Some Dealers Think They Have a Monopoly Of Buying Furniture.

Let them think so, it does nobody any harm, and it pleases them. But for fear the public might be led away by their extravagant utterances, we humbly rise to remark, that we have been and are still buying from almost every manufacturer in this broad Dominion—and further, we are content to sell at a much smaller profit than most people ask. We would like the opportunity of showing you our Furniture, and would like you to compare, and we think we can convince you that what we say is true.

A London jeweler recently had a thermometer stolen from his shop, and the next day put up the following notice in the shop where the thermometer once hung: "Will the misguided individual who took the thermometer without leave the other day please return the same. He has made a mistake. It can be of no use to him in the place to which he is going, as it only registers 125 degrees of heat."

Take a Luxa-Liver Pill before retiring, and it will work while you sleep without a grip or gripe curing Biliousness, Constipation and Dyspepsia and make you feel better in the morning. Price 25.

She.—It can not be—I am not worthy of you.

He.—Nonsense!

She.—It is true—too true.

He.—Impossible! You are an angel.

She.—No, no—you are wrong! I am an idle, silly girl, utterly unfit to become your companion through life.

Rheumatism in Shoulders.

"I had the Rheumatism in my shoulders so bad that I could not rest at night. I took Milburn's Rheumatic Pills and have not had a trace of it since." John Kirton, Glenboro, Man.

At a smoking concert recently a young man with a better opinion of his own vocal powers than his audience had volunteered a song, but did not get an encore. When he had finished an old friend remarked:

"Well, lad, I am not blaming thee; thou'st done thy best; but if I knew the chap as asked thee to sing I'd crack his stupid head."

DOCTORS DID HER NO GOOD.

By the time Miss L. L. Hanson, Waterside, N. B., had taken Three Boxes of MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS She Was Completely Cured.

She writes us as follows:—"Gentlemen,—I feel it my duty to express to you the benefit I have derived from Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. A year ago last spring I began to have heart failure. At first I would have to stop working, and lie down for a while. I then got so bad that I had to give up altogether and go to bed. I had several doctors to attend me, but they did me no good. I got no relief until urged by a friend to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I sent to the store for a box, and by the time I had taken three boxes of it I began to get relief, and by the time I had taken three boxes I was completely cured. I feel very grateful to your medicine for what it has done for me."—Miss L. L. HANSON, Waterside, N. B.

"Idle Words" and their Result.

(Sacred Heart Review.)

A brief item in a New York paper the other day revealed one of those squalid little neighborhood affairs which are often tragic in their consequences but which are nevertheless not so exciting much comment.

This item told about two women who were driven insane by the gossip and scandal spread abroad about them by jealous or perhaps merely talkative neighbors, most of whom we may be sure meant at first no harm in the world, but simply gossiped and gossiped, and conjectured and inferred, and piled one thing on top of another, until they had built up a black load of scandal under which the minds of the unfortunate victims, both women of most exemplary lives, finally broke down.

It is amazing how gossip, harmless perhaps at first, spreads and spreads, gathering evil significance as it goes. No wonder Our Lord lays such stress upon the accountability of people for their "idle words." He does not say wicked words, but simply idle words, as if He would warn us against gossiping for mere gossip's sake, a habit which soon degenerates into destruction and calumny and slander.

In the case in point the two women, who were sisters, kept a candy store, and were prosperous, good-living, kind-hearted neighbors to all around them. Then somebody grew jealous, either of their goodness or their prosperity, and began to poison the minds of the neighbors concerning them. The devil had no need to be busy in that neighborhood any longer. The women were doing his work well—more effectively perhaps than he could do himself.

The two sisters lived alone, and soon scandalous tongues began to mention that fact as though it were significant. Neighbors, who seemed to have plenty of time to watch others in the vicinity and discuss their affairs, kept constant watch on the candy store. Children, too, who had heard their elders talk, began to stir strangely toward the victims, derisively asked them why they didn't get married, yelled at them on the street, and otherwise worried the two women.

