority on the Lisbon earthquake of 1755, were wont to attribute the proneness to disease exhibited by whole pepulations during earthquake season to shaken nerves begotten of prolonged suspense and broken rest at night.

A Clever Special Pleader. Sir John Byles was a clever special pleader as a lawyer. In his young days he appeared in a breach of promise case to defend a man who had married another woman. cross examined the plaintiff thus: "Did he not promise to marry you when his father was dead?" "Yes." "Is his fa-ther dead?" "No." "Then that is my case. The defendant's wife may dis before his father or afterward, and he may outlive them both, when it will be time for him to fulfill his promise."

It is also recorded that Sir John rode a horse called Business so that his clerk might conscientiously tell any callers that his master was out on business.—London Standard.
