BY W. G. CLARKE.

Come, while the blossoms of thy years are bright-Thou youthful wanderer in a flowery maze.

Come, while the restless heart is bounding light-his country's.

And joy's pure sunbeam trembles in thy ways-

Come, while sweet thoughts like summer buds unfolding,

Wake rich feelings in the careless breastholding,

Come and secure interminable rest.

Soon will the freshness of thy days be over, And thy free buoyancy of soul be flown-Pleasure will told her wings-and friend and lover,

Will to the embraces of the worm have gone Those who now love thee will have passed for ever:

Their looks and kindness will be lost to thee-Thou wilt need a balm to heal thy spirit's fever, As thy sick heart broods over years to be.

Come while the morning of thy life is glowing-Ere the gay spell which earth is round thee hrowing, Fades like the crimson from a sunset sky. Life is but shadows, save a promise given, That lights the future with a fadeless ray-

Come -touch the sceptre -win a hope of heaven, Come, turn thy spirit from this world away. Then will the shadows of this brief existence Seem airy nothings to thine ardent soul-

And shining brightly in the forward distance, Will, of the patient race, appear the gaol-Home of the weary - where in bliss reposing, The spirit lingers in unclouded bliss-

Though o'er the dust the curtained grave is confident, will soon be blazed through the civilized world, and produce universal astonishment. like Ericsson's achievement in substituting, air for steam, as a means of propelling ships. Mr. Paine dexterously gulled a large number of the most distinguished savans of the United States, two or three years ago, into the belief that he had found out a method of converting water into a agent for giving light, and they recorded, in the most flattering testimonials, their conviction of the practicability of the experiments his brother showed them, while the inventor himself happen ed to be absent from the exhibition. But the affair proved a mere sham, and Mr. Paine bas ever since been consigned to obscurity. Even with these facts before us, we do not hesitate in predicting that Dr. Gesner's invention, before long, will supply the world at large with light for and certainly vastly cheaper than any other il p-minating agent can be afforded. We hazard this opinion advisedly, for the process by which this new light is produced is extremely simple, and Dr. Gesner makes no mystery of the means he employs .- Recorder.

Castles in the Air. It was many, many a year ago, When young and full of glee. I bounded along a forest path, With footsteps light and free : I hurried on, nor would stop to list The low, solemn monotone, That the wild-wood spirits chaunted In their haunts so dim and lone. But I paused where I always had gathered Forget-me-nots in spring, And laid down 'mid the blue-eyed blossoms To hear the wild birds sing : With my head on a mossy pillow And the giant limbs above. Scarcely parting for the sunshine To caress me in its love. The birds were chirping their merriest songs, The insects hummed in glee, But the leaves had caught a spirit tone, And whispered low to me ; On my heart laying a nameless spell, Which it ne'er had felt before, And waking wild. ambition's dreams Never to slumber more. I thought of the future so glad and bright, When proudly I might claim, By deeds that hed stirred the hearts of me The laurel wreath of fame; How love would come with its timid step, To nestle within my heart, And all things beautiful in life, Their happiness impart. And ere I woke from my dream of bliss, The sun was in the west. And rosy-hued thoughts were in my heart. As clouds about his rest : Tho'ts that ere long were to change their hue Like sunset clouds at even, Which-all their borrowed radiance gone Obscure the light of Heaven. It was not with the bounding step of youth,

I trol that path once more, The weight of years was on form and heart, With sorrow burdened o'er; It was autumn-time, and the dving leaves. Rustled where'er I step'd-It seemed to me the very trees Welcomed me back-and went.

For a murmur low, and a solemn tone Echoed the forest through, Like the plaintive sob of sympathy, From a heart sincere and true; The voice of hope, like the whispering leav Had been hushed by a chilling blast, No rainbow above the passing storm, O'er the future, brightness cast.

No laurel was woven around my brow, I had seen that dream depart, And on the grave of long buried joys, Grew the ivy of the heart; And there on that self-same mossy stone Grown brown and sere with years, I knelt, and gave to the faded past, The meed of a strong man's tears.

Again came a voice from the solemn wood A voice of might and power-" Not for thyself or thy wild young dream Hast thou life's precious dower ; There are brighter visions than those of Fa Hopes purer, if not more fair,-And holy joy when for wearied hearts Thou wouldst the burden bear.' MOLLY BAWN.