The sisters heard the talk and were going around, but the neighborhood continued to talk. And then one sister's health gave way. The sisters disposed of their shop, but continued to live over the store as they had done, and to brood over the gossip that was making them unwilling to appear on the streets. Soon the health of the other sister suffered, and ultimately both sisters were taken to the insane asylum, where their ravings left little doubt as to what had caused their breakdown.

Now what could be more pitiable than the plight of those two women of excellent character? There they are, their lives wrecked by some contemptible, spiteful neighbor, who very likely began all the trouble by a word or two in a moment of pique, who would be appalled to find that such grave consequences could flow from such a small beginning, but who is really responsible for the whole sad story.

The Eighth Commandment of the Church strictly forbids the bearing of false witness. We do not have to go publicly and make a solemn false statement against our neighbor in order to injure him. We can do it by sly innuendoes, by subtle insinuations, by cunning smiles or turns of phrase, just as efficaciously.

The result is not always so plainly to be traced to the cause as in the New York case which we cite above, but in every city, in every town, in every hamlet in the country, there has been enacted some similar pitiful drama. Broken hearts, ruined lives,—these are the results of those idle words, for which, says Christ, "we must render an account on the Day of Judgment."

Japan's Gloomy Outlook.

The Japanese Premier, in a published interview which appeared a few days ago, tries to present a rosy view of Japan's condition. Reading, however, between the lines one cannot but see that it is a clear case of whistling to keep up courage. Premier Katsura knows well the great financial strain to which his country has been subjected since the outbreak of hostilities, but from patriotic motives he maintains a discreet silence about it. The truth, if it were divulged, would be more disastrous to Japan than a great defeat in the field. A nation known to be on the edge of bankruptcy cannot obtain foreign loans wherewith to carry on military operations.

Hence the need of keeping the world in the dark as regards the financial standing of Japan whose Prime Minister parades a lot of figures to prove that the outlook is of the brightest. He tells us that the Japanese House of Representatives, which once refused to pass a budget of $125,000,000 as excessive and unbearable, gave a willing assent to the first war budget of $288,000,000. He adds that at the session of the Diet, which meets his week, the government "will be compelled to present a budget calling for $388,000,000." These figures show that the Japanese people will be called upon to contribute a sum more than three times as great as that which their representatives on the eve of the war declared to be excessive and unbearable.

It may be said that the willingness of the Japanese to bear this greatly increased financial burden bears striking testimony to their patriotism. But that is beside the question. It is not whether the Japanese are willing to shoulder this great load, but will they be able to do so. The moment they show signs of staggering under the pressure of the European and American money lenders will be tightly drawn. The high interest exacted on Japanese loans negotiated in Europe and in this country already indicates the prevailing opinion as to their financial standing. For nations the rate of interest charged is a sure barometer of their financial rating.

Take, for instance, the loans negotiated by Japan since the beginning of the war in the Far East. The first issue of Japanese bonds, for $50,000,000, is secured by a first charge on the customs receipts of the empire. These bonds sold to the London market for 93. The second issue for $60,000,000 were disposed of in London and New York at 91. They constitute what may be called a second mortgage on the customs receipts. Six per cent. is the interest on both issues.

Let us now examine how the interest on these two bond issues is to be paid. The total customs receipts of the Japanese Empire last year amounted to $8,600,000. The annual interest at 6 per cent. on the bonds already issued will amount to $6,400,000, which, deducted from the $8,600,000 customs receipts, will leave a balance of $2,200,000. It is announced that taxation is to be increased to an amount that will add to Japan's annual income about $750,000, which, in addition to the surplus of the customs receipts left after the payment of the interest charge on the bonds we have been speaking of will leave Japan $2,950,000. The financial editor of the New York Journalist, who has supplied us with these figures, asks, "What is going to happen if Japan places a further increase of taxation on imported articles?" He answers his own question in this manner:

