this lively periodical has been received from Messrs Chewett & Co., Toronto. It has as usual a varied table of contents, and the stories are not only readable but really interesting. There is more quiet humour in London Society than any other magazine we know of, and the illustrations are always admirable, not so much perhaps for the elegance of their finish, as their piquancy, and their being exact and natural forms, made by the magic power of the artist, from the words which describe scenes and individuals, without having added or diminished, or put any thing in the wrong place. BURGLARY IN SALEM .- A bold but unsful attempt at burglary and robbery was attempted in Salem, on Tuesday night last. Some vagabonds, as yet un-known, entered the store of Messrs. J. R. & E. Wissler and blew open the safe. It seems they obtained an entrance through on the ground floor, they then put a quantity of powder through the key hole, applied a fuse, and set it off. The safe was very much shattered, but not completely opened. It is gratifying to state that they only obtained about fifty completely opened. It is gratifying to state that they only obtained about fifty cents in money. A tin box was on the top of the safe which they supposed contained money, which they carried off, but as it only contained papers it was useless to them; it was found open near the premises next morning. There was about $2,000 in the safe, which the burglars might have taken had they succeeded in opening it.—Elora Times.

On May 17th, Dr. Burns of Toronto preached in the Free St. George's and Free South Church, Paisley, Scotland, to crowded congregations. At the close of his service in the latter church, the doctor alluded to his former connection with the town, he having been a minister in Paisley for thirty-four years, though twenty-three years have elapsed since he gave up his charge of Free St. George's to proceed to Canada. During his stay at the Rev. Mr. Pollock's house in Paisley he was visited by great numbers of his old parishioners and friends.

There is said to be no. truth in the tot wonships.

The Moscow Gazette has published a article on the late reforms in Turkey, to which an official stamp has been given by its republication in the Journal de St. Petersburg, the organ of the Russian foreign office. The western powers are ra-ther sharply lectured by these Russian organs for their approval of the new re-forms by the Turkish Ministry. The Journal then goes on to say, Turkey has empowered Belgian, French, and Austrian sequenters to establish railways, and given them a substantial guarantee; it has admitted two Christians to the Ministry, but not to the Cabinet, and promises the establishment of a Council of State in which Mussulmans and Christians are to sit, and whose president is to be a member of the Ministry; and it has introduced the system of vilajets in a considerable number of the provinces of the empire.—Next comes the usual abuse of the Turkish Government in Crete, spiced by a quotation from Lord Stanley, who is reported as having said that "The Cretan separatists will no longer allow themselves to be deluded by any concession." The three measures above-mentioned are then discussed one by one. The railways are represented as being planned, not for the good of Turkey itself, but for the spread of Austrian influence in the country; the admission of Christians to the Ministry is a mere comedy for the benefit of European quidnues, and the organization of the vilajets, or provincial assemblies, as only a new mode of securing the predominance of the Mussulmans in the local administrations. The article concludes by the following significant passage:

"It is impossible to admit that the Cabinets of Paris, Vienna, and London can have mistaken the real meaning of these supposed reforms, and still less that they are hostile to the Christians in the East, and wish to increase and prolong their intolerable sufferings. This new step can therefore only be ascribed to distust and systematic ill will towards Russia. Instead of being angry at this, it gives us pleasure. Great advantages are connected with a monopoly of truth and justice. It will soon appear that our adversaries have selected the wrong course. While obstinately persisting in an antagonism which is equally foolish and unjust, they will learn to their own cost the error of their calculations. In awaiting the moment when the inevitable hour of retribution shall come, we have no reason to be disquieted at our isolation in the East, if we continue with a firm step in the speculators to establish railways, and given them a substantial guarantee; it

A vote of thanks to Mr. Clarke was passed for his admirable essay, and a friendly discussion took place on the best mode of conducting missionary operations. Rev. Dr. Lillie gave a brief account of his visit to the Congregational Union in the Lower Provinces, and the encouraging aspects of the work there. The report of the Committee of the Union was then taken up. The item recommending that the title of the Union be changed to the "Congregational Union of Ontario and Quebec" 'Astead of "Canada," was passed. JAMAICA.—Late accounts from naica give an encouraging report of industrial progress of the blacks that old English colony. After all have heard about the incurable ness of the West India freedmen, have been systematically repreted as fast falling back into a state atter barbarism, it is highly gratig to find that these people are dily advancing in the march of lization. That, despite circumness of a very untoward character, blacks of Jamaica should have acred in a little over a quarter of a tury, property amounting in value nore than ten millions of dollars, also volumes as 66 their industry thrift, especially when it is rembered that the principal part of a country is in lands and houses.—accounts bear testimony to the py results which have followed the nge of rulers from ex-Gov. Eyre to John Peter Grant, and of the effa which the rigidly just and imitial administration of the latter has duced, in restoring peace to the ntry, in promoting among the peoared and authority, and in stimung enterprise and industry by creg confidence as to the future.

Maderia exports every year only 1000 puncheons, and almost every city drinks more than that quantity. Real brandy is nearly unknown to the classes who like it most. It is composed with strong alcohol, distilled from fecula, colored, sweetened, and made 20 years old in ten minutes,—so as to deceive the most expert connoisseurs. The Government inspectors almost give up the task of detecting fraudulent liquors. They confine themselves to preventing as much as possible the addition of noxious or dangerous substances. INVASION OF CANADA.—A dispatch from Buffalo on Friday says:—
"Reports from Canada having gained circulation to the effect that the Fenians are concentrating at this point for a raid upon the neighboring province, it is deemed proper to contradict such a statement. No unusual gathering of Fenians has occurred here, and it is not believed that there is a single member of the organization outside of citizens in Buffalo.—The sensational reports probably originate with Canadian speculators interested in contracts for the troops."