"Their customs duties are already overweighed with their heavy taxes, and it would not be at all surprising if a further increase would have the effect of restricting importations and curtailing trade. The actual result of such a course may be to decrease the revenue from customs duties instead of securing the increase which they expect. The first year of this war between Japan and Russia has cost Japan about $385,000,000. A Japanese financier, who is a recognized authority on all financial matters connected with the empire, estimates that if this war should be prolonged for another year the total cost to Japan, including the pre-war expenses, would be $1,000,000,000. This would mean that Japan would have to bring out additional bond issues, and these bonds would have to be offered on terms even more disadvantageous to the government than the bonds which they have already sold. The money which Japan has borrowed is costing her between seven and eight per cent., and possibly more, for it is an unknown quantity what commission the banks are charging Japan for floating this loan. We do not know, of course, what this commission is, but we would be very much surprised if we should learn that it was less than five per cent."

Clearly Japan with headlong speed is rushing upon financial breakers. The war with Russia has been going on only ten months and already the question of finding the financial means with which to continue it is causing the Japanese government much anxiety. The latest government in the world could not continue paying the exorbitant interest Japan is paying at this moment to procure "the sinews of war," without which military and naval operations are impossible.

In a circular letter to his clergy promulgating the new regulations for church music in the diocese of Halifax, Archbishop O'Brien says:

The offering of sacrifice has been always looked upon as the highest act of worship. By it, more honor is given to God than by any form of prayer. Not only was this true in the Law of Nature as practiced by the Patriarchs, and in the Jewish Law given by God on Mount Sinai, but it is also true in the Law of the Gospel, in which the holy Sacrifice of the Mass sums up and embodies, in an eminent degree, all preceding sacrifices.

The Mass is an Act, not a Prayer, although prayers may be said during its performance. These, however, should be of such a kind as to emphasize, and to keep before the mind the nature of the tremendous Act which is being performed. Whatever tends to distract the attention from a consideration of Christ's Passion and Death, or to weaken the realization of the Gospel narrative of the Crucifixion, be it otherwise ever so good, should be avoided.

In all ages the wicket sought to suppress the offering of sacrifice, as the readiest way of destroying religion. Without it there may be a religious sentiment, but no perfect act of acknowledgment of God's Supreme Power and Dominion over all things—nothing to impress the minds of men with a sense of personal responsibility for sin, with its enormity, and the necessity of satisfying for it by sincere repentance. Wherever the Altar has been thrown down, and the Mass suppressed, sin, in time, has ceased to be looked upon as a mortal evil, for which penance should be done in sackcloth and ashes. The more attentively we assist at Mass the more keenly shall we realize the hatefulness of sin in God's sight, and the necessity of penitential works in atonement thereof.

The Mass being, as it is, the keystone of the whole fabric of true Christian worship, Holy Church has ever been solicitous as to the time, place and manner of its celebration. Actuated by the best of motives, good men have unconsciously transgressed the wise rules laid down by the Rubrics for our guidance; and emotional ones, anxious to promote piety as they understand it, have made appeals to the senses through a style of music, not adapted to the solemn nature of the Mass, nor fitted to convey to the intelligence a deeper significance of the sublime words of the Ritual. True devotion, lasting impressions of holiness, cannot be acquired at musical concerts, even though the words sung be those of the Gloria or Credo; but by assisting at Mass, and prayerfully following the Actions of the Sacred Liturgy.

Do you, dear Father, in your pastoral zeal excite in the hearts of your flock a love and devotion for the Holy Mass, by frequent explanations of its nature, its grandeur and its efficacy both to obtain grace, and the remission of temporal punishment due to sin. Endeavour to propagate the use of the Missal, or when this is not possible, such Prayer Books as contain the prayers of the Missal, in preference to any other, no matter by whom recommended. The simple, strong, Faith-nourishing prayers of the Missal, whether at Mass, or before and after Communion, are better adapted to develop and foster true piety than any others. They breathe the spirit of rational Faith; they embody the eternal Hope of the Church; and they exhale its odour of divine Charity. If the Mass were understood and valued as it should be, the boundaries of Christ's Kingdom would be rapidly enlarged.

The new King of Saxony will enjoy a civil list of £147,000. His Majesty is in the somewhat unusual position of being a Catholic ruling over a Protestant country. Out of a population of something like 3,000,000 only about 80,000 are Catholics. The State Church is Lutheran. The Catholic faith has been that embraced by the royal family of Saxony since 1697.

The interment took place recently, at Loreto Abbey, Rathfriland, of Mother M. Brigid O'Curry, last surviving daughter of Eugene O'Curry, the great Gaelic scholar and antiquarian. The deceased religious spent nearly her whole life in Loreto.

A big snow-storm was raging in Boston yesterday.

A handsome statue to the memory of the late Hon. Joseph Howe, was unveiled, with appropriate ceremonies at Halifax yesterday.

Friday a young lad named Groom, a pupil at Spring Park School, while playfully sparring with another boy received a severe blow on the eye. The injury was so serious that Groom had to be taken to the Hospital. It is feared that he will lose the sight of the eye.

Mrs. Sarah Ann Pearson living in the outskirts of Montreal who arrived from Ireland last August was arrested Saturday charged with having poisoned her mother-in-law—Mrs. Alice Pearson in the old country. The case is a complicated one but the officers of the law pretend they have a good case.

The preliminary trial of Power for the murder of Miss Warren terminated last week, when the prisoner was discharged, as not sufficient evidence had been supplied to send him up to the Supreme Court for trial. He was immediately rearrested on the charge of assaulting policemen, in the discharge of their duty some years ago.

STRAUNG, Joseph Tully, and Ed. Proctor, three men accused of issuing counterfeit money at Glouce Bay C. R. have been committed to the Supreme Court. The evidence showed that Tully first received four $10 Bank of Montreal bills apparently on invitation by letter from Straung to call at his house and receive some money. The letter cannot yet be found. For some weeks Tully kept some of the money and burned the rest.

YESTERDAY protests were entered against the return of thirteen Liberal members in Nova Scotia, Antigonish, Digby, Guysboro and Yarmouth are the only ridings that escaped. On the same date a petition was filed against the return of Mr. J. J. Hughes, Liberal member for King's County in this Province. Petitions were also filed against the return of Messrs. Martin, McLean and Letargy, Conservative members for Queen's and Prince Counties.

The Summer Navigation of the Straits between this Province and the Mainland ceased on Saturday last. The steamer Northumberland reached here shortly before noon, from Port de Cans and went into winter quarters. The steamer Princess made her last trip for the season between here and Pictou, the same day, reaching here about 10 p. m. The Minto of the winter steamers reached here Sunday afternoon with mails and passengers from Pictou. The Stanley went to Pictou Monday for coal and went thence to Summerside.

According to a story current in high circles in St. Petersburg, Russia's efforts some time ago to negotiate the purchase of seven Argentine and Chilean warships have had a curious sequel. The two South American countries declined to sell the vessels direct to Russia, fearing the possibility of being held liable to pay damages, as Great Britain was in the Alabama case. At that time the question of selling to a third party as an intermediary was discussed and the possibility of Turkey playing the role was suggested. But Argentine and Chile steadily declined to entertain any proposition without a guarantee against future liability. According to the story Russia then abandoned the project, where upon Great Britain stepped in, offering to advance the money to Turkey to buy the ships in return for certain concessions which would permit Great Britain to erect a second Gibraltar on the coast of Yemen opposite Perim Island, which would give Great Britain control of the lower entrance to the Red Sea. Negotiations between Great Britain and Turkey along these lines are said to be now progressing. It is added that Russia is so much alarmed over the report that an emissary has been despatched to Constantinople to investigate the game.

LOCAL AND OTHER ITEMS.