Test. The turned towards the cross, and the street to the bright light of the tavern was so sudden that for a minute he could discern nothing beyong a confusion of voices and a crowd of men.

He soon became accustomed to the change however, and discovered that the company was composed of solders, drovers, and citizens' divided into groups, each gossiping of its own special topic of interest. An enormous fire burning on the hearth gave the chamber warmth and an air of comfort despite the wetness of the unlarged floor, upon which the snow from the guests' feet dissolved as it was shaken off, and slowly became absorbed in the earth, or formed in a tiny pool in some hollow place. Sundry flanks of bacon hanging from the roof intimated broadly that hungry men with a few groats in their pockets need not remain long unsatisfied.

groats in their pockets need not remain long unsatisfied. The neat-handed fat-faced hostess speedily served Gilbert with a flagon of mulled wine, and seating himself at the end of one of the tables he sipped and listened. He did not wait long before the matter which interested him was touched.

A ferrety-eyed fusys little man in snuff brown garments broke the ice by demanding of one of the soldiers if he had been at Flodden.

There was a lull in the conversation of all those who heard the question, and although all fear of an English invasion was past, although the people had already begun in some degree to recover from the shock of the ill-lated battle, the mention of it was yet sufficient to call forth scowling and sorrowful waggings of heads.

'Ay, mister, I hae been there,' was the soldier's response, 'an' I'm no proud to say that I hae come back again.'

'An' were ye near the King ?' with loyal eagerness queried a brawny northern cattle drover.

'Sir', said the fussy little man, looking at 'An were ye near the king? Wan loyar eagerness queried a brawny northern cattle drover.

'Sir,' said the fussy little man, looking at the northern man with dignified reproval, I'm Deacon Simpson, and I'm speaking tae this gentleman.'

'Atweel, man, I didna say that ye was na speaking till him.'

'No, I was nae near him,' said the soldier, 'but I am tauld that some traitor's cantrips lost the day for us' and made awa' wi' the King.'

King.'
'And wha was the traitor?' demanded the drover.

'I canna tell ye that. Some say Lord Home but 1'll no believe that.'
Deacon Simpson looked as if be could have enlightened them on the subject, but would not.

'Maybe ye ken, Maister Deacon,' suggested the soldier.

'I'm no sure; but I could tell ye wha has tae suffer for't, whilk would no be a bad indication o' wha was the traitor,'

'Wha is to suffer?' queried several.

'Is it WA Spens'; queried others.

The deacon_pressed his lips and looked mysterious.

'I'm very sorry, neebors, but I canna answer ve.'

"I'm very sorry, neebors, but I canna answer ye."

'The he I will,' said a man at the further end of the table in a loud voice.

All eyes were turned upon him, and despite his disguise as a common drover, Gilbert recognised Tashielaw, and at the same timebecame aware that the jovial visaged man who sat beside the borderer was scanning his features with pressed lip narrowly. He raised his cup to his lips, thereby concealing his features to some extent.

The deacon methodically scratched his head and examined the borderer with the air of a sage puzzled.

'An' wha may ye be, sir, that speak wi's sam unckle authority?

'Do you want to know the name of the villain who betrayed our King?' said Tashielaw fiercely, looking around and unheeding the representative of civic authority.

'Aye, tell us that if ye can,' orred the company.

'Then it was Wat Scott of Halstane.'

Aye, tell us that if ye can,' cried the company and the company are the company and the company are the company and the company and the company are the company and the company are the company and the company are the company and the compan

INDS DEVOTION.—The Utica calls the following: On the first March last, a Mr. Spier, then ret Watertown, in this State, have laveled from Watertown with a subbarrow, containing his wife and an ant child of twenty months, together the few articles, making the load he at to wheel some 280 pounds. He was a accompanied by his other child, a boy some six years of age, who walked the tire way from Watertown, while his ther laid in the barrow his poor lame it, the barry with a portion to a sunty, the family were compelled to lay in a shanty for eight days, food being mished them by some kind neighbors. A Saturday last the group arrived at ratorg, and, by the exertions of some of citizens of the village, were provided that the means to go to housekeeping, and the family are settled in the upper lage. We learn that Mr Spier is about try years of age, his wife being a little sjunior. It was on the recommendan of two physicians that Mr S. left fatertown upon his self-sacrificing trip.

A New Polar Expedition.—Notwithinding it has been proved beyond doubt hat it is impossible to find a north-west passage, inasmuch as the sea extending rom Baffin's Bay, Behring's Straits, is upassable for ships, a daring son of the ea, Captain Sherard Osborn, is endeavoring to have an expedition fitted out to nake further discoveries. He claims that nuch remains to be done; that it remains o be decided whether it is sea or land hat covers the North Pole; and is deirous of witnessing the sublime spectcle of a never setting sun. He is willing to undergo all sorts of hardships, and infer all the miseries incident to a voyge, if he can only be gratified. Whethrhe is likely to be honored in his curius fancy remains to be seen. Much has seen risked, much has been lost, and any valuable lives have been sacrificed a the futile endeavor to discover a Northrest passage; still there are hardy souls off who thirst for a glimpse of the randeurs there to be seen. Captain Osorn is no novice in the Arctic navigation, or he has shared the hardships of a voyge to the Polar seas, yet is zealous in seking the assistance of those who will id him in trying another and last exeriment. He feels satisfied that an pen sea exists at the Pole, and he is anxius to be in it. There is nothing further