A sad accident occurred on Thursday morning of last week at Kelly's Cross. The four year-old daughter of Mr. Jas. Devereaux, was playing in her father's boiler house, when her clothes caught fire. Before aid could reach her the unfortunate child was burned so badly that she died on Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock.

A fire at two o'clock Saturday morning broke out near St. Agnes church Halifax. The house occupied by a family named Harvey was destroyed and a number of the occupants had a very narrow escape. Several of them were badly burned about the hands and face in making their escape from the burning structure. They were cut off by the flames through which they had to fight their way to reach the open air. One of the women was quite seriously burned and a physician had to be summoned.

THURSDAY last, December 8th, Feast of the Immaculate Conception, was the fifth anniversary of the promulgation of dogma of the Immaculate Conception of the Blessed Virgin Mary Mother of God. In St. Peter's, Rome the occasion was celebrated by His Holiness the Pope. Surrounded by many Bishops from all parts of the world, with all the splendor and magnificence that ceremonial can add. In St. Dunstan's Cathedral, the event was properly celebrated. The devotion in the evening consisted of rosary a procession of young boys and girls, singing of hymns and crowning of the statue of the Blessed Virgin. Then followed an eloquent sermon, on the dogma of the Immaculate Conception by Rev. Dr. McMillan. The Blessed Sacrament was then borne in solemn procession and the service concluded with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

It has come to our notice that the Ch'lowen Business College has been sending out letters to different parties, and stating as facts the most glaring falsehoods, concerning the teachers and work done at the Union Commercial College.

We wish to give these statements our emphatic denial. They are misleading, and we advise persons receiving such letters and information, to look carefully into the truth of the matter before acting.

Loss of Life from Ship-board.

Four members of the crew of the Boston fishing schooner Fish Hawk lost their lives last Sunday night while attempting to leave their vessel which was ashore and pounding heavily on the Peaked Hill bars, north end of Cape Cod. Five others including Capt. Bly had a terrible experience during six hours in a small dory, but all loss of life would have been averted had the men remained by the vessel. The schooner had a miraculous escape from Cape Cod's deadly tray and within four hours after flood was safely in harbor. The dead seamen had jumped into a dory and it immediately capsized. They were drowned before the eyes of their companions who were unable to render assistance. Captain and five others got into second dory and had scarcely left schooner when she glided off into smoother water. Those remaining on board worked her into harbour at Provincetown.

Norfolk, Va. Dec. 12.—The three-masted schooner Montana, Capt. Hoyce, New York for Charlestown with coal, was wrecked off Cape Hatteras last night. Six of the crew left the vessel this morning and were saved by the life-saving crew. One man Henry Edwards remained lashed to rigging and was frozen to death.

Where the seven-hilled cities towers Rise aloft, and Tiber flows; In the Indian banyan bowers, 'Mid the polar ice and snows; Where the western streams are flowing...

In cathedrals famed in story, Rich in many a jeweled shrine; And in abbey gray and hoary, Whence a lily song divine; In the cloisters dim and hazy, Where the virgins softly tread...

And 'tis not alone by mortals That such glorious strains are sung, But beyond the golden portals All the heavenly host among, Martyrs high their palm boughs bearing...

Scraps in their robes of snow, Saints of many a nation wearing Crowns well worn on earth below, Sing the word that earth is singing From the dawn to evening late; All courts of heaven are ringing With the word "Immaculate." —MAGDALEN ROCK.

"The Dear St. Elizabeth." A CASH LIO FRENCH CLASSIC, NOW CLOSELY CONNECTED WITH THE HISTORY OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.

So many Catholic memories cluster about the beautiful volume now lying before us that we are inclined to write the history of the book rather than a review of the book. This "Life of St. Elizabeth of Hungary, Duchess of Thuringia," was originally written in French by the brilliantly gifted young Count de Montalembert, intimate friend of Fernandou and of the distinguished de la Ferronnays family of "The Sister's Story." He was that true noble man, who, standing before his judges and his peers as a peer of France at the age of twenty-one, on trial for the cause of education, dared to cry out: "If I were a father, I would rather a thousand times see my children remain all their life in ignorance and idleness, than expose them to the horrible risk, which I myself incurred, of purchasing a little knowledge at the cost of the faith of their fathers, at the cost of all there was of purity and freshness in their souls, of honor and virtue in their hearts."

Let them not talk to us of freedom of religion, who have reduced it to a point where it is freedom to believe in nothing. But I do not know why I adopt here the language of sadness and discouragement, when my heart is full of fervor and hope. No, I do not think that my faith can die. It is because I believe it is ended with the vigor and strength of an eternal future that I have consecrated to it my brief and obscure life.

THE GLORIOUS THIRTEENTH CENTURY. Brave Chevalier of God, with the true spirit of a crusader! Such a man well deserved to be moved to write this remarkable "Life of St. Elizabeth," with his superb introduction that, in the translation, occupies no less than 122 of the 493 pages that make up the work. This introduction is really a splendid essay on that glorious thirteenth century—of an Innocent III., of a St. Dominic, and St. Francis of Assisi, of a Gregory IX. and an Urban IV., of that Austrian Leopold the Glorious, "brave as a lion, and modest as a girl," of St. Louis of France, and of that Rudolph of Hapsburg, who, at his coronation, took the cross in the altar and exclaimed: "This is my scepter; I wish no other." This is the age of Cimabue the artist, and of great cathedrals; of the famous Latin hymns—the Luda Sior, the Des Lac, and the Statat Mors; the age of Skjphos Langton, St. Edmund of Canterbury, St. Richard of Worcester, the ages when Sweden and Norway and Denmark were one with the Mother Church; and when Ferdinand, ruler of Castile in Spain, cried out: "I fear the malediction of a poor woman more than the whilary of the Moors!" he who, dying, wrote, with tears, these words: "O my dear Saviour! Thou hast suffered so much for the love of me, and I, wretched creature, what have I done for the love of Thee!" This was the age of the Crusades, and of St. Francis' yet diviner crusade, started in the name of the faith of Jesus Christ.

Here we write down, in so many words, the passionate heart of that magnificent thirteenth century, pre-

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also. Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"I suffered dreadfully from rheumatism, but have been completely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, for which I am deeply grateful." Miss Frances Serra, Prescott, Ont.

"I had an attack of the grip which left me weak and helpless and suffering from rheumatism. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and this medicine has entirely cured me. I have no hesitation in saying it saved my life." M. J. McDONALD, Trenton, Ont.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Removes the cause of rheumatism—no outward application can. Take it.

posteriorly mangled as dark, but really radiant, beyond words' telling, with true faith in God and with chivalric and saintly love of God. It was the time of Albertus Magnus, and St. Thomas Aquinas, and St. Bonaventure, and of the magnificent universities; of saintly women like St. Gertrude, Mechtilda, Clara, Humility the abbess of Valambroise, St. Zita, St. Elizabeth of Portugal, and of that illustrious woman whose name adorns the noble work before us, daughter of a king, wife of a duke, she who was maid, wife, mother, widow and nun ere she died at the early age of twenty-four, and who has been known for six centuries by that unique and tender title, "the dear St. Elizabeth of Hungary."

THE STORY OF A STORY. For its own intrinsic value, this introduction by itself alone entitles Montalembert's book to a place in every library—private or public—throughout the world. But, when we turn from it to the story of the woman herself, we find combined with the erudition and charm of the introduction, a detailed account, in this one woman's life, akin to many things, mentioned briefly in the introduction, that, for all their brevity, seizes upon, moves and uplifts the heart.

This simple and holy child, this loving betrothed, this devoted wife, the absolute openly expressed tenderness between the brave and Christian Duke Louis and his beautiful Elizabeth, their love for their children, and their absolutely greater love for Christ—all this told by a gifted writer, a man of our modern day, who loved to write it, and to write it because he, too, loved God better still, how wonderful it is in its intellectual power and spiritual beauty. But then to know that when he chose his own bride, he found that God had given him a lineal descendant of St. Elizabeth's noble line, and that he later gave to God his own child for the convent, when, with kindling face, she told him that she loved Jesus Christ best of all—this unique story of a story, true, historical, recorded, makes Montalembert's "Life of St. Elizabeth" a Catholic classic, and a classic of French literature for all time.

THE STORY OF TRANSLATION. Around this present translation by Francis Deming Hoyt, however, there linger other remarkable memories that make it, in its turn, the story of a story, and should commend the work forever to our hearts. The book is dedicated thus: "To the sweet memory of my wife, Julie Scammon Hoyt, by whose side I have spent many of the happiest hours of my life, in the work of this translation, and who is now with St. Elizabeth in Heaven." To those who know the facts, these few words indicate a chapter in the Catholic Church of these United States that should not be forgotten.

For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

Francis Deming Hoyt is a son of that Vermont Episcopalian clergyman who, with his wife and family, entered the Catholic Church many years ago, and who, after the death of his saintly and beloved wife, became a student, at the age of sixty, in a Catholic seminary, and set meekly and humbly, among the young men gathered there. Ordained to the Catholic priesthood, he was stationed at St. Ann's Church, New York, with the convent Father Preston, the vicar-general of the archdiocese, and founder, with the late Mother Veronica Starr, of the Sisters of the Divine Compassion. Father Hoyt's son Francis married a woman of singular beauty of character, Julie Scammon, daughter of General E. P. Scammon, of the United States army, a convert, and of his wife, Margaret Stebbins, of Springfield, Mass., also a convert, among whose descendants to-day are a Dominican priest and an Ursuline nun, as among Father Hoyt's there was a Dominican nun of the very rigorous and contemplative second order.

LIKE A CHAIN OF MEMORIES. "The Father Hoyt came the death of a saint might have envied. On the feast of the Immaculate Conception, some years ago, he said Mass and received Holy Communion; then he turned to give abolution and Communion to the waiting people, but fell unconscious there at the feet of the Lord for whose dear sake he had literally given all things. He never recovered consciousness; he had given himself his own Vaticum, and had gone home to God. Then was seen that strange, wonderful, and seldom-witnessed sight in the Catholic fold—the grave of a Catholic priest surrounded by his own children and grandchildren, one of whom at least his own hand had baptized. And then followed him to God (all too soon, as we blindly feel, in grief), the gentle and sweet soul whose name is now, fitly and forever, linked with St. Elizabeth of Hungary's, and with the name of her to whom Montalembert's Life in the original is dedicated: "To the memory of my Sister, Elizabeth Rosalie Clara de Montalembert, who died at the age of fifteen."

One who remembers Julie Scammon in her exquisite Catholic girlhood—one to whom she said, "I will never stop trying until I see you in the Catholic Church"—one who knows that her life was at last laid down as the price of her unfeeling, motherly devotion to her child in dangerous fever—that old friend, now a Catholic, rejoices to see the name of Julie Scammon Hoyt stamped on this beautiful volume that will be to her a far grander and better monument than granite or stone could be. It may easily be maintained that few volumes have appeared, in the long history of literature, about which cluster such remarkable and holy memories. The book has been brought out in very appropriate form; and should meet with a steady, enduring and frequent demand, as a work of permanent value, and of more than ordinary worth and charm. Publishers, Longmans, Green & Co., New York, London and Bombay. Price $4.00.—Sacred Heart Review.

Judging from the statistics laid before the November meeting of the Coisde Gnotha by a deputation from the Anti-Emigration Society, the Catholic population of the West and Southwest of Ireland is declining at an alarming rate. It was stated that in the Archdiocese of Tuam, whilst the number of Catholics decreased 5 per cent. in the twenty years 1861-1881, it decreased 18.16 per cent. during the next twenty years. Ach-anny decreased 3.2 per cent. in 1861-1881, and 20 per cent. in 1881-1901; Killala, 5.5 and 19 per cent., respectively; Galway, 15 and 18 per cent. The number of Catholics in the Diocese of Kerry was reduced by 1595 in the period of 1871-1881, and by 38,395 from 1871-1901. Ross lost 4,472 in the first period, and 13,374 in the second, and so on. It is much to be feared that the acute distress now prevailing in the West, owing to the failure of the potato crop, forebodes another exodus in the near future. Starving people will go any where in search of food.

The roof of the Cathedral of St. Croix, Orleans, France, has been reported as having fallen in upon the high altar and destroyed the sumptuous marble work above. Luckily, Orleans is not one of the finest of the French cathedrals. Indeed, the Gothic and Romanesque Cathedral was mainly destroyed by the Huguenots in 1567, and afterwards rebuilt, the towers not being finished until the end of the eighteenth century. Most of it is a strange Renaissance imitation of Gothic principles, and the roof which has just fallen in was mainly a work of the 17th century. It is said that this roof was known to need repair, but that want of money had delayed the necessary work. Now, of course, it must be taken in hand at once, and at a much greater cost. This disaster, and the far worse one of the Campanile of St. Mark's, is a warning to all cathedral authorities. The spire of Chichester Cathedral fell in suddenly about forty years ago, but of late years we have had no great calamities of this kind.

The nuns who have control of the Orphanage of Providence, are to be prosecuted on charges of ill-treating the youthful inmates. From various quarters come contradictions and refutations of the charges. The "Nouveliste de Lyon," whose representatives have made special inquiries, states that the accusations, which were first put forward by the "Matin" of Paris, are groundless and wicked. The "Matin" pretended to have interviewed a former pupil of the orphanage named Madame Elodie Ricard and to have elicited from her the information that she had often been beaten whilst her hands were tied behind her back; that she had been compelled to make the sign of the cross on the ground with her tongue, and that she had been doused with water. In a letter since addressed to the "Providence Nouvelle," Madame Elodie Ricard writes: "The 'Matin' has attributed to me a deposition I have never made. I have never had to complain of a single Sister during my stay in the convent. I protest against the use that the editor of the 'Main' has made of my name." The nuns at six rescue poor children from poverty and want, educate them and train them so that they are enabled to earn their own living. To libel ladies who are engaged in such beneficent work is a shameful proceeding.

The deceased, who was a native of Ballygarry county, Tipperary, and aged 43 years, had ministered in the parish of Kilcomnoon as curate for ten years. The Luttrell family gave two other sons to the priesthood, now on foreign missions in Chicago.

Many Women Suffer Untold Agony From Kidney Trouble.

Very often they think it is from so-called "female disease." There is less female trouble than they think. Women suffer from backache, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, and a dragging-down feeling in the loins. So do men, and they do not have "female trouble." Why, then, blame all your trouble to female disease? With healthy kidneys, few women will ever have "female disorders." The kidneys are so closely connected with all the internal organs, that when the kidneys go wrong, everything goes wrong. Much distress would be saved if women would only take DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS at stated intervals. Miss Nellie Clark, Lambeth, Ont., tells of her cure in the following words:—"I suffered for about two years with kidney trouble. I shed all over, especially in the small of my back; not being able to sleep well, no appetite, menstruation irregular, nervous irritability, and brick-dust deposit in urine, were some of my symptoms. I took Doan's Kidney Pills. The pain in my back gradually left me, my appetite returned, I sleep well, and an effectually cured. I can highly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to all sufferers from kidney trouble." Price 50 cents per box, or 3 for $1.25. All dealers, or DOAN KIDNEY PILL CO., TORONTO, ONT.

Some time ago I got a trial package of Laxa-Liver Pills, and they proved so beneficial to me that I procured more. I highly recommend them to anyone suffering from disordered liver."
